Hospital to seek change in laws

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

A new package of enabling legislation for the Deaf Smith County Hospital District is likely to be introduced to the 71st Texas Legislature during its upcoming session after the DSCHD board of directors approved several changes in the original legislation at its meeting Tuesday night.

Alan Rhodes, the district's attorney from Amarillo, reviewed the new bill at the meeting.

Rhodes said there are 73 other hospital districts in the state that were formed under similar legislation, and 21 of those districts changed their legislation during the 70th legislature session.

The most important change in the legislation is allowing the district to operate other medical facilities besides Deaf Smith General Hospital.

In the past, the district has had to restrict its operations to the hospital grounds.

The existing legislation recently prevented the district from buying or leasing The Hereford Clinic.

The board was offered a chance to take control of the building, at Miles and Fourth streets, during November, but had to dismiss the offer because of the law, which was passed in 1971.

Other changes in the bill, which will be introduced by incoming State Sen. Teel Bivins (R-Amarillo), includes raising the amount of projects that must be let out for bids from $2,000 to $15,000; changes the number of names that must be submitted for hospital board candidates from 50 down to 25; and tightens the district's requirements for providing indigent care to conform to updated state laws.

The board also approved a new smoking policy for DSGH that restricts smoking to certain areas.

The fairly liberal policy will allow smoking in the lobby, most waiting rooms, break rooms and most of the cafeteria.

Patients who smoke will be allowed to smoke in their rooms, but no smoking will be permitted by visitors in rooms of patients who request a "no smoking" room. Smoking will not be permitted in hallways, nurses' stations, or in other areas designated "no smoking."

The board also approved a standard lease agreement for doctors using newly-renovated office areas in the hospital's west wing and reviewed the operating reports for November.

Due to decreased patient loads and a two-surgeon shortage, the patient census for November was off by 52 patients, said DSGH administrator Gary Moore.

Only 39 surgeries were performed at DSGH during November 1988, down from the 132 performed during November 1987.

Most other departments recorded a similar drop-off in business.

The hospital's business should pick up in the near future with the addition of Dr. Robert Clark, a general surgeon, to the staff this week.

Moore said the hospital is close to signing an agreement with an orthopedic surgeon from Kansas. Moore said the doctor visited Hereford last weekend and could sign an agreement as early as Friday.

Moore said it would require about two months for the doctor to receive a Texas license.

Moore said he is also talking with a medical student who will graduate in about 1 1/2 years that is showed the hospital recorded an "actual loss" for the month of $90,000, but the cash flow statement showed that the hospital took in about $16,000 more than needed for the month's operations.

Hereford Bull

By SPEEDY NIEMAN

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says if a thing is right, it can be done; if wrong, it can be done without.

There's a saying that blondes have more fun but brunettes have sweeter dispositions. A feller at the coffee shop says his wife has been both and he can't tell any difference.

A thoughtful wife is one who has the steaks ready when her husband returns from a pheasant-hunting trip.

The Christmas Stocking Fund donations were near the $13,000 mark this morning, so there's still time to top last year's record amount of $13,600. We'll continue to accept contributions here at the newspaper office after Christmas Day, as there are always needs that were missed prior to Christmas.

The case of the "runny divinity" continues at our house. After listing Lavon's problems and perils on cooking divinity candy in this column, my wife has received a number of tips and advice on achieving a successful recipe. One of the calls came from as far away as Farmersville, Tx. Marie Maxwell, formerly employed at Hereford State Bank for many years, called to give Lavon the secret of making good divinity, which she said was passed down from her mother. Marie said she misses all her friends in Hereford and hopes she and her husband can return one of these days. "Since I moved away, I read The Brand more thoroughly than I ever did and it helps me keep up with what's going on," said Marie.

Lavon was surprised to hear from someone out of town and enjoyed visiting with Marie. The latest call, however, was here in town from Louise Axe, who wanted to know if I was kidding about Lavon's divinity, or if it was really true that I ate it with a spoon.

The result of that conversation is that Lavon is scheduled to go to Louise's house today and watch her make a batch of divinity. If the lesson is successful, Lavon may make a triumphant appearance before the Nieman clan on Christmas Day with the "right stuff!"

Not subscribing to The Hereford Brand can be hazardous. Here's an example of what can happen, borrowed from a rural newspaper in Kansas:

A man who was too cheap to subscribe to his hometown newspaper sent his little boy to borrow his neighbor's copy. In his haste the boy knocked over the neighbor's $80 hive of bees and, in 10 minutes, he looked like a warty squash.

His father ran to his assistance, and failing to notice the barbed-wire fence, ran into that, ripping his anatomy a bit as well as ruining a $30 pair of trousers. The old cow took advantage of the gap in the fence and killed herself eating green corn.

Hearing a racket, the wife ran out, upset a four-gallon churn of

UWDSC edging closer to goal

The United Way of Deaf Smith County has raised 82.6 percent of its 1988 goal, with the promise of more pledges and donations to come.

UWDSC has raised $112,000. The goal is $123,500, and UWDSC executive Wayne Amstutz said today that several individuals and companies have said they would mail in a donation in the near future. Two divisions have passed their goals, and another division is within reach of its goal.

The agriculture division, led by Susan Robbins and Judy Wilohams, has raised $4,800, $300 over its goal.

The golden age division, headed by Helen Spinks and Homer Garrison, has received donations and pledges of $9,650. The group's goal was $9,000.

The major division, led by Roger Eades, is within a few dollars of reaching its goal of $40,000, Amstutz said.

Amstutz said H&R Manufacturing has joined the list of "Honor Roll Companies" who have contributed their "fair share" to UWDSC.

Amstutz said all UWDSC members are urged to attend a Jan. 10 board meeting at noon at the Caison House restaurant.

"We want to wish a very Merry Christmas and Happy New Year to everyone, and thank you for your support of the 10,000 individuals who will be helped by our 12 member agencies," Amstutz said.

Bush plans to keep Sullivan

WASHINGTON (AP)—Black educator Louis Sullivan appears on track to be George Bush's secretary of health and human services despite a sudden uproar over his abortion views, while Chicago transit official Samuel Skinner remains on standby for appointment as transportation secretary.

Sullivan and Bush's top aides spent a lot of time Tuesday in talks with anti-abortion leaders, assuring them that Sullivan's views were in line with those of Bush. Sullivan triggered the flap by saying in an interview he supports the right of a woman to seek an abortion, a position at odds with Bush's, but opposes the use of federal funds to pay for it.

Moreover, a transition source noted that Sullivan has strong backing from Bush's wife, Barbara, a friend of Sullivan who serves on the board of Morehouse College where he is medical school president.

Meanwhile, Skinner waited again in Washington to be summoned to an announcement ceremony about the transportation post.

Skinner, chairman of the North-eastern Illinois Mass Transit Authority, was called to Washington last week for an expected announcement that was then postponed by Bush. He returned to Chicago for the weekend, then was summoned back on Monday, then told by transition officials his appointment would come on Tuesday.

Transition staffers were privately joking that Skinner's trips back and forth were giving him loads of experience with problems in the airline industry, plus paying a divided of frequent-flyer mileage.

Amid the controversy over Sullivan, Bush canceled a planned afternoon appearance for personnel announcements, avoiding questions from reporters about the abortion dispute.

Instead, he issued a written statement saying he was putting former Nevada Sen. Paul Laxalt and former Ohio Rep. Thomas Ashley on the National Economic Commission, a panel created by Congress to find a bipartisan strategy for cutting the huge budget deficit.

The appointments put the commission at its full strength of 14 people. Bush emphasized Tuesday his opposition to raising taxes to erase the red ink.

In another development, a Reagan administration source said Patricia Diaz Dennis, a member of the Federal Communications Commission, appeared to be emerging No. 1 contender for the job of labor secretary.

With a self-imposed Christmas deadline for naming his Cabinet, Bush has filled eight seats and still has six to go. If he is selected, Sullivan would be the first black in Bush's Cabinet.

Bush has yet to name a woman to a Cabinet post, although he has nominated Carla Hills to be chief trade negotiator, a job that carries Cabinet rank.

While Bush's aides insisted that Sullivan was still the top candidate for health and human services, anti-abortion leaders worked furiously to derail his expected nomination.

Rep. Bob Dornan, R-Calif., said Bush "will rule the day" he picks Sullivan. Gary Bauer, a conservative leader who was President Reagan's domestic policy adviser, said the appointment of Sullivan would be "politically stupid" because he would alienate a bloc of voters that had supported Bush.

Sullivan's congressional supporters on Tuesday were circulating a letter in which he said, "I am opposed to abortion except in cases of rape, incest and where the life of the mother is threatened. My position on abortion is entirely consistent with President-elect Bush's position."

Sullivan told the Atlanta Journal and Constitution that his pro-choice stand on abortion was a private view and that he did not intend to disagree publicly with Bush.

Officials join in judge protest

DALLAS (AP) — Several elected officials have joined gay rights activists in their attack on a state district judge who said he gave a lighter punishment to a killer because his victims were homosexuals.

"The recent actions of the state judge in Dallas County violate the fundamental principle that everyone stands equal before the law. The suggestion that those who kill homosexuals deserve shorter sentences is bigotry at its worst," said a statement from U.S. Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., which was read at a Tuesday night rally.

About 500 protesters, many chanting "No more Hampton" and others carrying signs that said "Bigot Resign," gathered at Dallas City Hall to demand the resignation of state district judge Jack Hampton.

"Dallas bears the shame for every day that he sits there, and the world is watching," William Waybourn, president of the Dallas Gay Alliance, told the protesters. "Dallas cannot afford the image of hate for as long as he sits on the bench."

"Tonight, Judge, I'd like to offer you a fashion tip from one homosexual: Your hood doesn't match your shirt."

Hampton told the Dallas Times Herald in an interview published last week that he sentenced Richard Lee Bednarski, 18, to 30 years in prison instead of a maximum life sentence on Nov. 28 in part because the two men Bednarski was convicted of killing were homosexuals.

One of the jurors who found Bednarski guilty in the slayings told the Dallas Times Herald in an interview published today that jurors also discussed the homosexuality of the victims during the 16 hours of deliberations it took to reach the guilty verdict.

The juror, who asked not to be identified, also said jurors discussed trial testimony that showed that one of the two victims had AIDS, the newspaper reported in a copyright story.

"In the jury room, the fact that they were gay was a very big thing," the 30-year-old juror said. "Four of the (jurors) were decided anti-gay." The juror also said that although he was not among the anti-gay faction, he was disturbed by the victim's behavior and would have taken it into consideration if sentencing had been his decision.

Testimony at Bednarski's trial showed that Tommy Lee Trimble, 34, tested positive for the AIDS virus.

If Trimble was attempting to solicit sex at the time of the shooting, "This guy was willing to pass a death sentence along to people," the juror said.

"So if he gets killed by somebody, you can't throw a life sentence (at the killer)," the juror added.

"It's not right to kill them, but I don't think it's right to stick somebody in prison for the rest of his life because he killed somebody willing to kill him," the juror said. "He's hardly an innocent victim."

"These two guys that got killed wouldn't have been killed if they hadn't been cruising the streets picking up teen-age boys," Judge Hampton said. "I don't much care for queers cruising the streets picking up teen-age boys. I've got a teen-age boy."

Texas Treasurer Ann Richards, who gave the keynote address at the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta last summer and is considered a likely gubernatorial candidate in 1990, also issued a statement that was read at the rally.

"The constitution guarantees that when we come before our courts seeking justice, our lives will not be given less or more value than the lives of others," it said.

A statement from U.S. Rep. John Bryant, D-Texas, said: "This manifestation of hatred in the midst of the Christmas season cannot be met with silence. It must be met with outrage."

Hampton's statement has mobilized the Dallas gay community more than anything in years, Waybourn said earlier Tuesday.

"The change is we're not sitting on our hands. We're fighting back," he said.

FTC releases list of cigarettes high in tar, nicotine, carbon monoxide

WASHINGTON (AP) — After nearly four years without a brand-by-brand analysis, American cigarette devotees are once again confronted by The List.

The List — which itemizes tar, nicotine and carbon monoxide content in cigarette smoke — is back, released Tuesday by the Federal Trade Commission for the first time since January 1985.

The new compilation, based on tobacco-industry tests of 272 varieties of cigarettes, showed that varieties of Carlton and Now scored lowest in all three categories, exactly where they ranked in the 1985 list.

At the other end of the spectrum, Old Gold Straights produced the highest amounts of tar and nicotine and varieties of Century 25s, More 120s and Tall 120s produced the most carbon monoxide in the tests, the consumer agency said.

The list was formerly done annually, with the testing done by an FTC laboratory. After the release of the 1985 list, the agency halted the testing program it began in 1966 in the wake of the U.S. surgeon general's finding that cigarettes are dangerous to human health.

In dropping its tests, the FTC cited budgetary constraints and said such scientific sampling was not consistent with the chief functions of an agency dominated by lawyers and economists.

The baby, having been left alone, crawled through spilled cream and into the parlor, ruining a $300 carpet.

During all the excitement, the oldest daughter ran away with the hired hand, a stray dog broke up 11 setting hens, the calves got out and chewed the tails off four shirts on the clothesline, and the car had a batch of kittens.

All this just to save 25 cents!

The new test results were produced by the industry-supported Tobacco Industry Testing Laboratory under FTC oversight and using the same procedures previously employed by the agency, according to Judith Wilkenfeld of the FTC's Bureau of Consumer Affairs.

She said that Harold Pillsbury, former director of the FTC laboratory, worked under contract to the agency to monitor the industry testing procedures and review its data.

"We feel very confident the results are consistent with the results we were generating when we did the tests," Ms. Wilkenfeld said.

An FTC statement said the 272 varieties of cigarettes were obtained by a company hired by the industry laboratory. It said the company purchased two packages of each variety in 50 different locations around the nation.

The tests measured each variety's smoke content of tar, which is particulate matter exclusive of nicotine; of nicotine, an addictive substance; and of carbon monoxide, a toxic gas.

Lowest in all three categories were Carlton's and Now's filter kings marketed in hard packs. Each produced tar, nicotine and carbon monoxide readings below the measurement sensitivity of the test equipment.

The lowest measurable readings in the three categories were also produced by these two brands: Carlton filter king regular and menthol in soft packs, 100s in regular and menthol in hard packs and 100s in soft packs; and Now filter kings, regular and menthol, in soft packs, and 100s, regular and menthol, in soft packs.

Their tar readings ranged from 1 to 3 milligrams per cigarette, with nicotine ranging from 0.1 milligram to 0.3 milligram and carbon monoxide ranging from 1 milligram to 4 milligrams.

Among high-tar cigarettes, Old Gold Straights and Philip Morris Commanders each produced 27 milligrams. The Old Golds also had the highest nicotine reading, 1.9 milligrams, trailed by English Ovals with 1.8 milligrams.

The highest carbon monoxide results came from Century 25 100s in the soft pack; More 120s, regular and menthol, in soft packs; and Tall 120 filters in the soft pack. Each produced 21 milligrams per cigarette.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When I was a little girl my two sisters used to pin me down and tickle me until I couldn't breathe. They were both older and bigger than I was, and when they ganged up on me I didn't stand a chance. I am very ticklish all over so when I protected my ribs and feet, my sisters would still tickle my legs and back.

Summer was always the worst because swimsuits and light clothing left me especially vulnerable. It was an almost daily agony.

Sure, my mother stepped in when the tickling went too far and I became hysterical, but she couldn't be there all the time. When one or both of my sisters had me alone in the house, they loved to corner me. I am 26 now and even though my sisters probably never think about what they did to me, I still stiffen if either of them comes too close.

I know most people believe tickling is harmless fun, but when someone tickles me, I don't consider it fun. I cringe.

Ann, please get the message out to parents, and especially older brothers and sisters: Tickleing a defenseless kid is not child's play. It's cruel, and that child needs to be rescued.—Allison in N.J.

DEAR ALLISON: I have dealt with this problem before, but tickling is such a well-disguised form of torture that I feel it should be unmasked periodically.

Tickling is NOT, repeat, NOT, harmless fun. It is a subtle form of sadism. Children have been known to go into convulsions after being tickled for a long time. Parents should be alert to the dangers of tickling, and it should not be tolerated.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: "Bereaved and Grieving" is lucky she found out about her cheating husband after his death. Now she can give her best "friend" the cold shoulder and get on with her life.

I wasn't so lucky. I found out about my cheating husband two years after he retired and we moved out of town. He had been sleeping with prostitutes for many years and was sending money to his favorite. One day he neglected to put a stationer's letter to her, it was returned and I got the mail. When I read that letter I started to check his belongings and found additional letters that left no doubt about the double life he had been living.

I was giving advice about a legal separation when I learned I had cancer, which I suspect may have been brought on by the stress. I went through a very difficult time and for some reason my life has been spared.

Only my doctor and a psychologist know about my husband. I cannot afford to be divorced and my husband would never consider it because he is a staunch Catholic. (He is at Mass this morning, as he has been every Sunday of our married life.)

I no longer love this man, but he is a good provider and I am a good housekeeper. Sometimes I wonder how long I can endure this loveless life, but so far I don't have the courage to end it. I'm sure I will someday—one way or another.

You cheating men, take Ann's advice and bury your mail before it buries you or your wife.—Disillusioned in Florida

DEAR DISILLUSSIONED: Thanks for the warning. Meanwhile, you didn't ask for advice so I won't give any. I wonder, however, about women who stay with men who patronize prostitutes. In this era of AIDS, such passivity could be a death sentence.

Are you having a problem finding a gift for the person who has everything? Ann Landers' new booklet, "Gems", is ideal for a nightstand or coffee table. "Gems" is a collection of Ann Landers' most requested poems and essays. Send $4 plus a self-addressed stamped No. 10 envelope (65 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. ## Hints from Heloise

BAKING SODA

Dear Readers: My pamphlet, Heloise's Best Baking Soda Hints, is full of good ideas to make your life easier around the house. For a copy, send $1 and a stamped, self-addressed, legal-sized envelope to Heloise Baking Soda, P.O. Box 19765, Irvine, CA 92713.

TAPE TRICK

Dear Heloise: If you have incorrectly addressed an envelope, don't throw it away. Try this.

When you type the wrong address on an envelope, take a strip of transparent tape and lay it over the printing you want to remove. Press the tape over the type and rub with a pencil end, then lift the tape away with the type. (This will remove some types of print.) You may need to do this two or three times.

It will leave a slightly rough surface, but the correct address can be written in its place. —Blanche Dunbar, Santa Barbara, Calif.

Send a money- or time-saving hint to Heloise, P.O. Box 795000, San Antonio, TX 78279. I can't answer your letter personally but will use the best hints received in my column.

Solomon's knee keeps Vikes worried

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. (AP) — If a sprained knee keeps linebacker Jesse Solomon out of the Vikings' wild card playoff game Monday, one simple substitution might not do the trick for Minnesota coach Jerry Burns.

Solomon wears so many hats for the Vikings that it may take as many as five players to replace him.

"Jesse is a very fine football player. He's an intricate part of our defensive scheme. His speed and hitting. And his intelligence. He's hard to replace," Burns said Tuesday.

"The injury to Jesse would probably have to be number one" in Minnesota's concerns heading into the game against the Los Angeles Rams, Burns said.

Solomon sprained his left knee in the first half of Monday night's 28-27 victory over the Chicago Bears and was on crutches after the game. Without him in the second half, the Vikings gave up three touchdowns.

He has become the key to many of the Vikings' many defensive schemes because, unlike the other linebackers, he never leaves the field. Burns considers Solomon to be one of his best tacklers, one of his best pass defenders and one of his smartest players.

That leaves the problem of replacing him pretty wide open.

"I thought that Ray Berry played pretty well in there (Monday)," Burns said. "Conceivably, he could replace Jesse in some situations."

Conceivably, Burns added, Walker Lee Ashley could be used at Solomon's weak-side linebacker spot, especially on running downs; David Howard could move over from strong-side, especially on passing downs; reserve defensive back Darrell Fullington could move up, again in passing situations, and Joey Browner, the strong safety, could fill in under certain circumstances.

"We haven't talked about all the possibilities," the coach said.

Burns was heartened by the fact that nose tackle Henry Thomas, who missed most of the last two games with a rib injury, should be back Monday.

But injury-prone running backs Darrin Nelson and D.J. Dozier had to leave the Chicago game with leg ailments and their status was unknown. And backup nose tackle Tim Newton had fluid drained from his knee Tuesday and was doubtful.

Strock's key: attitude, not arm

BEREA, Ohio (AP) — Don Strock's contribution to the Cleveland Browns' do-or-die second-half comeback against the Houston Oilers had as much to do with his attitude as his arm.

"I know a touchdown's not worth 20 points," the 15-year NFL veteran said of Sunday's dramatic victory that propelled the Browns into the AFC wild card game against those same Oilers. "You have to take them one at a time. We got one and just started working on the next one."

That workmanlike approach to the Browns' precarious situation was exactly what the team's management had hoped for when Strock was signed following injuries to two quarterbacks in September. The former Miami Dolphin has spent his entire career as a backup quarterback, so he's used to being thrust into game without much warning.

"There's nothing he hasn't seen before," Coach Marty Schottenheimer said. "Regardless of whether he threw the ball to them or us, he came back and said, 'Let's get it done.'"

Strock, filling in for injured Bernie Kosar, had an awful start in Sunday's 28-23 victory, throwing interceptions on the Browns' first three series.

But he was marvelous in the second half, passing for more than 200 yards and leading Cleveland to three straight touchdowns that overcame a 23-7 deficit. If the Browns had lost, they'd have missed the playoffs for the first time in four years.

"My feeling was that the game was going to be won on emotion. But in Don Strock's case, it's the lack of emotion that helps him," Schottenheimer said. "He just goes about his business."

Strock also still has the accuracy and strength to play well, the coach said.

"He has some zip on the ball," Schottenheimer said. "Maybe it's because he hasn't had to throw the ball much in those 15 years."

Strock took mild exception to that suggestion.

"I spent 15 years practicing, and you throw more in practice than you do in games," he said.

Browns' players said Strock's experience helped them remain confident after they had fallen behind.

"Nothing fazes him," tight end Ozzie Newsome said. "He was the same in the second half as he was in the first. He didn't change the whole time. That's the sign of an experienced veteran."

Because Kosar's sprained knee remains swollen and encased in a brace, Strock is preparing to start Saturday's game in Cleveland. Kosar's status, listed as questionable, is being re-evaluated daily.

"If Bernie's healthy, Bernie will play," Strock said. "That's the way it should be. I've played behind some pretty good quarterbacks — Dan Marino, Bob Griese, two that are destined for the Hall of Fame. I've always prided myself on being ready to play."

Strock was available to the Browns because he was let go by the Dolphins during a preseason contract dispute.

"I didn't think I was being treated fairly," he said. "It's gratifying to win for (Browns' owner) Art Modell, Marty Schottenheimer and everybody on this team. They had the faith to bring me in and I'm just repaying that faith.

"I always had confidence I could play this year. I figured if after 15 years nobody wanted me, that wasn't a bad career, either."

Highsmith likes games on road

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers fullback Alonzo Highsmith prefers playing on the road — where there are fewer distractions — even though he knows visiting players generally receive a somewhat-less-than-cordial greeting.

"On the road I feel more relaxed, I guess because I don't have to get tickets for people," said Highsmith, who returns to one of his favorite homes away from home Saturday when the Oilers play the Cleveland Browns at Municipal Stadium in the AFC wild card game.

"Everyone's talking about the Cleveland Stadium, but I love it," Highsmith said. "I love it when you come out on the field and everyone is booing you and throwing things."

Not all the Oilers appreciate the Cleveland fans, however.

General Manager Ladd Herzog has complained to NFL headquarters about objects being thrown from the seats called the Dawg Pound at the end of the field where visitors are required to warm up.

"(Assistant coach) Doug Shively got hit in the back of the neck with an ice ball," Herzog said. "We've requested if a net can't be put up to protect our players from projectiles, we'd like to flip-flop ends of the field with the Browns during pregame warmups."

Herzog said NFL Executive Director Don Weiss agreed to investigate the conditions.

"It will be much sweeter to go up there and come back with a victory," Highsmith said of the trip to Cleveland. "I have no doubt that we're going up there and kick Cleveland's behind."

The dressing rooms at Municipal Stadium are crowded and the field can become concrete hard or a slush depending on the weather, Highsmith said.

But he believes the conditions are ideal for the Oilers, who through advancement in the playoffs could face more cold weather in the coming weeks.

"We'll just use this game to get used to the cold weather," Highsmith said. "It doesn't bother me. A couple of pairs of longjohns and a bowl of soup and I'm all right."

"I really like that little dressing room."

RIGHT PITCH
 LONDON (AP) — The tuning fork, a two-pronged metal device used for tuning musical instruments, was invented here in the 1700s by John Shore, a trumpeter who played with composer George Frederick Handel.

When struck, the U-shaped tuning fork vibrates at 440 cycles per second. It produces a tone which is always the same, regardless of temperature, moisture or other conditions that can affect the pitch and tone of a musical instrument. Tuning forks are made for any note of the musical scale.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: I have been hearing a lot about growth hormones lately. According to ads they will help you lose fat. How can something that is supposed to make you grow cause you to lose fat?

I've also heard that growth hormones help athletes develop large, strong muscles and that some athletes are using them to improve their performance. I have even read that some parents are giving their children growth hormones early in life so they can be professional athletes.

I would like to know the truth about growth hormones and if there is any danger in taking them.

DEAR READER: There certainly is a danger. Too much growth hormone in a child can cause a giant, often with a misshapen skeleton. It is not something a parent should want for his child. If too much growth hormone is produced by the body after the bones have fused so you can't grow in height, you can develop a condition called acromegaly with enlarged hands and feet, an enlarging head and deformities. The lower jaw may grow out of proportion to the rest of the head.

Fortunately, in some respects, the black-market products are often fakes. Some are just saltwater. Even if it was real growth hormone, it deteriorates quickly unless kept refrigerated so the product is often useless.

Animal studies suggest that if a person who produces a normal amount of growth hormone takes a small amount, it simply decreases the amount of growth hormone normally produced. So you can't really increase growth hormone in normal people without giving an excess amount. Less than that amount is not likely to have any effect.

Muscle growth does occur with an excess production of growth hormone, but the muscles are weak, not strong.

The story of growth hormone is fascinating. Now that it can be produced in large amounts, it can be used for children who are deficient in it and may fail to grow. It may have more to do with what happens to your body than just the growth phase we normally think of.

I have discussed whether growth hormone is a miracle or a monster in THE HEALTH LETTER 31-10, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send $1 with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/31-10, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713. Although Dr. Lamb cannot reply to all letters personally, he will respond to selected questions in future columns.
