Complex cattle case suit includes Barrett

By O.G. NIEMAN

The tangled and complex case of Lubbock cattleman Jim Kassahn and First National Bank of Amarillo has involved Barrett-Crofoot Feedyards of Hereford and its president, Ed Barrett.

An eight-count lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court in Amarillo seeks more than $50 million from Kassahn and eight other defendants, it was reported in The Amarillo Globe-News Friday. The lawsuit alleges both civil and criminal wrongdoing. The other defendants include Barrett of Hereford, Jay Crofoot of Lubbock and several corporations headed by the two men.

First National claims $12.75 million in actual damages and three times that amount as a penalty under the federal Racketeer Influenced Corrupt Organizations Act.

The claims against Barrett-Crofoot are "completely unfounded and not one statement can be proved in court," stated attorney Grady Terrill of Lubbock Friday. The Brand sought comment from Barrett and was referred to his attorney Friday.

"Barrett-Crofoot has not defrauded anyone. Our clients have been defrauded and will be out $50 million before they can get in a posture to recover damages," said Terrill. He added that his firm is preparing to file counter claims against the bank for "tortious conduct."

First National alleges a number of fraudulent acts that began in early 1984, including an alleged shortage of cattle on pasture in the Barrett-Crofoot & Kassahn program. The bank claims the shortages amounted to at least 32,000 head of cattle by June 1986. The complaint states that BC&K fraudulently altered records so the shortage would not be disclosed.

Terrill said his clients did not know of Kassahn's loan status with First National and Barrett-Crofoot had no dealings with the bank. "The bank called Barrett-Crofoot in April 1987 and was told that Kassahn had no cattle except in the BC&K partnership. It was August 1987 before our clients knew of Kassahn's problem with First National Bank in Amarillo," said Terrill.

Barrett's attorney further stated that Barrett-Crofoot loaned Kassahn $3.5 million in May 1987, "ostensibly to pay off some taxes," and at that time required that all checks for cattle go directly to the order buyers.

First State Bank of Bovina, of which Kassahn is a majority owner, according to Terrill, was also listed as a defendant in the bank's lawsuit. Kassahn's main cattle operation, J.P.'s Family—which has filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy in Dallas—and Herbert Vogel Co., as well as several other entities are also referred to extensively in the lawsuit, although they are not named as defendants.

The scope of the receivership in the case was narrowed last week to help Barrett-Crofoot feedlots regain control of its operation. Amarillo Judge Jairo P. Dowell issued an order paring down the receiver's scope to $25 million in cattle. Originally, the (See BARRETT, Page 2A)

NIGHTLIFE Jail's not bad, but no paradise

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

A man mournfully sings—it's more of a low, wailing, loud hum. The sound of his voice is his only company in the room he occupies. His interaction with the world is through a small window which opens to allow passage of a food tray.

Elsewhere, there's the sound of male laughter joined in ribald humor, the sound of radios playing, voices chattering and, finally, the cold, ominous clank of steel-barred doors slamming shut.

Welcome to Deaf Smith County Jail.

As one jailer says, "Jail is not jail the way it used to be 10 to 15 years ago." Many of the changes are immediately apparent. The jail is clean and totally unlike the Hell-hole pictured in movies.

Another change is apparent in the methodical approach jailors take in the booking process. Each step has a written form which describes what must be done, then requires the signatures of the jailor, the prisoner and, sometimes, even a witness.

Legal rights are read to each prisoner; a book-in card is filled out with personal data; a medical screening form is completed; two phone calls are allowed; personal property is inventoried and placed in a safe; the prisoner is frisked, then must shower and don jail coveralls. He (most of the DSC prisoners are male) is now the responsibility of the jailors.

"Paperwork is the biggest headache," said Jailor John Arsola as he fingerprinted and photographed a new prisoner. "Each prisoner is assigned an SO (Sheriff's Office) number and this is the number we show with their photograph." The SO number will stay with that person throughout his stay in jail and will be reactivated if the same person is ever-arrested again.

Carrying his twin-size mattress and gear, which includes a hygiene kit containing shampoo and other necessities for cleanliness, the prisoner is then taken to a cellblock. The type of crime he committed and his current mental state determine the block in which he will be placed.

Blocks A and B are designated for male felony offenders. Block C is for female offenders. These are all individual cells with two to four bunks and day rooms.

Block B-1 is dormitory style and houses males arrested for misdemeanor offenses. There is a separate dorm for trustees—prisoners who have earned the trust of jailors and who are responsible for cleaning the jail and preparing meals, and for those on work release programs who work at outside jobs during the day but spend nights and weekends locked up in jail.

Additional cells include a sick bay; a high risk area for those who might harm themselves or someone else; a "rubber room" or restraint cell; a holding cell for prisoners involved in processing; and a drunk tank, where intoxicated people are allowed to spend four hours sobering up before they face the booking process.

The capacity of the jail is almost 100 and there is a small number of jailors to handle the constant supervision required. "You have to show them you are in control, and we are in control of this jail," Arsola said.

One method of control is to establish a definite set of rules. The inmates are each given a copy of an Inmate Handbook which clearly states, in Spanish and in English, the rules which govern the prisoner's behavior.

Attorneys and ministers are permitted to visit the prisoners just about any time; however, all other visitors must be listed and are limited to strict Saturday and Sunday visiting hours.

Prisoners "rack up" (are locked in their cells) at 10 p.m. on weekdays and at midnight on weekends.

Though very restrictive, the jail isn't all bad. Jail Administrator David Castillo says that for some people a night in DSC jail is better than anything they could provide for themselves.

"I have known of people who committed a misdemeanor crime with the intention of being sent to jail where they would have a warm place to sleep and guaranteed meals," Castillo said.

Due to civil liberty laws which the jailors follow closely, the prisoners are not mistreated. "By no means are these people treated harshly," Arsola said. "When they come in they become our responsibility. Their safety is our concern. In this (See NIGHTLIFE, Page 2A)

Walter Buckel, writing in the Lamesa Press Reporter, blames both the owners and players for the NFL pro football strike. He goes on to say:

"I'm fearful now they'll settle the strike.

"I was hoping they would stay out all winter to allow American families to rekindle the home fires with conversation; visitation; a drive in the country on a lazy Sunday afternoon; to allow parents to be with kids as they study; to clean up the yard; remodel or paint the workshop again; to visit a shut-in or th elderly or the lonely.

Local Roundup

Crossings will be closed

Three railroad crossings in Hereford will be closed to traffic for at least a portion of Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, according to Santa Fe Railroad officials.

Work will be done Monday on the crossing at Progressive Road; Tuesday at Dairy Road; and Wednesday at Lawton.

The roads will be closed for repairs, and persons who normally use those crossings should plan alternate routes.

Police investigate gunshot

Hereford police are investigating an incidents where at least one shot was fired Friday.

Police reports say two persons were wrestling over a gun inside a house in the 500 block of Ave. H when the gun went off, striking a wall in the house. The incident is still under investigation.

Other incidents reported Friday include $865 in worthless checks written by a person on checks stolen from a Hereford woman; disorderly conduct in the 300 block of Whittier; $300 worth of tools taken from a local elevator; juvenile problems in the 700 block of Ave. H; $5 and car keys taken from a residence in the 300 block of Western;

A window broken in a building in the 400 block of W. Fourth; domestic problems at a Hereford business; $250 worth of damage to a car in the 800 block of Blovens; and aggravated assault when a man was stabbed in the leg at a residence in the 400 block of Sycamore.

Police issued 18 citations and investigated two minor accidents Saturday.

County will meet Monday

A 12-item agenda awaits Deaf Smith County commissioners when they meet Monday at 10 a.m. at the courthouse in Hereford.

The agenda includes discussion of the gazebo at the Black House; acceptance of a grant for the Domestic Violence program; a request for funds for remodeling the county courtroom; discussion of the Texas County and District Retirement System; furniture for the Extension office; a budget transfer from the 1987 fiscal year to the 1988 fiscal year for the sheriff's department; presentation of the FY 1988 audit; and budget amendments to close out the county's year.

DSGH calls meeting

A special called meeting of the Deaf Smith County Hospital District board will be held Tuesday at 7 p.m. at the conference room at Deaf Smith General Hospital.

The agenda includes discussion of trust funds and endowments; a pathology contract; bond and lease agreements; staffing analysis and review of personnel policies and procedures; new concepts therapy services and contract; another examination of the proposed budget for 1987-88; and an executive session to discuss personnel and legal matters.

More rain possible

There is a less than 50 percent chance for more thunderstorms today in Hereford after picking up .88 inch Saturday morning. The forecast is calling for partly sunny skies with a high of 85. Southwest wind will be 10 to 15 mph. Saturday's low at SPAN was 67 after a high Friday of 82.

Coming in the next two weeks in the Brand is our annual Fall Fashion special.

Contributions to the special edition are being made by most of our staff, including moi, the Brand fashion plate.

Maybe plate isn't the right word. Perhaps sugar bowl is more appropriate.

I have definite ideas on fashion.

If you buy enough sweaters, you can wear the same clothes all year around. Sometimes you can wear them day after day after day, of which I have been accused.

Actually, I don't wear the same clothes day after day. It's just that all of my slacks are either grey, black or tan. Most of my shirts are either white or pinstriped.

I do have some nice ties—some are "Johnny Carson" and priced accordingly—about $6, which is outrageous for a yard of fake silk that was haphazardly sewn together by someone in Macao that makes about a dime a day.

Of course, part of the proceeds probably go to Johnny's former wives.

To me, Hart, Schaffner and Marx were a comedy team that Groucho later left to help support his brothers. Botany 500 is a graduate-level course on plant life.

I don't particularly like button-down collars, because I usually forget to button one or both buttons back after tying my overpriced tie, and discover my faux pas when I'm talking with the publisher, a Congressman, or just someone who thinks they're important (and probably is).

Speaking of faux, I do have some jewelry, some of the greatest faux ever made.

Perhaps you're wondering what faux is, or heard this guy talk about it on a two-minute commercial the other night during wrestling just before Dusty Rhodes, The American Dream, body-slammed Ric Flair, The Nature Boy.

He was going on and on about this great jewelry, with faux pearls, faux diamonds and faux gold.

Faux, Boo-Boo Bear, is French for false, which means fake, which means that 100 pieces of fine jewelry for $19.95 is about $19 too much, if you're looking for the real stuff anyway.

For a fashion bowl like me, it's just right.

I realize some of you may be needing some tips on how to be a fashion bowl, instead of a fashion plate. Here are some suggestions that made me successful in fashion:

—If you don't worry about your weight, you can wear the same clothes for decades.

I've just about always had the same "full" figure I have today. That means I can still fit into the sports coat I wore for my senior picture 15 years ago.

If you constantly worry about your weight, diet this week and fast the next, you must have about three different wardrobes. Wardrobes cost money. Money is better spent on things like food.

—If you don't have one of those spray nozzles on flexible hose on your sink, get one. And be quick about it.

Those nozzles are really great for getting rid of the grime from your socks and underwear and whatever else you wash out in the sink.

—When it comes to washing clothes, Dawn is best.

Don't use any of those lemon-scented dishwashing liquids to wash your clothes. People will look at you like you are wearing forks.

If you don't have Dawn, use anything else that isn't heavily perfumed.

—If the sink is full of dirty dishes, you can wash some clothes in the dishwasher.

Be sure and put the dirty stuff on the bottom rack, and turn the dirty side toward the spray. Make sure things like shirttails and tennis shoe strings aren't hanging down so they can get caught in the revolving spray arm.

And don't wash your dress shoes—if you intend to wear them again.

—If you run out of brown shoe polish, Kitchen Bouquet is a reasonable substitute, as are bean molasses if you're into Chinese cooking.

If you use Kitchen Bouquet, which is used to turn transparent gravy brown, be warned that some people will have a tendency to scoop mashed potatoes on top of your shoes.

day and age they have all the comforts of life except freedom."

Among the comforts prisoners are allowed, with the exception of those in high risk cells: radios; once-a-week library privileges where they are allowed to check out two books and a Bible; and twice-a-week commissary privileges where they may purchase cigarettes, candy, cookies and instant drink mixes.

Prisoners are not allowed to have family members bring in food, cigarettes or other personal items due to the risk of contraband being smuggled in.

Visits are limited to 15 minutes each. Visitors who have traveled over 100 miles to see the prisoner are allowed 30 minutes.

Outdoor recreation time is scheduled three times a week for one hour. During this time prisoners play basketball, run laps or sit and soak up the sun in an outdoor room with high concrete walls and netting over the top to prohibit escape.

Those prisoners who have not completed high school are encouraged to participate in G.E.D. classes held in the jail's library.

Meals are approved by a certified nutritionist and are cooked by the trustees. On duty employees eat the same meals as the prisoners and the employees say that the trustees are good cooks.

Some citizens and law enforcement officers have criticized the jailors for making the jail too easy on the prisoners. "We also get criticisms from field officers who have no experience working in jail and are unfamiliar with the laws we must abide by," said Sergeant Shirley Wheeler, jail supervisor. "The way we run it now has kept us out of the courts."

Wheeler says that the jailor's responsibility is to help people, not to condemn them, and points out that the county jail is a short-term holding facility and not a correctional institution.

"If we believe 'innocent until proven guilty' then we can't mistreat these people. Many have not faced judgement yet and probably 75 percent of them are still 'innocent' as far as our knowledge goes," she said.

The jail is approved by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards, which conducts annual inspections. The jailors are all certified corrections officers and many hold additional certifications as peace officers, emergency medical technicians and reserve officers.

Jailors and their dates of employment with DSC Jail are Armano Alaniz, March 1986; Arsula, May 1986; Castillo, June 1981; Karen Hamby, December 1985; Hope Garza, March 1986; Willie Jagers, May 1986; Coby Lassiter, March 1986; Noe Rodriguez, December 1986; Laura Shepard, December 1986; Scott Ward, March 1986, and Wheeler, who began working as a jailor in January 1982.

Prior to becoming a jailor, Wheeler worked as a dispatcher for the sheriff's office. The dispatchers are located in a room which is the hub of jail activity. The room serves as a control center for the facility, with a cluttered assortment of electronic equipment which control lighting and entry and exit to the facility. TV monitors flash constant images of areas of the jail so that the dispatcher can see if a jailor or prisoner need assistance.

Population in the jail ranges from 34 to over 60 inmates per day. When the census is low the jail takes in prisoners from other over-crowded facilities. Population jumps following court sessions and the winter months, particularly October, November and December, are traditionally high census months.

A grocery bill which used to run $5,000 to $6,000 a month has been reduced by the addition of the kitchen. The grocery bill now runs $3,000 to $4,000 a month. Average cost to feed a prisoner now runs around 78 cents a meal. Total average housing cost for each prisoner, including jailors' salaries, is $35 a day.

With a high census count of inmates, Wheeler admits she is sometimes uneasy about entering the jail populace. "I have been scared. If you're not scared here then you're insane, but I don't let my fears inhibit my job performance," she said.

The average law enforcement officer will make contact with only one potentially hazardous person in an eight-hour shift, she points out. In the same time period the jailor is in contact with over 50 people capable of physical harm.

"It is funny if you think about it because the officers tend to look on us as 'turnkeys' or baby sitters, yet we are in more constant danger than they are," she said.

The greatest problem Wheeler sees with her job is having such close contact with the negative side of life. "We very seldom ever see the good side of anything here. It is so difficult because there is nothing positive about the situation. The best we can do is hope these people change and don't have to come back."

There are some success stories. Each jailor remembers a prisoner who went out into the world and never again had trouble abiding by the laws. But many of the prisoners are returning faces, who come in-and-out of the revolving door of justice in a futile attempt to meet the strictures necessary for society to survive.

"If I could find the answer on how to keep people out of jail, I'd do it," Wheeler said. She personally has found two men who hung themselves while incarcerated. One man was dead and Wheeler injured herself getting the second man, who survived, down.

"This is a desparate, scary place," she said. "They can't go home, they can't kiss their wives or hold their children. Anybody who says it is easy in Deaf Smith County Jail has never been in here."

Sessions set to head FBI

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — U.S. District Judge William Sessions says he figured his nomination as FBI director would win Senate confirmation, but he wasn't expecting the vote of confidence to be so great.

The U.S. Senate voted 90-0 Friday to confirm President Reagan's nominee to replace William Webster to head the national law enforcement agency. Webster is now CIA chief.

"I'm amazed and very pleased that the Senate should confirm me in the fashion they did," Sessions told a news conference Friday. "I had no expectation that could possibly happen and I am very gratified."

Reaction from Capitol Hill to San Antonio was extremely positive for the federal judge, whose tough-but-fair stance earned him the respect of congressmen.

"He's a stickler for abiding by the law," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, who helped lead the glowing congressional plaudits. "There will be no celebrations in organized crime circles tonight now that Bill Sessions has been confirmed."

Sessions, 57, said he will continue his tough stance at the FBI, saying the agency's tough anti-terrorist campaign will continue during his 10-year FBI tenure.

A new U.S. law allows the FBI to arrest people accused of terrorist activities of which Americans are victims and bring them to trial in the United States.

Sessions credited Webster for initiating the tough anti-terrorism campaign.

"I think everybody in the United States has applauded that because we have seen a great decrease in terrorist acts in the United States, and I think that's significant for all of us and I intend to continue that," he said.

Sessions — who has climbed Mount Everest twice, canoed through the Boquillas Canyon on the Rio Grande and volunteered to be a space shuttle passenger — has said repeatedly he hated to leave the judgeship, but was excited about the prospect of heading the FBI.

He said he had no definite plans for the agency, but would assume his duties within two weeks and would visit FBI offices that have critical crime-fighting roles.

"It's very important for me to be able to become educated and to be able to actually begin to absorb the tremendously complex operation of the bureau, and my agenda is set for that purpose, to help me familiarize myself," he said.

Sessions breezed through the Senate confirmation hearings earlier this month and the Senate approved him with a 90-0 vote with 10 senators absent.

"I was looking for the other 10, but apparently I just couldn't get it," Sessions said, drawing laughs from other federal judges, marshals and staff at the news conference.

He said he and his wife, Alice, are looking forward to their move.

"It's going to be grand if we can find a place to live," he said.

Sessions was born May 27, 1930, in Fort Smith, Ark., the son of a Disciples of Christ minister. He grew up in Kansas City, Mo., where he graduated from high school.

A former federal prosecutor, he was named a federal judge in 1974. He became chief judge in 1979.

Crimestoppers offers reward

A $300 reward is being offered by Deaf Smith County Crimestopper for information about an aggravated robbery which occurred Sept. 18 in the parking lot at Northwest Elementary School.

A man was approached by three Hispanic males as he was leaving the Hereford-Pampa football game. One of the suspects was holding a knife and demanded money from the man.

The victim tried to get into his car, but he was pushed to the ground and kicked several times. His jacket was slashed several times.

The suspects fled the scene, running east from the parking lot. The victim sustained shoulder, leg and ankle injuries.

Anyone providing information leading to the arrest and indictment of the persons responsible for the crime are eligible for a $300 reward. Anyone with information on this or any other crime should call 364-2583 or 364-CLUE.

Callers may remain anonymous.

WWI veterans meeting for drink

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Seventy years after they were shipped off to France, the last two survivors of a World War I U.S. Army detachment plan to uncork a bottle of champagne next week at what probably will be their final reunion.

McHenry Tichenor Sr., 89, of Harlingen, says he hopes he and 94-year-old Roy Baker of Oklahoma City find a lot to laugh about.

"Two sitting there moaning is not good," Tichenor says. "There's no time on earth for people to moan. You've got to make something out of nothing."

The two were among the 186 men in Company F of the 111th Ammunition Train, 36th Division, when they went off to the Great War.

Because some died in the war, the group already had diminished in size when it returned after the armistice in 1918. Tichenor says about 65 were left when the group held its first reunion about 25 years ago.

By 1961, when Tichenor's brother — Clay, a captain in the group — came up with the idea that they would buy a bottle of Moet champagne for the last surviving man to drink.

Clay Tichenor died two years ago and left the bottle to McHenry, who decided it would be a lonely exercise for just one man. So he decided to get together with Baker and drink in company.

He says he doesn't know what the two will talk about when they meet Thursday in Oklahoma City.

"You don't want to sit there and discuss the past. When you get there, it'll take care of itself," says Tichenor, who usually wears a bow tie when he drives himself to work every day as the owner of nine radio stations in six cities.

The tradition of setting aside a bottle for the last man dates back to the Civil War, says Tichenor, who remembers "last man" clubs as a boy in Kentucky. But the bottles there held bourbon instead of champagne.

"They were in every town," Tichenor says. "We appreciated them."

Company F consisted mainly of men from Oklahoma and North Texas, says Tichenor, who was recruited by his brother and met up with the group at Camp Bowie in Fort Worth.

"You see, the overriding thought with all of us kids was not whether we would get in. It was getting in and getting it over," he says.

Reagan confident in Bork

By JAMES H. RUBIN Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, saying "reason will prevail over politics," predicted Friday the Senate will confirm his nomination of Robert H. Bork to the Supreme Court.

The Senate Judiciary Committee, meanwhile, resumed its hearings with testimony from American Bar Association leaders who said Bork's brand of judicial restraint is an attempt to "disregard two centuries of American history."

The panel is concluding its second week of hearings with at least one more week planned. The Supreme Court, with a vacancy since the June retirement of Justice Lewis F. Powell, will begin its new term Oct. 5 with eight members.

Reagan told a women's group that supports Bork. "Now, I don't usually make predictions ... but in this case, I feel confident that reason will prevail over politics. Not only that Judge Bork will be confirmed, but that he'll go down in history as one of the finest Supreme Court justices our nation has ever had."

The president accused Bork's attackers of being on the political fringe, and he defended the nominee, a federal appeals court judge, as dedicated to interpreting the Constitution rather than imposing his own ideology on the nation.

Reagan said Bork's critics "are themselves ideologically inspired. And the criticism of him as outside the mainstream can only be held by those who themselves are so far outside the mainstream ... they've long ago lost sight of the moderate center."

The president spoke in Crystal City, Va., to a convention of more than 1,500 members of Concerned Women for America, which has collected more than 72,000 signatures in support of Bork.

He said that Bork's nationally televised testimony last week gave Americans a picture of "a brilliant legal mind at work."

However, public opinion polls this week showed the number of Americans with an unfavorable opinion of Bork has risen at least slightly since his appearance.

At the Judiciary Committee hearings on Friday, two past presidents of the American Bar Association and a president of the association's New York City chapter urged defeat of the nominee.

Former ABA president Robert Meserve of Boston said the senators should judge Bork by his career-long writings and lectures, not just by his more moderate testimony last week or his past five years on the federal bench.

He said Bork, in seeking to follow the intent of the Constitution's framers, "would disregard two centuries of American history. On every constitutional decision involving human rights, to paraphrase an old song, 'they're all out of step but Bob.'"

Former ABA president Chesterfield Smith of Lakeland, Fla., said, "You should not have on the Supreme Court someone whose large segments of the people distrust. I want to know there's someone who believes the Constitution should meet the changing needs of the people."

Robert Kaufman, who heads the New York City bar association, was accused by Republican senators on the panel of wrongly trying to speak for all members of the group in the city.

They noted that 53 members of the New York City bar wrote the Judiciary Committee contending the bar group's executive committee was usurping authority from the members.

Kaufman responded, "If they're right, we've been doing something wrong for 117 years." He said the

Sporting Fall Fashions

Ben Sublett, age six, and his sister Taylor, age 10, found time to take a break as they are modeling fashions from Helen's Youth Shop. The youngsters are wearing fall fashions that will be in evidence at the fashion show set for Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Community Center. Sponsored by the Xi Epsilon Alpha Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority, the show will be emceed by Mrs. Mary Thomas and will feature a circus theme. Proceeds will benefit Life-Line and Problem Pregnancy Center.

Parents urged to attend meeting

Parents of junior and senior students at Hereford High school are urged to attend an informative meeting at 7 p.m. Monday in the HHS auditorium. The meeting will be conducted by Terry Russell, HHS principal. Russell will discuss graduation requirements, graduation plans outlined in state law, college admissions, college testing, college financial aid and senior year activities.

There are only 3,304 people of Hispanic heritage living in the state of Vermont.

Baskets shown to Hereford Art Guild

The Hereford Art Guild met Tuesday afternoon at the Community Center for the first fall session of the year.

Appreciation was expressed for services rendered by club members during the summer on behalf of the Guild, and Georgia Andrews was recognized as a new member.

The program chairman, Jean Reinauer, introduced the speaker, Karen Flood, who gave a lesson about hand made reed baskets and soft textured baskets. She showed materials of which they were made and told their purposes. Sample baskets were examined by members. Sizes ranged from teacup to bushel basket size. Some reeds were colored with Rit to emphasize the beauty of the woven pattern. Her soft textured rag baskets made with coil rope covered with cloth materials are beautiful to the eye and useful for their purposes. After demonstrating how the two types of baskets were constructed, she conducted a question and answer period.

After a short business meeting with various chairpersons giving reports, the club adjourned and eight members were served refreshments of cake and punch.

The next meeting will be on Oct. 27.

Therapy program planned

The Celebration Shop, Inc., will visit the Amarillo Medical Center Monday to present a music therapy program for severely and chronically ill children.

The Dallas-based Celebration Shop is a non-profit organization which has implemented the innovative therapy in several cities across the country. The program is being considered for the new children's cancer program at The Don and Sybil Harrington Cancer Center.

Celebration Shop's President, Jim Newton, will entertain children in Northwest Texas Hospital's Pediatric Ward at 9 a.m. Monday. At 10 a.m., he will conduct a brief presentation on the music therapy program in the amphitheater of the Harrington Cancer Center.

"The Bank With Confidence"

Prime attraction

The outdoor musical drama "Texas" finished its season this year by drawing the second largest attendance in its history when 99,157 persons paid to see the show.

This brings the total to a whopping 1,880,000 persons who have seen the show in Palo Duro Canyon.

Indeed "Texas" is by far the most popular tourist attraction in the Panhandle and is indeed a quality production where all of us in the area are proud to take our friends.

"Texas" is produced by the non-profit organization The Texas Panhandle Heritage Foundation. It began as a dream of Margaret Harper of Canyon and due to her dogged determination and the help of a great many other folks, this outdoor musical drama has become a reality.

Mrs. Harper got financial assistance from the foundation and a number of people in the Perryton community contributed to it.

The story and the music came from distinguished playwright Paul Green and is the story, somewhat fictionalized, of the early days of the Panhandle and the dramatic conflict between the ranchers and the farmers as the country developed.

"Texas" has a fine story, outstanding musical productions and has been fortunate over the years to enlist a number of very talented performers who have made it such a success.

The cast can rely upon top flight assistance from the music and drama departments of West Texas State University and the city of Amarillo has been very supportive of the project.

This year the statistics show that the 1987 visitors came from all 50 states and 84 foreign countries. "Texas" is a stop on the major American tours and every night the parking lot is dotted with tour buses from all over the country.

We in the Panhandle are fortunate to have such an entertainment attraction in our back yard and the way things are going we will be able to take our friends to "Texas" for many more years to come.

Clements' plane

How awkward it is for Gov. Bill Clements on this matter of state airplanes.

Clements made a major campaign issue of Democratic Gov. Mark White's purchase of a $3 million jet for use by the governor's office.

Between Jan. 23 and Aug. 20, Clements flew to Dallas 23 of 31 weekends at a cost to taxpayers of almost $30,000.

No doubt Clements does some state business in Dallas. Attorney General Jim Mattox says Clements' trips probably are legal. Clements said he intends to continue doing it.

However, the governor is at best inconsistent and, at worst, appears hypocritical.

-San Antonio Express-News

Hispanic power

Pope John Paul II's American tour has underscored a fact already well known to residents of Texas, California and Florida — the growing influence of Hispanic Americans.

Most of his time in this country was spent in areas with large numbers of people of Hispanic heritage. The vast majority are Catholic.

It is estimated that Hispanics currently account for 25 to 30 percent of the U.S. Catholic population. By some projections, they will constitute 50 percent by the end of the century.

The U.S. Census Bureau reported Sept. 10 that the number of Hispanics has grown by 30 percent, to 18.8 million, since 1980.

... The trend presents American business with a potentially lucrative opportunity. Writing in American Demographics magazine, Joe Schwartz described Hispanics as "a brand-conscious, brand-loyal market — and they prefer American-made products made by companies that recognize Hispanic needs."

The old Clements

In politics no less than in other walks of life, the old game of Ins vs. Outs can certainly do some entertaining things with your perspective.

A case in point is Texas Gov. Bill Clements: While he was on the campaign trail pressing his successful bid to unseat Mark White ... Clements railed at the Democrat for ... White's purported extravagance in having authorized the purchase of a $3 million jet for use by the governor's office.

... It has, however, been interesting to note that in the months since he took office, Clements has ... billed the state for some $20,000 in expenses for round trips to his Dallas home aboard a private plane.

... It is necessary for him to wing off to Dallas, he told The Associated Press, because "a lot of times there is state business there and a lot of times the business has to do with just getting away from down here (Austin) and getting away from the press, that's an important part of it, too."

... Rather than confront an inconvenient question head-on, the governor waved it off — and managed to take a swipe at the press in the process ... but no one can claim Texas voters didn't know what to expect. ...

Tourism pays off

Once again tourism has set a record in Texas, and the figures are an indication of how much the industry means to the state.

A survey by the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Texas at Austin showed tourism brought $17.29 billion to Texas in 1986, breaking the record set the year before. The bureau estimated the state attracted 39.4 million visitors.

The bureau also estimated that travel-related employment rose 5.9 percent during the year, an important factor considering the state's economic problems.

Harris County's stake in the tourism bonanza was estimated at $3.9 billion, which underscores the importance of keeping those tourists coming to Texas — and to the Houston area.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek examines newspaper and television news this week.

ofo

Dear editor:

Whether a piece of news is good or bad sometimes depends on your situation. A weather forecast of rain is good news to a rancher and bad news to a farmer with a crop ready to harvest. A rise in the interest rate is good news to a lender and bad news to a borrower.

Now here's a piece of news: A recent study claims that newspapers have more influence on voters than television.

Offhand, that sounds like good news for newspapers.

But there's another side to it. I don't believe that anything I've ever written for a newspaper has influenced any voters, but if it has I wish I knew what it was so I won't repeat it. I don't want anybody blaming me for some of the politicians we've got on hand today. It wasn't me; it was television that did it.

You see, television people claim the public gets most of its news from television. (If it wants to take credit for Congress, let it.) This may be true of some kinds of news, but try depending on television instead of The Brand to keep up with what's going on in Hereford.

I read the other day that there are nearly as many TV stations in the country as there are daily newspapers, 1,611 to 1,657.

At the same time, I read that there are 56 million cats and 52 million dogs in the United States.

Also, there are 14 candidates running for President.

If you can make anything out of this, I wish you'd let me know.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

The Penultimate Word

TO QUOTE OR NOT TO QUOTE

Well the press has done it again. They found a flaw in another candidate and flogged him to death with it. This time it was Senator Biden. I have no idea what kind of president the guy would have made. I doubt that he had much of a chance to be elected, but if this trend keeps up we are not going to have a chance to elect anyone. A person would have to have a large need to be persecuted to even consider running. I know finding scandal sells newspapers and creates ratings for television but enough is enough.

I am especially sensitive to the issue raised in the case of Senator Biden. He was guilty of (ugh) plagiarism. He quoted someone's speech and did not give them proper credit. Now that smarts. I have always thought all originality and no plagiarism has made many a dull sermon. My theory is if you steal from one guy its plagiarism, if you steal from more than one it is research. I say when better sermons are written I will preach them.

One of the ladies in my church introduced some of her children to me by saying they were members of a church pastored by John Claypool. John happens to be one of the most creative minds I have ever known. He also happened to mail out his sermons to fellow preachers each week. I also happened to be on his mailing list. The lady said, "They get to hear John Claypool every Sunday." I said, "So do you."

A person should certainly give credit when quoting another persons's stuff. Not to do so is wrong. Even though I make fun in this article I made an effort to give proper credit to those I quote. Sometimes I get so caught up in the speech that I forget to do so. Sometimes I use material so long and so often I do not know where it came from. Humorists stretch the truth as far as possible and often sources and reality get lost in the shuffle. Senator Biden could have done the same thing with his quotes.

Now the press has made a big deal out of the issue. They have set the standard, so I think they should follow the standard they set. From now on they should never tell a joke unless they stop and give proper credit as to the person who first told them the thing. That will put this in proper perspective. It will also kill a lot of jokes. Punch lines do not wait for explanations.

Warm Fuzzies,
Doug Manning

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor:

As I read the paper last week and saw that Jim Bullard had resigned as the Hospital Administrator, I was filled with two very powerful emotions.

First, there was sadness that a very valuable member of our community was stepping aside and then displeasure over the acceptance of the resignation of such a powerful asset for the hospital and community.

During my five year association with Jim Bullard and the hospital, I have seen a remarkable progress in the quality and standard of care provided by the hospital. Much of this improvement had been the foresight of Mr. Bullard and his dedication to providing the best health care facility he could. New equipment, new doctors and renovation of an aging hospital has placed Hereford in a very unique position, a position of a small town hospital with the capabilities to do great things without the feeling of getting lost to those who use this facility.

I feel that a big THANKS is due Mr. Bullard, and I also feel that the board of directors should reconsider their acceptance of his resignation. He is too valuable an asset to the hospital and community to lose. I also urge those who agree with me to use this medium to voice your support for Mr. Bullard.

Thanks
David B. Baulch

Dear editor:

This is to every adult taxpayer in the Deaf Smith General Hospital District.

What type of a hospital do you want for your families?

In August of 1978 we got a new hospital administrator. It was spelled out in his employment agreement that he was to take an aggressive stance regarding recruiting new physicians for our community hospital. Our hospital was, at that time, a non-specialized hospital and this administrator has been responsible for initiating the change into more of a specialized unit and becoming more of a part of the competitive mode we find our health care delivery system. He was primarily responsible for recruiting eight new physicians to come to Hereford, five of which are practicing here today.

In 1983, the U.S. Congress mandated the Health Care Financing Administration (HCFA) to oversee the fact that all Medicare patients would have their hospital bills covered under a Diagnostically Related Grouping (DRG) System. Simultaneously, there would be a difference in the reimbursement monies paid to the urban and the rural hospitals for the same DRG's. A few years of DSGH fiscal history: 1985: REvenue - 4.9 million and expenses - 4.4 million. 1986: Revenue - 5.8 million, expenses - 4.8 million, 1987 - Anticipated revenues of 7.1 million, anticipated expenses of 5.3 million.

During the above period, through the efforts of our administrator and many others, 37 of the Panhandle hospitals got together and prepared, then presented, to the U.S. Senate Health Commission our positions. This was done some four to five months ago. Since the presentation, with the assistance of our representatives & senators in Congress, Medicare has performed an audit of our Case Mix (designation of the acuity of illness). The result was that within a short time Medicare has sent DSGH a substantial sum of monies owed to them.

Our hospital is forecasting for the upcoming budget Medicare Contractual Adjustments to the tune of:

DSGH will produce between $2.3 million & $2.4 million of Medicare fees.

Our Government will reimburse DSGH, for their share of that production of Medicare, $1.25 million.

Ladies and gentlemen, our government is - to put it bluntly - telling us that if our hospital suffers a SHORT-FALL, go to local taxpayers.

Try one more view for one more fact. In 1978 DSGH had a gross production of between $2.1 and $2.2 million and sustained total bad debt and charity of 10 percent.

In 1987, DSGH has a projected gross production of 7.8 million and a projected bad debt and charity of 16 percent.

Mr. Fred Fox, of our local taxing agency, has given me the following figures. For DSGH: 1985 Tax Rate .9733 Actual cash paid to DSGH 453,309.57.

1986 Tax Rate .12425. Actual cash paid to DSGH 577,023.58

1987 Tax Rate .12425 Actual Cash paid to DSGH not available.

The Hereford Brand reported a short time back that the Hospitals forecast budget will have a surplus of $428,250.00. This was without a tax increase during the year.

Dr. H.A. Caviness

Dear editor:

Deaf Smith General Hospital and the services it provides is outstanding and the envy of many other cities the size of Hereford. The individual primarily responsible for this is Jim Bullard.

I urge the citizens of Hereford and Deaf Smith County to ask Mr. Bullard to reconsider his resignation and that the Deaf Smith General

Sincerely,
Raymond Schroeder, Principal
La Plata Junior High

Dear editor:

We want to express our gratitude to Jim Bullard for his unselfish work to make Deaf Smith General Hospital—a hospital that is second to none for the size of town as Hereford.

Because of Mr. Bullard's work at recruiting doctors who are specialists in their field (we as a family) have been spared many trips to Amarillo to have routine tests conducted. A personal example: about six years ago my husband had to have a stomach biopsy. We were referred to a Doctor in Amarillo. My husband had to miss two days of work an additional day because the Doctor could not "get around" to seeing him the night of the test. He spent two days and two nights in the hospital.

This past spring he had to have the exact same test run again, but this time he had them performed at D.S.G.H. He missed one day of work. I missed one hour (to hear the Doctor's report). The Doctor told us, immediately, the results of the biopsy. My husband spent only a few hours in the treatment room, compared to two days and two nights in the hospital as before.

The difference in the seven years is a result of Mr. Bullard's tireless efforts to upgrade our hospital and bring the finest of doctors to Hereford.

We as a family want to say "thank you" to Mr. Bullard and, also, "We will miss you."

Thank you,
Mary Ruth Baird

Ann Landers

Transvestites misunderstood

DEAR ANN LANDERS: May I reply to Mel's wife, who wrote about cross-dressing? Since nearly 10 percent of all males have this urge, it is important that people understand it.

I am a heterosexual (as about 75 percent of us are) male transvestite. I began to wear my mother's clothes when I was about 5. As I grew older I read everything I could get my hands on about transvestism to determine what I was. A potential candidate for transsexual surgery? A homosexual? I came to realize that I had two personalities, male that corresponded to my gender, and female that needed to be expressed.

Current research considers this an inborn compulsive behavior that can be triggered at any age by any number of incidents. I have found that cross-dressers who have come in contact with the feminine side of their personality are above average in intelligence and more sensitive to the feelings of others, especially their wives or girlfriends. They are often more secure in their masculinity than many of the "macho" types. Sexual release in most cases is secondary to the sense of physical and emotional pleasure that comes from dressing up. It is not a hobby, it is a necessity. This may explain Mel's irritability when he is unable to dress up.

I would urge Mel's wife to disregard most all of what she has heard about transvestism. There is too much misinformation around. She must remember that this is a factor in Mel's personality that made him the person he is and that she loved him enough to marry him. She should not feel threatened by his feminine side.

Fear of the unknown and apprehension about public discovery are two legitimate concerns. If she sits down with him, talks about it, respects his feelings and keeps the lines of communication open, she will find that her love will be much deeper for this multifaceted person she chose to go through life with. The quality of the relationship will be greatly enhanced by her acceptance and support.—T.J. Houston

DEAR T.J.: Thanks for a postgraduate course in cross-dressing. You've helped a lot of people today.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Wouldn't you think a person who has given so much to so many would be allowed to rest in peace? Not so. I'm just furious about what has happened to Kate Smith.

Nearly a year after her death, Kate Smith's body remains in a vault in the Adirondack Mountains because of problems with church officials.

Kate's will made it clear that she wanted to be buried in a pink granite mausoleum at the cemetery of St. Agnes Catholic Church in Lake Placid, N.Y.

Church officials say they have a policy against mausoleums in their cemetery. Also, they can bury bodies in the ground only seven months of the year because the ground freezes in November and doesn't thaw out until April.

Is there anything you can do about this, Ann Landers?—A Longtime Fan of Kate

DEAR L.T.F.: You'll be glad to know that the church has reconsidered and will permit a small mausoleum to be built. So now, when the moon comes over the mountain, it will have a happy smile on its face.

Planning a wedding? What's wrong? "The Ann Landers Guide for Brides" will relieve your anxiety. To receive a copy, send $2.50 plus a No. 10 self-addressed, stamped envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

The lights went out in more ways than one for Hereford

Frenship scores 23-7 upset over Herd

By GARY CHRISTENSEN
Sports Editor
WOLFORTH — The lights went out two different times in two different ways during Friday night's District 1-4A battle between Hereford and Frenship.

With only seven minutes and 21 seconds gone in the game, the stadium lights went out because of a power outage. And little by little the lights marking out the Hereford pathway grew dimmer and dimmer as the Whitefaces could not get their offense rolling on the roads mapped out in their preparation and strategy for the game.

The result — the Frenship Tigers upset the top 10 ranked Hereford Whitefaces 23-7. And as a result, both Hereford and Frenship are 1-1 in district games and 2-2 overall.

At about 7:42 p.m., just 12 minutes after the game had started, the power outage hit the Frenship High School football stadium. It was not until 9:06 p.m. that the power was restored, and the game resumed at 9:14 p.m. (ending around 11:30 p.m.).

Before the loss of electricity, Frenship showed greater signs of getting its offense rolling than Hereford did. When the game began again, Frenship put together an 11-play touchdown drive, with Jared McCullough passing to Lorenzo Myrick for the touchdown with 41 seconds left in the first quarter.

Jeff Mankins added the extra point and Frenship held a 7-0 lead.

The Whiteface offensive unit had a frustrating first half, getting only one first down, and that first down was the result of a Frenship interference penalty. A turnover also did not help the situation.

Frenship piled up 230 yards total offense in the first half — 158 of those yards passing. Midway through the second quarter, Frenship needed six plays to drive 66 yards for a touchdown.

McCullough completed a pass to Derrick Dykes for a 16-yard touchdown play with 4:13 left in the first half. The lead stayed at 13-0 when the extra point kick was missed.

Hereford was forced to punt from midfield with three minutes left in the first half. Jason Scott's punt went 41 yards and the ball bounced off the shoulder of a Frenship. An alert Keith Brown of Hereford fell on the ball for a fumble recovery at the Frenship eight-yard line.

Three plays later, a three-year touchdown run by Marcus Brown was called back because of a clipping penalty. After Hereford was called for a penalty for having an illegal receiver downfield, an HHS pass was intercepted at the five-yard line.

Frenship moved to midfield where the Tigers attempted a pass. Hereford's Robby Collier intercepted the pass, preventing Frenship from gaining a three touchdown lead before halftime.

Hereford had only 22 yards total offense in the first half, and completed only one of 10 passes.

Except for scoring a touchdown in the third quarter, the second half was not much better for the Hereford offense. Penalties at crucial times, coupled with several dropped passes, hurt the Whitefaces.

The touchdown came with 3:46 left in the third quarter, and was a three-yard pass caught by Pat Mercer from Jason Scott. Tim Long kicked the extra point.

Earlier in the second half, Hereford was stopped at the Frenship 24-yard line, and punted the ball.

In the first play of the fourth quarter, Frenship's Mankins kicked a 26-yard field goal to make Frenship's lead nine points, 16-7, making it necessary for Hereford to score two times to get into the lead.

The Whitefaces moved from their own 34-yard line to the Frenship 19, only to lose possession of the ball because of an interception with 9:18 left in the game. The interception was made by Frenship at its own six-yard line.

Frenship failed to get a first down, and Hereford had the ball at the HHS 44-yard line after a 17-yard punt return by Robby Collier.

But four plays later, Frenship intercepted another Hereford pass, this time with a 32-yard return to the Hereford 31. The Tigers went on to score, with Roy Wilson carrying the last year for the score with 5:43 left in the game.

A successful extra point increased the margin to 23-7. And Hereford's hopes of rallying for a victory were destroyed when the kickoff was fumbled and lost.

Frenship nearly doubled Hereford's offensive output. Frenship had 343 yards total offense in the game compared to 180 for Hereford.

Hereford put the ball in the air 33 times, completing only 11 and having

WE HELP... WHEN HELP IS MOST NEEDED

The day a member of your family dies is the day you will need help of a special kind. Regardless of your grief there are a hundred details to face and decisions to make.

Suddenly you have many questions about such things as which funeral director to call, the cost of funeral services, which cemetery you should use. More questions about the time and place of services, flowers, pallbearers, newspaper notices, insurance, Anything more? Yes, much more.

It's the day when a funeral director from Rix can give you the answers you must have: Answers based on experience patiently repeated as many times as you need to hear them to make wise decisions. You will find that you may arrange all details at our office or in the privacy of your home.

When death comes to your family, as it does to every family, or when you know death is imminent, call us for any information you need. This creates no obligation. We will give you answers to your questions, and you may make your decisions based on facts.

We invite your call before the need arises when you can examine the facts calmly and make unemotional decisions.

Remember, we want to help you.

A picture is worth . . .

. . . What about 1,000 fans were thinking in the Hereford stands Friday night at Frenship High School after a blown transformer and downed power line turned out the lights at the stadium. Hereford's "Scat" mascot, Christina Kerr, skated around with a picture that told the story as fans cheered "We want lights! We want lights!" and "SPS! SPS!" The lights were restored after an hour's delay, but the Herd never saw the light as Frenship took a 23-7 district win.

Owners and players not learning from past

'Joe Fan' is big loser in NFL players' strike

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The NFL owners and players have shown no signs of learning from their mistakes of years past.

With scars still visible from the 1982 strike that lasted 57 days, the Dallas Cowboys have joined their brothers in doing it again.

Five years ago, the Cowboys lost fans they have yet to get to return to Texas Stadium and they've had trouble selling out games since then as well.

No game for the troubled 1987 season is sold out. There were 16,000 remaining for the home opener against Buffalo.

It is hard to understand why someone making $45,000 a week would go on strike. Particularly, when $45,000 a year is a nice living wage in this country.

But Yale graduate Jeff Rohrer can make some cerebral points of why it's important that quarterback Danny White (the one making the 45-K) walk the picket lines.

Rohrer, who is losing $20,000 this week, claims that the free agency issue is moot. He says the players don't really expect to get that from the owners. Instead, he cites pensions, severance and other benefits as the crux of the strike.

There is a serious side, he says, that deserves some attention from the owners.

"An industry study by an insurance company shows that guys who play professional football die young," Rohrer said. "While most people live to be in their 70s, a lot of football players don't make it through their late 50s. That's scary to me."

"If I'm headed for an early coffin, then I don't want to be here. I think it needs to be looked into. I think our (NFL players') sacrifices need to be rewarded."

Rohrer is bitter at teammates Randy White and Don Smerek who crossed the picket line.

"I can forgive but I can't forget," Rohrer said. "My grandfather was in the Teamsters. The Cowboys will not be a unified team when they return. Not when you have Tony Dorsett calling White 'Captain Scab.'"

Many of the Cowboys are uncertain what the strike is all about. Smerek said he didn't strike because he didn't understand the issues.

Offensive lineman Nate Newton stopped while carrying a picket sign to ask a reporter what the newsman felt was the main issue.

"My opinion isn't important, Nate, what do believe is the main issue?" was the reply.

"I'm not sure, man," Newton said. "A lot of us aren't sure." Offensive tackle Mark Taimel said, "I'm not sure what the main issue is. I'm not up on the issues. I follow the union."

Obviously there's a lot of blind faith in the player's union. The owners, of course, want to squeeze every nickel they can.

Professional football is a very, very big business.

Cowboys' Club President Tex Schramm has said that you can make a lot more putting your money in certificates of deposit than owning a football team.

But Tex always says it with a smile. Properly managed, an NFL team can be a gold mine.

As usual, the big losers are the fans. Joe Fan will end up paying more for tickets, parking and concessions. And those who advertise products on television will have to charge more to pay the increased advertising rates.

Weren't sports supposed to be a diversion from the grind? As of the latest NFL strike, that little diversion became more expensive.

Go dove hunting or play golf on Sunday. Maybe you can learn to do without it.

Horton misses Southwest Classic cut by four strokes

Mike Horton, golf pro at Pitman Municipal Golf Course, failed to make the cut in the Southwest Classic in Abilene.

Horton shot a round of 71 on Thursday, and a round of 76 on Friday for a two-round total of 147. That was four strokes off the cutoff point, 143.

HOT TO SCOUT
NEW YORK (AP) — Marty Blake, the director of the NBA Scouting Services, has definite ideas about what to look for in a college player and his chances to play in the pro game.

"I look for speed and quickness," Blake said. "Then shooting ability, range, desire, ballhandling, rebounding and defensive rebounding."

Surprisingly, Blake focused on the word desire. "We look for great desire in players," he said. "There are guys in the league doing the job from sheer desire who do not have the natural talent of others."

The tournament is being played through Sunday at the Fairway Oaks course, a par-72, 7,100-yard course. Golfers had to shoot a one-under-par score for two rounds to make the cut.

There are nine golfers who shot even-par 144 for the two rounds, including one who had a first-round score of 66, Bob Lunn. Lunn began the day Friday one stroke behind leader Bob Eastwood.

After two rounds, Eastwood and Frank Conner at 134, two strokes behind Dan Hallorsen.

Others who failed to make the cut included Rod Curl and Bob Tway, at 144; J.C. Snead at 145; Forrest Fezler at 147; Johnny Miller and Howard Twitty at 148; and Gary Koch and Scott Verplank at 149.

From 1901 through 1986, a total of 725,167,413 fans paid to see National League games.

Washer and dryer connections are adjacent.

The kitchen is provided with excellent cabinet space, built-ins and counter-top. Double garage entry is from here.

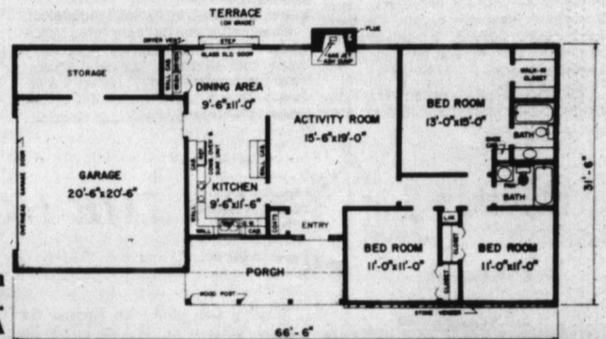

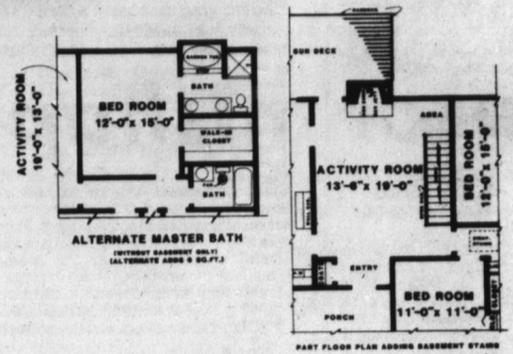

There are three large bedrooms and two full baths. The master bedroom is oversized and has walk-in closet and private vanity bath. Also notice the new alternate featuring a separate shower, garden tub and double sinks. The hall bath services the two remaining bedrooms and guests. Linen storage is central.

The exterior is accented by combined stone and vertical siding, along with multi-lite windows. This plan is also available with a contemporary look.

The plan is number 267A. It includes 1,297 square feet of heated area. All W.D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency and are drawn to meet all FHA and VA requirements. For further information on this plan write, W.D. Farmer, P.O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 30345.

Fall is good time to examine lawn

Fall in the air and the sounds of football throughout the area signal the need for a close look at your gameplan to help your lawn go into the winter season, says a specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Fall is a critical period for both warm and cool season turf, but treatment that is good for one type may be bad for the other, notes Dr. Michael Hickey, Extension soil chemist at Lubbock.

Fall may reduce the curb appeal of bermudagrass and zoysia, but it allows the turf to get ready for winter, Hickey said. "Such warm season grasses require a three- to four-week hardening period to prepare for winter. In our area, this occurs at the end of September and into October."

During this period, shoot growth will decrease and the essential carbohydrates necessary to carry the turf through dormancy accumulate. Practices that promote lush growth prevent the hardening process and increase susceptibility to low temperature injury or possible winter-kill, the Extension specialist said.

"Application of nitrogen-containing fertilizers and mowing too closely are two practices to avoid at this time of year," Hickey said.

Cool season grasses, such as fescue and Kentucky bluegrass, tend to suffer from heat stress during High Plains summers, the soil chemist said. "As fall approaches, their growth will increase through November."

"These grasses will respond nicely to a nitrogen fertilizer application in late September," Hickey said. He cautioned that care should be taken to apply no more than five pounds of ammonium sulfate per 1,000 square feet. Applying higher amounts will leave the grass susceptible to damage by very cold weather.

Both warm and cool season turf will benefit from an application of potassium in late September, the Extension specialist said. Potassium can improve winter-hardiness, wear tolerance and disease resistance in turf.

For bermudagrass and zoysia, the suggested rate is one to two pounds of potassium per 1,000 square feet. This should be applied as a potassium-only fertilizer, and nonnitrogen or phosphorous should be applied, Hickey said.

Fescue and Kentucky bluegrass will benefit from a two- to four-pound application of potassium, he said.

"For the cool season grasses in West Texas, a complete fertilizer such as 10-10-10, containing nitrogen, phosphorous and potassium, can be used only if a soil test suggests the application of phosphorous. Otherwise, the individual elements are best," the Extension soil chemist said.

Decor mishap isn't disaster

By BARBARA MAYER

Does a decorating faux pas mean disaster?

Not necessarily, says a group of decorators who were queried at the New York Design Center in Manhattan about typical errors made by consumers and how to rectify them.

The 10 decorators asked said that except for built-ins or architectural changes, almost everything else can be improved by moving the offending furnishings to a different room, or rearranging them in the room itself, or by changing the lighting or color scheme or accessorizing differently. Furthermore, they agreed, a well-dressed room is not dependent on how much money is spent.

One of the most common errors untrained individuals make in their own home is focusing narrowly on individual pieces of furniture and not on the whole room scheme, which causes them to lose control of the project. People also choose furnishings that are too small or too large for the room, creating an out-of-proportion arrangement; they make do with ineffective lighting (either too much or too little) and they choose colors that do not work well together.

"Seeing things for individual appeal instead of viewing the total concept is the major culprit," according to John Saladino. However, he says, it's relatively easy to change the paint color or the upholstery to rectify mistakes.

However, if you have invested much of the decorating budget in a "grotesquery that interrupts the calm serenity of the surroundings," the only solution is to get the offender out of the room. The moral: don't buy unreturn-able, expensive antiques unless you are absolutely sure they will fit.

According to Alfred Pensis, the amateur who isn't careful can end up with "a jungle of furniture where nothing really works together, too many legs, furniture that isn't weighted properly, poor lighting and overdoing some aspects of decorating."

Short of going to design school yourself, or hiring someone that has, several of the designers suggested experimenting by rearranging the room, perhaps angling the sofa instead of simply placing it against the longest wall in an uninteresting layout.

If things are looking jungle-like, try putting away some of the accessories, since "too much embellishment is a dead giveaway that a trained person was not involved," according to Mary Elliott.

Another way to hack through that jungle is to elevate some accessories on a table or display them in an armoire. "Not everything should be on the same plane," says Bebe Winkler. "Put something on a pile of books, or elevate a vase of flowers or plants."

Carol Pugliese says it's a good idea to vary the textures in your room. The rule for textures is to have a variety of them, some soft and fuzzy and others hard.

An idea a beginner might be able to execute fairly easily is to choose a few related colors or even a single color and then vary the texture. For example, she said, you might pair a velours-covered sofa in a pastel shade with a dhurrie rug in one of the sherbet colors that are so popular. Another idea is to choose a gray sofa in a soft-textured material (she suggested luxurious but expensive suede) and then employ a gray marbled wallpaper in the room.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

If you own a house, sooner or later you are going to need and use an extension ladder. It is a necessary part of maintenance equipment, so you might as well learn how to use it safely.

So we understand each other, an extension ladder is the kind which has two parts fitted together so that one can be moved separately to the desired height. The top part moves upward when a rope attached to it is pulled. The two sections are then linked together so there won't be any separation while you are on the ladder. Wooden ladders are the old-time favorites, but metal ladders have been taking over in recent years. The aluminum ladders are especially popular because they are so light. The thing to remember about wooden ladders is they should not be painted, since the paint can hide defects already there and those that might occur at a later time. As for metal ladders, they must be handled with care to prevent them from coming into contact with power lines.

Proper balance is the vital ingredient of any extension ladder. The ladder must be balanced and you must maintain your balance while on it. To be sure a ladder maintains its balance, keep the feet of it about one-fourth away from the foundation of the house; that is, one-fourth the length of the ladder. Thus, a 24-foot ladder would need to have its base 6 feet from the house foundation. Another safety factor is to see there is an overlap of at least 3 feet of the two parts of the ladder. While this assures a certain amount of balance, some gadgets can be bought to assist the ladder to remain steady. One of these is called a levelizer, another a stabilizer, with several kinds of items for attachment to the feet of the ladder.

As for your own balance, you can keep it if you remember not to over-reach and to use both hands when climbing the ladder. Many accidents occur when people painting a house stretch out too far to cover too much territory, on a windy day.

Getting the ladder up against the house can be tricky if it isn't done the right way. The right way is to push the feet of the ladder against the base of the house. At this point, it is at right angles to the house. Go back to the top of the ladder, grab the top rung and raise it to shoulder height. You now walk under the ladder, raising it slowly, keeping a tight grip on it and releasing one hand at a time. Be sure you have a firm grip on one rung before you move the other hand to the next rung. The ladder will be getting more and more vertical. As it finally becomes fully vertical, slowly and carefully move the feet away from the house until it is far enough away from the house. You should have marked off the spot where the ladder is to rest finally.

When everything seems to be all set, get on the first rung and shake your body a little to test the stability of the ladder. Don't climb a ladder while holding tools. Instead, put them in a bucket and hoist them up with a rope.

Of all fires during the course of a year, nearly 74 percent take place in the home.

Unfortunately, they do not always happen to "someone else." A small percentage of fires start from unforeseeable causes, but the vast majority are from sources that can be avoided. And when they are the result of those unforeseeable causes, a dependable and timely warning is of utmost importance in saving lives when combined with the know-how for a quick and safe escape.

One of the country's foremost authorities on home fire detection and prevention is William T. Nebraska, fire safety director of the Hartford Insurance Group. He points out that when a fire occurs when a family is asleep, just three or four minutes separate life and death. Since three-quarters of dwelling-fire victims die on upstairs floors from fires started downstairs, the importance of automatic early warning detectors and a prearranged plan of escape becomes very clear. The majority of deaths are caused by suffocation, either from an insufficient supply of oxygen or from asphyxiation by deadly combustion gases.

Nebraska says you not only need early warning detectors, you need an escape plan that is rehearsed regularly. This means discussing with your family what to do in a fire emergency, planning at least two safe avenues of escape and actually holding fire exit drills, just as is done in schools and some business establishments. If the escape routes and facilities are inadequate, change them so they will be. Nebraska's emphatic warning is that children should be included in fire emergency plans because of the possibility they may have to escape without your help. That's why the exit drills are so important.

The major causes of house fires are associated with heating, cooking, electricity and smoking. Your heating system should be of a type listed by the Underwriters Laboratories or, if gas-fired, by the American Gas Association Laboratories. The system should be inspected, cleaned and repaired professionally each year before the heating season starts. Flue pipes and vent connectors passing through floors, closets, ceilings and attics should be eliminated. Your local fire department can advise you of other hazards connected with the heating system and anything else that might constitute possible trouble.

Pugliese, whose decorating "pet peeves" include "obese wall treatments" says consumers should avoid those full-wall-length custom-made entertainment centers that overpower a room of modest dimensions.

If hiring a decorator is out, the decorators suggest doing homework before you buy. Look at books and magazines; cut out what you like. Take your time; think about your needs to help make the right decisions.

Winkler is a great one for looking on the bright side. "If the scale and proportion are off, warm intimate details can help." They include "lots of flowers, fresh plants, and wonderful pillows in old fabrics, piled in different sizes and shapes on sofas and chairs, to help make the seating more inviting."

Proper lighting can camouflage design disasters, she adds.

Have every light switch on a dimmer from wall sconces to ceiling fixtures to floor lamps, she adds. "Then you can create moods by raising and lowering the light level."

The experts say that people are too hard on themselves. Some comments: "A mistake becomes a monumental disaster. They have no one to use as a sounding board. They exaggerate the mistakes they think they have made. They feel so wasteful." Instead, find a shoulder to cry on and remember, decorators make mistakes, too. But they don't let it stop them.

Equal Housing Opportunity

Singles will be in majority by 2,000

By the year 2,000, singles will make up the largest share of the nation's households, and half of the unmarried segment will be homeowners, most living in urban areas. About half the primary residences sold probably will be small-to medium-sized single-family homes. And, about $900 billion in housing credit, excluding repaid mortgages, will be needed annually to satisfy the total demand for sales of owner-occupied detached homes, town houses, condominiums and cooperatives.

The future of the real estate industry—who will be buying what with how much—is analyzed in "The Demand for Housing and Home Financing into the Twenty-First Century," recently completed by economists for the National Association of Realtors. The comprehensive study looks at homeownership up to the next century from two perspectives: how strong the demographic demand for housing and housing finance will be; and how the supply of mortgage credit will adjust to that demand.

According to the report, there probably will be about 106 million households in the nation by the turn of the century. The overall homeownership rate is expected to rise to 67.8 percent by 2000, up from the 64.8 percent rate recorded in 1985. The steady demand will be fueled by near-record increases in households, three out of five being in the typical age range to own homes. The study bases its demand predictions using data that categorizes households by age group, marital and family status, and region. By 1990, the 18-24, 25-29 and 35-44 age groups likely will have fewer households, and within those groups, the quantity of married people probably will drop the most.

In 1985, the age group 35-44 was the largest segment, with about 17.7 million households; it is expected to remain the largest in 1990, adding about 3.6 million households by that year. By 2000, this dominant segment will have aged to the 45-54 group, which will then probably comprise about 21.7 million households. Over the next decade, the drop in other age groups more prone to rental units and the prevalence of the age groups 35-44 and 45-54 groups more apt to own—indicates a market that will be heavily oriented toward owner-occupied housing.

Single-person households are expected to total 31.5 million by 2000, comprising the largest share, 30 percent, of the total number of projected households. More than 50 percent of the singles likely will own their homes. Married couples with children will rank second to singles, likely totaling 28.4 million households, or 27 percent of all households. Eighty-one percent of the married couples with children are expected to be homeowners.

By 2000, the share of households accounted for by married couples without children will be about 25 percent, and 89 percent of these are expected to own their homes. The share of homes owned by two or more unmarried people is expected to rise to 37 percent.

Regional comparisons suggest that the greatest increase in the number of households likely will be in the South, which is projected to grow by about 9.4 million households to total about 39.1 million by 2000. The West also is expected to bring its total to about 24.3 million. Singles are expected to comprise 46 percent of the new households in the South and 45 percent in the West.

Single-family, detached housing is projected to contribute to 93 percent of all new owner-occupied units by the turn of the century. Occupancy of units with six or fewer rooms will rise by nearly 6.1 million to a total of more than 36.4 million; while occupancy of single-family homes with seven or more rooms will rise by 8.3 million, bringing the total of larger homes to 26.9 million. The study considers a single-family home with up to six rooms as one with a kitchen, living room, dining room and one-to-three bedrooms (a bathroom is not included in the room count). A seven-room-plus home has four or more bedrooms.

A single-family, one-to-six-room home that cost $84,600 in 1985 is projected to cost $217,600 in 2000. This estimate is based on an average annual appreciation rate of 6.5 percent, making the price $115,900 in 1990 and $158,800 in 1995. The study presumes that buyers' incomes will also increase by about 6.5 percent each year, thus supporting the expected appreciation rate.

Future sales figure are an estimated percentage of the projected total of primary residences. The sales percentage estimates are derived from data for 1985, in which about 5.2 million new and previously-owned homes were sold. This constitutes about 9.8 percent of an estimated 53.1 million homes in the nation. The report also divides future sales of previously-owned versus new homes on 1985's ratio of two resales for each new sale.

The estimates for future sales are qualified: "It is reasonable to assume that these housing consumption levels or demographic demands will change with economic conditions. Consequently, at the peaks or troughs of cycles, when interest rates are at their extremes, these consumption levels may vary substantially from the projected values," the study notes. The sales volume for new and existing units is expected to range from 5.8 million in 1990 to 6.8 million in 2000. Sales of single-family homes are expected to rise from 3.6 million to 4.2 million over the next decade, and sales of new single-family homes are expected to rise from 1.8 million to 2.9 million units.

In addition to an expected higher demand for single-family homes, the study also shows, to a far smaller extent, a growing demand for multifamily units. For structures with two-to-four units, it projects a sales volume for new and existing units that ranges from 254,000 in 1990 to 278,000 in 2000. For structures with five or more units, it projects a sales volume for new and existing units that ranges from 173,000 in 1990 to 197,000 in 2000.

The anticipated consumer demand for mortgages will continue to spur the creation of financing techniques that serve as an affordable alternative to the historically popular fixed-rate loan. Various plans for home purchasing are expected to be accompanied by innovations in refinancing and borrowing against home equity. For instance, a projected increase in the retiree segment of the population likely will result in more financing options that allow the elderly to use the untapped equity in their homes as a source of income.

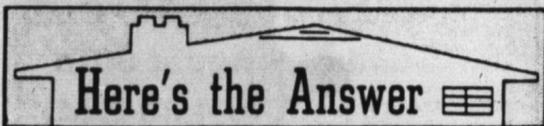

The study's projections for mortgage demand include financing for new and existing-home sales, refinancing and second mortgages. More than 90 percent of the loan amounts listed apply to the purchase of single-family homes. The totals projected are based on loans covering 80 percent of the purchase price.

According to the study, the gross total mortgage financing demand (including new loans originated and mortgage repayments) for 1990 likely will be about $653 billion, including more than $610 billion for single-family homes and about $43 billion for multifamily units. In 1995, the estimate rises to a total of $976 billion, including more than $914 billion for single-family homes and close to $62 billion for multifamily units. By 2000, the total is expected to jump to $1.4 trillion, with more than $1.3 trillion financing single-family purchases and about $89 billion going toward multifamily units.

Because the South is expected to incur the largest demand for housing over the next decade, the volume of mortgage financing thus is projected to be heaviest in that region. The study estimates that the South's share of financing will grow from about 35 percent in 1990 to 37 percent in 2000. Conversely, the Northeast will have the smallest share, 18 percent by 2000, dropping from 20 percent in 1990.

The strength of the general economy over the next 12 years will determine how close the housing market actually will be to the NAR's predictions for the industry. The association is anticipating at least two economic cycles over that period, which could skew annual activity. However, although yearly lulls may offset boom years, the NAR foresees an overall rising demand for owner-occupied housing, trending upward into the next century.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — Can you tell me how to build a fireplace?

A. — Only if I had the time and space to give you a 5,000-word reply. There are many books on the subject. Try your local library or book store, or write to Lane Books, Menlo Park, CA 94025. An excellent edition by them is "How to Plan and Build Fireplaces."

Q. — I want to build a fireplace outside. Does it require a chimney and flue?

A. — If the fireplace is outside and not attached to the house, it needs only a short chimney or none at all. If it is attached to the house, it needs a separate flue even though it is actually outside.

Q. — Which uses more electricity, a regular electric oven or a microwave oven?

A. — The electric oven by a wide margin.

Q. — Where can I find out how to build a solar space heating system?

A. — Write to the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, DC 20402. Send $1.50 and ask for their plans for "An Economical Solar Heating System for Home" — No. 033-000-00632-2.

Q. — I will be making some kitchen wall cabinets. How high should they be?

A. — The average height, including the base unit and the countertop, is 36 inches.

Q. — Is it safe to clean an old varnished cabinet with denatured alcohol?

A. — Yes.

Q. — The walls in our house are made of gypsum board. They have never given us any trouble over the years until now. Recently, cracks occurred in the walls in several places. I filled them with a plaster patching compound and everything seemed okay. But now they have opened again, so I gather I did something wrong. What is your advice?

A. — To be sure of a better repair — one that will last indefinitely — use a mesh tape along with a special compound made for filling gaps in gypsum board. Sometimes these materials can be purchased in a kit form. If you can't buy it that way, be sure to get the tape and the patching compound in the same store after you have explained to the dealer what you plan to do. If you get a kit, it will contain an applicator. If not, use a putty knife with a wide blade.

Q. — We recently purchased a house with no finish on the exterior. It is our intention to stain the wood. Is there anything I should know about doing this?

A. — Follow the directions that come with the stain, but there is one thing you must NOT do and that is to apply the stain on a very hot day, especially if the sun is shining on the surface you are working on. Stain that is freshly applied while the sun is shining will evaporate too rapidly. When that occurs, the stain fails to penetrate the wood properly and it will be only a matter of time before it begins to flake.

Q. — While in a home improvement center recently, I saw what were called corner clamps. It is hard for me to see the necessity when such clamps would be needed.

A. — Corner clamps have many uses. They are especially good for holding the edges of picture frames while the glue is drying.

Q. — I bought a second-hand maple table that appears to have no finish on it. Is it necessary to use a wood filler on it before I apply varnish?

A. — Maple is one of the woods that does not generally require a filler. Besides, you can be your own judge as to whether a wood needs filling. If the pores are open, a filler might be called for, but some people prefer even open-grained wood without a filler. If the wood is fine-grained, as maple usually is, no filler is required. In fact, if you tried to use a filler on it, the material simply would not be absorbed by the wood.

CALORIES AND ICE CREAM

DES MOINES (AP) — How can you take some of the calories out of ice cream?

According to Better Homes and Gardens magazine, you can leave a good number of unwanted calories behind by looking closely in the supermarket's freezer.

Instead of taking a high-fat ice cream, pick up a carton of ice milk, which contains from 2 to 7 percent milk fat. Ice cream has at least 10 percent milk fat.

Or you may want to substitute ice cream treats with frozen fruit and juice bars which are competitive in the calorie field.

Forages still best for cattle

KERRVILLE — Quality forages will continue to be the base for future successful cow-calf and stocker feeding programs.

This was the major focus of a special workshop on "Growing Quality Forage for Beef Cattle" conducted during the International Ranchers Roundup by two forage specialists with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Workshop instructors were Don

Dorsett and Dr. David Bade.

In general, the better a ranch's forage system is managed, the greater the resulting animal production, Dorsett and Bade said.

"Successful forage systems provide the quantity and quality of forages needed to meet the cattle's nutritional needs throughout the year and from year to year, and require both long and short term management. They are designed to meet quality demands in grazed pastures as well as for forages harvested as hay or silage," the specialists said.

"Stocking rate is an integral part of forage management regardless of the type of pasture," they added.

A key to a successful forage program is to balance the following elements throughout the year:

- Quantity and quality of forages available;
- Animal's seasonal requirements;
- Minimal supplemental feeding programs;

"The success of matching these three requirements on a day-to-day basis will result in animal performance such as greater calf weaning weights, average daily gains, animal condition, percent calf crop, calving intervals and other factors," Bade and Dorsett said.

Failure to produce the needed forage quality and quantity throughout the year can be "covered up" by supplemental feeding, but this is an expensive alternative, the specialists emphasized.

Pasture forages for beef cattle can be divided into warm-season perennial or permanent pastures, warm-season annual pastures, cool-season perennial or permanent pastures, cool-season annual pastures, and legumes for pastures, they added.

"Livestock producers can benefit by combining two or more forage plants into a ranch's forage system, since no grass meets the production and quality requirements of livestock on a year-long basis.

"By having adapted summer and winter pastures or by overseeding summer pastures with winter species, producers can furnish grazing for most of the year. Achieving this does require management and planning but provides benefits through reduced haying and feeding," Dorsett and Bade said.

New meat grade unveiled

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new name for third-ranked "good" beef soon will make its way into the nation's supermarkets to provide what the Agriculture Department hopes will be an upbeat choice to consumers who prefer meat on the leaner side.

The old "good" will give way to "select" in the federal beef grading system, although "select" beef will still be behind "prime" and "choice" in the lineup.

Even so, the name change has been a much-sought goal of consumer and meat industry leaders alike. They hope it will mean new pizzazz for leaner cattle that don't require as much grain in their feed as those grading "choice" and "prime."

The name change will take effect Nov. 23, Karen Darling, deputy assistant secretary for marketing and inspection services, said at a news conference Tuesday attended by consumer advocates, health officials, and meat and livestock representatives.

Beef consumption is taking a back seat this year to poultry, according to USDA figures. Will the new "select" label help boost beef to its former prominence?

"Anything that helps promote consumption of agricultural products, we think is a good thing," Ms. Darling replied. "And if this helps promote the consumption of beef — absolutely, it's a good thing."

The name change is only that. Nothing in the government's grading specifications is being altered, said J. Patrick Boyle, administrator of the department's Agricultural Marketing Service.

Grading is not compulsory like federal meat inspection. It is a voluntary service performed by USDA on a fee basis. Standards for beef grades describe such factors as the amount of fat and texture of a cut of meat, which indicate its tenderness, juiciness and flavor.

Boyle said the new name "provides a more positive image for this grade of beef and will help calorie-conscious consumers" choose leaner cuts.

Traditionally, the "prime" and "choice" cuts of beef have enjoyed the greatest consumer demand. The "good" grade usually has not been labeled as such by retailers, who frequently sell it under a house label describing it as lean.

The name change was initiated by a petition filed in June 1986 by Public Voice, a Washington-based consumer group. It gained support from many other consumer groups, health associations and the beef industry.

"In my knowledge, this is the first time in the history of the Department of Agriculture that the department has responded to a consumer petition," said Public Voice Executive Director Ellen Haas. "For too long, we believed that (USDA) proposals and policies have been industry driven and not consumer driven."

Ms. Haas said the switch from "good" to "select" serves as an information tool for consumers to make decisions on what they choose to eat, and as a marketing tool for cattle producers who respond to consumer demands.

As to whether the switch might help consumers demand more beef, she said:

"The name 'good' just was pejorative after 'prime' and 'choice.' It didn't sound too good. With a positive name, consumers will have an indication that they are buying lean beef. I think that they will want to go back and return to beef as a major part of their diets. I see that it will have some very positive effects on the meat industry."

According to AMS officials, about 12.8 billion pounds of beef were graded in calendar 1986. An additional 3.9 billion pounds were "certified" as meeting buyers' specifications.

The balance of the beef produced last year, although not officially tabulated by AMS, was estimated at around 6 billion pounds. That was ungraded or "no-roll" beef, so called because no ink-roller grading stamp was used to mark the carcasses.

Paul M. Fuller, head of the AMS livestock and seed division, said about 80 percent of the no-roll beef would qualify for "good" or "select" grade. Thus, as much as 4.8 billion pounds of currently ungraded beef could theoretically qualify as "select" grade.

China importing soybean oil

WASHINGTON (AP) — China is importing "an unprecedented high level" of soybean oil, apparently to take advantage of low world prices, according to an Agriculture Department report.

The department's Foreign Agricultural Service said China's soybean oil imports in 1986-87 are expected to total about 400,000 metric tons, up from 290,000 tons last year. The forecast for 1987-88 is for imports of 350,000 tons. A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds.

Most of the oil is coming from Brazil, Argentina and Spain, the agency said in its recent report.

TBSWCD sets election

An election for a director for Zone Three on the Tierra Blanca Soil and Water Conservation Board will be held at 7:30 a.m. on Oct. 6 at Pioneer Fertilizer in Milo Center.

Eligible voters must own farm land in the zone, be 18 years of age, and be a Deaf Smith County resident.

Zone Three runs from the northeast corner of Section 25, Block K-4, south to the southeast corner of Section 26, Block K-3, west to the southwest corner of Section 8, T3-R3, north to Section 25, T5-R3, then east to Section 25, Block K-4.

In the unfruitful high arctic, a pack of wolves may cover a thousand square miles of territory to find vulnerable prey.

Walrus bulls eat an average of 100 pounds a day and may grow to weigh as much as a medium-sized car.

Good management counts in storing grain. Minimizing quality deterioration in harvested grain during storage requires strong management. Mechanical drying must be done on grain harvested with a higher moisture content than is recommended. Higher grain temperature and moisture content call for fast mechanical drying to prevent mold. Moisture content for safe storage differs by crop. Most experts agree on these moisture percentages for safe storage: sorghum 12%-14%, soybeans 11%-13%, wheat 12%-14%, and corn 13%. If grain is stored for more than two to three months, a system of aeration for grain cooling and moisture migration control is recommended. Prior to storing, farmers are urged to follow these practices. Check potential sources of water leaks in grain bins. Seal with a good non-drying caulking compound. Protect air vents from blowing rain. Remove any rust or galvanized bin surfaces by cleaning with a wire brush and applying a zinc or rust inhibiting paint. Have alternative drying or insect protection resources available in case of an emergency.

ALL FOR A NIGHT'S SLEEP

I wish I could be a little mouse for just one evening. I'd scamper unnoticed into someone's bedroom to observe firsthand what their sleeping habits are and what nighttime rituals they perform in order to get a good night's rest.

Because I have this little peculiarity when it comes to going to sleep, I have been unmercifully ridiculed and joked about for many years. Even as a young child at slumber parties, the girls laughed at me. The brunt of all the jeering stems from my addiction to sleeping with the sound of my electric fan.

I have tried all sorts of remedies for this affliction: the sound machine which has three controls (one for rainfall, the ocean and wind); the loud ticking of a clock; and the radio tuned into soothing elevator music. But, alas, nothing works as well for me as my electric friend.

It makes no difference what the weather conditions are; I still use the fan. For instance, on hot summer nights I turn the air conditioner on high, set the electric blanket on medium high and turn on the fan before drifting off. (I love a cold room and warm bed). During the winter, I turn off the heat at night, raise the window by my bed (even if it's blowing a blizzard outside), turn my electric blanket on high and flip on the fan. I realize this sounds a trifle bizarre especially to the "normal" person who can nod off the minute his head hits the pillow, but what the heck, it works for me.

There are only three major drawbacks to this nightly routine: (1) my electric bill is extraordinarily high (2) I have to lug my fan around when I travel (It's so inconvenient when I must fly because it won't fit into my suitcase. Boy, do I get the looks from fellow travelers) and (3) it's impossible to replace a fan in the winter if it goes on the blink. I have had only one fan break during that season and I got very little sleep for several months until I could purchase another in the spring. I have learned to keep a spare fan in the closet much like one keeps a spare tire in the car for emergencies.

The one major advantage to being afflicted with the "fan syndrome" is that the noise drowns out all annoying nocturnal sounds, at least most of them. I cannot hear dogs barking, (can't listen to the neighbors partying), cats fighting, the telephone ringing or television blaring. What the fan can't do is conceal the exasperating chirping of a cricket!

After one particularly awful day recently, I simply wanted to go home, unplug the phone, and go to bed to hide from the world for 12 hours. I was desperate to get a good night's sleep and was bound and determined to let nothing interfere with my appointment with Mr. Sandman.

I performed the rituals that are almost guaranteed to help one fall into a restful sleep: I drank a hot toddy, did a few stretching exercises, and let Calgon take me away for an hour before snuggling between the covers with a good murder mystery. After a few minutes of reading, I got drowsy and fell into REM sleep.

I had been blissfully dreaming of Robert (Redford) when this horrendous sound pierced my subconscious. I laid very still for several seconds before I identified the sound; a pesky cricket. I loathe those leaping insects. They are so very clever. They only chirp when it's dark and the minute you turn on the light to try to discover their hiding place, they quit, making it almost impossible to find them.

I listened to the insect communicate for as long as I could stand it and then determined that I must take immediate action. In total darkness I trekked down the hall. As I was inching my way along the wall, I knocked over two pictures and ran smack dab into the bathroom door. After being stunned briefly, I made it to the living room and within an instance was sprawled out on the floor. What idiot left the ?!?! skate board in the middle of the room? (If I haven't broken any bones, I'll get the culprit in the morning)

I got wise. This time I continued my journey crawling on all fours instead of walking. At least, if I approached another foreign object, I wouldn't crash and burn, I'd already be on the floor. As I neared the kitchen, I knew I had completed my destination. The cricket was somewhere under the sink amid cleaning bottles, a sack of potatoes and other paraphernalia.

This was not going to be an easy task as I knew I still couldn't turn on the light. I began pulling stuff from the cabinet not knowing what kind of slimy creature might be lurking in or around the junk. I was just praying I wouldn't encounter a mouse or something equally disgusting.

I piled the items on the floor but I couldn't find the cricket who was still happily chirping away. I turned on one of the stove burners, just enough to light my path so I could crawl under the sink.

Ah ha! There was the little fellow that was dealing me so much misery. He was resting on top of an open can of Raid. With one quick swipe I pulverized the insect with the plunger.

I hope I don't come face to face with a member of his family. I can be brutal when I want revenge.

4-H enrollment still being held

Enrollment for the 1987-1988 4-H year is still being conducted at the Deaf Smith County Extension Office on the 4th floor west of the courthouse.

The clubs will meet at the following times: Citizens 4-H Club at 7 p.m. on the third Thursday of each month; Pioneer I and II, 4 p.m. on the second Monday; Showmanship; 4:30 p.m. on the second Monday. A club for third graders to meet after school is being explored. New third grade or 9-year-old members are needed as well as a leader(s) for this club.

All clubs meet at the Community Center and are general 4-H clubs. Each meeting incorporates a business session and a short education program. Recreation and community service activities are also emphasized. Special project areas of interest are usually held in clinic workshops or special meetings.

Previous 4-Hers are reminded that they must re-enroll each year. Enrollment may be accomplished by calling 364-3573, or visiting the County Extension Office. For more information please contact Davy Vestal, Dennis Newton or Beverly Harder, County Extension Agents for Deaf Smith County.

Former resident weds in Georgetown

Velma Rodriguez Arroyos of Georgetown, formerly of Hereford, became the bride of Michael Steven Barefield of Georgetown in an afternoon double-ring ceremony held Aug. 22 in St. Helen's on the Hill Catholic Church of Georgetown. Officiating minister was Monsignor John B. Fizzle.

The bride is the daughter of Jose and Ophelia Arroyos of San Angelo and the groom's parents are Ray and Virginia Barefield of Big Spring.

The bride's honor attendant was Mindy Hostick of Austin. Best man was Russel Wayne Barefield, the groom's brother.

Bridesmaids were Vickie Baros of Hereford and Virginia Lucero of San Angelo, sisters of the bride, and Sandra Ramirez of Florence, Texas.

Groomsmen included the groom's father and Danny Wilson of Midland and David Meredith of Florence. Ushers were Joe Arroyos Jr., the bride's brother, and Arthur Jordan, the groom's grandfather.

Organist was Gloria Garrett. Readings were provided by George Arroyos, the bride's brother, and Julie Barefield, the groom's sister-in-law.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a Mexican dress made of satin and lace. The bodice was overlaid with lace floral embroidery, pearls and sequins, and flowed into a long train adorned with appliques. Short, puffed sleeves finished the gown.

Her headpiece was a wreath of peach and ivory flowers enhanced with pearls attached to a floor-length veil of bridal illusion which was trimmed with lace appliques made by the groom's mother.

To complete her ensemble, she carried a peach and ivory floral bouquet made by the bride's aunt, Conception Limones. She wore pearl earrings and a necklace given to her by her mother in addition to an emerald ring given to her by her grandmother, Elosia ZUniga, and an antique handkerchief, an heirloom from the Barefield family.

A reception and dance followed in Frizzelle Hall of the church.

The couple will be at home at 908 Walnut, Georgetown.

The bride, a Hereford High School graduate, received her bachelor of arts degree in education from Angelo State University where she specialized in bilingual education. She is a first grade bilingual teacher at Eastside Primary School in Georgetown.

The bridegroom graduated from Cholla High School in Tucson, Ariz., and attended Austin Community College. He is the parts and service manager at John Deere Implement in Georgetown.

Camp Fire News

By CARRIE SKELTON

Camp Fire members attended two fun-filled camps this summer. One, Day Camp, was held June 1-5 at Veteran's Park. The other, Resident Camp, was at Camp Summerlife in New Mexico. It started June 20 and we returned June 27.

Day Camp was really great this year. The theme for the week was "The Greatest Show on Earth." The kids had a lot of fun with it. When they performed for the parents June 5, some were lions and tigers, others were prancing ponies, while the junior high and high school kids were clowns, tightrope walkers, trapeze artists, and stilt-walkers. Also, the kids made crafts, went hiking and played games. The fourth through sixth graders were in an outdoor training program. Here, they learned fire building, reading maps, and other camping skills.

Resident Camp was also a lot of fun. We learned about Camp Fire, outdoors, and each other. There was hiking, fishing, horseback riding, Indian Lore, games and crafts. For the high school kids it was learning to be responsible and trustworthy in addition to having fun. Everyone is very well taken care of. There is a nurse at the camp and two to three mothers in each cabin. The best thing about this camp is the people. There you are not liked because of what you have or look like, but for who you are. If you are friendly and considerate you are going to be liked. The warm atmosphere can not really be explained; you have to experience it. There is just no feeling in the world like going through the ceremonial march that Friday night knowing you are respected and loved by everyone at the camp. Even better than that is the feeling lasts year round.

Camp Fire is the experience of a lifetime. You make strong long lasting friendships, have lots of fun, and grow into a fun-loving, dependable person through their programs.

To register contact the Camp Fire Lodge 364-0385. Come join us!

MR. AND MRS. DON WALSER

Military Muster

Second Lt. Jodie L. Blankenship, whose husband, Michael, is the son of Evelyn Blankenship of 800 Columbia, Hereford, has completed the U.S. Air Force military indoctrination for medical service officers at Sheppard Air Force Base, Texas.

The course acquaints newly commissioned medical personnel with professional and administrative responsibilities as Air Force officers.

She is a 1983 graduate of Roswell High School, N.M.

Never cut your flowers in the morning. Since all day the leaves manufacture food which is transported around in the form of sugars to feed the plant, cut your flowers in the late afternoon when they are the fullest of sugar, if you want the flowers to last.

PRE-NEED FUNERAL COUNSELING

Many Americans Already Know About The Option of Pre-Planning Their Funerals.

You Should Too!

Handle the financial aspects of funeral planning prior to death.

Anniversary parties honor local couple

Mr. and Mrs. Don Walsler were honored recently on their 25th wedding anniversary with a gathering of friends and family at the Country Squire Dinner Theatre in Amarillo.

Also, the couple's children, Mike and Deann Harris, Brad and Rachel Walsler and Mikel Walsler, hosted a cookout for the immediately family in the Harris' home at 406 Hickory. Don Walsler, son of Guy Walsler and the late Glenn Walsler, married Nicky Bradford, daughter of the late Johnnie and Nathree Bradford, Sept. 19, 1962 in Summerfield.

Walsler is employed with Big T Pump Co., and his wife is the district sales coordinator for Family Cancer Plan Ins. Co. She is also a member of the Pilot Club and the Deaf Smith County Unit of the American Cancer Society.

Study club planning celebration

A reunion party is planned by Hereford Study Club from 3-5 p.m. Oct. 18 at the Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center. The event will mark the club's 50th anniversary.

Any former member who has not received an invitation is asked to call Gladys Setliff at 364-1279.

Former members who are being sought include Mmes. Robert Bell, George Fanning, Frank Farmer, Dillie Kelly, Jack Lackey and A.L. Odom. Anyone having information on these women is asked to call 364-1279 or 364-3231.

Australian Visitors

Peaches Reinauer, standing at right, enjoyed a week's visit with her cousin, Mrs. Alan Downer of Sidney, Australia (standing). Mrs. Downer was accompanied by her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd (Bill) Russell, also of Sidney.

The three have been touring the United States for six weeks and will return to their home country at the end of October. Mrs. Reinauer visited Australia with her son a couple of years ago.

Community Concerteers

Spreading the news about the upcoming Community Concert are, from left, Noel Avery, Kristina Kerr, Monica Grotegut, and Laura Kerr. The Hereford High School students are hanging posters in businesses to remind everyone of the Oct. 1 event which will feature Johnny Mann Singers and Dancers at 8 p.m. in the Hereford High School Auditorium.

Calligraphy demonstration presented by Elaine McNutt

Elaine McNutt, introduced by Sharon Hodges, gave a program on calligraphy when members of La Madre Mia Study Club met Thursday evening in the home of Lavon Nieman. Georgia Sparks served as co-hostess.

Those in attendance were given a calligraphy pen and McNutt demonstrated how to write the alphabet using the art.

President Pat Walsh conducted the business meeting with Susan Robbins reading the construction and by-laws of the club. Also, several committee reports were heard: Lavon Nieman reported on the club's annual Christmas Tour of Homes, and Walsh gave the financial report. Those present included Ruth Black, Francyne Bromlow, Merle Clark, Mary Herring, Hodges, Betty Lady, Beverly Lambert, Gladys Merritt, Nieman, Bettye Owen, Nancy Paetzold, Robbins, Mysedia Smith, Sparks, Debbie Tardy, Betty Taylor, Walsh, Marline Watson and Judy Williams.

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

There are several best sellers coming out this week that many of you have been waiting for. The first is Shirley MacLaine's fifth book entitled It's All In The Playing.

Taking us on a journey from Malibu to London and on to the mysterious Peru, Shirley tries to make sense of all she has learned. She shares an extraordinary journey into her heart and soul where memory and history melt. In a moving, compelling and often surprising narrative, Shirley uncovers what she considers a vital truth: that we have the power to design the world in which we live, and the strength to remake ourselves in the images of our dreams. Some feel It's All In The Playing is a book that readers will take to their heart and be forever changed.

In the area of sports Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson's book Out Of Control is a penetrating, cautionary tale of one player's life in the fast lane. As a Cowboy defensive star, Henderson went after it all cars, women, money and excitement. What started with a flirtation with drugs soon became an obsession. The more he got the more he needed. At the Super Bowl XIII Henderson snorted cocaine on the field from a nose inhaler in front of 80 million T.V. viewers. It all ended in a prison sentence where he had to begin the painful task of piecing his life together again. This is the story of how Henderson lost his self-respect and how he won it back again. Out Of Control is one football book that pulls no punches.

Spy Catcher by Peter Wright is the candid autobiography of a senior Intelligence Officer. Peter was a key figure in British intelligence, for nearly a quarter of a century. This is an uncensored, remarkably candid, and enormously revealing book about the real spy business that most of us know about only through fiction. Wright's insights about the CIA and FBI, their relationships with each other, the rest of the U.S. Government and the American allies is riveting stuff. Peter Wright gives a rare inside glimpse of the real day-by-day goings on within the intelligence world I'm sure you will not want to miss.

Man Of The House is the life and political memoirs of Speaker tip O'Neill. A man of wit and wisdom, O'Neill writes of his political career beginning in the 1936 Massachusetts legislature, to the present. He describes his complex ties with the Kennedys, the turbulent Watergate years, including Gerald Ford's startling explanation of Richard Nixon's pardon, and his decision to break with Johnson on Vietnam. As one of America's most distinguished politicians, Tip O'Neill remains in voice and values both a Man of the House and a man of the people.

Beautifully written in a spare, elegant style Sarum proceeds with the pace and energy of the classic epic-tales. It is a meticulously researched, authoritative account of the entire sweep of English civilization. In this novel Edward Rutherford weaves a compelling saga of five families to which we become drawn into the fortunes of the individual family members as well as the larger destinies of each.

If you are one who likes to keep abreast of the best sellers, we have much to offer this week. If you are one who enjoys reading for the sheer pleasure it brings, you shall not be disappointed.

Don't forget our public story time for preschoolers at 10 a.m. each Thursday at the Deaf Smith County Library.

Donations for the October book sale are still being accepted.

SANDRA VALDEZ, EDDIE AGUILAR

Wedding planned

Sandra Valdez of Hereford will become the bride of Eddie Aguilar of Austin on Nov. 14, in First Baptist Church.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Selestino Valdez of 310 Knight St. and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Aguilar of 515 Irving.

Miss Valdez is a 1985 graduate of Hereford High School. She is presently a sophomore at West Texas State University and is employed by the Hereford Independent School District.

Aguilar, a 1983 graduate of Hereford High School and is presently employed by the Texas Department of Public Safety Academy in Austin. He has an associate degree in law enforcement in social sciences from Amarillo College.

Auxiliary donates to Amarillo VA Hospital

The Ladies Auxiliary to VFW Post 4818 met in regular session Monday evening with Ruth Morris presiding. Bills were presented and paid and correspondence was read and disposed of. A check was sent to the Amarillo VA Hospital to buy one flag for the avenue of flags for the grand opening of the new wing of the hospital.

The Auxiliary voted to have an auction sale on Friday night, Dec. 11. There will be a handmade quilt as a door prize.

Doris Wilson reported on the membership tea held at Ruth Morris' house Sept. 20. There was an impressive candlelighting ceremony for the POW-MIA's held at the tea. Special guests were Anita Vardell, District 13 president; Saundra Sutton, District 13 conductress; and Lori Gray, District 13 secretary-treasurer, all from the Canyon Auxiliary. Members present were Helen Bishop, Betty Boggs, Martha Bridges, Erma Loving, Essie Martin, Ruth Morris, Erma Murphy, Edith Richardson, Doris Wilson and Marie Goheen.

The next meeting will be Oct. 5 at 8 p.m. with a supper preceding at 7 p.m. for VFW and Auxiliary members.

IT JUST KEEPS ROLLING ALONG

CAIRO, Egypt (AP)—Not only is the Nile possibly the longest river on Earth, it also carries the distinction of being the only river to pass through tropical rain forest, subtropical savanna and woodland and desert.

Stretching some 4,160 miles, the Nile runs from its headwaters in the Luvironza River of Burundi to its delta on the Mediterranean Sea. Of the land surface that runs along the sides of the river, only 44 percent contributes significant rain and runoff to the Nile's flow. More than half the basin is so arid it actually absorbs both the rain and runoff.

Christie Lynn Gragson of Hereford became the bride of Ricky Ray Prisk, also of Hereford, in a late wedding ceremony Saturday afternoon in Avenue Baptist Church with the Rev. Eddie Tingle officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Connie Gragson of Hereford and Douglas Caldwell of Albuquerque, N.M. and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Prisk of Floydada.

The marriage was held on the 60th wedding anniversary of the bride's great-grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ward of Amarillo.

The church altar was decorated by white wicker baskets filled with burgundy and white flowers.

The bride's aunt, Karen Ward, was maid of honor and the groom's brother, Jeff Prisk, was best man.

Serving as bridesmaids were Charla Barnett of Amarillo and the groom's sister, Gina Prisk. Groomsmen included the groom's brother, Gary Prisk, and the bride's uncle, Kevin Ward. Guests were escorted by Dewey Gragson, the bride's brother, and Joe Bob Brown, Danny Ruiz and Keith Pruitt.

Junior bridal attendants were the bride's brother and sister, Casey and Randi Caldwell. The bride's sister, April Gragson, daughter of Connie Gragson, was flower girl and the groom's brother, Stacy Prisk, was ring bearer.

Candles were lit by the bride's mother, Connie Gragson, and the groom's mother, Jane Prisk.

Ken, Lois and Mary Varner vocalized "Always," "Glory of Love" and "There's No Way" accompanied by Pat Newton.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white satin formal-length gown fashioned with a sweetheart neckline with satin bows adorning the shoulders of the large puff sleeves. The dropwaist was accented with seed appliques and the cathedral-length train was made of delicate embroidered schiffli lace.

Her white fingertip-length veil and blusher were attached to a beaded wreath accented by satin flowers. She carried a bouquet of white silk roses and greenery.

As something old, the bride wore a diamond necklace which belonged to her great-grandmother, the late Mrs. Wallace Shelton, and as something borrowed, she wore a wedding ring belonging to her grandmother, Nora Summers.

Bridal attendants were attired in burgundy satin gowns fashioned with angel bows atop French pouf sleeves. Their full-ballroom length skirts were designed with underskirts.

The bride's mother wore a turquoise silk dropwaist dress.

The groom's sister-in-law, Mrs. Jeff Prisk, invited guests to register at the reception held in the Hereford State Bank Friendship Room. Mrs. Joe Bob Brown and Gina Shelton, the bride's cousin, served cake, and punch and coffee were poured by Robin Carr.

Other members of the houseparty included the bride's cousins, Lori Jones, Mrs. Landon Warren, and Mrs. Lane Warren.

The refreshment table was covered with a burgundy cloth edged with white lace and centered with a large floral arrangement of burgundy, pink and white flowers. The three-tiered solid white cake was patterned with white roses and leaves and topped with a burgundy flower arrangement. The groom's German chocolate cake was made by the bride's aunt, Mrs. Floyd Shelton of Amarillo.

The couple will make their home at 419 Long St.

The bride is a 1987 honor graduate of Hereford High School and the groom graduated from Lockney High School. Both are employed by Barrett-Crofoot West.

Out-of-town guests represented Amarillo, Lockney, Albuquerque, N.M., Cisco, Canyon, Steeville, Lubbock, Plainview and Slaton.

SOVIET STUDENTS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — While American teachers worry about whether their students can read, write and do arithmetic well enough to score high on achievement tests, Soviet teachers worry whether their students can think for themselves.

"In Soviet schools there is a much greater emphasis on rote learning," says Guilbert Hentschke of the University of Rochester. "Their students perform well on achievement tests that measure mastery of factual materials."

Daniels lighting rock fires

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The Charlie Daniels Band's new Epic Records album, "Powder Keg," lights a rock 'n' roll fire more than it smokes country.

Daniels says it's the "hard-touring" band's most rock-oriented album. "I don't think it will upset our fans. Our fans have usually followed us back and forth. We're a musical band, not a fad band or a bunch of sex symbols."

Daniels expands on the history of the band that got a record contract from Kama Sutra in 1971 and has been recording for Epic since 1976. Lately considered a country band, at first the group was known as a southern boogie band.

"We never got around to country music. Country music got around to us," Daniels says.

"We've always had a certain amount of country in our music. We always have, always will. I play fiddle. The first hit album we had was 'Fire on the Mountain.' It was a pop album. Radio formats were such the rock stations were playing that sort of thing.

"When we started doing songs like 'Uneasy Rider' in 1973, country radio stations would play it. They got a good reaction to it. Our music kind of spread.

"Country stations started liberalizing and here we were, right out in the middle. 'Million Mile Reflections' had 'The Devil Went Down to Georgia' on it in 1979. That song was Top 5 pop and No. 1 country.

"In the last year or so there has been more interest in blues-type, basic music again. That's what we are. Hence this album," he adds. "When the band started, we sounded a lot like the new album only a little more instrumental. We used to play a lot of 15-minute songs."

Last year and part of this year, Alabama and the Charlie Daniels Band have toured together. Daniels says: "Alabama is probably the longest we've ever toured with a sure-enough country act. "Most of the things we've done lately have been just us. It's very easy to do a whole show with music from this many albums. I think this is our 14th LP. We can do two hours at the drop of a hat."

Asked about childhood, Daniels says: "My kin people called me Charles Edward when I was a kid. It took a long time for a lot of my kin people to start calling me Charlie. I was born in Wilmington, N.C., a seacoast town 50 miles above the South Carolina line. There was very little going on when I came up. There were 22 people in my high school graduating class. We had 12 grades under one roof.

"A lot has happened in the South in the last 20 years. The percentage of well-educated people has risen as it changed from an agricultural to an industrial economy. Machines came along and took a lot more of the work and the kids could be spared for going to college.

"We used to have kids come and register for school and you didn't see them for another week or two. They had to work in the tobacco crop.

"My dad was an agent for a company. He bought poles and piling lumber, inspected them, arranged for shipping them and things like that.

"I always loved music and wanted to sing. My family has always been big on singing. I never was around anybody to show me how to play till I was 15. A kid messing with a guitar, I'd ask him to show me what he knew. I went bugging everybody to find out a new chord or a new lick. It kind of started from there. I was into bluegrass pretty much."

Daniels still travels in a bus made like an apartment. His wife travels with him. They live 25 miles east of Nashville on a ranch, where three employees raise quarter horses and cattle used for roping and bulldogging in rodeos.

CHARLIE DANIELS

"We've got a son, 22, at the University of Tennessee. He wants to act. I told him he's getting into a highly competitive, heart-breaking business but I spent my life doing what I want to do and I want him to spend his life doing what he wants to do. We've got a newly acquired daughter, 17, who's my niece. We have legal guardianship of her. She calls me Dad."

Daniels, who once lived in Nashville, says: "The big city is not my place. Nashville is too big for me.

"There were drugs around. Cocaine has been a serious detriment to the whole entertainment business. I've never seen anything that went as rapidly as that did. I've got friends that just went off the deep end. The big lie was that it's not addictive.

"The people that do cocaine really feel like they're on top of things. The next day they find they played a bunch of junk.

"My son, thank God, is a level-headed boy. One of his favorite bands went on tour with us one time. He went on the road with me between Christmas and New Year's. They were so messed up and he was disgusted, seeing those people falling around all over the place. They went from one of his favorite bands to being a bunch of slob. I'm glad he saw that."

In late 1985, Daniels' book of short stories, "The Devil Went Down to Georgia," was published. "There's a modicum of truth in some of the stories," he says. "None are all true. I had instances happen when I was a kid I would make more outlandish than it was."

NOTICE OF PUBLIC AUCTION SALE
Under the authority in Internal Revenue Code section 6331, the property described below has been seized for nonpayment of internal revenue taxes due from Frank and Yolanda Villegas, 506 Union, Hereford, Tx. 79045. The property will be sold at public auction as provided by Internal Revenue Code section 6335 and related regulations.

Date of Sale: October 5, 1987
Time of Sale: 10:00 a.m.
Place of Sale: Deaf Smith County Courthouse, Hereford, Tx.
Title Offered: Only the right title, and interest of Frank and Yolanda Villegas, in and to the property will be offered for sale. If requested, the Internal Revenue Service will furnish information about possible encumbrances, which may be useful in determining the value of the interest being sold.

Description of Property: Lot Twenty-Four (24), Block One (1), Stark Addition to the City of Hereford, Deaf Smith County, Texas.

Property may be inspected at: 628 Avenue F, Hereford, Tx. 79045

Payment terms: Full payment required on acceptance of highest bid

Form of payment: All payments must be by cash, certified check, cashier's or treasurer's check or by a United States postal, bank express, or telegraph money order. Make check or money order payable to the Internal Revenue Service.

Nature of Title: The right, title, and interest of the taxpayer (named on the front of this form) in and to the property is offered for sale subject to any prior valid outstanding mortgages, encumbrances, or other liens in favor of third parties against the taxpayer that are superior to the lien of the United States. All property is offered for sale "where is" and "as is" and without recourse against the United States. No guaranty or warranty, express or implied, is made as to the validity of the title, quality, quantity, weight, size, or condition of any of the property, or its fitness for any use or purpose. No claim will be considered for allowance or adjustment or for rescission of the sale based on failure of the property to conform with any expressed or implied representation.

Redemption Rights: The rights of redemption, as specified in Internal Revenue Code section 6337, are quoted as follows:

Sec. 6337. Redemption of Property.

(a) Before Sale. - Any person whose property has been levied upon shall have the right to pay the amount due, together with the expenses of the proceeding, if any, to the Secretary at any time prior to the sale thereof, and upon such payment the Secretary shall restore such property to him, and all further proceedings in connection with the levy on such property shall cease from the time of such payment.

(b) Redemption of Real Estate After Sale.

(1) Period. - The owners of any real property sold as provided in section 6335, their heirs, executors, or administrators, or any person having any interest therein, or a lien thereon, or any person in their behalf, shall be permitted to redeem the property sold, or any particular tract of such property at any time within 180 days after the sale thereof.

(2) Price. - Such property or tract of property shall be permitted to be redeemed upon payment to the purchaser, or in case he cannot be found in the county in which the property to be redeemed is situated, then to the Secretary, for the use of the purchaser, his heirs, or assigns, the amount paid by such purchaser and interest thereon at the rate of 20 percent per annum.

Sec. 6337(c). Effect of Junior Encumbrances.

Effect of Junior Encumbrances: A certificate of sale of personal property given or a deed to real property executed pursuant to section 6335 shall discharge such property from all liens, encumbrances, and titles over which the lien of the United States with respect to which the levy was made had priority.
