Voyager 2 on final approach

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) - Voyager 2 began its final approach to Neptune today, showing the planet's strange moon Triton to be a bright pink, red and blue marble ringed by what could be a snow-covered glacier of frozen natural gas, scientists say.

At 9 a.m. PDT today Voyager was expected to be 472,056 miles from Neptune, caught in the grip of Neptune's powerful gravity and falling toward the fourth largest planet at a speed of 38,599 mph.

At 8:56 p.m. PDT Voyager will pass 3,042 miles from Neptune's cloud tops, closer than it has come to any other celestial object on its 4.4 billion-mile journey from Earth.

Two days of tracking the spacecraft showed that a difficult course correction Monday had put Voyager "smack dab in the middle" of the path navigators wanted it to follow, said Norman Haynes, Voyager project manager.

The spacecraft, launched in 1977, will reach a speed of 61,148 mph as it sweeps around Neptune headed for a pass 23,888 miles from Triton at 2:14 a.m. PDT Friday.

Triton's equator is encircled with what appears to be a slightly blue band of fresh snow or frost, probably made of frozen natural gas, or methane, said Robert Brown of the Voyager imaging team.

"If you were standing there you'd see crystals of frost growing much as you see frost growing on a window in the winter time," Brown said in an interview.

"It's going to look glacial, like a glacier with a thin layer of snow on it," he said.

The band may be white or may be slightly blue, said Bradford

Smith, head of the imaging team. "If it is indeed blue, it's the only thing we've seen blue on any satellite since we launched Voyager," he said.

The band borders a darker, reddish area in Triton's northern hemisphere, which itself is still as bright as dirty snow, Brown said. It looks dark only because the rest of the planet is so bright, he said.

The darker region could consist of frozen methane darkened by bombardment with energetic subatomic particles from space, researchers said. Much of the moon's southern hemisphere appears pink.

Researchers reported the first possibility of a meteorite crater on Triton. "I saw a circular feature," said Smith. "Certainly an impact crater is a possibility," he said. Confirmation will await more detailed images, he said.

The pictures have convinced scientists that Triton is unobstructed by clouds.

"Almost certainly we're seeing the surface," Smith said. "That suggests some real excitement here Friday morning and again on Saturday," when the most detailed photographs reach Earth.

Friday morning, Vice President Dan Quayle, head of the policy-making National Space Council, will visit the Jet Propulsion Laboratory for a briefing on space activities. He will also meet with reporters.

Among Voyager's findings was the Aug. 11 discovery of what first appeared to be a partial ring around Neptune. Scientists say photographs indicate that it probably is a complete second ring around Neptune.

"Probably it's a ring," said Smith. "But it's a ring like we've never seen before."

Researchers also expect to find at least two new moons near Neptune, beyond the two previously known and the four already discovered by Voyager, Smith said.

US wants revolution in schools

WASHINGTON (AP) - Americans want "tradition-shattering changes" in schools - including flexible hours, more parental control and a national curriculum - and most are willing to pay higher taxes for them, a poll shows today.

Americans rate the quality of public schools poorly, with only 8 percent giving an "A," 35 percent a "B" and 33 percent a "C," according to the 21st annual Gallup Poll released by Phi Delta Kappa International, a professional education fraternity.

"The public is ready for tradition-shattering changes in the policies that govern U.S. public schools," said the poll, based on in-home interviews conducted in early May and early June.

Key findings of the survey were:

Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos said the poll results confirm the administration's position favoring parental choice on which public schools their children will attend.

"The president has been calling for it, I have been advocating it, and now it is clear that the American people overwhelmingly support it: a major restructuring of our education system, with school choice as the cornerstone," Cavazos said in a statement.

"The (poll) has captured the pulse of the people. Americans want their schools restructured and by a 2-to-1 margin, they favor choice as a means to that end."

Cavazos also said Wednesday the Education Department predicts that U.S. public and private schools will spend a record $353 billion in the 1989-90 school year.

Despite the cost, Cavazos said, "too many Americans remain ill-prepared for a changing world." Education Department officials point to the dismal performance of American youth on academic achievement tests, particularly in areas such as math and science that are considered critical in a fast-changing technical society.

The idea of parental choice, already state law in Minnesota, Arkansas and Iowa, is a centerpiece of the Bush administration's education policy.

According to the poll, parental choice gets stronger support among nonwhites and young adults - 67 percent for both groups - and in western states, at 64 percent. Twenty-one percent believed parental choice would improve all schools. Only 14 percent believed choice would hurt all schools.

Opponents of parental choice have contended that it would lead to some schools, particularly those in disadvantaged areas, being drained of students and resources.

The survey used a sample of 1,584 adults spread through all areas of the nation and in all types of communities. The margin of error is plus or minus 4 percentage points.

Researchers show more service for senior needs

WASHINGTON (AP) - The number of elderly people living alone will surge in the next century, creating more demand for support services such as home care to help them avoid nursing homes, researchers say.

"The number of frail elderly, elderly with health limitations and elderly living alone will all exceed the general increase in the elderly population," said a report by the Urban Institute, a private agency.

The elderly of the next century will have fewer children and will divorce or remain single more often, leaving many without a "significant caregiver" and heightening their need for public and private services, the researchers reported.

In a study titled "The Needs of the Elderly in the 21st Century," the researchers called for efforts to help prevent people from becoming disabled as they age, target services toward those who most need help, and rework financing so needed services are more affordable for the elderly.

If current rates of disability persist, the number of elderly requiring institutional care will more than triple by 2030, from 1.3 million in 1984 to 5.3 million, said the researchers, led by Sheila R. Zedlewski.

"While an increase in the need for nursing home care is inevitable, the increase could be reduced if successful policies aimed at reducing disability rates among the elderly are adopted," the report said.

"Further reductions in institutionalization rates could be made if formal in-home services or alternative care arrangements were more broadly available to the elderly."

The study said more health-care dollars should be devoted to research that could prevent or postpone disabling diseases of aging. Of $145 billion spent on health care for the elderly in the United States in 1988, less than half of 1 percent was invested in research, it said.

The report also said the patchwork of federal, state and private programs to help the elderly often makes it difficult for older people to qualify for the help they need, resulting in inappropriate institutionalization.

US offers Colombia financial help

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) - A founder of Colombia's billion-dollar cocaine industry was arrested on the Caribbean coast, and the government remained steadfast in its promise to extradite drug suspects to the United States.

Meanwhile U.S. Attorney General Dick Thornburgh announced Wednesday a $2 million program designed to help protect Colombian judges and others threatened by hitmen hired by the drug cartels.

Colombian police have blamed traffickers for the assassinations last week of a judge, a national police colonel and Sen. Luis Carlos Galan, an outspoken foe of cocaine lords who was the nation's leading presidential hopeful.

Police since have begun a nationwide crackdown on the traffickers, arresting suspects and seizing their property.

They said they arrested Bernardo Londoño Quintero in a raid Wednesday on a daughter's apartment in an upper-class neighborhood in the Caribbean city of Barranquilla.

Quintero, 60, nicknamed "The Diplomat" for his smooth manner, has long been considered a pioneer of Colombia's narcotics business, which began expanding in the late 1960s.

Law enforcement officials say he managed to retain some of his power when new, violent organizations began muscling into the business in the mid-1970s. Quintero offered no resistance during his arrest, but a 38-caliber Smith and Wesson revolver was seized in the raid, police said.

He told local reporters in Barranquilla that he used to have "legal problems" but had resolved them with the Justice Ministry more than a year ago. He denied any role in drug trafficking.

An extradition request from the United States, dating to the mid-1980s, is believed to have been filed with Colombian authorities. A U.S. Embassy spokesman said he could not comment.

The drug lords who run today's cocaine industry remained at large Wednesday.

But police reported the arrests of several alleged drug figures, including Rafael Orlandes Gamboa, for whom Bogota newspapers said a U.S. extradition request is pending. Officials at the U.S. Justice and State departments, the Marshals Service and the Drug Enforcement Administration said they had never heard of him.

The most prominent alleged drug figure arrested so far, Eduardo Martínez Romero, was picked up during a weekend dragnet.

Police and U.S. authorities said they were trying to arrange speedy extradition of Martínez, an alleged money manager for the Medellín cartel, but that the paperwork might take a week or more.

As part of the crackdown, President Virgilio Barco established emergency procedures for extraditing traffickers wanted in the United States.

The Supreme Court nullified the extradition treaty with Washington in June 1987, after years of intimidation of the judiciary. At least 220 judges and other officials have been killed.

Barco also authorized seizures of traffickers' possessions. Police and soldiers continued raids Wednesday on mansions, farms, office buildings, restaurants and other property believed owned by the drug bosses.

Carlos Lemos Simonds, the communications minister, declared "there's a firm decision" to extradite suspects, but said the U.S. bureaucracy must act quickly. He said Barco's emergency measures empower police to hold suspected traffickers for up to seven days without charges, then they must be freed.

Lemos asked that Washington provide more aid for the anti-narcotics campaign, then added: "The other help we need is to lower consumption and demand (of drugs) in the United States."

Poles elect Mazowiecki

WARSAW, Poland (AP) - Solidarity journalist Tadeusz Mazowiecki won overwhelming approval today to become the East bloc's first non-communist prime minister, ending 45 years of communist control of Poland's government.

The vote in parliament was 378-4 with 41 abstentions.

The vote was greeted by a standing ovation and Mazowiecki immediately rose to say, "I am very touched at this moment. I thank you, high chamber, for this great proof of trust."

"I am counting on cooperation with the Sejm and Senate. ... This moment shall become an essential moment in order for us to raise up Poland together."

Mazowiecki next shook hands with members of the outgoing government and embraced and kissed the leaders of the parliamentary coalition that supported him. A short recess was called by the Sejm.

Mazowiecki, 62, will succeed Prime Minister Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak, who asked last week to be relieved of the task of trying to form a communist-led "grand coalition" government.

The Sejm accepted Kiszczak's resignation without objection today as it began its session, and warmly applauded him for his failed attempt to assemble a cabinet.

Before the vote, Mazowiecki said he hopes to create a government "of all Poles."

"I want to form a government capable of acting for the good of society, the nation and the state. It will be a government of a coalition for a thorough reform of the state," Mazowiecki said in his speech as the Sejm, or lower house of parliament, took up his historic candidacy.

"One has to restore to Poland the mechanism of normal political life," said the lawyer-journalist.

"The principle of struggle ... must be replaced with the principle of partnership. We will not pass from a totalitarian system to a democratic one in any other way."

In a 10-minute speech, Mazowiecki said he wanted to create conditions to unlock Poland's economic potential. The state, he said, "cannot take care of everything and guarantee everything. ... The most important role ... is opening possibilities," he said, adding: "I want to be prime minister of a government of all Poles."

The country "will be different if everybody wants it," said the bespectacled Mazowiecki, a Solidarity pin on his lapel, as he wrapped up his speech to loud applause. The Sejm session was televised live nationwide.

Next leaders of the Sejm's various political groups were called to give their stances.

"It is hard to overestimate the historic character of the decision we are about to undertake," said Solidarity parliamentary leader Bronislaw Geremek, who followed Mazowiecki to the podium. "The monopoly of one party is being broken, a monopoly contrary to the will of the nation and interests of the country."

Marian Orzechowski, leader of the communist caucus, said the party welcomed Mazowiecki's candidacy and said he hoped Mazowiecki would keep promises to seek a "wide coalition" government that would include communists.

Group gives reps a 'C' for '89

AUSTIN (AP) - Lawmakers expressed doubts about a possible Republican candidate for state treasurer who called efforts to raise the legislative pay scale "outrageous."

Lynn Oates of Decatur, chairman of Texans for Financial Responsibility, also said the 1989 Legislature earned a "C" grade in fiscal matters.

"Our taxpayers should be getting the most bang for our buck," Oates told a Wednesday news conference.

The "C" came from averaging grades assigned to individual lawmakers for their votes on legislation, including workers' compensation reform and putting the proposed constitutional amendment to raise legislative pay on the Nov. 7 ballot.

But Oates declined to name major contributors to the group other than himself. He said he has contributed 20 percent of the organization's funding so far, but he would not specify an amount.

"I would like to know who the hell Texans for Financial Responsibility are," said Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin.

Rep. David Hudson, who with Barrientos sponsored the proposal to raise lawmakers' annual salary, also was blunt.

"Lynn Oates is the only person in that organization, as far as I know," he said.

"I've heard of single-issue, single-interest candidates and people before," said Hudson, D-Tyler. "Lynn Oates carries that concept to its extreme ... He is his own single interest."

Oates, who described Texans for Financial Responsibility as a 5,000-member non-partisan group, said he is interested in the race for state treasurer but has not decided whether to run.

"It's a race that I'm qualified for. I'm an investment manager and portfolio manager and president of an investment management company," he said. "At some point in the future, whether it's 1990 or beyond, I'll probably be a candidate for something."

Oates said his group will work against the proposed constitutional amendment, which would tie lawmakers' pay to the governor's salary.

Under the proposal, legislators' annual salaries would rise from $7,200 to $23,358 beginning in 1991. Salaries of the House speaker and lieutenant governor would be half of the governor's annual pay, or $46,716.

"Calling for a triple legislative pay hike is outrageous. Our elected officials need to hear the public pleas begging them not to set Texas up for another financial crisis in 1990," Oates said.

Texans for Financial Responsibility will try to raise $300,000 to fight the pay raise, Oates said. He said that is the amount the "pro-raise forces" plan to spend to promote the amendment.

Pay raise supporters say it would allow people who cannot afford to serve in the Legislature to do so. House Speaker Gib Lewis said he has seen good lawmakers forced to quit because of the current pay scale.

"To call that proposal an outrageous proposal is irresponsible ... to try to make the public believe that $20,000 is outrageous to live on," Barrientos said. "What is outrageous, if you will, are legislators trying to live on less than $600 a month."

Besides opposing the pay raise, Texans for Financial Responsibility is calling for a ban on the state income tax, Oates said.

A statement from the group said lawmakers' grades also were based on their votes on several state income tax measures, but the measures cited died in a Senate committee without being voted on by the full House or Senate.

Poorer schools test lower

AUSTIN (AP) - A higher percentage of students from wealthy school districts pass the state's minimum skills test than from poor districts, according to the Texas Education Agency.

An analysis of student test scores, which was released Wednesday, comes at a time when poor school districts claim the state's method of financing public schools is discriminatory.

The lawsuit is pending before the Texas Supreme Court.

Test results in the summer edition of "Research Briefs" were based on the 1988-89 Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills (TEAMS) tests in grades 3, 5, 9, and 11.

"A direct relationship between wealth and the group passing rate exists - the lower the property value per student, the lower the percent passing rate," the analysis said.

In the poorest 10 percent of districts, 60.7 percent of students passed the TEAMS test, while in the wealthiest 10 percent, 82.3 percent passed, according to the TEA. The state wide average showed 72 percent of the students passed all tests taken, the report said.

The ethnic composition of a district's student population affects performance only when the minority percent exceeds 50 percent, the study said.

The report added that "this effect is more likely a related measure of income rather than an indicator that ethnicity in and of itself is a strong determiner."

State wide passing rates have improved by 2.3 percent over the 1987-88 results. Approximately two thirds of the districts, or 695, improved their percent passing rates, while rates declined in 364 districts, the report said.

Grocers sell spots for new products

Will the new product advertised on television be on your grocery's shelves? It will if the manufacturer is willing to pay for the space.

Grocery and warehouse spaces are already full, and 8,000 to 10,000 new products are introduced every year, said Dr. Dick Edwards, an economist-marketing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Manufacturers must be willing to pay to have their product on store shelves.

"Wholesalers and retailers are not against new items, but they are against replacing a proven performer with an unknown product," Edwards said.

So, manufacturers pay a "slotting fee" to have their new product put into the distributor's system. The amount depends on the number of stores that will carry the product, the manufacturer's strength in the market and the promotion and advertising committed to the new product.

Once the product appears on the shelf, it still must perform.

If the new product does not meet the projected sales goals agreed upon by the buyer and the manufacturer, then the manufacturer pays a "failure fee." This charge is for removing the product and to help recoup the lost revenue while the product was taking up shelf space, Edwards said.

A key part of the system is "direct product profitability," (DPP). This model measures the costs of handling individual products from receiving through checkout.

"The model also considers inventory costs, turnover, shrink, and gross margin in determining an item's profit," the extension economist-marketing specialist said.

Using the DPP, high-margin, slow-moving items can be compared with low-margin, fast-moving items on a dollar-for-dollar basis.

Edwards warns that grocery products which rank low in their product category are prime candidates for a change.

"The first product likely to be affected is eggs," the marketing economist said. "Refrigerated shelf space is a premium asset and small and medium sized eggs are a primary target."

The economist suggests that manufacturers of frozen processed poultry products should monitor sales to maintain their current space in the grocery store. Otherwise, these products could have their space cut by a computer program in some distant city.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband, who teaches physics, plans to use that rain question in his next exam. Here's his mathematical shortcut for solving the problem:

"If you run twice as fast, you cover the distance in half the time. If the rain is falling at an angle, think of it as having a vertical component that affects how much rain you get on your head and shoulders and a horizontal component that affects how wet you get on your front or back. The faster you run, the less rain you will get on your head. If the rain is falling toward you, the faster you run, the less rain you will get on your front. If the rain is coming from behind, the optimal speed to run in order to reduce the amount of rain on your front or back is the horizontal component of the rain's speed, in which case you won't get any rain on your back. If you run slower than this, you'll get rain on your back. If you run faster, you'll get rain on your front. So run--no matter what.--JM

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Here's a simplified way to figure out who gets wetter, the guy who walks or runs:

Vocational nursing graduation set

Fifteen students will graduate from Amarillo College Vocational Nursing program in Hereford on Friday.

The pinning ceremony was held Monday in Hereford.

Students include Christie Barton, Carole Eillison of Dimmitt, Gloria Fuentes, Esmeralda Gutierrez, Mary Huckert, Toylynn Huckert, Jo Nell Lyons, Yolanda Medrano, Martha Moreno, Nancy Moreno, Teresa Pena, Rachel Salinas of Dimmitt, Diane Schumacher, Manuela Torres, and Nelda Zamorano.

The above graduates will be eligible to write State Board exams in Ft. Worth on Oct. 25.

The next class in Hereford will begin on Aug. 28. Selection of students will be based on grades of "C" or above in the two prerequisites: Biology 3424 and Home (Nutrition) 4313. Entry into the program will also be based on dates of applications received by Amarillo College in Amarillo. Due to clinical facilities and approval by Board of Vocational Nurse Examiners, only 15 students that meet the above requirements will be accepted.

Contact Janet Mays at Deaf Smith General Hospital in Hereford or Sue Ann Hicks in Amarillo (806) 354-6015 if you have any questions.

Take Container A with an opening equal to the area exposed by a man from the overhead position. Take Container B, with an opening equal to the area exposed by a man from the front view. Have George and Bill each carry one Container A and one container B. Container A should have an opening to the top, Container B an opening to the front. George moves forward at twice the speed of Bill, arriving in half the time. Bill's Container A will contain twice as much as water as George's Container A. But George's Container B will contain more than twice as much as Bill's Container B.

The containers should be designed to approximate the curvature of the body in running form. Visualize the problem by supporting a string of spaghetti in vertical position. Then you can take 10 lashes with the wet spaghetti for jumping to a conclusion without the facts.--WET

From Air Force Institute of Technology, Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Ohio: The solution of the raindrop problem depends on the size and shape of the man, the speed at which he runs and the direction of the falling raindrops. A fat man will get wetter than a thin man. Also one will get wetter running into the wind than if one runs with the wind. The faster the rain falls, the faster the man should run.--H.C., Larsen, Professor and Director, Aerospace Design Center

From Chatham, Mass.: Who needs all that math? The faster you run, the quicker you'll get there and the drier you'll be.--John L. Rowland

DEAR JOHN: Thanks, buddy. Your letter was the easiest to understand. I'm with you.

Giamatti bans Rose for life

NEW YORK (AP) - Pete Rose, baseball's all-time hit leader and holder of 19 major-league records, was banned for life today for betting on his own team and other actions that had "stained the game."

Under the rules of baseball Rose can appeal for reinstatement after one year. But Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti said, "There is absolutely no deal for reinstatement. That is exactly what we did not agree to in terms of fixed number of years."

Rose became the 15th person banned for life in baseball history and the first since 1943. No one banned for life ever has been reinstated.

At a news conference in Cincinnati, Rose continued to deny the charges against him.

"Despite what the commissioner said today, I didn't bet on baseball," he said.

Rose admitted that he bet on other sports.

"I made some mistakes and I'm being punished for mistakes," he said. "As you can imagine, this is a very sad day," Rose said. "I've been in baseball three decades and to think I'm gonna be out of baseball for a very short period of time hurts."

He called the settlement fair and said he regretted only "that I won't have the opportunity to tell my side of the story."

Today's action ended six months of allegations involving one of the greatest players in the history of the game. It apparently does not eliminate him from consideration for the Hall of Fame.

"In the absence of a hearing and in absence of evidence to the contrary ... yes, I have concluded that he bet on baseball," Giamatti said at a news conference announcing the suspension, which is effective immediately.

Asked directly if he thought that Rose bet on the Reds, Giamatti said, "Yes." He said that was his personal opinion and not an official finding.

The agreement announced in a statement from the commissioner's office said that Rose "neither denies nor admits that he bet on any major league baseball game" but Rose "acknowledges that the commissioner has a factual basis to impose the penalty provided."

"The banishment for life of Pete Rose from baseball is the sad end of a sorry episode," Giamatti said in the statement.

"One of the game's greatest players has engaged in a variety of acts which have stained the game and he must now live with the consequences of those acts."

"There had not been such grave allegations since the time of Landis," the statement said in a reference to Kenesaw Mountain Landis, the commissioner who suspended for life the players involved in the Black Sox scandal after the 1919 World Series.

Giamatti said the episode would "strengthen the confidence of the American public and in baseball's integrity. I think the game will emerge stronger."

The suspension of Rose came in a five-page agreement signed Wednesday by Rose and Giamatti.

Regarding any gambling rehabilitation for Rose, Giamatti said: "We have not required it. It seems to be entirely in Mr. Rose's hands."

Bill Guillole, associate director of the Hall of Fame said, "Rose would still be eligible for election in 1992 unless our board of directors decides differently."

As part of the agreement, Rose dismissed his lawsuit against Giamatti in federal court in Ohio. The judge hearing that case confirmed today that it had been dropped.

Coach Tommy Helms managed the Reds to an 8-5 victory over the Cubs in Chicago on Rose's last day. Rose had left the team earlier in the week to be with his wife for the birth of their second child.

Section 21 (d) of the Major League Rules specifies the penalties for gambling on baseball. It reads, in part: "Any player, umpire, or club or league official or employee who shall bet any sum whatsoever upon any baseball game in connection which the better has a duty to perform, shall be declared permanently ineligible."

Rose was accused of violating that rule in a 225-page report submitted to Giamatti on May 9 by John M. Dowd, the commissioner's special investigator.

Rose was summoned to New York by then-Commissioner Peter Ueberroth on Feb. 20. During the meeting, which Giamatti attended in his role as president of the National League, Rose denied having bet on baseball. But three days later, baseball hired Dowd and began the investigation, which cost about $1 million to complete.

The Reds manager steadfastly denied the allegations. But each day brought new charges. The one that potentially is most serious involved an alleged scheme to defraud the U.S. government. Former associate Paul G. Janszen said Rose had Thomas P. Gioiosa, an associate of the manager, claim the winnings from a $47,646 parimutuel ticket at a horse-racing track in 1987, and that Gioiosa gave the money back to Rose.

Gioiosa has been indicted for his alleged participation, and jury selection in his trial is scheduled to begin today in Cincinnati. Rose is under investigation by a federal grand jury in Cincinnati for this and other aspects of his income taxes.

Rose has been considered a baseball idol. In a 24-year career, he set records for hits (4,256), games (3,562), at-bats (14,053) and singles (3,215). He was the National League's rookie of the year in 1963, the league's most valuable player in 1973 and the World Series MVP in 1975. He won NL batting titles in 1968, 1969 and 1973.

Rose played in his hometown of Cincinnati for the first 16 years of his career, then played for Philadelphia from 1979 through 1983. He began 1984 with Montreal, returning triumphantly to Cincinnati as player-manager on Aug. 16. In a little more than five seasons under Rose, the Reds were 426-388, finishing second in the NL West in each of his four full seasons.

Herd hurting going into scrimmage

By SAM W. WALLER
Sports Editor

Injury report: Just about the whole team.

The Hereford Whitefaces have survived two-a-day workouts, but just barely.

Heading into tonight's scrimmage at Lubbock Monterey, Coach Don Cumpston's team is suffering from a rash of muscle pulls, aching joints and Doc Morrow only knows what else.

"We're pretty beat up," Cumpston said after Tuesday's final full-speed workout before facing the Plainsmen. "We'll be ready to go on Thursday, though."

The Herd will bus 167 players to Lubbock for tilts with sophomore, junior varsity and varsity teams. Cumpston said several players from the sophomore team will participate in the J.V. scrimmage and some juniors will play in both J.V. and varsity contests.

"We'll know after the scrimmage

4-H shooters win at state meet

Members of the Deaf Smith County 4-H shooting team won eight individual awards at the 1989 State 4-H Trap Shoot held recently at the Waco Gun Club. The local shooters competed against teams from about 40 Texas counties.

In the senior division, Audy Sciumbato took first place in International trap competition and teamed with brother Shawn Sciumbato for sixth place in the American trap two-man team contest.

Shawn Sciumbato was also presented an award for 1988 High Individual in trap shooting for hitting 99 out of 100 targets.

Cameron Betzen won first place in International trap and second in American trap in junior division competition. Todd Reinart was third in American trap and teamed with Betzen and Richard Drager for third place in the junior three-man team.

In the sub-junior division, Martin Carnahan placed third in the International trap event.

where we stand," he said. "It will give us an idea of which players need to be on which team and what we need to work on."

The sophomores were scheduled to play at 3:30 p.m. with the J.V. to follow at 5:30 and the varsity at 7:30. All three scrimmages were to be played at Monterey High School at 50th and Indiana.

"We're looking at this as just another work out," Cumpston said. "What we'll be looking for is the effort the players give more than anything else."

"Now we'll take Amarillo High (scheduled to scrimmage the Herd Sept. 1 at Whiteface Stadium) a little more seriously," he added. "That's when we need to show some progress."

Cumpston said he was pleased with the way two-a-days went this year.

"We had a lot of kids come out and they all had real good enthusiasm and were ready to work," he said. "That's one thing that really impresses me about this bunch - they have real a good work ethic and good work habits."

Injury report: (for real this time) Junior DE Mark Daniel returned to workouts after missing a few days with tendonitis. Junior TB Matt Bromlow was held out of contact drills Tuesday with bruised ribs. Senior OG Richard Perez has a sore shoulder. Senior OG Benny Gonzales is suffering from a pulled back muscle. All are expected to play tonight.

Senior QB Jason Walterscheid and Senior TE Jonathan Haney are expected to be cleared to practice next week.

Triple shoot

Herd quarterbacks Chad Schroeder, left, T.J. Head and Jason Walterscheid throw during practice Wednesday. Injured junior QB Chris Blair, background, monitors his teammates progress.

West team shoots 29 to win weekly scramble

The team of Tiffi West, Truitt Hardage, Jimmy Thomas and Robert Kubacak carded a 29 to win the Wednesday Scramble at Pitman Municipal Golf Course. Payoff for the winning team was $39 per person in merchandise certificates.

Four teams in the 13-team field shot 30 to tie for second.

The Wednesday Scramble will tee up for the final time in 1989 next week. Anyone wishing to enter should contact pro Brent Warner at 364-2782.

Dempsey homer ends 22-inning game

By JOHN KREISER
AP Sports Writer

The Los Angeles Dodgers already knew what it was like to play a 22-inning game. Thanks to Rick Dempsey, they found out what it was like to win one.

Dempsey, who entered the game hitting .168, led off the 22nd inning with his second homer of the year as the Dodgers beat the Montreal Expos 1-0 Wednesday night in the second-longest shutout in major league history.

"I was trying to hit one out of the park against Rich Thompson in the 16th and I just missed it," Dempsey said. "The way my season has gone, I figured there's no harm in going for one again and try to end things right there."

Houston beat the New York Mets 1-0 in 24 innings on April 15, 1968, in the longest shutout and longest 1-0 game ever played.

The Dodgers, who had never played more than 21 innings since moving from Brooklyn in 1958, had lost a 22-inning game to Houston on June 3. In that game, infielder Jeff Hamilton got the pitching loss after manager Tom Lasorda drained his bullpen.

This time, John Wetteland, 4-5, pitched six innings, allowing two hits.

Dempsey, who entered the game in the eighth inning, hit a 2-1 pitch from Dennis Martinez, 13-4, over the left-field fence for the only run of the game. It was the Dodgers' 20th hit, but only the second for extra bases. The Expos had 13 hits, 12 singles and a double.

In other games, it was Pittsburgh 6, Houston 1; San Francisco 5, New York 0; Cincinnati 8, Chicago 5; San Diego 7, Philadelphia 3 and Atlanta 3, St. Louis 0.

Montreal pitchers also set a major league record by not walking a batter. The previous record of 21 innings without a base on balls was set by Pittsburgh, whose Babe Adams went the distance against the New York Giants on July 17, 1914.

Pirates 6, Astros 1

Jim Clancy may have thrown away his spot in the Astros' starting rotation.

Clancy's three-run throwing error on a comebacker capped a four-run first inning that carried the Pirates past Houston.

Manager Art Howe said he may put the right-hander back in the bullpen.

Bob Walk, 11-8, who allowed eight runs in 2 1-3 innings in his last start, gave up just five hits in seven innings.

Giants 5, Mets 0

Rick Reuschel and two relievers combined for a five-hitter.

Reuschel, 15-5, allowed three hits in six innings for his second consecutive victory since coming back after being on the disabled list with a pulled groin. Meanwhile, the Giants made the most of their five hits against David Cone, 11-6.

Matt Williams had a homer and a double and drove in two runs.

Reds 8, Cubs 5

Rookie catcher Joe Oliver went 4-for-5 and drove in three runs.

Oliver had a go-ahead two-run homer in the fifth and an RBI single in the seventh to help Scott Scudder, 3-5.

Padres 7, Phillies 3

Andy Benes allowed three hits in seven innings for his first major league victory.

Benes, called up from the minors on Aug. 8, struck out four and walked five to win for the first time in three decisions. Mark Davis pitched the last two innings.

Phillies starter Bruce Ruffin, 4-7, allowed five runs and eight hits in four innings. Roberto Alomar had three hits, stole three bases and scored two runs for the Padres. Braves 3, Cardinals 0.

Marty Clary pitched a five-hitter for his first major league shutout.

Clary, 4-2, struck out two and walked one. Ricky Horton, 0-1, was the loser.

Lonnie Smith, Oddibe McDowell and Andres Thomas had RBI singles for Atlanta.

A's, Stewart hold off Rangers, 5-4

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

They are playing it by the numbers in the American League.

For Dave Stewart, it is 17. For Dennis Eckersley, it is 27. Tom Gordon's numbers are 5 and 16, and counting, and Kansas City's is at 9.

Stewart posted his 17th victory of the season Wednesday night, tying Houston's Mike Scott for the major league lead, as the Oakland Athletics defeated the Texas Rangers 5-4. Eckersley finished up to earn his 27th save as Oakland took a three-game lead over second-place California in the AL West race.

Gordon outduelled fellow rookie Jim Abbott as Kansas City downed the California Angels 6-4. It was Gordon's fifth straight victory and ran his record to 16-4, tying a Kansas City record for rookies.

"I don't think Cy Young. I think Rookie of the Year every now and then," Gordon said. "If it's for me to have, then I'll be happy to receive it. All I can do is go out and help my team win."

Gordon is 6-2 with a 1.95 earned-run average since being made a starter.

Gordon was protecting a 2-1 lead when Kurt Stillwell hit a two-run homer in a three-run fifth inning. It was his sixth of the season and knocked Abbott out of the game.

George Brett had three hits and two RBIs for the Royals.

Wally Joyner hit a three-run home run in the California eighth off reliever Steve Crawford.

In other AL games, it was Boston 4, New York 1; Baltimore 3, Milwaukee 1; Cleveland 5, Seattle 3; Toronto 11, Detroit 4, and Minnesota 8, Chicago 7.

Athletics 5, Rangers 4

Oakland manager Tony LaRussa said Stewart didn't have his best stuff, but won because he's a battler.

"We had the perfect guy pitching for us tonight. He gives it his heart and soul," LaRussa said.

Stewart, who gave up eight hits in seven innings, said he would like to win 20 games for the third straight year.

"I don't want to get ahead of myself," he said. "I want 20, but first I have to look to 18. It would be something, though, to get 20 again."

The A's took the lead for good in the sixth when they scored three runs on two walks, Dave Henderson's double, Terry Steinbach's sacrifice fly and Tony Phillips' single.

Indians 5, Mariners 3

At Cleveland, a run-scoring single by Dave Clark snapped a sixth-inning tie as Cleveland handed Seattle its seventh consecutive defeat.

Winner Tom Candiotti, 12-6, is 5-0 in eight starts with a 1.52 ERA in 59 1-3 innings since coming off the disabled list July 17 after being bothered by a stiff shoulder. Doug Jones got the game's final out for his 29th save.

Orioles 3, Brewers 1

At Baltimore, a pinch double by Keith Moreland in the seventh inning knocked in two runs.

Bob Milacki, 8-11, went eight innings for Baltimore, while Gregg Olson worked the ninth for his 19th save.

Blue Jays 11, Tigers 4

At Toronto, Ernie Whitt's three-run homer snapped a 4-4 tie and Fred McGriff hit his AL-leading 32nd and 33rd home runs.

George Bell's leadoff walk and a single by McGriff preceded Whitt's ninth home run of the season.

Lou Whitaker had given the Tigers a 2-0 lead with his 26th home run in the first inning.

Red Sox 4, Yankees 1

At New York, home runs by Nick Esasky and Dwight Evans powered a three-run sixth inning.

Mike Boddicker, 11-9, allowed a run on four singles in 6 2-3 innings while walking three and striking out six.

Twins 8, White Sox 7

In Minneapolis, Kent Hrbek hit a pair of two-run homers and pitcher Roy Smith gained his sixth straight victory.

Minnesota scored three runs in the second inning, knocking White Sox starter Greg Hibbard, 3-5, out of the game.

Abundant Life

BY BOB WEAR
Not To Take Offense

If we take offense because of being mistreated or because of happenings we dislike or for some other reason, we are handicapping ourselves.

This is not to recommend naivety which may protect us from some of the unpleasant realities of life because this may cause misdirection of both thought and life. Naivety may have its own unique charm but it can cause the self-defeat that comes from disorientation. This "lack of informed judgment" will cause unnecessary difficulties. This, however, may be better than the sophisticated, overly sensitive disposition of mind that never overlooks anything, never misses anything, and is always upset and resentful. This however, is not the point.

It is admitted that we must be perceptive, alert, knowledgeable, and observant, but, with all of this, we must be wise enough "not to take offense" if we are mistreated or rejected or when there is something we do not like. We must not permit resentment to take hold of us because we cannot afford the feeling of lasting indignation or smoldering ill will.

"When anyone has offended me, I

Jean Francois Grandet, known as Blondin, was a daredevil. Once he walked, blindfolded, over a tight-rope strung above the Niagara falls.

try to raise my soul so high that the offense cannot reach it."—Descartes

We can "know the score" and we should. We can and we should have our wisely-conceived convictions. We can reject what we want to reject and oppose what we want to oppose but we cannot afford to mix the feeling of being "offended", this feeling of "resentment", with these actions. If we do take offense, the resulting imbalance in our emotional state will throw us off course. When this happens, we cannot manage ourselves with good judgment.

We can condition our minds "not to take offense", and this is so much better than giving up our stability, our peace of mind, our strength, and our wise self-management by indulging ourselves in feelings of resentment.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: I was diagnosed as having hemochromatosis a year ago. I never heard of it before. It has something to do with iron in the organs, which with me is in the liver. I also have thalassemia anemia. I'm not being treated. Can you tell me something about this disease and what you think can be done? I am 80 years old.

DEAR READER: Hemochromatosis is a disease where excess iron is deposited in the various organs, and the liver is usually the main target. It can cause increased pigmentation of the skin for a bronzing effect. The liver damage can lead to a form of diabetes—hence the term bronze diabetes.

You can inherit a tendency for excess iron absorption. This can be treated by removing blood to eliminate the excess iron.

The other form is secondary to other medical problems such as thalassemia. Often the anemia requires multiple blood transfusions which leads to an iron buildup. Since there is already an anemia, removing blood cannot be used to treat the iron overload. This problem may occur very early in life. Chelation therapy to help the kidneys eliminate iron has been used. Since you have reached 80 years of age before this was found, that suggests that you have a mild form and hopefully it may not become a serious problem for you.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713. Although Dr. Lamb cannot reply to all letters personally, he will respond to selected questions in future columns.

HAVE FUN at the Movies

EXCELLENT GOOD FAIR POOR DON'T WASTE MONEY

A mixed bag of movies has opened this week. The good news: there is something for everyone. The bad news: not all of them are all that great. So, depending upon your mood and your finances, you have your choice of ...

"LOCK UP": Starring Sylvester Stallone in a gruesome, manipulative, worn-out prison film. There must be Stallone fans out there somewhere or the man just couldn't keep making this same story. Perhaps his fans continue coming to the Stallone Grunt, Groan and Grimace Meets hoping for another Rocky or, maybe they or just bloodthirsty. For whatever reason, you can't help but feel sorry for them because Rocky/Rambo just can't seem to get that old formula working again.

In Lock Up all the bad guys are brooding, brown-shirted, Nazi-like meanies. Sylvester Stallone is Mother Teresa with muscles. The formulaic story has Mother Stallone, the model prisoner, waiting out his last six months until he can get out to "become a good man." When suddenly he discovers that, in the dark night one of the things that goes bump in Warden Drumgoole (seriously folks, that's his name). A mean, sadistic man who has a long-standing hatred for Mother Stallone and is out to get him.

I am making fun of this movie because, in addition to the terrible use of every prison cliché known to man and beast, the balance of the heavy-handed direction is also awful; in fact, so bad that the acting almost looks good by comparison. Donald Sutherland plays the prison warden and, fortunately, underplays his role. For with Stallone's excesses and a musical score for the hearing impaired, things just get a little much.

Lock Up will find an audience and, if you like grunts and groans, predictability, bad guys vs. good guys, and find the Stallone body a WOW (I guess secretly most of us do) then you'll fit right in. Rated R.

Two Boxes.

"PARENTHOOD": Starring Steve Martin and directed by Ron Howard is perhaps a movie that only parents could love. Given its due, however, Parenthood is a charming movie with sweet, light, almost imperceptible direction that lets the story line seem to set its own course. It's all about the joys and frustrations of parenthood and does seem to come close to real life.

A feel-good movie about a father

(rather nicely played by Steve Martin) striving for perfection because his own father was far from the perfect thing. It's a witty look at parents' lofty expectations for themselves and their children and what happens when all of it collides.

Overall Parenthood is a delight and so is Mary Steenburgen as the wife and mother. She's a quiet, very talented actress who just radiates. She is so good you forget she's acting. Rated PG-13. Three Boxes.

There's a line in the Broadway (and film version) musical comedy Gypsy that says to make it as an entertainer "you gotta have a gimmick." The big difference in Gypsy and...

"YOUNG EINSTEIN": Starring actor/director/producer/writer Yahoo Serious is that the gimmicks in Gypsy were funny, inventive and entertaining. Now, I will admit that I saw this film under adverse conditions - everyone with me could read and write and tie their own shoe laces. You see, Young Einstein is only for the very young - with the operative work here being young.

Yahoo Serious plays an eccentric genius who has invented or discovered everything from the electric guitar to atom-splitting. If you like, (no, make that love and adore) stupid, silly movies then rob your piggy bank and go see Young Einstein. Rated PG. Two Boxes.

RENTAL MOVIES

I'll shoot the first person who compares Yahoo Serious with Danny Kaye; that comparison will be close to blasphemy. If you want to see a real genius at work on nonsensical comedy then rent... "WONDER MAN": (1945) Starring Danny Kaye, Vera-Ellen, and Virginia Mayo. Deftly doubling, Danny Kaye plays identical twins with personalities as far apart as the polar regions. One, Buzzy Bellew, is a brash, irrepressible nightclub comic; his mirror, Edwin Dingle, is a mousy, double-dome, full of tongue-twisting erudition. Edwin, naturally, is forced to substitute for brother Buzzy and the fun begins. Admittedly thin on plot, Wonder Man is mostly a tailored showcase for Kaye's brilliant talents. Not rated but would be a G. Four Boxes.

Other great Danny Kaye movies (all of which would be rated G) available for rent are: "THE SECRET LIFE OF WALTER MITTY" (1947) Four Boxes.

"INSPECTOR GENERAL": (1949) Three Boxes.

"HANS CHRISTIAN ANDERSEN": (1952) Four Boxes.

And if you would like to see another good parent movie at home...

"THE PARENT TRAP": (1961) Starring Hayley Mills, Brian Keith and Maureen O'Hara. Walt Disney (When is someone going to nominate him posthumously for the Nobel Peace Prize?) doubled the fun in this comedy when he had Hayley Mills play twins. She plays both sisters who have never met until their divorced parents send them to summer camp; after initial rivalry they join to reunite their mom and dad. It's sappy, slapstick with some sophistication; it all works for simple fun and great family viewing. Would be rated G. Three Boxes.

Disco diva has retired to rock

NEW YORK (AP) - In the late 1970s, Donna Summer ruled as the disco queen of the music world. But she turned in her tiara once breakdancing out-hustled the hustle.

Summer made headlines in 1980 by signing with the newly-formed Geffen record label, whose founder, David Geffen, had successfully promoted Jackson Browne, the Eagles and Joni Mitchell.

It seemed like a perfect match. Summer was coming off a phenomenal string of hit singles, including "Bad Girls," "On the Radio" and "Hot Stuff." Geffen was a widely respected executive who also signed Elton John, Neil Young and John Lennon.

But something went wrong. Summer's first record for Geffen, "The Wanderer," went gold, but her sales later fell off. By the mid-'80s, she was seeking her release from the label.

"It wasn't working," she recalled in a recent interview. "It wasn't that we hated each other, it just wasn't working. They didn't really have the facilities to promote someone like me. It was frustrating."

Her major success of the decade came in 1983 with the album "She Works Hard for the Money." The title track was a Top 10 smash, an anthem for working women.

When she completed work on "Another Place and Time," Geffen refused to release it. So she signed with Atlantic Records, and "This Time I Know It's for Real," the debut single, soon reached the Top 10.

The album, recorded in London, was produced and written by the team of Mike Stock, Matt Aitken & Peter Waterman, who have also worked with Rick Astley and Bananarama.

"The guys who produced me are very commercial minded, much more than I am," she said. "As an artist and a writer you tend to want to do what you want to do. There's a time you need to be commercial. That's the whole object: to sell records, enough to be on a label. You need somebody to kind of monitor your sense of creativity."

Summer, who was born in 1948 in Boston, became the soloist in her church choir by age 10.

"There was no question I would be a singer, I just always knew. I had credit in my neighborhood; people would lend me money and tell me to pay it back when I got famous."

She began cashing in with "Love to Love You Baby," a No. 1 hit in 1975 that helped open the disco era.

For the next four years, she was everywhere. Eight singles in the Top 10, three reaching No. 1.

But Summer was never comfortable with the disco queen label. Musically, she began to change in 1979 with "Hot Stuff," which had a tough rock 'n' roll beat.

"I grew up on rock 'n' roll," said Summer, who later covered a Bruce Springsteen song, "Protection."

And who would have guessed that the voice behind so many dance floor hits secretly longed for a house in the country?

"When I was a kid, I studied agriculture," said Summer, who lives with her husband, Bruce Sudano, and three daughters on a California farm. "I wanted to do agriculture. I always had a sense of wanting to live on a farm, just being free to walk and have no people around. I wanted to have a space where I didn't have to be anything for anybody."

Summer is anxious to attract a young audience, but concedes that today's kids would rather dance to Madonna. So what happened to the kids who danced to "Bad Girls" in 1979?

"They're having kids," Summer said, "and I'm going to hope their kids are buying records."

'Shirley Valentine' movie rates high

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

"Marriage is like the Middle East, isn't it? There's no solution."

This is one of the many homilies expressed by Pauline Collins in "Shirley Valentine." She has plenty of time to think up such things, since she spends much of her day in the kitchen of her modest flat, talking to the wall. That's right, the wall.

The boredom of housewifery has been explored from Shirley Booth in "Come Back, Little Sheba" to Carrie Snodgrass in "Diary of a Mad Housewife." So you might think nothing new can be said. Wrong. Shirley Valentine is the most heart-grabbing character on the screen in ages. Pauline Collins is likely to grab the Academy Award as well.

Willy Russell ("Educating Rita") first wrote "Shirley Valentine" as a one-character play. Collins won prizes for it in London's West End, then repeated the feat in New York, adding the Tony and every other award in sight. Russell's movie script adds the characters Shirley talked about in the play, though the basis remains the monologue she directs at the

After 20-odd years of marriage, Shirley Valentine-Bradshaw's life has fallen into a dismal pattern: shopping for groceries, listening to her bragging neighbor, pampering her two grown children, preparing dinner for her dour husband (Bernard Hill). Says Shirley: "He walked in one night with a smile on his face, and I didn't recognize him."

She compares her sex life to a supermarket: "It's just a lot of pushin' and shovin' and you still come out with very little in the end."

Shirley seems condemned for life until a feminist friend wins a two-week vacation for two in the Greek Islands. Desperate for a change, Shirley goes along. She meets a laid-back Zorba, Tom Conti, who introduces her to romance and Greek philosophy. Shirley is changed forever.

Lewis Gilbert has a rare talent for directing star-making roles, as he proved with Michael Caine in "Alfie" and Julie Walters in "Educating Rita." His work with Pauline Collins is nothing less than brilliant. Characters who address the screen can become a bore. Collins never is. Her round, wise face and her polished delivery of one-liners are a delight to watch and hear.

Tom Conti appears in only the latter third of "Shirley Valentine," but his wry presence is crucial to the film's success. Bernard Hill is especially effective as the insensitive husband, as is Julia McKenzie, the proud neighbor.

Lewis Gilbert also produced the Paramount release. Rated R for adult talk and situations, plus brief nudity. Running time: 108 minutes.

Motion Picture Association of America rating definition:
R - Restricted. Under 17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.
