Bush, Mulroney meet on issues

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine (AP) - Progress on trade and acid rain issues have U.S.-Canadian relations in pretty good shape as President Bush welcomes Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney to his vacation home today, says Bush's national security adviser.

major problems between us, that is the issue of cross-border pollution such as acid rain. Scowcroft said the two also would discuss the assassinations by drug barons in Colombia and President Virgilio Barco Vargas' determination to go after the drug cartel.

The 15th day of Bush's nearly three-week vacation also included a scheduled speech to the Kennebunk-Kennebunkport Chamber of Commerce, which is giving the president its Citizen of the Year Award.

Bush, after wrapping up a strategy session with top Cabinet officials and drug policy coordinator William Bennett, offered strong praise Tuesday for Barco.

Mulroney, his wife Mila and their four children were to arrive in late afternoon at Bush's Walker's Point compound for an overnight visit.

He declined comment on whether he would meet Colombian justice minister Monica de Greiff's request for $19 million in additional U.S. aid, but Bush added, "We will cooperate with Colombia to the best of our ability to support what (Barco) is trying to do."

Bush's national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, said Tuesday the private visit would give the two leaders "a chance to relax (and) a chance to exchange views" on world events, including the dramatic changes in Poland as well as the crises in Lebanon and Colombia.

Bush also would not comment on reports that he has decided to increase the foreign aid package in his drug strategy plan, which he will unveil to the nation in a televised address Tuesday night.

Scowcroft said the two old friends share "a close similarity of views ... on world affairs and a kind of unique personal closeness and frankness in exchanging views."

He said Bush's proposed revision of the Clean Air Act, which would seek to sharply curb emissions from utility plants, factories and other sources of pollutants that cause acid rain, "has set us on the road to dealing with one of the other

Much of the city drains into the creek, which also picks up runoff from the far western reaches of the county on its way to the west. More rain is forecast for the region at least through Thursday, bringing at least a temporary end to dry conditions in the immediate Hereford area.

Texas won't have 'friendship' on license tags

AUSTIN (AP) - The state highway commission has dropped plans to place "The Friendship State" on Texas license plates, but commissioners don't want people outside the state to think Texans are unfriendly.

Texas, The Friendship State xxx-000

Commission Chairman Robert Dedman said Tuesday the debate should continue on a slogan for license plates and said he hoped a consensus could be reached on a positive slogan that would temper outsiders' views of Texans.

Texas, The Bank Failure State xxx-000

"We should do everything to say 'Y'all come' to visitors to the state and 'Y'all come in bringing hi-tech and other jobs,'" he said.

Texas, The Insolvent State xxx-000

But the commission made it official. Texas will not be "The Friendship State."

The motto on the top plate was originally suggested by the State Highway Department. The other two were among the hundreds of suggested license plates. The final choice: The word Texas and the state flag.

Commissioners conceded defeat, urged unity and asked for help as they unanimously rejected placing the slogan on Texas license plates, ending a debate that stirred Texans' imagination and pride.

Commissioner Wayne Duddleston. Most everyone said the friendship slogan was too generic, too bland and in the words of one politician seeking the governorship, "too wimpy."

Responding to the avalanche of complaints about the earlier decision to use "The Friendship State," Dedman said perhaps "Never give up" should be the new slogan.

The most popular alternative to "The Friendship State" was the "Lone Star State," although some suggested more topical slogans, such as "Texas, the Insolvent State," or "The Bank Failure State."

As it is, Texas' plates next spring will remain sloganless, although more colorful with a red, white and blue state flag.

On July 19, the three-member commission approved, with little fanfare, "The Friendship State" for the approximately 27 million Texas license plates, hoping the cheery message would attract tourists.

Friendship is the official state motto and the word Texas derives from the Spanish pronunciation of an Indian word meaning "friends." But once word of the move reached the public, thousands of Texans, prouder of their independence than their friendliness, jammed telephone lines to the highway department and radio call-in shows. Newspapers conducted surveys and the license plate flap became the "Bubba" issue of the summer.

Dedman said there is a feeling outside the state, particularly in the north and east that Texas has gotten what it deserved in the financial and energy collapse, stemming from the oil embargo when Texans rode around with bumper stickers directed at "Yankees," saying "Let them freeze in the dark."

Voyagers detailed new horizons in solar system

"Not fare well, But fare forward, voyagers." - T.S. Eliot.

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) - Far in the cold darkness beyond Neptune, a lonely Voyager speeds into the void, dozens of worlds in its wake as it leaves a legacy that may aid the survival of its home planet, a garden island in a sea of space.

auroras and cirrus clouds of natural gas casting shadows on clouds far below.

What wonders Voyager 2 witnessed as the one-ton spacecraft cruised the solar system, traversing an arc-shaped 4 1/2 billion-mile path in 12 years as it trekked past four planets and at least 56 moons:

It also revealed two types of ice volcanoes on frosty, pinkish Triton: 1,000-foot-deep craters measuring hundreds of miles across that once produced ocean-size floods of ice flowing like lava, and volcanoes that may be active today, ejecting nitrogen ice 25 miles high at speeds of 560 mph.

In 1979, Jupiter and its moon Io, a hellish satellite of sulfur-spewing volcanoes. Saturn and its graceful rings in 1981. Five years later, Uranus, knocked on its side by some incomprehensible collision.

Scientists presented new findings Tuesday showing Neptune's weak, tilted magnetic field doesn't go through the center of planet but is offset about four-tenths of the way toward the surface. That and other evidence suggest the liquid that generates the magnetic field may exist in a shallow spherical shell, not in a deep central core as inside the Earth.

And today, the probe is 5 million miles past deep blue Neptune, with its frozen volcanic moon Triton, once flooded by seas of icy lava.

Such marvels, such sights never before seen by human eyes, were returned to Earth in 81,000 photographs captured by television cameras aboard Voyager 2 and its twin, Voyager 1, which explored Jupiter and Saturn before hurtling toward the stars.

And what, one may ask, did these humble Voyagers, these piles of 1960s electronics, do for their human masters, for the American taxpayers who paid the $865 million to propel them to the outer planets?

Sherwood Rowland and Mario Molina first warned of depletion of Earth's ozone layer after using chemical formulas devised to help NASA understand Venus' atmosphere, Sagan said.

"The immediate benefits of Voyager's pictures of Neptune and Triton and their wealth of scientific information is to stimulate our

At Neptune, Voyager discovered six moons in addition to Nereid and Triton, which were first detected from Earth. It discovered three thin rings of debris and two broad rings orbiting the planet. It found at least six moonlets hidden in one ring.

Perhaps one day, an alien civilization will find one of the Voyagers and play the record. They will hear a simple message recorded by a 7-year-old boy from another time and another world:

Man ruled not fit for trial

Cecil Corcoran, also known as Bubba Wilcox, was declared mentally incompetent to stand trial during a hearing in 222nd District Court in Hereford on Tuesday.

Corcoran was charged with attempted murder in connection with an incident last January in which a man received a knife wound to the throat. The victim of that alleged attack recovered from his injuries.

Only one item of evidence was heard by the jury in Tuesday's competency hearing. After examining Corcoran, Dr. Hugh Pennal, an Amarillo psychiatrist, compiled a written report concerning the defendant's mental condition.

After reviewing that report, the jury determined that Corcoran was not mentally competent to stand trial. As a result of the jury's finding, Corcoran will be committed to a mental institution, according to District Attorney Roland Saul.

Witness details Bakker's spending

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) - Witnesses at Jim Bakker's fraud trial testified that when his ministry was raising millions he spent $2,000 a month on electricity keeping his pool warm and $105,000 moving belongings by private jet.

David Taggart, a former Bakker aide who has been convicted of tax evasion, testified in U.S. District Court that the founder of the PTL evangelical empire was enchanted with real estate.

"He told me he wanted to have 10 homes," Taggart said Tuesday.

Prosecutors say Bakker and other PTL executives diverted for their own benefit at least $4 million of the $158 million they raised from 1984 to 1987 by selling $1,000 "lifetime partnerships." Many of the partnerships were supposed to be good for hotel stays at the ministry's resort in Fort Mill, S.C.

Hollis Rule, a former computer programmer for PTL, testified he went to his superiors with concerns that the partnerships were oversold, numbering 64,000 in September 1985 despite Bakker's self-imposed limit of 25,000.

Richard Ball, a PTL vice president, testified he relayed those concerns to Bakker and another executive during a brief meeting at the ministry's television studio.

"They told me not to worry about it," Ball said.

Former PTL advertising writer Lois Chalmers testified that a campaign for the partnerships offered a David and Goliath sculpture said to be worth $1,000. But the ministry only paid $10 for them, she said. A silver version of the sculpture in Bakker's office might have been worth $1,000, she said.

Taggart testified that Bakker always accepted bonuses from the board, even after objecting to them. The board in 1985 approved borrowing $800,000 for operating expenses while voting Bakker a $200,000 bonus, Taggart said.

Bakker complained during a visit to Oral Roberts University in Tulsa, Okla., that he didn't live as well as other evangelists, Taggart said.

Taggart said electric bills at Bakker's lakefront parsonage in Tega Cay, S.C., usually ran about $1,800 to $2,000 a month because "the pool was kept at a very high temperature ... in the 90s."

The witness also recounted moving the Bakkers' clothing and other belongings in 1984 from Tega Cay to a house they owned in Palm Springs, Calif. He said the move was made on a private jet at a cost to PTL of $105,000.

Bakker quit PTL in 1987 amid revelations about his 1980 sexual encounter with church secretary Jessica Hahn and a $265,000 payoff for her silence.

If convicted of all 24 counts of fraud and conspiracy, Bakker could be sentenced to 120 years in prison and fined $5 million.

Texas state budget ends fiscal year $300 million in the black

AUSTIN (AP) - State government's no longer operating in the red.

Comptroller Bob Bullock says the state will wind up the 1989 fiscal year Thursday with a positive balance of about $300 million. That's up from the 1988 ending balance of $113 million and the second year in a row no deficit has been left at year's end.

"We're closing the books on another good year for state government finances. We've got money in the bank and we can pay our bills," Bullock said Tuesday.

The past two years have been a sharp contrast to 1986 and 1987, when the oil price collapse helped drag the state budget into the red.

The state's 1986 ending balance was a negative $231 million, and the state wound up fiscal 1987 some $745 million in the hole.

Oil prices plunged from near $30 a barrel late in 1985 to less than $10 by mid-1986. That collapse sparked a major economic downturn in Texas, with the real estate and banking industries both falling into trouble.

Faced with a deepening deficit, the Legislature in 1986 raised taxes by about $1 billion, and in 1987 Gov. Bill Clements wound up signing the largest tax increase in state history - nearly $6 billion.

Bullock said this year's positive budget balance is due to the state's rebounding economy and to the 1987 tax hike.

He said that, technically, the $300 million is not a budget surplus because it represents funds that are earmarked but not yet spent. The ending balance could have totaled more than $600 million, Bullock said, but lawmakers elected to pay some major state bills before the end of the current fiscal year.

State tax collections for the 1989 budget year will have totaled $12.9 billion, a 4 percent increase over 1988, he said. Most of the gain comes from increased sales tax collections, which have jumped 11 percent from 1988 to 1989.

Natural gas, motor vehicle and hotel-motel taxes also showed solid 1989 gains. Natural gas collections were paced by strong industrial demand and rising prices, while the other levies were the results of increased auto sales and a booming tourism industry, Bullock said.

The comptroller said he remains optimistic about the Texas economy and state financing, noting that lawmakers wrote the 1990-91 state budget without any new taxes.

In addition, the improving state fiscal condition will allow a number of temporary, two-year taxes enacted by the 1987 Legislature to expire over the next two years, saving Texans about $520 million.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: According to my husband, we aren't related. How do you like that, after 23 years and seven children?

We got into the discussion when he was filling out a card of some kind. It asked for next of kin. I saw him write down his mother's name. When I told him I was his closest relative, he replied, "No, you aren't. As a matter of fact, if you want to get technical, we aren't even related." I told him I wasn't the kind of woman who would live with a stranger and maybe he had better move out. He said I was getting senile before my time, and maybe he should have the mental health people come and get me.

Please settle this argument, Ann. It's in its fourth day and I don't think I can take much more. Thank you. --Living With a Stranger in Abilene, Tex.

Dear Living: It seems to me a woman who has given her husband seven children is more than just a nodding acquaintance. In fact, according to law, you are his next of kin.

Your husband, no doubt, means you are not a blood relative, which of course is true. He sounds like a needle artist to me. Tune him out when he starts to act precious. Four-day fights are bad for the nerves.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you published a letter from a dog. Would you please give equal time to a cat?

Dear Ann Landers: I live in a very comfortable home, have plenty of food, a grassy yard and lots of loving attention.

My problem? I am four years old and have given birth to 20 kittens. As soon as the kittens are through nursing, my master takes them to the animal shelter.

Yesterday a visitor told him there was no good reason for this senseless breeding of unwanted kittens and I should be spayed. Every day the animal shelters are forced to kill most of the kittens and puppies to make room for the next flood of unwanted animals. She also said it was a great burden on the taxpayers, but the animal shelters' killings, sad as they were, were preferable to the fate of abandoned cats and dogs who die from starvation, injury or abuse.

After hearing of the fate of unwanted animals, I no longer want to contribute to the problem. My owner reads your column every day and respects your judgement. I hope you will tell him that I should be spayed immediately because old Mother Nature is once again making me desire the company of the sexy Tom next door. --One of Millions

Dear One: You sound like a pretty hip cat to me. I hope your owner and millions of others who have pets will get the picture and do likewise.

Dear Readers: I was nearly stomped to death by the shoe industry for saying the new models are cripples and a woman has to be suicide-prone to venture out in those five-inch spikes. The solution I suggested -- wear your old ones.

Several manufacturers hastened to inform me that those five-inch spikes are mostly in the windows and there are plenty of low-heeled numbers in the stockrooms. I took time out to check today and am happy to report that safe, sane and fashionable shoes for women are now available.

In fact, I bought a pair myself. Confidential To Man or Mouse: Don't leave any cheese lying around.

Do you have questions about sex, but no one you can talk to? Ann Landers' booklet "Sex and the Teenager" is frank and to the point. Send a self-addressed, long business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Teen, c/o Ann Landers, P. O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill 60611-0562.

Evert wins first match of last Open

NEW YORK (AP) - Chris Evert knows where she is headed. Pam Shriver has no idea where she's going.

Evert, the six-time U.S. Open champion who has announced she is playing a major tournament for the final time, won her first-round match before an adoring crowd that greeted her every move with warm applause and cheers. Shriver, not at all sure what she wants to do with her life, was eliminated.

Evert brought a bouquet of sunshine to a humid, overcast day that ended with heavy rain and a suspension of play. Ivan Lendl was ahead 6-1, 7-6, 2-0 against Diego

Perez when the match was halted. French Open champion Michael Chang didn't get a chance to start.

But the fans were there mainly to see Evert win her 98th Open match, a record. They got what they sought as she beat Bettina Fulco of Argentina 6-4, 6-2.

"I'm aware of the people's reaction," she said. "I feel that they're a little more supportive because it is my last U.S. Open."

"I could get real emotional if I let myself. But I can't do it because I don't want to forget why I'm out there - and I'm not out there for them to clap and praise and thank me for all of the years of tennis. I'm out there to win a tennis match.

"I'm trying to not let it filter in and think about it emotionally."

While Evert is fighting the emotions, Shriver is trying to get them flowing again. She was totally uninspired in losing to Larisa Savchenko of the Soviet Union 6-2, 6-3.

"I think in order to beat Savchenko, you have to be really eager and really strong mentally and physically and get out there and want to battle the games out," Shriver said after lasting just 55 minutes against Savchenko. "The emotions of a good effort just didn't get started."

Shriver hasn't gotten started all year, falling from fifth to ninth in the rankings, and is wondering if she can make the commitment necessary to stay near the top.

"I've got to start enjoying myself a little bit, or else in the next six months to a year, I'll seriously start thinking about what else I can do with my time," Shriver said.

Before the storms hit, suspending seven matches in progress and postponing 14, Martina Navratilova, Jimmy Connors, Stefan Edberg, Andre Agassi, Gabriela Sabatini, Tim Mayotte and Hana Mandlikova advanced.

Today, Lendl was to finish his match, while Evert returned to the court against Elise Burgin. Ironically, Burgin was bumped from the 1988 U.S. Olympic team when Evert decided to play in Seoul.

Also in action today were Navratilova, Steffi Graf, John McEnroe, Mats Wilander and Michael Chang.

Evert admitted she isn't expecting to win her 19th Grand Slam crown.

"I'm not even thinking about winning the tournament. I haven't even played a full year. I'm not really match tough. It would be almost a miracle for me to win this tournament."

The same can be said of Connors, Evert's one-time fiancee who will be 37 on Saturday. The five-time Open winner took a nine-week vacation this summer, gained 16 pounds and decided just 10 days ago to play here.

Connors routed Tom Nijssen of the Netherlands 6-2, 6-1, 6-2 in his 103rd Open match, a record for the U.S. championships. It wasn't much of a test of Connors' capabilities.

"I don't think about things like that," Connors said of his title chances. "I just come out and play the best tennis I can every match. If I continue to win, that's even better."

ATP move more practical than moral

By STEVE WILSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - The Association of Tennis Professionals gave two reasons, one phony, the other a euphemism for the truth, when it withdrew sanctions of tournaments in South Africa.

However repugnant the racist apartheid policy in South Africa may be, the reason the ATP acted Tuesday during the U.S. Open had nothing to do with morality, and involved something more than practicality.

The real reasons were fear and money. Follow the buck in most any decision and you probably can figure out what's going on.

In this case, the ATP, which earlier this year sanctioned 1990 tournaments in Cape Town and Johannesburg in an effort to spread the game and increase the pie for the pros, caved in to pressure from the International Olympic Committee and countries that host tournaments and also support a boycott of South Africa.

On Sunday, the IOC executive board met in Puerto Rico and adopted a proposal that would ban any players who have competed in South Africa from future Games.

Why did the IOC, a body which has repeatedly decried the intrusion of politics in sports, do that? Again, fear and money. It is afraid of a repeat of the African boycott that ripped apart the 1976 Olympics, and the toll such actions, or larger ones, can take on Olympic revenues.

IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch also called on the International Tennis Federation to expel South Africa from membership when it holds its annual meeting at Buenos Aires, Argentina, in September.

That action is a foregone conclusion. The ITF Committee on Management is already supporting a resolution from Nigeria that the South African Tennis Union should be removed from ITF membership until the policy of apartheid is abandoned.

The ITF said the committee views South Africa's continued membership as "a disruption to the development, stability and integrity of the game internationally."

Nothing about morality there, no concern about the welfare of tennis players, black or white, in South Africa, just the idea that the South African issue is bothersome and best disposed of by kicking the country out of the ITF.

Similarly, Vijay Amritraj, president of the ATP Tour players council, gave this statement about the recommendation to withdraw sanctions of the two South African tournaments:

"The players council, for moral and practical reasons, concluded it's just not feasible to have those tour events in South Africa."

Moral? If it is immoral for the ATP to support tour events in South Africa, why did it agree to condone Satellite and Challenger events there?

Would it not be moral to hold more tennis tournaments, and track and field meets, boxing matches and other sports events in South Africa to encourage multiracial crowds and participation?

Yes, there are practical reasons, but that's just a nice way of saying the pros face an image problem that could cost them money if they played in South Africa. Anything that could jeopardize their endorsements or prize money must be sacrificed.

The ATP Tour board, which begins running the men's professional tour next year, said it strongly supports the rights of its South African members to play in events around the world and would not penalize any players who choose to play in South Africa.

The players council made its decision after holding a five-hour hearing last week. Former player Arthur Ashe argued for the withdrawal of sanctions, while another former player, South African Ray Moore, who is chairman of the Men's Tennis Council, argued to keep the tournaments.

Pieter Aldrich, a South African pro on the tour, said he was a little surprised by the decision because of the hypocrisy it represents.

"All along the ATP has been saying they're non-political and now they've gone and made this big move," he said.

"My opinion is that the ATP is saying it's a moral decision, but that's not the point. It's just world opinion. How about China and Russia? Where do the morals come in there?"

Good questions. By coincidence, the same week the Cape Town tournament was scheduled next April, the ATP Tour has two other events. One of them is the $175,000 China Open in Beijing, not far from where hundreds of demonstrators were killed by government troops a few months ago.

Rising equipment costs put squeeze on prep grid programs

LUBBOCK (AP) - When football and big bucks are mentioned at the same time, most people would assume the subject is high player salaries or maybe gambling.

But lots of money is involved in high-school football, too - in the price of equipment! It costs about $300 to $500 to outfit each youngster properly for the rough sport.

"When I first started out, the big expense was game equipment. It cost about $100 to put a guy in game stuff," said John Cardinal, who coached high-school football in the 1950s and now owns a Lubbock sporting-goods business that supplies about 100 schools.

Helmets cost about $25 when Cardinal was a coach.

"It was the lettering and the pants that were very expensive," he said.

Now Cardinal sells helmets for $115. Two companies make football helmets and both have high casualty insurance premiums they pass on through higher helmet prices, Cardinal said.

But with the increase in prices for helmets and other equipment such as pads, there has been a corresponding increase in the equipment's quality, said Sam Adams, head coach at Dawson High School.

"There's no way to compare the equipment kids are wearing today to what they wore 20 years ago," Adams said. "The most dramatic advances have been in helmets."

Helmets, at $115 to $125 each, are the most expensive piece of high-school football equipment. They are returned to the manufacturer annually for inspection and certification. They usually last a three to five seasons before they are decertified and destroyed.

Other costly elements of the player's wardrobe are shoulder pads, at $75 to $87 a pair; game jerseys, at $20 to $35 each, depending on quality and lettering; pants, at $27 to $35; hip pads and thigh pads, at $10 to $15 a pair; and shoes, which can cost $30 to $50 and up.

Of course, no uniform is complete without a mouthpiece, athletic supporter, belt, ankle tape and socks, and players can spend much more on flak jackets, gloves, knee and ankle braces and neck rolls.

Coaches said shoulder pads, shoes and helmets last three to five years, though quality sets can last up to eight. But even with reconditioned and used equipment, the cost of outfitting a high-school team is steep.

Walls says it's Aikman

DALLAS (AP) - Cornerback Everson Walls decided to play soothsayer Tuesday, saying he believes coach Jimmy Johnson will pick Troy Aikman over Steve Walsh as the Cowboys' starting quarterback.

"I think it will be Troy, and nothing against Steve," Walls said. "I think he (coach Jimmy Johnson) will pick Troy."

Johnson has to pick between two different styles. There is a lot of pressure on both of them. I think Steve has played well, but Troy will make fewer mistakes."

Johnson has refused to name Aikman or Walsh because "we owe it to the fans who come out to the game to announce it then." Johnson said the lineup that takes the field in a preseason game against the Houston Oilers on Saturday night will be the starters for the regular season.

Asked how they looked in practice on Tuesday, Johnson grinned and said: "Good - they both looked real good."

Aikman was the NFL's top pick in the regular draft. Walsh was the top pick in the supplemental draft by the Cowboys after Atlanta passed on him.

Walsh talked on Tuesday like he already thinks Aikman will be the pick. "The coaches have made a big emotional commitment to Troy," Walsh said. "He was touted as the next Roger Staubach."

"I think the competition has been as fair as it was capable of being considering that I reported late."

Can Walsh, who played for Johnson at the University of Miami, look into his coach's eyes and tell what he's thinking?

"Oh, he gives you different reads on different days," Walsh said. "I think we both have surprised the coaching staff. We've both shown we have the ability to move the team."

Walsh said he would be unhappy if he's not the one.

"I'll be disappointed," he said, "but I'll go along with what coach Johnson says. At least the second guy will get to play. The second guy will get more work than, say, the backup to Dan Marino in

'Pokes make trade

IRVING, Texas (AP) - The Dallas Cowboys obtained defensive tackle Dean Hamel of the Washington Redskins on Tuesday for an undisclosed draft choice.

Hamel is a fifth-year veteran who played in 60 games for Washington and started in 17 of them. The 28-year-old Hamel, from Tulsa University, has 122 career tackles and eight sacks.

The Cowboys also announced that they have claimed two defensive players on waivers - linebacker Greg Gilbert from the Chicago Bears and defensive tackle John Carter from the New York Giants.

Gilbert, 6-1 and 225, was a fifth-round pick in 1989 out of Alabama. Carter, 6-4 and 260, was a fifth-round pick in 1988 out of Pittsburgh.

The Cowboys also announced that they cut third-round draft pick Rhondy Weston, a defensive end from Florida; and free agents Eric Brown, a defensive back from Savannah State, and Charles Buchanan, a linebacker who played for Cleveland last year and was picked up last week.

NFL suspends 13 for using steroids

NEW YORK (AP) - The NFL's first-ever suspension of steroid users seems to demonstrate that Commissioner Pete Rozelle's warning last March that the crack-down was coming may have worked.

When the first suspensions were announced Tuesday, just 13 players were caught for using the muscle-building substances. Of those, only Pro Bowl guard Ron Solt of the Eagles was of any prominence.

The number seemed to please even the NFL Players Association, which is challenging the accuracy of the testing procedure and the validity of the suspensions.

"The fact that so few players have been suspended for alleged steroid use indicates that the public perception of the steroid problem in the NFL is greatly exaggerated," said Gene Upshaw, executive director of the union and himself a former All-Pro guard.

Meanwhile, the old drug policy caught two more prominent players - All-Pro cornerback Leroy Irvin of the Los Angeles Rams and tight end Orson Mobley of the Denver Broncos. They were suspended for the final exhibition game and the first three regular-season games after testing positive for the second time for illegal substances.

"It hurts me, it disappoints me, but surprise me? No," Coach Dan Reeves of the Broncos said of Mobley's suspension.

They were the second and third players suspended this season under the policy which set down 24 players in 1988. Tony Burse, a fullback for Seattle, was suspended earlier this summer.

The steroid suspension policy was announced last March 21 by Rozelle and a letter detailing the plan was sent 10 days later to all NFL players. Rozelle said he made the announcement so early to allow time for players who might be using steroids to get the substances out of their systems before training camp tests.

In both 1987 and 1988, 6 percent of the players had positive steroid tests at camp, but no suspensions were imposed.

The percentages were much lower this time, and the warnings seem to have worked, even by the testimony of one of those caught, linebacker Mark Mraz of the Los Angeles Raiders.

"He was very disappointed and very emotional," Raiders coach Mike Shanahan said of Mraz. "He said he was aware of the new policy since April 1. He informed me that he had not been on them since then."

But Coach Lindy Infante of Green Bay, who lost offensive linemen Keith Uecker and Mike Arley, said the warnings may not have been enough.

"After all that was mentioned about it and all the letters that had gone out and all the notoriety about the decision to test for it and punish the people caught for it, I'm quite shocked that anybody would run the risk of this happening," Infante said.

"I think this proves that there is no guarantee that if you stay off of it for a period of time, you're not going to get caught with some of it in your system because I don't think either of the players are on it now or were on it just prior to training camp. There were traces in there somewhere for it to have shown."

The 13 players from eight teams also include three from the Buffalo Bills - brothers Tom Doctor, a linebacker, and Sean Doctor, a fullback, and linebacker Matt Jaworski.

Others suspended were defensive back Maurice Douglass of the Chicago Bears, running back Vince Amoaia and wide receiver Bobby Riley, both of the New York Jets, tight end Vernon Kirk of the Los Angeles Rams, and running back Keith Henderson and nose tackle Rollin Putzier of the San Francisco 49ers.

Irvin and Mobley fell under the policy for illegal substances that took effect last season.

Unlike the steroid policy, under which first-time offenders are suspended, first-time substance violators are treated for their problem and their names remain confidential. Second-time offenders are suspended for four games and third-time offenders for a year.

Phils having say in NL West race

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

All by himself, Von Hayes is making the National League West race more interesting. A cool trick, considering he plays in the East.

Hayes hit three home runs and drove in six runs Tuesday night as the Philadelphia Phillies won at San Francisco 6-1. In two days at Candlestick Park, Hayes is 5-for-8 with three homers, two doubles, seven RBIs and six runs scored.

"This really isn't one of my favorite parks," Hayes said, "but when you're hitting good, it can become one of your favorites."

The Giants lost for the fourth time in five games and have dropped nine of 15, including six of the last seven at home. They are still four games ahead of Houston, but San Diego has won six straight and has pulled to within six games of the top.

"I've said this for two months and nobody would listen to me," Giants pitcher Don Robinson said. "I'm really not worried about the Padres."

Hayes became the first NL player to hit three home runs in a game this season and the first to do it for Philadelphia since Mike Schmidt on June 14, 1987. The last player to homer three times against San Francisco was Atlanta's Dale Murphy on May 18, 1979.

In other games, San Diego beat Montreal 2-1, Chicago overcame Houston 10-9 in 10 innings, New York edged Los Angeles 2-1, St. Louis downed Cincinnati 4-2 and Pittsburgh defeated Atlanta 5-4.

Hayes hit a solo home run in the first inning, a three-run shot in the fourth and a two-run drive in the ninth. His first career three-homer game gave him 21 home runs this season.

Hayes' first two home runs came against Robinson, 11-9. He connected in the ninth against Craig Lefferts.

Bruce Ruffin, 4-8, ended a five-game losing streak and is 2-6 lifetime against San Francisco. He gave up four hits and left after a leadoff walk in the eighth. Roger McDowell finished with two-hit relief for his 16th save.

Cubs 10, Astros 9

At Wrigley Field, Chicago rallied from a 9-0 deficit after five innings, winning it in the 10th on Dwight Smith's single with the bases loaded.

Rafael Ramirez hit a grand slam, a two-run double and drove in a team-record seven runs for Houston. But the Cubs came back to win their third straight game and send the Astros to their seventh loss in eight tries.

Mets 2, Dodgers 1

David Cone threw a four-hitter and New York won a pitching duel at Dodger Stadium for the second straight night.

Cone, 12-6, retired 19 of the last 20 batters. John Wetteland, 4-6, gave up five hits in seven innings and struck out 10. His wild pitch in the seventh inning allowed Darryl Strawberry to score the tiebreaking run.

Cardinals 4, Reds 2

In St. Louis, Joe Magrane got his league-leading 18th victory.

Magrane, 18-7, gave up eight hits.

Jeff Richardson hit his first major-league homer, a two-run drive, in the Cincinnati sixth. The Cardinals scored four times in the bottom of the sixth against Tim Learsy, 9-12, as Terry Pendleton's two-run double capped the comeback.

Padres 2, Expos 1

Luis Salazar's infield hit scored Marvell Wynne from third base with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning.

Wynne started the ninth with a single off rookie Rich Thompson, 0-1. Wynne got to third on a sacrifice and wild pitch and scored when Salazar singled off the glove of draw-in shortstop Spike Owen.

Mark Grant, 6-2, pitched two innings for the victory.

Pirates 5, Braves 4

Andy Van Slyke drove in two runs as Pittsburgh beat visiting Atlanta despite two homers by Oddibe McDowell.

Doug Drabek, 11-10, pitched 7 1-3 innings and Bill Landrum finished for his 19th save. Tom Glavinic, 12-8, got the loss.

Van Slyke hit an RBI double during a three-run first inning and singled home a run in the third.

A's pound NY, BoSox sweep Angels

By The Associated Press

Even in the midst of what could be their worst season in 77 years, the New York Yankees haven't lost the ability to go the Boston Red Sox one better.

While the red-hot Red Sox were scoring nine runs in an inning en route to a doubleheader sweep of the California Angels, the ice-cold Yankees were giving up 10 in one inning in a 19-5 bashing by the Oakland Athletics.

And, in case you hadn't noticed, the American League East, as well as the AL West, is now a three-team race.

"Four games back with 30 to go, that says we're alive," Boston reliever Rob Murphy said after the Red Sox collected 14 hits in the opener and 16 in the 7 1/2-inning, rain-shortened nightcap in pounding the Angels 8-4 and 13-5.

In other Tuesday night action, it was Cleveland 3, Baltimore 1; Toronto 3, Chicago 2; Kansas City 12, Detroit 8; Seattle 5, Milwaukee 3, and Texas 4, Minnesota 2.

Baltimore leads Toronto by a game and Boston by four in the East while Oakland boosted its lead in the West to three games over California, with Kansas City remaining four back.

Jose Canseco powered Oakland's 18-hit attack with a pair of tape-measure homers. His first, a two-run shot off Chuck Cary, tied the game 3-3 in the third inning - the Yankees actually led 3-0 - and cleared the second fence in front of the visitors' bullpen in left-center field. His second, a three-run blast off Greg Cadaret, capped a club record-tying 10-run fifth inning.

Storm Davis, 15-6, allowed eight hits and all the New York runs in seven innings, including consecutive fifth-inning homers by Don Mattingly and Mel Hall. It was his first victory ever at Yankee Stadium.

Oakland's 10-run inning included six hits - Terry Steinbach and Carney Lansford had two-run singles - two errors, two walks, a wild pitch and a hit batsman.

Red Sox 8, Angels 4
Red Sox 13, Angels 5

Wade Boggs had a pair of singles in a nine-run fourth inning.

In the opener, Boston shelled Bert Blyleven, 14-3, for seven runs in three innings and ended his 10-game winning streak.

The Red Sox led 3-2 in the nightcap when they broke it open with nine runs on seven hits, four walks, a hit batsman and a couple of wild pitches.

In the opener, Dwight Evans drove in four runs with a homer and a single as Boston handed Blyleven his first loss since May 20.

Indians 3, Orioles 1

Brad Komminsk hit a two-run homer with one out in the bottom of the ninth. Cleveland starter Tom Candiotti held Baltimore to four hits in seven scoreless innings. Doug Jones got the win in relief despite allowing the tying run in the eighth inning on Cal Ripken's double and Joe Orsulak's single.

Blue Jays 3, White Sox 2

Fred McGriff, the AL home run leader, snapped a 2-2 tie with his second of the game and 35th of the season in the seventh inning.

McGriff lined reliever Donn Pall's 3-2 offering just over the fence in right with two out. The Blue Jays had tied the game 2-2 on consecutive homers by George Bell and McGriff off Melido Perez in the fifth.

Herd sweeps at Dalhart

Hereford High School's varsity volleyball team prepared for this weekend's tough Pecos Invitational tournament with a sweep on Tuesday at Dalhart.

Hereford allowed Dalhart only six points in four games as the Herd dumped the Wolves 15-2, 15-2 in the first match, then won 15-2, 15-0 in the second match.

The Hereford JV team also took an easy win, 15-4, 15-3, over the Dalhart JV.

Pecos, a perennial power in Class 4A will be just one of the tough teams in the field at Pecos. Last year, the Herd was defeated by Pecos in Hereford's first-ever trip to the volleyball playoffs.

New sports center caters to needs of Hereford's athletic-minded citizens

Ron Weishaar saw need for this retail business in community where athletic competition thrives

By ORVILLE HOWARD
Special Feature Writer

Nothing unites a Texas community like the competitive field of sports where reaching for a goal seems to bring out the finest in American youth.

And so it is in Hereford where rows of shining trophies mark a trail of champions--from the Hostile Herd to the Rodeo teams, competition is the name of the game in a sportsmanship world of pigskins, calfskins and cowhide mitts. Toss in a few softballs, baseballs and tennis nets and you're seeing the after-five crowd of the Hereford sports set.

And right in the middle of it all is Hereford's newest retail store--The All Star Sports Center located at the crossroads U.S. 385 and U.S. 60.

Ron Weishaar, owner of the new All Star Sports Center, said he saw a need for such a store in Hereford and decided to go for it.

All Star is not only one of the newest urban businesses in town, but is also the only sporting goods store in Deaf Smith County. This Hereford mini-mall carries a Texas-size inventory of athletic clothing and equipment that touches everything on the field from pee-wee teams to the professional sprinters.

Colorful basketball T-jerseys for men or the modern flares in women's sports apparel are some of the eye openers over at Weishaar's All Star store. From the gridiron to the baseball field--the basketball and tennis courts...track and water sports. Weishaar either has it in stock or can get it on overnight orders.

"In starting out in this new business, we haven't tried to stock every little T-shirt and glove," said Weishaar. "We have placed our efforts on stocking quality equipment and clothing at competitive prices. And using other stores in the larger towns as something of a yardstick, we believe we have a pretty high batting average in both quality and quantity."

Uniforms, special pads for most playing positions and the top lines of balls for the courts and fields are found in fine form at All Star, a family-owned and family-operated business on the southside of town.

Weishaar opened All Star Sports Center on April 12 and held its grand opening on the first week of May when Hustlin' Hereford turned out for the ribbon-cutting and a week of special introductions in the sports field.

Though Weishaar has participated in sports since he was a youngster, All Star Sports is not only his first venture into the sporting goods business but his first move into the retail world.

"When I wasn't working, it seems as though I was always either reading about sports or watching sports on television, so when I began to think about going into a retail business, I decided that selling sporting goods should be as good as any for me," said Weishaar, as he told of the business decision that actually originated nearly a year ago.

Weishaar had been a commodity broker in Hereford for a number of years, and when he sold his brokerage business in 1988 he began looking for a new office to headquarter a sideline business in the trucking industry. "I saw the 'For Rent' sign on this place one day when I drove up to the Town and Country Store to get a Coke," recalled Weishaar. "I initially thought of this place as being a good location for my trucks since there were so much parking space. But when we looked inside, we found a lot more space than we would need for the hauling business."

The Weishaars moved ahead with a lease on the north half of the retail location without knowing for sure what was going in. However, an old business idea was kindling new fire in the back of his mind. About six years ago, he and his wife, Jan, had seriously discussed the idea of opening an athletic equipment store in Hereford.

"But about the time we began putting some figures together, a sporting goods store opened," said Weishaar. "This stopped our planning but it was good anyhow because Hereford certainly needed such a store and at that time, we were very busy in the commodity and cattle business."

With the new location under lease and Hereford a town without a sporting goods store, Weishaar and Jan moved forward on the athletic side of the retail field in December 1988. The decision was followed with trips to marketing centers and shows in Dallas and then to the Super Show in Atlanta, site of the world's largest sporting goods show. Then came the burning of midnight oil in setting up accounts with the various wholesale outlets. Decisions on to do or not to do; to buy or not to buy.

Weishaar said that despite the slow economic pace set by the nation's agribusiness industries in the 1980s, business at All Star has held a steady run through its first summer season.

"We're expecting a good fall and winter run since this is the time of year when folks around Hereford really get involved in athletic events," Weishaar noted, while speaking of the hundreds of youngsters who regularly participate in all phases of athletic competition.

Another Hereford businessman in a separate conversation put into perspective the Hereford community support of school athletic activities: "When Hereford is in a district playoff, you can shoot a cannon down mainstreet on Friday night and not hit a soul."

"We're doing some of our best business late in the evening," Weishaar pointed out, while showing that both parents of many families work at jobs outside of the home. "About the only time they've got to shop is after they get off work...probably our busiest time is around six o'clock in the evening."

"A lot of times they stop next door for a Coke or something to eat and when they see that we're still open, they come over here to browse a little or pick up something they need."

Weishaar said that one of the reasons he will remain open on evenings at least one night a week is that was the pattern set by merchants in his hometown of Emporia, Kan., where merchants stayed open until 9 on Wednesday nights. "This allowed all of the working parents a chance to buy family clothing and do their shopping," he added. "Some estimated that 40 percent of their business was done on Wednesday nights."

He pointed out that the Hereford community has hundreds of families who face the same problems as those in Kansas. "When they get off of work, all of the stores are closed, so what do they do? They wait until Saturday and then go to Amarillo and buy," Weishaar said. "We're going to do our very best to hold our Hereford customers in Hereford."

Weishaar said he received something of a surprise during a recent athletic tournament in Hereford when a number of out-of-town guests stopped at All Star to pick up some needed accessories. "We had put up a little hand-written sign about our store over at the games and before the events were over we had people coming in from towns all around the area," he said. "They not only seemed very pleased about the quality of our goods but also pleased about the prices."

Weishaar pointed out they are carrying the top end of most of the major sportswear companies, along with high-quality athletic equipment. "If we carried a full line of all the companies we'd have to double our space," he noted, while showing where one athletic shoe company alone has more than 350 different styles of athletic shoes. A recent national survey revealed that 98 percent of all adults in America owned at least one pair of athletic shoes.

In showing a comparison in styles of sportswear, Weishaar told how a few years ago youngsters associated tennis shoes or athletic shoes with speed or fleet-footedness. "Now, most youngsters associate a pair of athletic shoes with some outstanding ball player or field super star...whenever a youngster wants to be as good as he can be, he wants the best."

As the shoe business goes, so goes the other athletic apparel and equipment: "Branded T-shirts with the special logos are the best sellers...predominant main-brands in all athletic sportswear and equipment lead the way in sales." When it comes to stock purchases, Weishaar hand-picks all the equipment and Mrs. Weishaar hand-picks all of the apparel.

"We know we're going to be wrong a lot of the times, but we're sure trying to pick the kind of equipment and apparel the people of Hereford want," Weishaar said, in showing how they personally select all of the inventory of All Star Sports.

A son of Carl and Clara Weishaar, Ron was born and reared at Emporia, an east-central Kansas town where he graduated from high school and later earned a degree from Emporia State University in 1976 in business administration. While in college, he and the former Jan Barrett met and were married. Early in life, however, Weishaar had learned many aspects of the commercial cattle feeding business, helping in the construction of a feeder unit near Emporia and later, while still in school, he operated a feedmill from 5 p.m. until midnight.

The Emporia feedlot operation at that time was owned and operated by Jan's father, Ed Barrett, who later moved to Hereford where he now heads two custom cattle feeding operations--Barrett-Crofoot East and Barrett-Crofoot West. His two sons, Bob and Rodney, are in managerial positions at the two feedyards.

Upon graduation from college at Emporia, Weishaar and his wife moved to Hereford where he became office manager of Barrett-Crofoot East. He was office manager for both feedyards at one time or another.

Weishaar's feedyard positions gradually evolved into commodity merchandising and purchasing grain and feedstuff for all the feedyards operated by Barrett.

"I liked the commodity purchasing work much better than the office manager post so I sort of switched gears and moved into the commodity purchasing end of the business," he added. A couple of years later, in 1979, Weishaar bought a Hereford-based commodity business and went into business for himself, trading through RBH Commodities in Chicago.

A couple of years later, he formed a commodity brokerage partnership with Robert Reinauer and continued in the business until selling out in 1988.

Weishaar says that baseball was his favorite sport as a youngster, but he now leans to the golf courses. "I'm getting too old to play baseball but I play quite a bit of tennis and I like golf."

The Weishaars have four children--Brooke, Holly, Jessica and Barrett. He and his wife take an equal share in the business end of the business, and they're looking forward to the time when their daughter, Brooke, will be old enough to help at the sales counter. "Our plans are to keep this as a family business," Weishaar added, while projecting plans for the future.

As traders say in the commodity business, Weishaar is mighty bullish in Hereford--not just sporting goods sales but all business: "We need to do a better job of merchandising so as to keep more of the Hereford business in Hereford."

A recent survey of Texas retail business revealed that Hereford merchants are doing only 70 percent of their potential--30 percent of the city's retail dollars are being spent outside of Hereford, whereas, on the other side of the coin, Amarillo merchants are reaping 110 percent of their potential. "Instead of doing 70 percent, we're going to try to do a 100 percent," said Weishaar. "Hopefully, some of our area customers who don't have a sports store may stop in here to shop. If I don't have what they want, then they should go some place else, but we're sure going to try to have what they want at competitive prices."

In addition to having a full line of tennis equipment, Weishaar has installed the finest racket stringing equipment in the business, handling repair work in tennis, racquetball, and badminton. They will be able to repair everything they sell.

Names in the News

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Eager music fans snapped up tens of thousands of tickets in an hour for former Beatle Paul McCartney's first concert appearances in Los Angeles in 13 years.

Three shows at the Great Western Forum in Inglewood sold out within 29 minutes after tickets went on sale at $28.50 each at 9 a.m. Monday, said Laura Gold, publicity director for tour co-sponsor Parc Promotions, Inc.

Organizers decided to add two more shows, and tickets for those were gone by 10 a.m., Ms. Gold said. Organizers expect a crowd of 15,500 people at each of the shows.

The concerts in late November will kick off McCartney's first North American tour since he appeared with his band Wings in the "Wings Over America" tour in 1976, Ms. Gold said.

NEW YORK (AP) - Unlike other aging rockers who have gone back on the road, the Jefferson Airplane isn't doing it for the money, lead singer Grace Slick says.

"The Who and the Rolling Stones figure, 'I want another wing on my villa,' so they go and tour," Slick said. "We go on the road because the guys just like to play."

The band that formed in 1965 and pioneered the psychedelic rock scene in San Francisco plays in New York's Radio City Music Hall tonight and Wednesday night. The group plans to release its first album in 17 years next week.

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) - Singer John Denver had praise for Gov. Steve Cowper after meeting to discuss the Alaskan oil spill.

"I like the guy. With his interest, with his knowledge, with the kind of position he's taken, I'm really glad someone like him is in office up here right now," Denver said Monday at an impromptu news conference.

The singer this week plans to tour Prince William Sound, where the tanker Exxon Valdez ran aground March 24 and caused the nation's largest oil spill.

Denver's schedule also included a free concert Monday night in the town of Cordova and a benefit concert in Anchorage Sept. 6.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - What do Oprah Winfrey and Ann-Margaret have in common? They're both on the cover of the latest issue of TV

Guide, and neither is pleased.

Appearing under the headline "Oprah! The Richest Woman on TV?" the magazine's cover illustration has the talk-show host's face superimposed on the actress' hourglass figure.

The cover, which appears to show Miss Winfrey in a gauzy dress atop a pile of money, is not identified as a composite. TV Guide acknowledged Monday that unsuspecting readers might think it's a real photograph.

The lean body came from a publicity shot of Ann-Margret for a "Rockette" special she did about 10 years ago, according to her publicist, George Kirvay. "I think she was shocked," Kirvay said. "If you look at the two pictures, they're identical. It's even her ring on Oprah's hand."

The formerly overweight Miss Winfrey, who lost 67 pounds on a diet in 1988, had no part in the cover's making, said Christine Tardio, a spokeswoman for Miss Winfrey's Harpo production company.

"Ann-Margret should be thrilled because she's got another TV Guide cover," said David Sandler, the magazine's national section editor. "And Oprah should be thrilled because she looks terrific."

But Sandler said TV Guide had instructed the artist who did the illustration "not to use photographs so literally" in the future.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Bret Michaels, the lead singer of Poison, doesn't altogether fit the hard-living image of a heavy-metal rocker. The needle he puts in his arm keeps him alive.

Michaels, 26, has diabetes and has been dependent on insulin for 20 years.

He has agreed to appear on the cover of the September issue of American Diabetes Forecast, a monthly magazine published by the American Diabetes Association.

"The whole thing about rock 'n' roll is to put on this fake macho image, but there's nothing wrong with having a human side," Michaels said.

"That image is part of me and speaking about diabetes is part of me. I don't separate the two."

In the magazine interview, Michaels said he tests his blood sugar six to 10 times a day because of his erratic sleeping and eating schedule.

Family reading program proves magic

EDITOR'S NOTE - Functional illiteracy in this country is widely recognized as a serious problem. But beyond this, there are many who can read enough to get by but find they'd rather do anything else. For this group, a remarkable program based on children's books offers a way of entry to the cultural mainstream.

By NANCY SHULINS
AP Newsfeatures Writer

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) - Marie Isenor, wife, mother and convenience store clerk, dropped out of high school five months before graduation. She's kept a low profile ever since.

"When I go to meetings, I'm always the one in the back not saying much. I've always been interested in graphic arts, but I never did anything about it. I didn't think I was smart enough."

She's beginning to see herself differently, due largely to a series of children's book discussions at the library. The gatherings, led by an area scholar, brought together a wide range of people, from Adult Basic Education students like Isenor to college graduates.

"I wasn't there five minutes before I was involved in the discussion," says Isenor, who lives in Quechee. Rather than drop out after the first session as planned, she found she couldn't wait for the next one.

Though she didn't know it at the time, Marie Isenor was a pioneer in a social experiment known as the Family Reading Project. In her case, as in most, the experiment seems to be working.

Discussion leader Nick Boke, who teaches history at a community college, learned something too.

"There's a statistic that gets thrown around, that only 20 percent of the population can think abstractly. This confirmed my belief: It's because only 20 percent of the population has ever been asked."

The Family Reading Project is based on a modest formula: Choose 10 classic children's books on a single theme - courage, for example, or friendship. Give them to 20 or 30 adults from a cross-section of the community, then invite them back for three monthly discussions led by a humanities scholar.

That simple recipe is yielding rich intellectual fare. It's also shattering stereotypes, building self-esteem and easing isolation.

The discussions also give adults from all layers of society the same chance to discover the wonder of books and to pass it along to their children.

"Reading is transformative," says project director Sally Anderson, a former librarian and reading teacher. "It's so mean-spirited to make it a class issue ... We say to parents, 'Just tell your kids to turn off the TV.' But some parents don't have the self-esteem to take control of their families."

Others may lack the necessary vocabulary or reading ability to decipher a complex, puzzling world.

The Family Reading Project has its roots in a similar reading and discussion program begun 11 years ago by a Vermont librarian to encourage people to read better books. The program she started has now been held in more than half of Vermont's 251 communities.

In 1986, an Adult Basic Education tutor asked organizers to create a similar program for her students. Many lived on back roads not served by public transportation and felt cut off from their communities and their neighbors.

A discussion group for these people, complete with child care, could provide an entree to libraries and other cultural centers, Anderson thought.

Textbooks may teach reading, she thought, but they don't teach the love of reading. That's literature's job. But what sort of literature? Surely no one who reads at a fourth-grade level should be expected to plow through "The Grapes of Wrath."

But why not "Charlotte's Web"? Or "Make Way for Ducklings"? Why not the best of children's literature?

Would grown men and women be insulted at the prospect of reading the same books as their grade-schoolers? Anderson didn't think so. "Children's literature is complex. Any of these books can be discussed on deep psychological levels."

How about the college professors, writers and other highbrows who'd be leading the discussions? How would they feel about focusing their analytical skills on "The Biggest Bear"?

"Good literature is good literature," says Nick Boke. "Well-chosen words work. The main difference between adult literature and children's literature is that children's books have fewer words."

"The issues are the same. They are the human issues: loneliness, love, fear, bravery, the small triumphs of day-to-day existence."

And so, with a grant from the Vermont Council on the Humanities, the new program, Connections, made its debut in six towns in 1986. Some books were more advanced than others, but participants were given tapes to help them through the tougher ones. They also got extra coaching from their tutors.

The scholars got some coaching too. Organizers urged them to act as discussion leaders rather than teachers.

At first, Boke recalls, participants were wary. "There they sat, book in hand, with a 'now-what' look on their faces."

It didn't take long for the books to work their magic.

"Make Way for Ducklings," the story of a duck who escorts her brood through Boston traffic to a new home in the Public Garden, sparked a lively discussion about the trials of getting kids to mind. "Ramona and Her Father," about a girl whose father loses his job, prompted a revelation: "I never knew that kids worried," one mother said.

Tales of ducks, bears and spiders encouraged talk of love, trust and courage. And the more people talked, the more evident it became: Connections could do more than help people become better readers. It also could help them become better parents.

The next year, the program expanded to 14 towns, then to the state hospital and the prisons, where corrections officials witnessed a minor miracle: Inmates refrained from both ethnic slurs and swearing during their book discussions.

Folks were connecting - with books, with ideas, with each other. That might have been that, had it not dawned on organizers that the program was popular not only with adults.

It also scored points with their kids. Some parents who sat down to read their new books to their children discovered the kids already knew the stories. They'd been busy memorizing the tapes.

"For some people, these were the first books they'd ever owned," says Michael Bournan, executive director of the state Council on the Humanities.

"One man moved his bowling trophies so he could more prominently display his new books. All kinds of things were happening that we didn't have the vision to anticipate."

Which gave Bournan, the well-educated father of two non-reading teen-agers, an idea: Why not start a children's book discussion group for experienced readers, with the goal of encouraging people throughout Vermont to read to children?

The Vermont Council on the Humanities' Family Reading Project came off the drawing board last fall, with a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities and a lot of crossed fingers; at the last minute, its architects decided to combine new readers with old in some groups.

Anderson was convinced the new readers could hold their own. "The idea that poor people are dull, that they have no intellectual curiosity, is absolutely false."

At first, Nick Boke says, ABE students did stand out, "but only by their incredible shyness. The sad thing is that in many cases they've done little less than those who made it through school."

"The ones who made it just lucked out a little, or put in that extra 14th of a percent effort to get the degree. ABE students are not dramatically different from a lot of high school graduates - except in how they feel about themselves."

Watching feelings change and shyness disappear has been the highlight of the project, says Boke. "It's very exciting to watch people find the joy of using their minds and being recognized for it."

By year's end, organizers hope to complete 32 Family Reading programs in 27 towns, with more planned for next year. Similar programs are being developed in the other New England states, along with a study to gauge their effectiveness. ABE tutors already report that the switch from textbooks to storybooks has greatly increased students' motivation.

"You have quite a brain on you," Nick Boke remarked to one participant at the last session. "What are you going to do with it?"

Marie Isenor, who never thought she was smart enough, has given Boke's comments some thought. She's studying for her high school equivalency diploma.

And she recently took her first graphic arts course.

Despite bombing, target range remains mostly pristine area

EDITOR'S NOTE - It's the Free World's largest target range, a forbidding place where America's bomber and fighter pilots have honed their marksmanship since the start of World War II. But despite all that bombing and strafing, much of the vast preserve remains pristine, and now the public is being invited to come and visit.

By MEL REISNER
Associated Press Writer

GILA BEND, Ariz. (AP) - The federal government is putting out the welcome mat at a remote gunnery range twice the size of Delaware and often as inhospitable as a Gila monster, even when nobody's shooting.

Indeed, contradictions abound at the Barry M. Goldwater Air Force Range, a 2.7 million-acre preserve in the southwestern corner of Arizona. Described as the Free World's largest target range, it encompasses seven areas where fighters strafe and bomb simulated trains, convoys and missile bases and three others where pilots practice dogfights.

An information packet, which includes an agreement absolving the military of any harm to the visitor, refers to unexploded ordnance dating back to the 1940s and warns that "munitions items are designed to maim and kill."

Some of the range is so inhospitable that Spanish explorers named an east-west trail "El Camino del Diablo" - The Devil's Road. Historians estimate that hundreds have died of fatigue or dehydration in remote parts of the range over the centuries.

"There's evidence out there of at least 40 old graves along the route," said 1st Lt. Michele S. Monroe, chief of a natural resource management unit at Luke Air Force Base outside Phoenix.

But she said the range also is "an irreplaceable national treasure," a trove of biological wonders and opportunities for hikers, backpackers, hunters and prospectors in a landscape that varies from post-Armageddon flats to a rich overlay of plant life on bacon-colored peaks.

A civil engineer, Monroe won the Department of Defense's prestigious Natural Resource Conservation Award in 1988 for projects to study the endangered Sonoran pronghorn antelope, to build eight water-catchment basins among the crags, and to repair damage to El Camino del Diablo.

Thanks in part to the concrete dams which seal off rock-walled washes to collect up to 50,000 gallons each during rainy periods, the range's herds of desert bighorn sheep are on the increase, she says.

Aircraft avoid the 822,000-acre Cabeza Prieta National Wildlife Refuge, run by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, and studies indicate the animals closer to bombing areas have adjusted, Monroe says.

"I've been told by bighorn hunters who have been out there during a sonic boom that the sheep may look up from eating, but they don't bolt and run," she says.

Dick Thomas, a spokesman for the Bureau of Land Management office in Phoenix, says he was surprised by the natural wonders detailed in a new land-use plan produced by his agency.

"I've lived in Phoenix for 35 years, and I thought that was one big flat where they'd bombed the hell out of the scenery since 1941," he says.

Despite the live bombs sometimes dropped, the Air Force, which operates on the east end, and the Marines in the west, have kept most of the range pristine, says Carole K. Hamilton, the BLM's area manager.

"The public image of a bombing range may be misplaced in this case, because most of the ground has not been blown up," Hamilton says. "A lot of people think this is one of the cleanest areas in terms of not having a lot of brass on the ground, target dunes and other debris."

The plan calls for protection not only of flora and fauna, but of geologic formations - dunes near Yuma - and historic and prehistoric sites. The plan was developed under the Military Lands Withdrawal Act of 1986.

Congress reserved the range and five others for the next 15 years, changed its name to honor Goldwater, a senator from Arizona and the 1964 Republican presidential nominee, and designated the BLM to manage resources everywhere but on the Cabeza Prieta.

The plan notes that the primary mission of the range is to train pilots and aerial gunners for the Air Force, and for the Navy through the Marine Corps Air Station at Yuma.

But it also calls for limited, on-road recreational use and for creation of areas of "critical environmental concern" and special management.

Visitors are required to register at one of several entry points, stay on established roads and telephone the military when they leave the largely unfenced range. The entry checkpoints give visitors an information kit with maps clearly marking target areas.

In addition, the military never uses the range on Saturdays or Sundays, when public use is highest.

Lt. Col. Stephen M. Roberts, commander of the 832nd Combat Support Squadron at the Gila Bend Auxiliary Field, foresees few problems with greater public use of the preserve.

"We do have some instruments out there that we don't want moved or molested," Roberts says. "Some are calibrated. But our greatest concern about increased public use would be illegal or unauthorized off-road-vehicle use."

Visitors also could wander into a target zone, interrupting the training. And those who forget to telephone when leaving could find themselves assessed for search expenses or barred from the range for a year.

Maj. Wayne St. John, Roberts' operations officer, says the sheer size of the range, and the maps and instructions in the visitors' kit, preclude unintentional visits to gunnery areas. "There's plenty of federal property out there that's not used as gunnery range," he says. "Three-fourths of it is not."

Roberts says a greater problem has been motorists shooting holes in warning signs on the fences along state Route 85.

Cutting the public off from much of the southwestern corner of Arizona has produced some quirky reactions in the past.

In 1941, ranchers grazing livestock on what was to become the bombing range refused to vacate the land until nearly three weeks after Pearl Harbor, when a federal court overrode provisions of a grazing law and authorized the military to take possession.

Through the years, word got out that money was to be made recycling brass shell casings ejected by aircraft on strafing runs. That led to a May 1974 incident in which five young men, hired to collect the casings, died after being abandoned on the range without provisions.

There's little likelihood of a repeat tragedy: Most of the 100-rounds-per-second cannons aboard the F-15, F-16 and A-10 aircraft used today spit the valuable casings into containers and bring them back.

"The lead sells for about 25 cents a pound. By the time you hauled it out, it wouldn't be worth it," says Ray Murphy, a civilian spotter on a gunnery monitoring tower.

More recently, a Marine helicopter found 22 illegal aliens who survived an attempt to march north over the range to reach Interstate 8. Three others died in the ordeal.

Roberts said history ought to warn visitors to enter the desert prepared, carrying food, maps and water.

Luke, home of the 832nd Air Division, is a Tactical Air Command base and has no heavy bombers, but its fighter pilots must be able to hit ground targets with cannon fire, bombs or rockets and must be able to fight enemy aircraft.

St. John's men use an on-base junkyard to fabricate targets. Metal drums, laid end-to-end and decorated with fins off old aerial targets, emerge as aircraft on a runway; old road machinery turns into a train parked on a siding.

Pilots are given simulations of every possible target, including missile emplacements, and are trained on both flat and uneven terrain.

He said beginners in aircraft rigged to carry bombs drop a small, tube-shaped object which contains a smoke charge visible for miles. But before graduation from tactical training, each pilot also has to drop a live bomb.

There's nothing like the experience, says Roberts, a decorated officer who flew 170 combat hours in Southeast Asia in the 1970s.

"It feels different when you drop a 500-pound bomb," he says. "They need to feel it drop off the plane. And also, it's the training involved in telling somebody, 'This is a live weapon. Preflight it and make sure it has no defects.'"

Dingy clothes part of dilemma

If clothes fresh from the washer still look dingy or if your bath soap just doesn't seem to lather well, you may have a hard water problem.

"Hard water interferes with almost every cleaning task from laundering and dishwashing to bathing and personal grooming," said Dr. Susan M. Quiring, a housing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Hard water may be costing you money in other ways. For example, a New Mexico State University study in Las Cruces, New Mexico, measured energy consumption of six gas and electric water heaters for five to 15 years.

Half of the heaters used untreated hard water and half used softened water. The water heaters using the hard water consumed considerably more energy than the soft-water group, Quiring said.

Also, researchers removed from 3.86 to 40 pounds of sediment from the water heaters using the untreated water. The soft-water group had from 1.09 to 4.27 pounds of sediment in the heaters. Sediment is a poor heat conductor and will reduce the efficiency and life of the water heater.

Although hard water is expensive, treatment methods should be considered carefully. You can purchase or rent a mechanical water softening tank and connect it to your water supply line.

This equipment operates using ion exchange, that is, as the hard water passes through the softening material the calcium and magnesium ions attach to the softening beads and the sodium in the beads is released into the water to replace them.

The softening material is then washed with a brine solution to recharge so the process can continue," the specialist said. Most softeners are designed to do this automatically, either on a time schedule or on demand.

There are several types of water softeners available and prices range from $400 to more than $1,800. A reasonable price to pay for an installed unit is $600 to $800.

"Considerations should include the cost of the equipment and its installation, the warranty (usually about 10 years), the method and recharging system the tank uses and the reputation of the dealer/installer," Quiring said.

Individuals with heart or circulatory problems or who are on low sodium diets may not want to soften water or they may want to soften only the hot water. Quiring suggests you check with your physician if you are in this category.

Plants, lawns and gardens may suffer with the high sodium content of softened water, therefore soften only the water going into the house. Care should be used in disposing the brine used to recharge the system. A single recharge may generate as much as 50 gallons of wastewater, which can overburn some septic systems.

Read the directions on household appliances and evaporated coolers for cautions on softened water, the housing specialist said.

Planning a wedding?

Engagements should be announced at least SIX WEEKS BEFORE the wedding date to ensure publication. Couples submitting engagement announcements after the deadline must choose to have either the engagement or the wedding photo published. The engagement announcement must include the date of the wedding.

Wedding and anniversary information should be submitted to The Brand the Monday before the next Sunday publication date. Wedding information submitted eight days or later after the wedding date will be shortened.

Black and white photos are preferred for engagements, weddings, and anniversaries but color photos may be used if suitable for reproduction. Lifestyle reporters do not take photos for engagements, weddings, anniversaries, or showers.

Shower forms are available at The Brand, as are engagement and wedding forms. This information will not be taken by phone.

According to rules on displaying the flag, you should never hang one national flag above another in time of peace.

Rainbows may be seen at night. Just as the sun shines through a sheet of falling rain to cause a rainbow, the moon can cause the same effect.

Host safe parties

NEW YORK (AP) - Non-alcoholic party beverages and a super party punch can help make sure your guests arrive home safely home from your party.

If you do serve alcoholic beverages, follow these suggestions from 4C Foods, makers of 4C Redi-Flavored Bread Crumbs and other food products:

- Ask one or more of your driving guests to abstain from alcohol, assuring a safe trip home for all.

- Serve a variety of snacks or hors d'oeuvres before the main course to prevent guests from drinking on an empty stomach.

- Avoid salty foods that stimulate thirst. Offer high protein and moist foods instead.

- When serving mixed drinks, use a shot glass for measuring. All drinks, including beer and wine, should be served to guests one glass at a time. Guests may tend to overdo, when tempted by a keg, pitcher or punch bowl that lets them refill freely.

- An hour or so before the party is scheduled to end, stop serving alcohol, and bring out desserts or light finger foods.

4C PARTY FRUIT PUNCH

In a punch bowl, dissolve the contents of three 4C Iced Tea Mix envelopes in 6 cups of water. Stir well. Add 3 cups of apple-cranberry juice and one 10-ounce package of defrosted, mixed fresh fruit. Just before serving, add a tray of ice cubes. Makes 9 cups.

MUSTARD CHICKEN NUGGETS

This chicken nugget dish can be served hot, at room temperature or cold, from the refrigerator. If made the day before the party, the flavors will develop and the chicken can be reheated. It's perfect for parties and picnics.

3 pounds boneless chicken breasts, cut into 2-inch cubes
1-3rd cup mustard
2 eggs, lightly beaten
2 1/2 cups bread crumbs
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons olive oil
1/4 cup fresh lemon juice

In a large bowl, toss the chicken cubes with the mustard to coat. Cover and marinate at room temperature, tossing occasionally, for 30 minutes. Preheat the oven to 375 degrees F.

Place the eggs in a shallow bowl. Place the bread crumbs on a plate. Dip the mustard-coated chicken cubes into the eggs and then roll in the crumb mixture to coat evenly. Place in a shallow baking dish large enough to hold the chicken cubes in a single layer.

In a small saucepan, melt the 3 tablespoons butter in the 3 tablespoons olive oil over low heat. Remove from the heat and stir in lemon juice. Spoon half the lemon butter over the chicken. Bake 30 minutes. Spoon the remaining lemon butter over the chicken and bake 30 minutes more, until chicken is cooked through and juices run clear. Let stand 15 minutes before serving.

STUFFED ARTICHOKE

8 medium artichokes
Salt
1 cup butter or margarine
1 cup diced cooked ham
1/2 cup diced onion
3 cups bread crumbs
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
Remove stems of artichokes and trim pointed ends of leaves with scissors. Cook in boiling salted water (1 teaspoon salt for each quart) for 20 minutes. Drain artichokes and remove chokes (fuzzy centers) with a spoon.

Melt butter in skillet. Add ham and onion and saute for 5 minutes. Add bread crumbs and lemon juice, stirring until crumbs are moistened.

Stuff artichokes with crumb mixture, filling center and in between outer leaves. Sprinkle 1 tablespoon Parmesan cheese over each artichoke and stand them upright in large saucepan. Add water to depth of 1/2 inch. Cover and cook over low heat for 20 minutes, adding more water if necessary. Serve hot or cold. Makes 8.

STUFFED CLAMS

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/2 cup bread crumbs
24 small clams
Lemon juice
3 slices bacon, cooked and crumbled

Melt butter in a small pan. Add bread crumbs. Stir over medium heat until crumbs are golden.

Open clams with a clam knife, or steam them in a saucepan just until open. Discard top shell and loosen clam from bottom shell. Sprinkle each with a little lemon juice. Cover with bread crumbs and top with bacon. Place shells on pan and bake in preheated 425-degree F oven for 15 minutes. Makes 24.

Pork skewers

Thread boneless pork and spiced crab apples onto skewers. Brush with a sauce made with mustard, molasses and ginger. Kabobs can be cooked on an uncovered grill or under the oven broiler.

Make kabobs with pork, ham

Kabobbery has come of age; more interesting combinations of meat, fruit, vegetables and basting sauces are used than ever. Kabobs are appealing to serve and easy to cook - great for backyard entertaining. The sweet but mustardy sauce brushed on these kabobs as they cook also is delicious with any cut of pork or ham.

For even, thorough cooking, cut the meat for kabobs in uniform pieces. When threading the foods onto a skewer, leave a little space between the pieces.

INDONESIAN PORK SKEWERS
1/4 cup vinegar
1/4 cup prepared mustard
1/4 cup light molasses
2 tablespoons ginger preserves or orange marmalade
1/4 teaspoon ground ginger
1 1/2 pounds lean boneless pork, cut into 1-inch cubes

One 16-ounce jar spiced crab apples, drained
For brushing sauce, in a medium mixing bowl combine vinegar, mustard, molasses, preserves and ginger. Alternately thread pork and apples on 6 to 8 skewers. Brush with sauce. Grill on an uncovered grill over medium-hot coals about 12 minutes or until pork is no longer pink, turning and brushing with sauce after 6 minutes.

Or, place kabobs on unheated rack of a broiler pan. Broil 5 inches from heat for 12 to 15 minutes or until pork is no longer pink, turning kabobs and brushing with sauce after 6 minutes.

Heat remaining sauce; pass with kabobs. Makes 6 servings.
