Reagan declares end to recession

Right At Home

This flock of snow geese seemed to be enjoying the cool weather Friday afternoon as they rested on a small lake just west of town. Although the calendar says it's spring in the Panhandle, Mother Nature seems to be eager for Old Man Winter to hang on for awhile, and the weather has remained reasonably cool. (Brand Photo by Bob Nigh)

By The Associated Press
President Reagan said Friday "we are definitely into a recovery," and administration economists predicted a healthier 1983 economy than earlier expected.

Martin Feldstein, the president's chief economist, said the administration now expected the economy to expand 4.7 percent between the fourth quarters of 1982 and 1983. An earlier forecast projected a 3.1 percent growth rate.

Inflation of consumer prices is now expected to be 4.5 percent, down from 5.6 percent.

The civilian unemployment rate, previously expected to stick at its current rate of 10.4 percent through the end of the year, may dip below 10 percent by December, Feldstein said.

Feldstein said the improved forecast will mean slight reductions in the record budget deficits expected for 1983 and 1984, but he cautioned that the reductions would be minimal.

The forecast was changed because of a growing outcry by economists to update it in light of favorable economic developments since the start of the year, Feldstein said.

At a brief news conference after the new forecast was released, Reagan was as upbeat as Feldstein's outlook. "With this recovery, the stage is set, I think we've proven our point, that our system (economic program) — in spite of all the mauling that took place before it was even under way and having a chance to operate — has proven its success," the president said.

The administration is not altering its forecast of 4 percent growth and about 4.5 percent inflation for 1984 and beyond.

In other economic developments Friday:

—Alan P. Tracy, acting U.S. undersecretary of agriculture, said in Moscow that former President Carter's embargo on grain sales inflicted "long-term damage to our trade" with the Soviets.

—The Federal Reserve Board said the nation's basic money supply fell in mid-March. Economists were divided on whether the $1.3 billion decline in M1, a measure of funds readily available for spending, would reverse a recent move toward higher short-term interest rates.

—The Justice Department said a federal grand jury is investigating airlines that provide trans-Atlantic service for possible antitrust violations. The grand jury will look at the possibility of violations of the Sherman Antitrust Act.

Absentee vote is slow here

Interest in the April 2 election in which seats on the Hereford City Commission, HISD board, and Deaf Smith General Hospital board will be up for grabs has apparently been light according to the number of absentee votes cast in the three elections as of early Friday afternoon.

Only two absentee ballots had been cast by 1:30 p.m. Friday in the hospital board race, while only five persons had cast ballots in the city election. Interest in the school board race, in which six people are seeking two at-large seats, has been a bit higher, though.

The school administration office reported that 29 absentee ballots had been cast as of 1:30 Friday.

Absentee balloting in all three elections closes at 5 p.m. Tuesday.

In the election next Saturday, current Place 1 City Commissioner Wes Fisher is running unopposed for the mayoral position being vacated by Bartley Dowell. Melvin Jayroe is also unopposed for the commission seat being vacated by Fisher.

The only contest race in the city election has Place 2 Commissioner Ed Coplen facing a challenge by Lynn Jones.

Three at-large seats are up for grabs in the hospital board election, with four persons on the ballot, including incumbents Dr. Gerald Payne and Eddie Reinaur, Jr. Aiming at hospital board seats also are Judy Neumeyer and Dr. Charles Allision.

The school board election should have the greatest interest with the six persons seeking to win one out of two seats being contested. On the ballot in that election are incumbents James Gentry and Paul Ramirez, along with challengers Marilyn Culpepper, Trini Gamez, Cal Jones, and Dale Pierson.

In addition, Paul Mason is unchallenged to fill out the unexpired term of former HISD board member Bobby Griego.

Voting in all three elections on April 2 will be held at the community center, with the polls open from 7 a.m. - 7 p.m.

Churches join for telephone census here

Approximately 20 local churches will have representatives participating in a religious telephone census starting Monday and continuing through Saturday. Volunteer callers will ask several simple questions, which should take about two minutes of the respondent's time.

Information on church affiliation, membership, and home address will be asked for during the survey.

Results of the survey, which is similar to others being taken across the United States, will be mailed to all churches and pastors.

Through state conservation programs

Exxon hit for huge payback

WASHINGTON (AP) — Every state would get a piece of almost $900 million for energy conservation programs under a federal judge's order that the nation's largest oil company reimburse the public for overcharges.

U.S. District Court Judge Thomas Flannery ruled Friday that Exxon Corp., unjustly reaped huge profits by improperly classifying crude oil from its Hawkins field in Texas as "new oil."

Flannery estimated that the overcharges totaled $895.5 million between 1975 and 1981 and ordered Exxon to reimburse that amount to the public through state-run conservation programs.

"The broad scattering of the ill effects of Exxon's wrongdoing renders impossible the tracing of the overcharges to their ultimate victims and the calculation of the precise damages suffered by each," he said in the 90-page ruling.

Exxon said it will appeal.

"From what we understand of the judge's ruling, we believe it is incorrect and unfair," the company said in a statement read by James A. Morakis, manager of its press services in New York. "We will proceed promptly in the courts to attempt to correct this decision."

If the ruling is upheld, the Exxon statement said, payments made by Exxon would be significantly offset by payments recovered from other products and royalty owners in the field.

The refund is the largest ever awarded under the 1973 Emergency Petroleum Allocation Act, which set up a system of federal price controls on domestic oil production immediately after the Arab oil embargo.

Flannery said the Treasury Department would distribute the money to the states based on their energy consumption under a formula used in other, similar refund cases.

Commissioners eye Bull Barn question . . . again

Deaf Smith County Commissioners will review the audit report for 1982, discuss the Town & Country Jubilee, and meet with Margaret Formby of the Hall of Fame Rodeo Association when the court met in regular session at the courthouse at 10 a.m. Monday.

Mrs. Formby will present a program a request to use the Bull Barn at the meeting, as she and another association representative did two weeks ago. The court then refused to put up part of the $1,500 deposit for the rodeo association at that time, which was asking to use the Bull Barn for a dance next August.

Other items on the court's agenda Monday include opening bids on a pick-up truck for Pct. 4, resolutions regarding the Panhandle Regional Housing Finance Corp, and intervention by the Texas Association of Counties in litigation challenging county jails in Texas, and consideration of payment to a new law firm for legal services provided to the county.

The meeting, to be held in the commissioner's courtroom on the second floor of the courthouse, is open to the public.

CFS to conduct parent seminars here

Ignorance not bliss in sexual matters

By JERI CURTIS
Staff Writer

Ignorance is not bliss. "How many times do you have to have sex to get pregnant?"

"How young can a girl get pregnant?"

"Is it true you can't get pregnant if you do it standing up?"

Bliss may not be the feeling of a girl who finds herself pregnant because she had the wrong answers to those questions. (These are a sample of queries submitted anonymously to sex education instructors.)

Educating parents of adolescents to understand sexuality, and how to rid youths of that ignorance, is the goal of a four-session seminar to be conducted by Catholic Family Service, Inc. The first session will be at 7 p.m. Monday at St. Anthony's Catholic Church and will continue on Monday nights.

Ms. Rosa Fierro of Amarillo will be presenting the seminar which will include topics of parent-teen communication, understanding your sexual self and helping teens understand themselves, sexual activity and responsibility, and sexuality in perspective.

Catholic Family Service will conduct the parent seminars in several Panhandle towns, according to Ms. Fierro, and follow with youth seminars in each town.

She supports the need for education with data from a legislative report by a select committee on teenage pregnancy. The report shows that of girls between 15 and 19, one-third are sexually active; of boys between 15 and 19, half are sexually active; and one in nine girls in that age bracket become pregnant.

The study also revealed that one-fifth of the pregnancies were conceived within the first month of initial intercourse and one-fourth within six months of "the first time."

In the Panhandle area alone during 1980, 1,448 girls between 15 and 19 had babies and 10 girls under 15 delivered. Although the Panhandle has the highest fertility rate (births per 1,000 women of that childbearing age), the Permian Basin area has more births numerically in Texas.

Ms. Fierro said her agency wants to promote the family as the primary source of sex education, and to insure that it is education of fertility awareness.

Three of her nieces have had illegitimate children, Ms. Fierro said, so the issue of teen parenthood is close. "How well prepared were my brothers and sisters to confront the issues?" she asks.

June Rudd, Hereford Schools nurse, adds that the issue is not completely moral or judgemental toward teen mothers. She said there are cold, hard facts of life to confront when a teenager becomes pregnant.

"Some of these kids don't become sexually active in high school, it starts in junior high and sometimes in grade school," she said.

"If they start going steady in fifth grade, then by high school they have explored all the new things except 'going all the way,'" is her analysis of part of the problem.

When girls who think they are pregnant come to her, she said they are often scared to death.

"I think there are many of these kids who are so surprised," she noted. "They really don't think it can happen to them."

Ms. Fierro echoes that. "In talking with these adolescents, they actually consider 'hope' as a method (of birth control)."

Both contend that many times girls and guys actually do not know the mechanics of sex and do not realize that their sexual activity is intercourse which could lead to pregnancy.

About half of the sexually active teen women used no contraceptive at first intercourse and an additional 18 percent used withdrawal — a very unreliable form of birth control. On a consistent basis of practicing birth control, 27 percent never use contraception, 39 percent do sometimes and 34 percent always do (including the ineffective withdrawal method.)

Ms. Rudd supports that consequences are physical with information from the legislative report.

—Maternal death is 60 percent higher for teenagers delivering than for counterparts in the 20 to 24 age bracket.

—Infant mortality is 2 to 2.5 percent greater for deliveries by teenagers than that of women in their early 20s.

—Premature births are more likely to occur in teens, partly due to the lack of prenatal care which is too expensive for an adolescent, or is often avoided until late in the pregnancy.

—Teen mothers are seven times more likely to commit suicide.

—Teen mothers are more likely to abuse and neglect their children.

The future of teenage mothers is another socio-economic problem. Without a high school diploma, work that pays enough to support a child is hard to find.

—Teenage mothers make up 15 percent of all Texas recipients of Aid to Families (See IGNORANCE, Page 2A)

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says frustration is having no one to blame but yourself.

Too many meetings are held each month for no better reason than that it's been a month since the last one.

Important elections for school trustees, city commissioners and hospital board directors are to be held April 2, and we urge citizens to cast an informed vote.

There's another important election, one that could have far-reaching effects, scheduled next Thursday but most of us are not eligible to vote. Employees of Swift Independent Packing Co. are scheduled to vote March 31 on the question of union representation.

We don't pretend to know the feelings of the Swift Independent employees on this matter. And, we sure haven't had any communications with either the union or the company. In many instances, when we've contacted either for simple information, they have to call Chicago or some place — where the questions may or may not be answered.

But, after the experiences of the Armour shutdown, we think a rejection of union representation would best serve the interests of this community, including the SPCO employees.

For more opinion on this matter, read the guest editorial submitted by the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce board. (Page 4A).

State Sen. Bill Sarpalius has gained a lot of attention across the state because of his successful efforts in passing a drunk-driving bill in the Texas Senate. But the former Hereford Democrat, now residing in Canyon, is active in other legislation.

One of these made the news Saturday morning. Sarpalius has introduced legislation that would make Buffalo Lake a lake again by creating a water district out of Randall, Potter and Deaf Smith Counties.

The Amarillo newspaper reported Saturday that an official of the U.S. Interior Department has suggested transfer of ownership to a local water district. Commissioners in the three counties approved resolutions on forming the water district, Deaf Smith County commissioners had some reservations about the costs involved, however.

In addition to that legislation, Sarpalius introduced a bill that would require the Department of Energy to obtain a permit from the Texas Water Commission before drilling test holes with the intention of storing high-level nuclear waste.

Sarpalius said he has followed the DOE meetings with interest and has testified at hearings on the state level. He thinks the DOE is taking every precaution but says protecting the water is his number one concern.

Livestock rounds out car down payment

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) - It was the tail end of the deal that finally swung a new station wagon for a 68-year-old farmer.

Lyal Schlotterbeck, of Tacoma, couldn't quite come up with the necessary down payment when he offered his 1982 Honda and some cash for a new $13,000 Subaru station wagon, so he threw in a cow, her four-month-old calf and a pregnant heifer.

Tacoma Subaru salesman Joe Spaulding said he asked Schlotterbeck if he had anything else to round up as a down payment when the used car and cash bid came up short.

After some dickering, Schlotterbeck milked $1,300 in credit from his cattle and a payment schedule that he could handle.

The down payment might be a bit odd, Spaulding conceded, but it was "what it took to put the deal together" a week ago.

Shootout, stabbing bloodies Ft. Worth bar

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - One man was jailed and police sought another today following a shootout and stabbing at a northside bar here that left the club's owner dead and at least five others injured.

A 20-year-old man was being held in city jail on a charge of suspicion of murder, police said.

Investigators planned to question another man injured in the gun battle that erupted after a customer at the tavern was refused a beer, police said.

"Blood was all over the place," said

Sgt. Raymond Cairns. "It was an absolute mess."

Joe Jimenez, 43, the owner and bartender at the Waterhole on North Main Street, was pronounced dead at the scene. Jimenez had been shot three times in the chest and once in the back and sustained numerous stab wounds in his face, neck and stomach, officers said.

The shooting broke out after one man, who had been drinking heavily, asked for another beer and was refused by the bartender, officers said. A shot was fired, setting off a gun battle that may have involved three or more weapons, according to police.

Two of the injured were taken to Harris Hospital. Josie Jayme, about 40, was in stable condition with multiple stab wounds and Manuel Valle, 46, in good condition with a gunshot wound to the hand, police said.

Treated at John Peter Smith Hospital were Felix Cruz, 47, in serious condition with a gunshot wound to the neck.

Two other victims, a 41-year-old man and a 39-year-old man, were admitted to John Peter Smith in serious condition with gunshot wounds, officials said.

Balloon bouquets

banned from school

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) - Balloon bouquets have been declared a bust at Shimek Elementary School where PTA officials banned them from birthday parties, claiming they break up classes and breed jealousy.

Letters announcing the action have been sent by the school's Parent-Teacher Organization to parents, the Iowa City school board, administrators of other local public schools and a local company, Balloons Over Iowa, which recently delivered a balloon bouquet to the school as part of an in-class birthday party.

The letter, sent earlier this week, claims the bouquets disrupt educational activities and "create resentment in classmates who do not publicly receive gifts."

It also claims students are a "captive audience" during such deliveries and are, in effect, subjected to "subtle advertising."

Pioneer Clark's body returned home

SEATTLE (AP) - The body of artificial heart recipient Barney Clark has returned home, as his family prepared for his funeral Tuesday and doctors made plans to pay their last respects to the medical pioneer.

Clark, of Des Moines in suburban Seattle, lived 112 days on the artificial heart at the Utah medical center, until his death Wednesday night.

Bradley Fey of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Seattle said funeral services for Clark will be held Tuesday at 2 p.m., with burial at Washington Memorial Park in Federal Way.

Kansas governor's daughter found safe

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) - Gov. John Carlin's 18-year-old daughter was found safe at a bar Friday night, shortly after she was reported to have been kidnapped by a caller who demanded a $100,000 ransom, the governor's aides said.

Carlin called the report a "hoax" that managed initially to fool him and concern members of the state Highway Patrol and Bureau of Investigation. Both groups launched a search for Lisa Carlin.

Police and the governor became concerned after a caller telephoned several private citizens in the Pittsburg, Kan., area, 160 miles southeast of Wichita, to report that Miss Carlin had been kidnapped and to demand the ransom, police said.

After his daughter was found, Carlin made a brief statement.

"I don't have anything to say other than to confirm what you obviously know at this point that it was all a hoax ...," he said from Wichita.

Miss Carlin was paged at the bar, Pryor's, by Ellen Nesselrode, Carlin's appointment's secretary.

"I'm all right," said Miss Carlin.

President stands by Adelman, says purge doesn't look bad

By MAUREEN SANTINI Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan, focusing on personnel problems in his administration, stands by his controversial arms control nominee, Kenneth L. Adelman, and rejects the notion that five new resignations at the Environmental Protection Agency look bad.

Administration officials, who asked not to be named, have said Reagan will shift from his current position of holding out for removing all Soviet missiles targeted on Western Europe in return for canceling deployment of U.S. missiles scheduled in December.

Instead, the officials say, Reagan will propose an interim solution as the only practical way to stop the Soviets from adding to the arsenal of more than 600 missiles they have targeted on NATO allies.

Just a half-hour before Reagan appeared in the White House press briefing room Friday, his chief deputy press secretary, Larry Speakes, announced that five more resignations of EPA employees - including acting administrator John Hernandez - had been accepted by the administration.

Reagan, who has nominated former EPA administrator William Ruckelshaus to take over the embattled agency again, said of the resignations: "I don't think it necessarily looks bad."

He conceded no problems at the EPA despite the latest resignations, the resignation two weeks ago of EPA Administrator Anne McGill-Burford, and the revelations coming out of half-a-dozen congressional inquiries.

"No proof of any wrongdoing had been presented in all of this fuss as yet," he said.

He said those who resigned feel "that they can contribute by leaving."

A DECADE OF DEFICITS Federal Budget Bottom Lines, 1973-83

While the 1984 budget to be presented by President Reagan is expected to put the federal government deeper in the hole than ever before, it will be continuing a lengthening tradition of red ink. Dates are for fiscal years.

Reagan rips House's Demo budget plan

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan today stepped up his campaign against a House-passed Democratic budget plan, saying it would put the brakes on the economic recovery and send the country back to the era of high interest rates.

"It's this simple: if you like the 21 percent prime interest rate, 18 percent mortgage rates, double-digit inflation and sky's-the-limit tax increases of two years ago, you'll love their budget because that's what it would bring back," Reagan said.

In his weekly radio address, live from the Oval Office, Reagan said the Democrats' plan - approved Wednesday - would force deep cuts in defense spending and repeal of this year's income tax cuts, as well as inflation-indexed tax cuts due to begin in 1985.

He said elimination of the tax cuts would cost a median family $3,550 over the next five years.

"It's not right for them to overtax you just so they can spend more, and they do want to spend more, a lot more," Reagan said.

He said the Democratic proposal "would turn back the clock to the high inflation, high interest rate nightmare of 1980 by giving a green light to at least 10 brand new government spending programs at the same time it would allow a program of crucial importance to our citizens, Medicare, to go bankrupt."

Reagan said that with his plan in place, "I believe interest rates can, should and will go lower."

The president said Americans should not be spectators in the struggle over the budget, and should tell their congressmen "not to turn back the clock and squander America's future."

The president's discussion of the Democratic budget came a day after he focused on personnel problems in his administration during a brief news conference.

On Friday, Reagan vowed to stand by his controversial arms control nominee, Kenneth L. Adelman, and rejected the notion that five new resignations at the Environmental Protection Agency look bad.

House may outlaw tent cities

By KATHRYN BAKER Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - A ban on camps in Texas' roadside parks was debated by lawmakers who were told that last year's "Tent City" near Houston was inhabited not by needy homeless, but by vagrants and criminals.

Rep. Tony Polumbo, D-Houston, presented to the House Transportation Committee on Wednesday a measure that would outlaw camping in roadside rest stops operated by the state.

Houston's "Tent City" was closed down last month by health officials. At one time during its nine-month existence, about 300 people lived in the park, which measures less than two acres.

"Tent City" gained national media exposure when its residents claimed they were displaced victims of "Reaganomics."

Polumbo said news reports about the camp were meant to "kick Texas" because of its good economic condition compared to other areas of the country. The international reports, he said, were used as propaganda that democracy does not work.

"Were these people truly down and out and needy?" Polumbo asked his colleagues. "Should we allow our roadside parks to be used for this purpose?"

Polumbo's proposal was referred to a subcommittee.

Harris County Sheriff's Captain Kenneth Berry testified that by the time "Tent City" was closed on Feb. 7, four people had died - two drowned in the nearby river, one burned to death in his tent, and one died of pneumonia.

"I feel like these people needed a place to stay and were looking for help" at first, said Berry, but he added, "In my opinion, the criminal element moved in and obviously the good people moved out."

Betty Cook, who told the legislators she represented "the do-gooders," operates Sheltering Arms, a volunteer-run home for the needy five miles away from "tent city." She said only three of the "Tent City" residents applied for space in her facility.

Two, she said, a father and son, were kicked out for breaking a house rule against drinking alcohol on the premises. She said the third was turned away because he said he had no intention of looking for work.

"We are kind to people," she said, "but we tell them up front what the rules are."

Sheldon school Superintendent Lloyd Dickens said at one point his small district was faced with 100 extra pupils from "tent city," which would have required the hiring of four more schoolteachers.

Because of the transience of the "Tent City" residents, he said, "you might have 100 students one week and only 25 the next."

"We had a potential situation out there that was unbelievable," Polumbo summed up.

Man to be retried on smuggling charge

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) - Prosecutors say a Dayton, Ohio, man will be retried on charges of smuggling aliens into the United States in connection with an operation that resulted in death for five Salvadorans last fall.

Walter Harris is charged in a 13-count federal grand jury indictment of conspiring to smuggle aliens into the country and of smuggling aliens across the Texas-Mexico border.

His trial was declared a mistrial Wednesday after the seven-man, five-woman jury told U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela it could not reach a unanimous verdict.

The jury, which began deliberations Tuesday afternoon, reported that 10 people had voted to convict Harris and two had voted for acquittal.

Vela set a May 2 pretrial hearing in the second trial for Harris.

Four Salvadorans suffocated Oct. 4, 1982, in an abandoned 18-wheel tractor-trailer that had been used to transport 26 aliens to Edinburg from the Mexican border 15 miles south.

The aliens told authorities they had paid up to $1,500 each for the ill-fated ride.

Secure financial future requires adequate plan

For many people, the word retirement conjures up tranquil days spent fishing, traveling or involved in a favorite hobby. But a secure financial future in most cases requires a good pension plan.

Under the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981, a number of tax incentives are allowed to Individual Retirement Arrangement (IRA) and self-employed Keogh plans.

Workers who are already covered by a pension plan may qualify to set up an IRA or to make deductible voluntary employee contributions to their company plan.

An IRA is a savings program that allows you to put money aside for your retirement. Contributions to it are tax deductible and earnings are not taxed until they are distributed to you, generally upon retirement when you would have a lower taxable income. Workers covered by pensions and noncovered workers can contribute 100 percent of their compensation that is includable in gross income, up to a maximum of $2,000 to an IRA.

Basically, the only requirement for setting up an IRA is that you earn compensation during the year. Wages, salaries, commissions, tips, professional fees, bonuses, and other amounts you get for providing personal service are compensation. Earnings and profits from property, such as interest and dividend income, cannot be included.

You can make payments to your IRA at any time during the tax year. The last day you may pay is the due date for filing your tax return (including extension) for that year. For most people this will be April 15, 1983. If your due date for filing is April 15 and you add money to your IRA between January 1 and April 15, you may choose to have the payment considered part of your 1982 contribution (and deduct it on your 1982 tax return) or part of your 1983 contribution (to be deducted on your 1983 tax return).

There are three kinds of IRA's—individual retirement accounts, individual retirement annuities, and individual retirement bonds. The individual retirement accounts and annuities are available through several sources such as banks, insurance companies, and mutual funds. The sale of U.S. Individual Retirement Bonds, however, was suspended, effective April 30, 1982.

You should compare the individual accounts and annuities to choose the one that is the best for you. Some things to look out for are how much the fees are, what the interest rate is and how much you will have in your account when you are ready to retire—and be sure all promises are in writing.

If you are married, there is a type of IRA that may be of interest to you. It's called a spousal IRA and it allows you to set up an IRA for yourself and one for your non-working spouse.

The maximum amount deductible each year for contributions to an IRA and spousal IRA is $2,250. However, contributions are no longer required to be equal for husband and wife. This means the $2,250 may be split between the accounts in any way as long as no more than $2,000 goes to either account. You can take a deduction for a payment to your spouse's IRA only if you file a joint return for the tax year for which the payment is made.

Another type of IRA, the Simplified Employee Pension (SEP), permits your employer to contribute each year to your IRA up to 15 percent of your compensation or $15,000, whichever is less. Such contributions must be included in your gross income for the tax year; however, they are deductible on your income tax return.

Self-employed taxpayers like accountants, farmers, and free-lance writers can deduct 15 percent of their earned income to a maximum of $15,000. Special rules apply if income in excess of $100,000 is used to determine the contribution.

If you employ other people in your business, you must include all employees who have three or more years of service. A year of service is a 12-month period in which the employee works at least 1,000 hours starting with the day the employee begins working.

Generally, a Keogh plan is set up as a trust, custodial account, insurance, or through the purchase of U.S. Retirement Bonds; however, the sale of these bonds was suspended effective April 30, 1982. Normally, the trustee must be a bank; however, under certain IRS requirements an entity other than a bank may act as a trustee.

You may elect to receive your retirement benefits in annuity form, in a lump sum, or installments. ## What is it?

Unknown planet keeps astronomers guessing

WASHINGTON (NEA) — For more than a century astronomers have speculated that there is something floating about in outer space that tugs at the planets Neptune and Uranus, causing the massive heavenly bodies to deviate merrily and randomly from what should be mathematically precise orbits.

But what? Some say it may be a small star, 50 billion miles from earth. Others think it is a black hole, 100 billion miles away. Then there are those who claim that there is another planet out there, a Planet X, waiting in the crowded reaches of the cosmos for discovery and identification.

Now some astronomers who subscribe to the latter notion think they may at long last be on the verge of proving it. Well, at least somewhat. Scientists at the U.S. Naval Observatory say they may soon be able to point with certainty to the area of the sky where Planet X may dwell.

That wouldn't be the same as discovery, of course. But the astronomers say it would narrow the search appreciably. If that happens the scientists could concentrate their efforts, and their telescopes, and they say Planet X, the 10th in the solar system, might be found in a few years.

Oh, the happy thought of it. Astronomers have been actively hunting for Planet X since the turn of the century. Some of them have been ridiculed for it. All of them have so far wasted their time. No one knows how many have died in disappointment after lifetimes of fruitless looking.

Percival Lowell was the first to go that way. He was the eminent American astronomer who is thought to have conceived the idea of Planet X. He believed in it so much that in 1905 he used his own money to inaugurate a search from his personal observatory in the mountains of Arizona.

Lowell died 10 years later, never having seen a hint of the planet. The effort continued, however, and in 1930 it was to find success of another sort. That year a young Lowell Observatory employee named Clyde Tombaugh discovered an elusive, very distant planet that was to be named Pluto.

So Lowell was partly vindicated. His search led to a new planet, but not the one he was looking for. Pluto proved to be too small to influence Neptune and Uranus. It is in fact a trifle of a planet. Current calculations suggest that it is only slightly larger than the earth's moon.

Hence the search for Planet X has continued, to these many years. And it has recently been more or less headquartered in the Naval Observatory. There astronomers Thomas Van Flandern and Robert Herrington are trying to find evidence of the body with computers rather than telescopes.

They say it's like looking for lint in a storm. Herrington creates theoretical models of the solar system, inserting Planet X in various places, to see if anything agrees with what is already known about the heavens. Van Flandern does the same thing with complex mathematical computations.

The astronomers report they are looking exclusively in the southern hemisphere. And they believe the planet will be found beyond Pluto, perhaps as many as five billion miles away. Herrington thinks the planet is of intermediate size, or three to five times the mass of earth.

Right now, to repeat, they are not looking for the planet itself. They are only looking for its neighborhood. If it's found the scientists say they will ask the observatory to finance a visual search in the southern hemisphere. Herrington says New Zealand would be as good a place as any.

And the astronomers add that this may be the year. They say they should know in the next 11 months if they can locate the window to Planet X. If they can, it is not at all out of the question that the 10th planet could be found and celebrated by the middle of the decade.

Actually, the scientists may have to find the window in the next 11 months. Either that or give up the search. They work for the bureaucracy, which is to say they have budgetary limitations; Herrington says there may not be enough money to continue the program into 1984.

So the Naval Observatory astronomers are working hard against the deadline. And they are unshakably convinced that they are on the right celestial track. Their blackboard mathematics indicate that the planet exists, and many miles of computer observations generally agree.

In fact, Herrington thinks Planet X may have already been found. Albeit, in ignorance. He says hundreds of thousands of telescopes are pointed at the stars these days, thus someone, somewhere, has probably looked without knowing at one of the great cosmic secrets of the century.

Legislators call for lower interest rate ceiling

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas bankers say the credit card business — even with a 24 percent limit on interest rates — is a tough one, but several lawmakers say the state should roll the interest ceiling back to 18 percent.

"If lending institutions can't make money at 18 percent, they certainly are bad managers," Rep. Smith Gilley, D-Greenville, told the House Financial Institutions Committee on Wednesday.

The committee is considering several bills that would force down interest rates on credit transactions. Gilley compared the 1981 law raising the limit from 18 to 24 percent to a recent gang rape in Massachusetts.

The 1981 law "allowed lenders of this state to perform an act on consumers that might be similar to what happened on a pool table in Massachusetts a few weeks ago," he said.

But Lamar Ball of Southwest Bancshares in Houston said the bank credit business — such as VISA and Master Card — are risky ventures that have not been money-makers over the past five years. The 1981 loss was $10 million, he said.

Armed with a series of charts, Ball testified that Southwest Bancshares, a bank holding company, has $250 million worth of credit card business.

"Our costs are extremely high," he said, adding that three major Texas banks' credit card operations lost money over the past five years.

Gilley, one of several legislators testifying for a lower interest rate maximum, and Texas Consumer Association lobbyist Jim Boyle complained that bank card rates have not reflected drops in other rates.

Banks have "callously refused to lower rates to reflect their lower costs," Boyle said.

"They will attempt to get you to focus on their right hand while their left hand is picking your wallet," he testified.

Ball testified that most bank cards have been charging 21 percent interest. Some have dropped as low as 18 percent in recent days, a decline Boyle said was due to the pending legislation.

Committee Chairman Bill Coody, D-Weatherford, who has filed three bills to knock down interest rates, sent the bills to subcommittee.

Coody was unsympathetic to the bankers' arguments.

"I wept at the thought of that for five years you people lost money. I couldn't hardly sleep last night," he said sarcastically.

Ball said it would be difficult for the committee to "reconcile the emotions related to high interest rates and the business case I have presented here today."

Purdue University economics professor William Dunkelberg, testifying on behalf of the Texas Retailers Association, said the credit card business is "a very expensive deal and it's very hard to operate, even with these kinds of interest rates."

"If we lock ourselves into an 18 percent ceiling, we could have some major difficulties in the next two years," he testified. "You can't make money at 18 percent today."

But Boyle blamed banks for being unresponsive to drops in other interest rates. The prime interest rate was at 20.5 percent when the credit card ceiling was raised by lawmakers in 1981. The prime is now at 10.5 percent, according to Boyle.

"One major reason that rates are being kept at such a high level is that large bank holding companies are worried about bad loans that they have made to energy companies and to countries like Mexico and Argentina," said Boyle.

He said major Texas banks have enjoyed "splendid returns" in the past year.

"It's Getting Late! Don't Forget Your I.R.A.!"

Although you have until April 15th to make your current contribution to your Individual Retirement Account, now is the time to start planning for how much you're going to put away this year.

Frances Berry, our retirement plan advisor, here at Hereford State Bank, can give you some pretty convincing information on I.R.A.'s, and she can show you how, with a little discipline, you can retire with a lot of money!

Frances can design an I.R.A. to fit your budget. She can show you how fast your tax-deferred dollars will build and grow for you, and she can tell you about the advantages of personal service and insured safety when you open your I.R.A. with our bank!

It's getting late, so let's get together and work out a program to fit your budget and save you a lot of money on taxes. Your I.R.A. is one thing that you can't afford to forget.

Plant vote affects all

On March 31, the employees of Swift Independent Packing Company in Hereford will vote on the question of union representation. We urge the employees to vote against the union.

Our reason is simple and straight forward. The union on the ballot Local 540 of the United Food and Commercial Workers, is the same union that was involved in the shut-down of the plant when it was owned by Armour & Co. For over a year prior to the shut-down in October, 1981, Armour made clear that it needed changes in its union contract in order to remain open. When these pleas were ignored by the union, Armour did exactly what it said: It shut down the plant.

What troubles us the most is that the union leaders made this decision on their own. They did not allow the employees to vote on the matter. It is one thing for employees to vote themselves out of jobs. It may not make too much sense, but at least it's their own decision. It's another thing altogether when the union leaders take it upon themselves to make a decision of this importance.

The Armour closing was a tremendous blow to our entire area. The plant was our largest employer, pouring millions of dollars into the local economy. While the shutdown hurt the community, it was a very real tragedy for many of the Armour employees, some of whom had worked at the plant since it opened in 1968. Many people were unable to find work and remained unemployed. Those fortunate enough to land other jobs often found themselves working for far less than they had earned working at Armour or would have earned had the UFCW accepted Armour's proposed contract changes. It is difficult for any family to suddenly cut back on the lifestyle they had enjoyed for years. Even worse, was the many employees who had to leave our community to find work. Most of them have not returned and never will.

The union which bears so much responsibility for the Armour closing is back again knocking at the door. We do not suggest that the union will do the same thing to Swift. But, we do think that this particular union has lost its right to a second chance. In our daily life, we have found it is a wise policy to stay clear of people who have harmed us in the past. If I buy a used car that turns out to be a lemon, I am not likely to buy my next car from the same dealer. This is just common sense and it applies equally to UFCW Local 540.

The election at Swift is a matter of great concern to our community. Our city and the surrounding area need companies like Swift Independent. Swift has brought back to our area what we lost when Armour closed down. It is now our largest employer. We were fortunate that Swift reopened only 15 months after the Armour shutdown. But, we cannot rely on good fortune to secure our future. If Swift ever closed the plant, it is likely to be a permanent loss from which we will not recover.

We want other major employers to locate here in Hereford. It is the only way our community can continue to grow. Bringing in a union that has caused so much harm to our area is a step in the wrong direction. UFCW Local 540 may have a conveniently short memory, but we do not and we hope the employees of Swift Independent do not either.

VIEWPOINT

Letters to the editor

Dear Editor:
In that we are coming down to the short rows on the nuclear waste issue, I would like to submit excerpts from a letter I sent to William G. Nikolis of the D.O.E. in May, 1982. The points are still valid these 10 months later, and many others have come to light.

Dear Bill:
Thank you for your call this past week, and we appreciate the spirit with which you and Dr. Ted Taylor are listening to the concerns of the people of this area.

There is surely a crisis in our farm economy, and some has lost hope in our ability to recover as a viable, profitable agricultural county. Many of our forebearers must have felt the same way in the 1930s when prices were even more depressed than now, relative to the other sectors of the economy, and a dust bowl sapped the will of even the sturdiest. Fortunately for those of us who followed and who have prospered during the past 50 years in this highly productive area, they held on, and did not sell their future for a mess of pottage.

While careful conservation of our water and the biological life of our soil is certainly a must, we in Deaf Smith County, and in the Palo Duro Basin generally, nevertheless will be important in the production of food and fiber during the 1980s. El Chichon volcano in Mexico has put 100 times the ash into the upper atmosphere than did Mt. St. Helens and other eruptions are possible in the near term. This, plus the slight cooling from the sun that has been gradually occurring since 1940 could shorten the growing period for crops in Russia and Canada, providing the U.S. with outstanding export potential in the near term.

The majority of the people of this area have not lost their faith in themselves, or in their ability to make a contribution in a constructive manner within our free enterprise system.

As you may know, a few "leading citizens" in Clovis organized to try to get the "improved economy" from the national treasury through the devastation of an area 200 miles by 70 miles only to find over 1000 irate Curry County citizens boycotting their businesses, and venting their anger on this group.

Frankly, we do not want that to happen in Hereford. You have perhaps noted the Associated Press article of March 4, 1982 about Wilsonville Illinois. Both the Environmental Protection Agency officials and the officials of Earthline, a subsidiary of SCA Services, a Boston Corporation, ridiculed the local citizens who were concerned that a waste dump for toxic chemicals planned for a nearby shaft would be unsafe. The local concern was called "emotionalism" and the people were given total assurance that the disposal site would be safe for at least 500 years. Less than one year later, the toxic waste had seeped into the water table, and now there are over $225 million in damage suits. A community believed data not proven.

You may also have noted the Wall Street Journal article of April 28, 1982 in which it was reported that the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington D.C. ruled that the method of assessing the environmental hazard from radioactive waste from nuclear power plants is invalid, and that "they fail to allow for consideration or uncertainties" about whether radioactive wastes will leak out once they are stored permanently.

Which brings us to the point in question. The U.S. Senate recently approved a three stage plan for coping with the radioactive wastes from the nation's nuclear reactors which would involve surface storage for "a century or more". During this time, the uranium and plutonium could be reprocessed. We made this point to you when this issue first surfaced again.

I say surfaced again, because we fought this same battle in 1978, and for 3 1/2 years, the issue seemed to be moot. And then, after very careful work with certain political representatives and others over this period of time, your organization was ready to act. Unfortunately, even our local and area press was caught totally by surprise. In a free society, this is totally unacceptable procedure, and this point was clearly made to you and the others who held the briefing session here earlier this year.

Prominent geologists have, four years ago, stated they did not feel long term waste would be stored here, and most of us agreed. Our objection is the continued waste of our tax money, and the promises that have been made in terms of dollar benefit to our local economy. Past experience in other areas reveals that only a tiny fraction of the total federal expenditures really reaches the local community selected for a dump site. It makes tantalizing listening to those who are hurting in this economy, but it simply does not stand in the light of past performance.

To sum up, we could not be convinced of the safety in transportation through our town and by our farmsteads of heavy traffic bearing nuclear waste from all over the nation. Nor are we convinced about the safety of long term storage under the two water tables. The half-life of Plutonium 232 is 24,000 years. While we believe the

We want to communicate quite clearly, now, that both political and legal actions will be taken as they become appropriate to see that this fertile agricultural region never becomes a nuclear waste pit. We have a good community with much to offer in the creation of goods and services, as well as the finest agricultural products in our nation. We will fight to keep it that way, and create jobs and a better future through the realm of private enterprise, not government promises that simply cannot be backed up by science at this time.

Sincerely,
Frank Ford

Four pounds of Dioxin caused a U.S. taxpayers' expenditure of over $30 million in times beach, Mo. If the DOE persists in this ultimate expression of contempt for the agricultural importance of our area, it would not be unreasonable to collect hundreds of millions of dollars in up-front indemnity in this county alone, and the money should come from the users of nuclear power in the Northeast who seem so intent upon making our area a nuclear garbage dump.

WHEN ALL THE CANARIES LAND

I was following a small truck across a city on my way to speak. I was late as usual, and was getting more and more angry at the truck. The road was too narrow to pass and the truck was slow. To make matters even worse, everytime the truck stopped at a stop sign or a traffic light the driver would jump out and beat the sides of the truck with a two-by-four.

This strange behavior became so intriguing to me I forgot how late I was. I had to know why the guy was beating on the sides of the truck with a two-by-four. When the truck stopped for the next light, I got out and asked him.

He said, "Well, I am hauling two tons of canaries and I only have a one-ton truck. I have to keep at least one ton of them flying or they will overload my truck".

Being a foolosopher, I had to contemplate on how the canaries symbolized life. We all have two tons of problems on a one-ton truck. The secret to life may be keeping about one ton of our problems up in the air while we deal with the ones that have landed. Sometimes all of the canaries land at the same time and we are overloaded.

The trick is keeping one ton in the air. We can never get all of them flying, but if we can keep enough of them up there we can at least function.

So how do we keep em flying?

Humor helps. It is hard for all of the canaries to land while we are laughing. The louder the laugh, the more canaries we scare. Look for the funny in life. Run from the somber. Serious folks let all of their canaries land and then borrow someone else's.

Sing. Canaries hate to hear humans sing. The human voice in song drives them to flight. Sometimes singing can keep two tons of them in the air.

When all else fails, sometimes we must beat on the sides of the truck with verbal two-by-fours. We all know the words to use. Bang on the truck.

When they all land, say, "All of my canaries landed". Then laugh while folks try to figure that one out.

Bootleg Philosopher

Secret no fun unless shared

Editor's Note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Deaf Smith grass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek discusses lie detector machines this week.

Dear Editor:
Because too many people in his administration are leaking news and he doesn't know who they are, President Reagan has clamped down and announced that if necessary lie detector tests will be given to find the culprits.

If anybody refuses to take the test, he says, that'll be grounds for firing.

I think I know what's causing some of the leaks. It's human nature. You see, the people in Washington are no different from the people in Hereford. Both recognize that a secret is no fun unless you can let somebody else in on it.

But what I started out to discuss is the lie detector machine. If it's accurate enough that the President would rely on it, then there's another, more far-reaching use for it.

You've seen the time clock up in the corner of your TV screen during the last 2 minutes of a football game, showing how many seconds are left.

All right. What we need is a lie detector machine hooked up to a politician as he speaks on television. Up in the right hand corner of your screen will flash the results at the end of each comment, reporting whether he's telling the truth or lying.

At the end, a computer will flash the total results Truth, 3. Half-truth, 8. Lie, 14. Non-answer, 38. Or whatever the score is.

Any politician who refuses to be hooked up to the lie detector machine probably will have a better chance of being re-elected. Use of the machine on columnists is unthinkable.

Yours Faithfully,
J.A.

Property taxes, long the major source of income for American towns and cities, have declined in importance in the last decade. A Census Bureau study of the sources of municipal general revenues totaling $105.4 billion for fiscal 1981 showed property taxes accounting for 22 percent, down from 33 percent 10 years earlier. The share from federal, state and other government sources had risen to 36 percent, from 23 percent in 1971 to take over first place. Other taxes are primarily on sales and incomes.

In Sudbury, Ontario

Where the jobless rate is 30 percent

By Tom Tiede

SUDBURY, Ontario (NEA) — The other day a woman called a social welfare official in this Canadian town to report that her husband had beaten her up. She said he had been laid off from his work, and when he came home he punched her so hard that he had loosened one of her teeth.

"Shall I have him arrested?" the official asked.

"No," the woman replied, "just get him another job."

The call sounded something like a bad routine from early burlesque. But unfortunately it was no joke. And neither was it unusual. The economic recession has idled at least three out of every 10 workers in Sudbury, and the situation has reached and passed the point of desperation.

Specifically, the Canadian government says 30 percent of Sudbury's workforce is unemployed. That means 24,200 here are in the streets. It also means that Sudbury has the highest jobless rate of any city in North America, in the Northern Hemisphere, and maybe in the industrial world.

Thus some unemployed men are beating their wives. The woman on the phone said that her husband was a good sort, but he was scared. "He didn't mean to hit me. Afterward he kept saying he was sorry. He is 50 years old, he's never been out of work, and he just doesn't know what's happening."

Nobody here knows what's happening, actually. But they all have a fair idea when it started. Sudbury is a mining town, it sits atop vast reaches of nickel and copper, and the community nightmare began in 1977 when there was a dramatic decline in the industrial demand for ore.

The decline in demand forced a decline in production, and that in turn led to the first of many firings and furloughs. The largest company in town, Inco Ltd., tried to weather the crisis by shuffling staffs, and cutting expenses, but the ore continued to stockpile rather than sell.

Then, to make matters worse, some Inco investments turned sour. The firm lost untold millions in Central American ventures, for example, some of which had to be completely abandoned. And in 1981, the company reported its first corporate loss in 50 years: more than $469 million.

Last year the $469 million loss grew by a factor of three, and Inco was compelled to close its Sudbury operation. The situation deteriorated further when another big firm, Falconbridge Ltd., also shut down its local mining activities. Suddenly, more than 13,000 people were thrown out of work.

Unemployment was 22 percent then. And growing. The loss of salaries cut retail sales by 15 to 20 percent, and the drop in general business resulted in a 60 percent increase in the number of area bankruptcies. During the autumn the jobless rate climbed four, five and six

Airline barred from flying

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has temporarily barred Cuba's national airline from flying in American airspace after two of its flights intentionally deviated from the prescribed flight routing.

State Department spokesman John Hughes said Friday that the incidents occurred on March 4 and 5 when the Cubana de Aviacion flights traveling to and from Canada departed from the flight pattern and flew near Griffiss Air Base outside Syracuse, N.Y.

Hughes said the airline has been barred from overflying American airspace for two weeks, effective Friday.

Some of us age like a vintage wine; most, we suspect, just get a little loose in the cork.

The romanticist listens for the rustle of spring; the realist keeps an ear bent for the crinkle of folding money.

Then, just before Christmas, the town made dismal history. Unemployment reached an official 33 percent. It has stayed in that vicinity ever since. The rate is triple that of Canada as a whole, it is likewise at least double that of any other city of the size (160,000 people) on the American continent.

Naturally, the effects have been harsh. Sudbury is in some respects shattered. Twenty to 30 home mortgages are foreclosed each month, the market price for real estate holdings has plunged 10 percent since 1981, and the loss in retail sales this year could be more than $100 million.

Human suffering has been somewhat less statistical because Canadians have a relatively generous social welfare system. Unemployment compensation is $200 a week for 52 weeks, everyone is entitled to free medical care, and families with children receive automatic child welfare checks.

That doesn't mean things are pleasant for the unemployed. Ernie St. Jean, a family counselor, says wife beating is only one indication of the frustration in Sudbury. Marital problems of every kind are on the rise here, and so is alcohol consumption, drug use and criminal activity.

What's more, things could get worse. Much worse. The unemployment compensation for most miners will run out by summer, hence more thousands of people may have to rely solely on welfare. Twenty-five hundred families are already on the dole, and the guess is that the figure may double.

The unemployment rate may also rise further. For at least 4,500 more jobs here are considered vulnerable. Mel Soucie, a government analyst, says that if the mining market doesn't improve, and bankruptcies continue, one out of every two people in Sudbury may be unemployed by next year.

That would mean more frustration. And more loose teeth. It might also mean more introspection; the only good news in this community is that church attendance has increased measurably, and the woman who was beaten up by her husband says he now sits right there in the first pew.

PIK opens capacity for transport system

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's transportation system appears to have a substantial surplus capacity in 1983 to handle agricultural commodities for export and from one area to another under the government's payment-in-kind program.

Under the PIK program, farmers who reduce this year's plantings of corn, wheat, sorghum, rice and cotton by specified amounts will get free surplus commodities as payment.

Although all the details have not been spelled out, the program is expected to put substantial seasonal pressure on transportation facilities in some areas where farmers cannot get enough PIK commodities locally.

But the Agriculture Department said Friday in an analysis of the transportation situation that barge and rail capacities will generally remain in surplus this year.

The report was written by T.Q. Hutchinson of USDA's Economic Research Service.

It was included in the latest issue of Agriculture Outlook, published by the agency.

Weekly barge shipments of grain and oilseeds set a record average of 41.9 million bushels in 1982 up from 38.1 million per week in 1981, the previous high.

Even so, there was less barge demand for other dry bulk commodities in 1982, which offset the grain for grain and oilseeds and put downward pressure on barge rates.

Thus, the report said, barge rates last year dropped 30 to 35 percent from 1981 levels as surplus capacity continued to grow.

"The covered barge fleet has seen explosive growth in recent years and now totals about 12,500 units — nearly 80 percent greater than in 1978," the report said.

"In addition, the recently built barges are about 15 percent larger than those of the 1960s and early '70s, further boosting total capacity."

Also, the report said, 46 new towboats of more than 6,000 horsepower were built in the 1970s, compared to only 16 in the previous 15 years.

"Industry representatives have indicated that about one-quarter of the barge fleet was surplus to needs during the past year," it said. "They expect a similar situation for 1983."

Looking at the rail situation, the report said that after dropping 16 percent in 1981, railcar shipments of grain declined another 6 percent last year, mainly because of decreased grain exports and some shifting to barges.

Average weekly loadings of grains and soybeans last year declined to 24,366 cars from 25,939 in 1981 and a peak of 30,730 in 1980.

Some increase in loadings is expected in 1983, partly because Mexico has announced its intention to shift part of its imports of U.S. grain from water carriers to rail.

"Railroads also experience significant excess capacity throughout 1982," the report said.

Although the number of railroad-owned jumbo hopper cars declined by 500 cars, the privately owned fleet increased by 3,600 cars.

Former art advisor dead at age 75

LONDON (AP) — Anthony Blunt, Queen Elizabeth II's former art adviser who was unmasked as a spy for the Soviet Union, died today of a heart attack at his London home. He was 75.

"He was having breakfast and got up to look up a number in the telephone directory, then dropped dead," said his brother, Wilfred Blunt.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told Parliament in November 1979 that Blunt had spied for the Soviet Union during and after World War II while he worked for Britain's counter-espionage service.

Blunt confessed to British authorities in 1964 but was given immunity in exchange for information on three other British spies who fled to the Soviet Union: Kim Philby, Guy Burgess and Donald Maclean, the prime minister said.

Maclean died March 6 in Moscow.

After Mrs. Thatcher's revelations, Blunt confessed in public that he had spied and was stripped of his knighthood, which had been awarded by the queen for his service to the art world.

Blunt, who was surveyor of the queen's art collection from 1952 until his retirement in 1972, was forced to give up his academic honors as well as resign from the prestigious British Academy.

Blunt said after he was unmasked that he spied for the Soviets during World War II, a matter of "political conscience," now bitterly regretted.

"In the mid-1930s, it seemed to me and many of my contemporaries that the Communist Party and Russia constituted the only firm bulwark against fascism, since the Western democracies were taking an uncertain and compromising attitude towards Germany," he said.

He said he later regretted his "appalling mistake" and grew to abhor the Soviet regime.

Maclean and Burgess, both British diplomats, defected in 1951 and Philby, a key figure in British intelligence, was revealed as the "third man" in the spy ring after his defection in 1963. But rumors persisted that there was also a fourth man in the spy network.

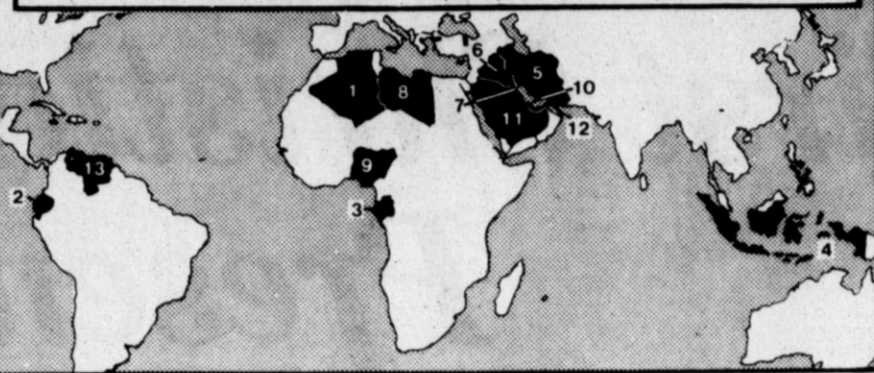

Former British Broadcasting Corp. journalist Andrew Boyle published a book entitled "The Climate of Treason" in 1979 which did not name Blunt but dropped enough clues about a fourth man that legislators raised the matter in the House of Commons.

Mrs. Thatcher responded with a written statement on Blunt and saying "there is no doubt that British interests were seriously damaged" by his spying activities.

The failure of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to agree on lower production quotas has raised questions as to its future. The worldwide oil glut and decline in prices have exposed internal contradictions between the rich, sparsely populated Persian Gulf members and economically hard-pressed members such as Nigeria. Revolutionary Iran is also challenging Saudi Arabia's leadership of OPEC.

Demand for oil may rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — The demand for oil is expected to rise this year for the first time since 1978 because of lower prices and increased economic activity, according to the Energy Department.

The department's latest projections, to be published April 6, estimate that Americans will consume an average 15.4 million barrels of oil a day in 1983, an 0.7 percent increase above 1982 levels. The figures were released to reporters Friday.

The projections assume that the gross national product will rise 1.7 percent for the year and that the average price of crude oil imports will level off at $30.50 a barrel in April and stay there.

In medieval times, the word "garbage" applied to a combination of chicken heads, feet and innards stewed as a delicacy by creative chefs.

'Aging tough guys'

These Vietnam vets are still gung-ho

By Tom Tiede

WASHINGTON (NEA) — When Stanley Harris was an infantryman in Vietnam, 15 years ago, he went out of his way to seek hazardous duty. He volunteered for patrols, he tried not to miss night-time reconnaissance missions, and he always moved personally out front when his unit came under fire.

"I got a thrill out of it," he says, "I enjoyed it. I remember one time I saw a gook running into a tree line, so I let him have it. Bam, bam, bam! I must have kept it up for five minutes or more, and I was sorry when I stopped. I thought to myself, hey, I just love this stuff." And Harris still loves it. He says he relives the war whenever he can. He is a 36-year-old Los Angeles tie salesman today, but he is still letting the gooks have it. He sometimes goes into the California wilds on the weekends, dressed in jungle boots and fatigues, and plays war games. "I'm gung-ho," he explains. And he is not alone. As discomfiting as the war was for many of the 2.5 million Americans who served in Indochina, it was fascinating for many others. And thousands of them don't want to let go; they have essentially made the Vietnam experience a permanent part of their post-war lives. Some of them, like Stan Harris, belong to small groups that use mock combat as a means of companionship and conditioning. Others collect Vietnam memorabilia, or teach their families to use AR-15 rifles. Some of the old veterans are even going back to Southeast Asia to carry out new missions.

Four of them went back late last year, for example. They slipped into Laos to collect information on Americans they thought were being held in communist jails. They were led by James Gritz, a former Special Services officer who believes the Vietnamese are still keeping prisoners of the war. That mission failed. The men, who were supposed to get information from guerrilla forces in Laos, were met instead by Laotian government troops. One of the Americans was captured in an ambush, and had to be at tax protest meetings wearing sidearms, bandoleers and camouflage clothing. Even Stan Harris has a tendency toward fanaticism.

And he is the first to confess it. He says his small group that plays war in the woods is part of a larger group that is preparing for the eventual social and economic collapse of the nation. In other words he says he is a survivalist. Survivalists think civilization as it's known is doomed. And they claim the alternative future belongs to those who prepare for it. Harris, for instance, has built a cabin in the Santa Rosa Mountains, full of food and pure water, and he has fortified the place with a series of booby traps.

Why booby traps? For protection, he says: "When the crash comes, everything will be affected. There won't be any grocery stores, there won't be any public water system, and there won't be any law. The people who have food and shelter are going to have to be able to defend it."

But he doesn't think the defense will be necessary rescued with a ransom. The men did not get any information on Vietnam POWs. And that was not the only failure. The Gritz invasion was likewise a most embarrassing diplomatic flop. Several governments in the region have formally complained about the operation, and the state department in Washington has issued statements that have soundly condemned the activity.

Further, one state department authority says privately that the Gritz mission was just one of the regrettable incidents that have been engineered by Vietnam veterans who are trying to be, in his words, "aging tough guys." He believes the gung-ho element has a potential for extremism.

For instance, the veterans sometimes join marginally legal paramilitary groups. They are presently enrolled in the Ku Klux Klan, and in the Jewish Defense League. They are also increasingly interested in the "Posse Comitatus" movement; that group wants to do away with federal government. Some Vietnam veterans have written books detailing ways to murder one's neighbors. Others are now hired by hate groups to teach the elements of guerrilla warfare in the United States. A few veterans have shown up for a while yet. So meantime he occupies himself with make believe. When he and his friends take to the wilds on the weekends, he says they choose up sides and try to kill each other any way they can. "It's a lot like Vietnam," he notes. Except for one thing, Harris says angrily that all of his courage and enthusiasm in Vietnam were for nothing. He says the politicians and the pantywaists lost the war. "The next time the gung-ho veterans have to fight for something," he goes on, dryly, "it will be a different story." (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Elected PUC continues to be big White aim

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says he is sticking with his campaign vow for an elected Public Utility Commission because he thinks Texans "are extremely concerned about it."

White told a news conference Wednesday that despite a current coolness among legislators for an elected commission he plans a "one-on-one" campaign to sell his proposal. And if that doesn't work, White said, "I'm prepared, if necessary, to go directly to the people with this issue."

White said he was not committed to a special session on an elected commission, "but there's always that possibility."

"I am extremely serious about having an elected commission, and I am going to be talking directly with members of the House and Senate over the relative merits of that elected commission."

Wool down four percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says that wool production dropped 4 percent to less than 105 million pounds in 1982, after gaining for three straight years.

Wool production had been on a downward trend for many years as producers gradually cut back sheep and lamb production. By 1978 shorn wool output plunged to 102.9 million pounds — compared to 195.1 million pounds in 1966, for example.

But with rising prices, production rose in 1979, 1980 and 1981, when it reached 109.7 million pounds.

As wool and lamb prices dropped, so did the nation's sheep flock. Last Jan. 1 the total U.S. inventory was 10.3 million head, down 10 percent from a year earlier and the fewest since the department began counting sheep in 1867.

The latest report, issued Friday, said that the total value of wool shorn last year was $71.8 million, down 31 percent from $104 million in 1981. The average price was 68.4 cents per pound, compared to 94.4 cents in 1981.

Department economists say the price drop has continued, with wool averaging 57.7 cents per pound last month.

mission," White said. "The strongest argument of all is once you have an elected commission, you are going to find those commissioners going into the communities and facing the people they are regulating and explaining their actions. And today you don't have that even under the most favorable circumstances," White said.

"Nothing, I think, will do a better job of regulating utility industry in this state than having an elected commission that gets up with a tight stomach every morning trying to figure out how we a better job every day," he said.

White also said said that he had been advised there are enough funds for Texas jobless benefits payments through Friday.

By that time, he said, it appeared Congress will have passed the national jobs bill, which includes $5 billion in extended loans to Texas and other states for unemployment compensation. He said his office was assessing the national jobs bill to determine exactly how much money Texas would get from it.

"We will be employing it as quickly as we can," he said.

The Consumer Alert
by Jim Mattox
Attorney General

AUSTIN—Every day thousands of Texas consumers receive flyers and mailers proclaiming a "special sale" on one or many items. Newspapers are full of "spring specials" on everything from lawn and garden equipment to Easter dresses.

And many of these sales are advertised something like this: "Buy one for $10, get the second one for half price," or "normally sells for $59.99, our sale price now $39.99."

These are price comparison advertisements, our Consumer Protection attorneys say, and they are a widely used, effective means of promoting a product.

In price comparison advertising, current prices for goods or services offered for sale to consumers are compared with previous prices, with future prices, or with other stated values. This is to show price reductions, cost savings, or sales, and is a common form of advertising.

Price comparisons that accurately reflect current market value help consumers by providing information useful in making decisions. But price comparisons based on inflated or arbitrary prices can be misleading, and our lawyers say, could constitute violations of the Deceptive Trade Practices-Consumer Protection Act, which prohibits "false or misleading statements of fact concerning the reasons for, existence of, or amount of price reductions."

They say that while most businessmen use price comparisons to advertise legitimate cost reductions, there are a few unscrupulous merchants who treat both consumers and their competitors unfairly by misusing price comparison advertising.

Q. My wife and I are considering the joint purchase of a duplex, together with my brother and his wife. Will a homeowners policy cover both halves of the duplex, as well as the furnishings in both halves?
A. No. However, there are two possibilities. No one policy exists which will provide such coverage. One option is to purchase a standard homeowners policy in one of your names to cover the entire building and the belongings of the named insured to an amount equal to half the face value of the structure. The other resident would buy tenant's insurance to cover their belongings or, purchase a fire insurance policy with an all-risk endorsement. This will cover the structure against fire, storm damage, vandalism, etc. Then each owner would buy a separate tenants policy. Decide which route will give you the coverage you want, at the best cost, and talk with your agent.

EPA staffers celebrate resignations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some Environmental Protection Agency employees brought out champagne to celebrate after five more top officials resigned under pressure, clearing out the Reagan appointees who had been principal targets of congressional investigations.

The resignations — led by that of acting Administrator John Hernandez — were accepted by President Reagan on Friday, opening most of the top jobs in the agency for William D. Ruckelshaus to fill as he takes over as Reagan's choice for EPA administrator.

But Reagan steadfastly rejected allegations of wrongdoing by the EPA, saying, "no proof of wrongdoing has been presented in all of this fuss."

Besides Hernandez, resignations were also announced for EPA General Counsel Robert M. Perry; Associate Administrator

John A. Todhunter; Paul C. Cahill, director of EPA's Office of Federal Activities, and John Daniel, who had served as chief of staff for former Administrator Anne M. Burford.

Staffers in Perry's office opened bottles of champagne to celebrate once his resignation was made official, said EPA sources who refused to be quoted by name. A former attorney for Exxon Corp., Perry had drawn the enmity of many in the general counsel's office. He was being investigated by a House panel on whether he committed perjury when he denied keeping "green books" with derogatory comments about EPA employees.

And in what has become a familiar pattern at the agency, guards were posted outside the offices of the departing officials to ensure that no files sought in the half-dozen congressional investigations were taken from the building.

Lee Verstandig will replace Hernandez for the next month until the Senate confirmation of Ruckelshaus, who was persuaded by Reagan early this week to return to the job he held in the early 1970s.

Hernandez, the deputy EPA administrator named to serve as acting EPA administrator after Mrs. Burford resigned March 7, spent most of his short tenure before congressional committees defending himself against allegations he had investigated by a House panel on whether he committed perjury when he denied keeping "green books" with derogatory comments about EPA employees.

NUCLEAR NATIONS Generating Power from the Atom

The nations generating significant amounts of electricity from nuclear plants are almost as select a group as those possessing nuclear weapons. The United States is the clear leader among all non-communist countries, but second-place France has the most ambitious development program.

CHICAGO - Even before his voice begins to calm a frantic mother whose young son just swallowed a week's supply of vitamins, Anthony Burda's fingers begin "reading" antidotes at the poison control center.

He knows the value of speed in poisoning cases. The 28-year-old pharmacist was blinded seven years ago in an accidental poisoning.

As he swiftly and coolly locates the Braille file card containing life-saving measures, he assures the mother the dose is not enough to damage her child's liver or kidneys.

"Let's just say it's more of a coincidence that I work at a poison control center," says Burda, refusing to talk about the accident that left him sightless. "I'm really not out on a crusade or anything."

That he works at all, however, is due to a fight he's been waging since before finishing his education.

Although he was near the top of his class at the University of Illinois, teachers and rehabilitation counselors discouraged him from continuing his pharmacology studies when his blindness occurred during his junior year.

Despite "very narrow-minded" counseling, he refused "to turn into a weaver or a rocking chair pacifist."

"I've had to more or less blaze my own trails," he said, adding that he got some help from those closest to him. His wife, Mari, for instance, helped him by reading an entire 1,698-page pharmacy book to him.

Burda ultimately finished among the class top 10 and scored 91 percent on the licensing exam, but the Illinois State Board Agency refused to issue him a pharmacist registration "simply because I was blind," he said. "They were ignorant ... afraid I'd jeopardize the health and safety of the public."

He fought a two-year court battle before he finally was granted his license about two years ago.

In the meantime, numerous employers shunned him.

"They all looked at me as some poor guy looking for a job who had a degree in pharmacology," Burda said Friday. "I looked at myself as a very good pharmacist who just happened to be blind."

Finally, he joined the staff at the Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center's Poison Control Center in Chicago — where callers never suspect he is blind.

"It's very fulfilling because I get a chance to really use a lot more of my pharmacology knowledge more than the guy pouring (drugs) from one bottle to another," he said.

"He's got to be one of the most knowledgeable pharmacists in the business," pharmacist Layne Oliff said of Burda. "He remembers formulas from four or five years ago that I can't even remember from last year. He's incredible."

Soviet Union has version of PIK

WASHINGTON (AP) — Was the Soviet Union the first to have a PIK program in agriculture? Maybe not, but Moscow does have a version of sorts, says the Agriculture Department.

"Both programs carry 'payments' in the form of farm commodities, and both are targeted at farm problems," said USDA's Economic Research Service. "But that's about as far as the similarities go."

The PIK program offers "payment in kind" to farmers who take extra land out of production this year — surplus wheat, corn, sorghum, rice and cotton in exchange for reduced acreages.

But the U.S. program is geared to reduce crop production and use up stored surpluses. The Soviet version is aimed at boosting production by offering bonuses for exceeding production quotas.

"On state grain farms, workers can receive up to 15 percent of the extra grain produced in addition to their regular wages," the report said.

"State farm workers who assist in the production of vegetables, fruit and fodder crops are permitted up to 15 percent of the output, with additional bonuses for exceeding their quotas."

Similar policies are recommended on the collective farms, which are more autonomous than state farms.

"Behind the commodity bonuses is the hope that many workers will decide to use the extra grain and fodder to raise additional cows, sheep, goats, poultry and other animals on their private plots," the report said. "This would help relieve Soviet meat shortages."

One of nations worst wrecks

Nine killed in school bus crash

UNO, Ark. (AP) — "Lady, can you please help us?" asked the frightened teen-ager who pounded on Barbara Kinard's door at dawn. "I've got all of 'em out of the bus I can. I think some are dead."

Miss Kinard, a nurse, telephoned for help and then rushed with a neighbor to the scene of the nation's worst accident during a school outing in seven years, where nine people lay dead or dying in a fallow soybean field.

In the aftermath of the school bus crash Friday, which also injured 29 others, students wept, residents circulated petitions to fix a dangerous intersection and a teen-age survivor vowed never to ride a school bus again.

"We started going around that curve, and everybody started shouting, 'Hang on!'" said 18-year-old Jimmy Gibson, lying in a Memphis hospital with a broken back.

The students and their instructors had left Jonesboro in the northeastern part of the state shortly after 5 a.m., bound for a convention of high school vocational students in Little Rock. Many were asleep 45 minutes later when the bus skidded off Arkansas 214 as it curves into state Route 18 in Poinsett County.

The bus hurtled into a ditch, went back up on the pavement then down into a second ditch, landing on its roof, officials said. Four students and five teachers, including the driver, were killed in the worst such accident since 1976, when 29 children died in a crash in California.

Miss Kinard said she was at home around 5:45 a.m. when the teen-age youth rushed to her door.

"The little fellow was in shock," said Miss Kinard, 32.

"He was scared. I told him to come on in. He just kind of went back and sat there and rocked back and forth."

She started grabbing blankets drove to the crash site, about 110 miles northeast of Little Rock.

"There was screaming and hollering and crying," Miss Kinard said. "It was just a horrible mess — kids on the ground, some ... walking around. It was just a bloody mess."

Eight members of a National Transportation Safety Board team flew to Jonesboro on Friday to begin investigating the wreck. Residents said accidents on that section of road are common and began circulating a petition to make the curve safer.

Gibson, awaiting surgery for his back injuries, had been studying auto mechanics. "I won't ride another" school bus, he said.

Police search for abducted infant

DALLAS (AP) — The kidnapping of a 3-day-old boy from Parkland Memorial Hospital by a woman masquerading as a nurse remains a mystery, since no ransom demand has been received, according to police and FBI agents.

Officers said Friday they doubt they will ever find the 6-pound, 5-ounce infant unless someone provides information about the abductor's identity.

There could be "a thousand different reasons" why Harold Deshawn Patterson was snatched from his mother's arms by a woman wearing a white blouse, white pants, white shoes and a lab coat, said investigators.

"The only hope we have is to tell the public to notify authorities if somebody sees a black woman who had not been pregnant suddenly show up with an infant," said police spokesman Bob Shaw. "That's the only hope we have."

The boy's mother, Gretchen Patterson, 18, told investigators she was feeding her son at 6:15 p.m. Thursday in a fourth-floor maternity ward when a woman dressed as a nurse came into her room and said she needed to take the baby for a checkup.

"She looked very professional," said Cathy Stradling, a roommate who was nursing her infant daughter when the abduction occurred. "She called the lady by her last name."

The woman told Ms. Patterson that she would have to hand over her infant son because she had a fever and should not be nursing him, officials said.

Mrs. Stradling said Ms. Patterson questioned the woman, who said she would check Ms. Patterson's chart.

The woman left the room for a brief period, then returned, saying, "Yes, I do need to take your baby. You have a fever," Mrs. Stradling said.

Then the woman walked away with the baby "at a fast pace," said FBI spokesman Joe Hershey.

"The girl across the hall saw her run toward the elevators," said Mrs. Strad-ling. "But the elevators are so slow, she must have gone down the stairway."

Ms. Patterson became suspicious because the woman wore a blouse unlike those of the nurses, said police investigator James Shivers.

She rushed to a nurses' station to get help. The nurses called security officers who immediately secured the hospital's exits, but did not find the woman.

Ms. Patterson, who is unemployed, believed the abductor had visited her room in street clothes after the baby was born Monday, saying she was looking for another patient, Shivers said.

The mother "is upset and acting like a mama ought to act that just lost her baby," he said.

FBI agents suspected a kidnapping after employees could not identify the nurse.

"In a situation like this," said Hershey, "it would very obviously appear to be an abduction."

Officers said they believed the woman may have been a Parkland employee because she apparently was familiar with Miss Patterson's condition. Ms. Patterson and her baby were to have been released Wednesday.

Shivers said police would pore through some 4,000 photographs of present and former Parkland employees to see if any match the description of the kidnapper.

"We'll just follow every avenue we have," said Hershey, who added that the FBI entered the case as a "preliminary investigation" in case the child is taken across state lines.

Police also questioned the baby's father and were convinced he had no knowledge of the abduction, investigators said.

Parkland spokesman Gregory Graze said the abduction was believed to be the first baby-snatching at the hospital in at least 20 years.

Security was tightened at the hospital after a man posing as a doctor examined two patients at the hospital last month and then fled, Graze said.

Since then, all hospital employees have been required to wear badges. Graze said it was unclear whether the abductor was wearing such a badge.

The Newspaper BIBLE

DOES CHEATING EVER PAY?

Jesus now told this story to His disciples: "A rich man hired an accountant to handle his affairs, but soon a rumor went around that the accountant was thoroughly dishonest. So his employer called him in and said, 'What's this I hear about your stealing from me? Get your report in order, for you are to be dismissed.'"

"The accountant thought to himself, 'Now what? I'm through here, and I haven't the strength to go out and dig ditches, and I'm too proud to beg. I know just the thing! And then I'll have plenty of friends to take care of me when I leave!'"

"So he invited each one who owed money to his employer to come and discuss the situation. He asked the first one, 'How much do you owe him?' 'My debt is 850 gallons of olive oil,' the man replied. 'Yes, here is the contract you signed,' the accountant told him. 'Tear it up and write another one for half that much!'"

"And how much do you owe him?" he asked the next man. 'A thousand bushels of wheat,' was the reply. 'Here,' the accountant said, 'take your note and replace it with one for only 800 bushels!'"

"The rich man had to admire the rascal for being so shrewd. And it is true that the citizens of this world are more clever (in dishonesty!) than the godly are."

"But shall I tell you to act that way, to buy friendship through cheating? Will this ensure your entry into an everlasting home in heaven?"

"NO! For unless you are honest in small matters, you won't be in large ones. If you cheat even a little, you won't be honest with greater responsibilities."

Luke 16:1-10

State senator studying gambling

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) —

One of several businessmen seeking legislation to bring casino gambling back to Galveston says the action could have an enormous effect on the city's economy.

"Casino gambling would bring many, many tourists to the island," said Byron Everts, a real estate executive. "It would mean tons of money. Listen, this spot is a strategic point in the United States for casino gambling."

"Airplanes leave Houston every day to travel to the Nevada desert or the East Coast and they have people on them who are traveling to gamble," said Everts.

He is a member of a group of businessmen who have approached state Sen. Chet Brooks and other representatives of the island city area. They are seeking legislation to let Galveston residents vote on whether to allow casino gambling.

Brooks, a Democrat whose district includes part of Galveston County, said a bill that would permit local option elections for casino gambling in Galveston is in "the talking stage," but probably won't be introduced before the 1985 regular session of the Legislature.

"I don't think we have time to take all of the necessary steps this session," said the senator.

The senator said the group was told "if they could demonstrate strong support on the island for it, we'd try to help them with a local bill."

Earlier in this century the operation of illegal gambling casinos in Galveston was an open secret. The casinos were closed after state officials cracked down in the 1950s.

Galveston Mayor Gus Manuel said he would support gambling in Galveston if citizens approve it with a local option election.

Houston to face Villanova

Georgia upsets St. John's in NCAA tourney

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Sports Writer

The Georgia Bulldogs don't have a player in their starting lineup over 6-foot-7, but looked a lot taller than that to St. John's in the NCAA basketball playoffs.

"We got beat under the boards tremendously," said St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca after a shocking 70-67 loss to the Bulldogs Friday night in the East Regionals. "We played a quick, jumping team, and the turnovers hurt us."

Georgia's knockout of the third-ranked Redmen sent the scrappy Bulldogs into the East finale Sunday against North Carolina's defending national champions. The eight-ranked Tar Heels knocked off Ohio State 64-51 in the other East semifinal in Syracuse, N.Y.

Top-ranked Houston defeated No. 17 Memphis State 70-63 and No. 13 Villanova edged Iowa 55-54 in the Midwest semifinals, setting up another regional showdown Sunday.

In today's action, Virginia and North Carolina State, a pair of Atlantic Coast Conference teams, met for the West Regional championship in Ogden, Utah, and Kentucky played Louisville in the Midwest at Knoxville, Tenn.

Terry Fair, the tallest starter in the Georgia lineup at 6-7, scored 27 points in No. 18 Georgia's big victory over St. John's. The Bulldogs held off a rush by the Redmen before putting away the Big East champions in front of 23,286 at the Carrier Dome.

Georgia, making its first NCAA appearance after winning the Southeastern Conference tournament, extended its winning streak to six games by going on a 15-4 spree early in the second half and holding off a furious finish by the Redmen.

Georgia's biggest lead was six points, the last at 57-51 with 3:35 to go. The Redmen three times cut the margin to two points. Then, with five seconds to go, Chris Mullin of St. John's hit two free throws, cutting the deficit to 68-67. But Georgia grabbed the rebound and fed Fair all alone under the basket.

Georgia Coach Hugh Durham said he used a psychological ploy in firing up his underdog team. At a pregame meeting, Durham showed his team a newspaper clipping in which Kevin Williams, the cocky supersub of St. John's, said Georgia would be "no trouble."

Ohio State, which had finished in a three-way tie for second in the Big Ten, gave the Tar Heels a tougher time than expected. The Buckeyes rallied twice to lead at halftime 30-29 and led 42-40 on Troy Taylor's jumper.

But North Carolina then ran off eight straight points, with Michael Jordan hitting four free throws and Curtis Hunter and Jim Braddock each with a basket for a 48-42 advantage.

THE HEREFORD BRAND SPORTS

The Buckeyes' Larry Huggins scored to cut the margin to 48-44 with almost nine minutes remaining. With 7:57 left, the Tar Heels then went into a stall and Jordan, who finished with 17 points, broke the delay by hitting an easy layup to put North Carolina ahead 50-44 with 6:27 left. The Tar Heels then made good from the foul line down the stretch.

Akeem Olajuwon scored 21 points for Houston and the nation's No. 1 team survived a rash of fouls against several key starters to turn back Memphis State. The victory was the 24th straight for the Cougars, who are 29-2 overall.

Olajuwon, a 7-foot native of Nigeria who took up basketball in 1979, was dominant from start to finish, hurting the Tigers with slam dunks and fall-away jumpers. The Cougars survived even though their starting front line of Clyde Drexler, Larry Micheaux and Olajuwon played most of the second half with three fouls and Drexler fouled out with 3:17 to go after scoring eight points.

Gary McClain and John Pinone sank four critical free throws in the final 23 seconds, boosting Villanova over Iowa.

McClain, with his only points of the night, sank both ends of a one-and-one that gave the Wildcats a 53-51 lead with 23 seconds left. With 14 seconds remaining, Iowa's Greg Stokes made only one of two free throws, enabling Villanova to keep a one-point lead.

Two seconds later, Pinone, who led the Wildcats with 18 points, nailed it down for Villanova by dropping in both ends of a one-and-one for a 55-52 lead.

Advances to NIT semifinals

DePaul spurts past Ole Miss, 75-67

CHICAGO AP - It was only one of several scoring spurts DePaul threw at Mississippi, and it was so demoralizing it shot the Blue Demons into the semifinals of the National Invitation Tournament. While the band was playing "New York, New York," where the Blue Demons will play Monday night following their 75-67 victory Friday night over Ole Miss, Coach Ray Meyer was explaining the significance of scoring six points in 19 seconds.

"That was the turning point of the game," said Meyer, author of 696 collegiate victories at DePaul, including the 1945 NIT championship.

"Their doblers really went down when we scored so quickly and so easily," said Meyer who was pleased with the victory and a sixth straight 20-victory season but also displeased with 25 turnovers committed by his team.

As has been the habit with the Blue Demons, they twice held 11-point leads in the first half but ended up blowing them. The Rebels, led by Carlos Clark who finished with 22 points, rallied to tie the score at 33 and again at 35 in the second half.

DePaul, led by Bernard Randolph with 19 points and Tyrone Corbin with 18, struggled back to a 44-39 lead, but baskets by Michael Partridge and Eric Laird pulled the Rebels to within a point of the lead.

Then came the turning point. With 13:08 to play, Corbin hit a pair of free throws to make it 46-43. The Rebels tried to inbound the ball but Randolph stole it and scored. On another inbound attempt, Kenny Patterson stole it but missed the basket only to have Corbin rebound.

Ole Miss never came back after that and in the next five minutes the Blue Demons mounted a 64-49 lead and coasted to their 20th victory against 11 losses while the Rebels agreed with Meyer about the turning point in the game, but added another explanation.

It was Roger Stieb who fouled Corbin and left the game with four fouls.

"Stieb's fourth foul was the turning point," said Hunt. "He takes the ball out against the press, but with him out of the game they stole the ball twice and scored and that broke the game open."

Hunt was hit with two technicals during the game and said, "We questioned a couple of calls and got the technicals, but it was not the officiating that beat us, DePaul beat us. They are a talented, well-coached team.

"They could go all the way in this tournament," said Hunt. "They are deep. They can go nine and ten men where we only can go to seven. And they have such great rebounding."

The next stop for the Blue Demons is Madison Square Garden on Monday night where they pit their 20-11 record against Nebraska, 22-9, after Wake Forest, 20-11, faces Fresno State, 23-10. The winners will play for the championship Wednesday night.

Players want 53 percent

NBA contract talks break off

NEW YORK (AP) - Larry Fleisher, general counsel for the National Basketball Association Players Association, says the league's explanation for why contract talks broke off was "absolute nonsense."

Commissioner Larry O'Brien said Thursday's breakdown occurred when the league offered the players union 50 percent of gross revenues, while the players demanded 53 percent.

Originally, the union had asked for as much as 57 percent and the league offered 40 percent.

But Fleisher, the chief union negotiator, said Friday that he walked out of the session after just 20 minutes because the NBA had reneged on a recent proposal concerning minimum team payrolls.

"It was a catch-all way to make the public think we walked out over very minor differences," Fleisher said of O'Brien's explanation.

"We're back to square one," Fleisher added. "They completely went back on what had been said before."

The players association has threatened a strike April 2 if no collective bargaining agreement is reached by that date.

The two sides had met infrequently until this week, when a total of 12 hours of talks were held on Monday and Tuesday. Fleisher was optimistic after those sessions and said he expected the two sides to continue to talk, "unless either side gets angry."

On Thursday, the players association got angry and now no other talks are scheduled.

"It was as if we never had the meetings I had characterized as productive," Fleisher said.

According to the union chief, at recent meetings the league had proposed a minimum salary level for each NBA team. But at Thursday's session, Fleisher said, management had reduced that minimum to as low as $1.5 million, a figure he said is "ludicrous and ridiculous."

He would not elaborate on the previous minimum that the league had been discussing.

Fleisher said the owners have not even acknowledged the minimum salary proposal, "because it would make them look bad."

The league had no further comment on the status of negotiations Friday.

The percentage of gross revenues being discussed also would be the basis for a salary ceiling in addition to the proposed team minimums. To reach the salary cap figure, the league would divide its revenues by the agreed-upon percentage and divide that figure by the 23 member teams.

Holmes favored in title bout

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) - Larry Holmes says the packed house at the 6,700-seat Watres Armory and a national television audience will see him fighting Sunday at 95 percent efficiency.

Hardly anyone thinks a 95 percent Holmes isn't more than enough to beat Lucien Rodriguez, the European champion from France.

In fact, the fight has been painted as a mismatch in some quarters.

But Holmes noted Friday that a fight with an opponent of Rodriguez's stature is economically feasible in this one-time hard-coal capital of 88,000 people where Holmes began his pro career in 1973 and where he has appeared nine times as a preliminary fighter.

For several years, the 33-year-old unbeaten champion from Easton, Pa., has wanted to defend the title here.

"Everybody I fight, they say, is not a good match, a good challenge," said Holmes, who is signed to make his 15th title defense May 20 against Tim Witherspoon.

"I hadn't underestimated Lucien Rodriguez. He's a pro. He's been in the fight business a long time."

The champion, who has a 41-0 record, with 30 knockouts, said he might be a little heavier than usual - he weighed 217½ for his last fight against Randy "Tex" Cobb last Nov. 26 - the Witherspoon fight is so close.

"I don't get out of shape," said Holmes. "I'm not like the rest of those guys. I don't get completely out of shape."

The 31-year-old Rodriguez, who has a 35-7-1 record, with seven knockouts, will get $200,000 for his title shot. Holmes will have a good payday.

The live gate will be around $700,000, with another $600,000 coming from NBC, which will televise the bout from 4 p.m. to 5:30 p.m., EDT. The network also will telecast a 10-round junior middleweight James "Hard Rock" Green of Irvington, N.J., and Michael Dewar of Jamaica from 2:30 p.m. to 4 p.m.

"I always knew that a world title shot would eventually come," said the 31-year-old Moroccan-born Rodriguez, who works as a gas-meter reader.

Holmes and Rodriguez have one common opponent - Alfredo Evangelista.

In Holmes' first defense of the title he won on a split 15-round decision over Ken Norton June 9, 1978, at Las Vegas, Nev., Holmes knocked out Evangelista in the seventh round at Las Vegas Nov. 10, 1978. Rodriguez was knocked out three times by Evangelista in 1976-77 and 1979, then won a 12-round decision over the Spaniard in a European title defense at Paris last June 7.

An 11th-round knockout by Evangelista in 1977 cost Rodriguez the European championship. He regained it on a 12-round decision over Felipe Rodriguez at Paris Nov. 26, 1981, has defended it four times and is unbeaten in his last 12 fights.

Nets trip 76ers

BY WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The New Jersey Nets held a board meeting at Philadelphia, and Moses Malone wasn't invited.

The Nets broke the Philadelphia 76ers' 24-game home winning streak Friday night, defeating them 101-92 while winning the rebounding battle, 51-39.

Malone, the 76ers all-star center and the National Basketball Association's leading rebounder and seventh-highest scorer, was held to 11 points, including only one in the first half, and nine rebounds.

Elsewhere in the NBA, Boston bombed Cleveland 124-102, New York tripped Atlanta 104-87, Washington edged Milwaukee 97-96, Indiana nipped Utah 119-117, Denver outscored Detroit 131-120, San Antonio beat Los Angeles 132-120 and Houston trimmed Seattle 106-104.

New Jersey, 44-26 compared to Philadelphia's 58-11, was led by Buck Williams with 24 points and 19 rebounds, while Albert King added 22 points for the Nets.

Bullets 97, Bucks 96
Ricky Sobers scored a season-high 29 points and Jeff Ruland hit the game-winning basket with 1:31 to go as Washington won its fourth straight game.

Milwaukee led 81-78 with 10:39 remaining, but the Bullets outscored the Bucks 10-1 in the next five minutes for an 88-82 lead. Ruland, who scored 20 points, missed two free throws with three seconds left to give the Bucks a chance, but they couldn't get a shot away.

Spurs 132, Lakers 120.
San Antonio overcame a 10-point lead in the third quarter to beat Los Angeles behind Artis Gilmore's 33 points.

The Spurs trailed 94-84 late in the third period and were behind 96-92 going into the final quarter. But they outscored the Lakers 40-24 in the final 12 minutes to hand Los Angeles only its second loss in 49 games in which it had entered the fourth quarter.

Celtics 124, Cavaliers 102
Boston broke open a close game against Cleveland with a 17-4 spurt in the third quarter as Larry Bird and Danny Ainge scored 10 points each in the period.

Knicks 104, Hawks 87
Bernard King scored 10 of his 22 points in the pivotal third quarter as New York outscored Atlanta 24-18 to take the lead for good.

Pacers 119, Jazz 117
Jerry Sichting hit a 15-footer with three seconds

Alex English scored 29 points and Denver survived a 44-point barrage by Isiah Thomas to beat Detroit.

Issel and Kiki Vandeweghe finished with 28 points each for Denver, while Kelly Tripucka added 26 for the Pistons.

Rockets 106, Sonics 104
Houston scored its last 13 points from the foul line to beat Seattle for its 13th victory in 70 games.

Allen Leavell made two free throws with 14 seconds left and Caldwell Jones added one of two with eight seconds to go to provide the margin of victory.

Busy week set for Hereford baseball team

Barring further bad weather, Hereford's baseball team will have a busy week, beginning Monday.

After having their first two district games postponed by foul weather, the Whitefaces are scheduled to play Monterey at 4 p.m. Monday here in one makeup contest, then travel to Lubbock Wednesday to meet the Westerners in another (postponed because of rain Friday).

Then, on top of that, the Herd has three regularly scheduled games this week — at Tascosa Tuesday, Friday at home against Coronado and at Caprock Saturday.

So, barring any postponements this week, Hereford will play five games in six days.

All-Texas Series doubtful

COCOA AND POMPANO BEACHES, Florida (AP) — It's my somber duty to report that an All-Texas World Series is still as far away as the respective Florida encampments of the Houston Astros and the Texas Rangers.

After you've traveled six hours roundtrip by automobile between the training centers of the Astros and Rangers, you're struck by more than a sore back.

It hits you that these teams could each finish at least fifth in their divisions under new managers because of the same malady — shaky bullpens.

The Astros finished fifth in the National League Western Division last year because the lack of production by their stoppers in the late-inning clutch.

And in Arlington, they like to smirk that the Rangers fell to sixth in the American League West because their relievers couldn't turn a light out.

Not only couldn't the Ranger firemen get anybody out, they turned close games into opposition burn outs. The Kerosene Kids I believe they called 'em.

Welcome to big league managing, Bob Lillis and Doug Rader. Any suggestions?

The Astros' Lillis has already received the disturbing news that Joe Sambito has elbow problems that may sideline him most of the season.

Sambito underwent an operation last July and his absence — he had only four saves — contributed mightily to the Astros' demise. Now the word is that more surgery is due.

And then there was Dave Smith, who had 11 saves but was on the disabled list himself until July.

Frank LaCorte had an off-year with a 1-5 record, 4.48 earned run average and seven saves.

"The key is the bullpen, our starters are OK," said Lillis in Cocoa Beach. "We lost 20 games from the seventh inning on in games in which we were tied or held the lead."

Houston finished eight games behind Atlanta and Bill Virdon lost his job.

You can understand why Lillis is so interested in his bullpen. He has a one-year contract.

Whereas, the Astros could put part of the blame on injuries the Rangers couldn't blame the ache-and-pain Gods.

When you finish 19 games out of first place behind California, you have to consider the fact there just wasn't much talent out there.

Rader has moved young Danny Darwin, a failure as a fireman, back to the starting rotation. Darwin is out for an indefinite period with an ulcer. Dave Schmidt, the most effective reliever from last year, is also out with injury.

Rader has tried various combinations in the spring with young Tom Henke and Odel Jones, a former Pittsburgh Pirate picked up in the off-season, as the front-runners.

The Rangers have averaged a manager a year since they moved from Washington to Texas, so Rader knows he has to find a bullpen angel.

The Astros appear to be in much better position than the Rangers. They have proven relievers in Smith, who performed well in past injury-free campaigns. LaCorte must bounce back strong.

The Rangers don't have anyone except inconsistent performers like Schmidt or John Buther. Both need to improve dramatically.

Perhaps Jones and Henke will be Rader's savers. "I'm encouraged. I think we'll be fine," said Lillis.

Dirks grabs medalist lead

While Amarillo High's girls continued to widen their lead in the District 3-5A golf chase, Hereford's Tiffi Dirks broke out of a tie for medalist honors Friday at the Ross Rogers Municipal Course in Amarillo.

Miss Dirks carded a round of 93, and in the process took a four stroke lead in the race for medalist honors. She and AHS' Nancy Avery had been tied for two rounds, but Miss Avery shot a 97 Friday.

AHS, however, enjoys a whopping 80-stroke lead over runner-up Tascosa in the team chase. The Sandie gals recorded Friday's best team total — 378.

Hereford, which had been third starting the day, slipped a notch to fourth, behind AHS, Tascosa and Caprock.

The fourth and final round of district play will be April 8 in Hereford.

Coronado's B team was third at 323, followed by AHS at 327. Hereford was well back in the pack, in 14th place, with a round of 373.

Hereford's boys opened district play Friday in Lubbock at the Meadowbrook Municipal course, but after one round were far back of Coronado, which carded a 316.

Hereford recorded a 373

total to place 14th among the 3-5A boys' teams. Monterey was two shots off the pace, while Coronado's B team was third with a 323 total, followed by Amarillo High at 327.

Thursday, Hereford traveled to Clovis where it finished seventh (among 12 teams) in a one-day tournament, which was won by Carlsbad with a 310 total.

Mark Ecton led Hereford with an 83, while Matt Albracht carded an 87 as the team shot 345. Stacy Evans had 88, Bobby Valdez 87 and Michael Drake 105 to round out the team.

The next district round will be played in Plainview Thursday.

VITAL ISSUES FOR CITIZENS OF HEREFORD

- ECONOMIC GROWTH AND DEVELOPMENT
We must begin moving forward with a better effort to attract new and diverse industry.
- COOPERATION BETWEEN FARM ECONOMY AND CITY
City must support agriculture economic interest as the basis for our local economy.
- GOOD LAW ENFORCEMENT
We must provide the best training and equipment for our Police Department. We all need a safe community in which to live.
- NO NEW CITY TAXES
I will work to attract new industry and new residents to enhance local tax revenues.
- IMPROVEMENT OF QUALITY OF LIFE
We need to provide good wholesome entertainment and activities for our young people.
- HWY 60 BYPASS
We don't need a bypass. The city must work with the Texas Hwy. Department to make the present route adequate.
- CIVIC PRIDE
All public areas should be kept as clean and neat as possible, making Hereford a better place to live and raise a family.
- PROPOSED NUCLEAR WASTE REPOSITORY
It is in the citizens interest to have all the information and input possible to guarantee a safe facility.
- WATER DEVELOPMENT
We need to look down the road for water resources because the growth of our community depends on it.
- RECREATION
Our community should become involved in the proposed rejuvenation of Buffalo Lake and work for its restoration.
- CITY-COUNTY COOPERATION
Both governments should work together in attracting industry and protecting the interest of citizens.
- BUILDING CODES
When our city begins to grow, we must protect the citizens with adequate requirements and inspections.

Lietzke leads TPC

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — An air of controversy continues to surround the Players' Club course, the home course for golf's touring pros and permanent site of the Tournament Players Championship.

"It's like being inside a great big pinball machine," Tom Weiskopf said of the humps and mounds, ridges and ledges that produce some erratic action on a golf ball that encounters them.

Weiskopf, whose credentials include a British Open title and 15 tour victories, shot a 70, two strokes behind leader Bruce Lietzke and said afterwards:

"I didn't play good and I shot 70. If that's golf, I never learned how to play the game." He added: "It's something out of World War III... from the twilight zone... bizarre."

But Lietzke, who has won at least one title for each of the last six seasons and took the rain-delayed first round here, called the layout "my kind of course."

"I may not agree with all the humps and mounds, but it's a driving golf course, a ball-striking golf course and I like that," said Lietzke, who did not make a bogey on his way to a 68.

And Bobby Clampett, one of a group at 69, said: "It's fun, exciting. It separates a marginal round from a good round. That's what makes it such a great golf course."

Tied with Clampett at 3 under par, a single shot off the pace after the first round of the tournament that carries a $700,000 total purse were John Cook, Leonard Thompson, Bob Eastwood and Mark McCumber.

With Weiskopf at 70 were PGA champion Ray Floyd, Danny Edwards, Ben Crenshaw and Peter Oosterhuis, who said the course is "the kind where you can be playing very well and still be just tip-toeing around."

Jack Nicklaus, a 3-time winner of this event before it moved to its present site, shot 73. Masters champ Craig Stadler required 74 strokes. Tom Watson had a 75. The tournament will wind up with a 36-hole double round on Sunday, made necessary by heavy rains that washed out Thursday's play.

Although Lietzke was not pleased with what he called inconsistent ball striking, he said his round "has put me in position."

"Usually, when I get in this position, my game responds." This time, he said, it was his putter.

"It was the tool that saved me time and again," he said.

He made three of his four birdies with putts of 25, 35 and 35 feet, twice saved par from behind trees and one-putted the last five greens.

Gun Club shoot today

The Hereford Gun Club will shoot Sunday, beginning at 1 p.m. All shotguns are invited to attend, either for practice or competition. Prizes will be awarded in competition, although the emphasis is on practice. New participants are welcome.

McNamara replaces Mauch

Angels favored to repeat as AL West champs

One of A Series By
HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Gene Mauch finally won a division championship when he piloted the California Angels to the 1982 American League West title. Five games later, though, Mauch had gone from a hero to a goat.

What Mauch did was blow a 2-0 lead and the AL playoffs to Milwaukee, and it cost him his job.

Enter John McNamara, fired by the Cincinnati Reds last summer. Having been away from the AL since 1978, when he coached for the Angels, McNamara says he'll "need all the help I can get."

On the field, however, the Angels seem pretty well set except in the bullpen, where a replacement must be found for sore-armed Don Aase, out for the season following surgery. Right-hander Luis Sanchez (7-4, with 5 saves in 46 games) and lefty Andy Hassler (4 saves, 2.78 earned run average) probably will share the duties.

The starting rotation includes Tommy John (14-12 with New York and California), Geoff Zahn (18-8), Ken Forsch (13-11), Bruce Kison (10-5) and Mike Witt (8-6). John is 39 and Zahn is 36.

Bob Boone provides excellent catching and a timely bat. The only question in the infield is shortstop Rick Burleson's shoulder. If it still hurts, Tim Foli filled in nicely last year and Dick Schofield is a highly touted rookie. Elsewhere, Rod Carew (.319 in '82 and a seven-time AL batting champion) is at first, Bobby Grich (19 homers) at second and Doug DeCinces (30 HR, 97 RBI) at third.

Kansas City's Dick Howser says the Royals "have the nucleus of players and the type of club in 1983 where we anticipate being in the race again. We will start the season with the thought that we have a good chance to win."

The infield is star quality with Willie Aikens (17 homers) at first, Frank White (.298) at second, U.L. Washington at short and George Brett (.301, 21 HR, 82 RBI) at third. Amos Otis (88 RBI) and Willie Wilson (a league-leading .332) have two outfield spots locked up, John Wathan and Don Slaught provide solid catching and Hal McRae (.308, 27 HR, 133 RBI) is baseball's best DH.

Again, the starting pitchers are Larry Gura (18-12), Dennis Leonard (10-6), Vida Blue (13-12) and Paul Splittorf (10-10). Dan Quisenberry (.332) is a superb reliever.

Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa, who predicted a pennant for the White Sox last season, says this year's approach "is to be in a contenting position when the season reaches September and then make the most of that opportunity."

Free agent Floyd Bannister (12-13, plus a league-leading 209 strikeouts with Seattle) joins a deep pitching staff that includes LaMarr Hoyt (19-18), Britt Burns (13-5), Richard Dotson (11-15), Jerry Kosman (11-7), Dennis Lamp (11-8), Randy Martz (11-10 with the Crosstown Cubs) and Steve Mura (12-11 with St. Louis). The bullpen — Salome Barojas (21 saves as a rookie), Dick Tidrow, Kevin Hickey and Jim Kern — is just as deep.

Carlton Fisk was the All-Star catcher in 1982. Second baseman Tony Bernazard and shortstop Vance Law man the middle of the infield, but first and third are open. The strength of the 1982 White Sox was the offense — right fielder Harold Baines (25 HR, 105 RBI), DH Greg Luzinski (18 HR, 102 RBI), first baseman Tom Paciorek (.312) and center fielder Rudy Law (.318).

Where Paciorek will play is unleague sensations Greg Walker, a first baseman, and Ron Kittle, an outfielder. Walker hit .350 and Kittle .345 — with 50 homers and 144 RBI — with Edmonton in the Pacific Coast League.

Last year (76-86 and a fourth-place finish) was the most successful in Seattle's six-year history. The Mariners' strength was the AL's busiest bullpen — Bill Caudill (26 saves), Ed Vandeberg (9-4, with a 2.37 ERA) and Mike Stanton. Manager Rene Lachemann may call on them even more in '83.

Gaylord Perry (10-12) and Jim Beattie (8-12) went to camp as the top two starters, but Perry is 44 years old and Beattie has arm problems. The way is clear for a bunch of youngsters to make their presence felt, including promising Edwin Nunez, who won't be 20 until May 27. The catchers will be Rick Sweet and either Bud Bulling or Orlando Mercado.

Second base and shortstop are set, with Julio Cruz and Todd (no relation) Cruz, respectively. The other spots are up for grabs. The outfield probably will consist of Steve Henderson (.233 with the Cubs in '82), Dave (no relation) Henderson and Al Cowens (20 HR, 78 RBI). Richie Zisk (.292, 21 HR) will DH and bat cleanup.

Steve Boros, a thinking man's manager, makes his managerial debut with the Oakland A's, replacing Billy Martin. Boros' No.1 concern will be the health of pitchers Steve McCatty (6-3), Mike Norris (7-11), Matt Keough (11-18) and Rick Langford (11-16). Free agent Tom Burgmeier (7-0, 2.29 ERA with Boston) joins Dave Beard (10-9, 11 saves) in the bullpen.

The only set positions in the infield are Carney Lansford (.301 with Boston) at third — he came in a trade for Tony Armas — and Davey Lopes at second. Newcomer Tony Phillips and veteran Bill Almon will contest at short. First base? Who knows. Heralded Mike Davis replaces Armas and joins Rickey Henderson (a record 130 stolen bases) and Dwayne Murphy (27 HR, 94 RBI) in the outfield. Jeff Burroughs (16 homers) is the DH and strong-armed Mike Heath handles the catching.

Doug Rader, he of the flaky reputation, is the new manager of the Texas Rangers, they of the often flaky front office comings and goings. Among the questions he must answer: Will Dave Hostetter (22 homers in 113 games) be the first baseman or DH? Will Pete O'Brien (25 HR, 102 RBI) in the minors be at first or in the outfield?

Players set with positions include George Wright in center field, Larry Parrish in right, Mike Richardt at second, Bucky Dent at short, Buddy Bell at third and Jim Sundberg behind the plate. Charlie Hough (16-13), Danny Darwin (10-8) and rookie Mike Smithson will be starting pitchers, but the bullpen is a state of confusion.

Minnesota Manager Billy Gardner predicts "an extremely exciting year," which may surprise Twins fans who suffered through last year's 60-102 disaster.

However, several rookies in key positions showed much promise in '82 — first baseman Kent Hrbek (.301, 23 HR, 102 RBI), third baseman Gary Gaetti (25 HR, 84 RBI), right fielder Tom Brunansky (20 homers), catcher Tim Laudner — and should improve. Second-year outfielder Gary Ward hit 28 homers and drove in 91 runs and center fielder Jim Eisenreich hit

.303 when not sidelined by a nervous disorder. John Castino brings a great glove to second base.

Jardner's starting rotation consists of Bobby Castillo (13-11), Al Williams (9-7), Brad Havens (10-14), Jack O'Connor (8-9) and Frank Viola (4-10). A comeback by reliever Ron Davis (22 saves, but a 3-9 record and 4.22 ERA) is a must.

Prediction: California, Chicago, Kansas City, Minnesota, Oakland, Texas, Seattle.

World War III set in women's cage clash

RUSTON, La. (AP) — "It will be World War III" when the women from No. 1 Louisiana Tech and No. 3 Texas play Sunday for the NCAA Midwest Regional basketball title, said Leon Barmore, co-coach of the defending national champion Lady Techsters.

Led by All-America Janice Lawrence's 23 points and 10 rebounds, Tech coasted to an 81-54 victory over No. 14 Auburn in Friday night's semifinals. Texas edged No. 17 Kansas State, 73-70, on Cheryl Hartman's overtime heroics.

Tech, gunning for an unprecedented third consecutive national championship, will bring a 28-game winning streak — longest in women's college basketball — into Sunday's championship game against Texas, whose 25 victories in a row rank only behind the Techsters.

Tech is 29-1 for the season. Texas is 30-2. "It will be World War III," Barmore said of the matchup on Tech's home court. "They believe in defense, just like we do. It may be a matter of who can get the ball up the floor the best."

Tech's defense was awesome in the early going against Auburn.

Tech opened to a 16-0 lead, holding Auburn scoreless for nearly the first six minutes of the first half. During that period, Auburn missed seven shots and committed six turnovers.

Auburn never got closer than 14 points and Tech twice led by as many as 30 in a game in which every player for both team got into the ac-

Birds rout Texas, 10-3

MIAMI (AP) — Rookie outfielder John Shelby, who's hitting .400 for the spring, demonstrated his red-hot bat for the Texas Rangers.

Shelby collected five straight hits and drove in three runs to lead the Baltimore Orioles to a 10-3 win over the Rangers Friday night in an exhibition game.

Shelby doubled his first three times to the plate against Texas starter Frank Tanana and singled his last two times at bat.

Newly-acquired reliever Dave Tobik took the loss for the Rangers, giving up four runs in the sixth inning, when Shelby and Cal Ripken Jr. had two-run singles.

The Rangers scored all their runs in the sixth off Baltimore starter Dennis Martinez, with Jim Sundberg hitting a two-run single and George Wright knocking in the third run with another single before Mike Boddicker took over and got credit for the win.

tion. In addition to Lawrence, Debra Rodman had 18 points for Tech, Lori Scott 11 and sub Tia Sossamon 10.

Auburn, 24-8, was led by Becky Jackson with 13 points, Brenda Hill with 12 and Terri Mohr with 11.

Hartman had just 11 points for Texas, but they all seemed to fall at critical times.

One of her field goals put Texas out of reach in overtime. She then closed down a Kansas State rally with a key free throw and two rebounds. KSU finished at 26-6.

"We panicked a little bit," said Texas Coach Jody Conradt. "We have not been in a pressure situation since we started conference play."

"We started out pretty well, but couldn't make a break," she said.

Texas led from the opening buzzer until Kansas State tied it at 52-all with 5 minutes remaining. The Lady Longhorns then went ahead, 60-54, but Angie Bonner's driving layup with 12 seconds remaining sent the game into overtime with the scored tied at 62-all.

After trading field goals, Texas moved into an insurmountable 71-66 lead on a shot by Hartman with 1:41 left in the extra period.

Kansas State then moved to within a point, at 71-70 with 45 seconds left, on field goals by Tina Dixon and Priscilla Gary, but Texas then got a free throw by Kamie Ethridge and another by Hartman, who also pulled in two critical rebounds in the final 20 seconds.

Annette Smith, a 5-foot-11 center, led Texas with 21 points and 11 rebounds, followed by Terri Mackey's 16 points and Hartman's 11.

Gary, a 5-foot-5 playmaker, and Bonner, who also had 13 rebounds, led Kansas State scorers with 18 points each. Tina Dixon also had 12 points for KSU.

SPORTS TALK:

Johnny Neumann

Interviewed by Peter Meade

Johnny Neumann is coach and general manager of the Maine Lumberjacks of the Continental Basketball Association. Out of the University of Mississippi, he was a guard in the ABA and NBA for seven seasons (1971-78).

You were the collegiate scoring leader (40.1 points per game) as a sophomore at Ole Miss in 1971. Then you signed a $2 million ABA contract with Memphis. Do you regret turning pro at age 19?

No. If my father hadn't suffered a heart attack at that time, I would have stayed in school. But in the long run everything has worked out OK for me because I've experienced a lot of things, and hopefully these things have made me mature and will make me a better coach. I understand possibly every situation a basketball player can be put in.

How would you describe your coaching style?

It's just something that came naturally. I'm 32, and I've been playing basketball 26 years. I think a lot of the things I do are regimented from when I was with the Kentucky organization (in the ABA). I certainly learned a lot from Hubie Brown.

And also from playing for Jerry West, Stan Albeck and Jack McCloskey when I was with the Lakers. They certainly have an influence on the type of defense I run. When I got to the Lakers I didn't understand the emphasis of team defense until I played with a great center like Kareem (Abdul-Jabbar).

I'm very emotional, I guess a little like Bobby Knight. But I don't pattern myself after him or say that I'm in his class. I'm very hard on my players, but I'm very complimentary, too.

I'm hard on them. But I want them to understand it's nothing personal. It's just what it's going to take them to get into the NBA.

Pro basketball isn't as much fun as the college game?

No, because you become a commodity. When you turn professional, basketball is no longer a game, it becomes a job. It's like someone working 9-to-5. That was the problem I had adjusting to.

There are a lot of things that enter into it that the average person doesn't realize, and these were the things I couldn't deal with at that time. Because in college you're spoiled, you get just about everything you want. In the pros it's a lot different.

If you're good for the franchise at that time, it's OK. But if you're not, they're going to try and move you. I can understand this for the type of money they pay.

But the biggest problem — and I see it here especially in the CBA — is that a lot of players are in that predicament. They are in a transition, their whole dream has been to play in the NBA, and they don't know if they'll ever be able to realize this dream.

You were not known as the most coachable player. What made you decide on a coaching career?

I think the media put a label on me, and until people talk to me and really get to know me — because I've been labeled a certain type of individual — they're surprised when they get to know me.

I've always been very technically sound, so my basketball team is very technically sound. We play good defense, too. I've always prided myself in that part of it. For me, I don't think the basketball end of it was ever a problem. The ability was always there.

I think the maturity and me being able to handle it mentally was something I wasn't prepared for at that time. I think the media presented their own kind of image of me, because I was good print, and I was very vocal and arrogant at that time. I was good copy for everybody.

How is life in the CBA different from the NBA?

Twelve- or 14-hour bus rides back and forth from Bangor are common. To the Midwest, we have van trips that are 20 hours. I ride in the van with my players. Because I expect them to do certain things when I'm coaching, and in return I expect them to make the same sacrifices I do. They're playing for little money and it's really hard, they are sacrificing a lot to acquire their dream ticket to the NBA.

MILAN, Italy (AP) - Top-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia isn't spending much time making his way through the field in the $365,000 Cuore Tennis Cup.

Lendl, the world's top-ranked player, took only 47 minutes Friday to trounce American veteran Sandy Mayer 6-1, 6-1. In one of today's semifinal matches, Lendl will face hard-serving Chip Hooper of Sunnyvale, Calif., who defeated Swedish teenager Thomas Hogsted 7-6, 6-1.

Lendl won their only other match — a semifinal of the Frankfurt tournament in 1982 — in straight sets.

"Lendl is the favorite but this tournament has been marked by upsets," said Hooper.

Lendl was the only seeded player to make the semifinals.

Six seeded stars, including Americans Gene Mayer, Steve Denton and Vitas Gerulaitis and Andres Gomez of Ecuador, were eliminated in the two first rounds.

The other semifinal will pit Kevin Curren of South Africa against American Bill Scanlon.

Curren, a 25-year-old from Durban, survived two match points in the third set to overcome fellow South African Eddie Edwards, 6-7, 6-4, 7-6. Scanlon downed Czechoslovakia's Tomas Smid 6-2, 4-6, 6-2.

"It will be another close match, which could be decided by serves," said Curren, who said he was tired after two straight exhausting matches.

He took nearly three hours to eliminate second-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina in the second round Thursday night and two hours and 34 minutes to defeat Edwards, a qualifier who played at his best on the fast court of the Milan indoor sports palace.

"I hope to sleep well and to recover some strength overnight," Curren added.

The 'Moon Man'

Why Minton is a high-priced flake

By Murray Olderman

PHOENIX, Ariz. (NEA) — Greg Minton is known as "The Moon Man," which denotes a being from outer space — in baseball parlance, a flake. Off on a planet of his own.

Minton is so flaky that last Dec. 14, his agent, Tom Reich, cajoled from the San Francisco Giants a new five-year contract that the reliever claims makes him the highest paid pitcher in baseball (Bruce Sutter's agent might want to argue the point).

Anyhow, you start with a base salary of $750,000 a year; that's up from $335,000 last year, when Greg took his case to arbitration and lost.

And then you toss in the performance incentives.

If he simply repeats his 1982 performance — when he registered 10 wins, 4 losses, 30 saves and an earned run average of 1.83 — Minton will collect $315,000 on top of his regular salary. Theoretically, he can hope for as much as half a million, or a total income of $1,250,000.

That's a "Moon Man"? So it was in order to ask Gregory Brian Minton — who is quite affable and handsome, tall and mustached — if he really believes he's a flake?

"I'm not the kind of flake who's going to sit on birthday cakes nude," he responds. "But I do think, in general, different than other people. It carries over into my baseball."

"When I get in a game, all I do is say to the hitter, 'You're very good. I'm very good. Here we go, hard and low, one-on-one.'"

"Where a lot of pitchers are worrying, 'How do I set him up? How do I do this? How am I going to get him out?'"

"The Moon Man doesn't have to be eccentric. My values are unusual."

Off the field, too? "Especially off the field. One time we were in San Diego on a road trip, and I was hanging out at a place called Torrey Pines. (Former Giants manager) Joe Altobelli was down underneath. He looked up and started waving and screaming at me. Altobelli kept patting his back pocket and putting up two fingers. I couldn't figure out why until I got back to the ball park and found out it was a $200 fine for hanging out on a road trip."

Such capers tend to be ignored because Minton, who is 31 years old, has emerged as one of great relief specialists in baseball — which he credits to accident and one "trick" pitch.

Minton had languished in the minors for most of nine summers from 1970 through 1978. The Giants — who acquired him in 1973 from the Kansas City organization — had called him up periodically, as the 10th man on a 10-man staff, and sent him back to the minors.

"The last day of spring training in '79," Minton recalls, "I was pitching to Bill Buckner of the Cubs and jammed him real good. He hit a little topper toward second base. I dove, rolled over, caught the ball on my rear end and got the guy — but felt a twinge in my left knee. The very next pitch to the next batter just blew out all the cartilage. Dr. Fred Behling operated on it."

Five weeks later, Minton was throwing for the first time in batting practice during the season. On the mound, he stepped gingerly and took a short stride, throwing easily with just the upper body.

After five pitches, Mike Sadek, a reserve catcher, trotted to the mound and said: "Moonie, what are you doing out here?"

"I'm throwing batting practice."

"Moonie, throw the thing straight, will ya?"

"What're you talking about?"

"The ball's going straight down," said Sadek.

Recalls Minton: "I didn't know whether to hug him or kiss him. "Somewhere, because of that knee operation and the shortened stride, my delivery started doing tricks. It left me with a good pitch that goes straight down at 92 miles per hour — and that nobody else throws. I'd always been a power pitcher, but until then it was straight as an arrow."

The new pitch has had a profound effect on Minton, who turned into one of baseball's top stars. He says, "Right now I'm the highest paid relief pitcher in history, by far. Good things are happening."

As a high school kid near Del Mar, Calif., Greg worked from 11 at night till 7 in the morning, and then went to class at 7:30. He was married in his senior year at age 17 (he and his wife, Susan, have three children who range in age from 13 to 8). He also worked as a youth as a part-time caddy at LaCosta.

"I was an original caddy for the American Airlines Golf Classic in 1968," he recalls. "This year, for the first time, I played in it. It was my first year for a ski vacation in the Grand Tetons. I played in my first major-league All-Star Game. All of a sudden, everybody is my best friend. I got a whole lot of business propositions coming my way."

DUNEDIN, Fla. (AP) — The Toronto Blue Jays, traditionally one of the doormats of the American League, have won 13 of 19 exhibition games this spring.

Jim Gott gave the Blue Jays a strong performance from the mound Friday to help defeat the Houston Astros 5-2.

Gott, a 23-year-old right-hander trying to win the fourth starting position in the Blue Jays rotation, blanked the Astros through six innings, allowing only three hits and walking one.

Bob Knepper, the Houston starter, went seven innings and took the loss, allowing five runs, two of them unearned.

The Blue Jays went up 1-0 in the first inning when second baseman Damaso Garcia led off with a double, was sacrificed to third by Dave Collins and scored as shortstop Dickie Thon mishandled a ground ball by Lloyd Moseby.

Toronto got two unearned runs in the second after Garth Iorg reached on an error by second baseman Bert Pena. Alfredo Griffin singled and Damaso Garcia followed with a single to score Iorg. Dave Collins then grounded out to score Griffin.

Willie Upshaw's double, a groundout by Iorg and a sacrifice fly by Griffin made it 4-0 in the sixth, but Houston came back with two in the seventh off reliever Tom Lukish on doubles by Denny Walling and Tony Scott and an error by Griffin.

GREG MINTON, known as "The Moon Man," doesn't think of himself as flaky. In fact, the San Francisco Giants hurler is one of the top relievers in baseball.

 OPTOMETRIST
 CARING FOR CONTACTS

QUESTION: I've been wearing glasses for quite a long time, but now I'm considering changing to contact lenses. Just how much care do contact lenses need?

ANSWER: Both contact lenses and glasses have advantages, depending on your needs and preference. If you wear contact lenses, special care should be taken to keep them clean and free of germs. When you go to bed or take a swim, take off your contacts first. You should also avoid irritating vapors and substances that could affect the lenses. On your "Don't List" should be such things as cosmetics, lotions, soaps, creams, and hair sprays. Don't let your contacts come in contact with them. Both contacts and glasses should fit properly to do you the most good and give you the most comfort.

Jury recesses without reaching verdict

DALLAS (AP) — Defendants and their lawyers trudged out of the courthouse eyeing an anxious weekend because the jury gave up until Monday on its charge to return a verdict in the civil rights trial of seven New Orleans policemen.

"I didn't plan on another week in Dallas, but I guess I'll have to," defense attorney Ralph Capitelli said Friday after the panel failed for a second full day to reach a consensus.

"It means it's going to be a long weekend," quipped defense lawyer Ralph Whalen.

The officers are accused of conspiracy and of violating the civil rights of men who claim they were beaten and threatened by police interrogating them about the killing of a fellow officer.

The conspiracy charge carries a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine. The misdemeanor civil rights charge carries a maximum one year in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Jurors sent a note to U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer Friday afternoon asking to review the testimony of a key prosecution witness.

A defense attorney said jurors asked to go over New Orleans police detective Oris Buckner's testimony about the interrogation of Johnny Brownlee and Robert Davis, two of five alleged beating victims.

Buckner, who testified under a grant of immunity, said he participated in beatings and saw the other officers beat and threaten the men.

Defense attorneys during final arguments tried to portray Buckner as an incompetent detective whose motives should be suspect because of his immunity and because his father died in the custody of New Orleans police.

Detective Ronald Brink, 37, one of the defendants, said confidently at midday Friday that jurors had a lot of testimony to review and that he was not surprised by or nervous about the prolonged deliberations.

"Lawyers told us the deliberations would last two days," he said. But later, as deliberations dragged on, Brink said, "They must be examining it very thoroughly."

Brink and Sgt. John McKenzie, 40, were the only defendants who waited outside the courtroom Friday.

"I don't know what to make of it," McKenzie said of the deliberations a short time before Buchmeyer instructed the jury to start again at 9:30 a.m. Monday.

The other defendants are detective Thomas R. Woodall, 32; and officers Dale Bonura, 34, Richard LeBlanc, 32, and Stephen Reboul, 32.

Clarence Green, Raymond and Ervin Hughes, Davis and Brownlee testified the officers pistol-whipped them, beat them with fists and a heavy book, threatened them with guns and put plastic bags over their heads to cut off their air supply.

On Nov. 8, 1980, the men were residents of the predominantly black neighborhood of New Orleans' Algiers section where the body of white patrolman Gregory Neupert was found shot to death.

Prosecutors contend the seven white officers were carrying out a vendetta after Neupert's slaying, that they were out of control and "willing to take any information they could at any cost."

Defense attorneys told the all-white, middle class jury that the charges are a collection of half truths and lies from men attempting to hide their cooperation with police from drug pushers and other toughs on the streets of New Orleans' West Bank.

Four people were killed in Algiers during a police crackdown in the aftermath of the Neupert shooting. No charges were filed in connection with the deaths.

However, the controversy triggered the resignations of Police Superintendent James Parsons and his top lieutenant and generated extensive publicity that prompted a federal judge there to move the trial to Dallas.

Murder trial resumes after defense withdraws motion

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Attorneys representing a former city police captain accused of fatally shooting an oilman at a downtown street intersection say that their client was angry after he discovered the oilman was having an affair with his wife.

Prosecutors rested their case Friday against L.R. Wynne, who is charged with firing five shots into 63-year-old Erle Winston Mathis last Oct. 15 as Mathis waited in his pickup for a traffic light to change at the intersection.

Defense attorneys are scheduled to begin testimony at 9 a.m. Monday. But they declined to say whether Wynne or his wife would testify.

Prospective jurors were told earlier in the week by defense attorney Travis Shelton of Lubbock that he would try to prove Wynne shot Mathis while in a state of temporary insanity.

The prosecutor says he expects the trial to end by Tuesday or Wednesday.

Wynne's attorneys on Friday withdrew an earlier motion for a mistrial. Shelton said the motion was withdrawn for tactical reasons, but declined to elaborate.

Before the motion was withdrawn, State District Judge H. Bryan Poff Jr. said he had decided to grant it.

"Case authority appears to be on your side," Poff told defense attorneys. "In all candor, I can tell you I would grant it (the motion)." Poff said the defense could not reintroduce the motion later.

Poff had recessed the trial Thursday afternoon to ponder how he would rule on the mistrial motion, which came after a Houston policeman testified Wynne had refused to sign a confession after his arrest in Houston the day after the shooting.

An accused person has no obligation under the Fifth Amendment to testify against himself, and his refusal to do so cannot be used against him, Shelton said. He had argued that the officer's remark prejudiced the jury, and no instruction to disregard the statement can block the damage.

The trial was recessed again at 2:05 p.m. Friday after Shelton complained of back pains and told Poff that medication he was taking for the problem would hamper his performance in court.

Wynne, 53, was overcome by a fit of passion after discovering his wife and Mathis engaging in sexual intercourse on a country road west of Amarillo, less than an hour before the early afternoon shooting, Shelton said.

In testimony Friday, Potter County sheriff's Lt. Claude Stephens, assigned to the major crimes unit, told jurors that fingerprints found in the rented car used in the shooting matched those of Wynne.

An FBI expert also testified

Friday that glass particles found in Wynne's car and in the vehicle rented from an Amarillo automobile agency were the same type as that in the passenger door of Mathis' pickup.

Glass particles were also found on two shirts and a pair of pants left in the trunk of Wynne's car, the FBI agent testified. He said particles were also found by vacuuming Wynne's car and the rental vehicle.

Brake and accelerator pedals in Wynne's car also were found to have glass particles on them, he said, which matched glass from Mathis' truck.

Wynne was captain of the detective division of the Amarillo Police Department until resigning in the early 1970s to operate a private security firm.

Red Cross volunteers plan annual chili supper

Leon Trevino, left, steward for the local Letter Carriers Union, places a Carrier Alert decal on D.A. Rudd's mailbox to show that he is a participant in the Carrier Alert program as Betty Henson, executive director of the local Red Cross Chapter, looks on. Through the program, which was recently started by the American Red Cross, U.S. Postal Service, and Letter Carriers Union, carriers monitor participants' mailboxes for unusual mail accumulation which could signify injury or other trouble and report this to Red Cross volunteers who then check on the person.

Volunteer of the Year will be named when the local Red Cross Chapter holds its annual chili supper from 5 to 8 p.m. Friday, April 8, at the Community Center. Tickets are $2.75 for adults and $1.50 for children six and under. All proceeds will go for disaster relief. Susie Bainum, left, chairman of the mobile canteen for the disaster committee, receives a few pointers on making chili from Sally Walker, who has been making the chili for the annual supper since the chapter first began sponsoring the event.

American Red Cross volunteers across the country are celebrating Red Cross Month during March. The 102-year-old organization is actively involved in a number of volunteer services, from disaster relief to health care programs such as CPR, first aid and water safety. Here, Audine Dettman, right, assists Bess Jennings, a Westgate Nursing Home resident, with physical therapy exercises. Red Cross volunteers provide physical therapy assistance each day to a dozen Westgate residents.

Connie Gilbert, left, is a Red Cross first aid instructor and Elaine Taylor, who was named Volunteer of the Year this past year, is a Red Cross water safety instructor and chairman of the water safety committee. Respiratory emergency techniques, using dummies like the one shown on the table, are taught in both of these areas. CPR instructor classes will be starting May 21-22. Interested persons are asked to call the Red Cross office for more information.

Secretary looking forward to retirement

BY LINDA CAUDLE
Family News Editor

Will retirement be boring? "Goodness, no!" says Dorothy Mercer, a Hereford native who is retiring this week after 27 years as secretary to the superintendent of the Hereford Independent School District.

"I've learned to play bridge and both my husband and I enjoy horse racing and traveling," she explains. "I recently joined La Plata Study Club and I hope to get more involved in church work."

"It will be nice to rest and also have plenty of time to do all these things, although through the years my bosses have always been very generous in allowing me to do some of the things that we wanted to do as a family."

Dorothy says that she's thoroughly enjoyed her working years. "It's been a challenging position," she comments. "The responsibilities often changed so I was never bored."

She has worked under seven different superintendents since she was first hired as secretary to Superintendent Fred J. Cunningham in August of 1956.

"At that time there were only two secretaries in the Hereford Public Schools - myself and the high school principal's secretary," says Dorothy. "The office of the superintendent was located in the high school building."

"There were only five campuses and approximately 125 professional personnel. Now there are nine campuses and the number of professionals has tripled."

But Dorothy is quick to add that there have been many other changes too, besides just the obvious growth in physical structures and personnel. "We've come a long way in 27 years," she smiles.

When she first started the job, Dorothy handled secretarial duties of the school nurse and other administrators who had no secretaries. She also took care of the school lunch menus, as there was no separate cafeteria staff at that time.

She worked only ten months out of the year for her first eight or ten years, but since then has worked year-round.

One of Dorothy's responsibilities through the years has been to see that all professional personnel are properly certified. And since the schools have been employing para professionals or aides, Dorothy's job has been greatly expanded.

"I've really enjoyed working with the teachers and aides," she comments. "My one regret is that I never had the opportunity to work closely with the students or to get to know them."

As secretary to the superintendent, another of Dorothy's responsibilities has been taking the school board minutes and preparing notices for board meetings.

She was instrumental in helping to prepare the first set of board policies, formulated by the Board of Trustees, and has been custodian of the Board Policy Manual, something she says has been quite a responsibility because the laws and regulations are continually changing and expanding.

Dorothy has been involved in preparing for many bond issues during her tenure in the public schools. She has seen many new school buildings as a result, as well as the new football field, stadium, and athletic fieldhouse.

"One good thing I think Hereford missed out on through failure of a bond issue, however, was a community college," states Dorothy. "I believe it would have been an excellent opportunity to expand our educational programs and provide a needed service to local people."

Other changes Dorothy has seen include expansion of local vocational programs, tremendous advances in the fine arts and speech departments, and addition of new business courses such as computer training.

"I think we have a progressive school system," she comments. "And we have taken advantage of many opportunities to grow and expand."

Dorothy has been involved in the public schools not only in her job, but also as a member of several educational organizations, which she feels has helped her better understand the school system.

She is a member of the Texas State Teachers Organization and has been a strong supporter of it because she believes through the efforts of this organization, standards for educational secretaries have improved. Dorothy was named an honorary member of the Delta Xi Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma professional educators and she has also served as editor of the "Texas Secretary."

Along with the superintendents' secretaries at Dimmitt, Springlake-Earth, and Farwell, Dorothy was instrumental in organizing the Peak of the Panhandle Educational Secretaries Association, an affiliate of the Texas Educational Secretaries Association.

She has held every office in the state association except president, and says she would have accepted nomination for that office if it had not been a time when the local office was undergoing changes and she felt it would take too much time away from her desk.

Dorothy completed work for a Professional Standards Certificate, issued by the National Educational Secretaries Association, and has served on the local, district, and state levels of the organization.

She says that this involvement was enjoyable because it gave her the opportunity to meet many educational secretaries and their bosses throughout the state.

"My bosses were super, letting me have time off to attend the conferences and really get involved," says Dorothy. "It's been very interesting work."

Dorothy has also been able to take courses at West Texas State University and Amarillo College on occasion to keep up with changes in the educational scene. "The schools made it possible for me to take these courses, though they were not required, and I am grateful for that," she says.

Working under seven different superintendents, Dorothy says that one of her regrets was seeing her bosses move on. "It was sad to see them go, but I appreciated the fact that each new superintendent allowed me to stay on as his secretary," she comments. "I hope that somehow that made starting the new position easier for them, since I was familiar with the work."

"I will always be a strong supporter of the public schools," adds Dorothy. "When you work as closely as I have with them, you realize the problems that educators face."

Dorothy is married to Jim Mercer, a realtor at Lone Star Agency. They are the parents of one daughter, Mrs.

Gilbert (Ann) Sims, who is a teacher in the Lubbock Public Schools. The Mercers have two grandchildren, Kellie and Charlie Sims.

While Ann was growing up, Dorothy was involved with the Band Parents Association, FHA, Tri Hi-Y, and was Mother Advisor for the Order of Rainbow Girls the year her daughter was Worthy Advisor.

Dorothy is a member of the Order of Eastern Star, having served several years on the board; and she and her husband are members of the First Baptist Church, where she taught a 16-year-old girls' Sunday school class for 11 years.

As Dorothy retires, she has been guest of honor at several retirement parties, one given by work associates and another by close friends.

The central office staff, principals, and president of the school board held a salad buffet in her honor recently, presenting her with a beautifully decorated cake and an Oster electronic kitchen center, which Dorothy says will be fun to use now that she'll have more time in the kitchen.

At Retirement Dinner

Dorothy Mercer holds a brass candelabra which friends presented her at a retirement dinner Friday night in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bub Sparks. It was one of several parties honoring the longtime secretary for the superintendent of schools.

Along the Frio

Homemakers club tours Cowgirl Hall of Fame

ALONG THE FRIO BY MRS. OWEN ANDREWS Frio Homemakers Club met Tuesday at the Cowgirl Hall of Fame for a scheduled tour. Jackie Hammett was tour guide and discussed various exhibits, explaining some of the future plans for building and grounds. Art displays from school students and others, and museum pieces from many doors are especially interesting.

Those participating in the tour were Mes. Ruth Robbins, Georgia Andrews, Darlene Richardson, Nadine Warrick, Loleta Vinson, Annie Lee Dobbins, Sarah Walton, Ellen Warrick, and Jeremy Richardson.

Several members of Frio Baptist Church painted the inside of the pastor's home one day last week. Those doing the work included Betty and Weldon Stephan, Linda Fry, Marguerite Cole, Beverly Paetzold, Darlene Richardson, Carleta Harkins and Linda Baird.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Robbins and Scott took a trip to the Big Bend country during spring break from school. They took a guided tour of "Lost Mine Trail," a foot tour up a mountain. Scott took a raft ride down the Rio Grande one day. They were away three or four days.

The T.L. Sparkmans received an announcement recently from Mr. and Mrs. Lon Conner, former pastor at Frio, that they have a new son, born March 4. The Conners, who live at Ft. Worth, have named the baby Wade Byars. They also have a son and daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Vinson have recently moved into Hereford, to their home on Star Street. They have been living north of Tam - Anne gin for the past two or three years. He is still farming there.

Mrs. Gerry Robbins and children of Archer City are here visiting her parents, the Bradfords, and his parents, the Frank Robbins. She has been helping sit with the children of her friend, Mrs. Mike Cleavinger. The small children have both been ill in the Hereford hospital.

Little Miss Jill Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronnie Hall, of Canyon, recently underwent corrective eye surgery in High Plains Baptist Hospital, Amarillo. She is 2 years old. The Halls have a baby son, born Feb. 28, who has been named Clifton Dale. Paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. J.E. Warrick of this community.

Participants

are announced

Winners from Community Christian School who will be participating in the Deaf Smith County Junior Spelling Bee were announced this week. Named were Blake Buckley and Travis Vaughn. Chad Urbanczyk is the alternate.

The public is invited to attend the junior bee at 1:30 p.m. on April 5 and the senior bee at 1:30 p.m. April 6 in the Deaf Smith County Library.

Seeking victory in World War I, Germany announced unrestricted submarine warfare Jan. 31, 1917. The policy meant that any ship - armed or unarmed, neutral or hostile - could be fired on and sunk. The move was an attempt to destroy Britain's food supply. However, the submarine campaign helped bring the United States into the war, leading to Germany's defeat.

Abundant Life

SELF ENCOURAGEMENT

By Bob Wear

THE DESIRABLE situation is the one in which we encourage and appreciate each other, and there are such situations. This, however, is not dependable for all times and conditions of life. Therefore we must be able to continue doing what we know should be done, just because it needs doing. The doing will be reward enough, or should be, but we may not be disappointed if we expect it and permit ourselves to rely on this kind of help.

MUTUAL ENCOURAGEMENT and appreciation are expressions of human behavior at its best. In fact, it is amazing what such interaction can accomplish. This action will strengthen the marriage, and make a good marriage better. It is very helpful in the parent-child relationship, because both parents and children need encouragement and appreciation. In every other area of human association, such thoughtfulness will make everybody and everything better.

"WE SHOULD seize every opportunity to give encouragement, because it is the oxygen of the soul." - G.M. Adams.

Women's Division salad supper planned April 5

The quarterly meeting of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Women's Division will be held Tuesday, April 5 at the Community Center. A salad supper will be served by Caison's beginning at 7:30 p.m. at a cost of $4.75 per person.

The program for the evening will be a musical presentation by Jeryl Hoover.

Committee chairmen will report on their current projects and door prizes will be given away.

Winners of the annual membership drive will be announced by Judy Williams. First prize (15 or more memberships) is $75, second prize is $50, and third prize is $25.

Tying the knot wouldn't be bad at all; it's when they've used a slip noose that they've really got you, says a marriage-shy friend.

They'll never be able to recall enough autos to correct the loose nuts behind the steering wheels.

VOTE for DALE PIERSON for School Board

Pd. Political Announcement Paid for By Dale Pierson

I believe in the Hereford Schools. I graduated in 1972 from Hereford High.

I also believe in the future of the Hereford Schools. I want our children to have the best education possible. My main reason for seeking the School Board is my children, Tanya and Eric.

SUPPOSE we do not receive encouragement, what can we do? We must not permit the lack of such response from others to take away our initiative, our drive, and our interest in doing our best in the helpful things that we can and should do. If others do not encourage us, we must encourage ourselves. Yes, we do this and do it very effectively.

SELF-ENCOURAGEMENT will enable us to maintain an enthusiastic interest in living, because it is an appropriate part of mature responsibility. When we know what we are doing, why we are doing it, and are convinced that it is worth the doing; this life situation will provide its own encouragement. Now and then, there will be some encouragement and appreciation from others; and this will be a welcome plus.

Petree, Hightower exchange vows

Avenue Baptist Church was the setting for the Saturday evening wedding uniting Sarah Roline Petree and Christopher Lon Hightower. The Rev. C.G. Grigg, of the church, officiated at the ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. G.W. Petree of 213 Avenue K. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Chloe Rippey of 822 Brevard and Layman Hightower of Tularosa, N.M.

The front altar of the church was adorned with two brass sunburst candelabra flanked by brass buckets filled with green scheffleria plans. Red satin bows decorated the pews.

The bride's sister Mrs. Leann Bain was matron of honor. Robby Dobbins of Amarillo was best man.

Escorting guests to the pews were Keith Hightower, the groom's brother, and T-Bird Grigg.

Brandon Petree, the bride's nephew and son of Mr. and Mrs. Lenney Petree, was ring bearer. Mende and Melanie Petree, the bride's nieces, were candle lighters.

Wedding music was provided by Mrs. Cynthia Streun, organist; Cindy Chetham, pianist, and Alan Morris, Mrs. Chetham, and Mrs. Judy Grigg, vocalists. Principal selections included "The Lord's Prayer," "Wither Thou Goest" and "The Wedding Song."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a chantilly lace over taffeta wedding gown, styled with figurine bodice and bouffant skirt. The sweetheart neckline was edged with scallops and the sleeves were tapered to wrist points.

From a front panel, tiers of lace were gathered to add fullness to the spreading skirt and shape to a brief train. The dress belonged to the bride's sister, Mrs. Leann Bain.

The bride wore a circular floral wreath headpiece of red and white roses and carried a bouquet of red roses trimmed with baby's breath and white streamers.

Her jewelry included her mother's wedding band and a mustard seed necklace.

The bride's attendant wore a red and white dotted Swiss street length dress featuring a white collar trimmed with lace. The sleeves were trimmed with white and the waist was accented with a white satin sash. She carried a long-stemmed red rose with baby's breath and greenery, accented with white streamers.

Lela Duggan, the bride's cousin, registered guests at a reception which followed in the church fellowship hall. Mrs. Verna Wagner of Vega served cake, and punch was served by Darla Duggan, the bride's cousin.

Others assisting with the reception were Mrs. Jan Petree, sister-in-law of the bride, and Mrs. Jane Duggan, the bride's aunt.

The serving table was laid with a white lace cloth imported from Switzerland. The three-tiered wedding cake was trimmed with red sugar roses and the cake centerpiece featured a kissing couple sitting on a half moon. A red candle and the bride's bouquet added to the table decorations.

A small table decorated with an open Bible and a single candle held the rice bags.

The bride's traveling costume consisted of a denim prairie skirt with a plaid shirt. The couple will be at home at 208 West 13th St., Apt. B, in Hereford.

The bride graduated from Hereford High School in 1982 and is currently employed by M.E. Moses. The bridegroom is employed by Lawrence Ward Trucking Co.

Color, design discussed at garden club meeting

Members of Bud to Blossom Garden Club met Friday morning in the home of Mrs. Joe Spann, who continued her program on color and the elements and principles of design in flower arranging.

She pointed out that a person should carefully plan a garden scheme with his or her favorite color in mind. Various colors will create different moods, such as pink for romance, yellow for warmth, and red for strength and love.

Few people plan an entirely red garden, noted Ms. Spann, but instead use it for an accent color in other color schemes. She also pointed out that a white container should be avoided when arranging flowers, because it will draw attention away from the flowers.

The business portion of the meeting dealt with the 1983 scholarship which will be awarded to a high school senior and the upcoming state convention slated for April 27 in Dallas. Mrs. Jess Robinson will be attending this convention as a delegate from Bud to Blossoms.

Mrs. Robinson was hostess for the meeting and served refreshments to Dixie Porter, Jane White, Paula Hamby, and Mrs. Spann.

The next meeting is scheduled for April 15 at 9:30 a.m. at the Community Center. The program will be on the cultivation of chrysanthemums and summer annuals that can take the Panhandle heat. All interested persons are welcome to attend.

The only thing transient about a temporary tax is the time it takes to become permanent.

Putting Up Posters

Matt Coplen, left, and Sha Gearn, members of Janet McWhorter's seventh through ninth grade Sunday school class at the First Presbyterian Church, put up a poster at a local business to announce services featuring the Rev. Peter Marshall Jr. scheduled April 8-10 at the First Presbyterian Church and the First United Methodist Church. Members of Ms. McWhorter's class are also helping distribute flyers.

Peter Marshall to conduct services here April 8-10

The First Presbyterian Church, 610 N. Lee St., and the First United Methodist Church, 501 N. Main St., will sponsor a series of weekend services featuring the Rev. Peter J. Marshall Jr., noted author, preacher and teacher on Christian growth and maturity, April 8-10.

Evening services, at 7:30 p.m. April 8-9 and 7 p.m. April 10, will be held at the Methodist Church and morning services, at 10 a.m. on April 9 and 11 a.m. on April 10, will be at the Presbyterian Church.

Rev. Marshall was in Hereford last year and conducted a weekend seminar at the First Presbyterian Church. He is a Presbyterian minister who resides at Cape Cod, Mass., and conducts preaching and teaching missions in various churches across the nation.

He is co-author of "The Light and the Glory," a book about God's call on this nation and narrative of the founding of this country, from a Christian perspective.

All services will be open to the public.

Class meeting slated Tuesday

The Hereford High School class of 1973 will hold a general meeting to continue making plans for their ten year reunion at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the offices of Schlabs & Hysinger Commodity Services, 1500 W. Park Avenue.

All alumni are welcomed to attend.

The reunion is scheduled for May 28-29 in Hereford. All alumni who are planning to attend are strongly urged to make reservations before the end of March.

For further information, contact Steve Hysinger.

The wise traveler chooses a professional, competent travel agent who knows his business and keeps abreast of the industry changes. We invite you to join the growing number of people who have already discovered that the way to take the confusion out of travel is to become a client of HEREFORD TRAVEL CENTER. There is never any charge to you for our services and in fact many times we can even save you money by locating the lowest fares. We are located at 144 W. 2nd, 364-6813. Most major credit cards honored. Open: Mon.-Fri. 8:30-5:30. Sat. 9-12.

Deregulation has brought the airline industry into the free enterprise marketplace with a vengeance. Not only does competition spur fluctuating fare costs just about every day, but there are many new carriers, routes and destinations as well. More than ever, the traveler-consumer can make these competitive factors work to best advantage. However, to do so, choosing a well-informed travel agent is a must. Only a professional can keep tabs on the flurry of change. The agent presents all of the airlines to better serve the traveler. And, the amazing part is that a travel agent serves his/her client at no cost to the client. That is the best bargain of all.

Vows repeated Saturday

Brenda Scott of Muleshoe and Scott Turner of Hereford were united in marriage at 6 p.m. Saturday at the First Baptist Church in Muleshoe with the Rev. Randy Butler of First Baptist Church, Crosbyton, officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond L. Scott of Muleshoe and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Doyle E. Turner of Hereford.

Mary Hicks, the bride's cousin, was maid of honor and Mike Turner, brother of the groom, was best man. Elaine Russel of Clovis, N.M., served as bridesmaid and Bill Lange of Hereford was groomsmen.

Ushers included Troy Scott and Ronald Scott of Muleshoe; and Terry Breeding and Allen Zion of Amarillo.

Ronda Scott and Heath Scott, niece and nephew of the bride and children of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Scott, served as flower girl and ring bearer. Mrs. Bobbie Johnson of Muleshoe provided wedding music and accompanied Vickie Kendall of Hereford as she sang "Love Will Grow" and "That's the way."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a high necked ivory gown featuring lace inset bodice accented with satin ribbon and pearl buttons, and edged with a wide lace ruffle. The gathered skirt was trimmed in lace, satin, and a matching ruffle.

Her head dress was of ivory tating and the tating bordered the veil. She carried a "True Love" carefree arrangement of beige, wheat, and mauve roses with gypsophila, trimmed with a lace bow inset with satin.

Her attendants wore floor length burgandy dresses designed with V-necks and their flowers matched the bridal bouquet. The flower girl carried a bouquet of beige and wheat love knots.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall following the ceremony. Joyce Scott, sister-in-law of the bride, invited guests to register, and Debby Clark, Vickie Morris, and Debbie Magby served cake and punch.

Brass appointments with a candelabrum of brass and marble decorated the bride's table. Atop the cake the bride's chosen flowers, gypsophila, and flowers encircled the cake.

The couple will reside at Route 3, Hereford.

The bride graduated from Muleshoe High School and Texas Tech University and is presently employed by the Muleshoe Independent School District.

The bridegroom graduated from Hereford High School and attended Clarendon Junior College. He is currently self-employed with Turner-Well Service in Hereford.

Holy Week services commence

Holy Week Services at St. Anthony's Catholic Church commence today, Palm Sunday, with the solemn blessings of psalms at the 11 a.m. Mass. Parishioners will congregate in the school auditorium to join in a procession to the church in commemoration of Jesus' triumphant entry into Jerusalem.

A communal Penance service, followed by individual confessions, is scheduled for Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the church. Several priests will be available at this time. Confessions will also be heard on Thursday from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m.; Friday, 6:30-7:15 p.m. and Saturday, 2:30-3:30 p.m.

On Holy Thursday, the Mass of the Lord's Supper with the Madatum, washing of the feet, will begin at 8 p.m. After mass there will be a procession with the Blessed Sacrament to the Repository.

From 9 p.m. to midnight, parishioners will observe an adoration of the presence of Jesus in the Blessed Sacrament, in alphabetical list according to the first letter of their family name. On Good Friday, parishioners will observe the Exultation of the Cross. The liturgy of the day begins at 5 p.m., including the reading of Christ's passion and death according to St. John, the veneration of the cross and Holy Communion; also public prayers for believers and non-believers, and for all believers in the world. Stations of the cross will be at 7:30 p.m.

The Mass of the Resurrection for the Easter Vigil or Holy Saturday will begin with the blessing of the new fire. After the homily, seven new members will be received into the Catholic Church. The catechumens, or candidates, will make a communal renewal of their baptismal vows, and will also receive the sacraments of Confirmation and Holy Eucharist.

On Easter Sunday, April 3, the children's choir will sing for the 9 a.m. Mass and the adult choir will sing for the 11 a.m. Mass. Celebrating with the words from a famous hymn: "He is Lord. He is Lord. He is risen from the dead and He is Lord. Every knee shall bow, every tongue confess that Jesus Christ is Lord."

Program of music, poetry presented

Members of the Calliopean Study Club met Thursday evening in the home of Irene Coneway. Lyndia Muse served as co-hostess. A program of poetry and music was presented by Meredith Wilcox, assisted by Leslie Woodard, soloist, and Linda Gilbert, accompanist.

The program was made up of nine separate selections, including "The Rose," "Christ and the Little Ones," "Christ Went up into the Hills" sung by Leslie and accompanied by Linda. "The Crucifixion," "At the Cry of the First Bird" sung by Leslie, "Spring," "Easter Carol" sung by Leslie, "The Lonely Lily" and "Easter Morn."

The hostesses served refreshments during a social hour following the program. The meeting was adjourned after a brief business session.

Guests attending were Margaret Golden, Mozelle Neil, Helen Langley, Buddy McBrayer, Dr. Duffy McBrayer, Nan Coneway, Amy Coneway, and Betty Coneway of Garden City, Kan.

Other members present included Lee Cave, Zella Mae

Crump, Audine Dettmann, Marye Fraser, Amy Gilliland, Jane Gulley, Nancy Hayes, Faye Holt, Mary Sue Hull, Sue James, Sherri Kerr, Claudia McBrayer, Elizabeth McDowell, Kay McWhorter, Marjorie Mims, Kathlee Palmer, Kathryn Ruga, and Vera Threewit.

There aren't any trial balloons in TV; such launchings are called "miniseries." A boast about being able to hold one's booze is usually made at the same time you begin to spill your drinks.

It often seems that those who design "bailout" plans have bright prospects of a career in making lead life preservers.

Need for quality day-care greater than ever before

COLLEGE STATION — "The need for child day-care centers in Texas is greater now than ever," says Delores Stregelin, a family life education specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Texas has over 900,000 children from infants through age 14 whose mothers work. Yet in 96 Texas counties, state-regulated day-care centers are available for fewer than 100 children.

"The greatest concern of most parents is how to find a quality day-care center for their children," says Stregelin.

A safe environment and appropriate equipment are obvious necessities for any day-care center. The center should display a sign indicating that it has passed state and local licensing standards, which insure a safe building and equipment. In addition, Stregelin advises parents to check the amount of space available per child. A quality center will contain 40-50 square feet of indoor space, and 100 square feet of outdoor space for each child.

Day-care facilities should include a cot and a private place to nap for each child, as well as child-sized furniture and bathroom equipment. The center should also provide nourishing lunches and frequent nourishing snacks for the children.

"But the most important sign of a quality day care center is the staff," states Stregelin. Two or three adults should be available to care for each group of eight to ten children.

According to Stregelin, a philosophy of parent involvement is an important indicator of staff quality. The day care director and teachers should want parents to be a part of the daily routine and learning activities.

Most successful day-care directors will welcome parents into their centers, and will be eager to answer questions and discuss their concerns, says Stregelin.

"Visit several day-care centers to observe the daily routine before making a choice," advises Stregelin. Parents should look for a cheerful atmosphere, where children enjoy their daily routine and smiles are typical.

Ann Landers Perfect deviled eggs

DEAR READERS: Will I never learn? After my catastrophic experience with that meat loaf recipe I swore off getting involved with recipes ever again. But the letter from the woman who was desperate to learn how to make a successful deviled egg got to me.

Her yolks turned dark, were off-center and the whites were like rubber. So I printed her letter and suggested that she contact the food editor of her newspaper.

With all the serious problems in the world, I was stunned at the hundreds of people who wrote at once to rescue that poor woman from her dilemma. This week no one seems to care about unemployment, inflation, the national deficit, kids on drugs, drunken drivers or cheating spouses. The major concern is to help that woman turn out perfect deviled eggs.

Here are some samples from my mailbag:

OXNARD, CALIF.: Please tell "No Egghead in McAllen, Tex.," that she is probably making the same mistake most cooks make — trying to shell the eggs immediately after boiling. THIS IS WRONG. She should put them in the refrigerator overnight. The next morning the shells will slide off easily.

CHARLESTON, S.C.: That Texas woman will make a perfect deviled egg if she will follow my grandmother's advice. Take a strong needle and prick the round end of the egg before she puts it in the water to boil.

NEW BRUNSWICK, LA.: Twenty years ago a chef at Antoine's in New Orleans told me never to boil eggs. They should be on the stove only long enough to come to a boil and removed at once. Then a lid should be placed on the pan and they should stand for 25 minutes.

CHICAGO: Tell "Texas" to pour a couple of ounces of wine vinegar in the water and her troubles will be over.

DECATUR, ILL.: When putting eggs on to boil, the cook should wear stove mitts. The electricity from her body is ruining the eggs.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS.: For the woman who is bedeviled by lousy deviled eggs: Is she putting them under the cold water faucet before peeling? Big mistake. They should be peeled while hot.

GRAND ISLAND, NEB.: Never peel boiled eggs when they are hot. Put in ice water for 10 minutes.

FROM HELOISE: Don't peel hard-boiled eggs! Shake the pan vigorously and the shells will come off by themselves.

LYNCHBURG, VA.: That lady in Texas should not be ashamed. The problem is with the eggs. They aren't fresh enough. She should buy them from another market.

PORTAGE, WIS.: When deviled eggs fail, it's because the eggs have small cracks not visible to the naked eye. She should examine them under a magnifying glass.

ANCHORAGE, ALASKA: The yolks will always be perfectly centered if stored in a rack with the pointed ends DOWN.

MEXICO CITY: It is not the cook's fault when egg yolks are off-center. The hen needs to find another rooster.

Police novel available at library

BY DIANNE PIERSON
County Librarian

Several new bestsellers will be available this week at the Deaf Smith County Library. Joseph Wambaugh, author of "The Choir Boys," heads the list of new books with a fascinating police novel entitled, "The Delta Star."

Wambaugh mixes the think-tank world of Nobel Prize chemistry with the underworld of cops and killers. He is back with his cops-gone-crazy brand of humor, and a cast of wild, wonderful characters including Hans and Ludwig of the K-9 Corps, Rumpel Ronald, policewoman Jane Wayne, and at center stage, detective Maria Villalobos and his newfound girl friend, Lupe Luna.

In October 1981 a Soviet submarine carrying nuclear-tipped torpedoes ran aground in restricted Swedish waters. The story made world headlines.

But homicide detective Mario Villalobos and the other cops at Rampart Station, Los Angeles Police Department, had more immediate things to worry about:

Why was a street-walker named Missy Moonbeam pushed from the roof of the Wonderland Hotel? Why did her book contain the telephone number of Caltech, one of the world's finest institutions of scientific learning?

How did The Bad Czech, the meanest, maddest cop in the division, end up with a dead man's credit card instead of his own?

Villalobos links the Soviet sub with an L.A. homicide by pushing himself far past his limits when he comes across a set of scientific symbols called delta to delta star.

"The Delta Star" follows in the gripping tradition of Wambaugh's previous best sellers. He is also the author of "The Blue Knight." The Onion Field," and "The Black Marble."

In her latest book, Eugenia Price blends historical observation with masterful storytelling in a bountiful novel entitled, "Savannah," which sweeps readers into the passions and splendor of nineteenth century Georgia.

Mark Browning, a young man of privilege, watched Savannah emerge on the horizon in the spring of 1812, never imagining it held secrets to both his past and future. In Savannah, he would become intrigued with the war and town between his love for two women.

Eugenia Price's bestselling historical novels include the three that constitute the award-winning trilogy: "Beloved Intruder," "New Moon Rising" and "Lighthouse."

Other new books available this week include "Spearfield's Daughter" by Jon Cleary, author of the "Beaufort Sisters," "Men of Men" by Wilbur Smith and "Mary Ellen's Help Yourself Diet Plan" by Mary Ellen Pinkman.

Also available this week at the library is "The Microwave Cooking Library" which includes twelve volumes and a master index. It will be a valuable asset to anyone who owns a microwave.

Wedding date set

A May 28 wedding at the Central Church of Christ in Hereford is being planned by Lan Tran of San Antonio and Lynn Wayne Lauderback of Lubbock.

Miss Tran is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tinh Nguyen of Lubbock. Lauderback is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Armon Lauderback of 113 Hickory.

The bride-elect graduated from Jean Jacques Rousseau High School in Saigon, South Vietnam in 1976 and from Texas Tech University with a BA in French and a BS in zoology in 1980. She was a member of the French Honor Society.

She is currently a second year student at the University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio Dental School. She is a member of the American Student Dental Association. She became a U.S. citizen in January.

The prospective bridegroom is a 1974 graduate of Hereford High School. He graduated from Texas Tech University in 1978 with a BBA in production management and then received a BBA in accounting in 1980 from Texas Tech. He was a member of the Red Raider Band for four years and Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia Fraternity.

He is currently employed by Texas Instruments of Lubbock as a senior buyer.

Members hold sealed bid auction Thursday

Beverly Bryant was hostess to members of La Madre Mia Study Club on Thursday. The club held a sealed bid auction, in which members bid on articles they had bought. The money raised will be used by the project committee to donate to a local cause.

Members of the yearbook committee served as co-hostesses for the meeting. During the business session, an out-of-town trip with members' husbands was discussed. Ms. Blackwell was welcomed as a guest.

Other members present were Joyce Allred, Frances Berry, Jeri Bezner, Ruth Black, Sarah Hazelrigg, Mary Herring, Betty Lady, Gladys Merritt, Bettye Owen, Carrell Ann Simmons.

Also, Jenna Simons, Mysedia Smith, Georgia Sparks, Betty Taylor, Marline Watson, Mary Beth White, Judy Williams, and Pat Walsh.

These crisp, cleaned-up looks are just "suited" for Easter. Wear them on Sunday, then at work on Monday to really get your money's worth.

Off the Runway

By Anne Winston

If you've noticed a plethora of white bunnies, they're multiplying to get ready for Easter. And it's time to get your wardrobe ready, too.

Tailored, sophisticated and clear-lined describes the Easter suit of the '80s. Designers have slimmed down the silhouettes of their suits to flatter a woman's body again. And it's about time that someone takes note after all those grueling hours in the exercise gym.

They're calling these crisp, straight lines the architectural look, since fashion designers work on them as much as an architect designs a sleek, modern building. But these clothes have a sense of non-confining structure to them that a building can't quite muster.

An Easter suit in this architectural style, preferably in some delightful shade of linen, will easily make the transition from the holiday to the office. And then won't you really feel like you've gotten your money's worth?

Without question, the most important fabric of the season is linen, wrinkles and all. However, it's not the only newsmaker. Organza is rapidly replacing taffeta as the party fabric of the fashionable. And silk, in every variety from crepe de chine to satin to shantung, is making an important appearance.

Denim has gone dressy in Italy — your town is probably next. A new pale blue, lightweight variety is being used for suits and jacket dresses. And the leathers of fall are resurfacing for spring all pierced and handpainted, much to the cow's disapproval.

An artist's brush also has touched another medium — that of sweat-suiting. Yesterday's grey, grungy warm-up suit has come to life.

Today it jogs the mind in every color from purple to fuchsia to yellow and white. You'll have no more ho-hum days in the gym when you wear these feet-lifters which come hand splattered with paint, decorated with ribbons, tied with bows or covered with appliques.

If you can't bear the thought of baring yourself to the public in a swimsuit come this sunny season, now is the time to make yourself diet away from those lingering holiday tons. Eager-to-be worn swimsuits are hitting the stores.

You're right. Your skin has certainly paled from the final rays of last summer, but if you wait to buy a suit until you're toned and tanned, the ideal one will have received many a compliment on someone else!

And believe me, this year's swimwear is skimpier than ever, so a woman should shop earlier than ever to get the most flattering style for her figure.

Try a swimdress this year if yours is a fuller figure. Tunics work best if you're broader of hip, while women with wide thighs do well in the boy-leg model. When stomach and hip coverage are important, the sheath is a good suggestion.

Bandeau maillots should be worn by women with good shapes as should two-piece suits, which look best on small-waisted, large-busted figures. (What doesn't?) And Naturally, bikinis are only for those women with good figures who want maximum exposure. (And lots of attention!)

Surprisingly enough, the maillots, with their high-cut legs, are flattering even to those whose shapes are a bit full. And there's no question this is the year of the higher cutaways. Some times you have to wonder if they slipped and cut too much.

Sea blues and greens, lilacs and maroons are the main swimwear colors for '83, as well as black and white (which are sneaking over from the ready-to-wear collections). Water-colors on white, regatta stripes, new wave geometrics and graphics, brightly colored pipings and sashings are also front and focal.

While you're thinking ahead to summer and sunwear, some creative thinkers have come up with clever "musts" for sun goddesses. Michael Vollbracht for Sofere has done a beach towel to match his suits, while Gideon Oberson of Tel-Aviv has come up with coordinating sunglasses and sexy suits.

Couple is wed

MR. AND MRS. JOHN SCOTT FOSTER

Mr. and Mrs. Autry Ivins of 243 Hickory announce the marriage of their daughter, Laura Kay, to John Scott Foster, son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Foster of 309 Sunset Drive.

The couple were married recently in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harmon M. Weston of 402 West Park Ave.

The bride is a 1981 Hereford High School graduate and the bridegroom, also a 1981 graduate of HHS, is employed by Swift Independent. He is attending West Texas State University where he is majoring in business finance.

Method demonstration 4-H program set Monday

Martha Couch, 4-H and Youth Specialist, will present a program to the Deaf Smith County 4-H members and parents on Monday at 7 p.m. at the Community Center. The program will consist of information incentives for method demonstrations.

All 4-H'ers and 4-H parents are invited to attend. Miss Couch is a very dynamic and enthusiastic speaker; it will be inspiring to hear her, even if you are not interested in method demonstrations," said Penny Reinart, county extension agent. The 4-H Teen Leaders are all expected to be there.

Method Demonstrations are probably the most helpful and educational activities in 4-H. Participation in this contest area teaches public speaking skills, builds self-confidence, is a service to the community, expands knowledge about a specific subject, and is interesting and fun.

Everyone is invited to attend and learn more about this opportunity to become involved in 4-H.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socio-economic levels, race, color, sex, religion or national origin.

Judge drops five years' worth of suits

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Don Beagle had a bad day in federal court as a judge systematically dismissed five years' worth of lawsuits filed by the welder.

But Beagle says he fared no worse than he expected Friday.

One by one, U.S. District Judge Robert M. Hill of Dallas dismissed suits filed since 1978 by the Nederland man, who is a men's rights supporter, sometimes political candidate, and anti-government and anti-judiciary gadfly.

Several defense attorneys said they could not figure out why Beagle was suing their clients.

Defendants named in the two suits included Texas Comptroller Bob Bullock, U.S. district judges Joe Fisher and Robert Parker, Jefferson County District Attorney James McGrath, and former State District Judge Bob Wortham — now Beaumont's U.S. attorney.

Jefferson County Court-at-Law Judge George Buford, lawyers Charles Carver and Paul Buchanan, Jefferson County Democratic Chairman Donald Glover, and the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. also were on his list.

"Why not direct your attention toward more productive or fruitful ends?" Hill asked Beagle after disposing of the last case. "It's just a suggestion."

The suits, dating back to 1979, charge a conspiracy to violate Beagle's constitutional rights.

Beagle sued Carver, Buchanan and Glover for requiring qualifications that would bar him from holding a state judgeship.

He sued the judges for dismissing Beagle's lawsuits on defense motions, or subjecting him to fines for failure to display an auto inspection sticker.

Beagle sued Nederland State Bank because it foreclosed on property he owned, allegedly for defaulting on a note. And he sued individuals to whom title to the property was transferred.

And Beagle, who prosecuted his suits without an attorney, also sued Southwestern Bell because, he contends, the company's female employees conspired to deprive him of his constitutional rights by depriving him of a listing with directory assistance.

Indeed, Hill was selected to preside at the Friday hearing because all four Eastern District federal district judges had excused themselves from the cases, primarily because Beagle had sued them.

Parker and Fisher have barred him from filing suits in the Eastern District unless he has court permission, labeling his earlier suits "frivolous."

In the past, judges who render rulings unfavorable to Beagle have often found themselves named as defendants in his next lawsuit.

Hill dismissed judges from the suit because of their judicial immunity. He cleared the prosecutors because of prosecutorial immunity. State Comptroller Bob Bullock and his employees were excused because the $131 his office took from Beagle's bank account in July 1980 was to satisfy a sales tax debt from Beagle's business.

And attorneys, the bank, the land title transferees and Southwestern Bell and its employees were excused because, Hill ruled, their actions were not governmental actions. Therefore, he said, they were not covered by official oppression statutes.

"I contend I have the right to bring this case before a jury," Beagle said. "No one can deny me that right. I also have the right to go before a grand jury or Congress" with the grievances, he said.

Information on cheeses presented

Toujours Amis Study Club met at The Deli Tuesday evening for a program on cheese. Amy Gilliland and Claudia McBrayer informed members about several kinds of cheese, their flavor, texture and use.

Members sampled several cheeses along with salami and Danish ham.

The group then went to the home of Marilyn Leasure for the regular business meeting, after which the hostesses, Ms. Leasure, Marcia Boyer, and Karen Keeling served chery cheesecake.

Others present were Nanette Ashby, Robbi Ames, Marcia Boyer, Debbie Donaldson, Beverly Lambert, Leisa Lewis, Sharon Hodges, Pam Perrin, Susan Perrin, Laurie Owens, Katy Timmens, Diana White, Jan Petree, Marsha Winget, and Nena Veazey.

The next regular meeting will be April 5. Members will travel to Canyon to dine out and tour the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum.

The film "Wings" was made in 1928. It was the only silent film to win the Academy Award for Best Picture.

Difficult earning degree with houseful of children

BY LOUISE WALKER
County Extension Agent
Quite often, I see people getting their college degree and they have a houseful of children. Now that deserves an award! I didn't do a thesis for my Master's 12 years ago because my family started coming. Didn't take another college course for eight years or until my baby was five.

Now that I'm trying to do my thesis with three children, I find them very detracting. Husband is working toward a Master's at West Texas State University; he finds the children detracting.

This going to school with a family puts one between a rock and a hard place as adult students. We feel a need for some quiet and peace to concentrate on the books. As children, they need an adult to communicate with as they study, run the computer, or play the piano. The children's comment when you're sitting quietly with a book is, "You're not doing anything."

As with most college work, one needs some long, uninterrupted periods to study. Somehow, with children, there is no uninterrupted time. There's always a squabble to referee, a word to spell, a math problem to check, or a question to answer. And their needs are important too.

Parenthood is full time. Try combining it with a job, it's taxing. And trying to be a student just adds more stress. If I ever finish my Master's, I'm going to give myself an award. And hope and pray I didn't neglect my children too much.

For you that are as busy as I am, here's a great salad that's easy, delicious, and nutritious. And a small child can prepare it. My 8-year-old Allison entered it in the 4-H Food Show.

Greek Salad

zucchini bell pepper onions feta cheese greek olives
oregano

Slice vegetables. Arrange on platter. Sprinkle crumbled feta cheese, olives, and oregano on top. Pour the brine from olives over mixture. Serve.

Feta cheese is made from goats' milk. It is lower in calories and quite good. Feta cheese comes in a jar, packed in a brine. The cheese does need to be wrapped in a paper towel to absorb the brine before you crumble it. The cheese is high in salt. If on a low salt diet, you need to avoid it.

Miss American Sweetheart preliminary set

The Miss West-Texas South Plains Sweetheart Pageant, an official preliminary to the national Miss American Sweetheart Pageant, will be held at 9 a.m. April 23, at Granadad Royale Homotel located at 5215 Loop 289 South in Lubbock.

The pageant, celebrating its 10th anniversary this year, is a national youth development scholarship program sponsored by the American Pageant System. The contest is open to young ladies throughout the United States between the ages of one and 17 with competition divided into five age divisions: one through four, 4-6, 7-9, 10-12 and 13-17.

Throughout the past decade, the national Miss American Sweetheart Pageant has achieved national prominence as "The World's Most Exclusive National Youth Development Scholarship Program" with each national winner enjoying an exciting year of personal appearances, parades, local and national television appearances, national promotional and catalog modeling assignments as well as numerous ribbon cuttings and style shows.

Annual seminar to offer families help

Tips on housing, financial planning and family relations will highlight the annual Family Living Seminar of the Panhandle Economic Program to be held in Amarillo on Tuesday.

The evening workshop this year will look at "Your Future: A Sleeper, a Creeper or a Leaper," said Louise Walker, Deaf Smith County Extension Agent. It will address concerns of special interest to families in the Texas Panhandle and offer ideas which can help make difficult decisions a little easier, Mrs. Walker said.

The seminar will be held at the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center, 6500 Amarillo Blvd. West, in Amarillo. It will begin at 7 p.m. with a welcome by Mrs. G.C. Davis of Pampa, chairman of the PEP Family Living and Youth task force. It will conclude at 9:30 p.m.

A look at financial futures by Dr. Jim Owens, professor of finance at West Texas State University, will open the seminar. He will focus on futuristic thinking and new trends in banking.

Trends in housing and new family structures will be examined by Greg Glenn, broker and owner of Ada Realtors. Carolyn Allison, with Financial Management Inc., will discuss financial planning. She will cover such topics as income fluctuations, joblessness, child care options, financial counseling and planning for medical costs.

Ways to get more work from your dollars will be explained by Dayle Tipton, vice-president of Amarillo National Bank. He will discuss individual retirement accounts (IRAs), Social Security, tax management and other options.

The part your attitude plays in your future will be examined by Dick Merceer, minister of Central Church of Christ in Amarillo. He will look at family strengths, time stresses, skills in coping, and support systems.

The program will conclude with a period in which the audience can address questions to the speakers.

PEP is a regional organization sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service to promote economic growth and development and improved family living in the Panhandle.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socio-economic levels, race, color, sex, religion or national origin.

In these times, gluttony is more likely to be an achievement than a sin.

Each national Miss American Sweetheart receives a complete wardrobe, scholarship bonds, official crown, trophy, banner and a one year personal appearance contract with a college academic scholarship being awarded annually to the winner of the teenage Miss American Sweetheart title.

To be eligible for competition on the national level, a young lady must win the right through an official Miss American Sweetheart preliminary pageant. The pageant is not open to the general public, and no entries are accepted at-large. Each national Miss American Sweetheart delegate is truly a winner.

The Baby Doll Beauty Parade for youngsters ages 1-4 will begin at 9 a.m. These little beauties will be judged on beauty, personality and the modeling of a short party dress plus a brief self introduction. The winner will receive a crown, trophy and banner plus the right to compete for the coveted title of national "American Baby Doll Sweetheart." Each contestant will receive a special official trophy.

The Miss American Sweetheart preliminary portion of the pageant will begin at 11 a.m. and is open to young ladies in the following age divisions: 4-6, 7-9, 10-12 and 13-17 with a winner being crowned in each group.

Each contestant will compete in sportswear and party dress modeling (short dress for ages four through 12 and a long formal for ages 13-17), a Talent Presentation (not to exceed three minutes) and an individual judges' interview.

The winner in each age division will receive an official crown, trophy and banner plus a trip to the nationally televised Miss American Sweetheart Pageant originating from Bronco Auditorium in Dallas.

Also, a model of the year and an entertainer of the year will be chosen in each age division with these young ladies receiving trophies and banners in addition to advancing to the national finals. First and Second runners-up will also be named in each age division, and each contestant will receive a special official trophy.

This year two very special photogenic categories will be offered, and contestants do not have to participate in the pageant to enter. A Miss Photogenic Sweetheart will be chosen in each of the five age divisions, and a miscellaneous photogenic category is open to boys, any type look alike photos, non-pageant age children and adults.

Photos may be either black and white or color, must be unframed and not larger than 8 X 10. A self addressed, stamped envelope must be included with entry if the contestant is not attending the pageant for return of photo.

Deadline for entries to be received is April 16. For more information and entry forms contact the American Pageant System, 2742 Brandon Street, Dallas, Tx. 75211, 214-331-6966.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Better to sit than lie

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read the letter from the lady who was concerned about the effects of sitting all day in the office. I was interested in your remarks about how sitting without enough activity caused a person to feel tired and even affected the heart and circulation.

I'm concerned about my mother. She lives with us and because of her age is not too active. She stays in the house mostly and sits a great deal. She already has some osteoporosis and I realize that the changes in her bones with age make it more likely that she will have a fracture if she falls.

You mentioned that older people should not be in bed if they can be out of bed and active. You said in the past that this could affect their bones as well as heart and circulation. I'd like to know if there is a difference in sitting and being in bed with regard to calcium and my mother's osteoporosis.

DEAR READER — Yes, there is. I don't think just sitting in a chair is adequate activity for the reasons I have discussed before and I like to see everyone who can, get some activity such as a comfortable stroll or more if a person is up to it.

For some reason, individuals lying down are more prone to loss of calcium than people sitting up. That was one of our surprises in studying inactivity in young men before we sent astronauts into space. When you are lying down your body is perpendicular to the force of gravity. Even exercising while lying down is not effective enough to prevent a loss of calcium. But standing up or sitting up delays or may even prevent loss of calcium. We do not really know why. So from that point of view it is better to sit up than to lie down. But again, just sitting is not enough to avoid the deterioration of the body from inactivity.

In general, you can appreciate the benefits of activity better by seeing what happens to you if you don't get enough. This is discussed in The Health Letter 6-6, Effects of Inactivity, Including Bed Rest, which I am sending you. Others can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Recently my 49-year-old wife went to her gynecologist for a Pap smear and he told her she has trichomonas vaginalis. He told her this infection is transmitted sexually. Since she has been faithful to me, she naturally assumed I was unfaithful and the doctor concurred. I love my wife and have always been faithful. Now she is almost a basket case because of her doubts about me. Is there a possibility that she or I contracted this before our marriage? We have only been married three years.

DEAR READER — YES. While trichomoniasis is commonly transmitted sexually, it is important to know that it frequently causes no symptoms. Dr. Robert Kistner, a Harvard gynecologist, wrote in one of his textbook editions that it occurred in one in every five adult women. Things have changed because of newer treatments.

But trichomoniasis can be spread from the gastrointestinal tract, the urinary tract and contamination from towels and water, according to Kistner. It can be present in men without causing any significant symptoms, but it can cause urinary symptoms. When found, both sexual partners should be treated. A woman can apparently contaminate her vaginal area from the rectum if she harbors the organism in the gastrointestinal tract.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 15-year-old female. I'm 5 feet 5 and weigh 105 pounds. Is this a good height and weight for my age? Should I weigh more or less?

I have extremely thin arms and an unsightly small biceps. Is there any exercise that would make these muscles larger? Would lifting weights help? I'm considered a good athlete. I participate in field hockey and girl's lacrosse.

DEAR READER — According to tables your height is about right. Perhaps you are an inch taller than some tables show for your age group and most tables would say for your height that you are underweight 10 or 15 pounds. But I'm not real fond of tables; you don't need fat stores.

The question about being thin is what causes it. If you are thin because you are ill, it is a bad sign. Or if you are thin because you are on a calorie-restricted diet to the point of semi-starvation, it is unhealthy. But some people are normally thin and healthy because of it.

If you want to improve your appearance and want stronger arms, a weight-training program would be the right course. Your physical education teacher should be able to help you with a program and equipment. If not, you may need to use a health club.

and Tumor Institute

Question: Is it true that fluorescent light has been found to cause skin cancer?

ANSWERline: A recent Australian study of women office workers did show some association between malignant melanoma and exposure to fluorescent light. The study compared 274 women with melanoma against 549 women without disease. The incidence of melanoma among those who said they worked under fluorescent light was double that of the women who did not. The study was reported in the British medical journal Lancet. The investigators said however that "the findings should be interpreted cautiously until further relevant data accumulate."

Question: Is the consumption of alcohol related to cancer?

ANSWERline: Excessive drinking is related to cancers of the mouth, throat, and esophagus. The combination of alcohol consumption and cigarette smoking is associated with especially high rates of esophageal and throat cancer.

Anna Conklin given Degree of Chivalry

The Degree of Chivalry, the highest honor which can be received by a member of the Rebekah Lodge, was bestowed upon Anna Conklin in a ceremony at Abilene, Texas, this week.

On the recommendation of Hereford Rebekah Lodge No. 228, the honor was obtained for Ms. Conklin through Patriarchs Militant, a branch of the Odd Fellow Fraternity. Thirty-nine Rebekahs and four ladies of the Ladies Auxiliary of Patriarchs Militant received the coveted degree.

Members of Hereford Rebekah Lodge No. 228 and Friona Rebekah Lodge No. 308 joined in an impressive memorial service at Grand Lodge of Texas Sunday morning. Devotional services were conducted by Past Grand Master Merf Morrow and his wife, Lydia.

Grand master Bill Rusk and President Edna Schuster presided at the business sessions of Grand Lodge and Rebekah Assembly of Texas.

New officers, Grand Master John Hubbard and Jessie Lee Velie launched the beginning of the 1983-84 term with combined programs of maintaining and increasing membership of the Odd Fellow Order.

Nine members from Hereford traveled to Abilene for the 143rd session of Grand Lodge and Rebekah Assembly of Texas. Ursalee Jacobsen and Susie Curtsinger assisted in registering 1100 delegates and visitors from other jurisdictions. They were also seated with current officers.

Featured speakers were International Association of Rebekah Assemblies, Alberta Hudkins from West Virginia, and Ronald Hughes, Deputy Sovereign Grand Master of Texas, who brought greetings from Sovereign Grand Master Cranston of Canada.

Ms. Curtsinger, representative from Hereford, was installed with officers for the 1983-84 term.

Site of the next session will be Dallas in March of 1984.

Others attending from Hereford were Odd Fellows, Ben Conklin, Gene Bishop, and David Rettman, and Rebekahs, Karrol Rettman, Helen Bishop, and Roberta Hughes.

Economists analyze PIK ramifications

Possible grain price boost no threat to consumer

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Grain prices may rise significantly in 1983-84 as a result of farmers cutting back crops under the new payment-in-kind acreage program, says the Agriculture Department.

But economists said Wednesday that prices for the most part are not expected to rise above levels of a couple of years ago — before the record-breaking harvests of wheat and corn.

In a related report, officials said consumers should not fret about soaring food prices —at least this year.

Overall, said Assistant Secretary William Leshner, retail food prices in the 1983 calendar year are expected to rise only 2 percent to 4 percent, the smallest annual increase in 15 years. Last year food prices went up 4 percent.

No price forecast for 1984 was included, and officials contacted declined to speculate on what may happen beyond 1983.

In its crop analysis, the department said that heavy grower participation in the acreage-cutting programs will mean sharp reductions in the 1983 harvests, primarily of wheat and corn.

On Tuesday, the department announced that farmers signed up to take 83.2 million acres from production this year, including massive participation in the new payment-in-kind program, PIK, in which participants will get surplus amounts of wheat, corn, sorghum, rice and cotton as payments for reducing acreage.

Consequently, the new report said, corn production may drop by one-third from last year's record 8.4 billion bushels to around 5.64 billion bushels.

Officials cautioned, however, that the projected figures are "highly tentative" and could be changed by the weather, foreign demand and other things.

Prices at the farm in the corn year beginning next Oct. 1 could average $2.70 to $3.10 per bushel, compared with $2.55 forecast for this season, but still below the average of $3.11 per bushel in 1980-81.

The corn surplus, or carryover, which is expected to be more than 3.34 billion bushels on Oct. 1, may drop to less than 1.9 billion bushels by the end of the 1983-84 season, the report said.

Wheat production in 1983 is expected to drop one-fifth from the record harvests of the last two years to less than 2.27 billion bushels.

Prices of wheat at the farm in the new marketing year that will begin on June 1 were projected at $3.50 to $3.90 per bushel, compared with $3.45 this season. However, that would still be below the $3.91 average of 1980-81.

"Although wheat production likely will be down substantially in 1983-84, record carry-in stocks will be partially offsetting," the report said. "Total wheat supplies may be down less than 5 percent from 1982-83."

The wheat inventory at the beginning of the new wheat year on June 1 is expected to be 1.58 billion bushels and may decline to 1.44 billion by the end of the 1983-84 marketing year.

Other observations in the new report:

—Rice production could fall one-fourth or more to 110.5 million hundredweight. Prices in 1983-84 may average $8.50 to $10 per hundredweight, compared with a projected $8 this season. However, that still would fall short of the 1980-81 season average of $12.80 per hundredweight.

—Cotton output could be about 9.2 million bales, down a fourth from 1982-83. The cotton inventory could be trimmed to around 5.6 million bales by the end of the 1983-84 marketing year, compared with 8.0 million at the start. No prices were projected.

—Sorghum production could drop to 700 million bushels, down from 841 million in 1982-83. Even so, inventories could rise to 561 million bushels from 547 million at the start of the 1983-84 marketing year because the overall supply is expected to grow faster than total use in 1983-84. Prices may average $2.55 to $2.95 per bushel, compared with $2.45 projected this season.

The report said the higher grain prices will mean another crunch on livestock and poultry producers in 1983-84.

"Producers of feeder pigs and feeder cattle will be squeezed the most," it said. "The higher feed costs will raise the cost of feeding cattle and put downward pressure on feeder cattle prices, causing cow-calf producers to reevaluate any expansion plans — even with good grazing."

Also, the report said, "Poultry producers will probably have their returns squeezed enough in 1983 and 1984 to result in little, if any, expansion in output next year."

President calls his program an economic 'spring tonic'

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says his economic program is a spring tonic that will help farmers along with the rest of the country.

Reagan said Monday that while many farmers have undergone some hard times recently, the U.S. agricultural system is "a national treasure" that the rest of the world holds in awe.

Speaking at the Agriculture Department, Reagan predicted that farmers will share in a "long and strong" national economic recovery he said is under way.

It was also National Agriculture Day, a tribute to the nation's 5.6 million farm people. Although they represent only 2.5 percent of the nation's population, Reagan said their output has increased 89 percent since 1950.

But the financial crunch of the past few years have caused some farmers to lose their land and their homes because of heavy debt and low incomes.

"Surviving has been a job in itself, but I think it is fair to say that although the winter's been harsh, it is going to be a beautiful spring," Reagan said.

"We've planted the right seeds, and now economic recovery is popping up all over the country — and America's farmers aren't going to be left out."

The president promised that his administration will work to promote U.S. agricultural exports — "not by increasing subsidies or federal controls, but instead by opening markets and introducing creative alternatives" to overcome price-depressing commodity surpluses.

"We believe in fair trade," Reagan said, "but we are no longer going to play patsy for those who would use this commitment as leverage against us. Free trade means access for those trading with us and it also means access for Americans to their markets. It's got to be a two-way street or not deal."

After increasing for 12 consecutive years, the value of farm exports declined in the fiscal year which ended last Sept. 30 and is expected to drop again in 1982-83.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block later told a National Press Club audience that "we're all working together to hold our own in world trade."

Block said that while the Reagan administration will continue to discuss ways of improving the international trading system, there are times for tough U.S. actions.

The use of so-called "blended" credit to sell farm commodities abroad at lower interest rates, and the recent deal to use subsidies to move into the Egyptian flour market were cited by Block.

"We're not going to leave a stone unturned in this area of agricultural trade," Block said. "We're going to fight to the last."

But Block said protectionist trade legislation such as bills being discussed in Congress would invite retaliation.

February meat production 2.7 billion lbs.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commercial meat production in the United States last month was an estimated 2.79 billion pounds, says the Agriculture Department.

Production included 1.71 billion pounds of beef, 32 million pounds of veal, 1.02 billion pounds of pork, and 27 million pounds of lamb and mutton.

The report, issued Thursday, did not include comparisons for February of last year — because the monthly reports were suspended as part of a cost-cutting measure and were only recently started again.

Fewer Americans Are Living DOWN ON THE FARM

The trend toward a smaller and smaller farm population as the total number of Americans becomes larger and larger continues. A current Census Bureau study comparing the last two national population counts shows a decline of almost three million farmers. One in 40 Americans currently lives on a farm, compared with about one in 25 a decade earlier. Regionally, the states of the Middle West and Upper Midwest still have the largest farming population — more than half the national total.

Hog operations may be expanding

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hog farmers may be expanding operations for the first time in several years, according to a new quarterly report by the Agriculture Department.

As of March 1, the inventory of all hogs and pigs in the 10 major pork state was estimated at 41.6 million head, up 3 percent from a year ago but still 8 percent below levels of two years ago, the department's Crop Reporting Board said Monday.

The report said the breeding inventory was 5.91 million head, up 6 percent from a year ago. Although that was still 9 percent less than in March 1981, it was the first increase at this time of year since 1979.

The pig crop in the first quarter of the hog marketing year which began last Dec. 1 was 15.5 million head. That was up 10 percent from last year but still 2 percent less than in the same period two years ago.

In the first quarter, the report said, 2.08 million sows farrowed, an increase of 5 percent from a year earlier but 5 percent below the same period of two years ago.

"Sows farrowing averaged a record high 7.44 pigs per litter compared with 7.11 last year and 7.24 two years ago," the report said. "The litter rate was still 9 percent below the record for a December-February quarter and the second-highest overall for the 10... states," the report said.

The report said that producers in the 10 states — which produce about four-fifths of the nation's pork — intend to farrow 2.58 million sows during the March-May quarter, up 8 percent from a year ago but 6 percent less than two years ago.

That would mean total farrowings of about 4.66 million sows in the first six months of this marketing year. Last December, in a similar report, surveys indicated farmers might have 4.3 million sows farrow in the first half of this season.

The March 1 inventory of hogs and pigs in the 10 major states and their percentage of year-ago inventories, included:

Grass variety offers pluses

"Raleigh," a relatively new variety of St. Augustine grass, offers several pluses for Texas lawns, says a turfgrass specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Raleigh is resistant to St. Augustine Decline (S.A.D.), is more cold tolerant and more shade tolerant than "Floramat" St. Augustine, but is not resistant to chinch bugs as Floramat is. Raleigh looks similar to common St. Augustine but is slightly coarser and faster growing.

Potato stock up 5 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's potato stockpile as of March 1 was estimated at 116.5 million hundredweight, up 5 percent from a year ago, says the Agriculture Department.

Most of the U.S. production is harvested in the fall, with last fall's harvest at about 294.1 million hundredweight.

In a related announcement, the department's Agricultural Marketing Service said Monday that revised U.S. grade standards for potatoes for processing will take effect on April 14.

Officials said the changes, which were proposed last October, "were requested by both producers and processors to reflect current potato cultural practices and processing methods."

The revised standards will "affect requirements for trimming and definitions for damage and serious damage" to potatoes. Use of the standards and grading service is voluntary and is paid for by users, the agency said.

This Land Is Your Land

Garry Mauro
Texas Land Commissioner

Every Texan knows we have a diverse state, especially when it comes to the land and the natural resources. From the coast on the Gulf of Mexico to the mountains of West Texas, we have the most unique array of plants, wildlife, geography and climate. Over 5,000 species of plants, 2,000 types of wildflowers and 600 species of birds are known in Texas. We have marshlands, rolling prairies, dense forests, arid plateaus and mountains.

With these vast biological resources, it is important that we identify and inventory this great reserve. The Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council (TENRAC) has agreed to join with the Texas Nature Conservancy to form a Texas Natural Heritage Program. This will include all of the state's valuable plant, aquatic and animal species along with the outstanding geological formations in one centralized program.

By compiling our natural resources into one easily accessible program, we will create a cost effective, economic development system. It will be available to government, business, industry and all the people of Texas. Modeled after similar programs launched by the Nature Conservancy in 30 other states, the Texas Natural Heritage Program will be a valuable planning and management tool which, once enacted, will protect sensitive areas and create new jobs through economic development.

The Texas Natural Heritage Program will begin by compiling data from existing systems of information in both government and private sectors. New data will then be gathered to augment our existing natural resources information. The cost of the program, $300,000 annually for 1984-85, will be divided equally between the Nature Conservancy and TENRAC.

As valuable as this will be for listing our natural resources, this will not be just another environmental program. Private business and industry will have the opportunity to use the system as a planning and management device to use in economic development. Many new areas with the potential for development will be identified through this program. Conflicts can be avoided when environmentally sensitive areas or unique concerns can be identified in the planning stage.

Too often we hear the criticism of government relying on out-of-date or meaningless information. We have too many government agencies which require overlapping permits or duplicate work. By creating a single data base to provide information, we will be able to overcome this type of duplication and unnecessary government paperwork. This will cut government red tape, save taxpayer dollars, and make it easier for business and the general public to work with official agencies.

We are fortunate to live in a state with abundant natural resources. Through cooperation we can have both a quality environment and the economic growth needed to maintain a quality of life for Texans. The Texas Natural Heritage Program is a major step in cooperation between government and the private sector for improving the quality of life for all Texans.

We can have the best of both worlds - protecting our environmentally sensitive areas while providing new jobs through economic development.

PIK did not exceed projections

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says the decision by farmers to take a record 82.3 million acres out of production this year did not exceed projections by nearly so much as many had thought.

When the payment-in-kind program was announced on Jan. 11 a USDA "fact sheet" showed 1983 crop acreages would be cut by about 30 million acres from 1982 under the earlier acreage reduction program and PIK.

The PIK portion of the program, the department said on Jan. 11, was expected to idle about 23 million acres. The regular part of the program would account for nearly seven million acres, according to the fact sheet.

A new supply-and-demand analysis issued on Wednesday, however, noted the 82.3 million acres farmers signed up to take from production this year and added that the actual signup was "up from an earlier estimate of around 52 million."

Ray Waggoner of the department's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service said Thursday that the "earlier estimate" of 52 million acres — not 30 million or so — was based on projections in an impact statement circulated shortly after the Jan. 11 announcement.

The impact statement, however, did not mention 52 million acres outright. Instead, it included separate figures which, if someone took the time, added up to about 52 million acres.

Waggoner said the figures were no secret and that he had provided them upon request.

But it still was not clear on Tuesday when Agriculture Secretary John R. Block held a news conference on the crop signup.

Block was asked what his signup projections had been. "Well, we from the very beginning have been projecting 23 million acres out of production, and certainly we've exceeded that by a very large margin, more than doubled it actually. And that's from the PIK program itself."

As it turned out, signup under the regular acreage reduction program — which provides price supports and some cash payments in return for cutting back 20 percent — will idle 13.2 million acres.

The remaining 69.1 million acres will be taken from production under the PIK options. That means producers of wheat, corn, sorghum, rice and cotton will get surplus commodities as payment for taking an additional 10 to 30 percent of the cropland from production — or their entire base acreage in many cases.

Block also said that "setting land aside is not my cup of tea," even though in this case the huge surpluses and depressed prices demanded stern action. He might have recalled another comment almost two years ago.

The marketplace must signal farmers, not the government, Block told a California audience on June 19, 1981.

"That means we aren't going to be providing any encouragement to idle land or divert it from food crops," he said. "I hope we never again find ourselves in the position we were in during the early 1970s when 62 million acres of farmland were out of production."

WHO IN THE WORLD DOESN'T AMERICAN AGRICULTURE FEED?

Texas couple released from Cuba

HOUSTON (AP) — Two Texans held prisoner in Cuba for four months are expected to return to the United States Monday, an aide to a congressman negotiating their release says.

Mark Holcomb, staff aide to Rep. Mickey Leland, Houston, said Friday night he has not heard from his boss but did not expect to before Sunday.

Gina Strickland, 23, and Bernie Hofstadter, 28, both of Brownsville, are scheduled to arrive in Houston at 11 a.m. Monday. They were arrested Nov. 12 after making an emergency landing in their small airplane on a flight from Grand Cayman Island to Florida.

Holcomb said the two were held on trumped-up drug charges.

Hofstadter, a West German citizen who lives in Brownsville, had visited the Caribbean island briefly and planned to see friends near Miami before returning to Texas.

The couple had planned to surprise their parents on Christmas Day by announcing their engagement, said Ms. Strickland's mother, Becky Lorenz, who lives in the Houston suburb of Humble. The plane's engines failed and Hofstadter guided it down into a field, Ms. Lorenz said.

Not knowing what country they were in, the couple searched for help, spent a night in the mud and were arrested the following day on arriving at a settlement. They were taken to Havana jails, Ms. Lorenz said.

After visiting the Havana jail in January, Mrs. Lorenz and Hofstadter's mother asked Leland for his help in freeing their children, Holcomb said.

The couple was accused of drug trafficking, but Mrs. Lorenz told Leland that the couple was forced to sign confessions. The congressman was told two weeks ago he could fly to Cuba to arrange the release, Holcomb said.

Leland hopes to secure the couple's release and return to Houston on Monday.

Leland also will talk with Cuban President Fidel Castro about the status of a Cuban family trying to enter the United States, Holcomb said.

OPEC AND US

Declining American Share

SOURCE: Department of Agriculture

The United States is the world's major food exporter, but it's selling comparatively less to the world's fastest-growing market and richest group of customers — the OPEC countries. In 1974, right after the first "oil shock," American produce accounted for almost a quarter of total OPEC food imports of just under $5 billion. By 1982, the American share had dropped to 6 percent of a $22 billion market. Other Western food-surplus nations have sharply increased their sales to the oil producers in the same period.

Winter's loitering puts damper on planting

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — The spring season came in on a cold, wet note early this week, slowing agricultural activities and putting a damper on early-season planting.

Meanwhile, farmers were hoping that the large participation in the PIK (payment-in-kind) program as announced by the USDA on Tuesday would bolster farm prices by reducing surplus stocks.

Corn and grain sorghum planting once again was halted in some central, south central and coastal counties, said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. Rice planting was also slowed in coastal areas.

Heavy rains and hail also damaged some young crops in the Rio Grande Valley last week, causing farmers to replant.

Most of the grain sorghum crop has been planted in the Valley, and planting is 85 percent complete in the Coastal Bend, said Carpenter. Corn is about 50 percent planted in the Valley and 90 percent planted in the Coastal Bend, while cotton planting stands at 65 percent in the Valley and 75 percent in the Coastal Bend.

Early corn and grain sorghum is up to a good stand in Southwest Texas (Uvalde area), but cold, wet conditions are hampering emergence of these early-planted crops in central sections.

As farmers prepare to close check on soil temperatures as reported by the Agricultural Weather Service Center at Texas A&M University, Carpenter advised. Recommended minimum planting temperatures at the 4-inch depth are 50 degrees for corn, 55 for grain sorghum and 65 for cotton. Soil temperatures for the past week were as follows: Austin, 54; Beaumont, 69; Beeville, 61; College Station, 59; Dilley, 68; Eagle Lake, 59; Lavon Dam (near Dallas), 55; Lufkin, 59; Pecos, 57; and San Angelo, 60.

Farmers also are planting watermelons and cantaloupes in the Winter Garden of Southwest Texas, Carpenter said, and some planting continues in the Valley. Vegetable and sugarcane harvesting has been slowed by rains in the Valley, and citrus harvesting continues at a slow pace.

Wheat and oats continued to make good progress over the state although the crops need more open weather in some areas, said Carpenter.

Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions:

PANHANDLE: Cold weather the past week halted land preparation activities in most counties. Sugar beet planting will start soon. Wheat is making excellent progress, and grazing cattle are making excellent gains.

SOUTH PLAINS: Early land preparation activities are under way and should get into full swing soon. Farmers soon will be planting sugar beets. Wheat is making excellent growth and providing good grazing for livestock. A little cattle feeding continues. Freezing temperatures caused heavy damage to the fruit crop.

ROLLING PLAINS: Both farmers and gardeners are busy getting their land in shape for spring planting. Early onions and potatoes look good. Small grains and ranges are making excellent growth so that cattle have lush grazing. Weeds are a major problem in wheat along with some rust disease and mildew.

NORTH CENTRAL: Farmers are planting corn in some locations as field conditions permit. Wheat and oats are doing well but generally need more open weather. Gardeners are continuing to plant such early vegetables as turnips, spinach, beets and mustard. Grazing conditions are improving for livestock but some feeding continues.

NORTHEAST: Corn planting is under way and other crops will be planted as weather conditions improve and soil temperatures warm up. Wheat and oats are furnishing green grazing along with clovers, so livestock are in good shape. Fruit trees are blooming and pecan trees are budding.

FAR WEST: Irrigation pumps are running in many areas as farmers are watering wheat and oats and also applying pre-plant irrigations on cropland. Onion and carrot harvesting is active. Ranges and livestock generally are in fair condition, with rain needed to boost forage growth.

WEST CENTRAL: Land preparation activities continue as farmers get ready to plant grain sorghum. Small grain prospects look excellent, and pastures and ranges are in good shape. While sheep and goats are getting plenty of grazing, some cattle feeding continues. Freezing temperatures early in the week caused only light damage to the peach crop.

CENTRAL: Early-planted corn and grain sorghum are coming up slowly due to cold, wet soils. Rains are slowing field work for other spring crops. Wheat is making excellent progress in some counties although rust disease and mildew are problems in some fields. Cattle feeding is declining as grazing conditions improve. Lambing remains active and goat shearing has started.

EAST: Farmers are planting corn, and planting of early vegetables is in full swing. Fruit trees are in full bloom and pecan buds are swelling. Wheat and oats are making excellent growth and providing good grazing for livestock.

UPPER COAST: Spring planting was active the past week, with corn and grain sorghum planting nearing completion in some areas. About 20 percent of the rice crop has been planted. However, rains this week will cause some delays. Pastures and ranges continue to improve, but some cattle feeding continues. Gardening activities continue to increase.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Corn and grain sorghum planting was active the past week, and some corn is up to a good stand. However, rains early this week have again delayed field work. Gardeners have planted some vegetables, but cool, wet conditions are causing delays.

SOUTHWEST: Corn and grain sorghum are coming up and onions look good.

Farmers are starting to plant watermelons and cantaloupes in southern counties, and cotton planting will start soon. Livestock and ranges are in good shape due to recent rains.

COASTAL BEND: Planting of corn and grain sorghum ranges from 85 to 90 percent complete while about 75 percent of the cotton is planted. Recent rains have caused some delays in planting. Gardening is active, and some peach trees have set fruit. Pasture and range conditions are improving, so livestock feeding is declining. Calving remains active. Cattle prices are high.

SOUTH: Grain sorghum planting is about complete while half of the corn crop and 65 percent of the cotton have been planted. Farmers have had to do some replanting due to heavy rains and some hail the past week. The rains also halted vegetable and sugarcane harvesting. Citrus harvesting remains slow, with 40 percent of the grapefruit and 70 percent of the late oranges still to be picked.

HARVEST '82

U.S. Crop Value and Leading States

SOURCE: Department of Agriculture

NEA/Moffitt/Coel

The value of all U.S. crops harvested last year totaled $76.9 billion, down more than 6 percent from 1981 and the first decline reported since 1977. Lower prices was the principal reason. California remained the leading growing state by dollar value, accounting for nearly 10 percent of the national total.

AMC's return to profits grows lengthy, complicated

NEW YORK (AP) — American Motors Corp.'s strategy for returning to profitability is growing more lengthy — and more complicated.

AMC, the nation's fourth largest automaker, said this past week it probably will keep losing money on operations this year and in 1984 before turning the corner to black ink in 1985. But it said the losses should narrow from its $153.5 million net loss in 1982.

But at the same time AMC must spend heavily to develop new cars, and so said it planned to raise $500 million through loans, the proposed sale of its profitable AM General Corp. unit and an issue of 14.9 million common shares.

Back in 1980, when the French state-owned automaker Regie Nationale des Usines Renault came to AMC's aid by becoming an investor (it now owns 46.4 percent of AMC), AMC hoped Renault's cash infusion and technological help it become profitable by 1984.

After three years of losses totaling nearly $500 million, that crossing now appears behind schedule, even though AMC tried to help its cause by seeking concessions from union workers, cutting some of its salaried staff and trimming other costs.

But both AMC and Renault — which plans to make an additional $96 million investment in the new cash-raising program to maintain its 46.4 percent stake — have some reason for being patient.

Perhaps the biggest cause for optimism is the Alliance, a subcompact car designed by Renault and built in the United States by AMC, that has provided a strong lift to AMC's overall car sales.

In the first two months of this year, AMC's sales of U.S.-built cars — which account for about 3 percent of the U.S. industry total — shot up 115 percent to 28,760 from 13,374 in the comparable period a year ago. In February alone, AMC sold 14,795 cars — and 10,328 of them were Alliances.

In other news this past week: —The Reagan administration replaced its 3-month-old economic forecast with a more optimistic outlook, predicting a more robust recovery and a single-digit unemployment by year's end.

—Big declines in gasoline and heating oil costs helped push consumer prices down 0.2 percent in February, only the second drop since 1965, the Labor Department said. Prices rose 0.2 percent in January.

—President Reagan hailed congressional passage of a landmark plan to assure Social Security solvency into the next century and said "a dark cloud has been lifted" from the giant retirement system.

—A $4.65 billion bill aimed at spurring more jobs was signed by Reagan after clearing the Congress. Proponents estimate the bill will create 300,000 to 400,000 jobs and fund various domestic programs.

Senator Bill Sarpalius Reports

Reports

AUSTIN — The Texas Legislature has spent the last few weeks of this session concentrating on our state's budget. During this time, Comptroller Bob Bullock has published new estimates of Texas revenues for the upcoming years. Governor Mark White has spoken to a joint session of the Legislature to submit his budget requests and suggestions, and the Texas Senate has met as a committee to specifically deal with our upcoming budget.

On one hand, Texas has the largest cash surplus in the nation ($804 million), and $3.3 billion more than two years ago when we wrote our last budget (this is a 17.8% increase).

On the other hand, the Comptroller has cut his estimate of Texas' revenues twice in the last two months. These cuts have been due mainly to falling world oil prices and sluggish sales tax receipts. The most recent time, Mr. Bullock cut projected income for Texas by $867 million. This means Texas has about a $1.6 billion deficit between the requested budget and the projected revenues.

We are fortunate in Texas to have a Constitution that requires the state to have a balanced budget. This keeps us fiscally sound but this year it will most likely force our Legislature to either reduce some services currently provided and/or raise taxes for all Texans. Governor White feels that Texas can avoid these two evils by raising taxes on discretionary consumption.

This would mean an increase in taxes for tobacco, mixed drinks, packaged liquor, and amusement machines like pinball and video games. It is projected that such an increase could raise $800 million for state coffers.

Our Governor also suggests the selling of bonds to finance much of our needed highway construction. This would require the taking of three fourths of one cent from the current motor fuels tax to service these bonds.

There are many varying opinions around the Capitol as to what the best method is for Texas to overcome this difficulty. Some do not like the idea of borrowing to make up needed revenue, some would like to see a tax increase on sales, and others are completely opposed to taxes and wish to simply cut services. Whatever the method, they all agree that this is not a short term problem. Texas will be facing such economic troubles as long as our nation and world is in the current economic depression.

In the next few months of the session we promise to closely examine all possible ways of dealing with our budget and will take action for the methods that we feel will be the best for our district and the entire state.

We would like to know what you feel about our budget problems. Please write Senator Bill Sarpalius, P. O. Box 12068, State Capitol, Austin, Texas 78711 or call (512) 475-3222.

Proclamation Signing

Louise Walker, Deaf Smith County extension agent, watches as Judge Glen Nelson signs a proclamation designating April as "Youth Activity Month". Various youth organizations will be actively involved in community cleanup and beautification projects.

State senator studying return of gambling for Galveston

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — One of several businessmen seeking legislation to bring casino gambling back to Galveston says the action could have an enormous effect on the city's economy.

"Casino gambling would bring many, many tourists to the island," said Byron Everts, a real estate executive. "It would mean tons of money. Listen, this spot is a strategic point in the United States for casino gambling."

"Airlanes leave Houston every day to travel to the Nevada desert or the East Coast and they have people on them who are traveling to gamble," said Everts. He is a member of a group of businessmen who have approached state Sen. Chet Brooks and other representatives of the island city area. They are seeking legislation to let Galveston residents vote on whether to allow casino gambling.

Brooks, a Democrat whose district includes part of Galveston County, said a bill that would permit local option elections for casino gambling in Galveston is in "the talking stage," but probably won't be introduced before the 1985 regular session of the Legislature.

"I don't think we have time to take all of the necessary steps this session," said the senator.

The senator said the group was told "if they could demonstrate strong support on the island for it, we'd try to help them with a local bill."

Earlier in this century the operation of illegal gambling casinos in Galveston was an open secret. The casinos were closed after state officials cracked down in the 1950s.

Galveston Mayor Gus Manuel said he would support gambling in Galveston if citizens approve it with a local option election.

John Dellanera, director of the Galveston Parks Board, said he believes the return of casino gambling to the island would be approved by voters there.

Galveston County District Attorney Mike Guarino said he opposed the idea because of the potential for organized crime.

Brooks said a gambling bill would be controversial "even for Galveston County" and would have to be drafted with care to include "some good strong safeguards" in licensing of casinos and funding of law enforcement.

Legislators from El Paso have introduced a bill to permit casinos in a section of El Paso next to the Mexican border.

Youth Activity Month proclaimed by Judge

County Judge Glen Nelson proclaimed April as "Youth Activity Month" in conjunction with Keep America Beautiful Week to be observed the fourth week in April.

The Beautify Texas Council, in cooperation with the activities of Keep America Beautiful, will observe April as Youth Activity Month with many youth organizations participating in community cleanup and beautification projects.

Participating in the cleanup campaign will be Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Camp Fire, Girls, 4-H Clubs, Future Farmers of America, Future Homemakers of America, Junior Gardeners of the Texas Garden Club, student councils and ecology clubs.

It is the goal of the Beautify Texas Council to increase the awareness of greater responsibilities of citizenship for the youth of this county and state.

These youth groups will be working throughout Texas in preparation for a climate "cleanup and beautification" celebration during the week of April 17-23.

Park Department says drownings decreased

AUSTIN — Drownings and water-related fatalities decreased during 1982, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department said.

Water safety officials documented 531 drownings during the year, compared to 572 in 1981 and 575 in 1980.

Swimming accounted for the most victims, with 164 deaths; falls, 75; fishing 53; wading 44, and 35 miscellaneous. A total of 27 persons died in accidents where motor vehicles fell into the water.

There were 181 deaths in lakes; 96 in rivers, 60 in tanks, ponds and pits; 54 in the gulf and bays, 54 in creeks, bayous, resacas and streams, and 52 in pools.

Approximately 67 percent of the fatalities involved persons under 25 years old. Of these, 73 percent were males and 27 percent were females.

Drinking and-or drugs were involved in the chain of circumstances leading to 116 deaths, or 13 percent. Officials said this may not be entirely accurate, however, since some witnesses are reluctant to tell officials that their relative or friend was intoxicated.

Military Muster

Marine Cpl. Fernando Gonzalez, son of Narisco and Jose F. Gonzalez of 334 Avenue C, has departed on a deployment to Okinawa. He is a member of 1st Battalion, 5th Marines, Camp Pendleton, Calif.

The unit will end six months overseas as part of the Marine Corps' unit deployment program. The concept is designed to rotate whole battalions or squadrons at a time instead of individuals at separate intervals. In this way, unit integrity is retained and the actual time they spend overseas is shortened.

During the deployment, the command will conduct training exercises with the U.S. 7th Fleet and units of allied nations.

Celebrations open in Rome Basilicas

ROME (AP) — Celebrations for the 1983 extraordinary Holy Year of Redemption start today in Rome's major basilicas as Vatican cardinals open Holy Doors just as Pope John Paul II did at St. Peter's Basilica.

With three taps of a gold hammer on the Holy Doors of St. Peter's, the pope ushered in the Holy Year on Friday. The cardinals open the Holy Doors at Rome's other major basilicas — St. John the Lateran, St. Mary Major and St. Paul's Outside the Walls.

John Paul proclaimed the Holy Year to commemorate the 1,950th anniversary of the crucifixion of Jesus. In Christian belief, redemption, the theme of the jubilee, refers to Jesus sacrificing his life to save mankind.

"Aperite Mihi Portas Justitiae" — open the door of justice — the pontiff chanted in Latin before striking on the door at the inner entrance of the basilica. The basilica's 10-ton bell pealed, and inside, the Sistine Chapel choir sang "Elevamini Portae Aeternales" — "Lift Up Eternal Gates."

More than 15,000 pilgrims gathered in the rainy weather cheered. The door-opening ceremony was televised in 24 countries under the direction of Italian film-maker Franco Zeffirelli.

The 62-year-old pontiff, in blue-trimmed white vestments and blue-embroidered miter, broke with tradition and had the door, sealed since 1975, opened by assistants. In previous years, the pope's hammer blows were a signal to workmen to knock away the last bricks encasing the door and lower it by pulleys. This time, the masonry was removed in advance.

"Rise up once more," the pope said in his homily at a Mass after the ceremony. "Protect the nations and peoples. Do not permit the work of destruction that threatens humanity today."

For the first time since Holy Years began in 1300, the celebrations will be held in churches around the world. The original Holy Year was called to restore faith and partially to raise money for the church and so the faithful were required to come to Rome to receive indulgences — or remission of temporal sins.

When John Paul first called this extraordinary Holy Year, there was some criticism in the Italian press that it was designed to bring in money for the financially troubled Church.

IRS cautions taxpayers to beware of tax-evasion proposals

Never pay income tax again! That's a very tempting idea. Proponents of this notion are making speeches and offering seminars around the country on the "how-to's" of tax evasion. The Internal Revenue Service cautions taxpayers to beware.

Working toward tax reform certainly is not illegal. For example, contacting a Member of Congress and urging changes in the tax law is the right of every individual. Neither is arranging one's affairs to pay the lowest possible tax against the law. If you hold securities so as to have a long-term instead of a short-term capital gain, the law supports your move.

On the other hand, illegal tax protest, such as advocating or participating in a scheme that results in the illegal underpayment or non-payment of taxes, or the non-filing of required returns is illegal.

Illegal protesters who encourage non-compliance with tax laws often give the impression that there are no consequences. They don't pay taxes, they claim, and haven't for years. They tell of "millions" of others who do the same and maintain the IRS can't do a thing about it.

Contrary to this misleading information, individuals who refuse to pay all or part of their tax, to supply required information, or to file a necessary tax return, can anticipate strict civil and criminal enforcement of the law by the IRS and the tax courts. For instance, conviction for willful failure to file a tax return can result in fines of up to $25,000, a prison sentence of up to one year, or both. Besides that, conviction for willful tax evasion can carry with it a fine of up to $100,000, possible imprisonment for as much as five years, or both.

The fact of the matter is that the 16th Amendment to the Constitution gives Congress the power to "lay and collect taxes on income, from whatever source derived." Congress, in turn, has given the Internal Revenue Service the power to enforce tax laws.

Now, how does the IRS enforce these laws?

Each of the 10 IRS service centers across the nation—that's where your tax returns are processed—has a special team whose business is the identification of illegal tax protest returns. Potential illegal tax protest returns are separated from others and sent to this special team for analysis.

These returns and documents are carefully scrutinized to determine as closely as possible which appear to be protest returns or documents. For example, returns which don't contain enough information to determine tax, if there is any, but which do contain statements that supplying this information would violate a person's constitutional rights would be considered potential protest returns.

Remember, the illegal tax protester, in the end, is the one who willingly and knowingly sets out to break the law. And to be sure only illegal tax protesters have been identified by the special team, the service center will send a letter via registered mail, return receipt requested, to each taxpayer in question. This notice will advise each taxpayer that his or her return is not acceptable as filed. Each person then has 30 days in which to respond.

If after 30 days there is no response, and if there is evidence of criminal intent, the form or document in question will be forwarded to the Criminal Investigation Division for further evaluation. Based on this evaluation, cases may be selected for investigation by special agents.

Even at this stage, no judgment of actual criminal intent has been made. Each case is treated separately with its own set of facts and circumstances. Suppose, for some reason or other, your return had been selected for this investigation. You still have a chance to show a good faith effort was made to comply with the laws.

Those taxpayers who protest through illegal means, on the other hand, may be subject to criminal prosecution. Illegal protesters have been assessed millions of dollars in unpaid taxes and penalties, but more significantly, many have gone to jail. In Fiscal Year 1982, 93 protesters were given prison sentences which averaged over 17 months upon conviction of tax crimes. In addition, fines totalling $561,000 were imposed.

By far, the number of taxpayers who do comply with the law exceeds the number of illegal protesters. Out of the more than 90 million returns filed in 1981, fewer than 28,000 were identified as illegal protest returns and documents.

The IRS has the duty, given by Congress, to enforce the federal tax laws. When some individuals fail to pay their tax liabilities, the burden of taxes is greater for those who willingly comply. In the interest of fairness for all taxpayers, the IRS will continue to enforce all federal tax laws, including laws governing those who place themselves above the law by illegally refusing to pay their just share of tax.

Police hope autopsy will provide clues in death of Texas chaplain

CORSICANA, Texas (AP) — Police here hope that the results of an autopsy being performed on the body of a chaplain who was found bound and gagged in a hotel room will provide clues in his death.

"We don't have too much now," said police detective Gary Snowden. "But we should know something by Monday or Tuesday."

Police said John B. Tucker, chaplain for the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Dallas, apparently suffocated to death before he was found by a maid.

The body of John B. Tucker, chaplain for the Veterans Hospital in Dallas, was discovered in his first-floor room at the Holiday Inn on U.S. Highway 287, said police detective Gary Snowden.

Navarro County Judge Beadie Stuart, who made the death pronouncement, ordered an autopsy by the Dallas County medical examiner's office.

Snowden said Tucker had been dead from 12 to 18 hours when the hotel employee discovered his body at about 10 a.m. Friday. The maid entered to clean the room after receiving no answer from Tucker.

"It appeared to us that he may have strangled to death or suffocated," Snowden said.

Tucker's hands were tied behind his back and his feet were bound with strips torn from sheets, and his mouth had been gagged, he said.

"When we arrived at the location, it appeared that someone had taken the sheets off the bed and ripped the sheets up," he said.

Police suspect robbery as a motive, Snowden said. Tucker "had no billfold on him, his pockets had been emptied and there was no luggage in the room," Snowden said. "And his vehicle was missing from the scene."

According to police, a Holiday Inn desk clerk remembered seeing Tucker check in at 1:22 p.m. Thursday, but said he was alone at the time. And the clerk did not see anyone driving his car away from the hotel.

"We had no witnesses who saw him coming in or out at the hotel," Snowden said.

Tucker owns a lakehouse on Cedar Creek at Star Harbor in Henderson County about 20 miles from Corsicana. He left work in Dallas earlier Thursday, said Snowden, and was scheduled to return to work Monday morning. Snowden said that Tucker was wearing slacks, a shirt and a tie. He did not appear to have struggled or been beaten, Snowden said.

"We did not see any visual damage that could have been caused by a blow to the head," Snowden said. "But there is still a possibility that he was struck."

Hotel officials had no record of Tucker having stayed there at any other time, he said.

There are as yet no suspects in the death.

Police were still looking for the victim's car, a sedan with Texas license plates.

The Latin American economies should grow at an estimated rate of 2.3 percent in 1983, according to projections of the Inter-American Development Bank. In 1982, Latin America's gross domestic product declined by 1.6 percent, compared to an annual growth rate of nearly 6 percent during the 1970s.

The Consumer Alert

by Jim Mattox
Attorney General

AUSTIN—Door-to-door salespersons can provide a helpful service to some consumers, when the product or service they sell is legitimate.

But sometimes, the door-to-door technique is used by salesmen who are so overzealous they nudge customers into signing up for something they don't need, or don't want, or persuade them that they're getting a bargain which really isn't available.

The Consumer Protection Division of the Attorney General's Office has received many complaints, particularly in the area of magazine sales.

These include allegations that the salespersons misrepresented the reason for their call.

Instead of announcing that they were there for the purpose of selling magazines, they tried to invoke sympathy or interest, often using some of the following pitches:

"I am taking a survey of reading habits."

"I am working for points, in a scholarship contest."

"I need your note to prove to my employer my value as a salesman."

"I am doing special work in this school district."

"I am offering a free magazine. All you have to pay for is the costs of handling and postage."

"Today, we can offer a free subscription to your favorite magazine, if you agree to buy these other four."

It is easy to see that all of these phrases boil down to the same basic message. The caller has something to sell.

Bonafide market surveyors are not in the business of making retail sales. And, certainly, a school district would not authorize any firm to sell a product under the guise of conducting district research.

If you're not interested in a magazine subscription, it would be best, of course, not to admit the person to your home.

If you are interested in buying a subscription, ask to see his credentials, and write down his name, the name of his company, his address and the company's address.

Don't be talked into signing any contract on the spot. Think it over.

Don't let yourself be fooled by a claim that a subscription will cost you "only pennies a day." Eight pennies a day would add up to $29.20 a year.

Examine a claim that you could get a magazine "free, just for the cost of handling and postage." Compare the quoted cost of handling and postage to a regular subscription.

If fact, it probably would be worthwhile to compare the salesman's quoted cost of subscriptions to the introductory subscriptions offered by the magazines themselves.

Some of the complaints we receive have been from consumers who were told that the contract was "cancellable," but later saw that they had signed a contract labeled "noncancellable," or that they had been led to believe they had paid the full cost, but later were billed for "the other half."

Also, some consumers have charged that their rights to cancellation of the contract within three days after the home solicitation had been misrepresented to them.

One of the fraudulent practices which seems to irk consumers the most is that they are told they must take an "alternative selection," if the magazine they picked is not available. Be certain you can cancel if you cannot get the publication you want—especially at this time, when so many magazines have folded.

It is important, when thinking of holiday giving, to check for an assurance that the person you are getting the magazine for really will receive it.

(NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Spanish explorers visiting Mexico found the natives playing a game with a ball made of a strange substance that caused it to bounce. The Mexicans put this same material on their coats to turn away the rain. They had found rubber.

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The current value of Mexico's peso will remain steady if the country's economic conditions continue to improve, the press secretary for President Miguel de la Madrid said here Friday.

Manuel Alonso Munoz, speaking at the 1983

another devaluation.

"We have formulated a Associated Press Managing Editors convention, said economic measures taken by Madrid during his four months in office have eased Mexico's economic crisis.

Mexico has been forced to seek funds from banks all over the world to help pay off its huge foreign debt.

But early signs indicate Madrid's "strong measures" to increase the nation's income and to reduce government spending have brought interest rates under control and curbed unemployment.

If the economic situation "keeps improving as it looks like" it is, Alonso said he believes there will not be program for public financing that tends to reduce the budget deficit by half," Alonso said.

"Our objective is to reach a deficit of 8.5 percent in public finances by the end of 1983 as compared with 17 percent last year," Alonso said.

To increase income, Alonso said, Madrid increased the price of gasoline and diesel fuel 100 percent and increased other rates and prices of goods produced by the public sector.

He said these actions will result in a 4 percent increase in the gross domestic product in one year. Alonso said the design of Madrid's general economic policy calls for moderation in profits and salaries.

The organized labor movement "has agreed to a mere 25 percent increase in the minimum wage at the beginning of the year," Alonso said.

"All this has made it possible for us to curb a trend toward higher unemployment that occurred last year," he added.

Available indicators show unemployment has not increased in Mexico during the first months of 1983, he said, and measures have been taken to create 700,000 new jobs, especially in the rural areas of the country.

The Mexican peso, valued at 27 to the dollar in January 1982, was devalued by former Mexico President Jose Lopez Portillo in February 1982 to 40 to the dollar. Last September, it was devalued again to 70 to the dollar but slid to about 125 to the dollar in the black market.

Shortly after taking office in September, Madrid announced he would let the peso value settle at the free market rate. The current free market value for buying pesos in Mexico is set at 147 to the dollar, but pesos are selling at about 153 to the dollar along the Texas side of the border.

Madrid also set a controlled peso rate for priority transactions and purchases of essential imports. That rate is currently set at 106 pesos to the dollar, but the Mexican government is letting it slowly slide toward the fixed rate, Alonso said.

Teens solicited for ring

DALLAS (AP) — Undercover vice officers here say that they unearthed a scheme for soliciting teen-age girls for a high-priced prostitution ring through ads placed for babysitters in local newspapers.

A 54-year-old businessman has been charged in connection with formation of the prostitution ring, police said Friday.

William Howard Lathrop was free on $20,000 bail on two counts of compelling prostitution, officers said. He was released from jail in the affluent suburb of University Park Wednesday night.

Vice division investigators said Thursday that Lathrop, an independent real estate agent, is suspected of forcing into prostitution at least six girls aged 15 to 17.

Police accuse Lathrop of placing classified ads seeking "pretty, clean, active, nice" baby sitters for jobs offering extensive travel and a top-dollar salary.

"This is not an on-the-street type of deal at all," an undercover vice officer, who asked not to be identified, told The Dallas Morning News. "You're talking big money and everything like that ... You're not talking about your run-of-the-mill pimp-prostitute deal."

Lathrop could not be located for comment.

His arrest was prompted by a criminal complaint filed by a 15-year-old girl. She who told a Dallas police officer she had worked several months as a prostitute for Lathrop.

"She told him how the suspect had come on to her," the undercover investigator said. "... He had told her he would give her money if she would do favors for his friends — sexual favors."

The girl told officers that Lathrop would pay the girls "a couple hundred dollars each time" to have sex with his clients at expensive hotels, the investigator said.

"She stated that the guy had threatened her and that he had beaten her up on several occasions," said the officer.

Investigators said the teenager named five other high school girls who were forced to perform sexual acts for money.

Two arrest warrants were obtained by investigators after they received an affidavit from a second girl.

Lathrop was arrested about 11:30 a.m. Wednesday at his business, Colonial Southern Investment Corp.

University Park police Sgt. E.L. Holman said Lathrop has been investigated since 1979, after a woman accused him of harassing and assaulting her. Holman said the woman also accused him of forcing her into prostitution, but refused to file criminal charges.

The classified ads began to appear in 1980, promising trips for baby sitters to cities such as Acapulco, Rome and Paris, he said.

"It even listed what salary he was willing to pay," Holman said. "It was astronomical."

He noted that some of the ads offered up to $600 a week.

Holman said the ads specified that baby sitters must be between 16 and 25 and attractive.

'Blue Law' battle about to begin anew

AUSTIN (AP) — State Rep. Bill Ceverha says the biggest obstacle in his battle to allow Sunday shopping is "Texans Against the Blue Law." The problem with the group is it doesn't exist.

Ceverha and other anti-Blue Law legislators can't figure out why Texans complain about the statute that closes most stores on Sundays, but never mount an organized repeal effort.

"Why haven't the consumers gotten involved? If there ever was a consumer issue, this is it," said Ceverha, R-Richardson.

Ceverha does hear from constituents concerned about the Blue Law ban on sales of a patchwork of goods on consecutive Saturdays and Sundays. Many of the letter-writers are upset with Ceverha's repeal effort.

Jane Whatley of Dallas, a J.C. Penney clerk, told Ceverha she doesn't want to work on Sundays.

"Vote so that we can still have the Lord's day. Jesus asked us to do this in memory of Him. To gather to worship, sing and eat the Lord's supper," said Mrs. Whatley.

Ceverha has heard that kind of deep-seated argument in his past battles against the Blue Law. At a House committee hearing Monday, he hopes to have some new ammunition — money — for his repeal effort.

Sunday shopping could boost Texas' sluggish economy, according to Ceverha. Massachusetts' Blue Law, which dated back to the 18th Century Puritans, was scrapped this month. Repeal advocates in that state said Sunday shopping will mean 15,000 new jobs and $44 million in taxes as the state's share of more than $1 billion in new business.

"I'm going to use that," Ceverha said of the potential economic windfall. "I'm going to have a real interesting fiscal note. It's going to show pretty dramatic increases" for Texas.

Humburg, says Michael Moore of the Texas Retailers Association, big-time anti-repeal lobbyists.

"It would just be transferred sales from other days," he said, adding the business would be "generated at the expense of stores that can't compete in the seven-day market."

The Texas Automobile Dealers Association, a pivotal player in the save-the-Blue Law movement, agrees.

"It would simply increase the overhead by one-seventh and not increase sales at all," said Tom Blanton, TADA vice president for legislative affairs.

Rep. Mary Polk, D-El Paso and a Blue Law foe, does not think the money argument is the key to unlocking the stores on Sundays.

"That argument can be used on both sides," she said. "I think the best argument is the majority of the people in this state are opposed to the Blue Law."

"It's the public that is very much opposed to it. It's a small group of monied people who fight to keep it in place," she said.

Like Ceverha, Mrs. Polk is baffled at the lack of citizens lobbying in favor of repeal.

"People write letters about it to the newspapers. They call in to talk shows on the radio. They're very much opposed to the Blue Law. But there's not that organized effort," she said.

Peck Westmoreland says his Texas Consumers Association won't get involved this year because it has better things to do with its lobbying time.

"It's one of those issues I don't think anyone ever wins on," said Westmoreland, TCA director. "You've got so many different groups pushing and pulling."

"I personally just think the Blue Law is a joke. But the association really hasn't taken a direct stand on it. I think the law is so badly abused it should be taken off the books," he said.

But the retailers and the auto dealers are ready to play defense.

"We've got a litany of arguments," said Moore, the retailers' lobbyists.

He is concerned about employees who might be forced to work Sunday, the increased overhead and the small stores that would be forced to open on Sunday because the "big boys" would.

Blanton said auto dealers have similar concerns.

"Haven't we been through this before?" he said.

"We have historically lived with not working on Sunday. The very notion of it would be an anathema to people," said Blanton. "I know it would be to the mechanics who work for car dealers."

Phil Strickland, director of the Baptist Christian Life Commission, said his organization favors the Blue Law "for reasons of practical religious liberty and the consideration of family life."

But Strickland said that much of the existing law is "confusing and unreasonable."

Strickland's "family life considerations" were challenged by Westmoreland of the consumers association. A day of shopping is a family outing for modern Texans, he said.

And Ceverha says the lunacy of the hodgepodge law outweighs the tradition of stay-at-home Sundays.

"If you can visualize we never had this law on the books, and I proposed this law, I would be laughed off the House floor. There's absolutely no logic to it," he said.

So is this the year Texans can exercise their credit cards on Sundays?

"Don't count on it," said Ceverha.

How a 'professor' could fool a school

Most any college will tell you: It couldn't happen here.

But at two Pennsylvania schools and possibly several others on the East Coast, it has. A man used a false identity to get teaching jobs, thwarting what seemed like elaborate, almost foolproof systems that many universities routinely use to check the credentials of teaching applicants.

The man, whom authorities are calling "John Doe" but whose real identity may be Paul Arthur Crafton, a 59-year-old engineering professor at George Washington University, proved that with enough determination and a bit of elementary sleuthing, schools can be tricked.

Doe is accused of assuming false identities to get teaching positions last September at Millersville State College and Shippensburg State College in Pennsylvania.

Authorities say he may have used a similar scheme to get teaching jobs at Towson State College, in Towson, Md., and at Wagner College, on Staten Island, N.Y.

Teaching applicants have been known to "stretch their credentials, claiming degrees or faculty status they don't really have," said Rollins College Dean of Faculty Daniel DeNicola. Other school officials agreed.

But what Doe did, assuming an entirely false identity, is virtually unheard of, most said.

"I think this is a real fluke," says Allan Ostar, president of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities. "What you've got here is a real clever con artist. There is no way an institution can protect itself from that."

Based on interviews with officials of the two Pennsylvania colleges, Doe has proven that the teacher application process at their schools, and possibly others around the country, is vulnerable.

A person could consult education journals and do some detective work to find out enough for a masquerade — learn where a professor got his degrees, what books or articles he has written.

But Doe still had to break the key line of defense that universities rely on to screen applicants: the clubbiness of practically every academic discipline that puts professors from all over the country on a first-name basis. A person would have a hard time falsely assuming the identity, for example, of a University of Michigan philosophy professor.

Doe's apparent solution was to choose the identity of an Australian professor named John Byron Hext to get a job at Shippensburg. And he posed as Peter H. Pearse, a non-academic from private industry, to get an associate professorship at Millersburg.

Ray Burd of Shippensburg said that his school put job ads in national publications, inviting resumes and references. The most qualified applicants, including the man calling himself Hext, were invited to campus for interviews with a search committee of three or four professors and the department chairman.

During the interview, "the applicant's expertise is sampled," said Burd, and academic transcripts are studied. Since many schools will send transcripts on written request, that posed no problem for Doe, who apparently must have researched Hext's background.

Far trickier was the problem of job references. Authorities speculated that Doe used post office boxes in identifying the addresses of his references and answered the school's queries himself, or else had an accomplice help him.

Finally, he got the job at Shippensburg. But he was found out and fired March 10 after an article appeared by the real Hext in an education journal, and after students complained about Doe's "intimidating" teaching methods.

Last fall, Doe used similar tactics — posing as Peter H. Pearse — to get an associate professor's job 75 miles away at Millersville.

According to Keith Lovin, vice president for academic affairs, Doe was invited to the Millersville campus for an interview with a faculty committee, including the dean of the school, William Pearman. Pearman was out of town, but later conducted a lengthy telephone interview with Doe.

According to Lovin, Doe claimed he had a degree from the University of Edinburgh, but only had a photocopy of his transcript.

"I wanted him to send an original copy of the transcript from Edinburgh. He complied, and we got it from the school," Lovin said, adding that the transcript appeared to be authentic.

"He presented himself as coming from business. That isn't unusual anymore, to make the transition from business to the academic world," said Lovin. Doe was hired to teach statistics, managerial finance and investment analysis, starting last fall.

Lovin said that Doe's teaching was evaluated, as was customary for new hires, by students and by professors who sat in on his classes. "He was sometimes arrogant in class. He resorted to intimidation," Lovin said. But no action was taken by the college until last Monday when Doe was arrested for forgery, tampering with public records, theft by deception, and false swearing, among other charges.

He is being held in Cumberland County jail, in Carlisle, Pa., in lieu of $150,000 bail.

Dentist for 25 years still makes stall calls

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — The old adage, "Never look a gift horse in the mouth," wouldn't do for Vincent H. Vigneau Jr. He's a horse dentist.

"I've been doing teeth for over 25 years," Vigneau, 42, said in a telephone interview from the Oaklawn Park thoroughbred track, where he makes stall calls.

Among his patients, Vigneau lists Triple Crown winner Secretariat and a horse named Macaroni, which belonged to the late President John F. Kennedy. He also has worked on show horses and work.

"I go to race tracks, horse shows and training centers — what have you," said the 42-year-old former Shelbyville, Tenn., resident, known around the tracks as "Doc."

He has lived in Hot Springs for the past several months. Vigneau learned the business from his grandfather, Leopold Vangernush, who practiced the craft for more than 60 years. "There's no school in the United States that teaches equine dentistry," Vigneau said.

Vigneau, who says he stays as busy as he wants, dresses and floats teeth, pulls wolf teeth and caps teeth. He also answers emergency calls, such as when a horse is kicked in the mouth, suffers a chipped tooth or breaks an in-visor.

Dressing teeth involves taking off the sharp edges. Floating them means smoothing the molars so that the bit fits comfortably in the mouth.

Vigneau books his appointments with trainers and does his work in the stalls without restraining the animals. "I get along with them," he said of his unsuspecting patients.

For horses, trips to the dentist are short.

"On the average horse that needs floating and dressing, it usually takes anywhere from 20 to 30 minutes," Vigneau said. "If there's a problem such as chips and spurs that have to come out, this would take longer."

El Paso accountant says he's top skier

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — An El Paso accountant says he won the 1983 award as Texas' top downhill skier because he was the last of his competitors left standing.

"There was no competition, and I never fell in any of the heats," said Jim Dick, who captured the coveted Texas Cup over about 100 competitors from such "renowned" ski resorts as Lubbock, Amarillo and Austin.

Steve Moss coordinated the two-day event, and said "anyone who stays on his skis all the way down (the slope) has a chance to win the Texas Cup."

Texas doesn't pretend it's a serious ski center but tales of the Texas Cup races bring to mind the popular tongue-in-cheek posters of skiers slaloming across a Kansas cornfield or skiing down an Oklahoma oil derrick.

Last month, carloads of Lone Star skiers bearing seldom-used skis and Texas license plates traveled to Sierra Blanca, N.M., to find suitable slopes for its downhill racers.

Texas does have mountains: Guadalupe Peak in the far northwest corner of the state rises to 8,751 feet, but is craggy and rarely covered with a lasting snow.

Even Dick's hometown of El Paso has the Franklin Mountains, which were buried under a 10-inch snowfall last December. But the closest ski area is in Cloudcroft, N.M., a 90-mile run up Highway 54 from El Paso in New Mexico's southern mid-section.

Parade in O'Neill success

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
O'NEILL, Neb. (AP) — Remember the grand donnybrook over the choice of the grand marshal for the St. Patrick's Day parade in New York? How it wound up with some politicians boycotting the line of march and the cardinal remaining inside St. Patrick's Cathedral so as not to give his blessing to IRA sympathizer Michael Flannery?

Well, in O'Neill, Neb., they avoided all that unseemly squabbling and chose me as their grand marshal. There wasn't a dry throat in the house.

There wasn't any cardinal to be seen on the steps of their St. Patrick's either, but they did serve Mulligan's Stew in the parochial school basement, and Sister Bernadette, who teaches second grade, performed with the aerobic dance team in front of the reviewing stand. I waved the shillelagh the mayor gave me at her group and the other 92 units in the parade, including the float with the live pit which advertised the local carpet store as being "as Irish as Paddy's Pig." I wavered at them all as grandly as Queen Elizabeth, if you'll pardon the comparison, greeting the descendants of her long lost empire the week before in California.

O'Neill, (pop. 4,052, but five times that many on the day of the parade) is a darling place to honor St. Patrick, even if the festivities took place two days later on St. Joseph's Day.

Not only is it the popcorn capital of the world and a major livestock center — "Cattle Every Monday, Hogs Every Thursday" reads the sign at the edge of town — but it is also the Irish capital of Nebraska, duly proclaimed by the Legislature. This is by virtue of its being founded and colonized by Gen. John O'Neill, the first man ever to lead IRA units into combat. He was the bold Fenian lad who three times after the Civil War tried to invade Canada, always on or near Queen Victoria's birthday, with the madcap idea of giving it back in exchange for a free Ireland.

Some of the boys painting the "world's largest shamrock" beneath O'Neill's only spotlight (and, so I am told, the only traffic light between Sioux Falls and Denver) are descendants of the settlers the general coaxed out here from the mining towns of Pennsylvania in 1874-75. The fact that they didn't hang him when they first saw this bleak, treeless prairie, swarming with locusts and inhospitable Pawnee warriors, is a tribute to O'Neill's way with the blarney.

Because he couldn't ride a white horse in a snow squall (or under a tropic moon either), the grand marshal rode in an open sports car, right behind the high school band, which for some reason stepped out to the tune of "Scotland the Brave." Assistant marshal Tom Allan of the Omaha World Herald perched precariously in a tubular chair on the jaws of a forklift truck that raised him aloft for a better view of the line of march.

Washington was, for the most part, in the minority because most senators were happy just to get two extra years of breathing time before hitting the campaign trail again. He was planning on trading to obtain a two-year term, which would free him up for a shot at a judgeship, but the Parliamentarian ruled trading was not allowed by the Constitution.

By the time the alphabetical draw reached his name, all the two-year terms had already been taken, to his political dismay.

Unemployed or underemployed Vietnam-era veterans may be eligible for an extension of their educational benefits, advises the director of the Waco Veterans Administration Regional Office.

He pointed out that modification of educational assistance legislation provides for the extension of the 10-year education eligibility period for certain veterans who may wish to pursue further vocational, apprenticeship, on-the-job training or a high school diploma. The Vietnam era was Aug. 5, 1964 - May 7, 1975.

The benefit extension is aimed at putting unemployed and underemployed veterans into training or educational programs that will give them marketable skills so they can re-enter the work force," he stressed.

To qualify for the extension, a veteran must have been unemployed or underemployed for six months, and in need of additional training or education to obtain a more stable job.

Ending date for the extension is Dec. 31, 1984.

For further information, write, visit or telephone the Waco VA Regional Office toll-free number listed in your local directory under "Veterans Administration" or "U.S. Government." A VA counselor will respond.

In the Legislature, the House passed the 60-day limit on voting and commenced floor votes, approving a bill removing a major loophole in hardship driver's licenses for 15-year-olds.

The Senate, following heated debate between Carl Parker of Port Arthur and Ted Lyon of Mesquite, passed the controversial Wildlife Conservation Act which gives a state agency control of wildlife management in all Texas counties.

The bill puts an end to the veto powers still resting with some 30 counties and is highly supported by sport hunters and fishermen groups.

The Senate also approved legislation designed to trigger early paroles if Texas prison population comes close to a court ordered limit. Non-violent offenders would be paroled if prison population approaches 95% capacity.

Unanimous approval went to expansion of the Veterans Land Program which includes a $500 million housing choice if voters approve an $800 million bond issue this fall.

The principal bill implementing DWI reform was also passed by the Senate. The bill increases penalties and prohibits deferred adjudication.

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS
By Lyndell Williams
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN — Within the length of a few minutes last week, the fates and ambitions of several Texas senators were made or unmade when the lawmakers drew lots for staggered election terms.

The Constitution requires that following each redistricting, senators will draw lots and 15 members will run in two years and 16 will run in four years.

In its own small way, the draw determines for many who will move up in the political world and who will not, depending upon the advantage gained or lost. Some senators, like Craig Washington of Houston, preferred to run in '84, a presidential election year, but most wanted to wait until '86, the next gubernatorial election year.

Washington was, for the most part, in the minority because most senators were happy just to get two extra years of breathing time before hitting the campaign trail again. He was planning on trading to obtain a two-year term, which would free him up for a shot at a judgeship, but the Parliamentarian ruled trading was not allowed by the Constitution.

By the time the alphabetical draw reached his name, all the two-year terms had already been taken, to his political dismay.

All For Naught
Senators who probably won a reprieve by the draw included Glenn Kothmann of San Antonio, who drew four years and postponed the challenging plans of former San Antonio Rep. Tommy Adkisson; John Traeger of Seguin, whose district is being redrawn to enhance the chances of a Hispanic candidate; and Bill Sims of San Angelo, a Democrat who pulled a surprise victory from what was considered a Republican West Texas district.

Besides Washington, senators who probably lost an edge on the future include Lloyd Doggett of Austin, who will have to relinquish his seat if he follows through with his plans to challenge U.S. Sen. John Tower next year; Chet Edwards of Duncannonville, who could make a similar race against U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm; and Roy Blake of Nacogdoches, who angered his home Democrats last year by pulling for Republican Bill Clements.

The draw may be all for naught, if the Justice Department decides all senators must run again in two years because of negotiations to end a legal fight over boundaries in some new districts.

DAVILLA, Texas (AP) — Dauthet Bowser has been raising fighting cocks for 60 years but shipping them off to Louisiana for battle was so expensive and time-consuming that he decided to stage his own.

The result was the arrest of 26 men at his cock fight last Sunday. Bowser, 73, and another man were charged with promoting the fight.

In an interview, Bowser said he usually sells the roosters to other cock-fighting fans or takes them to Louisiana, where, he claimed, cock fighting is legal.

But a spokesman for the Louisiana State Police said cock fighting is illegal throughout Louisiana.

When pressed to name the town where he takes his roosters, Bowser said he can't remember its name. He said it's on Interstate 10, just across the Texas line.

Davilla, population 72, is on FM 430 and FM 487, about 50 miles northwest of Bryan.

The Milam County sheriff's office got an anonymous tip that a cock fight was taking place and sent two deputies to break up the event.

When the deputies arrived, a spokesman for the sheriff's office said, two roosters were fighting to the death. In the rules of cock fighting, the fight goes on until one of the chickens is dead.

The sheriff's spokesman said the spectators were standing in a circle in a flat, muddy area between Bowser's chicken pens.

All 26 spectators were arrested without incident, authorities said.

Since the fight was on Bowser's property, he was charged with promotion of gambling.

Another man, Bernardo F. Avila of Buckholts, was arrested on a charge of cruelty to animals. The other participants were arrested on charges of gambling.

Sheriff Leroy Broadus said his deputies seized no money or chickens. Each of the 24 paid a $61 fine and was released from jail Sunday, Broadus said.

Avila had to put up $500 bail, but Bowser had to post $1,000 bail before he could be released.

That makes him mad, he said.

"I don't understand how they come up with this 'promotion of gambling' thing," he said Monday. "We weren't out there to gamble. We were out there for the sport."

Bowser said the bets being made at Sunday's fight were small — $5 or $10 total for the winner.

"It wasn't enough money to make it worth it for us to be out there," Bowser said. "If it was just for the money, why, none of us would be out there. We just do it for the enjoyment of it. It's a sport, like horse racing or football."

But unlike those sports, cock fighting involves pitting two animals against each other and having them fight until one is dead. It's illegal in Texas, but Bowser doesn't believe it's cruel.

"It's what they're bred to do," he said.

"You get two roosters together (outside the cock fighting ring) and they'll naturally fight. But in the sport, it's a fair fight. At least, they have a chance — they have to be within two ounces of each other, or it's no match. It's not like raising them and killing them for food, where they just go down the line and chop, chop, chop."

His main interest in the sport, Bowser said, is in raising the fierce birds. He said he doesn't fight the chickens, but sells them to other fighters.

"I take them to other states, where it (cock fighting) is legal, and I sell them," he said.

"A good cock can bring in $75 to $100."

However, the illegality of the sport doesn't always stand in its fans' way in Louisiana or in some parts of Texas.

A Louisiana trooper said arrests are made "fairly often" for cock fighting.

The Texas Department of Public Safety has made no recent arrests in East Central Texas for cock fighting, said David Wells, DPS public information officer in Austin.

Brazos County sheriff's Deputy Charlie Owen said the sheriff's office has not received any reports of cock fighting in the county.

But Broadus said he'd heard that cock fighting is popular in the western part of his county. Around Davilla, Bowser said, cock fighting has been popular for years, but Sunday's fight was the first in the area in about two years.

Broadus said the fight two years ago was also broken up, leading to the arrest of several men. Those arrests stopped cock fighting for a while near Davilla, but Bowser said he got tired of having to go out of state to enjoy the sport.

"Sure, I know it's illegal," he said. "But it's my land, and I wanted to have a little fight with a few of the people around here. Nothing big, just a little sport."

But his arrest taught him a lesson, Bowser said.

"I'm not doing this any more," he said. "I'm selling my cocks and letting it go. I'm too old for this."

Old man of the sea now watches river

COOCHIE, La. (AP) — Sam Viriden's shoelaces are loose and his beltless pants are baggy — partly for comfort but also so he can kick them off quick if he falls into the muddy Mississippi.

"You learn a lot when you've spent most of your life at sea," Viriden says, and being ready for a quick swim is one of the lessons.

Now nearing retirement, he is a captain of the Kent, an 85-foot picket boat that spends most of its time lurking at a dock, ready to protect Old River Control Structure from wild barges or powerless boats.

At the age of 68, the feisty little man watches the sluggish Mississippi flow by, sighs a lot, tinkers with inventions and ponders how to phrase new letters to the Army Corps of Engineers on the evils of long-distance commuting.

The Old River Control Structure, which the Kent guards, keeps the great river from changing its course into the Atchafalaya Basin. To an old blue water man, it's a lot different than seagoing work.

"It's not the same, of course, but it's still an important job even if I do have to drive 140 miles to work," said Viriden.

"The river is nothing, really," he added. "I've pushed ships through 35-to-50-foot seas in the North Atlantic. I've spent a life at sea."

There is little glamour to the watch at Coochie. The Kent is simply on alert 24 hours a day to protect Old River, a series of floodgates, from being damaged by loose barges.

Odds are against it happening, but with more than 100 barges passing by each day the danger is always there that one might come loose from the "train" and be carried by the current into the Old River channel to crash against the already weakened structure.

A new $300 million control structure is under construction. When finished, it should eliminate the threat of an Old River Control Structure collapse but until then the Kent stands guard.

Unlike a lot of seamen, Viriden is a good swimmer. He once had to swim for his life and his difficulty in shedding enough clothing to stay afloat made a deep impression on him.

"That's why you'll never see me on board with a belt or boots. You go overboard and you don't have much time. Clothes get in the way. I'm always ready to get naked if I have to make the bank. It's a good precaution."

However, Viriden said that doesn't mean he's afraid.

"I respect the water but I'm not scared of it," he said. "I was born on a 25-foot boat close to Grande Isle during a storm. We had to weather the storm. I guess it shook me up and I had to come."

"My father never worked for a salary in his life. He died at 86. He always trapped, fished and hunted for a living."

"We didn't live in a house until I was 12 years old. In those days if you had 25 cents in your pocket you were better off than I am now with a $100 bill in mine. You talk about poor. All you had to do was find us and you'd find the poorest people in the world."

"When I got old enough I shipped out. I've worked in Singapore, Africa, the North Sea, you name it. Once, I worked for the Geological Survey for a dollar a day and took a break from merchant ships during the war to join the Coast Guard. It's been a good life."

Viriden has fired off his share of peevish letters to his employer, the Corps of Engineers, about long-distance commuting.

Transferred from the New Orleans district a couple of years ago, Viriden refused to move from his home in a New Orleans suburb to this rural community some 50 miles north of Baton Rouge.

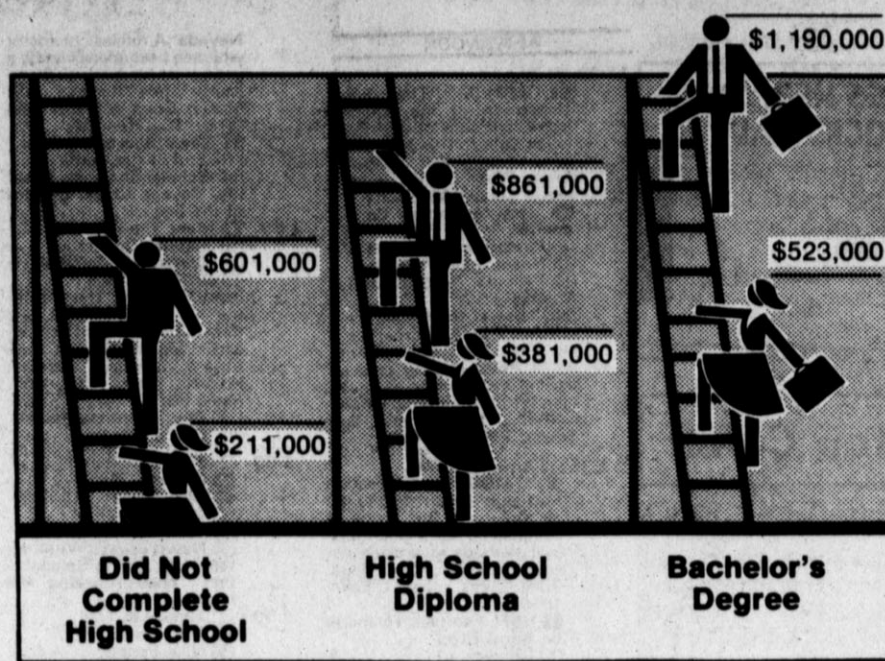

So he works aboard the Kent for a few days and on his time off drives the 140 miles to Marrero to be with his family.

Inventions during his spare time led to patents for a core borer and an oil skimmer.

The borer could be used by the petroleum industry offshore but Viriden said he hasn't pushed it.

His oil skimmer would help clean up oil spills in the Gulf, he said. "I'd like to make some money off that, but who knows."

EARNING BY DEGREES Education and Lifetime Income

SOURCE: Census Bureau

Americans completing college can expect lifetime earnings averaging nearly 40 percent higher than those of high school graduates. Their lead over that part of the work force that did not finish school is even greater. While earning expectations for men are more than double those for women in all categories, the Census Bureau says many factors other than gender contribute to the difference. Figures, based on annual salary surveys from 1979 through 1981, are for money earned between the ages of 18 and 64 and are expressed in 1981 dollars.

Generous, tough, decisive: Barney Clark

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — From his teen-age years hustling odd jobs to help his widowed mother keep her house, to his last days as the first human with a permanent artificial heart, Barney Clark was a giver.

His generosity of spirit was well known to friends of the rangy dentist with the deep-dish smile, and it endeared him to millions more during the 112 days Clark battled for life with the softly clicking device in his chest.

"All in all it has been a pleasure to be able to help people," Clark said in his only public assessment of his unique role.

He was surprised that thousands of well-wishers considered him a hero and showered him with letters of encouragement. President Reagan and his wife sent telegrams.

"Keep on pumping, Barney," wrote a sixth-grader from Florida.

But if Clark was giving, he also possessed what one doctor called "a kind of pioneering toughness that you don't see in all of us."

The retired dentist from the Seattle suburb of Des Moines, Wash., was suffering from cardiomyopathy, a degenerative disease of the heart muscle. The air-driven, polyurethane pump was his only hope for life and he seized it.

His wife, Una Loy, said that quality — decisiveness — best suited Clark to be the first mechanical heart patient. "He is his own man. He makes his own decisions," she said.

Clark's decision to journey into the medical unknown spoke for itself.

Dr. Chase Peterson, University of Utah vice president for health sciences, said just hours before Clark's death Wednesday that he couldn't have made the same choice.

"I would not have it done to me if I were as close to being terminal as Dr. Clark was Dec. 1," Peterson said. "He's been a very tough customer."

That toughness was tested to the limit as Clark survived four operations, seizures, depression, disorientation, nosebleeds and prolonged periods of pain and discomfort before the complications overwhelmed him.

Clark was born 62 years ago in Provo, Utah, an only child whose father died when he was 12. He peddled hot dogs and vegetables and delivered newspapers so his mother could meet the mortgage payments on their house.

Clark met his future wife of 39 years while in the seventh grade.

Texas Blue Laws ignored by some stores, officials

AUSTIN (AP) — Under the Texas Blue Law, you can buy shoelaces, but not shoes on both days of a weekend.

You can buy beer, but not a baby bottle.

You can get a hammer, but no nails.

Hair curlers are available, but hair dryers are not.

You can purchase a handgun on both days, but a toy gun on only one.

And according to Blue Law foe Rep. Bill Ceverha, "You can buy almost anything if the checkout clerks are not fully trained and completely alert."

You can also buy almost anything if your hometown officials are not interested in enforcing the 1961 law that shuts down most stores on Sundays.

"I have no intention of trying to enforce blue laws," said Odessa Police Chief Alan Stewart. "We're overburdened by the crime in Odessa now. We're not going to waste our time determining whether a guy is selling on consecutive days."

In Austin, a scant few stores open their doors on Saturday and Sunday. Joe Reynolds is manager of a Homer's hardware and do-it-yourself store that opens both days.

"I'd rather not even comment on it. Obviously we're open seven days a week."

'The Thorn Birds' saga starts Sunday

NEW YORK (AP) — Give Americans a love story, and they'll line up to watch it. Make that love nearly impossible to achieve, or even forbidden, and they'll beat the door down.

The networks sell soap in the afternoon on that premise, and ABC is counting on "The Thorn Birds," a 10-hour miniseries that runs for four consecutive nights starting Sunday, to work as well.

It should — and for the right reasons, too. "The Thorn Birds," Colleen McCullough's romantic novel that sold 10 million copies in the United States, is everything that "The Winds of War" wasn't. It's an intoxicating story that springs from passionate people and their relationships — not

Sonny Rollins most powerful tenor sax

NEW YORK (AP) — If Sonny Rollins isn't the greatest living tenor saxophonist, he is certainly the most powerful and one of the most exciting.

A Rollins performance is as insistent as an avalanche — one flurry of notes coming on top of another, broken by growls, blustery arpeggios, and then, without warning, lapsing into the most tender of ballads without any trace of sentimentality.

Through it all, there is that unique Rollins sound. And in 30 years as a working musician, the 53-year-old Rollins has adapted that sound to every kind of jazz, from the avant-garde to the mainstream.

Along the way, he has harnessed the bouncy rhythms of the Caribbean. From the 1950s, when he wrote the classic calypso tune, "St. Thomas," Rollins has made calypso rhythms a part of his musical identity. The tradition continues with "Reel Life," the title tune on his latest album.

He has little time to listen to music right now — he says he's too busy with his own — but he'll listen to anything from country to punk rock, which he has recently discovered.

He rehearses incessantly. "It's not always possible to rehearse 24 hours a day, but sometimes it's a good idea to rehearse a whole lot."

"To me, it's just a continual trying to improve myself, trying to learn more," he says. "It's just a long road. To me it's an everyday affair, practicing every day and studying every day on the trail of music."

Despite his concentration on rehearsals, every Rollins performance sounds fresh, as if he's playing the music for the first time. More so than other musicians, Rollins deserves to be heard in person.

"Every time I play it's going to be somewhat different," he says. "Even if you play the same song, there are so many tempos that it can be done in. I'm playing in a spontaneous way, so any changes I hear in the tempo suggest other changes, chordal changes, rhythm variations, which wouldn't happen at a different tempo."

"I'm trying to play extemporaneously, which means I'm trying to play the complete experience of my whole career, and my endless quest for the lost chord."

The search for the lost chord, Rollins said, is a thing musicians used to talk about among themselves, and he's adopted the idea. "I'm not sure if it was partly a joke, or had some meaning to it," he said. "The idea is that there is music in the universe that is that sound, that perfect harmony, and we're trying to get to it."

The charm turns out to be a deadly poison and kills him. The heroine then commits suicide.

A classical education was once the hallmark of culture. But in 1921, Greek was dropped as a requirement for entering Cambridge University. Latin remained compulsory until the 1950s.

For someone with no knowledge of Greek, it was essential to read the Sophocles play in English before going to the theater, or one had to take along the text and follow it during the play.

"People without Greek can pick up a great deal in broad terms of what the play is about, if the poetry is excitingly delivered," says David Raeburn, a classics teacher who directed "The Women of Trachis."

"Greek literature is incomparably richer in the ancient language, and translations are not effective for more than a generation or so," he said. "They date very quickly and don't speak to the next generation. The original goes on speaking and has to be reinterpreted from one generation to the next. The plays are alive, surviving from 2,500 years ago."

England theaters find the going hard

CAMBRIDGE, England (AP) — Theaters find the going hard enough these days without staging plays in ancient Greek, a language which began falling into disuse around 2,000 years ago.

But at Cambridge University, where Greek is still taught, the plays of Sophocles and other ancient Greek dramatists have been presented in the original tongue for 100 years.

With an amateur cast of undergraduates, the city's small Arts Theater has staged nine performances of the tragedy, "The Women of Trachis" this year, playing to an average 65 percent capacity.

"Oxford University also does Greek plays in Greek, but the Cambridge performances have more prestige because they have always had the full backing of a committee of dons," says Pat Eastling, vice-principal of Newnham Women's College and the leading authority on Greek tragedy at Cambridge.

A cast of 35, barefoot or in sandals, performed the strange tale of Delaneira, tricked into sending a love charm to regain the affection of her husband, Heracles.

Sanford is Queen on 'The Jeffersons'

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — Actress Isabel Sanford's lunch consisted of a small cup of cream of spinach soup, followed by a small cup of chicken creole soup and a few soda crackers.

Is that any lunch for a star? Yes, when the star is Isabel Sanford, the all-suffering Louise of the long-running CBS television series, "The Jeffersons."

"I was born fat," she sighs. "When I was growing up, I had no eating discipline; my mother put the food down in front of me and expected me to eat. And I did. I can still eat like a longshoreman if you give me a big plate of food — and I'll go back for seconds."

"Now I try to stay within a diet program, because I look better in my clothes on the show. Don't get me wrong — I'll never be a Twiggy, I'll never be an anorexia victim. I just try to keep the weight under control."

During the nine years of "The Jeffersons," Miss Sanford's weight has gone up and down like the show's Nielsen rating. Right now, she seems in good shape, and so is the series. She and co-star Sherman Hemsley recently performed the 200th show. And there's no end in sight.

"I'd like to round out 10 years with the series," she said. "As long as the writers don't go dry, we can make it. And if they do go dry, we'll get fresh ones."

They call her Queen on "The Jeffersons" set at Universal studios, and with good reason.

NBC's movie receives attention

CBS wins TV ratings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Although NBC's movie about nuclear terrorism got most of the attention last week, CBS continued its first-place domination of the A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings.

NBC's "Special Bulletin," a movie depicting nuclear terrorists, ended up in 37th place in the ratings for the week ended March 20.

"Special Bulletin" used a simulation of news coverage to tell the story of a group of terrorists armed with a nuclear bomb holding the city of Charleston, S.C., hostage in return for the surrender of all military nuclear detonating devices. More than a thousand people telephoned NBC stations and police departments across the country because of the realistic portrayal.

The NBC movie was pushed aside in the ratings by its CBS opposition, "Trapper John, M.D.," which was No. 4, "Newhart," No. 8 and "The Jeffersons," No. 11.

"Special Bulletin" got a rating of 15.1, which means it was seen in 12.6 million homes.

CBS won the week with a lead of more than 4 ratings points over second-place ABC. CBS had a rating of 19.6 and ABC had 15.2. NBC was in third place with 14.3. The networks say this means that in an average prime-time minute 19.6 percent of homes with television were tuned to CBS.

For the season to date, CBS leads with a rating of 18.5. ABC is second with 17.3 and NBC is third with 15.4. The current season extends from last Sept. 27 to April 17.

CBS had seven of the Top 10, with "60 Minutes" in first place followed by "Magnum, P.I.," "Dallas" and "Trapper John, M.D." ABC's highest-ranked show was "Three's Company" in fifth place.

"The Ninth Annual People's Choice Awards" on CBS was in sixth place. Next came ABC's "Dynasty" and CBS' "Newhart," tied for seventh. They were followed by CBS' "The Wizard of Oz" and NBC's only entry in the Top 10, "The A-Team."

"Still the Beaver," a CBS movie taking an updated look at "The Leave It to Beaver" series, was in 19th place.

Shorofsky looks the part

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — If you think Albert Hague looks the part of the music professor on NBC's "Fame," chalk it up to typecasting.

Hague is a teacher, lecturer, coach and a Tony award-winning composer who didn't turn to acting until he was 59.

He stars as the acerbic, eccentric teacher, Benjamin Shorofsky, the man who rains on the parade of the students at New York's School for the Performing Arts. He's there to remind the aspiring artists that there's more to a career than the "hey-gang-let's-put-on-a-show" attitude many of them have.

"Shorofsky is two things," said Hague, who grew his professorial white beard when he was cast in the hit movie that inspired the TV series. "He's a dedicated artist in the true sense of the word. He's serious about his work. He's maniacally serious, as I am.

"But he has a passion not to be pompous because pomposity defeats sincerity," Hague says.

Hague admits there are "enormous similarities" between himself and Shorofsky. Producer-writer Bill Blinn frequently stands near him and picks up his conversation and drops it into the scripts.

"He found out I play table tennis and so Shorofsky plays table tennis," Hague said.

Here are the Top 10: "60 Minutes," a rating of 27.2 or 22.6 million households, CBS; "Magnum, P.I.," 25.8 or 21.5 million, CBS; "Dallas," 25.0 or 20.8 million, CBS; "Trapper John, M.D.," 23.4 or 19.5 million, CBS; "Three's Company," 22.3 or 18.6 million, ABC; "The Ninth Annual People's Choice Awards," 22.2 or 18.5 million, CBS; ABC's "Dynasty" and CBS' "Newhart," 22.0 or 18.3 million, tied; "The Wizard of Oz," 21.7 or 18.1 million, CBS; "The A-Team," 21.3 or 17.7 million, NBC.

Prince Valiant

Created by Hal Foster

Our Story: AS ALP HURRIES HIS WAY TO PRINCE VALIANT'S PALACE, HE SEEMS TO DECLINE THE INVITATION. HE LEAPS AND WHIRLS, COUNTERING WITH STRAY OBJECTS, AND FLIES OUT WITH HIS LIMBS. IT IS LIKE BATTLING MOSQUITOS. ONLY WHEN ONE ATTACKER CLIMBS A BALCONY AND PROPS A CHAMBER POT IS VAL SUBSIDED.

TAKING NO CHANCES, THEY TRUSS HIM LIKE A ROAST AND CART HIM TO THE AUGUST PRESENCE OF THE BLINDFOLD IS REMOVED.

"WELL, VAL CRIES, AND THEN HIS EYES WANDER TO THE OTHER FIGURE. 'THESE LADS ARE IDENTICAL. SILENCE, SPEECH BEGINS TO RAMBLE. EYES CLOSE AND AS A VICIOUS STORM RAGED OVERHEAD, MY BELOVED QUEEN GAVE BIRTH TO TWINS....'

"... AND THEN GAVE UP HER SOUL. TWINS! EVER SINCE THE CIVIL WAR LONG AGO THE NOBLES OF DALMATIA HAVE FORTIFIED THE HOUSE OF ZOG TO HAVE TWINS. WHAT COULD I DO? TO SAVE MY SONS I SLAUGHTERED ALL WITNESSES. FOOLISHLY I PROMPT TO ASK WHICH BOY WAS BORN FIRST.

"I POKED ONE AT BALCONY AND SENT HIM TO THE MASTY TILES. I RAN THE PARENTS GENEROUSLY."

"THE OTHER BOY, U.S. I RAISED AS MY SON. ZOG ROUSES FROM HIS REVERY AND SPLITS INTO ALP'S FACE. 'AND NOW YOU RETURN TO USURP MY PLACE.' ALP STAMMERS A DENIAL, BUT ZOG HEARS NOTHING. 'THE NOBLES WILL SOON REMEMBER. I HAVE NO CHECK. I MUST INVOKE THE PRINCIPAL LAW OF SEMINARIUM, AND ONE OF YOU MUST DIE.' NEXT WEEK: The Law of the Twin's 3-27

OF COURSE YOU HAVE A CHOICE, M6. CRUMM.

EITHER PAY THE FIFTY-THOUSAND-DOLLAR PENALTY... OR GO TO JAIL FOR TEN YEARS!

HOW ABOUT A COMPROMISE?

I'LL PAY TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND AND MY ACCOUNTANT HERE CAN GO TO JAIL FOR FIVE YEARS!

I-CUE TEST! "I came, I saw, I conquered," said Caesar. Challenge: Name the "I" (or "I's) associated with:

- "I want to hold your hand."
- "I want to be alone."
- "I yam what I yam."
- "I am woman."
- "I am the greatest!"
- "I don't get no respect!"
- "I'm a young man."
- "I'm a young man."
- "I'm a young man."
- "I'm a young man."

SICK LIST! One letter is wrong in each of these grocery list items: 1. Milk. 2. Bread. 3. Floor. 4. Buster. 5. Speak. What are the items?

PUZZLE OUT RIVERS

First and last letters of the names of six well known American rivers, all of which have eight letters in their names, are given above. How quickly can you fill the blanks with intermediate letters?

Oh yes, as an additional clue, heavy black letters, which spell out the word RIVERS, are inserted in respective positions in names. No fair peeking!
