DOE seeks info on impacts

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

As the result of Thursday's meeting with elected officials, DOE Salt Repository Project Manager Jeff Neff has requested a report from the county outlining areas of potential impact as the result of the characterization studies scheduled to be done in Deaf Smith County.

The proposed site characterization studies will involve an influx of personnel into the county and elected officials are concerned about the financial impact on the county which operates on an approximately $3.4 million annual budget.

The Nuclear Waste Repository Act of 1982 provides funding for impacts arising from the placement of a repository, but not from site characterization studies. Neff commented, "Congress didn't have a sense of these impacts being a problem to the community during site characterization. If they had, it is my belief that they would have written parallel language to what has been written on the repository process."

The county will be able to take advantage of a provision which will allow Payments Equivalent to Taxes. PET effectively serves as a taxation on the facility. However PET payments are not scheduled to be substantial until 1992. Based on the county's current ad valorem tax rate, Neff estimates the payments at that time would be from $250 to $300 thousand a year.

The figure which doesn't match county estimate, is, according to Neff, "A guess." DOE will be meeting with the state comptroller and county tax people sometime next week to determine a more accurate figure.

Neff explained that there are two possible ways of assessing value: that of having each sub-contractor pay individually or that of issuing tax-free numbers to the sub-contractors and keeping records which would be reviewed and serve as the basis for periodic lump-sum payments from DOE. The later method would probably mean a higher income for the Deaf Smith County.

Commissioners and other elected officials expressed concern about the immediate impact which will require increased staffing and road improvements. Neff responded, "We recognize that the payments come at the wrong time and we are working within our system to address that."

DOE representative Linda McClain stated, "We intend to be of benefit locally and we intend to find creative ways of addressing some of these problems."

One of the "creative" methods the DOE personnel are looking at is the early addition of impact dollars which would be paid from DOE funds, unlike the PET dollars which are derived from utility bills.

"This would be a DOE decision," stated Neff. "We would make the decision to provide some funds upfront and then notify Congress of that decision."

When officials requested a definite date for a positive commitment on prepayment of PET or of impact funding Neff responded, "I am working very hard to bring in, in the April time frame, a demonstration that we are determined to make this a neutral impact situation."

Neff later explained that he has set the April meeting of the Vega school board as his personal goal to have some definitive answers. "If that date changes I will notify you," he stated. "We are establishing precedents in several areas here and it just takes time."

Commissioners concerned about the negative impact the county will undergo when the site shuts down, estimated to be about 1996, were told by Neff "that there is a method of making application for a line item funding to assist in the problems which may arise due to overstaffing and pay a scale difference.

One of the major areas expected to be impacted is that of employment, officials expressed concern that the higher salaries DOE offers will entice their secretaries to seek employment outside of the courthouse.

Concerning road improvements, Neff assured the officials that the DOE will be responsible for the improvements and will contract with the county or "...with the contractor the county normally uses so that the roads are within your standards. When we determine what needs to be done we will sit down with you and work out an acceptable solution."

As a few of the officials questioned the possibility that site characterization may be halted by Congress or by legal action Neff replied, "My opinion is that as elected officials you should assume there will be an office here and make plans to go forward."

An observer commented on the serious nature of pending lawsuits seeking injunctions to halt the process. Judge Simons responded, "We understand your position but you must appreciate the position we, as elected officials, are in. We would be derelict in our duty not to pursue the matter of financial assistance for the impacts this project may have on our community."

TOP JUNIOR SPELLERS...
Greg Coplen and Taylor Sublett.

Greg Coplen wins junior spelling bee

Greg Coplen got exposed to a champion speller for four years, and it paid off Thursday as the 12-year-old captured the junior division of the Deaf Smith County Spelling Bee.

Greg, a 6th grader at West Central, is the son of Ed and Jane Coplen and the brother of Matt Coplen, four-time winner of the county bee title. Matt placed third in the Regional Bee twice.

Greg spelled "aplastic" and "belaud" in the 53rd round of the bee Thursday to capture first place. Taylor Sublett, only a 4th grader at West Central, was the runnerup. The 9-year-old missed on "aplastic", spelling it with two P's. She is the daughter of Troy and Susan Sublett.

The top four spellers in the junior bee will compete in the county bee today to determine who advances to the Regional Bee at West Texas State University April 11. Amy Lascano, 5th grader at West Central, and Andrew Tijerina, 5th grader at Shirley, placed third and fourth in the junior bee.

The four juniors will be trying for the county title against six junior high students. Representing La Plata will be Zack Walker, Leasha Deyke and Edgar Montoya. The finalists from Stanton, are Anabel Lascano, a former junior champ, and Jim Brett Campbell, and Cecelia Rodriguez.

Twenty-one students from six county schools (grades 4-5-6) participated in the junior bee Thursday. The spellers went through 28 rounds before the top four were left, then 10 more rounds eliminated all but the top two.

Bera Boyd served as pronouncer and judges were Eloise McDougal and Margaret Bell. Speedy Nieman is the county director for the bee, sponsored locally by The Hereford Brand.

Local financial institutions also provide awards for the top winners. Greg received a $50 savings bond from First National Bank and Taylor received a $25 award from Security Federal S&L. The county winner today receives a $50 savings bond from Hereford State Bank, and the two runners-up earn $25 awards from Hi-Plains S&L and Hereford Texas Federal Credit Union.

Texas jobless rate down nearly point

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas unemployment rate fell nearly a full point to 8.7 percent in February as nearly 100,000 more Texans found jobs, the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics reported today.

"The information today represents the first indication that a turnaround in the labor market may have begun," said BLS regional commissioner Bryan Richey.

But he added that not enough information was available to confirm whether the February decline might be the beginning of a downward trend.

"One month just isn't enough to be certain," Richey said.

The February rate, however, is the lowest for Texas since last July and compares with an 8.2 percent unemployment rate one year earlier.

BLS statistics showed the drop from January's rate of 9.6 percent was marked by declines in the number of people looking for work and an increase in the state's total employment.

Almost 7.6 million Texans were working last month, compared with just under 7.5 million in January. An estimated 723,000 were trying to find jobs.

Richey said he believed the new jobs opened up in the still-growing service sector and in retail and other trade positions, although he said specific figures won't be available until next month.

Without that information, Richey said any number of factors also could show the February decline of 0.9 percent to be a one-month statistical fluke.

Nationally, the jobless rate held steady last month at 6.7 percent, the Labor Department said.

The civilian unemployment rate has been at that level for three months, the lowest in nearly seven years.

House approves extension of state's temporary taxes

AUSTIN (AP) — Tax increases approved as last year's temporary solution to the state's fiscal woes have been backed by the House as a permanent part of this year's solution.

But it's not the end of tax talk in the House, Speaker Gib Lewis predicts.

"The bills we passed today I don't think are enough to meet the needs of Texas for the next biennium," he said Thursday after registering his votes for the bills.

Following Lewis' lead, the House overwhelmingly approved a plan that would keep the 5 1/4 percent sales tax and 15 cent per gallon motor fuels tax on the books permanently. Both would expire Sept. 1 if the Legislature takes no action.

Lawmakers approved the increases last September, raising the sales tax from the previous 4 1/2 percent and the fuel tax from 10 cents per gallon.

If approved by the Senate and signed by Gov. Bill Clements, the taxes would raise $2.9 billion for the state in 1988-89, when the state is projected to face a $5.8 billion deficit at current spending levels.

"The House acted courageously this morning, I think, by getting us about half the way there," State Treasurer Ann Richards said after the Thursday votes.

Several amendments, including a proposal to dedicate some of the money to prisons, were handily rejected. Approved, however, were amendments that removed the Sept. 1, 1989, expiration date in the bills as they came out of committee.

The sales tax bill won 115-29 approval and the fuel tax bill was approved 119-25.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby agreed the $2.9 billion that would be raised in 1988-89 by the increased taxes would not be enough.

Several House members complained it would be unfair to make the temporary taxes permanent. They said the increases were intended as a stop-gap measure until the Legislature could this year conduct a full review of the tax system, including a possible expansion of the sales tax to cover now-exempt services.

But Clements, who backed the $2.9 billion plan, opposes any sales tax revision that is not "revenue neutral." Some House members say it would be pointless to face the political heat of a sales tax expansion bill if it would not raise more money for the state.

Rep. Al Price, D-Beaumont, was among those complaining on the House floor Thursday.

"I suggest to you that what we're about to do here is tantamount to legislative malpractice," said Price, who believes the sales tax places an unfair burden on the poor, while the wealthy do not pay taxes on services.

"On the contrary, every damned thing that poor people buy is touched and continues to be touched," Price said.

Rep. Paul Moreno, D-El Paso, called on House members to reject the $2.9 billion tax bill as inadequate.

"Why don't we just meet this responsibility head on, go ahead and pass on a tax bill that is commensurate to the needs of the state and let the governor veto that bill," he said.

Rep. Chip Staniswalis, R-Amarillo, objected to the quick passage, calling it an "in-by-nine, out-by-five tax bill."

"Same-day service on a $3 billion tax bill is inappropriate," he complained.

House Ways and Means Chairman Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen, got the bill out of his committee Tuesday and to the floor Thursday. He added an amendment Thursday that would make the tax increases permanent. As it came out of committee, the bill would have extended the taxes through 1989.

Lewis and Schlueter defended the bills as the best way to start the budget process.

Schlueter said he never billed the taxes as temporary.

Police seek protection against AIDS

DALLAS (AP) — City police officers are using drastic measures to protect themselves against AIDS, including bug repellent to fend off mosquitoes, rubber gloves for carrying the dead and plastic tubes for mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

The officers say they consider the items effective tools against acquired immune deficiency syndrome, an always-fatal virus that deadens the body's immune system.

"They wear gloves when handling AIDS patients and deceased persons," said Lt. D.L. Goelden of the Central Patrol Division. "They use plastic airways for cardiopulmonary resuscitation rather than come in direct contact with the person's mouth. And with summer coming ... some officers who are concerned about AIDS being carried by (mosquitoes) have asked for bug repellent."

"If it makes them feel more comfortable in their jobs, we'll get them whatever they need," he said.

Officers said they are more frequently than ever encountering suspected AIDS carriers. Several officers said they are afraid they'll be bitten or scratched by someone infected with the virus.

"I'd rather be shot than be bitten by someone with AIDS," an unidentified officer told the Dallas Times Herald.

Stacy Dam contract awarded

BIG SPRING, Texas (AP) — Houston-based Brown and Root Inc. was selected as the prime contractor for the Stacy Dam, submitting a bid almost $7 million less than officials had estimated it would cost to build the project.

"It was a surprise to me — but a good one," Owen Ivie, director of the Colorado River Municipal Water District, said of the bid. "This is a major construction company, and it's certainly capable of doing the job."

The company's bid of just over $31 million was roughly $5 million lower than its nearest competitor, San Antonio based H.B. Zachry Co., which bid $36.3 million. Sunmount Corp. of Roanoke turned in the highest bid at $65.5 million.

West Texas businessmen didn't waste anytime making their first attempts to capitalize on the prosperity that could be reaped by the city that can lure the construction headquarters. Shortly after the bids were opened, businessmen from two competing counties handed about 1800 job applications to Brown and Root officials.

Man gets grandson's heart

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A man who received the heart of his grandson after the 16-year-old was killed in an accident had to be persuaded to go through with the operation, his daughter says.

Teri Nielson Simper said the first time she ever saw her father cry was when he learned her son Jonathan had died as a result of a car-train accident and his heart was available for transplant.

"Dad didn't ever say he would not accept Jonathan's heart, but his own heart was broken and he just kept looking at me and sobbing that he just couldn't do it," she said.

"By the time doctors had assured him that the heart was an excellent match, our family had also convinced him that this is what Jonathan would want."

Thomas A. Nielson, 61, of Logan, Utah, was believed to be the first recipient of a relative's heart, said LDS Hospital spokesman Tim Madden. Nielson was in critical but stable condition in the Salt Lake City hospital Thursday after surgery.

Demos push homeless bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, after rejecting several Republican efforts to dilute the effectiveness of a bill to help the nation's homeless, passed and sent the $500 million measure to the Senate.

On a vote of 264-121 Thursday evening, the House approved the emergency bill which was introduced by the House Democratic leadership and opposed by the Reagan administration as too costly.

The legislation would provide food, shelter and rent subsidies through several programs. It was supported by demonstrators including actor Martin Sheen, who along with several members of Congress slept in Washington streets with the city's vagrants early Wednesday.

In one of the closest votes on several proposed amendments, the House voted 207-203 to kill a provision by Republican leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois which would have prohibited any new money from being appropriated for programs covered by the legislation. Instead, Michel's proposal would have taken money from other programs.

"In the United States of America, it is intolerable that human beings should sleep outside in the cold," Michel said. "And it is equally intolerable that, in any weather, the streets of America's cities should be used for sleeping."

Harris County most indebted?

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Commerce Department report identifies the Harris County government as the most indebted in the nation, but a county official says the report is seriously flawed.

According to the Commerce Census Bureau report released Thursday, nearly 15 percent of the nation's county government debt was concentrated in seven metropolitan areas during fiscal 1985, the most recent detailed figures available.

Of those, Harris County — which includes the city of Houston — tops the list.

The report says Harris County owed more than $2.2 billion in long-term debt, which works out to $828 for each person living in the county. Of that, $101 million, or $37 per person, was earmarked for interest on the debt. That debt was up from $1.2 billion a year earlier.

Other metropolitan areas in Texas fell below the national average of $339 per resident, with Dallas at $273, Tarrant at $258, Bexar at $238 and El Paso at $92.

Consuls discuss immigration law

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexican consuls working in the United States sought to ease worries here about the new U.S. immigration law, according to accounts carried Thursday by local newspapers.

The officials have been meeting privately at the Foreign Ministry since Monday to discuss the effects of the Simpson-Rodino law on Mexicans working in the United States.

Edgardo Flores Vivas, director of consular services for the Foreign Ministry, was quoted as saying to local reporters that the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service will collect names and addresses of Mexicans seeking residency in the United States under the law's amnesty provisions.

He described the information as "strictly confidential" and said American officials have promised not to use it for initiating deportations.

The new U.S. law grants amnesty to aliens continuously in the United States since before Jan. 1, 1982, provided they are not excluded by criminal convictions or other disqualification provisions.

It also imposes heavy fines against employers who give jobs to undocumented workers.

For bedridden artist

Each painting is miracle for stroke victim

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The paint was applied in slow, sweeping strokes.

First she used a light green, then a darker green. A mountain appeared, followed by a valley. The artist stopped to rest.

Her brush quivered as she stretched to reach the little cup of paint. Every movement was difficult, each stroke taxing, but she continued to smile broadly.

"I never know what my picture is gonna be 'til it's done," the artist said. "Then I'll look at it and think, 'How come it was to turn out that way?'"

Anna Andres, 76, is an unusual artist. She says she has only finished eight or nine paintings in the 15 years since she began painting.

But for Mrs. Andres, each finished product is a little miracle. Anna has no functioning hands. Yet, she makes light of her work.

"I didn't know anything about losing my arm 'til after it'd happened," Mrs. Andres said. "After the second stroke, gangrene set in and so my sister signed a release for them to operate."

Sixteen years ago, Mrs. Andres had three strokes in a two-day period. The left side of her body was left paralyzed and her right arm was amputated just above her elbow. She has one foot that can move. Her condition keeps her bedridden.

But Mrs. Andres, who has lived at Meadowbrook Nursing Home for the past 15 years, isn't one to be put down.

"I had three strokes in two days," Mrs. Andres said. "The doctor told my family I'd never live. I think I outlived the doctor."

"I don't give up too easy," she said. "I just live from day to day."

When Mrs. Andres regained consciousness after the operation, she was scared.

"I was shocked to find out what had happened. I didn't know what I'd do."

But there is something special about Mrs. Andres that had helped her to cope.

The Rev. Clyde Zellers, pastor of Minters Chapel United Methodist Church in Grapevine, has been Mrs. Andres' minister for 12 years.

"I've been very pleased at being her pastor," Zellers said. "She's done a lot for me. I've gone there some days down in the dumps and you don't dare leave there in a bad mood."

"If that'd been me and I'd been flat on my back for 15 years in the same room, I wouldn't have been worth shooting," Zellers said.

She began painting 15 years ago through an Easter Seal program.

"They said everybody has to do something, so this is what I did," Mrs. Andres said. "I'd never painted anything in my life."

Mrs. Andres has a special jacket she wears while she paints. Because she cannot grip a brush, the jacket has a slot where a paint brush can be inserted. She moves her arm around to dip the brush in paint and work on the canvas. She paints by moving her arm and shoulder.

But she still must have someone squeeze paint from the tube and help her change brushes.

After Mrs. Andres completed her first picture after a week of work, Barbara Ruth Bunt, whom Mrs. Andres had reared, couldn't believe what she had done.

"The first one I painted, she snatched it up. She was so proud that I could do that."

But Mrs. Andres' works are not always given such praise.

"You'd be surprised how much instruction I get from people," Mrs. Andres said. "One woman told me I used too much blue."

Blue is Mrs. Andres' favorite color and she continues to use the color a great deal in her art. She thinks art is fun and doesn't mind an occasional critic.

"I'm not a painter. I just dab because I like it," she said.

Mrs. Andres prefers painting landscapes. She relies on her past to create her art. Her husband, Norman, was a government pharmacist, so they moved around a lot.

"We lived in West Texas and Lexington, Ky. I try to copy pictures or scenes from places I lived, like the desert when we lived in Arizona."

While in Arizona, years before her strokes, she was a Sunday school teacher on an Indian reservation.

She said she spent much of her time doing volunteer work at the church.

"My husband used to ask me why those other lazy women wouldn't help and why I had to do all the work," Mrs. Andres said. "I would say because the minister asked me and I can't say no."

Even the weather couldn't keep Mrs. Andres away from the church.

"My husband used to say you can't go to church, the snow's up to the window. And I'd say, 'Why not?' The church was just a few blocks from my home."

Mrs. Andres was popular with the Indian children — so popular that her Sunday school classroom didn't have enough tables or chairs.

"I made them build more tables to sit at," she said.

Today her paralysis and lack of a right hand haven't stopped her from going to church each Sunday. She has the attendants at Meadowbrook Nursing Home wheel her down the hall to the church service.

"On the first Sunday, the minister said, 'Get some newcomers at the church service — go out and knock on doors and get people to come,'" Mrs. Andres said. "Well, I can't knock, I don't have any hands and I couldn't turn a single door (knob). So I thought I'd invite people in the day room."

"Well, come Sunday, we had so many people, they wouldn't fit in the chapel."

"I invited too many people. When people tell me they can't go to church, I tell them they have no excuse and they've got to go."

Sheila Roberson, activities director at Meadowbrook, said Mrs. Andres is encouraging to the other residents.

"She's always happy," Ms. Roberson said. "She inspires everyone and she lifts everyone's spirits. She tries to participate in everything she can."

"You'd expect someone who is angry or mean, and she is always so joyful. She definitely inspires me," Ms. Roberson said.

Even though Mrs. Andres has remained optimistic, she misses many things most people take for granted.

Publication deals with relocation stress

WASHINGTON — Relocating to another city is a significant event in people's lives and the stress it causes can be similar to the death of a loved one or divorce, according to Bobbie Kerns, president of her own management training and consulting company that specializes in real estate and relocation. Kerns, whose firm is based in Laguna Beach, Calif., writes in the January/February issue of Real Estate Today, the official publication of the National Association of Realtors that "Relocation Stress Can Be Contagious."

"People who relocate must experience the stages of loss—disbelief, sadness or grief, anger and negotiation—before they can recover," Kerns cautions. She advises real estate salespeople to recognize these stages so that they can deal more effectively with transferees.

During Stage One: Disbelief, Kerns recommends that family members communicate with one another and begin planning for the move. At this stage real estate salespeople should avoid information overload. "An electrical outlet can handle only so many appliances before it becomes overloaded. Similarly, a person's ability to process information deteriorates where he is barraged with too much information at one time. Impatient-salespeople who project a let's-get-on-with-it attitude won't be successful in such a case."

Immobility to handle the many chores related to selling a home in order to move is often symptomatic of Stage Two: Sadness or Grief. Directing energies into nonrelocation activities can help according to Kerns. It can be as simple as a trip to the ice cream parlor or zoo with the children or arranging to have a cleaning service help with the house.

"Most people who are recovering from a loss, experience sadness before anger," writes Kerns. "But in relocation, people sometimes feel angry first. More often, though, they vacillate between the two emotions." Real estate salespeople often bear the brunt of their anger when persons being relocated reach Stage Three: Anger. "Salespeople should keep in mind," Kerns advises, "that most transferees can't vent their anger on the people who are responsible for the relocation—their employees. And transferees usually won't take their frustrations out on a family member."

When angry outbursts do occur, the remedy is to again direct the persons involved gently into some other nonhousehunting activity such as taking a break for lunch.

When people reach Stage Four: Negotiation, they are well on their way toward full recovery. Kerns reminds salespeople that they can't be expected to fix everything. Negotiating for the light fixtures is one thing, but real estate agents can't replace former friends, jobs or familiar neighborhoods. Kerns adds, "And they can't fix marital problems or problems with children that existed prior to the relocation."

Educational materials on relocation stress available through some progressive networks and franchises. The Employee Relocation Council (ERC), headquartered in Washington, D.C., also provides information about this problem.

"Relocation stress can be contagious," she warns. "But with adequate training, it needn't become an epidemic."

Students caught in middle of textbook controversy

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Schools began complying with a court order that banned 45 texts from Alabama classrooms, leaving some students wondering what in the books was illegal.

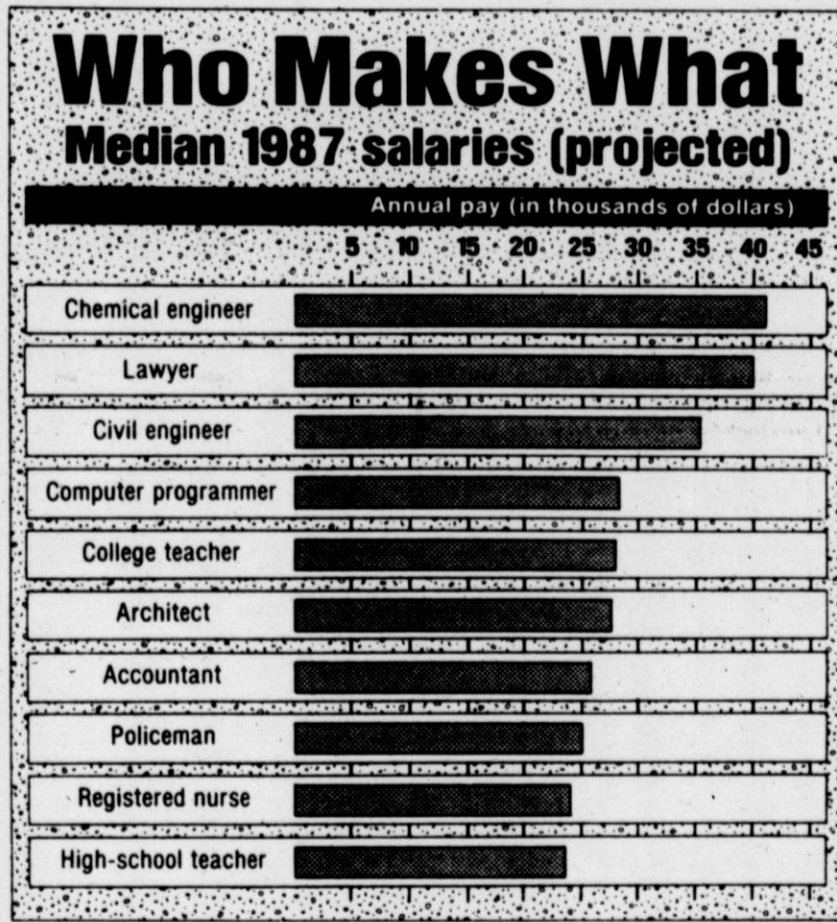

"It's supposed to be something about this book saying there's no God, that we can get along without God," said 17-year-old Brian Pierce, who was forced to give up his American history text. "I haven't been seeing it anywhere in there. My teacher didn't, either. She said the judge did."

School officials in Mobile began removing textbooks from classrooms Thursday following a decision by U.S. District Judge W. Brevard Hand, who said the books promote secular humanism as a godless religion. He said use of the books in public schools violates the U.S. Constitution's prohibition against the establishment of a religion by the state.

Gov. Guy Hunt, a Primitive Baptist preacher who heads the state school board, has not said whether there would be an appeal. But critics of Hand's ruling pledged to file appeal motions next week with the U.S.

Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta.

"This ruling is in many ways so unprecedented that we think it will be overturned," said William Bradford, an attorney for a dozen parents who oppose the federal court order.

Ann Landers

"Everyone's doing it"

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have just finished reading your column on how schools can help eradicate drug use. I agree with every word.

Schools have our children for half their waking hours and are a powerful influence when it comes to forming attitudes. The teachers in the 1940s emphasized fairness, compassion and self-discipline. My brother, who made the greatest impact on my life, graduated from West Point as the result of the inspiration of a sixth-grade teacher.

But any success the schools might achieve is bound to be tempered by the most powerful educator of the 20th century; television. It is the world's most effective teacher. "Everyone's doing it" is the theme for today's programming.

Many years ago our small children watched a segment of the TV program "The Three Stooges," and at its conclusion one of the children did a Three Stooges' favorite gesture: finger-poking in the eye. The victim was rushed to the emergency room, to the consternation and confusion of the offender. When the Stooges did it no one was ever hurt. If it's on TV it's OK to imitate.

Finger-poking in the eye is from the past. Today's insidious lesson taught by television is to do everything in excess. Living high is what we should strive for. The heroes and heroines on the tube all live in mansions, have servants, drive expensive cars, and have luxurious furs, diamonds and champagne. Nobody works.

Today's schools and today's parents are challenged to combat the misconceptions and poor examples set by the one-eyed monster. We must be aware that young, impressionable minds are soaking up everything. After seeing hundreds of hours of provocative bedroom scenes and passionate sexual encounters, they begin to wonder why their parents don't behave like that. They become questioning and dissatisfied with life as it is. They feel as if they are being cheated.

I hope you will publish this letter and urge parents and teachers to be aware of what is happening to the children of America—Sad on the Sidelines

DEAR S: Surely you would agree that there is much on TV that is educational and worthwhile—especially on public broadcasting.

Parents, however, CAN do something positive to combat what you accurately describe as a danger. We CAN do more than serve as good examples. We can monitor our children's TV viewing, decide on Sunday what is to be watched during the week and how many hours will be spent in front of the tube. AND—we can insist that the TV be turned off if unexpected violence or steamy sex scenes should appear.

Unfortunately, too many mothers use TV as an electronic babysitter. The unspoken message is, "I don't care what you watch, just stay out of my hair."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You have helped me out of a dilemma once before which I appreciated greatly. I am taking the liberty of asking for your valued opinion again.

My recently married daughter is dismayed at the fact that I simply do not want their 8-by-10 wedding portrait in my living room. I find it middle-class and unimaginative.

The candida are much warmer and intimate and I have them proudly displayed in my bedroom.

"Lysa" has told me that the mothers of all her friends have their wedding pictures in their living rooms and she feels hurt that I don't do the same.

I am looking forward to your reply with great interest. — I.B., Forest Hills

DEAR I.B.: I can think of few things more personal than the selection of photos to be on display on one's home. Lysa should not try to lay a guilt trip on her mother.

Even if drinking is the "in" thing in your crowd, it needn't crowd you out. Learn the facts from Ann Landers' booklet, "Booze and You—For Teen-Agers Only." Send 50 cents and a self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

La Afflatus Estudio Club hears historical program

La Afflatus Estudio Club met in regular session recently with Tresa Hale and Mary Williamson assisting. Roll call was answered by each member present giving a thought of the day.

After a short business session, the program dealt with the year's study course entitled "Our Town - U.S.A." Eva Gililand presented the first part, which focused on early day morticians. She told of the early ways of caring for the deceased as well as the advancement in the undertaking business.

Gililand stated that Hereford had the first motor-drawn hearse in the Panhandle, which was driven by funeral director Matt Gililand. She also noted that Hereford has had a Gililand as a family undertaker since 1907, making Gililand-Watson Funeral Home a pioneer establishment.

The second part of the program was brought by guest Lois Gililand. She spoke of the achievements of the museum and thanked the club for their support throughout the life of the museum. Gililand mentioned work being done on the new displays in preparation for the upcoming 20th anniversary of the Deaf Smith County Museum. Celebration of the anniversary is scheduled for March 12.

Leadership skills training planned

Texas women will have some new opportunities to become leaders in their communities through a program sponsored jointly by the Texas Extension Homemakers Association and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The two organizations will sponsor a series of three training sessions during 1987. Women participating in the training will learn leadership and public policy decision-making skills that they can in turn teach to other groups of citizens in the county.

The "Family Community Leadership" program is aimed at the effective participation of women and family members in resolving important family-related public issues.

These public issues could include anything that affects the quality of family life, ranging from the availability of day care to educational opportunities or the adequacy of the water supply in a community.

The training program does not tell people what issues to become involved with, but teaches them the leadership skills needed to deal with any issue of importance in their community.

The first part of the leadership program involves training for a representative from extension homemakers clubs and one other local citizen to be selected from those who apply. All interested persons are invited to apply for this training opportunity. The sessions will be held March 17-18, May 5-6 and Oct. 13-14 in Ceta Canyon located near Amarillo and will be conducted by a team of extension professionals, Dr. Catherine Crawford, Sue Farris and Dr. Lynn White with extension homemaker leaders Nell Finney, Mateel Brown, Betty Darby and Terri Jan Johnson.

The person selected to serve on the training team must be able to attend all three sessions and to volunteer hours to relay information on to others in their community between March 1987 and March 1988 to teach others in the county. Each training session will cost $35.00 for housing and meals.

Interested individuals may apply by calling the County Extension office at 364-3573 by March 9th.

The second part of the Family Community Leadership program will offer some unique opportunities to many different groups and individuals in our county. A number of community groups will be interested in having workshops on leadership skills issue analysis, decision-making and volunteerism taught by the training team.

For information on becoming involved in this program please contact Beverly Harder, County Extension Agent, 364-3573.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socio-economic levels, race, color, sex, religion, handicap, or national origin.

DR. GOTT Most M.D.s prefer Aspen to aspirin

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

If you have had occasion to watch TV in the last few months, you probably have been treated to one of the ads for Bayer aspirin. The camera zooms down on scenes of a deserted tropical island or an unidentified and unpopulated wasteland. The baritone voice-over declares that two out of three doctors, when given the option, would prefer to carry aspirin to such a desolate environment. The advertisement implies that Bayer aspirin is superior to other nonprescription pain relievers and that doctors, who are supposed to know all about these things, choose aspirin to take with them on such trips; therefore, the public ought to buy more aspirin.

The whole concept is asinine. First, doctors don't travel to these places. We will go to almost any length to avoid being alone with nothing to do but contemplate the medicine we can't afford to be without. Doctors try to vacation where there are lots of people — preferably a whole henhouse of other doctors. Failing this, physicians gravitate to where there are ski instructors, windsurfers or tour guides. We want hot showers. We abhor solitude. In fact, more than one surgeon has been brought back from a Caribbean vacation by air-evac helicopter because, in two days, he had finished reading his stash of old medical journals and investment brochures and had nothing left to do. All resorts have long black lists of M.D.s who became bored after a week of lying around without even a tennis court in sight.

If, within 48 hours, a doctor cannot engage another doctor in medical discussion, he goes bonkers. The conversation always gets around to how he treated a mega-zit or that fascinating case of crinkled toenails or what did you think about that absorbing report in the Green Journal on serum asphalt levels. No modern physician would willingly get within 100 miles of an uninhabited island or inland wilderness. Like migrating birds, we are comfortable only in the presence of large numbers of our own species.

Second, I worry about the doctors in the poll. If even a handful of back-packing practitioners could predict what they would need if they crashed-landed on the desert, these medical misfits certainly wouldn't speak for the profession as a whole.

I regularly fill out unsolicited questionnaires about my prescribing habits: which drugs I use for malaria and how many witches I treat in an average week. However, no company has ever asked me, point blank, if, when marooned, I'd rather have Bayer's than something more useful like, say, a case of Jack Daniels.

Finally, speaking for myself, I want to put the record straight. I would not choose aspirin. When castaway on a tropical island, I'd rather have a knife, some fishing tackle, a bunch of tranquilizers and some fresh water (to wash the pills down). If, in the middle of winter, I were abandoned in a godforsaken backwoods, I'd prefer to have a gun, ammo, good boots, warm clothes and some matches. I mean, let's be sensible. If you're washed ashore a thousand miles from nowhere, aspirin is about the last item you'd requisition from the wreckage.

I hope Bayer continues selling aspirin. It's a good product — although, as far as I'm concerned, it is not superior to other brands of aspirin. Nonetheless, I wish that the advertising industry would get off doctors' backs, give us some credit and present us in a more realistic light.

Physicians go to Hawaii, Aspen or Trinidad. As a desperate alternative, we sign up for cruises to the Bahamas. Promoters of these "educational holidays" promise that this form of entertainment is ideal; it is activity during which healers can meet with other healers, have a rum Collins or two, go dancing on the deck, sleep on clean sheets and listen to a few lectures — all tax deductible under the old law. Madison Avenue is presenting doctors in the wrong role and aspirin is the least of the problems.

The way things are progressing, it won't be long before M.D.s, through circuitous questionnaires and make-believe ad campaigns, will be endorsing underarm spray, Japanese beetle traps and dry puppy food. I say let's put an end to the entire issue. Did you know that one out of two attorneys, while imprisoned for tax evasion, prefer pork and beans over macaroni and cheese? I'm pretty sure of that because I almost asked one the last time we were on a desert island together.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I clean a doctor's office. She uses disposable syringes, which are thrown into the wastebaskets. When I take out the plastic bags, I get stabbed by the needles and they draw blood. What infections could I get and what precautions should I take?

DEAR READER — You are at very high risk of contracting serious, blood-borne infections, including hepatitis and AIDS. The doctor should know better than to discard disposable needles unless she has either capped the needles or, preferably, clipped them off and discarded them in a special container. Her present system exposes her to legal liability and exposes you to disease. If you are hesitant to confront the doctor with your questions and concerns, show her this column.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Should an older person have a pneumonia shot? I had pneumonia last year. Could the shot cause it to come back?

DEAR READER — Pneumonia is caused by many types of microorganisms. Pneumococcal infection affects as many as 500,000 people a year, with a fatality rate of 5 percent to 10 percent. Patients at highest risk for life-threatening infection are the elderly, people with immune deficiencies, patients with diseases of the spleen or lymph glands, alcoholics and blacks who have sickle cell anemia. Therefore, pneumococcal vaccine is recommended for such patients, because it prevents a form of pneumonia that can be fatal.

The current vaccine is not effective against all 83 pneumococcal strains, but it does provide resistance to the 23 most common strains.

The vaccine will not cause the pneumonia you had last year to recur. DEAR DR. GOTT — I'm male 61 and have always been very active. In spite of that and my present regimen of biking, fast walking, windsurfing and skiing, I am depressed about my progressive loss of strength. I suppose this is what aging is all about, but shouldn't my history of activity have forestalled this muscle-wasting?

DEAR READER — As we age, muscles become weaker and less bulky. Even active older people will have a progressive decline in athletic performance and muscle strength. This is an unavoidable consequence of age.

Nonetheless, physical exertion is beneficial for heart, lungs and the circulation; it makes people feel better. You may not be able to overcome the effects of growing older, but physical activity certainly will improve the quality of your life. Keep it up and be content to be a little less strenuous than you once were.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have a small spermatocoele. My doctor says that as long as it's not uncomfortable, it's harmless — but my medical guidebook says they are usually highly malignant. Who is right?

DEAR READER — I think you misread your medical book; if not, you should get another. Your doctor is right. A spermatocoele is a benign cyst, separate from the testicles, that contains sperm. It is painless and requires no treatment.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Several years ago a spot appeared on my sister's leg. She went to a skin specialist, who told her she either was a diabetic or was a candidate to become one. He said she had necrobiosis lipoidica diabetorum, and nothing could be done. Now her whole leg below the knee is covered with spots. Is there a treatment for this?

DEAR READER — Necrobiosis lipoidica diabetorum — a skin disease of diabetics — consists of shiny, yellowish-red spots that appear on the shins. Your sister should be thoroughly checked for diabetes. If her blood sugars are normal, the doctor will want to biopsy one of the skin lesions so that the tissue can be examined under the microscope and a diagnosis established. If your sister has diabetes, the skin condition will improve as the disease is brought under control.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My fingers crack open at the ends, causing sores. I've been using rubber gloves to do dishes, but the cracking still occurs. Do you have any suggestions?

DEAR READER — The lining of the rubber gloves may be holding in the moisture that develops when your hands perspire.

POLLY'S POINTERS

How do you make almond paste?

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — Do you have a recipe for almond paste? I haven't found one in any cookbook. Also, what is the difference between almond paste and marzipan? — GERTRUDE

DEAR GERTRUDE — Here's a simple recipe for almond paste that can be made in any food processor or high-powered blender. (In a blender, you'll have to do more scraping down of ingredients and stopping and starting, but it can be done by working with small batches at a time.)

Place 6 ounces blanched almonds in the workbowl of your processor with the steel blade in place. Process about one minute or until finely ground. Add 1½ cups powdered sugar and 2 tablespoons water. Process until the mixture forms a ball. Use immediately, or wrap and store in the refrigerator or freezer. This makes about 1 cup of almond paste.

Almond paste and marzipan are similar and often confused. Almond paste is generally just almonds and sugar ground together into a paste. (Some commercial brands may add egg white as well.) Marzipan is a confection made with almond paste or ground almonds. It has more sweeten-ing, which may be sugar or corn syrup, egg whites and sometimes other ingredients as well, since there are various recipes for marzipan. You may use the above homemade almond paste in any marzipan recipe calling for almond paste. — POLLY

FINDING A JOB

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) - One of the best ways to find a job is also one of the oldest: the "old boy" (or "old girl") network.
 Career placement officers at many of the country's top universities have found that student-alumni get-togethers produce the contacts that can land students a job.
 But placement officers, such as the University of Rochester's James Case, caution that students should not view a networking opportunity solely as a chance to press resumes into the hands of everyone they meet.
 "You wouldn't ask for a date without getting to know the person a bit," Case says. "We tell students to take the time to establish areas of mutual interest before asking about jobs."

NCAA claims SMU misled investigators

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist University's Board of Governors met today amid reports that the NCAA's top investigator says he was "intentionally misled" in his probe of SMU and that disclosures were squelched in what amounted to an official cover-up.

The board of governors began meeting at 8:30 a.m., an SMU spokeswoman said.

David Berst, enforcement director for the National Collegiate Athletic Association, said Thursday he believes that SMU officials were instructed to withhold information about board-level approval of improper payoffs to athletes.

"I think it's clear — I guess it's at least my opinion — that we were intentionally misled," Berst told the Dallas Times Herald in a copyright story. "I think there had to be some instruction from elsewhere ... Obviously others were involved, and there was a barrier put up to keep us from getting there."

Lonny Kliever, the faculty member responsible for overseeing the university's internal investigation, said he believes "there was information that I could have been given that I wasn't given."

Neither Kliever nor Berst used the words "cover up" to describe what occurred, but Berst agreed it was an appropriate term and that he was merely describing it in other words.

Their comments are the latest fallout in the spreading SMU athletics scandal. Gov. Bill Clements disclosed Tuesday that he and others on the school's Board of Governors authorized continuing cash payments to some athletes even after the NCAA put the school on probation in 1985.

Revelations of $61,000 in continuing payments between September 1985 and December 1986 prompted the NCAA to cancel SMU's 1987 football season and severely restrict the one in 1988.

Clements contends the NCAA knew and sanctioned a continuation and gradual phasing out of the improper payments, but Berst called such that claim "ridiculous" and "absurd."

"I think he's trying to find somebody to help share the burden of this," Berst said. "But it's not going to be us."

Meanwhile, a former booster who was banned from associating with SMU after the 1985 violations said Thursday night that there are still people on SMU's Board of Governors who were involved in the payments.

Corpus Christi businessman Reid Ryan at first denied being one of nine banned boosters Thursday, but admitted later in the day that he had lied "because I was so upset over the whole thing."

"Yes, I was one of those boosters," he said. "But I can tell you something else — there are still people on that board who were also involved and they're lying if they say they weren't. They should resign."

He refused to name names, saying he was afraid of being sued.

Board members, shaken by Clements' claim that some in their ranks knew of payments to athletes, insisted they did not and said Thursday they hope a bishop's investigation will clear them of wrongdoing.

"For anybody to think that we're sitting up in a governors' meeting

29 of 330 test positive for drugs at NFL tryouts

DALLAS (AP) — Twenty-nine of the 330 college football players at the NFL's tryout camp in Indianapolis tested positive for drug or alcohol use, an NFL official said.

One player tested positive for cocaine, six for marijuana, 20 for steroids and two for alcohol use in the screening taken six weeks ago, according to results found in a letter dated Feb. 24, which was sent to each of the NFL's 28 clubs, the Dallas Morning News reported today.

It was the first time the NFL included steroid screening in the six years it has tested college players.

Last year, 57 of the 335 college players tested positive at the combine in New Orleans. Three were found to have used cocaine, and 54 had used marijuana or other substances.

The NFL official told the newspaper that the player testing positive for cocaine this year revealed the presence of a small traceable amount, and that the player is considered a late-round draft choice or perhaps a free agent.

Two of the 29 players on the "The Dirty List," as it is called, are considered first-round picks in the April 28 draft, with one testing positive for marijuana and the other for steroids. The official said 21 were considered likely to be drafted before the test results were revealed.

discussing payments is ludicrous," said board member Ruth Collins Sharp of Dallas.

A special panel will be formed to determine if any current university officials were involved in or knew about improper payments to athletes, North Texas area Bishop John Russell said in a prepared statement Thursday.

"A breach of integrity in any part of the university destroys the reputation of the university. As United Methodists, we are embarrassed and greatly concerned that SMU did not abide by NCAA rules," he said.

Russell is a board of governors member and president of the church's College of Bishops South Central Jurisdiction, which owns SMU. He said the church expects SMU to maintain a high moral and ethical quality and the university deserved the severe penalty meted out by the NCAA.

The university announced the appointment Thursday of another committee to examine the structure of the 75-member board of trustees. The board of governors acts as an executive committee to the trustees.

Chairman Leighton Farrell said the self-study committee would look at the mechanics of university government and probably would have little to do with Russell's committee.

In the meantime, Ryan said he is part of a group of SMU alumni that is raising funds to file a lawsuit against the NCAA, and possibly SMU. The group seeks to obtain a restraining order that would save SMU's 1987 football season.

The Times Herald reported earlier that SMU officials are registering pressure from the NCAA to permanently ban the nine boosters from the athletics program. Ryan said he and others were banned for just a few years in 1985.

The newspaper quoted a source as saying SMU plans to argue that a permanent ban would be unfair because some of them have complied with the sanctions imposed on them by SMU and the NCAA in August 1985.

Smith leads Warriors with 'bule-collar' performance

Golden State defeats Rockets 105-96

By The Associated Press
Larry Smith is not the most polished player in the NBA and no one has ever accused the 6-foot-7 Golden State forward of being an offensive force.

But during Golden State's 105-96 victory the Houston-Rockets on Thursday, Smith did all the dirty work that makes him so valuable to the Warriors.

Smith not only scored 15 points, but he also grabbed 12 rebounds and guarded Akeem Olajuwon and limited the 6-foot-11 All-Star center to only eight rebounds.

In the opinion of Golden State coach George Karl, Smith's blue-collar performance outshone Joe Barry Carroll's 31 points and a 20-point, nine-rebound, eight-assist night by Eric "Sleepy" Floyd.

"Larry was simply magnificent tonight," Karl said. "Larry gives up a lot of height to Akeem, but he's our best defender in the post. He did a tremendous defensive job on Akeem. He got his points (24 before fouling out with 4:46 left in the game) but they came on some great shots."

Olajuwon described Smith as "a very physical player who makes you work hard to get the ball and he's very tough under the boards."

Having a chance to go head-to-head against Olajuwon always gives Smith a special incentive.

"He's an All-Star player and one of the greatest centers in basketball," Smith said. "I just try to work hard against 'Dream.' I think I flustered him some, but he's too great of a player to contain all night."

The Warriors jumped to an 11-4 lead and never trailed. Houston closed to 46-45 with 4:29 left in the half, but Golden State went on a 12-4 run for a 58-49 lead at intermission.

"We never really sustained anything," said Houston coach Bill Fitch. "We caught them a few times in the first half, but all we could do in the second half was force them to play steadier."

"J.B. didn't hurt us. You expect that out of him," Fitch added. "The easy baskets were what hurt us."

Floyd came within two assists and one rebound of the first triple-double of his career.

The key to Houston's loss, according to Fitch, was forward Jim Peterson getting into early foul trouble.

"He came off one of his best games last night and took a quick elevator ride to the bottom," Fitch said.

The key to Golden State's win, according to Karl, was improved defense.

"Over the last 20 games, we haven't had great defensive performances," Karl said. "We don't have the talent on this team to just go out and try to outscore the other team. But we're heading in the right direction. Tonight was our best defensive performance in a long time."

Elsewhere in the NBA it was, Denver 121, San Antonio 104; Phoenix 126, Cleveland 102; and Seattle 127, Portland 122.

Nuggets 121, Spurs 104

It sounded more like an Alex English testimonial dinner than a discussion of a game that pitted two teams struggling for the last berth in the NBA's Western Division playoffs:

English, after all, had turned in a 43-point performance that played a major role in Denver's 121-104 victory over San Antonio Thursday night.

"No one could guard him," said Spurs Coach Bob Weiss. "He was unstoppable."

"Alex is such a great offensive player," said San Antonio center Artis Gilmore. "He doesn't muscle you, he just hits his shots."

"Alex made every shot," said Denver Coach Doug Moe. English actually missed four from the field during the evening, connecting on 18 of 22.

"We were tired but we knew we had to be consistent and push the ball up the floor hard," English said. "Everybody concentrated, worked together and we got the job done."

"We have a great bunch of guys and nobody has grumbled or gotten on each other."

Denver's victory broke a four-game losing streak and pushed the Nuggets to a three-game margin over San Antonio in the battle for the eighth and final western playoff spot.

English was nearly perfect in the first half as he connected on 12 of 13 shots while scoring 26 points in providing Denver with a 64-58 halftime advantage.

Lafayette Lever posted his 14th triple double of the season as he finished with 20 points, 15 assists and 10 rebounds. Mark Alarie contributed 17 points.

The Spurs, who had a 50-49 lead late in the first half, never really got back into the ball game after Denver ran off a 10-point spurt.

The Spurs, who were led by Walter Berry and Alvin Robertson with 15 points each, made their last serious run early in the third period as they outscored the Nuggets 10-2 in pulling to within two points at 77-75.

With English leading the way and getting strong support from Lever, Denver ran off a 12-2 streak for an 89-77 lead.

The Nuggets carried a seven-point advantage into the final period and the game soon became a rout as Denver raced into leads ranging to 24 points at 115-91.

"I really didn't think we would self-destruct," said Moe. "You always have that in the back of your mind, though. As soon as they (the Spurs) started to miss some free throws, I felt like things might be turning our way. We were running and started to hit some open shots which is what we need to do."

Suns 126, Cavaliers 102

In Phoenix, interim Coach Dick Van Arsdale posted his first victory as Alvan Adams scored 23 and Larry Nance added 22 as the Suns ended a seven-game losing streak by beating Cleveland.

SuperSonics 127, Trail Blazers 122

In Seattle, Dale Ellis scored 38 points and Alton Lister blocked three shots in the final minute as the SuperSonics beat Portland despite 48 points by Kiki Vandeweghe.

Offers to buy

Rangers ballclub to be presented

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP) — A group of New York bankers and an Albuquerque, N.M. company are expected to present offers to buy the Texas Rangers baseball club, sources close to the negotiations report.

The Dallas Morning News reported today that the New York bankers, believed to have contacted the Rangers through the baseball commissioner's office, are thought to be the front-runner. The other group was identified as Maloff Co., a family concern from New Mexico that owned the Houston Rockets basketball franchise from May 1979 to June 1982.

Both groups will meet with Rangers majority owner Eddie Chiles within the next two weeks, the newspaper reported.

The asking price is $80 million for the American League franchise and its Arlington Stadium property.

They are said to be the first practical offers Chiles has received since September when American League owners rejected the proposed sale of the baseball team to Gaylord Broadcasting.

Sources said the new owners would not likely attempt to relocate the club because baseball's antitrust laws prevent a move from the Dallas-Fort Worth area without approval of major league owners.

Chiles said Thursday he is not in a bargaining mood for the sale, but said financial situations could force him out of baseball. In fiscal years 1984 and 1985, Chiles Western Co. of North America, an oil and gas firm, lost $81.9 million. Third quarter losses for 1986 amounted to $23 million.

"To get extra money to take care of problems created by the energy industry, a little cash never hurt anyone," Chiles said Thursday upon his arrival at the Rangers spring training headquarters.

"That's the only reason I would sell," Chiles said.

Carlton struggles in intrasquad contest

By The Associated Press

"Lefty" just couldn't do anything right for the Philadelphia Phillies.

"It wasn't very impressive," observed Phillies president Bill Giles after watching pitcher Steve Carlton run into a barrage of hits and runs Thursday in his first spring training appearance of 1987.

Carlton, the Cy Young winner who is attempting a comeback with his former club, pitched two innings of an intra-squad game, one for each side, and was rocked for six hits and six runs. Three of the hits were homers off Carlton, who walked one and struck out three.

Carlton is scheduled to pitch Saturday in the Phillies' 1987 spring exhibition opener against the Toronto Blue Jays.

Giles released Carlton last June 25 after a 22-year career in which the pitcher posted a 323-229 record and won an unprecedented four Cy Young awards.

In a tearful farewell, Giles said Carlton no longer could win in the major leagues. Carlton finished the 1986 season with San Francisco and the Chicago White Sox. He had a 1986 record of 9-14.

Carlton was released by the White Sox after last season and was not picked up by another club. He asked the Phillies for a tryout and is being given a chance as an unsigned, non-roster player.

Around the Camps

In other spring training developments, Boston's Roger Clemens and California's Kirk McCaskill continued to have contract problems with their respective teams.

The Red Sox remained far from agreement with Clemens, who was 24-4 last season and won the American League's Most Valuable Player Award and the Cy Young Award.

Clemens, who earned slightly more than $300,000, including incentive money in 1986, is seeking more than $1 million. The Red Sox are reportedly offering around $800,000.

McCaskill, who was 17-10 for the Angels as they won the American League West last season, walked out of camp after he was told by General Manager Mike Port that he would either have to sign his contract or have it renewed for him. The Angels did, however, come to terms with first baseman Wally Joyner, who was runner-up for the rookie of the year award last season. Joyner, who had been seeking $200,000, agreed to a contract that reportedly calls for $160,000 plus performance incentives.

But McCaskill, who had been seeking approximately $325,000 while the team had been offering slightly more than $215,000, was another story.

Pitchers Greg Mathews and Greg Barger became the last two St. Louis Cardinals to sign contracts, and rookie pitcher John Mitchell signed with the New York Mets. Mitchell was 12-9 with Class AAA Tidewater last season.

On the Field

Lenny Dykstra and Howard Johnson hit home runs off Terry Leach to give Bud Harrelson's Hackers a 2-1 victory over Sam Perlozzo's Pounders in the Mets' intrasquad game in St. Petersburg, Fla.

Atlanta outfielder Dion James had two hits, including a solo homer, and drove in two runs to pace the Braves to a 9-3 decision over Georgia Tech in West Palm Beach, Fla.

Andres Galarraga had two hits, including a three-run homer, to lead coach Jackie Moore's team to a 4-1 victory over coach Ron Hansen's team in the Montreal Expos' first intrasquad game of the spring.

Carlos Martinez had a home run and a double during a five-inning, training-camp exercise for the Chicago White Sox in Sarasota, Fla. Eleven Cleveland Indians pitchers got in some work in a split-squad game that featured two hits and the game's only homer by Julio Franco.

A squad managed by Orlando Gomez, manager of Class AAA Buffalo, took a 4-3 victory over a team managed by Steve Swisher of Class AA Waterbury.

The Oakland A's wound up the first phase of their training camp Thursday by defeating Scottsdale Community College 9-4.

Legal Matters

A warrant for the arrest of Boston pitcher Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd was withdrawn after the Red Sox paid $369 to a Winter Haven, Fla. music store to cover the rental by Boyd last spring of video equipment. "I'm sure all it was is that he forgot (about the bill)," said store manager Jeff Clifford.
