Local pastor doesn't laugh at witchcraft

BY DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

Many local residents might laugh if you tell them that witchcraft is being practiced in Hereford, but it's no laughing matter to Dorman Duggan, pastor of Community Church.

"People want to ignore this very real problem and pretend it does not exist. That is sick," says Duggan, who describes his experiences with witchcraft and demonic control in Hereford.

Duggan and his wife, Jani, along with church member Jerry Wilburn testify to hours spent in counseling Hereford residents who have been under some control by evil spirits.

"I have dealt with many cases where local people have been affected by witchcraft," states Duggan. "We have been told of stories where a raw egg was placed under the bed of a sick person and the disease ordered to leave the person and enter the egg. They have told us that the next morning the egg would be cooked."

Those who delve deeper in the spirit world are members of a witch's coven. "They have told us of cutting pieces off of their fingers and drinking the blood and eating the flesh," Mrs. Duggan recalled. "One woman who was counseled sought help in leaving the coven after it was requested that she offer her 9-year-old daughter to use as a human sacrifice," states Wilburn. He explains the sacrifices they have been told of frequently involve sexual orgies.

Drug abuse is often the door through which people pass into such practices according to Duggan. He says, "I think they definitely are a door to spiritual trouble because they open you up to forces you can't control."

ESP and transcendental meditation are other dangerous practices the trio often see as leading to cult practices. "If a person has been involved in a cult practice such as ouija boards, fortune tellers and horoscopes, or one of the deeper areas of cult practice such as witchcraft," explains Duggan, "the first step to freedom is to renounce the activity."

Following Biblical passages which instruct disciples in dealing with evil spirits, or demons, the counselors deal with the guilt and conflict in the person's life. "Ultimately," states

Duggan, "the counselor will literally cast out the demon by commanding it leave in the name of Jesus."

Termed "deliverance," the session is then followed with prayer and encouragement to participate in a Biblical church and continued counseling concerning life choices.

"A lady we prayed with this week had the ability to see things before they happened," states Duggan. He explains that the woman foresaw the exact circumstances of her husband's death. When the event, came to pass as she saw it, she felt fear and confusion. Duggan explains, "Some people who can see the future have the ability from God, others have the ability from the other source, (Satan). The way you can tell the difference is that God won't show you anything that will make you fearful."

Referring to Biblical scriptures concerning the source of fear, Duggan elaborates, "It is not a common experience for Christians to see into the future, however some do have

Reagan says Iran-Contra affair won't paralyze office

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he will not let the Iran-Contra affair paralyze the remainder of his presidency, while Republicans on Capitol Hill worked to retain funding for the rebels in Nicaragua.

Reagan, speaking from the steps of his helicopter as he prepared to leave the White House Friday for the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., said he was saving something for the "third act" of his administration.

Meanwhile, Vice President George Bush said in Iowa he thinks the "firestorm" over the sale of arms to Iran and the alleged diversion of profits to the Contras is receding. But Bush said the United States must still push its policy of not making deals with terrorists.

On Capitol Hill, Republicans denounced a plan by the Democratic majority to hold up release the remaining $40 million of $100 million in approved aid to the Contras until the administration accounts for past aid to the Nicaraguan rebels.

"If the Democratic leadership wants to kill off the Contras by denying the funds, then I say do so in the full light of day and stop this political, partisan avoidance of the main issue," said House Republican leader Robert Michel, R-Ill.

Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., asked how the administration knows the Contras need the money when it has not been determined how much military aid they have received.

In other developments related to the Iran-Contra affair:

—Fired White House aide Lt. Col. Oliver North filed a second lawsuit charging the Attorney General Edwin Meese's backup appointment of independent counsel Lawrence Walsh was unconstitutional. Walsh had said Friday the move invalidated North's first legal challenge.

—A Fayetteville, N.C., parachute rigger told CBS News that the State Department's humanitarian aid program for the Contras was used as a screen for North's arming of the rebels. In an interview with the network, Iain Crawford said as part of the cover he was told he was working for Project Hope, a legitimate humanitarian program. But he said he found rifles and ammunition in boxes he handled.

SUBLETT, DEYKE, CAMPBELL...
...Top county spellers.

Leasha Deyke spells 25 rounds to become champ

Leasha Deyke captured the title of County Champion in the 25th round of spelling during the County Spelling Bee on Friday afternoon.

Deyke, an eighth grader at La Plata Junior High, beat out fourth grader Taylor Sublett with the correct spelling of "chummage" followed by correctly spelling "conversant."

Deyke, 13, and Sublett, 10, faced off through 15 rounds of one-on-one spelling before Sublett misspelled chummage—she was short one m. A few words earlier it appeared the competition was over when Sublett misspelled "controversy", however, Deyke also misspelled the word and the bee continued through several more rounds.

At one point in the competition Sublett drew and correctly spelled the word which had lost her the title of junior champion on the day before, "aplastic."

Sublett, the daughter of Troy and Susan Sublett, took home another $25 savings award to add to the one she received on Thursday.

The third place award, and $25, was carried home by Jim Brett Campbell, a finalist from Stanton Junior High.

The $25 prizes were awarded by Hi-Plains Savings and Loan and Hereford Texas Federal Credit Union.

As County Champion, Deyke will represent the county in the Regional Bee at West Texas State University on April 11. Deyke is the daughter of Arlo and Sue Deyke. She lists karate and aerobics as hobbies and plays the french horn in the school band. Deyke was awarded a $50 savings bond from the Hereford State Bank.

Thursday's junior champ, Greg Coplen, the son of Ed and Jane Coplen, will also be invited to attend the Regional Bee as a guest. Bera Boyd served as pronouncer and judges were Eloise McDougal and Justice of the Peace Johnnie Turrentine. Debe Graves represented the Hereford Brand which sponsors the local spelling bee. The bee was held in the Heritage Room of the Deaf Smith County Library.

Dump opponents to vote on forming new POWER chapter

The organizational committee from a group of citizens opposing site characterization has come forward with a recommendation to form a local chapter of POWER (People Opposing Wasted Energy Repositories) according to spokesman Jim Conkwright.

The recommendation will be presented for the memberships' vote during a public meeting on Thursday, March 12, at 7 p.m. in the Community Center ballroom. Also, a slate of nominees will be presented for election to office.

This new group has staged two public dialogues recently for the purposes of examining the issue and organizing a united front against site characterization.

According to Conkwright, "Our new POWER chapter will offer avenues of positive action which private individuals and businesses here can take to prevent the DOE from proceeding with characterization. We are drawing support from a wide cross-section of people who share common goals of public safety, wise stewardship of our natural resources and sane economic growth."

Guest speaker will be Rene' Hicks from the State Attorney General's Office. Hicks will be presenting an update on the legal aspects of pending lawsuits against the DOE.

All persons who now question the feasibility of the waste dump project are invited to attend this meeting. New members will be enrolled for a nominal fee.

POWER was originally headquartered in Hereford when it was founded in 1983 by a group of concerned private individuals. The original chapter later moved to Vega to serve as a support group to the landowners effected by the proposed dump.

It's time to start garden soil work

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

As winter weather begins to thaw under the warming breezes of spring, week-end gardeners are making preparations for the season of growth. With bright sunshine and longer days the temptation to plant early gardens is hard to resist. Marcella McLain of McLain Garden

Center warns, "This is a good time to prepare the soil for spring planting but, for all but the hardiest plants, it is too early to plant because our West Texas weather is too unpredictable."

McLain and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service offer some advice for green-thumbed gardeners suffering from cabin fever. Both agree that planting too early is a common tendency and suggest that cool season plants which will thrive under our extremes of temperature at this time. Cool season plants include radishes, onions, turnips, beets, broccoli, cabbage, cauliflower and peas.

Flower lovers can safely transplant pansies to outdoor beds at this time and those wishing to plant roses will want to do so now.

McLain advises, "Prune roses in mid-March. Regular rose bushes should be trimmed to one foot to 18 inches tall depending on the rose. Climbing roses should be pruned only after they have bloomed this summer."

Soil insect control can also be started at this time with application of substances which control those insects which attack seeds at planting time and later young plants. A nursery or the Extension Office can assist in choosing materials for insect control.

McLain recommends that trees and shrubs be sprayed at this time with a dormant spray to suffocate insect eggs left from last year. "We should also be entering the fruit tree spray cycle now," she reminds.

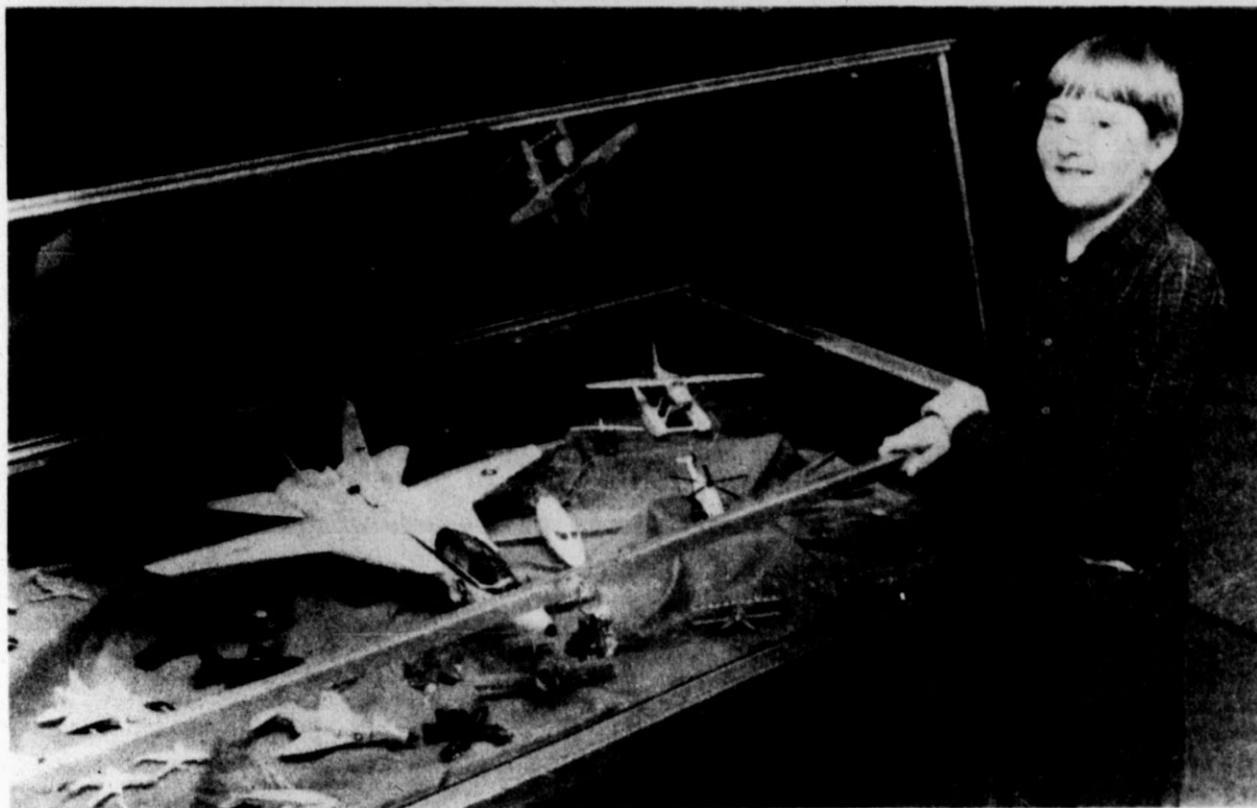

Planning a garden or flower bed is a pleasure filled with anticipation of the bounty to come. The County Extension Office suggests that to make the most of gardening space some vegetable plants may be mixed in which ornamental plants and harvested as produce matures. Among those plants which would be safe to plant this early are strawberries, asparagus and, in April and May, flowering perennials.

McLain explains, "Plant trees now. For them, the earlier you plant the better because they will suffer less from shock if planted before they leaf out, however April and May are the best months to plant flowers or a garden because the soil has warmed up and temperatures are more moderate."

Those who just can't wait another

George Kearns, 12, has collected airplane models since he was about 3-years-old and his 25 best are on exhibit at the Deaf Smith County Library this month.

GARDEN

month should purchase seeds and plan their gardens now. McLain encourages, "Early gardens can be started in windows now and warm spring days can best be spent preparing for the season of growth ahead."

"Fertilize trees, shrubs, and lawns at this time," urges McLain. "Spread a pre-emerge weed killer on lawns now to kill crabgrass and annual weed seeds before they germinate."

The best time to plant cool season grasses such as Rye, Fescue, Blue and Velvet Mix are the months of March, April and May.

"Those who have noticed yellow patches of grass in the past or yellowing of leaves on trees in growing season may need to supplement the soil with iron. We are very deficient in iron in this area," states McLain.

The Extension Office can help take some of the guess work out of fertilizing through soil testing. It is recommended that soil be tested about every two years. The soil test will analyze nutrient levels and define which nutrients need to be replaced through the addition of fertilizer. Sample tests cost from $6 to $10 and are performed through the A&M University System. Applications and information on gathering an accurate soil sample are available through the Extension office located in Deaf Smith County Courthouse.

Fertilizers are coded according to the proportion of three basic nutrients. A bag labeled 10-20-10 contains 10 percent nitrogen, 20 percent phosphorus and 10 percent potash or potassium.

Nitrogen is needed to provide general growth for the plant and to make the leaves green. Too little nitrogen will result in lower leaves which turn yellow. Too much of the nutrient will kill plants.

Phosphorous aids in the formation of roots, flowers and fruit. A phosphorous deficiency will cause stunted growth and poor flowering and fruiting.

Potassium, also called potash, is involved in the chemical processes required for the life of the plant. A potassium shortage will appear as yellowing leaves and stunted growth.

Fertilizer may be applied one of our ways: by broadcast before plant, by band or row applications, by application of a starter solution, or by application to growing plants.

Broadcast is the method preferred because there is a reduced chance of damaging plants.

McLain recommends that gardeners turn under mulching which was applied last spring and mix in a good garden fertilizer to prepare the soil.

"Our soil is very compacted in this area," she says, "gardeners will need to lighten the soil by working in compost, manure or peat moss."

Fertilizer will increase plant growth only if it supplies the needed nutrients and if other factors such as soil drainage and proper light are favorable. Care should also be given to using a fertilizer which is appropriate for the soil type and safe for use on edible produce.

REAGAN

Elliott Abrams accused his opponents in Congress of trying scuttle U.S. policy toward Central America. Abrams, a staunch Contra supporter, said he intends to remain head of the Latin American affairs bureau for the rest of the Reagan presidency.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater on Friday denied a story in the Progressive magazine reporting that the government secretly monitored the home telephones of Robert C. McFarlane after he quit as Reagan's national security adviser in late 1985.

Contra leaders said Friday they received nearly $200,000 in 1985 from a company believed to have received payments from the secret sale of U.S. weapons to Iran, but the Nicaraguan rebels denied their money was derived from those sales.

The head of the presidential commission that investigated the Iran-Contra connection, former Sen. John Tower of Texas, said he has seen no evidence of a diversion from the Iran sales profits to the rebels in 1985.

His commission's "big problem," he said, was that "we knew there was an intention to divert money and we knew it was diverted, but we didn't know who got it."

Contra official Bosco Matamoros said the rebels received two deposits in October 1985, totaling nearly $200,000, from the "Lake Resources" account. The Tower commission says Lake Resources was a Swiss account controlled by Richard V. Secord, a close associate of North.

Matamoros said the $200,000 was part of about $1 million in private aid received by the largest rebel army group from the end of 1985 through 1986. He said all of the $1 million was nonmilitary assistance from conservative Washington fund-raiser Carl "Spitz" Channell.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, introduced a resolution aimed at giving the Senate investigating panel access to Internal Revenue Service records of tax-exempt groups connected with North. The resolution is co-sponsored by leaders of panel.

Texas Hospital Association sees epidemic of closings

AUSTIN - In 1986, 18 Texas hospitals closed, according to the Texas Hospital Association, a trade association representing the hospital industry. This compares with nine closures in 1985, and eight in 1984.

"Nearly all of the 35 community hospitals in Texas that closed during the past three years were relatively small and the majority (19) were located in rural (non-MSA) counties," said Karl Shaner, D.P.H., vice president, research and information services. All but one of the closed hospitals had less than 100 beds. "With regard to their ownership status at the time of closure, seven hospitals were publicly-owned, 10 were private/non-profit institutions and 18 were investor-owned, either by individuals or a corporate system," Shaner noted.

The problems experienced by small, rural hospitals are caused by many of the same factors affecting urban hospitals, such as lower occupancy rates, more intensely ill patients, stricter enforcement of regulatory requirements, closure of services by the peer review organization (PRO), and inadequate payment from Medicare/Medicaid programs.

"Rural hospitals also face the problems of attracting sufficient numbers of qualified professional personnel and physicians, less access to capital and insufficient funding for marketing and diversification in order to respond to a more competitive health care market," said Charles Bailey, JD, vice president of legal affairs and THA's liaison with smaller hospitals.

"In Texas, small and rural hospitals account for 270 of the hospitals in the state, and serve an estimated 3 million people. Recent changes in the payment and review of care provided Medicare beneficiaries have had dramatic effect on these hospitals," Bailey said. "Because small, rural hospitals also serve a greater than average proportion of Medicare patients, changes in payment policies have a more profound effect on their facility and its ability to preserve financial stability," he added.

Since 1980, hospitals have seen a decline in discharges and in their average daily census; however, this has affected small and rural hospitals more severely. "In the first half of 1986, occupancy rates were 25 percent or less in small hospitals with fewer than 25 beds, and 35 percent for hospitals with 25-49 beds," Bailey said.

Small, rural hospitals also have experienced a decline in net patient margins while experiencing higher expenses, including higher malpractice insurance costs. "The net effect of these changes is that many small, rural hospitals are in financial distress, affecting the accessibility to health care services of those living in many rural communities in Texas," Bailey said.

"Changes in the reimbursement of small, rural hospitals is essential if rural hospitals are to survive and needed services are to continue to be provided to persons living in rural communities," Bailey said.

Among the recommended changes in the treatment of rural hospitals are:

-Consider exempting rural hospitals from the prospective pricing system (PPS).

-As an alternate, change the PPS to more adequately reimburse rural hospitals in such areas as reducing the differential of payment between rural and urban hospitals, revising payments to reflect severity of illness, changing the definition and payment of "sole community providers," establishing low-volume adjustment payment revising outlier payment policy and continuing pass-through of capital costs.

-Increase the flexibility of the Application of Medicare Conditions of Participation to rural hospitals.

Targeted industries listed for Panhandle

LUBBOCK - Sixty-one industries that are growing and that are best suited for this part of the southwest were revealed recently at a meeting of economic development leaders from a four-state area.

The list is the result of a "target industry" study conducted by Public Demographics, Inc. of Cincinnati, Ohio, for Southwestern Public Service Company (SPS) for the benefit of communities the electric utility serves. SPS provides electric service to a population of about one million in a 52,000-square-mile comprising eastern and southeastern New Mexico, the South Plains and Panhandle of Texas, the Oklahoma Panhandle and southwestern Kansas.

"This study will allow communities to take a 'rifle' approach in seeking industry to diversify our area's economy," said Bert Ballengee, SPS chairman of the board and chief executive officer. "We haven't given our communities a magic wand that will suddenly cause new industries to flock to our area. We have provided a very necessary tool, though, for them to use as they seek more jobs and economic growth for this region."

From the list of 61 industries, a 13-member task force of prominent area business leaders selected a "top ten" which they felt would be most beneficial for this area and would be the prospects most likely to locate here.

Those ten industries are:
-Food preparations: The manufacture of prepared foods, especially frozen foods and snacks.
-Miscellaneous plastic products: Firms that mold primary plastics or that fabricate finished plastic products.

-Vitreous china plumbing fixtures: China and earthenware fittings and bathroom accessories.

-Metal barrels, drums and pails: For use by oil, chemical and other industries.

-Hardware: Includes furniture hardware and motor-vehicle parts.
-Electrical machinery, equipment and supplies: Lamp bulb components, electric furnaces and other products.

-Truck trailer industry: The manufacture of truck trailers, trailer chassis and cargo containers.

-Surgical and medical instruments: For medical doctors, eye doctors and veterinarians.

-Data processing services: Reports, key punching and the servicing of equipment.

As the list was being prepared over several months, many factors relating to each industry were weighted as to importance and desirability. For example, industries experiencing moderate growth were rated over those with quick growth in the belief that moderate, steady growth would be more permanent.

The goals for all industries were fourfold: Support existing industry here by providing a market for their products and services; attract new industries; attract and retain industries that utilize the existing labor force; emphasize diversification to broaden the area's economic base of agriculture and energy.

The Lubbock meeting also featured workshops and information to help communities market themselves to prospective new industries.

Older Worker Week planned

Recognizing the importance of meaningful employment for older Americans, March 8-14, has been established as National Hire the Older Worker Week.

An annual event, Older Worker Week, is designed to spotlight the valuable qualities of the mature worker. Texas Farmers Union Green Thumb encourages both public and private employers to join them in honoring older employees during this time.

Green Thumb, a senior community service employment program and sponsored by Texas Farmers Union, currently operates in 126 counties allowing over 1,000 senior workers to earn wages while assisting non-profit organizations. The program enrolls, age 55 and older, provide needed services which contribute to the maintenance and growth of rural communities. Program participants work in such areas as senior services, employment assistance, weatherization, environmental quality, public works, and education.

According to Green Thumb Director, Diane Parrish, "the abundance of talent, resource, and willingness that make up older workers must be recognized and utilized by employers not just during Older Worker Week but every week of the year. Hiring the experienced is good business and our program helps locate jobs for older workers in the private sector," she added, "and when looking for openings we find that chronological age is the least important measure of a person's true value to an employer."

During National Hire the Older Worker Week, employers who want experience, dependability, reliability, and dedication should consider hiring an older Texan.

Religion vital

Some argue that America is a "Christian nation." Not so, declares U.S. Secretary of Education William Bennett.

In a recent address, Bennett explained that the founding fathers did not design the Constitution "to perpetuate a Christian order." To protect religious liberty, the founders sought to outlaw religious establishments and to moderate religious passions. At the same time, added Bennett, they recognized that religious values require public acknowledgement, common defense and mutual respect.

"On the one hand, religion should never be excluded from public debate. But on the other, it should never be used as a kind of divine trump-card to foreclose further debate. Those who claim that their religious faith gives them a monopoly on political truth make democratic discourse difficult. Disagree with me and you're damned, they seem to suggest. In doing so, they insult the common sense and the tolerant spirit of the American people," states Bennett.

We are not a "Christian Sparta," as Samuel Adams contended, says Bennett. But he adds that we are a religious people, the most religious free people on earth. A recent survey showed that while 76 percent of the British, 62 percent of the French, and 79 percent of the Japanese said they believed in God, fully 95 percent of Americans said they did. It is noteworthy that in each case, a similar percentage said they were willing to die for their countries.

The virtues that inspire patriotism—hard work, self-discipline, perseverance, industry, respect for family, for learnings and for country—are intimately linked with an strengthened by religious values.

"One of the treasures of America is the treasure that Tocqueville called the 'civil religion' and that Jefferson called the 'general religion'—this is the national creed that distills values common to all sects, in all religions, from all cultures," says Bennett.

Much divides each denomination from the other, but what is agreed upon is important, says Bennett. "Religion has content and power. It infuses American life with a sense of transcendence. All profit from it, although none is forced to assent to it. And, as the founders predicted, the constitutional order depends on it."

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor:

The success of the Christian Unity Service was reflected through the generous offering of $637.99, which was divided between the Saint Joseph's Catholic outreach ministry and Operation Good Shepherd. These two local groups have a continuing ministry throughout the year to the hungry and sick in our community. We express gratitude to those who gave to this unified effort of Christian concern.

Our thanks also to host pastor, Bob Huffaker, for providing facilities for the large crowd, to Fr. Joe Egan for a timely message, and to the women of the Nazarene Church who hosted the fellowship hour, and supplied an abundant amount of food.

Thank you
Eloise McDougal

Dear editor:

I have been concerned about some of the letters to the editor and comments going around town about the hot "DOE" item. It seems that factions, gossip, name calling, and even vandalism has split our once peaceful town. Criticism has been severe toward people who went to Columbus (as if they going or not was going to matter whether Deaf Smith County gets the dump or not). Hereford is my home. I am a vocal, active opponent of the dump, but treating people harshly and name calling isn't going to solve anything.

It does look like Battelle and D.O.E. employees are moving here. They have to do their jobs just anyone else has to. Our fight is not with them. It is with Washington. The decision is mostly a political one.

Farming and cattle are our livelihood and we must fight to preserve our land and water but fighting each other is no solution. To reach out and provide a service or minister to a Battelle or D.O.E. worker does not constitute a traitor to Deaf Smith County.

Let's aim our arrows at Washington and not at our neighbors. Opposed To Disunity As Well As D.O.E.

Reverend Ted Taylor
224 Beach

Dear editor,

On Sunday evening March 1, it was a joy and a privilege for me to proclaim God's word at the Christian Unity Service at the Church of the Nazarene sponsored by the Hereford Ministerial Alliance.

The theme of this ecumenical prayer service was "Reconciled to God in Christ." The thrust of my talk was the need for reconciliation and forgiveness among many people of Hereford and Deaf Smith County—myself included—during these painful days of division and disunity we're experiencing because of the threat of the world's first nuclear waste repository possibly coming here.

I spoke rather strongly about the division among us. "Our community is divided," I said. "Churches are divided. Families are divided."

I went on to acknowledge that some of us are being un-Christian in judging others—accusing friends, neighbors and fellow churchgoers of greed and seeking after money and personal gain.

Quoting a telephone comment from a woman I didn't know at the time, I said, "We may be successful in keeping the waste dump out of Deaf Smith County—but the way we're going about it, we're destroying all that's good and holy among the people of Hereford and the surrounding neighborhood."

A portion of my Sunday evening message was broadcast on KPAN several times this past week.

Now I've learned that a number of people who heard my plea for reconciliation and forgiveness are confused as to where I stand on the whole issue of the DOE and the waste dump. It has been suggested that, in my attempt to be sensitive to the worshipping community at the Nazarene Church Sunday evening, I seemed to have failed to make clear just where I stand regarding the possibility of the nuclear waste dump coming to our area.

For the record, I am strongly opposed to the selection of our county as one of the three possible sites for the world's first nuclear waste depository. I thought I had made my position on this issue clear to our community before Sunday evening's ecumenical prayer service.

Anyone who saw me on Tuesday night, Feb. 24, at the community center meeting with the DOE and Battelle people should know where I stand on this issue. With my "Don't Waste Texas" sticker on my jacket, I was at the center from before 6 p.m. until close to 10 p.m. mingling with the people and going out of my way to welcome in the name of Jesus, Jeff Neff, the DOE Salt Repository Project Manager, and as many of his staff and Battelle people that I could visit with. I was speaking for myself in welcoming them to Hereford as God's people—not for what they may eventually come here to do.

The nuclear age (including the fear of disposing nuclear waste) is an era of moral as well as physical danger. We are, as the American Catholic Bishops stated in their 1983 pastoral "Challenge of Peace", the first generation since Genesis with the power to virtually destroy God's creation.

I do not believe that we should let the DOE people take the chance of contaminating God's precious earth here or anywhere by burying nuclear waste material beneath it. Repository leaks could seriously contaminate the Ogallala and Santa Rosa aquifers.

I join with the majority of people in our community in expressing my deep concern about lethal radioactive contamination buried here. I trust that I have made myself clear on this issue. For me it's more than wearing a "Don't Waste Texas" sticker. My convictions against the dump are deep down within me. I will do all in my power to continue to fight against its coming here.

Let us all continue, in the spirit of Christian love and forgiveness, work together to be good stewards of God's earth—it's land and water and crops and seeds and flowers.

Dear Editor:

I am writing to you in the hopes that you will be able to help me. I was born in Hereford and we moved away when I was 4 years old.

Since then, both of my parents were killed in an automobile accident and I lived in foster homes until I was 18. Now I am in prison and have never been more lonely in my life. Being moved from foster home to foster home, I never had the chance to make many friends so I have no one to write to nor anyone to write to me.

I am hoping that you can find the kindness in your heart to publish my letter because I believe that some of my relatives still live in or around Hereford. It's my hope that my relatives or someone who reads my letter who knows my relatives will contact them or write to me.

I plan on returning to Hereford upon my release in the near future because it's the only real home that I've really known. So if there is anyone reading this letter who would like to respond as a pen-pal, I would love to hear from you.

I am a 25-year-old white male but loneliness picks no certain age or color. Please write if you would like to share a smile from time to time. A letter means so much to a man in prison, especially if he never receives any. Thanks for your time.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek examines Washington news leaks this week.

Dear editor:

It seems to me that a majority of the juiciest news out of Washington comes from "sources." Without a source, a Washington reporter would have little to do other than pass on government hand-outs, which is no way to sell newspapers.

I've been keeping a list of "sources" reporters use. They are:
The reliable source.
The usually reliable source.
The heretofore reliable source.
The knowledgeable source.
The informed source.
The White House source.
The Defense Department source.
The anonymous source.

As I understand it, a source is another name of a leak. The more secret a meeting is, the more it leaks. Sometimes a reporter can tell you what happened in a secret meeting before it happens.

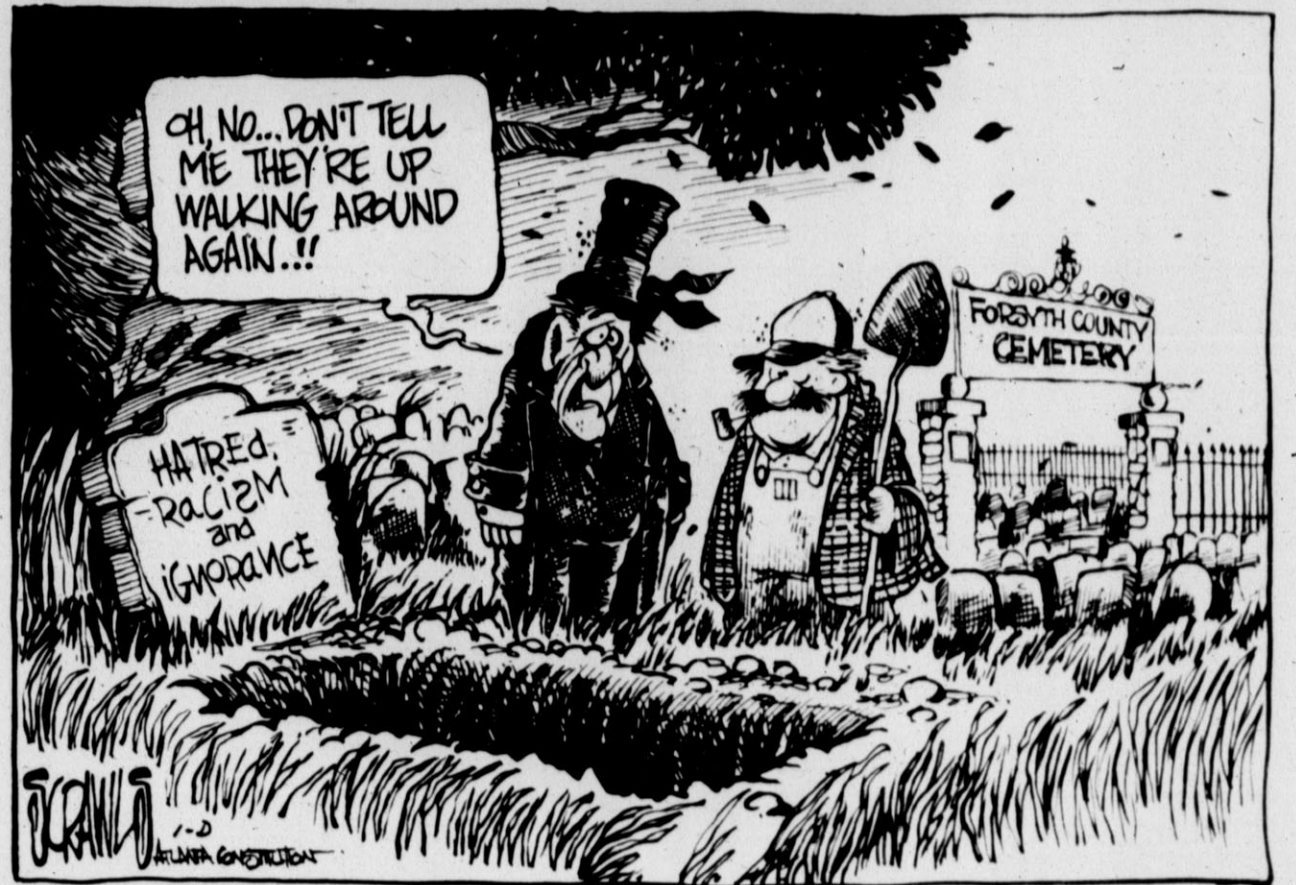

Every outfit from the White House on down is always trying to figure out how to prevent new leaks. This is due to ignorance of human nature.

Washington doesn't understand that a secret, whether in Washington or in Hereford, is no fun unless you can let somebody else in on it. Did you hear what happened at that party last night?

Your faithfully,
J.A.

PURFICT

I watched a program on the educational channel the other night. The program was about families and it was good. The person leading the seminar had a lot of good things to say about how families function and how they mis-function. He used good visual aids and was an entertaining speaker. As he talked I could see a lot of myself and the mistakes I made in raising my children. He had me ready to call up the kids and apologize.

After the session there was a period of questions and answers. The first question asked whether or not the speaker knew of any families who fit his model. He said he did not. He said his family did not meet the criteria and he knew of none that did so. He knew of many families that were functional, but not perfect models. The model was an idea to work toward not a normal experience of life.

Well he lost me. All of my life I have had a struggle with un-reachable ideals. Goals that are set for us to reach for and never attain. The goals are alright but when we do not attain them we are made to feel guilty or inadequate because we do not get there. Why can't we be realistic and look at life as it is possible? Is it true that if we do not have unattainable goals we will all go to pot?

Must we have a raging guilt trip going on inside of us or else be no good and do nothing?

The longer I live and the more people I meet the more I am convinced that we are all about alike, and we all have our faults and failures. None of us are going to be anything more than normal human beings, period.

I used to do some singing, well what I did is croak to music. There are white keys and black keys on a piano and I sort of sung in the cracks. I always wanted to sing the song about the impossible dream. In the shower I could belt that song with the best of them. Finally I got to sing the thing in public. I built toward the final note when in full voice the song says "To reach the un-reachable star". I did not quite reach the star. In fact I hit the most important note in the song flat. More than flat I was FLAT.

I was depressed for days. Every musician in the audience had to tell me that I was flat on that note. They were kind enough not to mention all the other notes I missed. Then I thought it over and got tickled. Such is life. We never reach the un-reachable star, and it really does not matter a great deal in the long run. nobody's purfict...

Being unattached is good way to lose those extra pounds

By GARY OTT

Midland Reporter-Telegram

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — A friend I hadn't seen in several months dropped by the office the other day and it suddenly occurred to me that he had put on a little weight around the old gut.

I asked him about it.

"Got me a girlfriend," he said.

That was all he needed to say. There is something about a relationship, at least the early phases of it, that will add three or four inches to your waistline.

For whatever reason, involved people eat better than those who are unattached.

When you think about it, it makes sense.

A new couple is sitting around the apartment watching TV when one of them, who has become slightly bored with the program says, "Want something to eat?"

"Sure," the other says.

They then go to the kitchen, whip up 18 tacos, a dozen or so burritos and, if they are particularly hungry, maybe scramble up eight or nine eggs.

They inhale it all in record time and then pass out on the couch.

The excess poundage forms overnight.

If a single person, on the other hand, is watching the same TV program and gets a craving for food, he will go to refrigerator, open the door, stare at some leftover bean dip that has started turning green and suddenly realize he is really not all that hungry, after all.

As a result, he will sometimes go days without eating. He smokes a lot, instead. He may die of lung cancer, but fat ain't going to get him.

I speak from experience on this subject. Over the years, I have been a member of both categories.

Before I was married, I was a skinny little thing, often resembling a toothpick with longish hair and big feet.

After a couple months of marriage and countless plates of French toast drenched with maple syrup, a not-so-subtle lump had formed on the middle of the toothpick.

When that ill-fated experiment ended, the lump began to subside.

Since then, depending on my degree of involvement, the lump has taken turns growing and shrinking.

It is not a particularly healthy situation, of course, but it does make shopping for clothes an intriguing experience.

What is needed here is some sound advice for those who find themselves temporarily unattached and, yet, harbor no immediate plans to die of starvation. Here are three helpful hints on how to add a lump to that toothpick of yours:

- 1) Learn to cook. I realize this is drastic action, but if you start off slow you can do it. Step No. 1: Find the kitchen. It is usually a small room off to the side of your house or apartment. It's where you keep the beer. Got it? Step No. 2: Purchase something fancy, like maybe a box of frozen fish sticks. Step No. 3: Take them out of the box (that's very important) and place them in the oven. Step No. 4: Turn it up full blast. Step No. 5: Smoke three cigarettes and then remove the fish sticks from the oven. Step No. 6: Dig in. Step No. 7 (optional): If they don't taste right, smother them in green bean dip.

- 2) Learn where the nearest Burger King is to your home. Teach your car to get there automatically. Whenever you feel the slightest hunger pang, regardless of the hour, go to your car and order it to drive directly there. Buy two Whoppers, three large fries and a couple of milkshakes. Consume them immediately, and then go straight to bed. Do not exercise. A nice little lump should start forming in no time.
- 3) Stand in front of your bathroom mirror and practice making sad faces. If you can get tears to form on command, that's even better. Repeat this over and over. Now add a whining sound. Once this has been mastered, go to a married friend's house and watch the family eat. If they don't ask you to join them, whine louder.

Accent on Health

The availability of toilets for both men and women, an adequate supply of clean water for drinking, for first aid, and for washing up, and a place to have lunch out of the sun are hardly luxuries to most working people. But to farm workers in some states, these basic amenities are sometimes nonexistent.

In Texas, though, the Texas Department of Health (TDH) has established minimum sanitation standards to protect farm workers from the spread of disease and infections. These comprehensive standards, much the same as federal regulations for industry and other businesses employing large work forces, are under consideration at the U.S. Department of Labor for application nationwide.

The Texas standards have been effective since 1983 and are enforced through onsite inspections of farm field facilities by local health departments and TDH regional personnel.

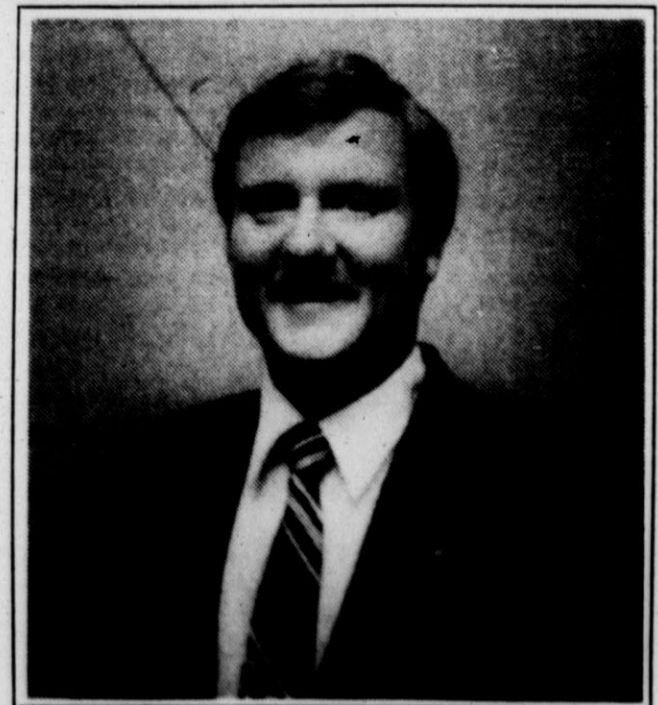

Troy Lowry of TDH's General Sanitation Division said inspectors investigate an average of six or seven complaints by workers each month, primarily in the Rio Grande Valley, where agriculture is concentrated.

Briefly, the regulations apply to employers of more than six persons at "temporary work places," such as fields or orchards. The employers must supply sanitary toilet facilities for both men and women within a quarter mile or five minutes' walking distance of the work area, for each 30 employees in the field.

Three Hereford boxers place 2nd at regionals

Three members of the Hereford Boxing Club were runners up in the Texas Golden Gloves regional tournament in Wichita Falls last weekend.

Jaime Ruiz, Javier Herrera, and Jaime Herrera each brought home second place trophies.

Ruiz, competing in the 125-pound division, lost by decision to Bobby Reyes of Wichita Falls in the finals. Reyes won the 1986 state championship.

Ruiz plans to begin boxing as a pro for the Reyes Boxing Club of Wichita Falls by the summer of this year.

Javier Herrera lost by decision to Mike Tutt of the Reyes Boxing Club of Wichita Falls in the finals of 119-pound division. Tutt was a national Golden Gloves champion in the 90-pound division in 1985.

Jaime Herrera lost to Ruben Navarez, also of the Reyes Boxing Club of Wichita Falls, by a T.K.O. in the second round, in the 112-pound division.

Navarez was a member of the U.S. Boxing Team in 1986.

A MATTER OF CHOICE

But no coverup attempted against NCAA

Texas Tech becomes SWC 'outlaw'

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

The words in cold print look hard, like the "Wanted" captions on post office walls and that have a criminal ring.

Texas Tech, a first-time NCAA offender.

Texas Tech, another certified and branded Southwest Conference football outlaw.

Texas Tech, a carrier of the NCAA tattoo of probation and sanctions.

No matter that the loss of only three scholarships for 13 violations was considered a lucky break for the Red Raiders.

The latest NCAA action against an SWC school stung hard out in West Texas like wind-blown sleet pellets.

'Meet the Herd' night is Monday at HHS gym

Hereford High School athletes who are competing in spring sports will be introduced at the "Meet the Herd" night Monday night.

Hereford Whiteface Booster Club has planned the event for a 7:30 p.m. start at the Hereford High School gym, club president Joe Hacker said.

The baseball team, boys' and girls' golf teams, boys' and girls' tennis teams, and boys' and girls' track teams will be introduced.

Refreshments will be served after all athletes have been introduced.

NCAA PLANS

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — The NCAA likes to plan ahead when it comes to tournaments, especially the massive Division I Men's Basketball competition.

Dates and places have been assigned for the Final Four Rounds in the court sports for both 1988 and 1989.

In '88 the semifinal and finals will be played at Kemper Arena, Kansas City, Mo., April 2 and 4. In '89, the Final Four will go at it in the Seattle Kingdome April 1 and 3.

on a February day.

There's a pride among West Texans and Texas Tech people that can't be measured, and football is serious out on the plains.

Texas Tech fans, alumni and officials would dearly love to play in the Cotton Bowl some New Year's Day as the SWC champion, but most of them don't want to cheat to do it.

Now the Red Raiders have been strung on the lengthy NCAA-SWC stringer with Southern Methodist and Texas Christian. That's one-third of the SWC with another third — Houston, Texas A&M, and Texas — being investigated.

There was genuine amazement even among the most cynical of SWC followers that Texas Tech cheated. That's not the West Texas way.

"The years I was in Austin everyone always had a good feeling about Tech the way it ran its program with such high integrity," said Athletic Director T. Jones, who was hired away from the Longhorns two years ago. "Our people are proud people who never have had NCAA problems. They've hated all of this."

Everyone associated with the allegations against Tech are long gone.

There was no cover-up attempt.

The Red Raiders cooperated fully with the NCAA. There was no slush fund uncovered. No big daddy with big bucks and big ideas.

There were some overzealous former assistants and four rogue boosters who violated rules ranging from a Dairy Queen visit to a promise of boots and a trip to the neon lights of Las Vegas.

Tech was the victim of an amateurish attempt to help the school out, not a cloak-and-dagger check-in-the-mail operation like the ones at TCU and SMU.

The kids being courted by Tech never enrolled there because their grades were so bad.

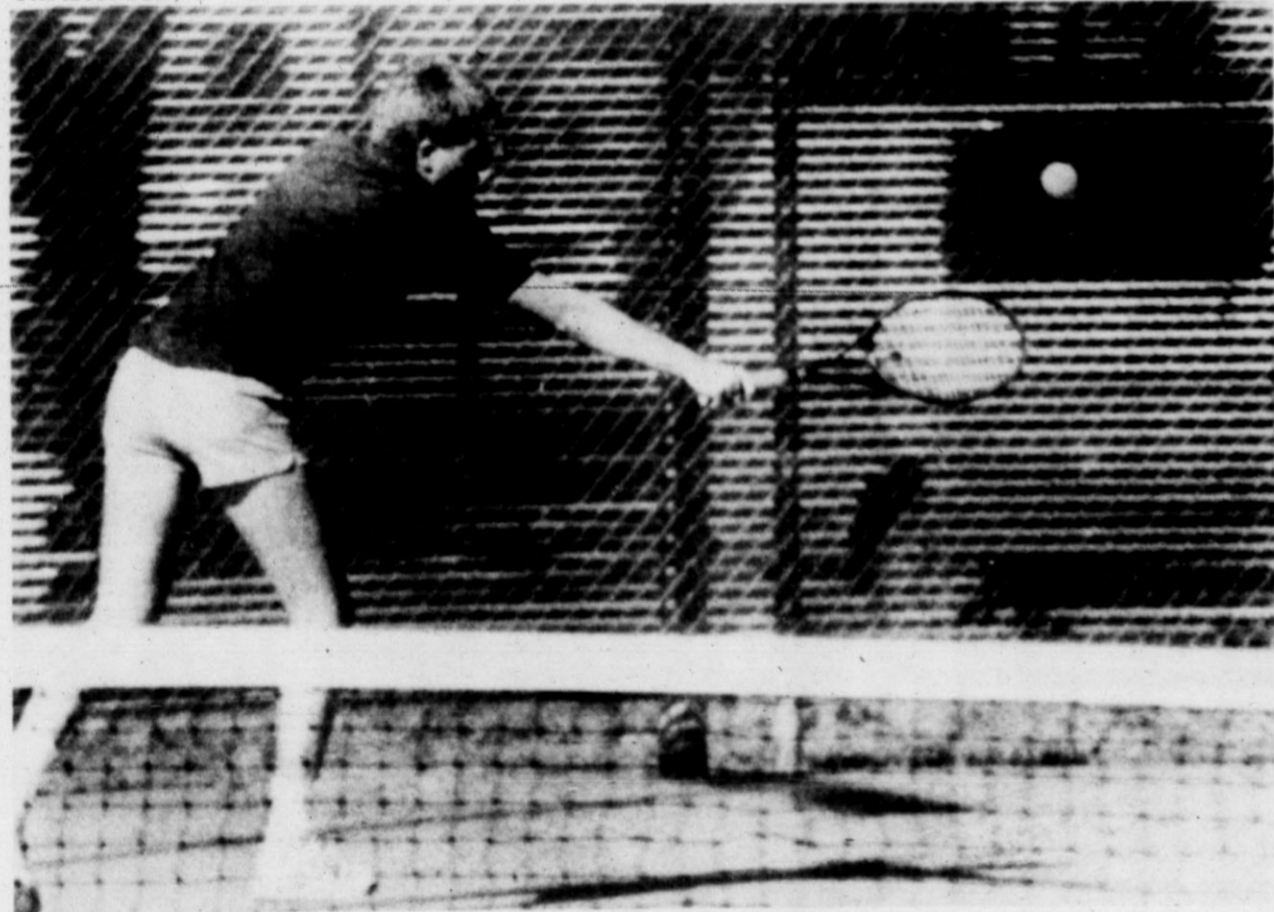

The NCAA Infractions Committee, which proved it could unloose a terrible swift sword by cutting Mustang football for a season, showed in Texas Tech's case it also has the wisdom to punish a minor case with a slight slap.

Losing three scholarships was a big enough bullet for prideful followers of the black and scarlet. They'll probably form their own vigilante committee and hang the outlaws themselves if it ever happens again.

Jason Bodner, in the photo above, known by his Hereford High School tennis teammates as "Spike," and Brad Allred, in the photo below, won their first-round and quarterfinal boys' doubles matches Friday in the first day of the Hereford eight-team tennis tournament. Bodner and Allred beat a Borger team, 6-2, 6-1, in the first round, and then defeated a Levelland team, 6-2, 6-3, in the quarterfinals. The tournament was scheduled to end Saturday. Documentation key to hiring under new act

COLLEGE STATION — Proper documentation is the key to hiring workers under the new Immigration Control and Legalization Amendments Act of 1986.

"Employers should ask for and make copies of documents presented for all employees hired since Nov. 6, 1986," points out Dr. Richard Edwards, economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System. "Applicants should not be hired without proper documentation."

As far as agricultural employees are concerned, Edwards notes these provisions of the new legislation:

—It is illegal to knowingly hire, recruit or refer for a fee any person not authorized to work in this country. There are stiff penalties for violators. All employers are affected regardless of size or number of workers.

—Employers must inspect documents and attest to the legal right to work of every person hired. There are penalties for employers who do not comply with this paperwork requirement even if no illegal aliens are employed.

—Most agricultural workers will be able to attain legal status. Workers can obtain temporary resident status and, after two years, become permanent residents if they can show they have worked 90 or more mandays in producing and harvesting perishable agricultural commodities during the year beginning May 1, 1985. Those who have worked 90 in each of the three years ending May 1, 1984, 1985 and 1986 may become residents after one year. The number allowed permanent status under the three-year consecutive years of work provision is limited to 350,000. Once either group has obtained permanent status, however, they have no obligation to continue to work in agriculture.

—Anyone who can show continual residence since Jan. 1, 1982, can be granted temporary status for 18 months and may be granted permanent status after that period.

—During a four-year period from 1989-1993, a limited number of aliens will be admitted to perform field work in fruits, vegetables and other perishable commodities if it is determined they are needed. Those admitted are obligated to do at least 90 mandays of such work for three consecutive years. They then can stay in the U.S. permanently but have no further obligation to work in agriculture.

Types Of Documentation

Edwards points out that any of the following documents or combination of documents are proof of resident status as set forth in the law:

- A U.S. passport.
- Certificate of naturalization.
- Resident alien card or other alien registration card with photo that is evidence of authorization to work.
- A current foreign passport with a current endorsement allowing the applicant to work in the U.S.
- Social Security card and a driver's license or other identification card with photo issued by the state.
- U.S. birth certificate or birth certificate which establishes U.S. nationality at birth and a driver's license or other state-issued identification card with photo.

Penalties For Employers

Employers who knowingly hire unauthorized aliens can be fined between $250 and $2,000 for each such employee for a first offense," Edwards points out. "The second violation carries a fine of $2,000 to $5,000 per employee found in violation, and fines range from $3,000 to $10,000 per offense after more than two previous citations."

If the attorney general rules that an employer is engaging in a pattern or practice of violations, that employer may face criminal charges which carry fines or jail sentences.

No citations will be issued through March 1987, says the economist. During the subsequent year through March 1988, a first offender will be cited, but no penalty will be assessed. Second and subsequent violations found during this year, however, will be penalized as previously outlined. After March 1987, all violations are subject to the full measure of the law.

For seasonal agricultural employees (90 mandays in producing and harvesting perishable commodities), no penalty will be imposed for violation until the application period for the seasonal agricultural worker program has ended in October 1988, notes Edwards.

The new law also addresses workers employed through a labor contractor. If a farmer knows the employees are not authorized to work in the U.S., he is considered to be the one doing the hiring. Any sanctions imposed will be against the farmer.

Employers who do not adhere to the documentation requirements also may be fined, adds Edwards. The law mandates employers to maintain a record keeping system that verifies they have examined documents presented. Employers may photocopy the documentation. Those employers found in violation shall be fined between $100 and $1,000 for each individual in violation.

Audit report scores slipshod inspections

WASHINGTON (AP) — Slipshod inspection procedures at U.S. ports of entry and flawed compliance in overseas slaughter plants raise the possibility of contaminated meat reaching American consumers, an Agriculture Department report says.

Investigators said they found the imported meat inspection process "generally satisfactory" but that some potentially serious shortcomings were identified, including sloppy paperwork at ports of entry and a lack of security and attention to detail in some foreign meat plants.

Donald L. Houston, administrator of the Food Safety and Inspection Service, the responsible USDA agency, told investigators that some changes have been initiated and that the audit would be used as a guide for further improvements.

The Food Security Act of 1985, Houston noted, reemphasizes conformity with chemical residue standards in the inspection of imported meat. He said the agency will require countries "to describe their residue programs through annual plans" as part of the certification process giving them access to the U.S. market.

More than 2.5 billion pounds of meat are imported annually, much of it lower-grade beef from Australia and New Zealand used mostly in hamburgers and processing.

The audit report was released Thursday by the department's Office of Inspector General at the request of reporters.

Investigators reviewed operations at the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service here and at the agency's field offices. Visits also were made to government regulatory bodies, laboratories and slaughter houses in Australia and New Zealand.

The report said the foreign visits found:

—Animal drugs not approved for use in the United States were routinely used in both Australia and New Zealand.

—Monitoring of herds suspected of having drug residue contamination was not sufficient to prohibit entry of animals from the herds into export markets.

—Plans for sampling chemical residues in meat could not ensure that samples taken were a valid representation of the foreign residue problems.

—Safeguards over health certificates "were not sufficient to preclude the use of unauthorized certificates" to circumvent inspection procedures.

"Consequently, meat products which do not meet (USDA) standards could enter U.S. consumption channels," the report said.

Reviewing officers recommended the agency improve its control over meat imported into the United States. The report said products were allowed to move through intermediary facilities prior to inspection and then be transported to inspection locations without proper sealing and supervision.

"As a result, the import inspection division had no assurance that all imported meat products were presented for inspection," the report said. "During our audit, FSIS management began comprehensive corrective action which we believe, if completed, will resolve these deficiencies."

By law, the USDA agency is required to ensure that the wholesomeness of imported meat products is equivalent to U.S. standards.

In the matter of contamination by chemical residues, the report said the collection of meat samples for testing in Australia and New Zealand failed to meet FSIS standards and may not effectively identify the residue problem in the country.

The report gave these examples:

—In Australia, the sampling plan for the entire year was prepared and distributed to inspectors at the beginning of the year. In one establishment, the plan and the dates of sample submissions were posted on a wall in the inspector's office.

"The sampling plan should be secured because unauthorized persons could identify when samples were to be taken and could bring suspect animals into the establishment on days when no sampling was scheduled," the report said.

—In New Zealand, most samples to determine chemical residues in meat were taken on Mondays and Tuesdays, apparently for the convenience of the inspector and the laboratory.

"A preestablished sample selection routine could be a problem because the pattern could be readily identified by establishment personnel who could then bring suspect animals into the establishment when no sampling would be done, resulting in unwholesome meat products entering the export channels," the report said.

Tort reform testimony to continue on Monday

AUSTIN (AP) — One side insists farmers would suffer under controversial liability insurance reforms now under consideration, but the other says the rules must be revised to keep farmers' finances healthy.

Opponents to tort reform will continue their testimony before the Senate Economic Development Committee Monday. The group also will hear testimony next week on proposals to change state laws concerning liability insurance in Texas.

"Farming is far more risky than most people think," Agriculture

Commissioner Jim Hightower said Thursday. "Agricultural machines now cause more than half of all machinery-related deaths ... Farmers and farmworkers alike suffer more than their share of pesticide poisonings."

Hightower said passing tort reform measures the committee is considering would make it "impossible for an injured farmer to prove which wrongdoer caused what percentage of the damages."

"Farmers will not get full recoveries, and they will pay for losses they had no hand in causing," Hightower said.

But Bernie Glasson, speaking for the Texas Farm Bureau, supported tort reform.

"The size of recoveries in pesticide cases and the amount a farmer must pay for his own health care have hurt many farmers," Glasson said.

Another witness, Dallas attorney John Marks, gave an example of why he and his Texas Civil Justice League say there must be reform.

"A prize bull died because a non-English speaking employee could not read the pesticide applied," Marks said. "The bull's owner got $1.7 million actual damages and $7 million punitive because instructions on the bottle were not written in both English and Spanish."

"There are not too many lawsuits because of the civil justice system," said Joan Claybrook, president of Public Citizen, a consumer-oriented group. "Lawsuits result from the injury of the public in the work place."

Sen. O.H. "Ike" Harris, committee chairman, promised that opponents would be given another chance to testify Monday, including representatives from the Texas Trial Lawyers Association.

Harris said all bills concerning tort reform and liability insurance changes would go to a subcommittee after the public hearings.

The six legislative proposals on tort reform before the committee would put a cap on non-economic and punitive awards by juries, limit attorney fees in damage suits and make numerous other changes in the present civil justice system.

Ms. Claybrook said the proposal by Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, to put a $250,000 cap on non-economic jury awards was "immoral, lacking in economic rationale and is arguably unconstitutional."

Montford's proposal to limit attorney's fees to a percentage of the award would discourage attorneys from taking difficult cases "and limit the effectiveness of the poor man's key to the courthouse door," Ms. Claybrook said.

Adequate land preparation to make a good seedbed can lead to a good cotton crop. The fall and winter are the times farmers work on the land to provide the upcoming cotton crop with a good start. Land preparation includes weed control, plant residue breakdown, moisture storage and breakup of hard pans. These compact zones will restrict root growth and hinder the distribution of fertilizer. Dr. Bob Metzger, cotton specialist, says "Getting a uniform, early stand that grows off well next spring often can be attributed to proper land preparation the previous fall and winter." He also urges farmers to avoid working wet soil which can cause heavily compacted zones. To achieve uniform fruiting, cotton plants require a constant supply of moisture through a large root reservoir. This large root system can't develop in compacted soil. Thoroughly breaking up the compacted soil, combined with weeding, can help prevent excess shedding of young fruit from growing cotton plants.

of age and older and disabled persons whose income is fixed at or below poverty levels.

This program (as with all programs associated with Catholic Family Service) will accept clients solely on the basis of need, without regard to the person's race, religious affiliation, or background. Goals of the Inter-Faith Hunger Project are:

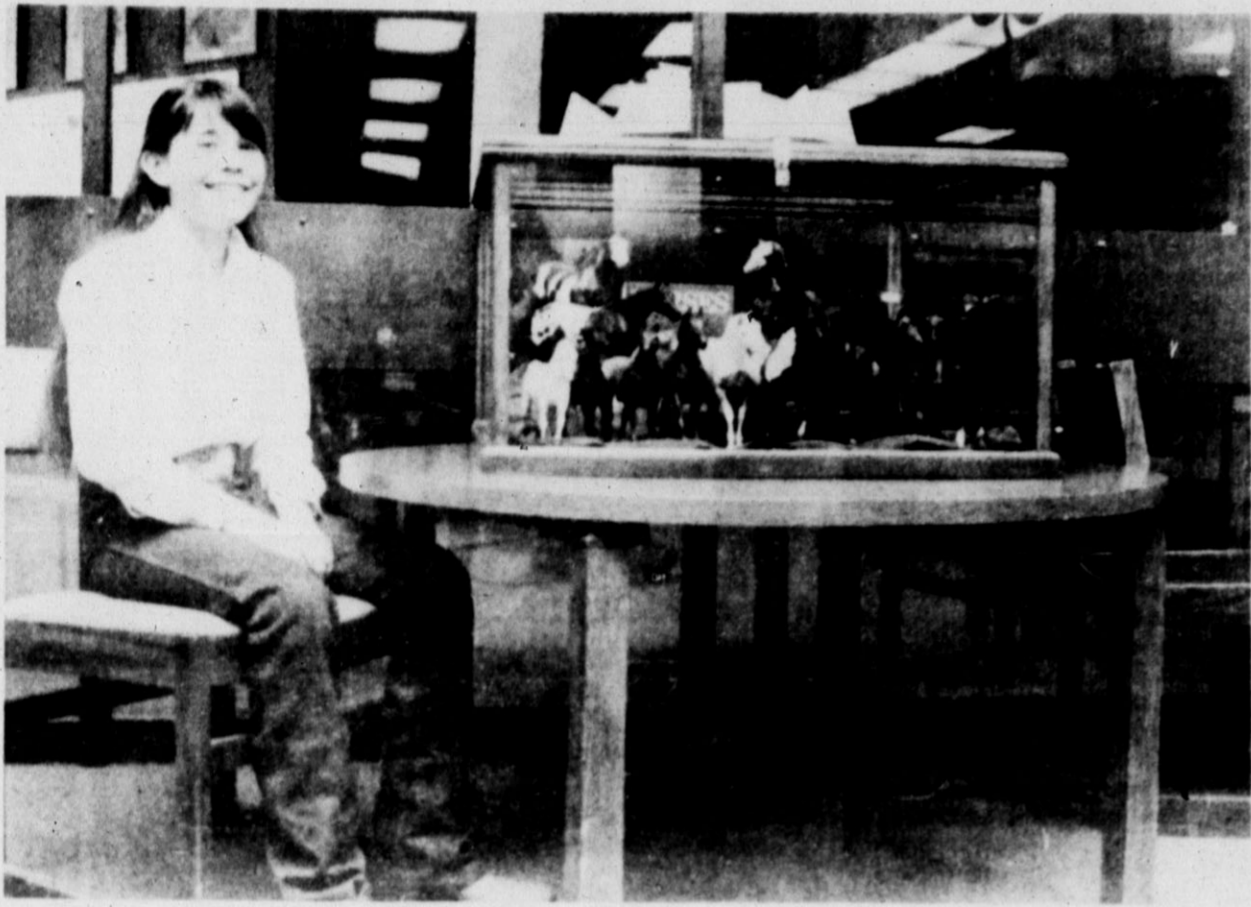

To enable senior citizens and the disabled to maintain an adequate, nutritious diet while enabling them to also retain dignity;

To reduce duplication of services given to families in Amarillo through churches and agencies; and

To train and support church staff members and volunteers in assessment of client needs.

Individuals and groups interested in helping with and supporting the Project may make arrangement to do so by contacting Rev. David Harp, Director of Development for Catholic Family Service at 376-4571.

A herd of horses belonging to Samantha Winters, 12, is on exhibit this month at the Deaf Smith County Library. The daughter of Ray and Jackie Winters has had toy horses since she was a year old, but began collecting them seriously about five years ago. At home she has live horses and keeps these models on a special shelf in her room.

Education issues debated on new television show

It's up with the lights and on with the camera for the new national television series "Focus on Education." With the school year in full swing and interest running high in Congress and the states to improve and redesign public education, this monthly series will examine the latest issues of the day challenging our schools to make the giant step into the 21st Century.

Produced in Washington, D.C. by the 630,000 member American Federation of Teachers, the show is syndicated via satellite and tape distribution each month to hundreds of cable systems and public broadcasting stations nationwide.

A 30-minute public affairs discussion program, "Focus" offers a forum for those with differing opinions on how to best deal with educating an America as complex as its population is diverse," said AFT President Albert Shanker.

"We see 'Focus on Education' as a way to help educate the public about the critical issues facing America's public schools and the related effect on our society," said Shanker. "We believe the show will help put some of the major issues facing the nation into perspective for a majority of the audience."

Each show will take an in-depth look at the breaking stories in education. By covering the issues in an objective fashion we let viewers make their own decisions based upon the facts," says Shanker.

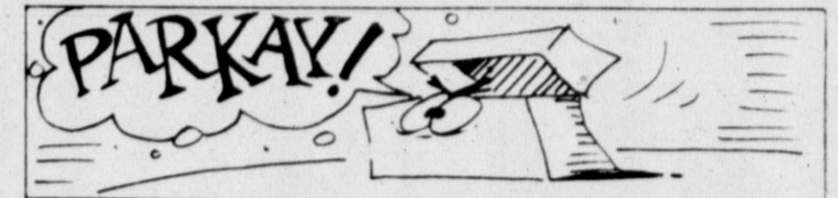

The show premiered in January with an examination of the issues surrounding textbook censorship. Guests included Chester Finn, assistant secretary of the U.S. Education Department, Anthony Podesta, president of People for the American Way and Jordan Lorence, an attorney for Concerned Women for America. Harriet Tyson-Bernstein, a nationally-recognized expert on textbooks also participated in the show.

The February show created a lively discussion on aids education featuring the U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop who sparked an uproar by saying such instruction should be mandatory and begin in the early grades. Joining Koop in the discussion was Nellie Weil, president of the National School Boards Association and a school board member in Montgomery, Alabama.

GETTING ORGANIZED

NEW YORK (AP) — There is no one right way to get organized, but the key to saving time at work or at home is to know your own work style — whether you're a right-brain or a left-brain person.

"Left-brain people are good at establishing priorities, adhering to a plan and working in a sequential orderly fashion," says time management expert Ann McGee-Cooper in Family Circle magazine. "They love structure and predictable routines, strict deadlines and working alone. They hate interruptions and clutter."

Right-brain people, on the other hand, crave variety, visual stimuli, flexibility, innovation, and they work best with many things going at the same time.

McGee-Cooper says the secret of working efficiently is to develop personalized habits that fit your own way of thinking and working. "The point is not which brain dominance or work method is better," she says. "What really matters is discovering which work style is most comfortable, effective and time-saving."

Resident's grandson marries in Dalhart

MRS. TOM SMITH
...nee Sharon Bailey

Sharon Bailey of Dalhart became the bride of Tom Smith of Dimmitt during an afternoon wedding ceremony recently at First Baptist Church in Dalhart. Officiating was Rev. David Walker.

The bride is the daughter of Mike and Jane Bailey of Dalhart. The bridegroom, son of Elbert and Frances Smith of Dimmitt is the grandson of Mrs. Homer Thomas of Hereford.

The couple spoke their vows beneath an archway adorned with greenery intermingled among satin burgundy bows which also lined the center aisle of the church. Unity candles and tapers sat atop the wedding table placed beneath the archway.

Sandy Bailey, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and Dwayne Smith, brother of the groom, served as best man.

Bridesmaids included Denise Smith, sister of the groom, and Shelly Smith, the groom's sister-in-law, both of Dimmitt. The bride's cousin, Kathy Bailey of Dalhart, served as junior bridesmaid.

Groomsmen were Dick Woodcox and Mike Kennon, both of Amarillo, and Roy Schilling of Dimmitt. Ushers were Bob Bailey, the bride's brother, and Randy Baker, both of Dalhart, and Curt Fitzgerald of Dimmitt.

The bride's cousin, Barbie Bailey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Bailey, served as flower girl.

Becky Seal of Dalhart, vocalist, was accompanied by pianist Vicky Moore, also of Dalhart.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore her mother's wedding gown of ivory silk peau de soie adorned with a large silk bow placed at the center back. Designed with a molded bodice, scooped neckline, and long-fitted sleeves tapering into petal points, the gown was further enhanced with its controlled skirt cascading into a chapel-length train.

To complete her ensemble, the bride wore a semi-wide-brimmed hat decorated with appliques and pearls, complete with a veil and train. The train spanned the length of the dress while the veil covered the bride's face.

She carried a bouquet of ivory roses which cascaded down the end of the bouquet. Loops of pearls entwined in greenery amidst the roses completed the floral arrangement.

Following the nuptials, a reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church.

At the bride's table, a crocheted table cloth also used on her mother's bride's table overlaid a burgundy cloth. Adorning the table was a centerpiece comprised of bouquets carried by the bride and junior bridesmaid. A glass hurricane candle was placed in the center to complete the arrangement.

The three-tiered wedding cake was decorated with burgundy roses. Punch and mints were served along with the cake.

The groom's table, covered with an ivory satin cloth, was enhanced by a centerpiece containing bouquets of the bridal attendants. Served from the table was an oblong chocolate cake topped with roses and a monogram. Coffee, nuts, and mints were served also.

The bride's traveling attire was an ivory suit fashioned with a peplum.

Following a wedding trip to Red River, N.M., the couple is at home in Dalhart.

The bride attended Clarendon Junior College and West Texas State University and is employed at Bailey Flying Service.

The bridegroom, a graduate of Clarendon Junior College, also is employed at Bailey Flying Service.

Latin American exports have grown in volume since the onset of a debt crisis, but their value has decreased at a rate of 4.6 percent a year since 1981, according to the Inter-American Development Bank. Merchandise exports provided 79 percent of Latin America's foreign exchange between 1978 and 1981. That figure rose to 95.5 percent in 1985.

Genealogy Society to meet

The Deaf Smith Genealogy Society will meet Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Heritage Room of the Deaf Smith County Library.

Everyone interested in genealogy is invited to attend. Yearly dues are $5 per person or $8 per couple.

WE BELIEVE:

1. It is an outrage for the DOE to consider dumping high-level nuclear waste in the bountiful farmland of Deaf Smith County,
2. The DOE can still be stopped from characterizing a site in Texas if we act as diligent Americans working through the democratic process,
3. Nothing good can be accomplished through threats, acts of violence, vandalism or any destructive means which could harm the community's spirit,
4. Our community can achieve unity by concentrating on common goals of public safety, good stewardship of our natural resources and sane economic growth,
5. And, you can help us work toward these goals by being at the Community Center ballroom at 7 p.m. Thursday, March 12, for an organizational meeting.

4-H'ERS SPEAK UP FOR BETTER COMMUNICATION
By Beverly Harder
County Extension Agent

More effective communication may be one solution to closing, or at least narrowing, the generation gap. Thirty Deaf Smith County 4-H young people from 9 to 19 in the 4-H public speaking program are working to establish better rapport with adults—and with peers.

Through learn-by-doing activities, these 4-H'ers become skilled and confident in presenting their ideas formally to an audience. As a result, they are better able to get their message across clearly and convincingly in informal, everyday situations.

The 4-H public speaking program teaches 4-H'ers to:

—Choose an interesting topic, research is thoroughly, organize carefully, then write an outline.

—Speak clearly and loudly enough to be heard throughout the room and avoid nervous mannerisms.

—Capture audience attention; open with an anecdote, startling statement or quotation.

—Cover no more than three to five main points to the body of the speech.

—Stick to the time limit. Close with a summary of major points and an effective quotation, surprise statement or appeal for action.

The county contest for 4-H'ers participating in these activities will be held April 16th at 7:00 in the Heritage Room of the County Library with the public invited to attend. Subjects covered in the demonstration speeches include: horticulture, horse, sheep, beef feeding and care, foods and clothing, natural resources, health, dairy, and a recreational-fun skit.

4-H'ers and 4-H parents desiring to be a part of the public speaking project are asked to call the Extension Office for more details, (364-3573).

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion handicap or national origin.

Ann Landers Therapy should heal rifts

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My best friend has had problems with her mother for as long as I can remember. "Wendy" has complained over the years about her mother's nagging. ("Stop smoking, you are killing yourself." "Quit wasting time on that bum. He's a heavy drinker and will never amount to anything." "You hair is too long." "Don't wear jeans to church," etc., etc.) Wendy is 26 and shares an apartment with two roommates.

Last year Wendy developed colitis. Her physician suggested psychotherapy. She now sees an analyst who charges $90 for 45 minutes. She took a second job to pay him. Four months into her therapy Wendy was not speaking to her sister and three weeks ago she told her mother she never wants to see her again. It's terribly sad. Her mother phones me periodically and asks if Wendy is all right.

My question is this: Why is it that almost everybody who goes into therapy ends up not talking to mother, father, sister or brother or winds up divorced? It seems to be a therapist should heal rifts and bind wounds instead of encouraging patients to ring off permanently from their closest relatives.

Please deal with this in your column, because I am - Mystified in Morristown.

DEAR M.M.: I believe the truly competent therapists are far-seeing and compassionate. They help their patients deal with disruptive and abrasive personalities instead of suggesting that relationships be severed.

Of course it's easier to ring off when people become difficult and troublesome, but blood is thicker than water and the consequences of permanent estrangement are often loneliness, anguish and regret.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: That bitter letter from "A Mother of Two at 21," pleading with teenagers to practice birth control, made me decide to write and tell you what worked in our house.

When our eldest son was in eighth grade and began to notice that girls were cute instead of a pain in the neck, I decided it was time to speak to him. (He is now 35. This was at the height of the free-love, flower-children era).

I said, "I have thought a great deal about 'the new morality' and I have only one thing to say to you. Please listen carefully because this is important. Before you begin to get involved with a young lady, take a long, hard look at her. If you don't want to spend the next 15 years living with that person, raising a child that you share, you'd better make darned sure you don't get carried away and create a new life. Sex is not something you do for entertainment and then forget about. It can be a very serious business and change your life forever." (P.S. None of our children ever got into trouble.)—The Smiths in Salmie, Ore.

DEAR SMITHS: That little speech gets high marks from this corner. Eighth grade is not a minute too soon to give it. Thanks for sharing.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Another side to the piped-in music for the caller on hold: I find music a great improvement over dead silence after being put on hold, not knowing whether I have been cut off or forgotten about completely. At least with the music playing, you know you are going to hear a human voice eventually.—E.G. in Grass Valley

DEAR E.G.: Ninety-five percent of the people who wrote to me said they hated to be put on hold and forced to listen to music they didn't care for, or worse yet, a commercial. Thanks for providing another view.

A no-nonsense approach to how to deal with life's most difficult and most rewarding arrangement, Ann Landers' booklet, "Marriage - What to Expect," will prepare you for better or worse. Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611, enclosing 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Authorities to discuss legal, ethical concerns

A panel of authorities will discuss the legal and ethical concerns of nurses March 26-27 in a seminar offered by the Continuing Nursing Education program of the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center School of Nursing.

"It Depends: A Realistic Look at Some Legal Concerns for Nurses" will update nurses on legal and ethical issues. The seminar will be 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. both days in Health Sciences Center, Room 2B152.

The course is designed to help clarify legal and ethical principles for nurses. Lecturers will explain the difference between legal and ethical concerns, define how medical records can be used in court and describe proper procedure for a nurse testifying in court.

Other topics will include negligence, liability, deceptive trade practices, malpractice, informed consent, delegation and termination of life support.

A role play of giving a deposition will allow participants to see a lawsuit from the point of view of plaintiff and defendant.

Faculty for the seminar will include Doreen Bartlett, a registered nurse and attorney with Fulbright and Jaworski of Houston; Ray Toburen, chief investigator for the Texas Board of Nurse Examiners; John Simpson III, attorney with Splawn and Simpson Inc. of Lubbock and Philip Johnson, attorney with Crenshaw, Dupree and Milam of Lubbock.

Fee for the course, which is worth 12 continuing nursing education units, is $34 by March 12 or $49 later. The Continuing Nursing Education program is accredited by the Western Regional Accreditation Committee of the American Nurses' Association.

Shakespeare's works to be discussed at art seminar

Shakespearean dramas and the way they reflect English Renaissance culture and human nature will be the subject of a lecture at 11 a.m. Tuesday at The Museum of Texas Tech University.

Texas Tech English Professor Jeri Tanner will discuss Shakespeare's histories, tragedies and comedies at the weekly art seminar sponsored by the Women's Council of the West Texas Museum Association (WTMA).

Registration and coffee begin at 10:30 a.m. Registration is $3.

"Through detachment and artistic versatility, Shakespeare depicts man's doctrines and traditions, problems and passions and constructive and destructive actions," Dr. Tanner said. "He portrays mankind at its best and worst. Shakespeare's worlds of war and peace, guilt and innocence, tolerance and prejudice, cynicism and idealism still exist."

Tanner said Shakespeare's chronicle histories detail the rise and fall of kings and the sickness of the kingdom through treachery, murder, war and changing fortunes.

"The great tragedies, such as 'Hamlet' and 'Macbeth', demonstrate how the intensity of feeling, whether it be love, jealousy, fear, grief or ambition, often destroys the great but limited hero," she said. "Often, too late, the tragic hero recognizes his defect."

A Flair for Design

Simple glazed walls are not difficult and give a nice effect in a painted room. Over our base coat, use a thin glaze, and a good glazing brush. Make multidirectional brush strokes, so that your pattern remains random, and soft. Be careful of drips as they could ruin the look you are trying to achieve. If you are using an oil base finish, the glaze must be made of thinned varathane, tinted with a small amount of artist oil color or universal tints, to get the color glaze you want. Be careful that the colors are completely mixed since even a tiny speck can become a big streak on your wall.
Trial and error is the name of the game here, so patience is your best asset. The results are worth the effort though, so don't despair if you have difficulty at first.

Where Are Your Valuable Papers?

Important money matters - insurance, savings, investments, real estate - create lots of paperwork. Once you sign those papers you may forget about them. And then when you need them the most they may be nowhere to be found.

It's just good household management to periodically take inventory of your valuable papers. It will help you locate the papers when they are needed, direct someone else to them in case of emergency and evaluate your financial affairs on a routine basis.

Prepare an inventory of valuable documents on paper or your home computer. Review it at least once a year and update it whenever important changes occur.

You might also want to prepare an inventory for an older relative, since you could be the person who needs to locate his or her important papers.

An inventory could include the following categories:

-A family record listing names, birthdates and where the birth is recorded for each family member.

-The name, address and telephone number of persons who should be notified in case of serious emergency.

-The name, address and telephone number of a person to whom you have given power of attorney.

-The names, addresses and telephone numbers of your family advisors. These may include an accountant, banker, broker, financial planner, insurance agent, doctor, clergy and attorney.

-The location of your valuable papers including wills and instructions, personal papers, property papers and real estate papers.

-A list of all financial accounts, including the name and address of the firm, the identification or account number and in whose name the account is carried. This may include accounts with banks, savings and loan associations and credit unions.

-A list of real estate and business interests you own, including mortgages. Basic information for each property would include the kind of property, location, ownership situation, the date acquired and purchase price.

-A list of your stocks, bonds, securities, mutual funds, property insurance, life insurance and annuities; accident, disability and hospital insurance; and other personal property you own, such as household furnishings and automobiles.

-Information concerning social security, retirement, pension and profit sharing plans. Dates of employment and employers are frequently needed for filing applications and settling estates.

-A list of money owed, and owed to you, size of debt and terms of payment.

Making an inventory of valuable papers is a major task. Once you set up a system, however, updating as changes occur is not as formidable.

A variety of forms and computer software programs for financial inventories are available from commercial outlets and the County Extension office has a booklet to help you get started on a financial inventory. Please ask for B-1330, Setting Your Household in Order.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socio-economic levels, race, color, sex, religion, handicap, or national origin.

Chargeback rule protects consumers from losing money

A little-known safeguard built into the federal Fair Credit Billing Act can protect consumers from losing money on credit card purchases, says family finance expert Nancy Granovsky.

"A consumer can eliminate a disputed payment from a credit card bill by requesting a chargeback," says the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service home economist. "A chargeback simply means the disputed payment has been charged against the merchant or creditor rather than the consumer."

If your problem is a billing error, such as being overcharged, you must notify the card issuer of the problem within 60 days of the date of the last statement.

"Withhold payment or ask for a credit when you notify the company," she advises. "The card issuer must answer within two billing cycles or 90 days, whichever comes first."

"When the problem involves defective or shoddy goods, poor service, no refund or exchange, first approach the merchant with your problem," says the specialist. "If you're still not satisfied call or write the card issuer, just as you would if it's a billing problem."

Granovsky says the chargeback feature lets you withhold payment on that portion of the account that is in dispute while the problem is being resolved.

"Whenever you have a problem with a bill, don't send your letter to the same address as your credit card payment. Send the letter to the address for inquiries or complaints that's listed separately on your bill," emphasizes the home economist.

She says the letter should include your name, address, credit-card number, the facts of the dispute, an indication that you have talked with the merchant if the dispute is over the merchandise, the amount of payment you are withholding and your signature.

"Any letter should also state explicitly that you are requesting a chargeback under the special rules of the Fair Credit Billing Act," Granovsky advises.

Unique photographs being displayed at art building

A series of images by Albuquerque, N.M., photographer Soledad Biagi Marjon will be on display until March 13 in the S.R.O. Gallery in the subbasement hallway of the Texas Tech University Art Building.

The exhibit, titled "Other Women," encompasses 12 photographs that are tinted with colors. Marjon uses herself as subject-model and by pose and environment represents other women she admires and wishes to emulate.

"Other Women" is dedicated to the many women, both family and friends, who have always been a major source of strength in my life. The series is an attempt to explore my fantasies about women which I may have been in the past, women which I may one day be, the many women which I am in the present. I see the images as a sort of prism through which I might catch a glimpse of the many colored refractions of myself," Marjon said.

Marjon has taught photography at the University of New Mexico since 1980. Other one-person exhibitions include "Pink Passions," a 1981 exhibit at Der Alte Cowboy Gallery, and "Ultramarine," a 1982 show at Meridian Gallery, both in Albuquerque. Her exhibit "Other Women" showed in 1986 at the Ariel Gallery in the Soho area of New York City.

Included in several photography publications, Marjon's work has been exhibited throughout the United States, most recently in New York City, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Boulder, Colo., Albuquerque, Taos and Santa Fe.

Former Dallas Cowboy player to speak at annual event

West Texas State University's third annual Weekend With Wellness has tackled a winner this year, Drew Pearson, aka "Mr. Clutch" and former Dallas Cowboy great, will make the keynote address at the closing session of the March 27-28 weekend.

Pearson began his career as an overachiever at South River High School in South River, New Jersey, as a quarterback. In college he converted to a flanker for the University of Tulsa and was recognized as the team's "best spirited and most unselfish" member, this besides catching 33 passes. He graduated from Tulsa in 1972 and went on to his illustrious career as one of the Cowboy's, and the NFL's, top receivers, setting a mark of 489 career receptions and leading the NFC in 1976 with 58 receptions for that year.

He has been named one of the Top 20 Pro Football All-Time Leading Receivers, a member of the 1970s NFL Hall of Fame's All-Decade Team, a three-time NFL All-Pro and Pro-Bowl Selection in 1974, 1976 and 1977. He served as offensive captain for the Cowboys in 1977, '78, '82 and '83. Not finding enough to do in football, he organized and coached an off-season Cowboys basketball team, The Dallas Hoopsters. He was named NFL Man of the Year by Miller Bear in 1980.

Pearson acquired his nickname, "Mr. Clutch," because of his game-winning receptions, in the process creating some of football's most memorable moments: an 83-yard fourth-quarter touchdown reception to beat the LA Rams in the 1973 playoffs; a 50-yard catch in the closing seconds to beat the Redskins in 1974; two vital catches in the final 3:40 at Atlanta in the 1980 playoffs; and who can forget the 50-yard "Hail Mary" touchdown reception to beat Minnesota in the final 20 seconds in the 1975 playoffs.

Since retiring from football, Pearson has done sports commentary for CBS in 1984-85 and joined the Cowboy's coaching staff for the 1985-86 season. He has also anchored sports for KENS-TV, a CBS affiliate, and worked with ESPN and HBO. Since September, 1986 he has been the featured reporter for HBO's "Inside the NFL."

Living up to a reputation as an over-achiever is tough, but Pearson does an admirable job of it: He sponsors an annual All-Star Banquet in memory of his late father and brother. The proceeds from this event have made possible 10 scholarships. He has been awarded the Distinguished American Award from the Central New Jersey Chapter of the National Football Foundation for his extensive civic work. He is on the Community Advisory Board of the Transplant and Resource Center in Dallas and serves on the Advisory Committee for Multiple Careers Magnet Business Center in Dallas. Additionally, he is a Board member of TROT (Therapeutic Riding of Texas), a campaign spokesman for the Texas Easter Seals Society, Back-A-Fighter Campaign and the Distilled Spirits Council, which battles teenage alcohol abuse. He also serves on the International Advisory Board of the American Police Academy in Washington, D.C. He is currently President of Drew Pearson Enterprises, which competes in retail and corporate America selling and licensing products to promote corporate identity.

Tickets will be available for Drew Pearson's address at the fourth and concluding general session for Weekend With Wellness scheduled for 5 p.m. Saturday, March 28.

As a prelude to Pearson's remarks, WTSU's Weekend With Wellness offers workshops to help with "Balancing Your Life." With topics such as prevention of low back pain, low-calorie cooking, the heart at work, stress management, total wellness programs, water aerobics, weight training, and creative aging, there should be something for everyone. On Saturday, March 28, the American Heart Association will sponsor the annual Well-come Spring 5K Run. For more information about Weekend With Wellness or for registration forms contact the WTSU Division of Nursing at 656-3531.

Between the Covers

By DIANNE PIERSON
Director

Novels are featured this week at the Deaf Smith County Library. The two novels are "The Red White and Blue" by John Gregory Dunne and "Brothers" by William Goldman. Dunne is the acclaimed author of "Dutch Shea, Jr." and "True Confessions."

In "Red and White and Blue" you meet the Brodericks of San Francisco and the world; a family whose fortune is so vast "The New York Times" uses charts to illustrate their holdings. Jack Broderick, is a reporter on his father's paper who becomes a Hollywood screenwriter. His father, Hugh, is an influential man who has turned down cabinet posts with three presidents. "Bro", the elder son, has rejected the family's almost billion dollars and is now the most prominent priest in the country. Leah, Jack's first ex-wife, is a dynamic lawyer immersed in radical causes and loved by all three Broderick men. It is Leah's volatile presence that ultimately changes all their lives, as Jack's actions inadvertently bring about the startling climax.

"The Red White and Blue" is a vidid and unforgettable reading experience, a bold portrait of a family, and a nation, besieged by history.

"Brothers" by William Goldman begins with this setting: on a quiet street in a peaceful English village, two small brothers buy candy at a sweetshop and then disappear in a wrenching explosion. A tough New York cabbie and his streetwise girlfriend submit without protest to the perverted demands of a total stranger. A young couple with everything to live for suddenly and inexplicably take their own lives! With these unlinked events, "Brothers" begins. Yet alongside these startling scenes comes an even more astonishing revelation.

On an isolated island in the Caribbean, a man slowly regathers his once-lost strength. His fingerprints have been removed, his voice thickened, his face altered beyond all recognition. This is the man thought by the world of "Marathon Man" to be dead, an indestructible killing professional who has been summoned into service once again by the ultrasecret Division. Enter in an unfamiliar world after his six-year limbo, he soon learns the terrifying thrust of his mission:

There is going to be a war. America is going to start it. He is only one of three people alive who knows it. And he is the single man designated to stop it. To do this he must ally himself with the man who hates him the most. If both can survive, then the world can survive. "Brothers" is the sequel to "Marathon Man" by William Goldman. Goldman is also the author of "Magic," "Tinsel," and "Boys and Girls Together."

MALNUTRITION

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — "Victims of chronic malnutrition — especially young children — suffer lifelong mental and emotional difficulties even after they have supposedly 'recovered' from the most obvious physical effects," says Dr. Janina Galler in Bostonia magazine.

Galler, director of the Center for Behavioral Development and Mental Retardation at Boston University School of Medicine, says, "The brain is severely affected by chronic malnutrition but the damage does not simply occur then. Rather, there appears to be some ongoing impact on the programming of the brain which may not appear until later in development."

Some children who have been chronically malnourished continue to show below-normal scores on tests of abstract reasoning, logical and relational thinking, language development, reading, writing, IQ and social relations well after their diets have improved.

COMPUTERS SELL FURNITURE

TOKYO (AP) — A department store in Tokyo's Ginza — in contrast to its clothing, books, art and other merchandise sections — has no items on display in its furniture department, reports MIS Week.

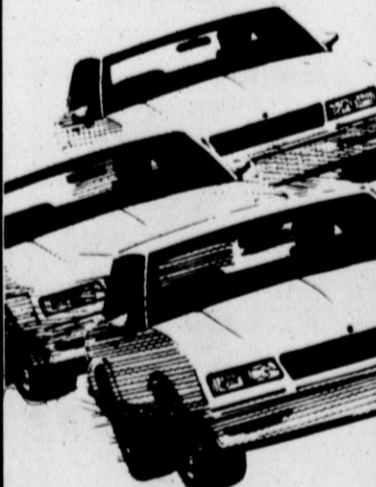

Instead, furniture is sold by means of a personal computer and optical disk system that prints three-dimensional images in color on a computer screen, according to the management information services publication.

The images show customers how furniture they select from a video library would look in various interior settings.

The store's system has 5,000 items of furniture in 3,300 frames of an optical disk. In-store consultants first interview customers to determine their tastes in furniture styling, their preferred lifestyle and the intended place of use.

Medical illustrator's 'aged' drawing locates missing girl

You may have received one today—a postcard with a drawing of a missing child. You probably glanced at it and threw it away. But the picture on that seemingly insignificant piece of paper could change lives.

Lewis Sadler, director of Medical Illustration Services and associate professor of biomedical illustration at The University of Texas Health Science Center at Dallas, says over 1,000 children are reportedly abducted each year and the number of those located is unfortunately low.

However, on Feb. 10, 1987, Stephanie Michno beat the odds. She was reunited with her mother after being missing 10 years.

At age 3, Stephanie was allegedly abducted from her home in North Carolina by her father. Sue Fowler, her mother who had legal custody, began a search for Stephanie through the local authorities, but this method proved frustrating and unsuccessful for eight years.

In 1985 the newly formed North Carolina Center for Missing Children distributed posters of the 3-year-old girl. The next year the center asked Sadler to "age" the original photo nine years—in essence, to create a picture of 12-year-old Stephanie.

This photo was distributed on direct mailing address cards and posters across the United States. In less than a year Stephanie was identified in Albuquerque and reunited with her mother.

This case was one of the oldest open cases of a missing child in the country, said North Carolina Governor Jim Martin in welcoming Stephanie and her mother back. And one of the peculiarities of this case is that Sadler, who flew to North Carolina for Stephanie's reception, freely admits his drawing did not look much like her.

"It was not all that close," he says, "but there are some things that are impossible to account for. She was a pudgy 3-year-old, but is extremely thin at 13. She also had an interesting smile but now has a mouth full of braces. And of course, her hairstyle has changed considerably."

There must have been something special, however, to result in two sightings of a 13-year-old from an "aged" 3-year-old's picture. Sadler explains that there is a unique quality of human faces that is as individual as a fingerprint.

"There was something about Stephanie's expression that two separate people recognized in the drawing," he says. "I've been involved in studies that demonstrate how recognition is made. For example, we asked participants to describe their best friend. Most of these people couldn't tell us the color of their friend's eyes or the shape of the mouth, but that didn't stop them from recognizing their friend. We are given more clues than we use to identify someone. It is not so important that the drawing is 100 percent accurate but that we get an overall effect that works. We want a person to look at the picture and identify the missing child."

The work of Lew Sadler and Scott Barrows has accounted for 14 children found out of 45 drawings. Barrows is a former UTHSCD medical illustrator now living in Chicago. They are the only two illustrators of missing children using a scientific technique to predict facial growth and differentiation.

Sadler, who developed this technique, explains, "We locate up to 43 anatomical points on the face. We have compiled statistics on the changes that happen at and between those individual points over a period of years on a "normal" child. We have a complete list of changes for Caucasian children between the ages of 6 and 18. We note the variance between the missing child's statistics and our normal child's. Then we look at a normal child's statistics a certain number of years later. Here we use the variance to figure out new points for the aged child. We plot the anatomical points on paper and fill in the characteristic features. Very basically, it is like a dot-to-dot drawing."

There are plenty of surprises that can distort the aged picture. "We're dealing with one instance of a child's life. One freezing of time in a photograph. We can't predict growth spurts or stops. There is the added problem of braces, glasses and hairstyles," Sadler says.

Sadler, who does not accept money for this work, spends approximately 20 hours completing one drawing. Therefore, it is virtually impossible for him to draw even a few of the different possibilities for each child. "We already have a large waiting list," he explains. "It is not easy telling a parent that he or she has to wait."

This problem could be avoided with the use of a special system that would computerize the measurements and graphics involved in facial growth. Sadler says it would speed up the time devoted to the original drawing and make it much easier to depict different hairstyles, glasses, braces and weight gain or loss. The medical illustrators are still looking for funding to establish this $300,000 computer center.

Program on drip irrigation highlights club meeting

Wyche Extension Homemakers Club met in the home of Argen Draper recently.

Audrey Rusher conducted the meeting and Carol Odom served as secretary. Esther Thuett gave the council delegate report.

Members said the TEHA prayer and the pledge to the U.S. flag and Texas flag.

Coreen Odom was recognized as a new member.

Roll call was answered by members with "the most foolish purchase I have ever made."

Carol Odom introduced Courtney Brooke who gave a program on drip irrigation.

During the show-and-tell portion of the meeting, Virgie Duncan showed a pieced quilt patterned by her mother. Rusher showed some ceramic plates she had painted with colored chalk.

Carol Odom was elected as a nominee to the district TEHA spring meeting in Stratford. Delegates will be elected at council March 23.

Members present included Louise Axe, Beverly Brooke Draper, Duncan, Camelia Jones, Carol Odom, Coreen Odom, Pet Ott, Rusher, Thuett, and Clara Trowbridge.

The next meeting will be March 23 at 2:30 p.m. in the home of Audrey Rusher.

Food choices influenced by people outside family

For school-age children and teenagers in particular, the influence of people outside the family plays an important role in what foods the kids eat.

Those were among the conclusions of a U.S. Department of Agriculture survey of 9000 children and teenagers between the ages of 6 and 18.

"Parents often control the food choices of children, and to a lesser extent, those of younger teenagers," says Dr. Dymple Cooksey, a nutritionist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service.

"Food choices of older teenagers, however, probably are more influenced by people outside the home," she says. "The USDA study shows that the percentage of eating occasions shared with other household members declines with increasing age through the teen years, and the percentage eaten alone increases."

"The survey also indicates that youngsters are getting more and more of their nutrients from snacks rather than meals," Cooksey remarks. "On the average, children aged 6 to 11 get about 18 percent of their calories from snacks, for teenagers this figure rises to 21 percent."

According to the nutritionist, the snacks preferred by 6 to 11 year olds in the study were bakery products, including cookies, cakes and pies, soft drinks, milk, ice cream, puddings, candy, fruit and salty snacks.

The most popular snacks among teenage boys were soft drinks, milk, bakery products, bread, milk desserts, salty snacks, meats and fruits. Teenage girls preferred soft drinks, bakery products, milk desserts, salty snacks, fruit, milk, candy and bread.

"Several of the snacks, such as milk, bread and fruit are good sources of one or more essential nutrients," the nutritionist says. "But snacks such as soft drinks and candy provide few nutrients in relation to calories."

Choosing retail, industrial market

Buyers likely to shift investments in 1987

As the real estate market reels from the dual blows of severe overbuilding and the effects of tax reform legislation, buyers will turn to retail and industrial space investments rather than office buildings in 1987.

Owners will also rely on intelligent, creative management of their properties to ensure a good return on their investments.

These are the opinions of three real estate and asset management specialists writing in the January/February issue of the Journal of Property Management. Blake Eagle, senior vice president and director of real estate for the Frank Russell Company, Tacoma, Washington; Mike E. Miles, Ph.D., foundation professor of urban development at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill; and Kenneth Rosen, Ph.D., chairman of the Center for Real Estate and Urban Economics and professor at the University of California at Berkeley, discussed the effects of the tax law on real estate, the long-range outlook for real estate and the emerging role of the sophisticated property manager today.

The biggest problem facing the real estate market today is the tremendous surplus of office space, which has led to skyrocketing vacancies, below-market rents and declining property values in many of the nation's major markets.

"All of this should result in a very loud signal to the capital markets saying, 'Stop the money flow; we have enough office buildings,'" said Blake Eagle.

The authors feel that retail space, which is driven by supply and demand, and industrial developments, which are still doing well overall, will perform well for investors in the future.

The recently-passed Tax Reform Act will have an immediate impact on real estate, according to the authors. The legislation will initially reduce property values and cause a dramatic drop in new construction, particularly in the area of low-income housing, which relied almost entirely on tax-shelter benefits to make construction feasible.

"Tax reform and supply/demand imbalance will result in somewhat lower short-term prices for all real estate," pointed out Kenneth Rosen.

However, the overall effect of the tax bill will be positive, he believes.

"Real estate development should always have been based on sound economic demand," he maintained.

"Tax benefits are nice, but where they were excessive, they caused abuse."

Several other important social issues will affect real estate development in the near future, including an increasing immigrant population (especially in the West and Southwest), the availability of fresh water, and the rapidly growing elderly population.

According to Rosen, the current surplus of office space should be absorbed within the next five to seven years, allowing developers to begin new projects.

Foreign investors will also play a major role in real estate development in the future. The Japanese are now investing heavily in American real estate, and European investors will probably follow shortly.

The tax reforms may also lead owners to focus more on existing income-producing real estate than on development real estate, according to Blake Eagle.

"Under the new tax act, current income will be more important to investors than future capital growth," he explained. "And if real estate continues to produce returns equivalent to long-term bond rates, investors may hold real estate for longer periods than in the past."

Due to all of these changes, owners will have to take a new approach to their investments, particularly with the loss or reduction of tax benefits.

"Real estate," explained Eagle, "will be analyzed on the basis of economic return instead of tax benefits. This will be healthier for the market in the long run."

In order to achieve the maximum return on their investments in this changing market, owners will turn to property managers who possess a keen understanding of the asset management field. All three authors believe that property management will be the most important factor in the success of any real estate investment.

"This is going to be the golden age of property management," Mike Miles foresees. He feels that property managers with extensive knowledge in such fields as marketing, renovation and engineering will be in great demand in 1987 and beyond.

"No longer can we just build buildings," concluded Eagle. "They must be converted to productive investment assets. This will require proactive property management."

These remarks appear in the article, "The Real Estate Market in 1987: Three Perspectives," in the January/February issue of the Journal of Property Management. For a free copy of the article, write to the Journal of IREM, 430 N. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Highest national sales rate set

WASHINGTON - An unsurpassed national sales rate for previously-owned housing units was recorded during the final quarter of 1986 by the National Association of Realtors.

A seasonally adjusted annual resale rate of 4.37 million single-family homes, town houses and condominiums was set during the fourth quarter, topping the previous record of 4.26 million made during the same period in 1978.

The unprecedented national volume had been anticipated by the NAR. "We had expected resale activity to be extremely strong, due to the decrease in mortgage interest rates," said NAR chief economist John Tuccillo.

Quarterly surveys by the NAR gauge sales volume of single-family and individually sold multi-family units on a state-by-state basis. Increases in home sales, compared to a year earlier, were recorded during the fourth quarter in 40 states and the District of Columbia. Fourteen states from all regions of the United States showed a resale spurt of 20 percent or higher compared with activity in those states during the fourth quarter of 1985. Twelve additional states experienced a volume increase of more than 10 percent compared with the previous year's figures.

Hawaii recorded a 50 percent jump, making it the leader for percentage changes in resale volume. Wisconsin was next, with a 40.1 percent increase; followed by Pennsylvania, with a 36.2 percent increase; California, with a 34.6 percent increase; and Washington, with a 33.1 percent increase.

California, with an annual rate of 579,100 resales, topped all states in volume for the fourth quarter. Next strongest resale volume was in Pennsylvania, with 312,200 resales; Texas, with 257,600; New York with 237,100; and Florida, with 230,300.

The NAR is predicting a stronger level of resales for 1987, with a 2 percent increase in volume over the total 1986 market. Continued affordability of housing will fuel steady buying and selling throughout the year. "We expect mortgage interest rates to gradually decline during the first half of the year, and then gradually increase toward the second half," Tuccillo said. He pointed out that no substantial rate movement, either down or up, is anticipated. "By the end of '87, they should be about where they were at the end of '86."

During the fourth quarter, mortgage interest rates were at their lowest level since the third quarter of 1978. The average effective interest rate (including points paid at closing) for loans closed on existing homes was 9.82 percent.

As the year progresses, rising home prices could affect the increase in buying power resulting from the declining mortgage interest rates, Tuccillo noted. "Price increases will make it a little less clear where affordability will go," he said. "But, we do expect housing to remain affordable."

The National Association of Realtors is the nation's largest trade association, representing more than 750,000 members involved in all segments of the real estate industry.

Insulation advice given

Michael Krach, vice president, Owens-Corning Fiberglas, offers these tips on buying and installing insulation:

— First, measure the area to be insulated and multiply the length and width to get the square footage required. Next, determine how wide the insulation should be.

Insulation usually is installed between attic joists or wall studs and the space between them almost always is 22½ inches or 14½ inches, depending on local building codes and the age of the house. Therefore, typical insulation material required is designated either 24 to 23 inches, or 16 to 15 inches in width.

— Determine if you need a vapor barrier and what is the proper insulation thickness or R-value.

If the area already has some insulation, use unfaced insulation — without a vapor barrier. If there is no insulation, install a material faced with aluminum foil paper. The facing should be installed towards the warm-in-winter side of the construction.

Residences for elderly fast growing market

Housing designed for elderly residents is one of the fastest-growing segments of the rental industry today. The steadily increasing number of elderly people who continue to live independently has created a huge market for housing that meets their specific needs. However, due to its unique features, housing for the elderly requires specialized, expert management in order to be successful.

In order to help train property managers to work in this field, the Institute of Real Estate Management (IREM) has created "Managing Housing for the Elderly," a new seminar focusing on the skills managers need to run housing for the elderly.

This unique two-day seminar investigates in detail the entire spectrum of managing housing specifically designed for elderly tenants. Participants will learn how to work with developers and owners to create and maintain special architectural features, determine staff needs and prepare site budgets.

Equal attention is given to the issue of working with tenants, which, according to the seminar developers, is perhaps the most important aspect of managing housing for the elderly. Seminar participants will learn how to counsel their tenants and how to build a good professional relationship between residents and managers.

Other topics covered in the seminar include:

- financing/budgeting;
- designing the layout of the units and common areas;
- designing for safety and security;
- creating marketing techniques;
- creating tenant policies;
- creating admissions and de-admissions policies; and
- preparing special activities programs for tenants.

The need for this type of housing is expected to grow more than 60 percent over the next 30 years. Real estate professionals (and property managers in particular) who are involved in this field now, or who are planning to enter this challenging market, cannot afford to be without the valuable information contained in this seminar.

"Managing Housing for the Elderly" will be held six times this year: in Chicago, April 9-10; Orlando, Florida, May 7-8; Phoenix, Arizona, May 28-29; Philadelphia, September 17-18; Dallas, October 15-16; and San Diego, November 5-6.

The cost of the seminar is $265 per person with three or more students attending from the same firm who register together at least five weeks prior to the course date; $275 for individuals registering at least five weeks prior to the registration date; and $295 for all others.

To register, or to receive more information, contact Wyla Dunlap at IREM, 430 N. Michigan, Avenue, Chicago, Illinois 60611-4090, (312)661-1930.

Find The Right Loan For You.

Found that ideal house you've been searching for? Just as much diligence should be given to selecting a lender and a mortgage loan.

There are several types of mortgage loans available and not any one kind will meet everyone's needs. FHA loans will be discussed in this article, with other types of loans to be covered in succeeding weeks.

Federal Housing Administration (FHA) loans are 100% endorsed by the federal government. This fixed rate mortgage loan may be assumed; however, should you sell the house on an assumption within the first two years of ownership, the prospective buyer must be approved by FHA, thereby releasing you of liability. After two years, the loan may be assumed without FHA approval but you would remain liable for the note should the buyer default. There are no maximum income limits, but there is a maximum loan amount of $67,500.00. The minimum downpayment of 3-4% is much less than normally required on conventional loans. FHA loans are readily obtained, and there is no penalty for early prepayment.

FHA loan? It could be the mortgage loan you need. Ask your lender for full details.

Home sales up in Texas

During the fourth quarter 1986, the rate of existing home sales in Texas increased 16.4 percent, over the same period in 1985. This increase follows declines of 9.6 percent and 4.1 percent in the first two quarters, and a slight increase of 1.7 percent in the third quarter, according to Bill Stinson, president of the Texas Association of Realtors (TAR).

"In view of the economic conditions adversely affecting us last year, this is a surprisingly strong performance for Texas," Stinson said. "Investor interest is one factor in this increase and an indicator of strong faith in Texas' economy."

On a seasonally-adjusted annual basis, the rate of existing home sales in Texas rose to 257,600 units during the fourth quarter of 1986, compared to 221,300 units in the same three-month period in 1985.

Texas ranked third in the nation in overall resale activity, behind California and Pennsylvania. Forty states experienced increases in resale activity. The sales rate for the nation as a whole was up 15 percent over fourth quarter 1985, hitting an all time record level of 4,370,000. The last record was set in the fourth quarter 1978.

"This increase is the result of the lowest interest rates in eight years which has made homes more affordable," said Stinson. "At the same time, prices have appreciated above the inflation rate as a result of supply and demand. It looks like things have bottomed out and will start to improve from here."

TAR, the largest trade association in Texas, has more than 56,000 members. TAR is dedicated to increased professionalism in the real estate industry and belongs to the National Association of Realtors.

TAR to monitor bills

The Texas Association of REALTORS (TAR) will participate in or monitor more than 600 bills—such as homestead, tort reform, county authority, land use restrictions and licensing of real estate appraisers—which could affect either Texas homeowners or the real estate business during the upcoming session of the Texas Legislature.

State budget problems head the list of issues, as outlined in an article in the January issue of TEXAS REALTOR magazine.

Legislators must solve the problem of the current budget as well as write a balanced budget for the next biennium. In addition to the current budget's approximate $980 million shortfall, the deficit of needed revenues for the next biennium is expected to be $4.5 billion.

The most obvious method of raising new revenues is to increase the sales tax or extend the base of items to be taxed. If the sales tax is extended to services, such an extension could make things such as home remodeling and repair, construction labor, architectural and engineering services, advertising and real estate brokerage commissions taxable.
