

Gemayel accepts eight-point settlement

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Amin Gemayel has accepted an eight-point Saudi Arabian plan for achieving a settlement in Lebanon that would include scrapping the Israeli-Lebanese troop withdrawal agreement, U.S. officials said today.

But the officials appeared skeptical the plan will work. "There are some things that pose potential problems," said one official, who requested anonymity. "Whether it comes to anything remains to be seen." The official said the plan "was essentially a statement of principles, rather than a plan of action." He said it was one of "a number of initiatives in the works." One of the difficulties, he said, is that all parts of the complex plan must be accepted by all parties to the conflict if the plan is to survive. But Gemayel communicated his acceptance to the U.S. ambassador to Lebanon, Reginald Bartholomew, said the official. He said the Saudis were interceding with Syria to see if it will accept the plan. A key feature of the plan is that Gemayel would abrogate the May 17, 1983 Lebanese-Israeli troop withdrawal agreement. It also calls for withdrawal of the multinational peacekeeping force from Lebanon and its replacement with a U.N. force. Another feature is that Israel and Syria would simultaneously withdraw their forces within 60 to 90 days. Gemayel also would open negotiations with opposition factions to give them a greater say in the government. The plan would also offer assurances to Israel that guerrilla activity will not be permitted to resume in southern Lebanon, a key security feature of the May 17 withdrawal accord that Israel has warned must not be abrogated. A diplomatic source said today it was highly unlikely Israel would agree to all features of the plan, at least in the beginning. But he said Damascus would prevail on Gemayel's enemies to also accept it. One of Gemayel's key opponents, Druse leader Walid Jumblatt, had called earlier for Gemayel's resignation, and on Wednesday he asked that Gemayel be put on trial for his actions. The plan is described here as exclusively a Saudi initiative, although the French government is taking an active part in trying to push establishment of a new U.N. peacekeeping force through the United Nations Security Council. The diplomatic sources said both Washington and Moscow had raised conditions that have emerged as stumbling blocks. President Reagan indicated Wednesday that the United States is neutral on what happens to the May 17 agreement. Secretary of State George P. Shultz, in remarks to reporters Wednesday, said, "Those who would dispense with this agreement must bear the responsibility to find alternative formulas for Israeli withdrawal." Shultz drew a bleak picture that seemed to offer little latitude for influencing events in the wake of a series of victories by Syrian-backed Moslem militias. "We face a new situation, brought about by military pressures against the legitimate government," he said. "This Syrian-sponsored violence against the government has presented us with difficult choices, in view of the legislative and other constraints under which our forces are operating. We are nonetheless proceeding." John Hughes, the State Department spokesman, echoed similar sentiments when asked if U.S. policies had failed. Without answering in the affirmative, he said: "It has been a worthy cause; it's been an honorable cause for the United States. We have worked hard at it. We have done our best. We will continue to be committed as best we are able." The administration's frustration was also illustrated by the fact that the American Marines at Beirut airport, symbol of the American presence, were almost completely surrounded by Druse and Shiite militiamen, who routed nearby government forces in battles Tuesday and Wednesday. Managers opposing laws

By REED PARSELL
Managing Editor
Two area grain cooperative managers are urging farmers to send comments, in duplicate, to the federal government concerning proposed changes in wheat production laws. Joe Artho of Hereford Grain Company and Dawn's Milton Johnson are ardently opposed to two Federal Grain Inspection Service proposals, especially one which would stiffen penalties for impurities in wheat deliveries. They feel the new law would cause them and others to lower per-bushel payments to farmers. The FGIS proposes inflicting a .5 percent penalty on all wheat loads containing .26 to .75 percent foreign substances, or "dockage." One percent would be charged should the impurities fall between .76 and 1.25 percent, with a .5 percent penalty being added for each additional .5 percent of dockage. Under present guidelines, deliveries are charged .5 percent for .5 to 1 percent impurities, with the scale going up in .5-.5 percent increments from there. Dockage, according to Artho, is anything not purely wheat. Bits of straw and blue weed are two examples of such impurities. The wheat his company handles, he said, has an average dockage percentage of approximately three tenths. When asked what possible benefit the proposed law could have, he replied, "Absolutely none. It's just detrimental." It represents "just another way," he said, farmers are being handicapped. None of the area grain production companies, including Artho's and Johnson's, directly charge wheat farmers for dockage. However, all loads cooperatives send out are inspected, from which the penalties are determined and cooperatives are billed. The probable rise in expenses resulting from the FGIS proposal would cause producers to pay farmers less for wheat. The FGIS reportedly claims the proposed law will have little effect upon grain producers. The parent company of Hereford Grain, Union Equity Cooperative Exchange of Enid, Okla., disagrees. It believes the amount of bushels deducted for dockage would double, raising the producer price by about two cents per bushel. "This is a high penalty for farmers to pay," said Leonard Edwards, Union Equity vice president. "The results will not generate more export sales or obtain higher prices for this wheat from foreign buyers. Rather, the foreign buyer will see a higher level of dockage in wheat due to the removal of practicability to load below .5 percent dockage grain." "What makes the FGIS proposal on dockage levels even more surprising," Edwards continued, "is that there was only one official foreign complaint concerning dockage on wheat reported by FGIS to Congress in 1982." "It can be said the quality of U.S. wheat is excellent," said Dale Phillips, another FGIS official, "and usually exceeds the quality parameters for which it was contracted. It's clean." Edwards contended "that if the dockage proposal goes into effect, dockage levels of .25 percent would be difficult, if not impossible, to deliver, causing producer deliveries to be discounts. Country elevators would have to check every load of wheat crossing the scales. It would make for long waiting lines and, no doubt, flaring tempers at harvest time." Also affected would be the stockpiles companies have, as the new penalties would be imposed on them as well as on fresh deliveries. The second proposal, which Artho and Johnson do not feel will have much of an effect in

Strain jury picking set

The trial of Hereford farmer Robert Strain was scheduled for today, with jury selection expected to begin by 2 p.m. Prospective jurors were summoned to the Deaf Smith County Courthouse at 9:30 this morning, but another jury was still deliberating the punishment phase of a driving while intoxicated conviction involving Guillermo Franco. That conviction came last night after about three hours of deliberation preceded by a day-long trial. Strain was arrested Aug. 13 when area law enforcement officers raided a barn located on his farm northeast of Hereford. Officers recovered more than $100,000 worth of allegedly stolen merchandise and cleared up what appeared to be a multi-county fencing operation. Last month, two Lubbock men indicted along with Strain by the Deaf Smith County Grand Jury pleaded guilty to theft charges before 22nd District Judge David Wesley Gully.

Baby clinic scheduled

A well-baby screening clinic is planned to be conducted Tuesday at the local Texas Department of Health office, now located at 914 E. Park Ave. Director Thille Miller said physical assessments will be conducted between 9 a.m. and noon and between 1 and 3 p.m. She also said immunizations will given when needed. The clinic is for all preschool children and there is no charge for any of the TDH services. Miller said there are no income guidelines and anyone may take advantage of the free clinic. The new office is at the old La Plata Insurance building.

Bullock sends more checks

State Comptroller Bob Bullock recently sent a check for $70,482.78 to Hereford, one of 986 Texas towns levying the one-percent city sales tax. That brought the total amount Hereford has received this year up to $197,391.25, which represents a .75 percent increase over the same period in 1983. This month's check reflects sales made during the final, Christmas quarter of last year reported to the comptroller's Austin office by Jan. 20. In all, $105.4 million in local sales tax payments were distributed this period. Statewide, 1984 payments are running 2.57 percent ahead of last year. However, Bullock pointed out, a change from quarterly to monthly payment schedules has made it difficult to compare with 1983 since what were quarterly payments are now spread over three months. "Even with the bookkeeping changes, these payments reflect the recovery that is underway in our state economy," Bullock reportedly said. "When it's all said and done, Texans apparently had the best Christmas in our history in terms of retail sales."

Three highway signs taken

Three historical marker signs, worth an estimated $540-$580 apiece, were stolen from Deaf Smith County roadsides sometime Tuesday, the sheriff's department said. The signs were located near Dawn, the airport and on South Highway 385. Meanwhile, Hereford police investigated the theft of a roto tiller purchased four years ago for $845. Victim of the crime, which apparently occurred prior to Saturday, is J.B. Shirley of 912 S. Main. Some furnishings and appliances owned by landlord Rex Manley, 508 Lawton, were supposedly taken by departing tenants between noon and 7:30 p.m. Sunday. Manley told police some, but not all, of the lifted items had been purchased from the 1008 Grand house by the suspects. Two others were arrested by police Wednesday, one for driving while license suspended and the other for shoplifting.

Christian strongholds captured

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Anti-government militiamen captured two Christian strongholds on the coastal highway south of Beirut today, broadening an offensive that has shattered the Lebanese army and threatens to topple President Amin Gemayel. In Washington, U.S. officials said today Gemayel has accepted an eight-point Saudi plan calling for a pullout of all foreign troops from Lebanon and cancelling the May 17, 1983, Israeli-Lebanese troop withdrawal agreement. The officials, who insisted on anonymity, appeared skeptical about the plan's success. One official said it "was essentially a statement of principles, rather than a plan of action," noting it would have to be approved by Syria and its allies in Lebanon. Police said army troops fought off overnight attacks by Druse insurgents on the key hilltop town of Souk el-Gharb, which overlooks the U.S. Marine base at Beirut's airport and is the last position Gemayel's army holds in the central mountains near Beirut. Druse communiqués referred to the action as "routine exchanges of artillery and small arms fire," suggesting there was no full-scale attack on the town. Druse and Shiite Moslem militiamen have advanced about 14 miles on the southern highway from Beirut. They took the Christian coastal town of Damour and the neighboring hilltop Mishref barracks of the rightist Christian Lebanese Forces militia at about 2 a.m. today, communiqués from both sides said. The Marine base was not affected by the hostilities. Preparations continued for the eventual pullout of the 1,200 Americans based there. "There was silence overnight," said U.S. Army Maj.

Don McClary. "No U.S. ships fired and there were no U.S. planes on military reconnaissance flights." However, a Beirut radio report monitored later in Jordan said two U.S. warplanes flew over the Beirut area shortly before noon. Bulldozers at the Marine base were destroying bunkers and filling them with dirt as Navy construction workers loaded supplies onto landing craft that took them to ships offshore in preparation for a final pullout of the American force. Anti-government militiamen kept their distance from the base and its landing craft strip on the

Both sides claim war advantage

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq said its forces crushed a 12-hour Iranian assault today against the center of their 713-mile border, but Iran claimed its forces continued to advance in the latest escalation of their 3½-year-old border war. The new offensive followed five days of retaliatory air raids, missile and artillery bombardment by the two combatants against each other's cities. An Iraqi military spokesman said the offensive started at midnight Wednesday "against the right flank of the 2nd Army Corps," which is deployed in the center of the frontline at the point nearest Baghdad, the capital, 100 miles due west. "Courageous border forces confronted and contained the offensive," the state radio quoted the unidentified spokesman as saying. The Iraqi army counterattacked and "the majority of the attackers (Iranians) were crushed," the spokesman added. However, the official Iranian news agency and Tehran Radio both said 12 hours after the "massive Val-Fajr-5 operation" was launched that Iranian forces were continuing to advance despite heavy fighting. Western journalists are not allowed access to the battle zone and none of the reports could be independently confirmed. IRNA, which said hundreds of Iraqis were killed or wounded, pinpointed the location of the new assault as the Changuleh region, southeast of the bordertown of Mehran and northwest of DehRan in Iran's central Ilam province. This would indicate Iran's immediate objective is to recover a small area of its territory that has been under Iraqi occupation since the began in September 1980. Iraq has built massive fortifications in this area to prevent any attempt by Iran to march against Baghdad. Thick smoke covers the whole theater "from burning Iraqi equipment," IRNA added. The new series of retaliatory strikes began Saturday with an Iraqi missile attack against the Iranian city of Dezful. Iraq had warned a week before it would attack 11 Iranian cities with missiles if Iran did not cease shelling its border towns. Iran responded to the Dezful attack by shelling Iraqi cities with heavy artillery barrages and air raids.

Geter hearing resumed today

DALLAS (AP) — A police detective who testified in 1982 that an "informant" told him of a "gang of blacks from South Carolina" and raised his suspicions about Lenell Geter has admitted the source was an elderly white woman who gave him only a license number.

Defense attorney Lee Bowers asked Greenville Police Lt. James Fortenberry during a hearing shortly after Geter's conviction on armed robbery charges where he first learned of the gang he believed was responsible for a series of Dallas-area robberies.

"I developed that information in Greenville," Fortenberry said in 1982, according to a transcript read Wednesday.

"You developed that information from your informant?" Bowers asked.

Commission rejects rate hike

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission has rejected a request by AT&T Communications for an immediate $115.4 million increase in long-distance rates within Texas but has indicated it might reconsider its decision this spring.

The PUC told its staff Wednesday to review AT&T's emergency rate request when the hearing on the company's overall revenue request for $301.4 million is completed. That hearing is set to begin March 12.

Utility commissioner Peggy Rosson said she concurred in refusing the emergency rate request but opposed reconsidering it.

On Feb. 6 hearing examiner Phillip Holder also denied AT&T's $115.4 million request. Holder said the company had failed to prove that without an increase it could not pay its current operating expenses and would be unlikely to continue to operate.

Bell announces bonded hike

AUSTIN (AP) — Southwestern Bell Telephone has informed the Public Utility Commission that it is going up on some rates Feb. 23, including an extra $2.75 a month for one-party residence phones.

Vice president Paul Roth said Wednesday that Bell needed the additional money now and could not wait for the PUC to make a decision on the company's record rate hike request of $1.3 billion.

Bell's bonded rate increase, which may be put into effect without the PUC's approval, would total $279.7 million.

One-party business rates would go up $3.85 per month, multi-line business systems would pay $5.10 per month, most customers using Centrex — a business switching system — would pay $2 per line and directory assistance also would cost more.

Ethel Merman dead at 75

NEW YORK (AP) — The lights of the Great White Way were darkened for the late Ethel Merman, whose clarion voice brought her fame on stage and screen for over 50 years, as fans from Bob Hope to ordinary theatergoers mourned the first lady of musical comedy.

In memory of Miss Merman, who died Wednesday at age 75, all 36 Broadway theaters dimmed their marquees for one minute at show time Wednesday night.

"It's like the Statue of Liberty has fallen," said Carol Channing. "Ethel Merman personified the best of Broadway musicals. She was an inspiration to us all."

"Ethel Merman was a dear friend, one with whom I started on Broadway nearly 50 years ago in 'Red, Hot and Blue,'" recalled Bob Hope. "Show business has lost one of its greats."

Nuclear test site caves in LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Federal officials say they don't know why an underground nuclear blast collapsed a big chunk of a mountain more than 1,000 feet above, injuring 13 atomic workers including one who said he learned to "walk on air."

One man was in critical condition today with injuries he suffered when the 60-by-150-foot piece of Rainier Mesa caved in, dropping 10 to 30 feet and swallowing several trailers. Eight workers were hospitalized.

The cave-in Wednesday occurred about three hours after technicians at the government's sprawling Nevada Test Site detonated a nuclear device of "less than 20 kilotons" said Jim Boyer, a spokesman for the U.S. Department of Energy.

He said the blast was considered "very small." The atom bomb that destroyed Hiroshima in World War II, leaving 130,000 people dead, injured or missing, was 20 kilotons — the equivalent of 20,000 tons of TNT.

Bank robbed by helicopter

LEESVILLE, La. (AP) — Five stylish bank robbers remained at large today after swooping down in a stolen helicopter, robbing $163,000 and taking off again without firing their weapons. It was a heist even policemen said they had to admire.

Authorities had "a helicopter and two fixed-wing aircraft plus all the troopers on the ground involved in the search," Trooper Bruce Havens said Wednesday after the speedy holdup at the Merchants and Farmers Bank branch.

It was payday at the Fort Polk Army base, just a few hundred feet away, and police said the holdup men probably knew the bank would have a large amount of money on deposit.

Chilean socialist leader jailed

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The Socialist president of Chile's Popular Democratic Movement, has been jailed for urging a national strike to topple the military government.

In a Feb. 5 speech to the movement's first national convention, Manuel Almeyda coupled the strike call with a proposal that President Augusto Pinochet be replaced by a provisional government representing all opposition forces.

After a hearing Wednesday on government charges that Almeyda's remarks threatened national security, a judge ordered the leftist leader held for trial.

Other leaders of Chile's broad-based opposition also have called for a general strike early this year to press for a speedier return to democracy. Almeyda was the first to face government charges for doing so.

One year ago a new president of Mexico took over a desperation situation...

A nation $80 billion in debt with an annual inflation rate of 250 percent.

In 1981 you could exchange 26 pesos for one American dollar.

By the end of 1982 it took 150.

Unemployment in Mexico was 50 percent plus.

Mexico was harvesting $15 billion a year from its oil but that industry's profits were skimmed by widespread graft.

Then along comes President Miguel de la Madrid. In one year he has made enough improvement to deserve to be listened to—about our role in Latin America.

Mexico is still in deep trouble—deep debt—official corruption—rampant crime—and desperate poverty.

But President de la Madrid is creating some order out of the chaos he inherited. With austerity he has reduced the inflation rate to one-third what it was, and intends to reduce the present rate by half by the end of this year.

And there are "outside pressures," some 40,000 Guatemalans live in refugee camps on the Mexican side of that border. Fifty thousand more are hiding elsewhere in the country, a potentially explosive force.

Yet, despite what would appear to be his country's desperate need for some outside help, he is inviting us to stay home and mind our own business.

He says United States intervention in Latin America can only worsen things.

De la Madrid gives us some reason for hope but Mexico remains a time-bomb on our border.

De la Madrid, American-educated and well-intentioned, remains a prisoner of his long-entrenched PRI Revolutionary Party with a top to bottom tradition of graft and corruption.

This good-ole-boy chain of command limits his prerogatives for substantive change.

And Mexico is presently doomed by a B-bomb of its own making, an uncontrolled proliferation of its population.

The Catholic Church plus socialized medicine, however well intentioned, have doubled Mexico's population in 10 years. Doubled!

Every land reform, which breaks big farms up into small ones, leaves the small farms in the hands of inexperienced and inept managers — so Mexico — once an exporter of food — now imports food — even its sugar.

Too little food and too many mouths to feed.

And that is the population presently spilling across the Rio Grande bringing Mexico's problem — here.

In Honduras

Congress studies build-up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional investigators, disagreeing with Reagan administration claims, have concluded that U.S. construction of runways and base camps in Honduras suggests a "permanent" American military presence in that Central American nation, sources say.

The General Accounting Office, Congress' investigative arm, presented that finding in secret House and Senate committee briefings over the past week, according to congressional sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified.

The GAO's "finding supports the contention that a permanent facility is being established there," said one source, who added that the GAO is still reviewing the question of whether the Reagan administration violated the law by constructing such facilities without congressional approval.

The administration is at least "stretching the letter of the law to the utmost," the source said, in describing the GAO's current assessment. Another source said the GAO confirmed the findings of Sen. Jim Sasser, D-Tenn., who visited Honduras earlier this month and reported to the Senate that "the United States has embarked on a substantial buildup of permanent and semipermanent facilities which could be utilized to support contingency operations in Central America."

The sources spoke on condition that they remain anonymous. The Reagan administration denies that the new and expanded military facilities in Honduras represent a "permanent" U.S. military presence in that country. However, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger has told Congress that 700 to 800 American military personnel will be left in Honduras to maintain the facilities, pending the start of a new round of exercises.

Administration officials said the construction was done so U.S. forces could conduct joint military exercises with the Honduran army. They added that because the work was connected to military exercises, congressional approval was not needed.

In his report, Sasser described the U.S. military's actions in Honduras as "nothing less than a backdoor military buildup in Honduras, a military buildup which far exceeds what is necessary for the successful completion of military exercises."

Sasser, the ranking Democrat on the House Appropriations military construction subcommittee, said the panel had approved funds to upgrade only two Honduran sites, but he discovered that during the exercises, four other airfields had been built or improved to handle large military aircraft.

He said two or three other airstrips are to be built in the next round of maneuvers. In addition, Sasser reported that two operational radar sites have been built in southern Honduras near the borders of Nicaragua and El Salvador.

Jury convicts Jones of killing Kerrville infant

By KEN HERMAN Associated Press Writer

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) — Genene Jones, who did not testify during her 4½-week murder trial, will take the witness stand today before a jury decides her punishment for killing a baby girl, defense sources said.

However, the convicted nurse and her lawyers fear that the jury, which took only three hours to convict her Wednesday, will mete out the maximum punishment — life in prison.

Ms. Jones will testify today in an effort to show she is eligible for probation because she has no prior convictions.

Reid and Petti McClellan, Chelsea's parents, returned to the courthouse hoping to see Ms. Jones receive life sentence.

McClellan said the couple stayed up celebrating until the early hours of the morning. Mrs. McClellan said she's looking for a sentence that will keep Ms. Jones locked up for a long time.

"I just want it so she can't do it again. Whatever it takes so she can't hurt anyone again. I don't want there to be another Chelsea case again," she said.

She added that the guilty verdict was like having another funeral for her baby.

"It's one thing to believe she was murdered but to have a whole courtroom of people tell you, it's like hearing it for the first time," said Mrs. McClellan, who turned 29 on Valentines Day.

Chelsea McClellan died on Sept. 17, 1982.

The seven-woman, five-man jury agreed with the state's circumstantial case that pointed to Ms. Jones, a mother of two, as a baby-killer.

Testimony showed that Chelsea died of an injection of succinylcholine, a powerful muscle relaxant. The shots were given at a Kerrville pediatrician's office where Ms. Jones worked. Dr. Kathleen Holland had ordered the nurse to give routine immunizations.

One prosecutor said Ms. Jones had killed Chelsea "for her own enrichment." One prosecution witness had testified that Ms. Jones wanted to "find" enough dead children to justify a special care unit for children.

Six other young patients at the office suffered similar mysterious seizures after shots from Ms. Jones. She faces injury to a child charges in those cases, and a similar charge in San Antonio, where there's an ongoing investigation into deaths at Medical Center Hospital's pediatric intensive care unit.

Ms. Jones worked at that special care unit.

Wednesday's verdict sparked tears in the courtroom and cheers outside the courthouse. Ms. Jones' quiet sobs heightened as jurors were individually asked if they thought she was guilty.

About 10 feet away, Chelsea's family cried and hugged. Parents Reid and Petti McClellan walked to a second-floor veranda and cried.

"It's over, it's over. I'm glad we won," said Mrs. McClellan, who had given tearful testimony about how Chelsea "went limp like a rag doll" after the shots from Ms. Jones.

Outside the small, Central Texas courthouse, there were tears of relief.

For Robin Alexander, Petti's mother, the conviction was proof that "Chelsea Ann did not die in vain." But there also was a grandmother's regret that it took Chelsea's death to bring Ms. Jones into a courtroom.

"It had to be stopped. It could have gone on forever," she said of the string of mysterious deaths and injuries to children in Ms. Jones' care.

"If it had been stopped in San Antonio, it would have never gone to Kerrville," she said. "They were warned about Genene. They didn't pay heed."

As Ms. Jones was hurried back to jail, demonstrators screamed at her. Five women had come from San Antonio to picket and yell outside the courthouse.

The nurse was crying as she was put into a deputy's car. Janie Adame, a demonstrator who said her son died at a San Antonio hospital, yelled, "The mothers will never stop crying. We love Georgetown."

Defense lawyer Jim Brookshire had little to say. "Why don't you just give me a break and leave me alone right now," he told reporters.

Throughout the trial, now in its fifth week, the defense pushed two major points — the tests that discovered succinylcholine in the girl's body were inconclusive and there was no proof that Chelsea was anything other than a sick girl who died.

Burt Carnes, one of the court-appointed defense lawyers, argued Wednesday that prosecutors were "obsessed" with the case. Carnes suggested that it was Ms. Holland's "incompetence or wrongdoing" that killed Chelsea and injured the other children.

Reviewing the testimony from the incidents, Carnes said Ms. Jones' only possible crime was "maybe that she practiced a little medicine without a license."

Ms. Holland, who still runs her Kerrville practice, was in the courtroom much of Wednesday, but was not on hand for the verdict. She faces a $7 million wrongful death suit filed by the McClellans.

Kerr County District Attorney Ron Sutton wrapped up the state's case with this warning to jurors:

"If Genene Jones should be allowed to walk out of this courtroom based on the evidence now before you, I would say we should go up to the top of the courthouse and remove that sword from the statue of justice and insert a syringe."

"And if we listen very carefully, I think we can hear the echo of the gates of hell slamming on Genene Jones for what she did to Chelsea McClellan."

'Terms' nominated 11 times

By BOB THOMAS Associated Press Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — "Terms of Endearment," the funny-sad story of an eccentric mother and a willful daughter, scored top honors today at the 56th annual Academy Award nominations, placing in 11 categories.

"The Right Stuff," a panoramic view of the America's first space travelers, followed with eight nominations. "Fanny and Alexander," which Ingmar Bergman says is his last movie, placed third with six.

As expected, "Terms of Endearment" dominated the nominations, collecting for best picture and for four performances. Stars Shirley MacLaine and Debra Winger will be competing against each other for best actress, and Jack Nicholson and John Lithgow as supporting actor. The film also was nominated for best direction and writing by James L. Brooks.

Also nominated for best picture were "The Big Chill," "The Dresser," "The Right Stuff" and "Tender Mercies."

Two-time winner Meryl Streep again was nominated for best actress for her performance as the doomed nuclear-plant worker in "Silkwood."

Khuri accepted for club membership

Joyce Ritter, presided over the business meeting when members of Valeda Study Club met recently in the home of Francis Crume.

The club collect was recited and members answered roll call with "a help for a nitty, gritty day." Minutes of the previous meeting were unavailable and there was no change reported in the treasury balance.

Communications received and acted upon included a motion to not nominate anyone for Woman of the Year at West Texas State University. A motion was made and passed to nominate Janice and John Brownlow and family for Hereford's Family of the Year.

Sylvia Khuri was presented and accepted for membership in the club by Margaret Zinser.

The upcoming husbands' party was discussed and it was decided that the club would purchase the meat and members will bring a covered dish. Also a white elephant sale will be held for the husbands at that time.

For the program, a book review on "Confessions of a Totaled Woman," was presented by Marcella Bradley. The book, written by Karen Wise, takes a witty and humorous look at the totaled woman and how through God's grace a woman can become a "total" woman. Ms. Bradley read excerpts that members could identify with.

Refreshments were served by Ms. Crume to those present. They included Janice Brownlow, Betty Gilbert, Donna Lindeman, Marcella McLain, Norma Martin, Jean Ruther, Carolyn Waters and Margaret Zinser.

Special Entertainment

Two ensembles from the Hereford High School band performed for Hereford Newcomers Club Tuesday in the Heritage Room of the

HHS band ensembles perform at luncheon

Hereford Newcomers Club met Tuesday in the Heritage Room of the Deaf Smith County Library. A luncheon catered by Savage's Hickory Pit and a decorated Valentine cake made by Beckie Fry, were enjoyed by about 25 newcomers, and special guests, members of HHS band ensembles.

Following the meal, announcements were made by President Marcie Ginn. She told the group about a game night scheduled March 3 at the Community Center and newcomers' coffees at 9 a.m.

the fourth Thursday of each month.

The first coffee is scheduled Feb. 23 in the home of Karen Barela. Sheila Williams will serve as coffee chairman.

Ms. Ginn then introduced Jim Summersgill, a band director at Hereford schools, and several members of the Hereford High School band. A flute trio and a clarinet quartet performed several numbers which they have prepared for an upcoming band contest.

Finding real bargains takes shopping skill

COLLEGE STATION — Clothing was a good buy last year, but finding real bargains this year will still take time and shopping skill, says a Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service home economist.

The Consumer Price Index indicates that clothing prices increased only 2.7 percent over 1982 costs, while prices in general increased 3.9 percent, reports clothing specialist Becky Saunders.

Americans spent an average of $529 for clothing and shoes in 1983, which represents a $16 dollar increase from the previous year, she says.

Although two-thirds of this slight increase was due to higher prices, one-third resulted from increased consumer spending.

Spending for women's suits and dresses increased more than other clothing and footwear categories, says Saunders, probably because of the rising employment rate for women, and the fashion emphasis on "investment" dressing.

Even though clothing prices are not escalating as rapidly as they have in the past, many people are looking for ways to reduce clothing costs, says Saunders.

Anticipating clothing needs in advance allows a family to save from one-third to one-half of their clothing budget by shopping during sales, she says.

While shopping sales saves money in the long run, it requires patience to wait for mark-downs and time to search sale racks for good items.

If you are going to shop clothing sales, take the time to compare prices, advises the specialist. A retailer may mark-up the initial price to make the reduction seem greater. But consumers can price same items at similar stores to determine the garment's true value and the size of the mark-down.

Not all sale clothing will save you money, says Saunders. If it doesn't fit in with the rest of your wardrobe, the chances are it won't get worn, no matter how good the buy. Also, if sale clothing is not the right quality for the purpose, or the best quality for the money, it can actually increase your overall clothing costs.

Do you ever feel that, on the jog through life, you've just stepped into some bubble gum.

When it comes to taking first prize as a clockwatcher, it's no contest if the office manager is among the contestants.

44.6%* ON YOUR IRA?

LAST YEAR THE REGENCY FUND WAS ONLY FOR THE RICH. THIS YEAR IT'S ALSO FOR THOSE WHO HOPE TO BE.

Before this year, the Oppenheimer Regency Fund was only open to those who had $100,000 to invest. But those who could invest and did on December 30, 1982, the Fund's first offering date, earned 44.6%* on their investment.

What's more, the Fund's outstanding performance earned it the rank of Number 1 fund in 1983, according to Lipper Analytical Services' survey of more than 600 mutual funds.

This year the Regency Fund is available exclusively for IRAs and Keogh plans. So virtually everyone can invest up to $2,000 a year tax deferred (more for Keoghs) in a fund dedicated to maximizing the return on your investment over the long term.

Because the Regency Fund has this singular goal, it can endeavor to take full advantage of short-term gains whenever possible. Which makes it ideal for tax-deferred retirement funds where any gains can be consolidated and compounded over the years without being eroded by taxes. This is not to suggest that an investor may not incur a loss if he or she buys shares at one time and sells them at another, after equity prices have declined.

If you want your retirement funds invested ambitiously for your future and you're willing to assume the risks associated with potentially greater rewards, consider the Regency Fund.

If you hope to retire like a wealthy person, maybe you should consider investing like one.

Leading La Plata

The La Plata Junior High ninth grade boys basketball team concluded its season with an impressive 18-0 overall record this week. Here Bobby Baker gets ready to gun a jumpshot against a district Clovis opponent earlier in the season. The Mavericks' Arthur Valdez (42) gets in position for a possible rebound.

Mavericks and Dogies finish basketball season this week

La Plata Junior High's ninth grade boys basketball team wound up its season with an undefeated 18-0 record with two recent road wins in Clovis, New Mexico.

The Mavericks blasted Clovis-Marshall, 73-27, Feb. 9, and then defeated Clovis-Yucca, 65-51, Monday to take first place in its district with a 12-0 record.

In the Yucca game, Bobby Baker barraged the net for 25 points, and Arthur Valdez added 15 in the winning cause.

"Bobby and Arthur probably played their best game of the year, offensively and defensively," ninth grade coach John Nino said about the season finale.

The Maverick eighth grade boys finished their season in second place in the district, posting a 13-4 season won-lost record.

The eighth graders lost a close contest, 49-48, to Marshall, Feb. 9, but rebounded to win in overtime, 44-39, against Yucca Monday.

Derrel Page tossed in 20 points and Trent Bowling added 10 in the Yucca game.

The La Plata seventh grade cagers split their final two games, topping Marshall, 44-27, Feb. 9, and then lost to Yucca, 39-31, Monday. Jason Scott led Maverick scorers with 10 points in the Yucca game. Kyle Andrews and Brad Smith each contributed 6 apiece.

The Stanton ninth grade boys basketball team finished in the upper half of its district with a 47-29 victory over Clovis-Marshall Monday.

Tommy Weaver was top Dogie scorer with 15 points. The ninth graders ended its season with a 13-7 won-lost record and 8-4 in district play.

The eighth graders lost its final game, 29-23, to Marshall, Monday. Paul Ramirez tossed in nine points as the leading Stanton scorer. The eighth grade finished the season with a 3-15 record and 2-10 in the district.

The Dogie seventh graders ended its season on a winning note with a 40-23 win over Marshall. Pat Mercer led Dogie scorers with 13 points. The seventh graders ended its season with a 5-7 district record and finished 10-8 overall.

Hockey team blames no one

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Despite the worst showing in its Olympic hockey history, Team USA isn't looking for anyone to blame.

"I'm not happy at all, but I don't blame the players and I don't blame myself," said Coach Lou Vairo, whose team was tied 3-3 by Finland Wednesday. That deadlock, secured when Anssi Melametsa scored with 21 seconds remaining and only 17 seconds after Bob Brooke had put the Americans in front, left the United States with a 1-2-2 record. The best the Americans can finish is seventh, one spot lower than their previous worst Olympic showing, in 1968 at Grenoble, France.

The United States will play Poland Friday in the seventh-place playoff.

"We tried to keep them poised and confident, but when Canada scored 27 seconds into the first game, it kind of shattered that," added Vairo.

"Twenty teams in the National Hockey League get eliminated every year. You can only have one winner. Does that make everyone else losers?"

"It's not life and death, but I am tremendously disappointed."

"Things didn't go our way at all and we never got any breaks," said David A. Jensen, the quick left wing who rarely got a chance to use his speed.

Totalitarian nations

Iron Curtain athletes tougher than U.S.?

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Are Americans a bunch of softies? Does the discipline of totalitarian states such as the Soviet Union and East Germany breed a tougher, more durable athlete than the freer life of Western society?

Don't try to sell that line to Bill Simon, outspoken president of the U. S. Olympic Committee.

"They have sports in which they excel and we have sports in which we excel," said the former Treasury secretary under Presidents Nixon and Ford as he reviewed the medal standings which show East Germany and the Soviet Union far ahead with four days remaining in the XIV Olympic Winter Games.

"If they're so good, why can't they beat us in basketball? They've done it only once — in 1972 — and officials gypped us out of that one. We need apologize to no one for our overall Olympic record or the strength of our system."

Through Wednesday's competition, the East Germans led the field with 19 total medals, seven of them gold. The Soviets followed with 17, three gold while the United States lay in seventh place with three medals — a single gold and two silvers.

The East Germans built on their cache Wednesday with a 1-2-3 sweep in ladies' 3,000-meter speed skating, an event they have come to dominate with the retirement of America's Eric Heiden, a five-time gold winner in 1980.

This development brought a caustic comment from Dianne Holm, the American speed-skating coach, who said:

"If you have your own personal coach, masseuse and doctor with you all the time, why shouldn't you do well?"

Simon acknowledged that Communist countries had gained tremendous ground with their "sports factories," marshalling their best talent into state-subsidized forces who become, in effect, professional sportsmen.

"It's true we have been behind in some sports to which Eastern European countries give great emphasis — events such as the luge, cross-country skiing and, to an extent, speed skating," he said. "We haven't had the interest, the wherewithal and facilities for such things.

"But that is changing. We have found that it isn't necessary to call on the government. Instead, we have mustered support from commercial America.

Through funds of our business friends, we have brought new sports opportunities to thousands."

"We fell below expectations this year but we had some tough breaks," said Simon, whose presidency ends with the Los Angeles Games. "All of our kids tried hard. They deserve our applause and affection."

He added that "we now have a program in progress which will match that of anyone."

"Thousands of kids are being given new chances in a variety of sports," said Simon. "It won't be quickly perhaps, but you'll see them on the victory stand."

3,500 attend funeral

Pro wrestler dies at 25

DENTON, Texas (AP) — Many of the luminaries of the professional wrestling world paid their final respects to David Von Erich, 25, a ring comrade who died of a stomach ailment last week while on a wrestling tour of Japan.

"This is the largest funeral we've ever had here," an official of the First Baptist Church of Denton said of the estimated 3,500 who came Wednesday. Many of them waited as long as three hours for the 10 a.m. funeral.

The mourners were predominantly young women — whose screams for the wrestler at his matches had been likened to the devotion other girls once bestowed upon the Beatles during the 1960s.

Ric Flair, an archrival of the wrestling Von Erich family, was subdued at the services, despite the fact that he had frequently shouted insults at David and other of the Von Erichs before, during and after wrestling battles in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

"The fact that we were enemies in the ring didn't have anything to do with the tremendous amount of respect I had for him. He had unlimited guts," said Flair, whose forehead is crisscrossed with scars.

Von Erich's real name was David Adkisson. He was a high school football and basketball star at nearby Lake Dallas before joining brothers Kevin, Kerry and Michael in prolonging the family wrestling name begun two decades earlier by their father, who wrestled under the name of Fritz Von Erich.

On either side of the closed casket were portraits of Von Erich — one of him in wrestling gear with his Texas heavyweight championship belt draped over his shoulder, the other of him in a tan leather jacket and white cowboy hat.

One floral arrangement was in the shape of Texas. Another was in the shape of cowboy boots with a cross on top.

Among other professional wrestlers who attended the funeral were Gene Kiniski, Dory and Terry Funk, Verne Gagne, Duke Keomucka, Brian Adias, Iceman King Parsons, Chris "The Gentleman" Adams, the Super Ds and Jose Lothario.

Absent were television camera crews. Plans to film the services for later telecast were dropped when Von Erich's father banned cameras from the church. He had considered having a closed funeral, but changed his mind.

About 1,500 fans descended upon Grove Hill Memorial Park in East Dallas for a graveside service that followed the funeral. Many of them arrived as early as 8 a.m. Despite exhortations from police, the crowd refused to disperse after the service. They milled around the casket as it was lowered into the ground.

As the hundreds of flower arrangements were laid at graveside, dozens of mourners rushed to pluck a memory of the dead wrestler. In less than a minute, most of the flowers were gone.

"Fritz said the crowd is what made them, and he wanted the crowd to be a part of this. It's a lot harder on the family this way, but the crowd loved the boys," said Sandra Adkisson, David Von Erich's cousin.

The Rev. Gene McCombs, a family friend from Memphis, Tenn., officiated at the funeral.

"Let's consider his life well spent. He left a fruitful life behind him. He was a young giant. He did more living in 25 years than most people do in 70 years," McCombs said.

Razorback coach gets 20-win season

By The Associated Press

After knocking off top-ranked North Carolina last weekend, the Arkansas Razorbacks have put another big notch on Coach Eddie Sutton's belt — his eighth straight 20-victory season.

"Every year winning 20 games is one of our goals," Sutton said after the 14th-ranked Razorbacks defeated Texas Christian 55-48 in college basketball Wednesday night. "Across the nation, it is recognized that if a team wins 20 games, it has been a good season. I hope our team is not satisfied and that we win some more."

Sutton was worried that his team might have a letdown after the North Carolina game. He said he warned his Razorbacks at practice Tuesday to "forget" about North Carolina. "It was difficult because everyone on campus is talking about the game and is still excited," he said.

In other games involving the Top Twenty, second-ranked Georgetown defeated Villanova 59-46; third-ranked DePaul crushed Loyola (Ill.) 93-77; No. 8 Memphis State tripped Florida State 75-67; No. 9 Oklahoma nipped Oklahoma State 57-55; No. 13 Wake Forest whipped Clemson 68-57, and No. 19 Duke beat Seton 80-69.

Alvin Robertson led the Arkansas attack with 27 points, 18 in the second half when the Razorbacks pulled away from TCU.

The Razorbacks trailed TCU by six points late in the first half and 28-25 at intermission. But they outscored TCU 7-1 to start the second half and later pulled away from a 37-37 tie by going on a 12-1 streak, taking a 49-38 lead. Robertson scored eight straight points during that stretch run.

The victory boosted Arkansas' overall mark to 20-4 and 10-1 in the Southwest Conference, one game behind the Houston Cougars. The eight straight 20-win seasons are an SWC record.

Top Tea

Patrick Ewing collected 18 points and eight rebounds as Georgetown avenged one of only two defeats this season with its 59-46 triumph over Villanova. The victory was the 22nd for Georgetown, which lost to the Wildcats by two points in double overtime the first time they met this season.

Georgetown Coach John Thompson stuck with Ewing, even though the 7-foot center had two early fouls and got a third with time running out in the first half.

"My assistants wanted me to take Ewing out when he got his third, but I wanted to go with him," Thompson said. "I thought about it, but decided to stay with him. I like him much better on the floor than by my side."

Freshman Dallas Comegys came off the bench to score a career-high 32 points, powering DePaul past Loyola. Tyrone Corbin added 18 points, Kenny Patterson had 15 and Kevin Holmes netted 12 as the Blue Demons raised their record to 19-1.

Keith Lee scored 23 points and grabbed 13 rebounds to lead Memphis State over Florida State. Lee hit a field goal and four free throws in the final four minutes of the game to help Memphis State break a 63-63 tie and stop a Florida State comeback.

Tim McCalister hit a pair of free throws with 31 seconds left to boost Oklahoma over Oklahoma State. Oklahoma All-American Wayman Tisdale preserved the victory with eight seconds left when he blocked a jump shot by Oklahoma State's Joe Atkinson.

First heart, liver recipient improving

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A 6-year-old girl who received the world's first heart and liver transplant remained in critical condition today, but seemed comfortable and in good spirits, according to her mother.

"She's nodding yes and no to questions," Lois Jones said Wednesday of her daughter, Stormie. "I asked her if she was scared because we had to put on (face) masks, and she nodded yes."

The blond, brown-eyed girl from Cumby, Texas, received the historic operation Tuesday. Doctors at Children's Hospital said her donated organs appeared to be functioning normally.

"Stormie appears to be following a standard course for both liver transplant patients and heart transplant patients," said Dr. Basil Zitelli, her pediatrician.

"She's breathing on her own, although still attached to a respirator. Her blood pressure is good, and she is being weaned from some of her heart medication," he said.

The hospital said her condition today was critical but stable.

The liver was producing bile, an indication that it was functioning normally, Zitelli said.

Survey shows

Standards lax

DALLAS (AP) — Almost half of Texas' public school teachers believe the standards for both teachers and students are too low, a survey shows.

The teachers were surveyed by the Texas Education Association for the governor's Select Committee on Public Education.

Nearly half of those polled said more should be done to weed out incompetent teachers and more should be required of students.

The random survey, released Wednesday, also indicated that almost half the secondary teachers believe students spend too much time in sports and other extracurricular activities.

But most of the teachers surveyed said they believe their students are receiving a quality education, and a majority also said they are satisfied with their jobs.

More than 90 percent of superintendents and principals surveyed said they were satisfied with their jobs.

H. Ross Perot, chairman of the committee and chairman of Electronic Data Systems Corp. in Dallas, said the satisfaction level among teachers appears to be higher than among workers in private industry.

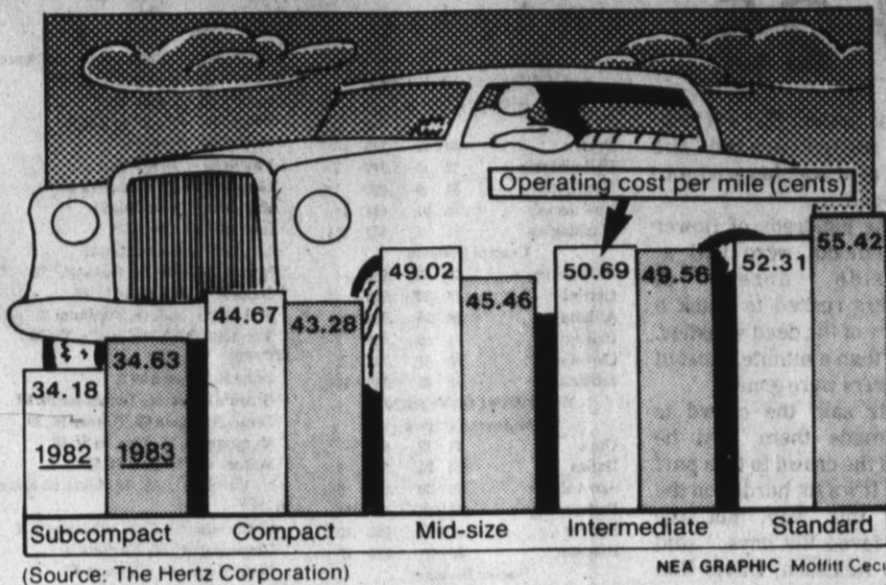

"Maybe their perception of what they're supposed to be doing is the problem," Perot said Wednesday. "Change does not occur until people get uncomfortable."

The survey was administered by Sirota and Alper Associates, an industrial psychology firm that has conducted similar surveys for businesses and government agencies.

More than 6,000 randomly selected educators in 39 Texas districts — including almost 5,000 classroom teachers — responded to a 129-item questionnaire. The districts included Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston, Austin, San Antonio, Corpus Christi, El Paso and Ysleta.

THE COST OF CAR OWNERSHIP

Mid-size models show greatest decrease

To motorists the operating costs — including fuel, maintenance, and other expenses — fell last year for most new cars, especially for mid-size models. Only the largest and smallest new models — standards and subcompacts — experienced an operating-cost increase.

Hundreds of thousands can't go home again

COBAN, Guatemala (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of Indian peasants have been driven from their mountain homelands by Guatemala's guerrilla war and may never be able to return to their traditional way of life.

They are living in army-run camps and villages, or trying to blend into cities far from their homes.

"The tragedy of the internal refugees is that there is no way out, no way of helping them go back to their homes," said a foreign missionary priest in Guatemala City. "To an Indian what means is his land. His umbilical cord is where his home is, and the spirits of his forefathers."

Human rights organizations estimate 1 million people have been uprooted since the bloody little war between leftist guerrillas and Guatemala's right-wing military rulers intensified in the late 1970s. More than 40,000 refugees are on the Mexican side of the border.

The worst violence has occurred in the rugged highlands of the northwestern and north central third of the country, in Quiche, Huehuetenango and Alta Verapaz provinces.

"The majority fled the terrorism of the army and once in the mountains easily fell into the hands of the guerrillas who used them practically as slave labor and as a shield," said Monsignor Gerardo Flores, Roman Catholic bishop of Alta Verapaz and Baja Verapaz.

Government officials deny reports that the army massacred Indians and destroyed their villages in order to eliminate the guerrillas' support base among the peasants.

Indians form about half of Guatemala's population of 7.5 million. Most live at the subsistence level and have had little to do with the more contemporary-style life and cash economy of Guatemala's "Ladinos," the mestizo people of mixed Spanish and Indian descent.

Villages and families were divided when peasants fled the violence or when, forced to choose sides, some became involved with either the guerrillas or the military.

Peasants in conflict areas who do not surrender under a government amnesty program are considered guerrillas and may be shot or arrested if found.

Many Indians fled to the south, where they had traditionally migrated to pick crops. Once there they changed from their native dress to blend better into the new surroundings.

Alfredo Caal, 60, and nine others, most of them emaciated, recently turned themselves in to the army and were taken to Tzacol camp, next to an army base at the edge of this town 130 miles north of Guatemala City.

Along with food, shelter and medical treatment, they receive a generous dose of anti-guerrilla indoctrination.

The Spanish Armada set sail in 1588 with 132 ships. Only 50 survived attacks by the English fleet and storms at sea to return to Spain.

Mother of murdered child elated by guilty verdict

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) — Petti McClellan says she had never been to a courthouse for anything more serious than a marriage license, but she soon became all too familiar with the legal system after a nurse was charged with murdering her 15-month-old daughter.

The mother attended pretrial hearings and carefully followed the legal intricacies of the case, which culminated Friday with nurse Genevieve Jones being convicted of murder.

"It's over, it's over," Mrs. McClellan said, sobbing. "I'm glad we won."

Ms. Jones was convicted of injecting young Chelsea McClellan with a powerful muscle relaxant. She also is accused of administering life-threatening injections to six other Kerrville-area children, and one child in nearby Bexar County.

"At least now this won't happen to anyone else," Mrs. McClellan said during jury deliberations. "It's not going to bring Chelsea back, but it is some consolation to know that other parents won't have this happen to them."

Other members of the McClellan family — including Petti's mother, sisters, grandmother and great-grandmother — hugged and kissed prosecutors and said, "Thank you, thank you so much."

"Now my granddaughter will be able to bury Chelsea," said Chelsea's great-grandmother, Hester Turner. "She never really has."

Mrs. McClellan's mother, Robin Alexander, cried as she said that "justice has been done."

But she blamed Bexar County investigators for not investigating sooner a string of suspicious infant deaths at San Antonio's Medical Center Hospital. Ms. Jones worked at the hospital at the time of the unexplained deaths.

"It had been stopped in San Antonio, it would never have gone to Kerrville," she said. "They were warned about Genevieve. They didn't pay heed."

"Chelsea would be alive today," Mrs. Alexander said. "That's not being bitter. That's being factual."

Ms. Jones sobbed as deputies escorted her through a throng of news reporters and cameramen into a waiting patrol car, which took her back to the Williamson County Jail.

"That's good. That's what you get," one woman yelled at Ms. Jones.

Friends said they want to have another child, even if they must adopt.

"All we can do at this point is hope something like this never happens again," Mrs. McClellan said.

Q. The front brakes on my 1980 T-Bird are making a chattering noise. There is also a slight vibration when I apply the brakes. Any ideas?

A. Your trouble sounds like a warped rotor. A warped rotor won't have the flat places needed for the brake pads to grip. To check the rotor you will need a dial indicator which can tell you if the rotor is even and smooth or not. Place the indicator so that the tip of the gauge is against the braking surface of the rotor. When the rotor is turned, the gauge will indicate any variations in the surface. Also check to see if the rotor has high and low spots in its thickness. This can cause the same problems as a warped rotor. If the rotor is okay, check the front wheel bearings. If they are unusually worn, they can cause the rotor to wobble.

Ann Landers

Better off not getting even

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I became involved with a married man three years ago. Although he never promised to marry me, I was sure he would eventually leave his wife and family and we would have a life together.

When I became pregnant, I was certain he would live up to his responsibilities. I was wrong. His response when I told him was, "Well, that's biology for you. Too bad you flunked the subject." He made it plain that he couldn't afford to get mixed up in a scandal and I was on my own.

I was both heartsick and furious. My only thought was to get even. All sorts of diabolical schemes crossed my mind. My closest friend urged me to zap him with a paternity suit and drag his name through the mud. My minister advised against it—explaining that his wife and children would be victims. Thank God, I listened.

As the days go by my love for my child (now 11 months old) grows deeper. I know now how stupid I was to think I had been "done wrong" and was the loser. My life has been enriched magnificently by this child and I look forward to each day. I have a real future now—something I never had before.

This precious boy of mine is the greatest thing that ever happened to me. His father will never feel those little arms around his neck. Nor will he ever see that lovely smile, so like his own. My child is my life, and it is the best life there is. My lover may have other children, but I have seen them and this son of ours outshines them all. I don't have to get even now because I'm ahead.—One For The Road

DEAR ONE: Your letter is a marvelous example of how a positive attitude can be the foundation on which to build a good life. How much better off you are than had you chosen to be vindictive and bitter. Congratulations.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The letter from the 11-year-old boy who asked if a bad temper is catching reminded me of something I learned from an unhappy situation.

For every act of rudeness or hostility, return an act of kindness or consideration. For example, if someone cuts you off in traffic, and you see someone else having trouble getting on to a busy highway, deliberately yield the right of way. Go out of your way to let another drive in. There are endless variations of this theme.

It is even better if you can return an act of loving kindness to the person from whom you received the rebuff. But it isn't always possible. Perhaps you feel too much hostility, or the person was a stranger, now gone on his way. Returning hostility with love to the next person down the line does incredible things: It helps defuse your anger and gives you the pleasure of a warm response.

If people everywhere would practice this philosophy every day, how much better the world would be.—G.B. In Webster, N.Y.

DEAR G.B.: You're on to something wonderful. I know it works because I have done it. I hope every person who reads this will try it today. The results will amaze you!

Do you feel awkward, self-conscious—lonely? Welcome to the club. There's help for you in Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity." Send $0 cents with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

They included the Dimmitt O.E.S. Chapter scheduled to meet Feb. 25; Abilene Queen Chapter, March 17 with speaker Agnes Howard, past grand matron; and Petersburg Chapter, March 12.

Edith Lockhart, a resident in the Eastern Star Home at Arlington, was adopted by the local chapter.

The charter was draped in memory of Ethel Curry and a memorial was sent to the O.E.S. in memory of her. Also a Valentine monetary gift was presented to Ms. Barber.

Refreshments were served by Beverly and Courtney Brooke, Winnie Wiseman and Marilyn Bell.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm a 20-year-old, 5-foot-4-inch woman. Since I was 13 I've weighed 110 pounds, but recently I've lost 10 pounds.

Friends and family comment on how skinny and ill I'm beginning to look. I've gone down one bra size and my pants barely stay on. I eat three meals a day. Other than chasing my two children around, I'm not very active. I'm losing about two pounds a month. I also feel run down and when I stand up I feel like I'm going to faint. I take vitamins and prescription iron pills.

The doctor just says I should be happy I don't have a weight problem.

DEAR READER — Better see a different doctor. Unexplained weight loss is usually because of a medical disorder. High on the list are an overactive thyroid and diabetes, though there are other causes.

Meanwhile, do the opposite of what we recommend for losing body fat. Eat more and eat between meals. Eat high-calorie foods and decrease your physical activity if you can. All of this is temporary, of course, until the cause of your weight loss is explained.

The Newspaper BIBLE

TO MARRY OR NOT TO MARRY

Now about those questions you asked in your last letter; my answer is that if you do not marry, it is good.

But usually it is best to be married, each man having his own wife, and each woman having her own husband, because otherwise you might fall back into sin.

The man should give his wife all that is her right as a married woman, and the wife should do the same for her husband:

For a girl who marries no longer has full right to her own body, for her husband then has his rights to it, too; and in the same way the husband no longer has full right to his own body, for it belongs also to his wife.

So do not refuse these rights to each other. The only exception to this rule would be the agreement of both husband and wife to refrain from the rights of marriage for a limited time, so that they can give themselves more completely to prayer. Afterwards, they should come together again so that Satan won't be able to tempt them because of their lack of self-control.

I'm not saying you must marry; but you certainly may if you wish.

I wish everyone could get along without marrying, just as I do. But we are not all the same. God gives some the gift of a husband or wife, and others He gives the gift of being able to stay happily unmarried.

So I say to those who aren't married, and to widows—better to stay unmarried if you can, just as I am.

But if you can't control yourselves, go ahead and marry. It is better to marry than to burn with lust. 1 Corinthians 7:1-9

Thousands seeking assylum, but few will succeed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Kamzati Chombo, a young African in a brown, three-piece polyester suit, sat among a half-dozen Salvadorans, waiting somberly in a judge's wood-paneled chamber for his assylum petition to be filed.

Missionaries had paid his way to the United States from his native Malawi, a small, poor country in southeastern Africa. Back in his homeland, he said, his father-in-law had been executed by the ruling regime. And the 27-year-old explained quietly that as part of the family, he also was in danger of being executed.

"I cannot go back," he said softly.

Chombo came to the tiny and crowded immigration court, located virtually in the shadow of the Capitol dome, to begin a process of persuading the government that his risk is real and not a ploy.

With the help of Jules Nolin, the grandfatherly, gray-haired counselor from the U.S. Catholic Conference who acted as his legal representative, Chombo joined the ranks of nearly 200,000 foreigners who seek safe haven on America's shores.

They have flooded the Immigration and Naturalization Service with their requests, but so far, relatively few have been able to realize their dream.

"The situation is really out of control," said Vern Jervis, a spokesman for the service. "We have applications from every nation on Earth."

In 1978, he said, the agency got only 3,700 applications. Now it has close to 170,000, which means about 200,000 individuals are seeking safe haven because many applications cover families.

During the last fiscal year, 2,479 assylum applications were approved.

The application surge began after Congress passed the 1980 Refugee Act, which broadened the basis for getting assylum. It used to be granted only to individuals from communist nations or certain areas in the Middle East.

Now, an applicant must prove to the INS — and the State Department, which passes judgment on the applications — that he or she has a "well founded fear of persecution" based upon race, religion, political opinions, nationality or membership in a social or political group.

INS and congressional officials, along with lawyers dealing with the agency, say the flood of paperwork has so bogged down the agency that people with legitimate requests to become permanent residents face two- to three-year waits before their cases can be resolved.

"INS gets assylum applications by the box," said Warren Leiden, the executive director of the American Immigration Lawyers' Association. "Their task is Herculean, and they have to deal with data processing equipment that is barely in the 1950s.... Lost files are a common occurrence."

The INS also complains that it is being burdened by "frivolous" assylum applications, particularly from those the agency argues are "economic refugees" seeking improved living conditions.

The agency also complains that applicants — and their lawyers — have discovered that a person who has applied for assylum cannot be deported until the end of legal proceedings, which can last years. For example, one case has been in the system for seven years and is now before the Supreme Court.

So to streamline and tighten the process, the administration has backed some proposals tucked away inside a bill currently before Congress.

The bill, which would revolutionize the nation's immigration laws, was passed by the Senate May 18 and awaits House action. Its chances for passage are clouded, however, because of fierce opposition from Hispanic groups who dislike the bill's sanctions against employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens.

INS officials say they hope the bill will pass because revisions contained in it will wipe about 120,000 assylum applicants from the rolls by granting permanent resident status to those who have been in the United States for several years, primarily Cuban "boat people" who entered the country in 1980.

One reason for the increase in assylum-seekers and one that cannot be legislated away is the increased turmoil in nations near the United States.

To escape violence in their homelands some applicants "walk through Guatemala and Mexico, places where they shoot first and ask who you are later, to get to the United States," said Amit Pandya, a lawyer with the American Civil Liberties Union who works with assylum applicants. "It's no easy trip and their reasons for coming are not frivolous."

Critics also contend that the INS contributes to its own woes because it focuses intense scrutiny on some applications, such as those from El Salvador.

Pandya said he finds the INS and State Department require much tougher proof from Salvadorans than they do from Iranians.

"It's a clearly political decision," he charged.

He cited INS statistics for fiscal year 1983 that of the 13,501 applications from El Salvador, which has a U.S.-supported government, 2,914 were denied and 71 were granted. Of the 9,661 applications from Iran, which has poor relations with the administration, some 561 were denied and 1,760 were granted.

JUST SAY "CHARGE IT!"

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams

TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN—Texas is searching for a new director of the Texas Department of Corrections following the departure a few days ago of W. J. Estelle, Jr.

Estelle took the post 12 years ago, heralded as one of the finest penologists in the nation. He left with numerous prison system audits and investigations of corruption underway.

While no one has charged Estelle with a criminal offense, his administration and its recent history of construction cost overruns and other expenditures has been under close scrutiny by the Texas Legislature.

Last week, the prison system reported that the cost of maintaining state prisoners has increased over 275 percent during the past decade. That same report incidentally found that 27 percent of the prisoners are from Houston and 26 percent from Dallas; 44 percent are black, 37 percent are white and 19 percent are Hispanic.

According to one Board of Corrections member, Estelle's taking actions and spending money without board approval got him into hot water he couldn't survive.

In 1979 the Legislature appropriated $300 million for emergency prison construction to be managed by Estelle and other TDC officials. Critics charge he mismanaged those funds and other revenues, by arbitrarily awarding sweeping merit raises and hazardous pay to clerical and white-collar workers.

In stepping down, Estelle made no statement in defense of the criticism. Board members will attempt to replace him in the next three months.

Texas House

The leadership in the Texas House of Representatives will be different next session. At least 11 of the 33 standing committee chairmen are not going to run for re-election.

Some are going into the private sector; others, like Tom DeLay of Fort Bend County running for Congress, are seeking higher office.

The vacancies will allow Speaker Gib Lewis to choose a good many new lieutenants as about 30 of the 150 incumbents are estimated to voluntarily step down.

No Tax Bill?

Some observers believe that one factor influencing the decision not to return is the threat of a special session to raise taxes that Gov. Mark White wants to call before the summer ends.

Many legislators do not want to be forced to vote on a tax hike just prior to either the primary or general election. By calling it quits, they can serve until January 1985 with no such pressure.

But the en masse retirement might spell doom for White's tax bill. The 30 departing members may not want to vote for the tax hike in special session, preferring to postpone it until the regular session just six months later.

And legislators eager to find favor with Speaker Lewis so they may fill the leadership slots may be hesitant to pass a tax bill which Lewis opposes.

Goddess of Liberty

Experts renovating the Capitol have discovered several cracks in the statue of the Goddess of Liberty atop the Capitol dome.

The 96-year-old zinc statue was originally cast in the Capitol basement and raised to the dome in 1888. The Goddess holds a sword in her right hand while she raises a five-pointed Texas star with her left.

The experts plan to repair the Goddess where she stands—on top of the Capitol—rather than attempt to lower her to the ground.

War of Words

The war of words between two Democrats running for the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by John Tower has unity-minded Democrats wringing their hands.

Last week, for the second week in a row, State Sen. Lloyd Doggett, an Austin liberal, delivered a caustic attack on former Ambassador Bob Krueger.

This time Doggett's campaign mailed out over 50,000 fund-raising letters highly critical of Krueger and another opponent, Congressman Kent Hance of Lubbock. The letter depicted Krueger as a tool of special interests and criticized Hance for co-sponsoring Reagan's three-year income tax reduction bill.

Though mailed by the Doggett campaign, the letters bore the signature of Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower.

Hightower Apologizes

Hightower immediately issued a statement disavowing the letter, saying it was distributed without his approval by Doggett. He apologized to both Krueger and Hance for the error.

Earlier, Doggett had accused Krueger of voting to support foreign assassinations while on a television debate.

Experts says

David's condition serious

HOUSTON (AP) — Drugs being used to treat David, the 12-year-old "bubble boy," indicate he is in danger from symptoms brought on by an operation intended to give him immunity to illness, an expert on the procedure says.

The boy, whose system has been attacked by cells from transplanted bone marrow, continued to suffer from internal bleeding Wednesday, Dr. William Shearer said in a statement.

"He still has some diarrhea but nausea and vomiting have stopped," Shearer said. "His fever is somewhat lower and there is some gastrointestinal bleeding."

He said the boy is "better in general." Shearer said the boy will continue for several weeks to be treated with corticosteroids.

Dr. Joel Rappaport, clinical director of the bone marrow transplant program at Boston's Brigham and Women's Hospital, said in a telephone interview Wednesday that corticosteroids generally are reserved for fairly severe cases of graft-vs.-host disease.

Doctors implanted 1 2-3 ounces of specially treated bone marrow into David's bloodstream Oct. 20. But antibodies contained in the donor marrow have attacked the boy's system in a reaction known as graft-vs.-host disease.

"The acute form (of graft-vs.-host disease) is staged from zero to four," he said. "The higher the stage, the more serious the problem."

He said corticosteroids are generally used "in a high grade-two, a three and a four."

Between 25 and 50 percent of patients with cases that severe die, Rappaport said.

Susannah Moore Griffin, a spokeswoman for the Baylor College of Medicine, said doctors stopped bleeding from an ulcer in David's gastrointestinal tract. But the boy was still bleeding internally and doctors were unable to find that source, she said.

The boy, whose last name never has been disclosed, had spent his entire life until last week inside a series of sterile room-size plastic bubbles.

He was removed because doctors were unable to treat him properly for vomiting and diarrhea. David is now in a specially renovated two-room suite at Texas Children's Hospital.

He continues to get blood transfusions "as necessary," Mrs. Griffin said, and is still being fed intravenously.

"There are two reasons why IV feeding was done," she said. "One is because of vomiting and diarrhea. A lot of the nutrients he's taking in were lost. Also, the IV feeding bypasses the digestive system so it won't disturb the ulcer."

Despite the illness, David sleeps through the night, is able to walk around and look outside through a window in his room, Mrs. Griffin said.

"He is talking. I know he's been watching television," she said. "His mother has been in the room with him. I believe he has talked to some of his schoolmates over the phone."

David, who is in the sixth grade, has attended classes through use of a telephone hookup to his room at home.

Doctors hope chemically treated cells from his sister's immune system will grow accustomed to their new body and act as an effective protection system.

Because California lies astride the San Andreas fault, the frequency of earthquakes in the state is about 10 times higher than the rest of the world. The fault separates the North American plate (mass of land) from the Pacific plate, which has been moving at a rate of 6 cm a year for one million years.

For fraud

Four women indicted

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Immigration officials are seeking the manufacturer of bogus birth certificates being sold from California to Tennessee by at least 40 "street vendors" including four women indicted this week on charges of conspiring to sell phony identification papers.

The women, indicted Wednesday, are part of a multi-state fraud ring that operates as far south as Jalisco, Mexico, authorities said.

Maria A. Zamora, Francisca Sylvia Rodriguez and Maria del Rosario Villarreal face federal charges of conspiring to possess and sell false identification documents and evidence of U.S. citizenship.

Rodriguez and Villarreal are from Rio Grande City and Zamora is a resident of Mission.

The fourth woman listed on the indictment, Lydia Richmond, is currently serving three years in the Federal Correctional Institution at Fort Worth on a postal fraud conviction.

Last January, INS officials searched Zamora's home and found 165 identification items including counterfeit birth certificates and phony voter registration cards, O'Bryant said.

He said phony papers were sold for an average of $2,000 each to adult illegal aliens who used them to obtain social security cards, U.S. passports and welfare benefits.

"We intercepted documents produced by this ring from Chula Vista, Calif., to Oak Ridge, Tenn.," O'Bryant said.

Immigration officials have arrested more than 40 illegal aliens who tried to use the phony papers. It is not known how many people successfully used the bogus birth certificates.

"Any criminal who wants identification to do all sorts of illegal things could get documented-up through this group. An identity is an extremely important thing," said O'Bryant.

O'Bryant said birth certificates are easy to counterfeit and difficult to detect because cities and counties use different formats and quality of printing varies widely.

INS officials believe the papers are sold in the Mexican cities of Matamoros, Reynosa, Monterrey and in the State of Jalisco.

Imitation might be the most sincere form of flattery, but it most certainly is a sure way to get sued for patent infringement.

Think of it this way: A rainstorm is just a big leak you won't have to pay a roofer to fix.

Let us review your Insurance Program.

Because time changes insurance aims and costs, a review of your overall insurance program should be made every few years.

We will be pleased to make a survey of your insurance needs compared to the insurance you now carry. After the survey you can better evaluate whether your insurance dollar is being spent most wisely.

Often, insurance is bought "piecemeal" over a period of time. Many times, in reviewing programs, we have found that essential coverages are not insured at all or inadequately. Meanwhile, money may be spent on insurance which we would consider optional, that is, nice to have but not at the expense of more essential coverages.

For ratings victory

NBC beats out olympics

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Underdog NBC learned the thrill of victory as it used a risky game plan to defeat ABC's Winter Olympics coverage...

Without any special programming beyond the 'Celebrity' miniseries, NBC beat not only ABC but CBS as well for the week ended Feb. 12.

ABC didn't have a single show in the Top 10. NBC placed its entire Tuesday night lineup - top-finishing 'The A-Team,' 'Riptide' and 'Remington Steele' - plus 'Little House on the Prairie: The Last Farewell' in the Top 10.

It was a gutsy move to put up our regular programming and 'Celebrity' against ABC's Olympics, but it paid off, said NBC spokesman Gene Walsh.

ABC invested $93.5 million for the Olympic rights and many more millions to cover the Winter Games, which in the past have been a big winner for the network.

The five bottom shows in descending order were: CBS' 'Emerald Point N.A.S.,' NBC's 'Yellow Rose,' NBC's 'Berenstein Bears,' NBC's 'Chipmunk Valentine,' and NBC's 'The New Show.'

- Here are the week's 20 top shows: 1. 'The A-Team,' NBC, a rating of 26.8 or 22.4 million households. 2. 'Simon & Simon,' CBS, 26.4 or 22.1 million.

- 10. 'Remington Steele,' NBC, 21.4 or 17.9 million. 11. 'TV's Bloopers and Practical Jokes,' NBC, 21.3 or 17.8 million.

Pretrial postponed

AUSTIN (AP) - Action on preliminary motions to dismiss the commercial bribery case against Attorney General Jim Mattox has been postponed from today until Friday.

The hearing was reset Wednesday by State District Judge Mace Thurman. 'All I know is I was called and told to appear before Judge Mace Thurman, and he said the pretrial hearing had been reset for Friday,' Mattox's attorney, Roy Minton, said Wednesday.

District Attorney Ronnie Earle's office had no comment. There was speculation that the change was made to schedule the hearing after a Thursday session of the current grand jury. Travis County prosecutors have said they are considering a new indictment against Mattox because of the vagueness of the Sept. 13 indictment. The September indictment says Mattox threatened to drive a Houston law firm out of the bond business.

- 20.4 or 17.0 million. 16. Movie-'Arthur,' ABC, 20.1 or 16.8 million. 17. 'Hill Street Blues,' NBC, 19.8 or 16.5 million.

However, Assistant District Attorney Phil Nelson said the indictment failed to specify that the alleged threats were made by telephone. He said Texas law requires an indictment to describe the manner of the alleged communications.

This was the fourth postponement of the pretrial hearing. No trial date has been set. Minton said most of the motions he expects Thurman to rule on Friday concern dismissal of the September indictment.

Center named to handle space station

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's Johnson Space Center has beaten out eight other centers for a chance to manage NASA's space station program, officials said.

The final choice, which came down to the Houston operation and the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., was announced Wednesday by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

"We've actually had fair advance notice that this was going to happen, but until we saw it in writing, I couldn't assume," Gerald D. Griffin, director of the Houston center, said in an interview.

"The biggest fact is that we're on a course here for another decade for strong development to keep JSC on top of the technology edge in space."

Griffin said he was told of the selection in a letter from NASA Director James Beggs.

"I'm feeling very good about it all," Griffin said. "Everybody down here is very excited. Now we realize we've got the big challenge and now we've got to go to work and make it happen."

The Houston center, which has trained America's astronauts since the infancy of the manned space program in the early 1960s, was among eight centers considered for the space station mission.

Beggs said the Johnson Space Center would be forming a "program office" to coordinate engineering, business management, logistical operations and vendors which would supply the station.

President Reagan called for the construction of a station in his State of the Union address last month. NASA spokesman Dave Alter in Houston said it was likely the station could be in space in 1991 or 1992.

Griffin said the selection likely would raise the employment level.

James Autry says he wants to die on television

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — James David Autry says officials should televise his execution, set March 14, if they really want to scare others out of committing crimes.

Autry, a 29-year-old who came within half an hour of being put to death Oct. 4, told Houston station KHOU-TV Wednesday the public doesn't understand what executions are all about.

"It's not real — all that real — to the public if they don't see an execution," Autry said. "If they're serious about using the death penalty as a deterrent, they should let the public see it."

He said he wants appeals efforts on his behalf stopped. His mother, Shirley Stucker of Florence, Colo., is working to have the death sentence commuted to life in prison.

"All it's going to do is prolong the pain for other people," Autry said of the appeal.

Autry still maintains he is innocent of the 1980 shooting death of Shirley Drouet, a clerk at a convenience store in Port Arthur.

But he said he is sorry about her death.

"I pray to be forgiven," he said. "All I could say is I'm sorry."

Autry contends his companion, John Alton Sandifer, fired the shots which killed Mrs. Drouet; former priest Joseph Broussard; and left Greek sailor Anthanasios Svarnas with brain damage.

Sandifer, Autry's lover, was originally charged with capital murder in the episode, but the count was dropped when he pleaded guilty to an unrelated burglary. Sandifer has been released on parole.

Autry's execution was halted in the last hour Oct. 4 by Supreme Court Justice Byron White.

White said he wanted to give the court a chance to consider arguments in a similar case, where defense lawyers contended their client should not be punished with death if other defendants had received less severe penalties for the same crime.

But the court ruled against the "proportionality" contention and state District Judge Leonard Giblin set Autry's new death date last week.

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — President Miguel de la Madrid called on the people of Mexico to leave quarrels, slander and name-calling behind as the nation recovers from its economic crisis.

Speaking at the close of a meeting on social development in this northern industrial city, de la Madrid said it is necessary to maintain unity among worker, campesino and business sectors to start on the gradual but solid path to recovery.

"In the third year of an economic crisis of unprecedented proportions, we Mexicans can affirm with deeds and with realities that we have strength — national and institutional strength," the president said. "This is the clear explanation for what we have achieved at leaving behind the most bitter, most severe and most risky moments of the crisis. "I'm certain that the strengthening of our institutions will permit Mexicans to continue advancing. We have a system that is a product of our history, with clear and defined values; values which liberty broadens each day, which are permitting us to broaden democracy as well," he said. "It is through liberty and democracy that we must continue advancing toward social justice."

And then there's the fed-up violinist who torched his instrument and left town. He roamed while his fiddle burned.

Once upon a time you could let your garden go to pot without being visited by the narc squad.

ACAPULCO, Mexico (AP) — German Prince Jurgen von Anhalt says painting with a jet stream instead of a brush makes him feel sexy.

After a session of Jet Art at the airport of this Pacific resort, "It is stimulating and everything is spontaneous. It makes me feel very very sexy."

In an interview with Mexico's English-language daily

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — The governor of the border state of Nuevo Leon says the governmental institutions of Mexico never have been tested as harshly as they have during the current economic crisis.

"Despite it, the Mexican political system has shown its strength and vigor. It has preserved peace, maintained in order the social pact of Mexicans and guaranteed all liberties," Gov. Alfonso Martinez Dominguez said during a visit here by President Miguel de la Madrid.

"With one year of his administration, we can affirm that with Miguel de la Madrid the Mexican political system not only resists, but also grows stronger and more consolidated," Martinez Dominguez, who is a member of the president's Institutional Revolutionary Party, said.

"In Nuevo Leon, we don't live on miracles," he said. "What we achieve and what we conquer as Mexicans, we must achieve only by our own efforts. The people of Nuevo Leon know that, united as we are, together with you, with your support and guidance, we will be capable, if not of making miracles, of constructing a more egalitarian Mexico which we all desire."

ACAPULCO, Mexico (AP) — Mexican gold imports will be reduced to a minimum this year because of increased domestic production, predicts the director of the Mining Development Commission.

The official, Luis de Pablo, said production would rise from 6.6 tons last year to almost eight this year, with a total value of $100 million. He attributed the increase to better production at mines in Jalisco state, 330 miles northwest of Mexico City.

De Pablo also predicted that silver production would increase from 58 million ounces to 60 million ounces this year. He said Mexico would hold its place as the world's top producer of silver.

The News, the artist said he belongs to the jet age "and so I make Jet Art. I create images that can't be made with a brush or palette knife."

A Learjet-25 on the runway here splattered gallons of paint the prince tossed in the air onto canvases propped one at a time on a hydraulic platform. He completed five large canvases during the session.

"I talked with technicians and tried to get people to support me in this project, but no one believed in it," von Anhalt said of his theories conceived in 1980. "When I was finally allowed to experiment with Jet Art, I was literally crying for joy." He had worked with jets and paints in other locations before coming to Acapulco.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Algeria's energy minister predicts that petroleum consumption will decrease this year, the official El Nacional newspaper reported Wednesday.

It quoted Sadek Boussena, secretary-general of the Algerian Energy Ministry, as saying during an official visit here that there will be "a hole" in the second trimester of the year. Boussena asked all producing countries to maintain discipline so as not to alter the market abruptly.

Algeria is a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. Mexico is not, but it generally follows OPEC price guidelines.

El Nacional quoted Boussena as saying during a news conference that the current international situation is not comparable to 1973, when consuming countries were dominant.

The Algerian official met Tuesday with Mario Ramon Beteta, director of the state oil monopoly PEMEX.

When wife earns most, income is lower

NEA GRAPHIC Marilyn Post

(Source: U.S. Census Bureau, 1982)

The wage gap between men and women penalizes families in which the wife's income is of major importance. When the wife is the primary or sole breadwinner, the average family income is about 25 percent less than it would be if the husband were the chief wage earner.

MacLaine, Winger possible contenders for best actress

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Shirley MacLaine and Debra Winger, who sparred as mother and daughter in "Terms of Endearment," will probably be up against each other again — as contenders for the 56th Motion Picture Academy Award for best actress.

The heart-wrenching movie about the two women's relationship as it evolves over the years was expected to capture top honors when the Oscar nominations come out today at the Academy's mirror-walled Wilshire Boulevard headquarters.

"Terms of Endearment" has an aging astronaut, also expected to win a nomination for best supporting actor and James L. Brooks is expected to be nominated for direction and writing.

Other likely standouts in today's nominations included "The Big Chill," "The Right Stuff," "The Dresser" and "Educating Rita."

The film crowd will be watching to see how academy voters treat Barbra Streisand. Her one-woman show, "Yentl," has been praised by some critics, panned by others. Miss Streisand's debut as director was not among the five nominations for awards by the Directors Guild.

Miss Streisand appears as a boy student through most of "Yentl" and even marries Amy Irving. If both are nominated, says Academy spokesman Robert Werden, it will mark the first time two nominees of the same sex were married. Mickey Rooney, winner of an honorary Oscar at last year's awards, and Academy President Gene Allen will read the nominees to a record number of media representatives.

Since November, publicists have been waging their annual promotional blitz on behalf of Oscar-hopeful clients, taking aim at the Academy's 4,000 voting members with trade paper ads, media interviews and special screenings.

The publicity barrage quieted last week when academy members concluded their balloting for nominations, but resumes in earnest after the announcement of nominees.

Three honorary award winners were announced in advance. Hal Roach, 92, producer of Laurel and Hardy, Our Gang and other comedies, will receive a special award. Producer Mike Frankovich was named for the Jean Hersholt humanitarian award. And Dr. John G. Frayne was voted the Gordon E. Sawyer technical achievement award.

The Board of Governors decided not to give the Irving Thalberg award, which recognizes a consistent high quality by a producer.

Johnny Carson will return as master of ceremonies for the 56th award presentations April 9 at the Los Angeles Music Center. The awards will be broadcast live by the ABC Television network, starting at 9 p.m. EST.

Keep tabs on stored items

DEAR READERS — Whether you're storing holiday decorations or family photos, these Pointers will help. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — When I store seasonal decorations, such as fall flower arrangements, Christmas candles, etc. I mark on next year's calendar where they are stored. For example, when I take down a fall wreath that I won't need again until next September, I mark on that date on the calendar the location of the wreath. When September rolls around, I know exactly where to look. If you don't have next year's calendar, make your notes in December, then transfer the dates to your new calendar when you get it. — IRENE

DEAR POLLY — A reader who filed her pictures and negatives by number has a great solution to keeping track of dates when photos were taken. I have a further suggestion. A few years ago, we lost our home in a very quick and destructive fire. For several years before this, I had left all my negatives at my parents' home in one box. It was a great feeling after the fire to know we could still replace this important part of our past. Now I keep them stored in a safety deposit box. One never knows when disaster may strike. — BEEN THERE

DEAR POLLY — I canned pumpkin and yams this year. It's the first time I've ever tried these vegetables. I followed the Kerr canning guide, cubing the vegetables and covering with hot syrup. The one thing I didn't do was place the jars in a pressure canner, which I didn't have. I canned them for one hour at a hard boil. I mentioned this to my sister and she said it might not be safe to eat these vegetables. Can I use the pumpkin and yams or should I toss them out? It wasn't that expensive; I just had fun canning something different for my family. — CH

DEAR CONNIE — PLEASE DON'T EAT THOSE YAMS AND PUMPKIN! Yams and pumpkin are low-acid vegetables that MUST be canned in a pressure canner to ensure that botulism spores are destroyed. Even a full hour in a boiling-water bath will not raise the temperature of the canned food high enough to destroy these deadly organisms. Boiling-water-bath canning is perfectly safe for a large variety of pickles (which are preserved in vinegar), fruits (peaches, applesauce, pears, etc.), tomatoes and tomato juice, and jams and jellies. But most vegetables and meats are low-acid and cannot be safely canned without a pressure canner and proper pressure-canning procedures. And always follow the directions in a reliable up-to-date canning guide scrupulously. There are no shortcuts to safe home canning! — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — An old rubber dish-drain mat makes an excellent boot mat to catch the melting winter snow. White toothpaste can temporarily plug a nail hole in the wall. — CLAUDIA

DEAR POLLY — Before putting "pitted" dates through your grinder for fruitcake, cut through the middle of each one to make sure it is really pitted. Just one pit can play havoc with your grinder. — BERTHA

Doctor starts fund to aid transplant patients

By DIANA SMITH
Associated Press Writer
ALBANY, Ga. (AP) — Dr. W. Carl Gordon switched on a network morning news show and, adjusting his tie, watched a segment about a Chicago boy who needed a liver transplant.

and he died before enough money could be raised through private donations. "You know, somebody ought to do something about that," the surgeon recalls telling his wife that cold morning in January 1983. She replied, "That somebody is you. Why don't you do something?"

Fund Foundation Inc., with Gordon serving as founder and first vice president, kicked off a $10 million fundraising drive for underprivileged children in need of liver transplants.

A liver transplant can cost up to $250,000. Many insurance companies and state and federally funded programs such as Medicare and Medicaid consider the transplants experimental surgery and won't pay for them.

although on a lesser scale than the Faith Fund Foundation, she said.

A spokeswoman for a group that raises money for transplant families in coordination with hospitals suggested that people hoping to help such patients band together.

"It's not unusual for any Joe Smith on the street to start his own thing," said Betty Bradberry, director of the Children's Liver Association in Dallas, which has been raising money for food, transportation and living costs since 1981.

If people want to raise funds, they should call the major transplant centers "and ask what the needs are," she said. "Maybe we could all work together. We just see everybody out there doing their own thing."

The Albany-based group has won key endorsements from Barbara Bush, wife of

Vice President George Bush; the Rev. Joseph Lowery, head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference; and the Martin Luther King Foundation.

Applicants will be reviewed by a selection committee from Faith Fund's board of trustees, which is made up of doctors, lawyers, health administration officials, businessmen and lay people.

The group already has received its charter and tax exempt status from the Internal Revenue Service. It has also received "just under $3,000" in donations, said Herbert Phipps, an Albany attorney who is chairman of Faith Fund.

Phipps said the group was deliberately broad in defining "underprivileged" in its charter so that the term technically could apply to most people who require transplants.

Gordon said he wants to gather a large enough pool of readily available cash to ensure that "no child has to die because there was no money." Eventually, he said, Faith Fund hopes to raise money for other types of experimental surgery as well.

"No one can help if a donor is not available, but we can help if there is no money available," he said.

Shortly after Gordon started forming Faith Fund last year, the group publicized the case of a 6-year-old Albany girl who needed a liver transplant. Tonya Love died before Faith Fund got official approval to start raising funds.

With a ready money supply, Gordon said communities could avoid "11th-hour efforts" to raise money for a critically ill child.

Right now, Gordon said, there are few ways to raise money for people who can't afford transplants unless the case is publicized in the media. And Gordon said that penalizes parents who don't know how to conduct a public relations campaign.

"Given any child, if the parents can manipulate the media and get some reporter to write a story, then they can get money," he said. "If the parents can't manipulate the media then they go down the drain."

"There's a degree of inequity in the system."

A lack of funding "condemns to death underprivileged children. I think we can do better than that," he said. But as a surgeon, Gordon said he understands the problem from the other side as well. Hospitals can't afford to perform free transplants.

Gordon said it's up to private organizations such as his to fill the economic gap.

"I have come to realize that the federal government can't do everything for everybody," he said.

Faith Fund will be able to realize its $10 million goal "if people pull together," he said. "No one is ever going to tell me that America is broke. We can raise money and dispense it equitably."

Faith Fund's first major effort will be a June telethon sponsored by an Albany television station owned by Gordon.

Faith Fund also plans to ship out public service announcements to media and local officials in cities where liver transplants are being performed, including Los Angeles, Minneapolis, Pittsburgh and Memphis, Tenn.

Jayne Williams gives program

Members of the Hereford Fine Arts Association met for their monthly meeting Tuesday evening at the Community Center with June Owens, president, calling the meeting to order.

During the brief business session, Shirley Wyssmen, secretary, read the minutes of the last meeting and reported that the club had donated $100 to the Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center.

Also, Jolene Bledsoe gave a report on the progress made on the Jubilee of Arts to be held in conjunction with the Town & Country Jubilee Aug. 10-11.

Jayne Williams of Clovis, N.M., presented the program in which she gave a pastel demonstration. She stated that pastels is a permanent form of medium and should be framed behind clear glass. Like other mediums it should not be exposed to bright sunlight.

The pigment in pastels has a clay binder and is pressed into sticks. There are several types of pastel paper to work on but the speaker said she preferred Canson and uses the smooth side. She also stated that the color of paper is important.

Ms. Williams said the first step is to draw a composition onto the paper, dusting off any surplus dark heavy lines and then determine the direction of the light source. A shadow is a compliment to the color it is falling on. She suggested that to lighten colors uselighter shades in the same color family.

She further stated that one should always reflect a thickness in potter and keep in mind the proper perspective in roundness of pot and curved lines. To check one's painting for the proper perspective, it should either be turned upside-down or looked at in a mirror. Make the strokes in the direction of the weaving or pottery to create roundness. She said shadows are not all dark and the artist should repeat colors in different areas of the painting.

Hostesses for the evening were Mary Aguirre and Mildred Guinn. They served several kinds of cheeses, crackers, cookies, mints, nuts, coffee and spiced tea from a table decorated with a Valentine motif.

There were 14 members present and three guests, Mr. Williams, Mr. Kersey and Carmen Angel.

The chief reason the U.S. Constitution provided for a census of the population every 10 years was to give a basis for apportionment of members of the House of Representatives.
