91st Year, No. 139, Deaf Smith County, Hereford, Tx.

Teenage Pregnancy

Although the number of teenage pregnancies dropped significantly in 1991, Deaf Smith County is still No. 2 in the state in the number of young persons (ages 10-19) giving birth. In 1990, 5.8% of ALL girls in Deaf Smith County, ages 10-19, gave birth.

1984--123	1985--94	1986--100
1990--103	1991--75	1992--??

There will be at least 32 girls ages 10-19 in Deaf Smith County that give birth this year--that is at least how many officials know are pregnant at this time.

Program will help teenage parents deal with children

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

An innovative grant program could allow Hereford school officials to address the continuing problem of teenage pregnancies in Hereford.

The grant application will be filed in February with the Texas Education Agency. TEA has earmarked $2 million for individual school campuses for innovative programs to meet student needs.

The need for a program for teenage parents is great in Hereford. In 1990, 5.8 percent of all girls ages 10-19 in Deaf Smith County gave birth. The actual percentage might have been higher; the 103 girls listed gave birth in Hereford. There may have been others that went to Amarillo or other regional hospital to deliver their babies.

The number of young girls giving birth has hovered around 100 for many years. It was as high as 123 in 1984. In 1991, there were only 75 listed in the county.

The grant program would address the needs of young parents (male and female) and help prevent future problems with their offspring.

"We run into problems with their children because they have no language skills," said Corky Lockmiller, assistant superintendent for special programs for the HISD. Lockmiller said there is little or no interaction between the young parents and their children during the very early years where development is greatest. By the time the children are ready for school (as early as three, if they qualify, and no later than six years old), the children have very limited language skills.

"We can't say it's a bilingual problem because they are not lingual at all, and it is certainly not limited to racial groups. It's from all quarters," Lockmiller said.

In many cases, the young parents leave their children with parents or other caretakers to go to school. The caretakers are many times busy with their own children and do not have the time to devote to the new young child in the home. The young parents are usually very naive about what they need to do with the babies.

The new program, if adopted, would address all of those areas.

According to the grant application, there would be a child-care facility constructed at or near Hereford High School. A licensed teacher would be in charge of the program.

At least one class period a day, the parents would be required to attend class in the center so they may learn better child care and parental skills. The parents would also be required to spend their lunch hour in the center with the child.

"We want to fund the day care facility on campus so the mothers and the fathers can develop responsibility in parenting," said Marilyn Leasure, administrator for secondary programs for HISD. "We want to do this instead of having day care provided elsewhere, or leaving the child at home. We want to help them develop accountability as parents."

The grant would also help start classes for all high school students on self-esteem, parenting and child care.

Some of the programs are already in place, but are "only doing a maintenance job" according to Kathy Slamp, assistant principal at Hereford High School.

Slamp said four girls are involved in the program where children are supervised at Hereford Day Care. Those girls and others have brought their babies to a special class for pregnant girls provided by the high school.

"One girl said that when the baby cries, she gets really mad because she doesn't know what to do," said Slamp. "I see a big potential for child abuse there. The total program would be for any students. Maybe they would see what can result and would put a stop to some of this."

HISD officials hope the program can keep more of the young mothers and fathers in school. School figures show that 80 percent of all girls who are pregnant before age 17 do not finish high school.

School officials were happy to see the lower number of young girls who gave birth in the county last year. Officials attribute that to programs begun in the past four years: DARE, WHO, self-responsibility, and other self-esteem courses taught from four-year-old Kindergarten through high school.

WHO is an acronym for We Help Ourselves. WHO teaches an age-appropriate curriculum to youngsters dealing with topics including self-esteem, stranger danger and many other areas.

DARE is a required course for all sixth graders taught by Hereford Police Officer Terry Brown. Among the topics covered by DARE are sexuality, self-esteem and sexual abuse issues.

The self-responsibility course is required for all seventh graders and deals more in depth with issues including sexuality and self-esteem, and addresses the possible consequences of sexual promiscuity.

"We absolutely cannot ignore these kids and need to offer them anything we can," said Superintendent Charles Greenawalt. "We are breeding a cycle we are not doing anything to interrupt, although we are doing a great deal at the lower grades to prevent this from ever happening."

"This (teen pregnancy) is not something we're pleased with, but we can't turn our backs on them."

Bad beets cost region $15 million

Sugar industry officials estimate that $6 million worth of sugar beets have been lost in area fields after the worst sugarcane harvest in the region in 22 years.

This year, for the first time since 1969, beets were left in the ground. About 8,000 acres of beets weren't harvested this year. That will cost the region at least $15 million in payments made to farmers for their crops.

The beet harvest was looking sweet throughout the summer and fall. Then, an early snowfall and bitter-cold freeze struck the region on Oct. 30. It lasted for several days and ruined much of the crop.

Even for the beets that weren't ruined, the weather continued to play havoc. The region received two heavy rains, and a snow Christmas night led to more deterioration of beets still in the field.

Bill Cleavinger, president of the Texas Sugar Beet Growers Association, said there have been other bad years since 1969. "We've had some trying years in between, but we've always been able to get every beet out of the field," Cleavinger said.

Harvest was off-and-on until New Year's Day, when Imperial Holly officials said the plant would remain open only if the plant could receive at least 4,000 tons of beets a day. Farmers throughout the region attacked the least-muddy fields to meet the quota.

Parts of the region received more rain and snow last Monday and Tuesday. Imperial Holly said beets were coming in Wednesday and Thursday with as much as 35 percent dirt coming in with the beets. Usually, dirt and mud make up no more than 10 percent of what comes off a truck.

Imperial Holly operators were faced with more than mud. The early-season freeze caused many beets to turn into a gummy, mushy mess. The beets formed dextran, a gum that naturally occurs in sugar when subjected to certain conditions. The dextran clogs the filters at the plant in Hereford. When the filters are clogged, the processing has to stop, driving up Imperial Holly's costs.

The lousy beets dropped the worth of the beets from $40 a ton to as little as $20 a ton.

Although farmers may begin filing for disaster payments on the crop on Feb. 3, they may not be able to qualify for the payments. The disaster program calls for a loss of at least 65 percent. Some fields, in order to determine their harvest suitability, had rows cut to test the beets. That may lead to some fields, although condemned, to be under the 65 percent limit.

TOP HAND Morris is honored as best rancher for 1991

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

Before non-traditional careers for women became the rule, Darline Morris was well on her way to being a rancher.

Long before she inherited a spread of 10 sections of rangeland straddling the Texas-New Mexico line, every-thing she did seemed to mark the way to her own ranching operation.

Her efforts to improve her land have brought her the honor of Conservation Rancher of 1991, chosen by the Tierra Blanca Soil and Water Conservation District, headquartered in Hereford.

Since her mother bought a horse and saddle for her when she was five years old, Morris has spent many of her waking hours on horseback. That has helped her in her chosen field.

Assuming active management of her ranch brought her into a studied program of range management, controlling cholla and mesquite growth for the betterment of the land.

Working with the SCS, she initially used a chemical on the unwanted growth. After the chemical was taken off the market, Morris turned to "grubbing."

"The best time to dig out cholla, I believe, is in December and January when the temperatures are the coldest," said the rancher. "The roots freeze and it dies."

Timing is all-important, she explained, because if the roots are not exposed to extreme cold, cholla will re-root.

She also believes pulling down mesquite is the best way to remove it from the land.

"We pull a chain between two tractors to knock it down," Morris said.

Clearing the rangeland is only part of the conservation program Morris has implemented on her ranch. Through the years, she's installed cross fences and watering facilities.

Kids looking ahead to an exciting year

What are second graders looking forward to in 1992?

That's what we asked some of the students of Judy Bullard, a teacher at Aikman Primary School in Hereford.

The second graders are worried about some of the important things in their lives, like learning to write in cursive and to learn more about math.

They're also interested in other important things, like sports and vacation. Here are some of their responses to the topic, "What I Want to Do in 1992."

Geoffrey Marquez: I would like to be a wrestler in WCW World Championship Wrestling. In high school I am going to play football. The number on my jersey is 2 because my uncle and cousin wear that number. I would work hard.

Jefforie Dawn Frazier: I want to write in cursive because it is fun. It is faster, too.

Benjamin Aaron Brock: In 1992 I want to stop griping when I do my chores and get better at Nintendo.

Jessica Leal: In 1992 I want to go to the zoo. Then I want to go to California and I want to get a dog and

The youngsters are interested in learning to write in cursive and doing better in math. They also have dreams about football, gymnastics, and the WWF.

Meeting will explain manure benefits

How can farmers learn to use one of the area's most plentiful renewable resources?

A meeting to be held Monday at 6:30 p.m. at the Hereford Community Center is designed to help farmers learn how to use manure to return nutrients to the soil.

The meeting will be sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and Texas Cattle Feeders Association. A roast beef dinner will be served beginning at 6:30 p.m.

During 1991, the cattle feeding industry had a gross income of over $350 million in Deaf Smith county. The industry contributed $14 billion to the region's economy. It produced 25 percent of the nation's beef. The industry produced jobs and provided economic stability to the region.

It also produced that certain something else: manure.

The industry has struggled with environmentally-safe ways to store and control the vast amount of manure. The struggle has been complicated by more regulations by state and federal governments.

Manure, however, is a renewable resource that, if applied, can help farmers return nutrients back to the soil.

After the meal, a program will feature several TAES experts. The program will be led by Dr. John Sweeten, associate department head and Extension Program Leader for Agricultural Engineering from Texas A&M University.

"Dr. Sweeten is one of the nation's foremost authorities on the management and utilization of animal waste products," said Dennis Newton, county extension agent.

Also on the program will be Dr. Michael Hickey, Extension soil chemist and director of the Texas A&M Soil Testing Laboratory in Lubbock; Dr. Larry Unruh, Extension soil chemist and soil fertility specialist from College Station; Troy Christian, a farmer-rancher from the Friona area; and Robert Diller, compost handler and distributor from Hereford.

Topics will cover manure usage, nutrient content, soil structure and tilth, composting, application, laws and regulations, and practical usage.

Go West ...if you can find any room

By DAVID FOSTER
Associated Press Writer

It didn't take a lot of charts and figures to convince Butch Barker that the wide-open West is filling up.

He saw the light - literally - two years ago, when the little Northern California town of Burney got its first traffic signal.

When Barker moved to Burney in 1981 for its clean air and country living, driving through town was clear sailing, as free as the mountains all around. Now it's stop, go, stop, go - and life isn't quite the same.

"It's a symbolic thing," Barker said. "Especially at first, you'd stop and immediately think of why the light was there and how it came to be."

How it came to be, for Burney and a thousand other towns in the American West, can be answered with one simple statistic: The West is by far the nation's fastest-growing region, with a 22 percent population jump in the 1980s, more than twice the national rate.

Newcomers are lured by the same qualities that beckoned early pioneers - open space, economic opportunity, a chance to start anew. But as more people chase the American dream into the West, cherished notions of the boundless frontier collide with limits in an ever more crowded land.

Pastures vanish under asphalt, home prices soar, classrooms overflow, crime increases, highways clog, and pollution taints the air.

"We can't continue to take the explosive growth of the last decade," said Andrew Grose, president of Westrends, a project of the Western (See GROWING PAINS, Page 12A)

Walton added to hospital staff

WALTON

Ron Walton has recently been appointed to the position of business office manager at Deaf Smith General Hospital, according to Ron Rives, administrator. Walton comes to Hereford from Lamesa where he was the accounts manager for Medical Arts Hospital for four years.

His areas of responsibility will include insurance, accounts receivables, data processing, admitting, and the ER Ward Clerks. Walton will supervise the 17 full-time employees.

"During the past few months we have experienced some staff turn-over in the business office, but the staff we have is a high quality team. Most people in the department are cross-trained in several areas, which gives us a tremendous advantage," Walton, who's been on the job since mid-December, said.

Walton plans to restructure the business office by moving people into areas of their greatest expertise. "This will allow each person to concentrate on one area, such as insurance, and hopefully clear up some of the problems we've had in the past," Walton added.

"Our people are eager to utilize the excellent computer and software system the hospital has in place," Walton said. The business office staff has recently received extra training in using the software.

"The software package we have for this department is one of the most advanced that I have seen," Walton said. The computer program will allow the department to track numbers of patient days, types of diagnoses treated, costs of treating certain diagnoses, etc. Walton explained that providing high quality of reports to management and to the Board of Directors helps them make the best decisions for the hospital.

One of the areas Walton plans to concentrate on first is county indigent care. "Handling indigent care claims properly has the greatest potential to assist those in the community who are truly in need, and also to identify those patients who do not fall into the indigent guidelines as set by Board policy," he said.

In the near future, he plans to assign a coordinator for the program who will work with Walton-

WONDER DRUG

EDITOR'S NOTE - Something has happened to that ubiquitous little white pill people have been popping for the past 100 years. Aspirin has suddenly become very important medicine. Studies show that small, regular doses of aspirin may help prevent heart disease, some forms of cancer, cataracts in the elderly and other ailments.

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - As the 1800s dwindled down to a precious few, a German scientist, looking to help his arthritic father, gave the 20th century a present to cure 100 years of headaches, a little white pill called aspirin.

Now that same little white pill has become a wonder of the latter decades of the century.

It no longer just relieves headaches or the swollen joints of arthritis.

-It is now credited with preventing heart attacks and probably strokes.

-It seems to act in some way against cancer of the colon.

-It counters a sometimes fatal hypertension during pregnancy.

-It seems to slow the development of cataracts in the elderly.

-And it may enhance the ability of the immune system to fight off viruses and bacteria.

Yet, in spite of its century-long ubiquity, aspirin remains one of the greatest medical mysteries. No one had an inkling how it worked, what it did inside the body, until 1970 and even now scientists wonder if they know it all.

Today Americans take more than 29 billion aspirin or aspirin-containing tablets a year - 80 million a day - some 40 percent of them for headaches. They work. They work so well, in fact, that the little white pill has a strong psychological effect. One study shows that some people sense relief when they only think they are taking aspirin and really aren't.

All through the annals of modern medicine scientists and doctors extol the little white pill.

Says Dr. Charles Hennekens of Harvard Medical School and Boston's Brigham and Women's Hospital:

"In a sense aspirin is as old as medicine because Hippocrates used the leaves and bark of the white willow tree, the extracts from them, to relieve the aches and pains of his patients, which included women in labor...So we've jumped from 500 B.C. to 1900 and in the next 100 years aspirin became the most widely used drug in the world."

In 1948, when modern aspirin was only 50 years old, a search of the medical literature came up with 4,000 published reports on aspirin. In just the 10 years from 1975 to 1986 there were 4,000 more.

In short, science is still probing and finding more effects of the little white pill.

Not all the effects are virtuous. Scientists knew early on that aspirin irritated the stomach and found ways to coat it or buffer it so it would pass through to the intestines without causing harm.

Then in 1963, an Australian pathologist named R.D.K. Reye implicated aspirin in a strange disorder which was given his name. In Reye's syndrome, some children recovering from influenza or chickenpox who took aspirin began to vomit and later showed signs of brain involvement ranging from sleepiness to aggressive behavior.

Though aspirin was not shown to be causative, the evidence was strong enough in 1986 for the British Committee on Safety of Medicine to recommend that aspirin not be given to children under the age of 12 except on a physician's advice.

But in any case, the occurrence of Reye's syndrome is rare.

Aspirin is a non-prescription drug proving itself useful against ailments that require prescribable remedies.

"The more we learn about the science, how it interacts in the body, there may be even more uses," says Dr. Thomas Bryant, president of the Washington-based Aspirin Foundation.

"But one must hasten to add it's not a panacea, not a magic pill. People shouldn't rush out and start taking a lot of aspirin. You don't take it without some consequences. You can't take a lot of it and people should be aware of that. You should consult with your physician and see if you are one of those who can benefit from it."

Insights into aspirin's marvels pile one upon the other. Twice it won researchers Nobel Prizes.

In 1970, John Vane, working with colleagues of London's Royal College of Surgeons, showed that small amounts of aspirin irreversibly block an enzyme in blood platelets that are responsible for the platelets sticking together, which is the process by which blood clots. It is also part of the process which makes blood vessels clog and leads to heart attacks and strokes: Vane won his Nobel Prize in 1980. Another Nobel Prize-winning discovery by Bengt Samuelsson of the Stockholm's Karolinska Institute uncovered another of aspirin's actions. He and others, including Vane, found hormone-like chemicals called prostaglandins in the prostate gland, hence the name. It turned out these chemicals are almost as ubiquitous as aspirin. They are produced throughout the body and affect everything from digestion and reproduction to circulation and the immune system.

Excess production of prostaglandins causes myriad ailments, headaches, fever, blood clots, menstrual cramps, inflammation and some aberrations in the immune response.

Scientists then discovered that aspirin thwarts the production of prostaglandins, which explains why it works against so many of those ailments.

But prostaglandins also help protect the stomach, which explains why aspirin sometimes upsets the stomach.

This year scientists from the Boston University School of Medicine reported another role for aspirin. They studied more than 1,300 patients with colon or rectal cancer and concluded that aspirin's anti-prostaglandin ability may

With all of the advances made in medicine, the innocent aspirin is the biggest wonder of all play a role in stymieing development of those cancers. Regular use of aspirin, they reported in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute, may significantly lower the risk of bowel cancer.

Probably the most significant finding is that "an aspirin a day" regimen reduces the possibility of heart attack. It also prevents a second heart attack and dramatically reduces the chance of death.

Hennekens and his cohort, Julie Buring, have tracked aspirin's effectiveness in a number of ailments, including its use in the prevention of migraine headaches. They have mounted large random studies of thousands of doctors and nurses, some given aspirin and some not, to measure the effects of the little white pill.

Hennekens says that earlier and smaller studies, grouped together, indicated that heart attack and stroke victims "had lower risk of developing subsequent heart attack, lower risk of developing subsequent stroke, actually a 15 percent lower risk of death."

That so impressed the Food and Drug Administration that in 1985 it ruled that aspirin could be prescribed for treatment in survivors of heart attack.

Armed with those statistics, researchers mounted a random study which found that if you gave aspirin "within 24 hours immediately following the symptoms of a heart attack, you would find they would have a significantly lower rate of a second heart attack, a subsequent stroke and death, a 23 percent lower death rate over five weeks and this

1st Abilene posts good gain for '91

ABILENE--First Abilene Bankshares, Inc. reported earnings of $8,645,000 for the year ended Dec. 31, 1991, a 14 percent increase over earnings reported for 1990.

The company is the parent company of Hereford State Bank, as well as First National Banks of Abilene, Sweetwater, Cleburne, and Eastland National Bank.

For the fourth quarter of 1991, earnings were $2.25 million, an increase of 17.7 percent above the same period last year. Earnings per share amounted to $3.88, an increase of 14.1 percent over the prior year.

Kenneth T. Murphy, chairman and CEO, said the improvements in earnings during 1991 "stemmed from reduced provisions for loan losses as well as increased income from service related functions. He also noted that the operations include the addition of the First National Bank in Cleburne which was acquired at the close of 1990.

Assets of the company were $834.5 million at year-end, up about $39.6 million over the prior year. Equity capital totaled $73.5 million, or 8.8 percent of assets.

difference persists up to one-year follow-up."

When those statistics came out, Hennekens says, only about one in three patients having a heart attack were given aspirin.

"I'm told that now it's up to 60 percent or so, but that's too low because in the United Kingdom and Europe almost everybody who comes in for treatment of a heart attack gets aspirin.

"And unless there's a specific contraindication, that is they are allergic or they are actively bleeding at the time they come in, aspirin should be the drug of choice."

Dr. Richard Peto of Oxford University, who works with the Harvard team, says that half an aspirin a day would save 10,000 lives a year for every million people treated.

"The curse is," he observed ruefully, "that the drug is so bloody cheap that nobody takes it seriously."

The Harvard team has assembled 22,071 physicians in what is called the Physicians' Health Study to better understand the limits of aspirin therapy. They asked the question, "What about the apparently healthy person?"

Initial results show a 44 percent decrease in first heart attack among middle-aged men. More study is needed to confirm the statistical effectiveness in stroke.

But considering that 936,000 Americans die every year of cardiovascular disease, the impact can be considerable.

The same Harvard team has assembled a separate study group composed of almost 88,000 women from 30 to 55. Called the Nurses' Health Study, its early results conclude that the use of one to six aspirin a week apparently reduces the risk of first heart attack among women. The group is the subject of a randomized trial in which women over 50 will be given low-dose aspirin - less than a baby aspirin a day to measure more precisely the effects.

The American Cancer Society drew on its ongoing mortality study called the Cancer Prevention Study II, composed of about 662,000 men and women. By analyzing their self-reported use of drugs, the researchers concluded that "regular aspirin use at low doses may reduce the risk of fatal colon cancer."

It confirms a laboratory study in which aspirin and other nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs were found to inhibit colon tumors in rodents. But clearly a randomized, double-blind study, in which some people get aspirin or other anti-inflammatories and some do not, is indicated for more definite results.

Dr. Judith Hsia of George Washington University has been looking into aspirin's effect on the immune system.

"What we've found is that in normal adults aspirin stimulates production of naturally occurring proteins that regulate the immune system, interferon and interleukin-2."

These are effective virus-fighters and are used as chemotherapeutic agents, but they are expensive and quite toxic in that mode.

One of the thoughts was if you could reduce the amount of these drugs by giving aspirin at the same time, you might enhance their effectiveness and save money at the same time, Hsia says.

So her research team gave volunteers colds by having them inhale cold viruses. The patients were then locked up in a hotel for five days and fed by room service, given aspirin, and their nasal mucous, tissue use and fevers were measured, as well as their interferon and interleukin production.

Unfortunately, it did not show any benefit from the aspirin so far as the cold symptoms or transmission was concerned.

But it did show that the interferon and interleukin-2 production increased in the aspirin group and not in the group given placebo.

"What we are looking at now is aspirin to improve flu shot responses," Hsia says.

"The reason we are doing this is that there are large segments of the population that are not getting good protection from vaccination, especially the elderly and people with chronic medical problems like diabetes or HIV infections. Of course these are the very people who need to have the best protection against flu."

If aspirin can enhance the immune response in the 281 elderly people in the sample, she says aspirin can have a lot of public health implications, since it is cheap and readily available in Third World countries.

They did a study last winter on "old mice" and the ones that received aspirin did much better than the ones given placebo.

Certainly the little white pill devised by scientist Felix Hoffman, working for the Bayer Division of I.G. Farben in 1898, has come a long way. His arthritic father had been taking sodium salicylate in massive doses but it caused chronic and acute stomach troubles which were worse than the disease they were intended to cure.

Hoffman hit on the less-acidic acetylsalicylic acid, which was effective in much lower doses. Bayer patented aspirin in 1899, deriving the name from the spirea plant which has quantities of the naturally occurring chemical.

But even Hennekens advises that the drug is not a blank check, not a quick fix. "In society today people would rather be prescribed something that would reduce their risk of disease than proscribed some things that might cause it," he says.

Anyone who takes aspirin instead of quitting smoking is not reducing his risk of heart disease, he says. "And even if we prove that aspirin reduced the risk of colon cancer, the benefits from the aspirin would be less than the benefit of weight loss, more exercise and a prudent diet."

Hennekens points to a cartoon of a fat man smoking a cigarette who orders a burger, french fries, a shake and an aspirin.

"Got to take care of the old ticker, you know," he explains to the take-out clerk.

PRICE QUESTIONS? PART 2

The first, homes already sold, is most important because it tells what buyers have been willing to pay for similar homes. The second, homes For Sale now, give you a targeted price range. These are homes with which yours will be competing. Finally, homes off the market, tell what buyers are NOT willing to pay for a home like yours. I compare the condition and amenities offered by your home with those already sold and currently for sale. The highest price for your home, one acceptable to buyers, will very likely be midway between the two. Ask your agent for more details. If you are planning on listing your home for sale and would like current information on its value, please give me a call. If you read our column, we appreciate your comments.

Twenty percent of the American workforce is said to work non-standard hours. Being in the newspaper business, we've never been real sure what standard hours are.

In our younger days, an old editor advised us that news rarely occurs between 8 and 5. We found out he was serious, since we made the same salary if we worked 40 hours or 60 hours.

Roy McQueen, Snyder editor, was exploring this topic in a recent column, noting that he may have grounds for a suit since researchers have confirmed that uncommon and uneven work schedules disrupt biological rhythms.

However, when he read that "unpredictable work patterns are often the cause for otherwise unexplained weight loss," he decided his odds of winning a lawsuit were not too good!

From time to time, we've printed a number of old sayings and phrases, some of them uniquely West Texan and others that are probably recognized across the country. Now we've run across another list of familiar sayings, only they have been worded differently than we're accustomed to seeing or hearing them.

They're written in a form called circumlocution, which is defined as "the use of an unnecessarily large number of words to express an idea." Not only are more words used, but also more complex words in place of everyday language.

To give you something to ponder over and work your brain a little, we'll print them for you and list the more common sayings at the end. Challenge yourself to interpret each before you look at the answers.

1. Pulchritude appears in the epidermis only.

2. On the alternate side of the enclosure, the herbage is always more verdant.

3. A plethora of Chefs de Cuisine impairs the bouillon.

4. To preserve the smallest monetary coin is tantamount to laboring for it.

5. A single decayed edible fruit can contaminate the remaining fruit in the wooden cylindrical vessel.

6. It is impossible to disseminate to a supernatural carnivorous demesticated animal of the Canidae family, knowledge of unprecedented stratagem or maneuvers.

7. Who counts, ere fractured the shell, his bipedal gallinaceous, is apt to find his caluculations utterly fallacious.

8. Residents of abodes with primarily vitreous transparency should refrain from hurling mineralite projectiles.

9. Every device is equitable in ardent affection as well as in a state of violence between two or more nations.

10. Aves similarly pennated gergariously assemble.

11. A warm-blooded vertebrate of the class Avis grasped securely in the terminal prehensile portion of the upper limb of the human body is equal in value to one plus one of the aforementioned vertebrates at liberty in the low foliage.

12. A mineral matter of various composition when engaged in periodical revolutions exhibits no tendency to accumulate any of the cryptogamic plants of the class Musci.

Maybe you'll recognize the sayings better this way:

1. Beauty is only skin deep.

2. The grass is always greener on the other side of the fence.

3. Too many cooks spoil the soup.

4. A penny saved is a penny earned.

5. One rotten apple can spoil the whole barrel.

6. You can't teach an old dog new tricks.

7. You shouldn't count your chickens before they hatch.

8. He who lives in a glass house should not throw stones.

9. All's fair in love and war.

10. Birds of a feather flock together.

11. A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.

12. A rolling stone gathers no moss.

Gee, they asked, how could we lose that ballgame?

It was a basketball game between Hereford and Borger. Hereford was ahead at halftime before Borger came back to win the game, 44-42.

What cost us the game?

It might have been the fans.

In basketball, the fans can make a difference. In games like basketball and volleyball the fans are so close to the action that they can make a difference, if they choose.

If they choose not to make a difference, well, it can be just another lost game in another lost season.

You can ask volleyball coach Brenda Reeh if the fans make a difference. She'll tell you the fans probably made the difference in a couple of important matches this season, and in seasons past.

You can ask girls basketball coach Dickie Faught if the fans can make a difference. He'll probably tell you he'd like to see and find out.

Hereford was down two points in the last few seconds. The Herd had the ball with a chance to win the game.

It wasn't as if you could have heard a pin drop, but, hey, let's make some noise.

Most basketball coaches will tell you that the home team should have about a five-point advantage at home, with the home crowd and all. Gee, with five points Friday night, we win by three.

It didn't happen. It could have, but it didn't.

There's still time to make it happen the rest of the year. Good grief, we worry about our kids. Why not show them a little support when they are trying their best.

There's been a goodly amount of bad-mouthing of our basketball program. I don't know what the deal is with the boys' varsity, but, hey, as good as Pampa is, we're not going to win district anyway. The girls face a similar juggernaut in Randall, but could have a shot at second.

With some support.

Our girls are young. There's hope for the future, and there's hope now.

Youth aside, they are playing as well as they can. Friday, for much of the game, they were playing perhaps over their heads. Borger is a Top 20 team in Class 4A. They had a girl that's already signed with Texas Tech. She was, well, unimpressive.

The Lady Whitefaces shut down another of Borger's leading scorers. We had a chance to win that game, but that five-point advantage wasn't there.

I've seen Hereford fans help the Herd destroy teams on the football field. I've seen volleyball fans here help devastate the competition. In neither case is it from bad-mouthing the competition. It's from supporting our own young people.

Many times I draw on my old experiences with Dimmitt basketball. Call Kenneth Cleveland or Richard Wood over in Dimmitt and ask if the fans don't make a huge difference for Dimmitt. Those basketball fans are notorious for their support, even in the occasional weak years.

The same thing can happen here. Get your $2 worth. Make some noise next time you're at Whiteface Gym.

An AP News Analysis

Bush fights recession issue

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
PORTSMOUTH, N.H. (AP)

President Bush said thank you to New Hampshire when he won his first term, and he's saying please as he seeks his second.

"Vote for me," he asked during his first day of real campaigning for re-election. "I need the help of the people of this state."

Four years ago he needed it even more; after an embarrassing third-place finish in Iowa's Republican caucuses, Vice President Bush couldn't afford another defeat. He won, and on Election Night 1988, he began his victory statement by saying, "Thank you, New Hampshire."

This time, he's almost guaranteed victory in the Republican primary despite an intense and aggressive campaign by conservative commentator Patrick J. Buchanan.

Buchanan and the five Democratic candidates are concentrating on the troubled economy, the issue that has transformed Bush from a runaway pollster's favorite to a candidate who may face a stern re-election test in 1992.

But his strategists say they don't really expect that test to come in New Hampshire. A Bush campaign manager, Robert Teeter, said Bush has the backing for a sweep over Buchanan, and needs to hold it. Even if the GOP challenger did gain a surprising share of the New Hampshire vote, Teeter said, it wouldn't disrupt Bush's national re-election campaign.

Still, Bush and his campaigners aren't taking the risk, as evidenced in his 12-hour, six-stop campaign day on Wednesday. He plans two more vote-seeking missions before the primary on Feb. 18.

His message was economic but not specific, with details reserved for the Jan. 28 State of the Union address. But he said what he doesn't want: any plan that would raise the budget deficit. "Please, avoid the quick fix that might sound good," he said.

All day, Bush repeated two messages to New Hampshire: he's no stranger, and he cares about the state, its people and their problems.

It was a rebuttal to the rivals he did not mention by name, who have been saying for weeks that he lost interest in New Hampshire after 1988 in favor of foreign policy concerns.

"You'll find they've never been here at all," Bush retorted. "They wouldn't know how to get here...."

"My God, I was growing up around here... before some of these people that now are campaigning for the president knew where New Hampshire was on a map."

But between campaigns, Bush has been a stranger. He made one appearance in Manchester three years ago, another in support of Republican Robert Smith, elected to the Senate in 1990.

Bush has campaigned for himself or his ticket in New Hampshire primaries since 1980, when he lost to Ronald Reagan.

Gov. Judd Gregg, Bush's state campaign manager, had complained 10 days ago that the Democrats were giving New Hampshire a bad name with potential investors by saying the state "is basically a basket case."

Democrats shot back that they weren't inventing problems but, rather, demanding action to solve them.

The governor said he knows the state's economic woes better than they do, and doesn't want the situation made worse by candidates "trashing New Hampshire."

Bush didn't shrink from grim appraisals of an economy he acknowledged was in free-fall.

"I know times are tough," Bush said. "This state has gone through hell. It's gone through an extraordinarily difficult time."

Then there's the tax flap.

In the campaign for the 1988 primary that rescued his shaken candidacy, Bush promised that if he won, he'd tolerate no new taxes. He reneged in 1990, to get the budget deal that was supposed to cut the deficit.

At the time, Gregg questioned the Republican credentials of a White House willing to boost taxes, saying the deal surrendered a strong GOP issue.

THE VOICE OF BUSINESS

STATE BLOATING

by Dr. Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

WASHINGTON — We all know the federal government is doing a terrible job of managing its finances, but many of the states seem to be doing even worse.

This observation flies in the face of conventional wisdom which attributes state fiscal distress mainly to federal policies. Supposedly, many states are broke because Uncle Sam is not carrying his fair share of the burden for public works and social programs.

The facts suggest otherwise. It is true that Congress and the Reagan administration cut back on federal financial aid to the states in the early 1980s. However, because of the general economic surge of those years, the states enjoyed substantial revenue increases during that time.

When economic growth finally cooled down, Uncle Sam picked up the slack for the states. Since 1987, federal aid has risen by some 20 percent in real terms, and is expected to rise another 3.5 percent in fiscal 1992.

Still, most state governments today are careening toward fiscal disaster, even though they raised taxes $10 billion last year, and $15 billion more this year. "It's a grim picture," said Raymond Sheppach, executive director of the National Governor's Conference.

Grim indeed, and for a predictable reason. All governments — federal, state and local — have built-in incen-

"That's history," he says of the episode now.

Buchanan went to the state capitol on Tuesday to sign a poster-size pledge swearing that he'd never raise taxes, and challenged Bush to fill in the blank left for his signature. "What pledge?" Bush said when asked about it.

It's still blank.

What Bush did sign was an executive order setting up a program to assist cities and regions hit hard by military base closings and cutbacks.

Like Portsmouth, which has lost about 5,000 military personnel and civilian jobs in an air base closing and navy yard cuts over the past year.

It was dated Jan. 15, and announced by the White House as Bush campaigned there. No figures on assistance. Just a reminder that presidents can help.

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor,

As our efforts to locate a prison in Deaf Smith County slow down, I would like to thank those who serve on the Prison Task Force and those who made contributions of time and service to help with the proposal.

It is a real pleasure to see these efforts come together for a common purpose and in such a short time. If enthusiasm and excitement are among the factors which determine prison locations, Deaf Smith County should be at the top of the list.

Realistically, competition will be tough. We are competing against 62 other sites. I believe we have a good chance. We have already been successful since the excitement and enthusiasm should spill over into future efforts and make our community a better place to live and work.

Mike Hatley
Prison Task Force Coordinator

Dear Editor:

I recently read in Family Foundations Magazine, Dec. issue, an interesting comparison between Jeffrey Dahmer's victims and abortion victims.

I also wondered what the difference is between Dahmer's dismembering and mutilating human bodies and doctors doing abortions.

#1. Dahmer's victims had a slight chance to escape (as one did); a baby in the womb has no chance.

#2. One is called a murdered & criminal; the other acts legally and "respectably."

#3. Doctors get paid nicely for what they do; the other is considered insane and is locked up.

#4. Womens' "freedom of choice" ends up in 4000 dead babies each day; Dahmer's "freedom of choice" resulted in 17 dead bodies. Why are we more horrified at the 17 than the 4000?

On one hand we expect Dahmer to pay for his brutality while we turn our heads as tiny victims are brutalized by the thousands every day.

(This Wednesday is 19 years of unnecessary dying. Babies aren't safe in our country). Is your head turned?

RANCHER

In the early days, water was hauled and livestock was moved from one area to another by re-locating watering sites. Fourteen watering facilities now are available.

Adding eight cross fences has improved grazing management and alleviated a grazing distribution problem. One of the cross fences is a leftover from the XIT Ranch. The fence runs along the Texas-New Mexico state boundary.

Morris also has improved the quality of her rangeland by building erosion control structures which have provided extra benefits for wildlife. She stocked some ponds with game fish, such as bass and catfish, and waterfowl find the ponds inviting for stops in their migrations.

Mule deer often can be spotted in the Canadian River breaks. Antelope roam the ranchlands.

Morris established her credentials as a cowpuncher at an early age. In the mid-1930s, she worked as a wrangler at the Texas Sale Barn in Higgins, in the northeast Panhandle.

Morris began riding in rodeos at five. Although she entered bronc and bull riding events, her first love was barrel racing, an event that earned her the National Old-Timers Rodeo Association barrel racing championship for three consecutive years, 1982 through 1984.

Her expertise with a horse and rope once was nearly her downfall.

Medeles receives six years

A six-year prison sentence was given Rene Medeles during a Friday session of 222nd District Court in Hereford.

Judge David Wesley Gulley heard Medeles plead guilty to a charge of sexual assault of a child and assessed the term in the Texas Department of Criminal Justice institutional division.

During the sitting, Judge Gulley conducted civil hearings and arraigned several defendants on criminal charges, including burglary, criminal mischief, delivery of marijuana, felony driving while intoxicated and possession of a controlled substance.

Camp Fire plans ski vacation

Hereford Camp Fire's Camping Committee will be offering a Winter Ski Camp to all Camp Fire families at the Sipapu Lodge.

The camp will be held Feb. 8-9 at the Sipapu Ski Area. The group will leave Feb. 8 at 3 a.m. and will return Feb. 9 at 11 p.m.

Sleeping bags and towels must be brought. Ski clothes need to be packed in a separate bag.

Registration forms are available and the cost will be $22 that covers transportation and lodging. Participants will be responsible for all meals.

Registration fee is required of which $10 is non-refundable. All non-members must register by paying an additional $10 for insurance.

Sipapu's ski area rates are $19 for an adult lift ticket, $16 for 12 and under; ski equipment, $10 adults, $8 12 and under; and for equipment, lift ticket and one lesson, $34 adults, $29 for 12 and under.

She remembers a Halloween in her hometown when she decided to play a "joke" at the railway station.

"Farmers brought their cream to the depot where it was loaded on a cart to be shipped. The cart had a chain on the wheels which stayed locked until the train got almost to the depot," she said.

The joke she decided on was to rope the cart from her horse and drag it down the main street. So she followed through on her decision.

There was a problem in her fun-making.

"It was against the law, federal law," Morris recalled. Her mother's response to this offense, and to keep

NASA will look for aliens

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—NASA is celebrating the 500th anniversary of Christopher Columbus' arrival in the New World in a special way - with a $100 million project to look for aliens from outer space.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration will begin setting up equipment in the Mojave Desert next week to carry out the search, which will begin on Oct. 12, Columbus Day.

The holiday was picked because "it celebrates the spirit of exploration," said Michael Klein, manager of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory's part of the Search for Extraterrestrial Intelligence.

"What we are trying to understand is... are we alone in the universe and what is our part in this incredible universe?" Klein said Thursday. "I strongly believe someday we will make contact with other civilizations."

More than 50 searches for space aliens have been conducted since 1960, scanning the heavens for radio signals generated by an intelligent civilization within our Milky Way galaxy and others.

NASA's $100 million effort will be the most extensive. It will scan the entire sky for a wide range of radio frequencies and conduct a highly sensitive search for radio signals from any planets that may exist around roughly 1,000 sun-like stars within 100 light years - 588 trillion miles - of Earth.

"Circumstantial evidence suggests countless Earth-like planets exist in our galaxy," Klein said. "We hope someday we'll detect the existence of other intelligent civilizations from those planets."

Scientists eventually will use sophisticated radio-signal analyzers and giant dish-shaped antennas already located at NASA's Deep Space Network tracking stations at Canberra, Australia, and Goldstone, Calif.

The Cornell University-National Science Foundation Arecibo Observatory in Puerto Rico and the National Radio Astronomy Observatory, in Greenbank, W. Va., also will participate.

Klein said Jet Propulsion Laboratory engineers and scientists will start setting up a radio signal analyzer, computers and other equipment next week at Goldstone, in the Mojave Desert about 85 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

Their counterparts at NASA's Ames Research Center in Mountain View, Calif., will do the same later this year at Arecibo.

The Pasadena-based Planetary Society, an international group of space exploration advocates co-founded by astronomer Carl Sagan, currently conducts the most sensitive search for alien radio signals. It has found nothing so far.

her daughter "out of reform school," was to send her to the Landerin Ranch, located in Deaf Smith County and Quay County, New Mexico, to work.

Her job on the ranch was to herd sheep, a solitary chore except when cowboys came once a week to move water tanks to a new grazing area.

Years later, it would be a part of the Landerin Ranch that would become the object of Darline Morris' efforts to improve the range. An aunt, the late Dora Wathen, in 1971 willed 10 sections of ranchland and three sections of farmland to Morris.

In addition to her conservation efforts on the range, Morris has committed most of the three sections of farmland to the Conservation Reserve Program. She has seeded it with Plains Bluestem grass. She plans to use the land for grazing when the 10-year CRP contract expires.

In recent years, she's run an operation of breeding Limousin bulls to crossbred cows, keeping calves until weaning. Morris retains replacement heifers, breeding them to Salier bulls. She said she expects to "go back to Polled Hereford or Angus" in the future.

Most of the ranch, seven sections, is in Texas. About half is above the Caprock and half below the Caprock, said Morris.

In the short grass prairie lands, blue grama and sideoats grama are the primary grasses. Morris annually blades approximately 600 acres to keep cholla under control.

The Canadian River breaks land grass cover includes blue grama, sideoats grama, little bluestem, vine mesquite, tobosa and some big bluestem.

Morris has kept an interest in her profession and rodeo activities through memberships in the Texas Cattle Feeders Association, National Cattlemen's Association, Oklahoma Barrel Racing Association, Interstate Rodeo Association and American Quarter Horse Association.

She is the mother of three sons: Dick Edgmon of Higgins, Mike Edgmon of Harrison, Ark., and Wade Morris of Clovis, N.M.

Although Morris still rides a horse, when necessary, she has given up rodeo riding. She's more likely to be found these days driving a tractor or dozer out on the range, pulling up mesquite and cholla.

TO THE VOTERS OF DEAF SMITH COUNTY:

Last week's article in the Hereford Brand may have misled some of you. I am not "miffed" or "stunned", but "shocked" and "concerned" about not being allowed to continue to volunteer my time as a Reserve Law Enforcement Officer. This community depends on volunteers who unselfishly donate their time, money, and energy. We live in a democracy, and I meet the written qualifications for county sheriff. Therefore, I feel that I have the right to run for that office without being penalized. I believe that we should allow the voters of Deaf Smith County to decide on my personal qualifications such as: my abilities, experience, and morality.

I made the decision to seek the sheriff's office because of my concerns about drugs and unsolved crimes in our county. I think that I would be effective in administering the office, as well as enforcing the laws. On several occasions while in uniform, I have been asked about my intentions to run for the sheriff's office. To me, answering those questions in the affirmative did not constitute "electioneering." Sheriff Brown never confronted me with his objections to my mentioning my plans, so I do not feel this was a concern to him.

As sheriff, I will strengthen the Sheriff's Reserve Deputy Organization in number and in training - this county needs a sheriff who will get personally involved.

I welcome any opportunity to share my goals with you as an individual, or as a group. I need your support through your personal involvement, and your vote on March 10, 1992. Any contributions may be sent to Mike Morrison Sheriff Campaign 125 Ironwood, Hereford, Tx.

YOUR EYES

GAS-PERMEABLE LENSES

Many would-be contact lens wearers who get inadequate correction with ordinary soft lenses or who may be uncomfortable in ordinary hard contacts, are finding a perfect fit in lenses made of a plastic that permits oxygen prevents swelling of the cornea and "spectacle blue" when the lenses are removed. The main advantage of gas-permeable hard contacts over ordinary soft ones is that they can offer cleaner, more stable vision even to those with a high degree of astigmatism. Though it may take a little longer for some people to adapt to them, the visual improvement usually makes the change worthwhile. Some gas-permeable lenses have a slippery surface that cuts down on irritation because the eyelid can more easily slide over them. The surface also resists the build-up of protein deposits, a common problem with soft lenses.

Lady 'Dogs edge Herd

The Hereford Lady Whitefaces missed by two points surprising the 14th-ranked Lady Bulldogs of Borger Friday night in Whiteface Gym.

The game ended with the score 44-42 when Borger's Marva Brown pulled down a rebound off a purposely missed free throw by Hereford's Jennifer Bullard with four seconds left in the game. Bullard was fouled when it was a three-point game, and she made the first free throw.

Hereford's record drops to 7-17 overall and 0-2 in district. Borger is now 16-8 and 1-1.

Hereford was close at the end because of good shooting in the first half, especially against a taller team, and because they played good defense against Borger stars Melinda White and Susan McGregor. White, a 5-10 post who has signed to play basketball with Texas Tech, scored 17 points, slightly below her average. McGregor, a three-point specialist who usually scores nearly as much as White, was limited to two points.

"It was really probably more because of defense," Hereford coach Dickie Faught said. "Even though Melinda was getting her points, she was having to work hard to score, and my two point guards (Stephanie Wilcox and Jamie Simpson) did a good job on McGregor."

"The girls just played an awful good game," Faught continued. "They played hard, pressed hard, and they took care of the ball. I think we only had about 10 turnovers. That'd have to be our best against a quality team. That's a major league turnaround from Dumas," when Hereford turned the ball over 28 times in a three-point road loss Jan. 10.

Hereford led Borger for most of the first half after an 11-0 run turned a 4-1 Borger lead into a 12-4 Hereford lead with 2:50 left in the first quarter. That was the biggest lead of the night, as White scored three straight baskets after a timeout, bringing Borger to within 15-12 at the end of the quarter.

Borger pulled to within one at 17-16 in the second, but Bullard hit a running jumper in the lane, fed Misty Dudley for an open 16-footer and hit a three-pointer to bump the lead up to 24-18. Jill Robinson hit one of two free throws after time had expired in the half, and Hereford went to the lockerroom leading 25-19.

Borger opened the third quarter with an 8-4 run, and Donna Johnson's three-point play cut Hereford's lead to 29-27. Bullard hit another trey to make it 32-27, but Borger's Robbyn Smith's layup to end the third quarter enabled White's 10-footer to give Borger a 33-32 lead.

The Lady Whitefaces stayed close. They got closer when Bullard sunk two free throws to cut the lead to 42-40, then on the other end Kara Sandoval tied up a Borger player and Hereford got the ball. Kyanne Lindley drove the lane, was fouled, and hit 1-of-2 free throws.

Borger scored again on a layup to make it 44-41. Bullard was fouled with 23 seconds left and missed the front end of a one-and-one, but atoned with a steal on the other end. She was fouled driving with four seconds left.

Bullard ended up with 15 points, and Dudley had 10.

Hereford took a 9-8 lead late in the first quarter on Shambryn Wilson's layup and led almost for the rest of the game.

Jenifer Holmes' steal and layup staked Hereford to a 25-17 lead at the end of the third quarter. Borger scored eight straight to start the fourth and tied at 25-25 with 4:42 left, but two baskets by Cristal McNutt in the next two minutes gave Hereford a 29-25 lead.

Wilson hit two free throws with 43 seconds left to ice the game. Hereford coach Donnie O'Rand said what helped when Borger tied was "making a substitution, somebody fresh--like Cristal."

"I think we did a good job on our full-court man-press," O'Rand continued. "We got a lot of steals and made baskets on them."

She singled out Holmes, Claudia Ramirez and Brandy Dunn as the top thieves, especially Dunn.

"I can bet she had 10 (steals) at least," O'Rand said. "That'd be averaging three a quarter, and did that at least."

Looking for a hole

Hereford's Jennifer Bullard (32) looks for a way around Borger's Melinda White (50). Looking on is Borger's Marva Brown (44).

Chang upset by Krajicek

By PAUL ALEXANDER
Associated Press Writer

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) - Michael Chang, a master of the five-set match, got a lesson in comeback skills today from a rangy Dutchman with a blistering serve.

Chang, who had an 11-2 record in five-set matches, including a grueling fourth-round showdown against Ivan Lendl on the way to the 1989 French Open title, fell in a three-hour, see-saw battle to Richard Krajicek 6-4, 6-1, 5-7, 1-6, 6-3.

Even added together, two women's seeds spent half as much time in advancing to the fourth round.

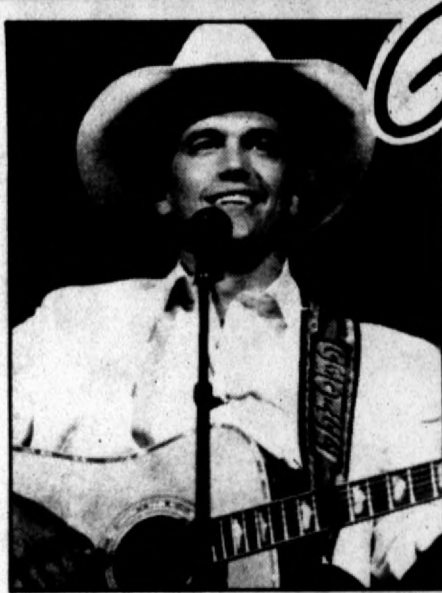

No. 5 Jennifer Capriati needed only 35 minutes to overwhelm fellow American Katrina Adams 6-0, 6-0. No. 2 Gabriela Sabatini was on court only a little longer in ousting Australia's Jenny Byrne 6-1, 6-0.

If they win their fourth-round matches, Capriati and Sabatini will slug it out in the quarterfinals.

No. 7 Mary Joe Fernandez, a finalist here two years ago, faltered in the second set against Australia's Rachel McQuillan before prevailing 6-2, 1-6, 6-1. She's the only seed remaining in her quarter of the draw following the loss Saturday by No. 15

Helena Sukova to Dominique Monami of Belgium 2-6, 6-4, 6-4.
 No. 11 Zina Garrison also advanced by ending Pam Shriver's chances with a 6-4, 6-2 victory.
 A grumpy Michael Stich, still struggling to find the form that carried him to the Wimbledon title last year, survived another sub-par outing to down Martin Jaito of Argentina 6-0, 2-6, 7-5, 6-2 and also advance to the round of 16.
 MaliVai Washington, who beat No. 16 Goran Prpic in the second round, fell to Australia's Wally Masur 6-3, 6-3, 6-4.
 Perhaps the 14th-seeded Chang should have stopped by to watch Aaron Krickstein before taking center court against Krajicek. Krickstein, another long-match specialist, ran his five-set record to 22-6 by ousting Alexander Volkov 6-4, 5-7, 6-7 (2-7), 6-1, 8-6 in four hours.

Chang lost the first two sets to Krajicek, who was serving for the match at 5-4 in the third. But Krajicek's game suddenly fell apart on a pair of double faults as Chang broke to start a string of nine straight games.
 When Chang held to take the fourth set in only 23 minutes, Krajicek looked dejected, his 125 mph serve faltering and his ground-strokes erratic.

Parish reaches 20,000 points

By The Associated Press
 It's been a season of milestones for Robert Parish.
 The 38-year-old center, who earlier this season grabbed his 12,000th rebound, notched his 2,000th steal, played in his 1,200th NBA game and blocked his 2,000th shot, became on Friday night the 16th player to score 20,000 points.
 More important to the Boston Celtics, Parish played a key supporting role in a 98-95 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers that snapped a three-game losing streak.
 While Larry Bird and Kevin McHale, the other two-thirds of Boston's Big Three, remained on the injured list, Parish returned after missing two games because of a twisted left ankle.
 Parish scored 14 points, pushing his career total to 20,011, and grabbed 10 rebounds in 36 minutes.
 "It's a nice milestone, but I haven't thought about it, especially because I'm the last option on offense," Parish said. "I'm honored to be in such company. It shows my longevity to be able to get up there with all those great old players."
 "It's even more amazing because I don't get to shoot the ball a lot. I don't get 25 shots a night."
 Parish said that after missing 21 games, "I played a lot of minutes. I was winded, tired, had a headache and my ankle hurt, but otherwise I was glad to be out there."
 Kevin Gamble and Reggie Lewis carried the scoring load with 30 and 24 points, respectively. The 76ers were led by Hersey Hawkins with 20 points and Armon Gilliam with 19.
 Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Orlando 127, Indiana 120; Chicago 102, San Antonio 96; Milwaukee 90, New York 85; Phoenix 134, Sacramento 94; Portland 120, Charlotte 104; and the Los Angeles Clippers 111, Atlanta 107 in overtime.

Bulls 102, Spurs 96
 Michael Jordan was elbowed in the jaw by teammate Scottie Pippen early in the game, but came back to score 20 of his 31 points in the third quarter against San Antonio, lifting Chicago to its eighth consecutive victory.
 The Bulls, who trailed by nine points at halftime, improved their home record to 18-2 as Horace Grant added 19 points and Pippen 17. The Spurs were led by David Robinson with 20 points.

Bucks 90 Knicks 85
 At Milwaukee, Moses Malone scored 20 points as the Bucks ended a four-game losing streak by holding New York to 35 points in the middle two quarters.
 Gerald Wilkins topped the Knicks with 24 points, but Patrick Ewing, his playing time limited by foul trouble, was held to 16, nearly eight under his average. Xavier McDaniel also had a subpar game with six points.

Suns 134, Kings 94
 Kevin Johnson had 20 points, 11 assists and nine rebounds in just 28 minutes as Phoenix won its 14th consecutive home game with a rout of Sacramento.
 The Suns, winners of six straight games overall and 10 in a row over the Kings in Phoenix, opened a 101-75 lead after Tom Chambers scored 12 of his 19 points in the third quarter.
 Mitch Richmond finished with 16 points for the Kings.

Trail Blazers 120, Hornets 104
 At Portland, Clyde Drexler had 25 points and 11 assists as the Trail Blazers improved their record against Charlotte to 10-0.
 Cliff Robinson had 17 points for Portland, which pulled into a virtual tie for first place with Golden State in the Pacific Division.
 Kendell Carr, who kept the Hornets in the game in the first quarter with 12 points, led Charlotte with 23 points.

Clippers 111, Hawks 107 OT
 Ron Harper and Danny Manning scored 22 points apiece as Los Angeles improved its overtime record to 5-0 with a victory at home against Atlanta.
 Dominique Wilkins led Atlanta with 28 points and 13 rebounds, and Kevin Willis had 13 rebounds to go along with 25 points, including an 18-foot jumper with 1.4 seconds left in regulation.

Magic 127, Pacers 120
 Scott Skiles scored a career-high 41 points as Orlando won for the third time in 28 games, overcoming a 14-point deficit in the second half to win at Indiana.
 Chuck Person led the Pacers with 29 points, while Rik Smits scored 23 and Reggie Miller 22. Jerry Reynolds had 17 of his 21 points in the fourth quarter for the Magic.

RICKEY WAS COMPLEX
BROOKLYN, N.Y. (AP) - Branch Rickey will always be remembered as the man who broke the color line in baseball by having Jackie Robinson play for the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1947.
 But Rickey also had a varied personal career. He was a big-league catcher, a college coach, a college football coach, a scout and a front office executive.
 The energetic Rickey also served as an officer for the U.S. Army in World War I.

In 1925, the rosters of the National Football League teams consisted of only 16 players.

Pro football coach Marv Levy was a Phi Beta Kappa at Coe College.

CBA players chase NBA dreams on road

By ARNIE STAPLETON
AP Sports Writer

TULSA, Okla. (AP) - Most of the Wichita Falls Texans sleep right through the four-hour bus ride to Tulsa, Okla. Barry Stevens doesn't. He's too busy dreaming.

A three-year veteran of the Continental Basketball Association, Stevens flips through the sports sections looking for the Houston-Atlanta NBA box score.

"Look here," he tells assistant coach Mike Davis. "Morlon got 14 assists and no turnovers last night."

Called up from Rapid City, S.D., because of injuries to the Hawks' backcourt, Morlon Wiley is the newest inspiration in the lives of CBA players, an exciting mix of NBA wannabes, gonnabes, has-beens and never-weres.

The bus pulls into the hotel parking lot about 12:15 p.m. Coach John Treloar gets seven rooms for $25 apiece and hands out the keys. "Two to a room," he says, telling them to meet out front in five hours to go to the arena.

Then he gets a room for the bus driver, another $25.

There are no fans asking them for autographs, nobody to carry their bags.

This is the minors, one step and a million miles from "The League," as the National Basketball Association is known in 16 CBA cities across the country, from Yakima, Wash., to Albany, N.Y.

The League. That's where they all want to go, where even a 10-day contract to spell an injured star means a paycheck of about $10,000, more than they make in an entire season in the CBA.

Some of the Texans, who earn about $600 a week and live in a rent-free apartment, walk over to Burger King to spend some of the $25-a-day meal money. Not Stevens.

He heads for his room, where he hooks up his juicer in the bathroom. Using a plastic knife, he begins slicing his lunch: apples, carrots, pears, potatoes. He'll drink the juice, first the fruits, then the vegetables, and throw away the mulch.

Across the Hall, Davis is calling a contact he made while playing professional basketball in Switzerland and Italy in the mid-1980s.

"Mike, ask if he's looking for a guard," whispers his roommate, Stephen Bardo, who is curled up under a blanket. The heater isn't working.

When Davis hangs up, Bardo grabs the phone.

"The ankle's fine," he tells his agent, who says he'll shop Bardo around Europe once Bardo gets used to the Texans' offense and his points go up.

"You can make a lot of money in Europe," Bardo says. "But it's not The League, know what I mean?"

Bardo, a second round pick by Atlanta in the 1990 NBA draft, was released by the San Antonio Spurs three weeks into this season after he injured his right ankle. Instead of being a backup at off-guard to Willie Anderson, he reported to Quad City, which traded him to Wichita Falls last month.

Unlike most of his teammates, Bardo has made it to the NBA, knows what the big time is like, even has his own basketball card.

He says he's signed hundreds of them. And he'll never charge for an autograph, either. "Guys forget when they were little boys how important it was to them," he says. "I'll sign them all day."

Just get him back to The League. "What's the biggest difference between the CBA and the NBA?" he says, repeating the question. "The money, definitely the money."

Bardo curls back up. "Mike, have them give me a wake-up at 5:30."

Davis heads to the coach's room down the hall, where he picks up a small television and videocassettes of the last time the Texans played the Tulsa Zone. He also has a tape of the previous night's 97-96 loss to the Omaha Racers.

"Juice me up some apples," Davis says as he walks into Stevens' room to set up the VCR for some pre-game strategy sessions with Stevens and fellow forward-guard Walter Bond.

They watch the entire game, backing up the tape to watch a particular pick or play that beat them last time. Or even whenever somebody does something stupid, or funny.

The 5:30 p.m. wake-up call comes just as they finish watching the overtime loss.

The Texans are a little late leaving for the game because the bus driver thought they would be returning to the hotel afterward for a good night's rest. They won't. They'll sleep on the bus. The driver will sleep during the game.

They ride across town to the Maxwell Convention Center. Guard Kenny Atkinson says he thinks he forgot "From Here To Eternity" in his room.

"I only had 20 pages to go," he says.

Entering the arena, the smell of fresh popcorn fills the air. About 10 fans have arrived early and are watching the Heartbreakers, Tulsa's Laker Girls, practice their routines.

The Texans get dressed and wander out to warm up and chat with the Zone players. Finally, they line up and bow their heads.

Three women in silk jackets who call themselves Beauty and the Beats sing the national anthem, and the game between the Texans, dressed in dark blue, hot pink and neon green, and the Zone, whose black and silver uniforms look like something out of, well, the Twilight Zone, is under way.

Bardo is still warm, swishing his first three shots to quiet the crowd. You can hear every sneaker skid, every instruction, every curse. Every whistle.

The Texans build their lead to 10, 12 points. But the Zone comes back in the final minutes, aided by a referee, who mistakenly whistles the Texans for a 10-second backcourt violation after just six seconds.

But Bardo hits again. And again. He finishes with 28 points in 45 minutes on 12-of-19 shooting from the field. The Zone are whistled for - get this - six men on the court, a technical foul.

A desperation shot at the buzzer hits the rim and the Texans win 105-102, sending 1,218 home disappointed.

"The wild world of the CBA," says Bardo, leaving the locker room for a radio interview as the player of the game while his teammates shower.

The driver pulls up beside the arena to take the players for a post-game meal - "steak at McDonald's," is what they call it.

They pile in, recounting plays, fouls, obnoxious fans.

Forward Calvin Oldham takes a stat sheet to the back of the bus, where he rattles off everybody's numbers.

"One assist?" Atkinson says. "I thought I had 10."

"Did you see that big guy in the stands?" somebody says. "He was on tonight. He told Atkinson to get a tan ..."

Bardo recalls that when he was at Quad City some fan dumped water on them in the final seconds. "We chased him out of there."

They've heard of fans like this in the NBA. "Only worse," Bardo assures them.

Everybody's laughing. This is the fun part.

The bus pulls up to McDonald's. They stay for 45 minutes, until the driver finishes his coffee and hamburger, minus the ketchup.

On the long ride home, several players sit in the back of the bus playing cards with assistant coach Dave Whitney. Others plug in their Walkmans and turn off the little overhead lights. Atkinson is now sure he lost his book, says he's heading to the library first thing in the morning.

Davis calls their attention. There will be no practice tomorrow, he announces. They can sleep in. And dream some more.

Lietzke now considers golf just a job

By JEFF RUDE
The Dallas Morning News
DALLAS (AP)—Bruce Lietzke's last tournament of 1985 had ended and his caddie, Al Hanson, was putting the clubs in a travel bag when he inquired, "Bruce, what are you going to do during the off-season?"
 "I'm going to put my clubs away," Lietzke said, "and not touch them until I get back out here in January."
 Hanson did not believe him. So when Lietzke wasn't looking, Hanson stuck a banana up into the head cover on the driver and packed up the clubs. He figured the boss soon would find it when he played or practiced at home.
 He figured wrong.
 Six weeks later, when Lietzke showed up for the 1986 PGA Tour season, Hanson unloaded the clubs and pulled off the driver cover. Underneath was a squishy, foul-smelling black rotten banana.
 "I will never doubt you again," Hanson told Lietzke.
 What Hanson would learn is that Lietzke, now 40, is professional golf's reluctant player. He has won 11 tournaments and more than $4 million and remains among the game's best entering his 18th season. But to him, golf rates a distant third to his family and his collection of seven cars.

 Golf, he says, is anything but a passion. "It was from age 8 to about 31, but not now."
 Whereas most pros compete in about 28 to 30 tournaments a year, Lietzke plays 18, "and my wife has to push me out the door to play in those. I don't get keyed up for tournaments anymore."
 When he's home in Dallas, during weeks off in-season or for the winter break, he doesn't play or practice. The clubs sit in his garage, often with the travel cover on. He has no home course. In fact, he has never been a member of a country club.
 "I've lived in Dallas 3 1/2 years, and I've played three rounds of golf here," he said. "Times my neighbors forced me to go out."

Yet he has remained competitive. Though he has never won a major championship and has only one victory since 1984, at the 1988 Byron Nelson Classic, he has been a constant threat. He has been among the top 60 money winners every full season except one, usually in the top 20, including fourth, fifth, sixth and eighth.
 Although he didn't win, 1991 was probably his best season since 1984. He finished second to John Daly in the PGA Championship, ranked 19th in the money with $566,272, and rated first in two tour statistical categories—greens in regulation (73.3 percent) and total driving, a combination of distance and accuracy. His 69.80 scoring average was third-best.
 "Stats like that are all I need to confirm that my muscle memory works," Lietzke said. "I've worked on my swing long enough—in high school, college, early years on tour—that I know it's good enough; I don't need to change it."
 That swing produces a fade. Fellow pros tease him about hitting it left to right on dogleg lefts. Others, like Plano's D.A. Weibring, tell him he's their hero because he excels despite spending many more weeks with his wife, Rose, and their children, Stephen, 8, and Christine, 6, than with golf. Then there are guys who tell him that if he played and practiced more, there'd be no telling how good he'd be.

 Lietzke, however, has suffered burnout a few times and knows better. Indifference, oddly, flamed in 1981. That was his best year, when he got married, won three tournaments, and qualified for his only Ryder Cup berth. "But I pushed myself too far, and a couple of fuses busted in me," he said. "The enthusiasm dropped off."
 Despite a long off-season, he was "still just dead flat" for the start of 1982. He won the Canadian Open that year, but "never got fired up for any tournament, the Masters, anything."
 And so since 1983, when he took off five months around the birth of his son and pared his schedule for good, less has been more.

"If I played in 33 events, I'd probably have one great year, but that would be my last," he said. "That would push me over the edge. Playing 17 or 18 events keeps my interest up a little bit."
 Lietzke's interests are such that he buys no subscriptions to golf magazines, but he does get Hot Rod and Car Craft. He went to a drag race in Wichita, Kan., at 14 and has been hooked on sports cars ever since. Two Corvettes and a Firebird are part of his collection and at various times can be found in his 5 1/2-car garage.
 "Cars are my passion," says Lietzke, who drag races in his 1968 Plymouth Roadrunner occasionally at the Texas Motorplex in Ennis. "I like working on cars. The garage is where I spend most of my time when I'm home. With seven cars, a lot can go wrong."
 A lot, too, can go wrong with golf's hardest hole, only six inches long—the space between one's ears. Lietzke had won the Texas High School championship as a sophomore at Beaumont Forest Park and the 1971 Texas Amateur while at the University of Houston, but he played poorly late in his senior year, especially at the NCAA Championship, and soured on golf.

 He had purchased a Buick to travel the tour in, but instead of turning pro, he went home to Beaumont, put his clubs in a closet and announced he was through with competitive golf. "Basically, I chickened out," he says now. "I was scared to death to turn pro."
 After a few weeks, his father, Norman, helped him get a low-paying job as a night security guard at a local chemical company. (Norman, once a 110 golfer, quit the day he lost to Bruce, then age 8.) For the next six months, Lietzke was, as he put it, "Beaumont's answer to Barney Fife."
 "I had a gun in one desk drawer and bullets in the other," Lietzke said, "but both were locked, and they didn't give me a key."
 The job did give him perspective. He decided he didn't want to work the second shift the rest of his life. So the clubs came out of the closet.
 They just don't stay out. Like bananas, they're never ripe for long.

NCAA complicates national signing day

An AP Sports Analysis
 By DENNE H. FREEMAN
 AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP)—Critics say the NCAA has succeeded in living up to its initials. When it comes to the organization's meddling in national football signing day they say it stands for "Now Causing Consternation Again."
 There's worry some of the rules hatched at the recent National Collegiate Athletic Association convention in Anaheim may have been decided at Disneyland. They are semi-Mickey Mouse.
 There's grumbling from the Atlantic to the Pacific over the recent upgrade in college and university academic entry requirements which will make it tougher for high school players to get a scholarship in 1995.
 However, that's not the beef in today's soap box oratory, which is aimed instead at the looming lunacy of the Feb. 5 national signing day.
 A measure was approved at the NCAA convention extending the so-called "dead period" of non-contact between football coaches and prospective signees an additional two days after signing day.
 Stay with me on this one. Your funny bone will be tingling over the absolute idiocy of the matter.
 Say we have Billy Bob Butler down at Bartlett who wants to sign up with R.C. Slocum and the Southwest Conference champion Texas Aggies.
 Signing day arrives and BBB tells R.C. he signed the paper and is coming to Aggieland. Hullabaloo, says R.C., who can't actually send a coach to see Butler for two days. Slocum can talk to him on the telephone but because of the new rule not even Slocum or another coach can eyeball BBB for 48 hours.
 The NCAA thought the rule would keep kids from being pressured into rash decisions. Supposedly, the kid would be able to think clearer without a recruiter near the door-stoop waiting for the signed paper. The NCAA altered the telephone rule so coaches could call to ask a kid if he signed.
 But will coaches really know if he signed?
 In the past, recruits had had problems telling a coach "no." Suppose BBB also tells new coach John Mackovic of Texas he's coming and Billy Bob couldn't turn down ole Spike Dykes out there at Texas Tech. "You bet, Spike, I signed on," BBB said.

 So, two days after the signing we have three coaches showing up in Bartlett to learn that Billy hasn't signed with anybody. Surprise!
 Signing day meant exactly zero in the Butler household. The recruiting war shootout began two days later in their living room.
 What you are going to see on Feb. 5 is a nightmare both to the coaching staffs and the news media.
 Any list of signees will have to carry the proviso: "Recruits who have said they signed with Texas A&M, Texas," or "the Baylor Bears announced list of recruits who said they have signed with coach Grant Teaff, etc."
 Nobody will know for sure until the coaches see the signatures on the dotted line of both the athlete and parents or guardian.
 Of course, the kids could fax their letters of intent but how many high schools own fax machines? And does a fax stand for the facts? Is it really a legal document?
 How many players have the money for express mail services?
 The well-meaning NCAA has created a two-day period of uncertainty for every recruiting staff in the country.
 Schools will just have to rely on the honesty of the kids they recruit.
 What if an outlaw school wanted to tie up the scholarships of a rival? They could entice kids into telling a school they had signed.
 There are too many loopholes for skullduggery here.
 Texas sports information director Bill Little said, "Everyone is confused by the rule. We could have something like the bowls mixup with a few bad apples sneaking around making deals with kids. There could be a lot of controversy."
 Sometimes it seems like NCAA is just another way to spell controversy.
 Former heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson won the middle-weight gold medal in the 1952 Olympics.
 Mike O'Dowd, one-time middle-weight champion, had 52 no-decision verdicts among his 115 bouts.

Ryan finds hunter's paradise in S. Texas

By BOB HOOD

Fort Worth Star-Telegram
GEORGE WEST, Texas (AP) - It was daybreak, but there were no shadows. Nolan Ryan strained to see through the heavy fog that hung like a damp blanket over the Southwest Texas brush country.

"This fog will lift later this morning, but I wouldn't try to walk far from the road in it now, because it's so easy to get turned around," Ryan cautioned the other hunters, shouldering a rifle. "And believe me, this is a big ranch and you don't want to be wandering around lost on it."

Indeed, it is a big ranch - more than 13,000 acres of terracing, sandy land sprinkled heavily with whitebrush, mesquites, prickly pear and just about anything else Texas has to offer that has thorns on it.

Ryan bought this ranch only last November. It is one of his most prized possessions - a place, he said, where he can hunt whitetail deer, raise cattle or just sit back and let the mystery of it all soak in.

This huge ranch, however, is just one of four owned by baseball's all-time strikeout leader who will earn $4.3 million with the Texas Rangers this season. Ryan lives on an 80-acre spread at Alvin between Houston and Galveston, has another place along the Guadalupe River near Gonzales and a 2,000-acre ranch near Cotulla where we had spent the previous night.

In fact, Ryan's wife, Ruth, sons Reid and Reese and daughter Wendy and some of their friends had gathered at the Ryans' Son Tonio Ranch at Cotulla, where all but Ruth were doing the same thing Ryan was doing this foggy morning - hunting deer.

Although Ruth says she does not hunt because "I have never seen any reason to get up at 4 o'clock in the morning and be miserable," she likes being in the brush country. "I like coming out here," she had said at the Son Tonio. "I didn't like it at first, because all I could see here were rattlesnakes and thorns, but the more I came the more I began to enjoy the land and the people here."

Ryan says he bought the McMullen County ranches to have a place to hunt, a place to raise cattle and a place he can leave his youngsters that they probably never would be able to buy on their own.

It is evident that Ruth Ryan also understands her husband's love for animals.

"Did Nolan tell you what I bought him for Christmas," Ruth had asked, pulling a photograph from a drawer. "It's a longhorn bull," she said, handing over the picture. "It really surprised him."

Before long, Ryan will resume a rigorous training schedule to get his 44-year-old body in top form for the mound. But for the moment, his attention was not on the big bucks his pitching arm will make him but on the big whitetail bucks that roam this part of the state along with feral hogs, javelina, coyotes, bobcats and quail.

Thousands have seen Nolan Ryan the pitcher. Here in a country of blue skies and red sunsets, one sees Nolan Ryan the rancher, the hunter and the conservationist as well as Nolan Ryan the husband and father of three children who all share his love for this land.

By the time we had walked a half mile from the Jeep, the fog had begun to lift, pushing visibility out to about 150 yards.

We didn't attract a buck on our first effort, but another try farther across the pasture pulled in a spike buck, an animal Ryan knows should be removed from the deer herd to follow proper game-management practices.

"I would like to get rid of the spikes because, overall, they are inferior bucks, and you can improve the quality of your buck population by culling the spikes and other deer with abnormal antlers," Ryan said. "All three of my kids now have gotten to where they will let the average six- and eight-pointers go and not take anything unless it has a 20-inch spread or better."

By culling the spikes and other deer with inferior antlers and protecting those 2- to 4-year-old deer with six to eight points and spreads of 16 to 18 inches, Ryan knows that he can, over a few years, increase the number of trophy bucks on his ranch.

Antler spreads do not alone determine whether a buck is a trophy, because many record book deer have spreads of around 18 inches. But Ryan knows how to judge a trophy deer by sight and has instilled that knowledge in his sons and daughter to achieve his game-management goals.

As we moved on down the muddy road, Ryan stopped to investigate a set of big deer tracks. Recent heavy rains here literally have soaked the brush country, making some roads impassable, but they also have wiped clean old animal tracks.

"We see fresh tracks everywhere," Ryan said. "That's one thing that has really impressed me with this ranch. It has so much game on it. I really believe you will see some really big bucks before you leave."

We joined some other friends back at the Jeep later and headed across the sprawling, brushy ranch. Does seemingly were everywhere - crossing just ahead of us, jumping a barbed-wire fence, standing in small openings.

Suddenly, a big buck was spotted moving with a doe about 225 yards away. The deer's main beams were outside the ears before they turned up, a measurement often used to determine whether the spread is in the 20-inch range.

Jeremy Reeves of Arlington, using a .30-06, dropped the buck with an excellent shot behind the shoulder. The buck was a big six-pointer that had a 20-inch spread. Probably a 6-year-old deer, Ryan said.

Later in the evening, after seeing several more bucks and countless does, we moved to another section of the ranch choked with whitebrush, blackbrush and mesquites.

By now, it was late evening, with only 45 minutes left before the sun was to fade slowly into a reddish hue in the west. It was a great time of the day for the deer to be moving, and that's exactly what was taking place in the brush to our right just ahead.

Another big buck had his attention on a doe, moving, stopping, moving again through the thorny cover about 100 yards away, showing himself only for a second or two at a time.

Finally, the buck turned sideways and looked back in our direction. Ryan was behind me, looking over my shoulder through a pair of binoculars when the deer turned.

The antlers went outside the width of the ears, and my decision to take him came instantly. The deer went down in the brush. Minutes later, Ryan stretched a tape measure across the eight-pointer's antlers.

"Twenty-one inches," he said. "Nice deer."

Before we would leave the next morning, we would see more than 20 bucks, including three others that we rattled up, along with javelina, feral hogs, quail and coyotes - each a reason in its own why Ryan cherishes the brush country.

"I never have had a desire to hunt anywhere but Texas," Ryan said. "I have never wanted to hunt elk in Colorado or anything like that. I believe that if you want to learn how to do something good (Texas whitetail deer hunting, for example), you should spend as much time as you can doing it."

Ryan admits a busy schedule lies just ahead of him, with at least seven months of baseball training and pitching to be done. But someday, when his playing days are over, he has ensured that he will have plenty of wide-open spaces to live the rest of his life enjoying another kind of game that is so dear to him.

KING FOOTBALL

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) - Football provides most of the revenue in college sports.

The NCAA reported in the official figures for 1989 that major colleges derived 47 percent of their revenue from the gridiron sport.

Basketball receipts were 18 percent of the athletic revenue for the schools. Three percent came from other sports and 32 percent from sources not related to specific sports.

Farm and Ranch

High quality beef is goal

In observing "business of values" of beef from both the producer and food service standpoint, a leading animal scientist and an award winning restaurateur agreed that higher quality beef will help increase beef consumption while enhancing producer profits.

Dr. Gary Smith, Monfort professor at Colorado State University, and Andy Revella, vice president of purchasing and research and development for Steak and Ale, shared the podium at a lively session during the annual Texas Cattle Feeders Association convention at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Austin.

Smith is one of the industry's most respected scientists and researchers. He is helping coordinate a unique National Beef Quality Audit for the National Cattlemen's Association. The audit is examining carcass and by-product quality from steers and heifers at 28 packing plants across the nation.

"Perhaps as much as $200 per slaughter steer or heifer is lost to the industry because of quality shortfalls," said Smith, stressing that cattle producers and feeders must continue in their efforts to adopt and practice better quality standards.

Smith pointed out that preliminary tests, as well as previously conducted tests, show several areas in which quality can be improved and dollars saved. For instance, hides contaminated with manure tags and other foreign material can see their value reduced by about $15 per head, he said.

Poor management is another area which can cost at the packer. Smith said bruises to animals often force additional carcass trim and bring about a lower USDA quality grade. "This can lessen storage life of cuts and necessitate grinding of all or some carcass parts," he said.

Smith said the industry should apply the principles of W. Edwards Deming, the internationally renowned consultant whose advice helped Japan become a leading industrialized country following World War II.

"His principles—'to measure, define, manage'—apply to the beef industry," said Smith, and by following these standards, the industry can continue to improve the quality of product it produces for consumers.

Meeting the demand of consumers is Revella's main objective with Steak and Ale. "We clearly see steak in the American diet," he told conventioners. But it will be in a leaner form."

Revella, associated with the company which operates Steak and Ale and Bennigan's Restaurants, said Steak and Ale recently revised some of its menu items. "We recently added a 23-ounce bone end strip, double the size of our normal strip—and it's selling like hot cakes," he said.

"We also increased our 6-ounce filet to 7 ounces, and our 8-ounce filet to 10 ounces. And they're also selling like hot cakes."

"If you can offer the consumer what they want, you can sell steaks," he said.

Revella said that even though consumers are presumed to be more health conscious in the '90s, they are also "contradictory" in their diet habits. They will dine on pizza and other similar foods higher in calories—"but drink Diet Coke," he said.

"If we're so health conscious, why is the biggest growth in the food services industry in the area of desserts?" he asked. "It's a contradiction. Consumers want it all, but they want to make the choice."

Revella said that all in the industry must continue to work together to provide the type of products consumers want. "We all share the same bottom line," he said. "We also share the same customer."

Revella is a master chef who studied at London's renowned Cooking and Food Institute. He is a veteran of more than 26 years in the food service industry. During the TCFA convention he was also presented with the prestigious "Beef Merchandiser Award."

Half of CRP plans are implemented

Conservation plans prepared by farmers and ranchers to comply with Farm Bill conservation compliance requirements have been fully implemented on almost half of the highly erodible cropland in the United States, the U.S. Department of Agriculture reported today.

"We're pleased to reach the halfway point, but we know there is still a big job ahead," said William Richards, chief of USDA's Soil Conservation Service.

"Producers are expected to apply their conservation compliance plans on schedule," Richards said. "We encourage producers to start even earlier than scheduled, especially if they are unfamiliar with any agreed-upon practices."

Under provisions of the 1985 and 1990 Farm Bills, producers with highly erodible cropland need to have conservation plans completely implemented by December 31, 1994, to stay eligible for USDA program benefits. SCS field officers provide technical expertise and work with producers to develop conservation plans. Each year, ranchers and farmers must certify to USDA that they are actively applying conservation plans on their highly erodible cropland.

"Those who stay in compliance retain eligibility for USDA program benefits," Richards said. "The American public gains the advantage of less soil erosion and less sediment moving into streams."

Status reviews, conducted randomly by SCS on five percent of the farms, indicated 97% of the farmers are making good progress in implementation, Richards said.

More than 135 million acres of highly erodible cropland have conservation plans. Of these, some 67 million acres have plans that call for crop residue management. Crop residue management has environmental benefits—protecting soil from erosion and improving water quality—along with the economic benefits of saving labor and fuel.

The states having the most acres with fully implemented conservation compliance plans are Texas and Kansas. Each has over eight million acres with plans, and about 70% of those plans have been implemented.

Tailwater system conserves water

A tailwater return system for row irrigation is a method to collect irrigation runoff (tailwater) which is not absorbed into the soil, for reapplication to a field. A tailwater return system is comprised of a collection point, usually a tailwater pit, and a return line tied into the irrigation system.

In Deaf Smith County, the average tailwater runoff is approximately 30% on a field of Pullman Clay Loam. As an example, a 1,000 gallon per minute irrigation system loses 300 gpm on the average, to tailwater. The tailwater runoff generally occurs when a field is being "soaked." This refers to attempts at trying to fill the soil profile with water. Instead of wasting tailwater, which is prohibited by the underground water district, a person should install a tailwater return system thereby conserving water usage. From an economical point of view, pumping water already on the soil surface to a field is much cheaper than pumping water from 300 feet below the soil's surface.

A tailwater pit is basically a small pond located at the lower part of a field or fields which will collect the tailwater from the field. A good tailwater pit should be placed in a field at an appropriate location for maximum tailwater collection and designed to reduce siltation in the pit. A tailwater pit, if managed correctly, could also be beneficial to wildlife, especially ducks and pheasants, if water is left in the pit and unharvested grain strips left around the edges. The ASCS office may be able to provide approximately 50% cost-share assistance in construction of a tailwater pit that meets SCS specifications.

A tailwater return line is an underground pipeline that carries tailwater from a pit back up to a field with the use of a pump. The return line should be designed to insure that the size of the line is adequate to get the water back to the top of the field, while taking into consideration line friction and water pressure. The ASCS may also be able to provide cost-share assistance for installation of a tailwater return line that meets SCS specifications.

If everyone controlled their own tailwater, the amount of water pumped from the Ogallala aquifer would be reduced and saved for a future use.

Programs and services of the Soil Conservation Service are offered on a nondiscriminatory basis without regards for race, color, national origin, age, sex, religion, marital status or handicap.

GROWING PAINS

Office of the Council of State Governments. "Government is playing catch-up with all the problems."

Nevada, up 50 percent in population, was the West's fastest-growing state during the 1980s, followed by Alaska, Arizona, California, New Mexico, Utah, Washington, Hawaii, Colorado, Oregon, Idaho and Montana. Wyoming, down 4 percent, was the only Western state to lose population during the decade.

More recently, the nationwide recession has slowed but not stalled the region's growth. From April 1990 through July 1991, the West grew at an annual rate of 1.9 percent, compared to a 1.1 percent national rate, the Census Bureau says.

Some Western growing pains:
 - Crowded schools. The West has the nation's highest birthrate and the highest percentage of residents under age 18. Public school enrollment is expected to increase 13 percent by 2000, faster than any other region, according to a recent Westrends report.

- More crime. Westrends predicts the West this decade will need about 360 new prisons costing $13 billion, more than any other region. The region's crime rate, highest in the nation, is explained partly by a lack of community ties, Grose said. Half of all Westerners were born somewhere else, and once here they tend to move more often than other Americans.

- Culture shock. About 38 percent of all U.S. immigrants during the 1980s settled in the West, more than in any other region. Many immigrants speak little English; many work minimum-wage jobs or not at all, straining welfare and other services. Schools struggle with language barriers, and racism erupts as immigrants change the face of once predominantly white communities.

- Clogged highways. On average, Westerners drive more miles each year than Americans in any other region, and the decade's unparalleled growth has put more cars on the road, aggravating an already serious backlog of highway construction and repair, Westrends said.

- Urban sprawl. A half-million new houses popped up in Southern California during the 1980s, half of them within 80 miles of downtown Los Angeles. South of Seattle, the Green River Valley once was known as the "Head Lettuce Capital of the World." Now its fertile soil is buried under parking lots and industrial warehouses.

Growth is not all bad, of course. It has helped forge a prosperity allowing the West to weather the current recession better than much of the nation.

Fast-growing Western cities like San Diego, up 27 percent in population between 1980 and 1990, or Boise, up 23 percent, are the envy of shrinking Eastern cities like Pittsburgh, down 13 percent, or Chicago, down 7 percent.

Even within the region, some depressed areas wouldn't mind a few growth-related problems. Western cities are sucking up most of the new arrivals, while many once-vital rural areas based on logging, farming or mining are withering away.

The uneven growth has intensified longstanding rivalries. In Oregon and Washington, fast-growing urban areas west of the Cascade Range are gaining economic and political clout at the expense of rural areas east of the mountains. Booming Las Vegas has thrown Nevada's traditional north-south political balance out of whack.

And California, the nation's most populous state with 30 million residents, has gained the enmity of neighboring states, where residents lump all the evils of unbridled growth under one easy label: Californication.

They look at the sprawling Los Angeles basin - where commuters spend up to four hours a day crawling along clogged highways - and fear that their own communities may be headed down the same road.

Cities throughout the west are worried about how to contend with new urban sprawl as they deal with issues including wild-life and clean air, things that attracted everyone in the first place.

To control growth, Washington state legislators last year completed a package of growth-management laws creating planning guidelines for the state's fastest-growing areas. Belatedly, California officials are starting to forge their own statewide plan.

"You have even a superboomtown like Las Vegas saying, 'Hold on, we have to slow down and take a look at long-term growth,'" Grose said.

It's all part of what Charlie Hales calls the drawbridge syndrome.

"You get people moving here from some other area who think they've found a piece of heaven," said Hales, of the Home Builders Association in Portland, Ore. "It's only human to say, 'Well, I've got mine, now let's pull up the drawbridge and make sure those other suckers don't get in.'"

Planning for growth forces cooperation among cities, counties and states that are more accustomed to competing. And while planners stake their hopes on regional coordination, it's hard enough even at the state or local level to find agreement on what the West's future should be.

Consider Oregon, where legislators in 1974 enacted a statewide growth-management plan that is still the most comprehensive - and controversial - in the West. It sets urban-growth boundaries for each of the state's 241 cities.

A land-use reform group called 1,000 Friends of Oregon hopes to fine-tune that law to create its image of the ideal society: high-density cities with vibrant downtowns, surrounded by farms and forests unmarred by suburban sprawl.

"It's a return to an older concept, a village concept," said Mary Kyle McCurdy, attorney for the group.

"It's a feudal system," retorted Bill Moshofsky, an attorney with a group called Oregonians in Action. He said there's no need to change the West's unconfined, automobile-based culture. Energy worries are overstated, and packed-in living has no appeal, he said.

"People like to putter. People like to have some land," Moshofsky said. "It's part of the American dream."

The debate no doubt will continue. Western population growth is expected to slow slightly this decade but remain far above the national rate well into the next century. Managing that growth will present a special challenge for independent-minded, sky's-the-limit Westerners.

The West still has vast tracts of open land, making it appear there's plenty of room to grow. But most of that land is inhospitable desert, or federally owned and reserved for wilderness, grazing or timber production. The Census Bureau says 86 percent of all Westerners are crammed into urban areas, compared to a national average of 75 percent.

"The frontier has closed, but the myth of it being the frontier is still here," Grose said.

He believes Westerners are slowly rethinking their unbounded boosterism of the past, realizing there's not another empty valley over the horizon if they mess up where they are.

"Across the West in this decade, we're going to see a whole lot more interest in preserving the quality of life and less about economic growth," Grose said. "There are real limits for the West's ability to sustain more and more population."

MRS. ROBERT CLARK
...Brandi Hutson

Brandi Sue Hutson and Robert Allen Clark, both of Hereford, exchanged wedding vows Saturday during an afternoon ceremony.

The couple were wed at Avenue Baptist Church in Hereford with the bride's uncle retired Baptist minister Edwin Norris, officiating.

The church was decorated with wicker baskets of purple and teal flowers, brass candelabra, white pew bows, and window candles decorated with fabric matching the bridesmaids dresses.

The bride's father, Mr. Shorty Hutson, gave the bride in marriage. She was attired in a tea-length informal bridal dress of white satin and lace. The dress featured a bateau neckline with a chantilly lace over satin bodice. The dropped waist featured a slightly gathered satin skirt. The satin sleeves were graced with rosettes and lace overlay.

Her veil, borrowed from her sister-in-law, was waist-length on a bank of silk and satin flowers with seed pearls.

She carried a cascading bouquet of white silk roses graced with teal lilies and purple rose buds with baby's breath and pearls. She carried her grandmother's handkerchief.

Serving as matron of honor was Mrs. Ken Hutson of Amarillo, sister-in-law of the bride. Best man was David Hargrave of Slaton.

Bridesmaids were Shala Stone of Hereford and Mrs. Shenon Carlson of Hereford.

The bridesmaids were attired in deep purple challis silk dresses with a square neck line, dropped waist with a softly gathered skirt set off by teal and purple paisley print scarves.

The bridesmaids wore their hair in French braids with teal bows.

They carried grapevines with teal and purple flowers with accents of baby's breath and ribbon.

Groomsmen were Jimmy Isbell, stepfather of the groom and Ken Hutson, brother of the bride of Amarillo.

Jan Walser provided piano accompaniment for Mrs. Richard Stengel, Rhonda Clark and Deana Resch.

Stengle sang, "One Friend," Clark performed, "You needed Me," and Resch sang "Friends."

A reception was held for the couple at Avenue Baptist Church's Fellowship Hall.

Serving the bride's heart shaped cake with white columns was Mrs. Richard Stengel. The cake was the centerpiece of the table decorated with a white crochet cloth over a teal background.

Extension News

By BEVERLY HARDER County Extension Agent-HE HIGH SCHOOL JUNIORS AND SENIORS PLAN NOW FOR COLLEGE

High school juniors and seniors thinking about college need to act now, according to college admissions counselors.

If you are a junior, use January to April to draw up a preliminary list of 15 to 20 schools that interest you. Ask parents and high school guidance counselors for help. Gather information about the schools, including their financial aid policies.

Start making visits to different types of local schools during spring vacation to see what you might enjoy or dislike about urban or rural and large or small schools. Near the end of the school year, start checking out scholarship options and make appointments to visit colleges during your summer vacation. Start compiling information about yourself so that filling out college application forms will be easier next year.

If you are a senior, January is an important month. Standard application deadlines for many colleges and universities are January 1 and 15, February 1 and 15, and March 1. Parents should organize tax records they will need to complete financial aid forms. File financial aid forms after January 1. Make sure high school guidance offices send transcripts of first semester grades to schools to which you have applied.

Above all, have a game plan for getting into a college or university that interests you. Start early and solicit help from those around you who can provide guidance.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

Charleston, S.C.: How anyone can be critical of people sending in money to help pay the medical bills of a devoted and loving pet is beyond me. Since animals have no voice, those of us who have known the love and loyalty of pets must speak for them.

I cannot imagine my life without a dog or a cat. My growing up years were enriched a thousandfold by Muffie and Tiger, the two cats that slept on my pillow at night. They both lived to be 16 years old.

And then there was Buster, our adorable basset hound, with the most gorgeous brown eyes I have ever seen. When I married, Buster came along on the honeymoon. My bride wasn't crazy about the idea but she knew better than to complain.

Every year when I write checks for my favorite charities, our local animal shelter is at the top of the list. My donations are always "in loving memory of Muffie, Tiger and Buster."

DEAR READERS: Americans and Canadians really do love their pets. Thanks to all who wrote.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

A Polite Customer

I usually don't write columns when I'm irritated. However, I'll make an exception on this one. It is 6:37 a.m. and I'm an unhappy customer.

I'm sitting in my car waiting for the fast food restaurant's drive-thru to open so I can order a quick breakfast. The sign promised that they would start serving at 6:30 a.m.

Because I am a polite customer, I've waited seven minutes without honking. I'll just sit here until they get around to opening.

Usually I'm not easily irritated. However, I did notice the employees standing around and talking as I pulled in this morning. They are not concerned that I'm waiting outside. I get breakfast here nearly every morning and they know I'll wait patiently until they turn on the lights. Then I'll order politely as usual.

I Never Complain

I have never complained. Why I didn't even complain last week when they put the wrong breakfast biscuit in my bag. It wasn't what I ordered, but I didn't discover the mistake until I was miles up the road. I didn't go back and raise Cain. I wasn't raised up that way. My mother taught me to eat what was served and not to cause a big scene. I really am a polite customer.

I don't fuss when I have to ask twice for strawberry jelly. I always say thanks when I finally do get what I order. I don't even mind too much when they forget my straw or the napkins. I just drink out of the cup and use one of the spare napkins I keep in the glove box.

I don't complain when they partially fill my cup with Dr. Pepper before remembering I ordered Diet Coke. I just drink the mix although I never cared for the taste of Dr. Pepper. Life is too short to quibble over a little thing like that.

When the sleepy drive-thru person handed out the cup last week, dripping excess cola down the side, I took it graciously. I wiped it off in the car and hoped it hadn't dripped all over my suit, shirt and upholstery. I may have frowned when this happened, but I didn't complain. I really am a polite person.

Equal Rights

Of course, every business owner has the right to open whenever they please. They have a right to open late, fill orders incorrectly and give mediocre service.

However, the advantage of living in America is that customers have rights too. I have a right to spend my money with the business of my choice. I have a right to expect that business to keep its promises.

Therefore, I expect this restaurant to open promptly at 6:30 a.m. That is what the sign promises. I also expect to get exactly what I ordered and fast, friendly service. That is implied.

I may be a polite customer now, but I can become something else. I can become an ex-customer. I may quietly drive away and never come in again.

I may have to go out of my way, but I'll find a place where they really care about my business. A place where they strive to get the order right every time. Yesterday I noticed a restaurant that's open 24 hours everyday. I wouldn't have to wait there. I wonder what their breakfast biscuits taste like?

There are millions of nice, polite customers just like me. With our dollars, we will vote some businesses out of business this year. Maybe we're not so polite after all.

It is ironic when you think about it. Businesses will spend thousands of dollars this year in advertising just to replace customers who finally got fed up. Money that could have been saved by giving timely, accurate, friendly service.

CLASSIFIED ADS

Classified advertising rates are based on 15 cents a word for first insertion ($3.00 minimum), and 11 cents for second publication and thereafter. Rates below are based on consecutive issues, no copy change, straight word ads.

TIMES	RATE	MIN
1 day per word	.15	3.00
2 days per word	.26	5.20
3 days per word	.37	7.40
4 days per word	.48	9.60

If you run ads in five consecutive issues with NO changes, you get the same ad in the Reach 4 More free. The regular charge for that ad would be $4.00.

CLASSIFIED DISPLAY

Classified display rates apply to all other ads not set in solid word lines, those with captions, bold or larger type, special paragraphing, all capital letters. Rates are $4.15 per column inch; $3.45 an inch for consecutive additional insertions.

LEGALS

Ad rates for legal notices are same as for classified display.

ERRORS

Every effort is made to avoid errors in word ads and legal notices. Advertisers should call attention to any errors immediately after the first insertion. We will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. In case of errors by the publishers, an additional insertion will be published.

Between the Covers

By JOE WEAVER

On one of their albums, years ago, the Statler Brothers recorded a song entitled "The Strand." It was a "filler" song, and, as far as I can remember, I never heard it on the radio, but I always enjoyed listening as it "came around" on the 8-track. Basically the boys from Staunton, Virginia were lamenting that the hometown moviehouse, the scene of so many happy memories, was being torn down to make room for a parking lot. Sadly, this has happened in too many hometowns (at the time, I didn't think it would ever happen here), and the grand old theaters have declined to piles of rubble, parking lots, or worse.

John Margolies and Emily Gwathmey have sought to capture some of the fading glory in Ticket To Paradise, descriptively subtitled "American Movie Theaters And How We Had Fun." Interspersed among the pictures and text are letters from "fans" recounting their most memorable movie experience. I'm sorry, the Star is not among those featured, but Amarillo's Esquire and Trail are, as well as a letter from Stantly Marsh. If there is a regret about this book, it is that it wasn't done sooner, before so many of the fine edifices were destroyed. It's a fun book to spend some time with.

Speaking of "show" business and memories, Ralph Emery has produced his autobiography Memories, documenting the years he has spent promoting country music, from the days "when country wasn't cool" to his recognition today as America's premier country music DJ and host of TNN's Nashville Now. Emery's life reflects that of the country star stereotype: childhood in the South, tough early years in the business, multiple marriages, and addiction to drugs. This one ends happily though, as Emery has found contentment as a husband and father. This uplifting rags-to-riches story offers a feast of celebrity anecdotes both humorous and touching.

I've read several books that never should have been written, but October Surprise is promoted as a book that wasn't supposed to have been written. It's an account of how the 1980 Reagan-Bush campaign delayed the release of fifty-two Iranian-held American hostages until after the election. The result of three years of research and hundreds of interviews, this book purportedly lays bare an elaborate network of political intrigue and treachery. Author Gary Sick served on the National Security council staff under Presidents Ford, Carter, and Reagan, and was the principal White House aide for Iran during the hostage crisis of 1979-81. Sick is obviously qualified for his subject, but personally, I'm a little suspicious of politically oriented books that surface during an election year.

If true political intrigue doesn't interest you, perhaps true murder stories will. Murder Next Door, by Ed Baumann and John O'Brien, chronicles how eighteen brutal murderers were brought to justice. Follow the police, and share their shock, disgust, and wonder, as they investigate each crime. A sampling: a devil-worshiper who boiled to death her lover; a school teacher who shot her husband, then set him afire; a disgruntled railroad worker who...enough! You get the idea! At least these stories have a happy (?) ending.

Okay, Okay, I know that you're wanting me to get to the fiction. Truth is, we're a little thin on fiction this week. We have a western or two, some light romances, and something called a "botanical mystery." The Bulrush Murders pits microbiologist Claire Sharples against unknown forces as she and coworker Sam probe the tangled politics of California agriculture. Ultimately, Claire unlocks the truth that threatens to blow the lid of a story that is bigger than the Mediterranean Fruitfly Scare. Rebecca Rothenberg is the author of this unusual mystery.

Fractal Mode, book two of Piers Anthony's "Mode" series, finds would-be lovers Colene and Darius and their companions - Provos, a woman who remembers only the future, and Seqiro, a telepathic horse - stumbling into yet another dangerous reality where despots rule with a cruel and heavy hand. Intriguing characters use their unusual talents to provide the reader with adventure after adventure in this master storyteller's fantasy.

Fangman selected to attend conference

Colby Fangman of Hereford has been selected to attend The National Young Leaders Conference from January 21 to 26, 1992 in Washington, D.C.

Having demonstrated academic achievement, leadership and citizenship, Fangman will be among 350 outstanding high school students from across the nation at the conference sponsored by the Congressional Youth Leadership Council.

The theme of the National Young Leaders Conference is The Leaders of Tomorrow Meeting the Leaders of Today. Throughout the six-day conference, Fangman will meet with key leaders and newsmakers from the three branches of government, the media and the diplomatic corps.

Highlight of the conference will include welcoming remarks from a Member of Congress on the Floor of the United States House of Representatives and a panel discussion led by prominent journalists at the National Press Club.

Students will also visit foreign embassies and receive a policy briefing from senior State Department officials.

Fangman will meet with Representative Larry Combest, Senator Lloyd Bentsen, and Senator Phil Gram, or designated members of their staffs to discuss important issues of personal concern to Fangman.

Culminating the national Young Leaders Conference will be a four-hour Mock Congress on Gun Control during which scholars assume the roles of United States Representatives by debating, lobbying, and voting on proposed handgun legislation.

Rounded in 1985, the Council is a non-profit, non-partisan educational organization committed to recognizing outstanding youth like Fangman and providing them with a "hands-on" civic learning experience in the nation's capital.

Over 375 Members of the United States Congress join in the commitment to educational excellence as members of the Council's Honorary Congressional Board of Advisors.

"I firmly believe that by touching one life, the national Young Leaders Conference enriches thousands more," said John Hines, Council Executive Director. "Scholars return to their schools and communities charged with the lifelong duty of leading all Americans to better understand their rights and responsibilities in our participatory democracy."

The following sponsors are greatly appreciated: Arrowhead Mills, Deaf Smith Electric Corp, Monty and Monta Cochran, Clark Andrews, Brookharts on Main, Connie and Margaret Walker, Fred Green, Wayne Walker and the parents of Fangman.

'Against Her Will' finds Matthau in top form

Walter Matthau (left) and Harry Morgan star in Against Her Will: An Incident in Baltimore, airing Sunday on CBS. In the sequel to the Emmy-winning The Incident, Matthau reprises the role of methodical attorney Harmon Cobb. Morgan plays Judge Stoddard Bell, now retired.

Slow start yields to fascinating story

By Steven Alan McGaw

Oscar and Tony winner Walter Matthau is seen all too rarely on television, so it's good to report that his latest project for the small screen is as good as the last.

In 1990, Matthau starred in The Incident, playing small-town lawyer Harmon Cobb. Harry Morgan played irascible Judge Stoddard Bell and Susan Blakely co-starred as Harmon's daughter-in-law, Billie. The Incident was praised by critics and viewers alike, and won the Emmy for Outstanding Dramatic Special. Brothers Michael and James Norell, who scripted the film, were honored with Christopher and Writers Guild awards.

Now, Harmon Cobb returns, when CBS presents Against Her Will: An Incident in Baltimore on Sunday, Jan. 19. Matthau reprises his role, as do Morgan and Blakely. Delbert Mann directs from a teleplay by the Norells.

In 1947, Harmon moves to Baltimore to take a position with Judge Bell, now retired. Accompanying him are Billie (widowed in the last film) and his granddaughter, Nancy. Although grateful for the opportunity, Harmon soon finds the practice of civil law dull and unfulfilling. Then, by chance, he meets an anguished young man and learns of Marika. Five years previously, the young woman had voluntarily committed herself to a state hospital to be treated for depression. (A psychiatrist had advised the move, since private care was unaffordable.) Trouble is, now they won't let her out. Her angry, devoted fiancé implores Harmon to free Marika from the asylum. But how?

Harmon's task is complicated because of Maryland's status as a commonwealth, which adheres to "sovereign immunity"; the state cannot be sued. An arduous search through history may reveal a precedent allowing him to bring suit, but he still will have to convince the jury Marika is "cured" or that the hospital is unfit.

The acting in Against Her Will is first-rate. Matthau endows Harmon Cobb with a craggy nobility, making him a plain-spoken soldier for justice. Morgan is an endearing curmudgeon as Judge Bell and Susan Blakely fares well as Billie. Among supporting players, Barton Heyman is brilliant as Donald, another "patient" and Marika's devoted friend. Heyman's timid testimony is moving and powerful.

Viewers should be advised that Against Her Will starts slowly and seems unpromising. Once it catches fire, however (in a fine clash between Matthau and Morgan), the movie never stops and emerges as a vivid reminder of what television is capable of achieving.

Family Channel taps into 'Roots'

By Dan Rice
 Any attempt to gauge the cultural significance of Roots, the highest-rated miniseries of all time, is an exercise in underestimation. Winner of nine Emmys and more than 135 other awards, the 12-hour story of author Alex Haley's search for his African ancestors is credited with instilling a new sense of racial pride in black Americans while revealing to white Americans the United States' shameful legacy of slavery. Beginning Monday, Jan. 20, The Family Channel airs the gripping drama on six consecutive nights, the first national broadcast since its premiere in 1977. The Family Channel will also present the sequel, Roots: The Next Generations, later in 1992.

The Lone Star State is often host to Hollywood stars in emotional states, and this is the stuff behind-the-scenes documentaries are made of. On Sunday, Jan. 19, Showtime invites you to Picture This: The Times of Peter Bogdanovich in Archer City, Texas, a chronicle of the director's productions of The Last Picture Show and its sequel, Texasville, both showing before the special on the cable channel. Besides casting light on the influences that color Bogdanovich's films, Picture This peers into the darkness of his notoriously obsessive affairs, including that with the lead actress of the two films, Cybill Shepherd.

Frank Sinatra is joined by Dean Martin in Sinatra and Friends, Sunday on The Disney Channel.

SOAP TALK

Looking for favorite soaps and stars

By Candace Havens
 Dear Candace: You're always telling us about the folks on the daytime soaps and I was wondering which ones you like the best. Also, is there a particular show you like more than the other ones? —T.M., Conroe, Texas.
 Dear Reader: I try to be as objective as possible about the actors and actresses on the soaps, but I do have a few that I enjoy watching. I've found the people I like the best are the ones who give good performances on a consistent basis. I have to warn you, my favorites are not necessarily the most popular soap stars.
 Stephen Schnetzer (who plays Cass Winthrop on Another World) is fun to watch and he works hard to make his character interesting for the viewers. He's at his best when paired with Alice Barrett, who plays Frankie Frame.
 While Schnetzer is the best good guy, Michael Zaslow (who plays Roger Thorpe on Guiding Light) is great at being evil. I liked him on One Life to Live, but his character on GL is as good as it gets.
One Life to Live's Robert S. Woods (Bo Buchanan) is unassuming as the show's hero, and he portrays his character effortlessly. I hate to see his co-star Jessica Tuck, who plays Megan Gordon, leave the show. OLTL was Tuck's first acting job, and she has come a long way in a few years.
 But I'd have to say my favorite female on the soaps is Jeanne Cooper (who plays Katherine Chancellor Sterling on The Young and the Restless). She can be kind-hearted and loving, or she can be the meanest witch alive, and she can do it all in one scene. She is the greatest. Occasionally she gets stuck in stupid story lines, but she always makes the best of it and gives her all to whatever the writers come up with.
 I can't say that I have a favorite soap. My tastes are much like my readers': If there is a good story line going, then the soap is worth watching; if there isn't, then it's not.
 I'd like to invite you all to write in about your favorite soaps and soap stars. We have good interviews set up for this next year and I'd like you to send in questions to ask your favorite star.

Send your comments to Candace Havens, Soap Talk, P.O. Box 961009, Fort Worth, Texas, 76161-1009.

FAMILY FAIR

'Dynamo Duck' will (ouch) quack you up

By Chris Carpenter
Nestled amid Fox Children's Network's Saturday morning programming ore, a tiny gem of a program glimmers among the layers of animated adventure and breakfast-cereal commercials. Lasting only two minutes at a time and starring a cast of live, strangely cooperative animals, The Adventures of Dynamo Duck is prepared to strike unsuspecting funny bones without notice.

In Dynamo Duck, Fox has pieced together footage acquired from French animal trainer Jean Tourane to create an original and highly entertaining interstitial, or connecting, programming device. The down-feather detective waddles in and out of tiny sets inhabited by villainous hamsters, rabbits and guinea pigs, all plotting to trick him with their clever disguises and ceaseless jabbering. Like the great Homo sapien detectives before him, Dynamo Duck allows a string of femmes fatales and double agents to believe he's been fooled, then dashes their evil plans at the last minute, which, on this show, actually takes only a minute.

Dan Castellana, a talented comedian who will forever be known as the voice of Homer Simpson, again hops aboard the Fox voice-over gravy train, this time as the voice behind the duck. His circa-1940s gumshoe banter sounds like it was lifted right off the soundtrack of The Maltese Falcon and really, er, fills the bill. © TV Listing Inc.

TIME OUT

'MTV Sports' has its highs and lows

By Steve Paschal
The music and sports worlds collide this week when MTV Sports, the latest in a proliferation of cable magazine shows, makes its debut.

What is supposed to be an MTV approach to reporting sports, from the conventional to the bizarre, comes off as choppy and disjointed, and the coverage is so superficial that it does little more than whet the viewer's appetite. It's unfortunate, too, because the segments on Building, Antenna, Span, Earth (B.A.S.E.) and bungee jumping and the profile of sky-surfer Patrick de Gayardon merit better treatment.

However, the first episode has its highlights. The feature on de Gayardon includes breathtaking footage of him "hanging ten" on waves of air over the French Alps. And when one bungee jumper gasps and spatters, "It's good to be alive," after she takes the plunge, real insight into the adrenaline rush daredevil athletes experience comes through in the biting audio track.

On the other hand, the time devoted to the World Mud Bowl could have been better spent expanding one of the other segments. There's also the obligatory weekly vignette on "Rock 'n' Jock" style events, featuring celebrities from the music, movie and television industries that begins with a racing school attended by Donny Osmond and Poison's Rikki Rocket.

Ree vs. Wade ★★ Ellen Russell's desire to have an abortion leads to controversy. Holly Hunter, Amy Madigan 2:00. (1989) Jan. 22 8:00pm.

Run Like a Thief ★★ An American soldier of fortune becomes involved in hijacking diamonds. Kieron Moore, Keenan Wynn 2:00. (1968) Jan. 20 1:00pm; 21 7:00am.

"Big City Raccoons" is one of the segments in the season-premiere episode of National Geographic: On Assignment. Robert Ulrich serves as host of the syndicated series.

'On Assignment' begins new season

Raccoons adapt to life in the big city

By Dan Rice

The track record of National Geographic in both print and television programs is extensive and impressive, having brought the diverse wonders of the world to the living rooms of armchair explorers. Its syndicated TV showcase, National Geographic: On Assignment, begins a new season this month with host Robert Ulrich introducing an hour of segments that typify its commitment to education and entertainment.

First up, "Big City Raccoons" examines the lifestyle of one of the few forms of wildlife in the urban environment. Using sewer systems as their main avenues of travel, the master survivalists make their rounds from dumpsters to fountains for a night of fast-food foraging. In the suburbs, the adept burglars find chimneys and attics as dry and cozy as tree holes, and have no qualms about moving in their uninvited families. While one woman has been feeding them at her back door for over 25 years (to end the garbage raids), the raccoon-removal business is booming.

Next, On Assignment takes us to a village of craftsmen where the specialty is not pottery or rugs, but guns. Darra, in the northwestern section of Pakistan, is the home of crude factories which produce "Guns to Order" for buyers throughout the Mideast. A thriving commerce is not the only result of the native industry — well-armed intertribal feuds, usually over money, women or land, have left the Darra graveyards quite crowded.

The episode concludes with a visit to Niger to document the "Way of the Wodaabe," whose name means "people of the taboo." Plagued by droughts in their lands south of the Sahara Desert, the nomadic cattle herders' daily struggle for existence is interrupted only by a year-end festival in which the men put on spectacular costumes and makeup and dance for the judging women. Even in the harshest of living conditions, there is time for frivolity and self-celebration.

STAR NOTES

By Dan Rice

For an actor, filling the shoes of a predecessor is an inherently risky task. But when the role is in a series one media poll deemed the worst of the season, then that player faces pressure far beyond that of the work at hand. It is to her credit that Mary Page Keller, the third actress cast as the mother in ABC's comedy series Baby Talk, takes it all in stride.

Its concept borrowed from the feature film Look Who's Talking, the sit-com pivots on the gimmick of an infant's precocious thoughts expressed via a voice-over. Connie Selleca portrayed single mother Maggie Campbell in the TV-pilot but quit the series and was replaced by Julia Duffy. After one critically blasted season, an unhappy Duffy exited, opening the door for Keller, whose presence, along with a shift of focus to the adult characters, has helped the series win its time slot almost every week. She claims the situation of being mother No. 3 is not difficult for her.

"To me it's coming in and working on a character I enjoy. I never saw the show before, so it just didn't have any bearing on the way I approach the show at all."

Keller's TV career began when her walk-in response to a nationwide open call landed her a job on the daytime drama Ryan's Hope. But it was her starring roles in Fox's Duet and its spin-off, Open House, that launched Keller as a rising star.

On Thursday's Entertainment Tonight, Cybill Shepherd discusses her newest telefilm, Memphis.

Networks get involved in pay-per-view enterprises

Some guys have all the luck. Promotion is everything in the concert business, and it surely doesn't hurt to have two huge corporations backing you. Capital Cities/ABC Video Enterprises and Madison Square Garden, a Paramount Communications company, have married their considerable resources to develop and market pay-per-view programming. The joint venture commences with a series of music-event programs, the first being Valentine Vagabond: Rod Stewart Live on Valentine's Day, to be shown live from the Universal Amphitheater in Los Angeles.

Rod Stewart
warriors and Twin Peaks characters. Now, America's Trading Cards has announced its new line of "Most Wanted Fugitive" cards for the serious collector/bounty hunter. Each "state-of-the-art" card features a bad guy's photo and description, plus a full-color typical scene in which the criminal might be lurking. A list of phone numbers in dozens of states is provided so that the eagle-eyed consumer may alert the proper authorities.

How much is enough? NBC, which has secured broadcast rights to the 1992 Summer Olympics, is apparently milking the quadrennial sports event for every last drop of revenue. In addition to the regular coverage offered free on the airwaves, the network, in a ground-breaking partnership with Cablevision, will be hawking their pay-per-view Olympics Triplecast on the side. This more extensive coverage will be provided live and commercial-free simultaneously on three channels, so cable fans can be as zealous as they want to be.

Shark Bowl '92

DISCOVERY FRIDAY 7 PM

Hereford Cablevision
126 E. 3rd • 364-3912

Q: Can you provide me with an address at which I can reach Phil Donahue? —Gary McKinley, Iberia, Mo.

A: Write to Donahue care of his show at 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y., 10112.

Q: I think Robert De Niro is a great actor. I was wondering if you could give me some information about him. —Kelly Stevens, Fairfield, Ohio.

A: De Niro was born in New York on Aug. 17, 1943. His parents separated when he was two. As a child, he was nervous and a loner. When he was 16 years old, he discovered acting. For the next 14 years, he appeared in many low-budget films and then was "discovered" after his performance in Bang the Drum Slowly. De Niro is very particular about the parts he chooses. He won the Best Actor Academy Award for his performance in the 1981 film Raging Bull. He is currently appearing in the remake of Cape Fear with Nick Nolte and Jessica Lange. He has two children from two previous marriages.

Q: May I please have the name of the breed of the dog called Dreyfuss on Empty Nest? —Ann Mattiolo, Columbus, Miss.

A: The publicity agency for Empty Nest was happy to comply with your request for information about "Dreyfuss." His real name is Bear, and he is of mixed ancestry: part St. Bernard, part Golden Retriever. A native of Southern California, Bear was born into a show business family. His father, Boomer, was featured in the series Father Murphy and the feature film Summer Rental. His sister, Bodi, was in the film Steel Magnolias. Bear is no stranger to the camera; his film credits include Witching Hour and a lesser-known dog-training film, in which he co-starred with his trainer. Originally, there were two dogs playing Dreyfuss in Empty Nest: Bear and Buffy. If one got tired, the other one stepped in. Currently, Bear is the only dog playing Dreyfuss.

Q: I see on Entertainment Tonight that Leeza Gibbons is expecting. When did she marry again? I know she has a daughter by a previous marriage. —Betty Halvorsen, Sedona, Ariz.

A: Gibbons was married on Feb. 14, 1991, in her second trip to the altar. The baby is due on Feb. 14, 1992!

Send your questions about the world of entertainment to Let's Talk, Features Dept., P.O. Box 961009, Fort Worth, Texas, 76161-1009.

Reader admires stage, screen actor Hal Holbrook

By Taylor Michaels

Q: I'd like to know about Hal Holbrook. I have always admired him. I'd like to know where he was born and anything about him. Also, where could we write to him? —Audrey Clark, Park Falls, Wis.

A: Holbrook was born in Cleveland, Ohio, on Feb. 17, 1925. His parents abandoned him when he was two years old and he spent what he calls "Huck Finnish summers" growing up. Perhaps it gave some special insight into Mark Twain; at any rate, his one-man show about the 19th-century humorist, Mark Twain Tonight!, is one of the most successful solo theatrical productions in history. Holbrook has performed it more than 2,000 times in the United States and abroad. The actor conceived the idea for the show during leaner years to give himself an alternative to working at Macy's. He performed it in 1955 in San Francisco and made a hit with it off-Broadway in 1959. Holbrook has appeared in numerous other stage productions, films and television programs, including Designing Women, on which he appeared with his wife, Dixie Carter, and the current hit Evening Shade. The marriage to Carter is his third; he has two children from previous marriages. Holbrook's agent has asked that his address not be published.

FOR HORROR FANS

THE LEGEND OF HELL HOUSE:

(1973) Starring Roddy McDowall. A well-acted, suspenseful psychic tale about a group of researchers attempting to solve the mystery of the many deaths that have occurred there. It is also believed that Hell House holds the key to determining if there is life after death. Jarring at times, with very inventive camera shots and a great cast. Rated PG for violence.

FOR SCIENCE FICTION ADDICTS

THE GROUNDSTAR CONSPIRACY:

(1972) Starring George Peppard. This nifty thriller has gone unrecognized for years. George Peppard plays a government agent assigned to uncover a conspiracy which caused the destruction of a vital secret space unit, which leaves behind a sole survivor who's badly burned and amnesia-stricken. Peppard has him undergo plastic surgery and brainwashing so he can be set free and trained. The clever plot and excellent character interactions build for a surprising climax. Rated PG.

EXCELLENT GOOD FAIR POOR DON'T WASTE MONEY

FRIED GREEN TOMATOES: Starring Kathy Bates, Jessica Tandy, Mary Stuart Masterson and Mary-Louise Parker. Fried Green Tomatoes, based on Fannie Flagg's novel about women in the deep South, is a celebration of life. A celebration that contends that no matter how oppressive or unfair life may be, some spirits survive and flourish. Fried Green Tomatoes survives and flourishes as a splendid film; one that brings new life into the art of storytelling magic. Yes, it does have a feminist premise. But no, it is not just about bored, overweight housewives, lonely old ladies and rebellious turn-of-the-century women from the deep, unforgiving south. This intelligent film is about friendship and love; about committing random acts of kindness. The director, literal-minded Jon Avnet, tells the story in a simple and straightforward manner. The audience is never overwhelmed by the movie technology. Mr. Avnet directs movies in the old-fashioned way; truthfully. This, of course, will put off lovers of pyrotechnics, foul language and graphic, kinky sex.

Not any of the leads can be singled out; with the one possible exception of Mary Stuart Masterson as the true-to-herself, independent Idgie.

The movie is really two stories: the contemporary female bonding of Kathy Bates and Jessica Tandy and the 1920s bonding of Mary Stuart Masterson and Mary-Louise Parker. Both stories, one told in flash-backs, are uniquely blended and layered to show the parallels of the characters.

The movie, even though in limited release (meaning that smaller communities may not get the film), cannot be dismissed easily. Audiences will be lining up to see one of the most deliciously funny, romantic and winning tales to be brought to the screen in a long, long time. Rated PG-13 for mild language. Don't wait for the video; don't fail to take the entire family. There are lessons to be learned in Fried Green Tomatoes. There is joy to be experienced in this American classic.

NEW VIDEO RELEASES

DYING YOUNG: (1991) Starring Julia Roberts and Campbell Scott.

There is a growing belief that Julia Roberts is a product of hype. This could quite possibly be true. Certainly her one-dimensional, highly mannered performance in this soap opera could well support this belief. However, if you are a fan and are in the mood for a real sudsy soap, a lot of laughs (at a film), and are able to suspend all touch with reality, Dying Young is for you.

Assume that it's dirty work, but somebody, preferably an attractive young woman has got to do it. The assumption is for someone to care for a rich, young man who has leukemia and needs help after his chemotherapy treatments. Into this position, on the strength of a memorable job interview in a very tight, red mini-suit, steps a vision named Hilary O'Neil (Julia Roberts). Now Hilary finds the job exasperating, but Victor (Campbell Scott) is smart and nice, so the pair go off to fall in love by the seaside. Do they? Does he live healthy ever after? Is the Pope Polish? Had to think about that one, didn't you? Well, you won't have to think much in this tale, where only Hollywood would try to get mileage out of a lethal illness. This is a film best appreciated by those willing to check their tastes for realism, good dialogue and a plausible script at the door. Rated R for mature themes.

FOR FOREIGN FILM BUFFS

CAT AND MOUSE: (1975/French) Starring Michele Morgan and Jean-Pierre Aumont. Cat and Mouse is a deliciously urbane and witty whodunit guaranteed to charm and deceive while keeping you marvelously entertained. The plot concerns a murder. Anyone could have killed the wealthy, philandering husband, so the story has more twists and turns than a country road. There are dazzling views of Paris and the French countryside. Rated PG.

FOR WESTERN FANS

THE SKIN GAME: (1971) Starring James Garner, Lou Gossett, Jr. and Edward Asner. This perceptive social-comedy-drama-western is set during the slave era. James Garner and Lou Gossett are a pair of con artists. Garner "sells" Gossett to unsuspecting slave owners and later helps to break him free. The fleecing continues until they meet up with the evil Edward Asner, who catches on to the act. The film then takes a chilling turn toward realism. Excellent on all levels. Rated PG for light violence.

The Principals of the thing

The many members of the Hereford Young Farmers have been busy for months working on the 1992 Hereford Young Farmers Livestock Show. The president is Kevin Urbanczyk. Serving with him as general superintendents are Gerald Marnell, Charlie Stengel and Ray Schlabs. Division superintendents are M.D. Franks, steers/helfers; Kevin Urbanczyk, barrows, and Mark Urbanczyk, lambs.

The judges will be called on to select from hundreds of animals in each division of the show. The steer/helper judge is Burt Williams of Spearman. The barrow judge is Tom Farrer of Royal Center, Indiana. The lamb judge is Kenneth Cook of San Angelo.

Not every decision of the judges will be appreciated, or even understood, but the men are selected from talking with other stock show sponsors, sponsors of local 4-H and FFA groups, breeders and others to ensure that hard-working youngsters are rewarded for their efforts.

The work done by youngsters nowadays is likely harder than it was 30, 20 or even 10 years ago. Remember back when it was the "FAT" stock show? It seemed the main goal was to see just how big you could get that animal. In these days, when we go to the grocery store looking for lean-lean-lean meats, it takes a special effort. Not only must youngsters, sponsors and others be more diligent in making selections from many possible grand champions months before the show, but special care must be taken with feeding and work programs to develop a large, healthy, marketable product to be exhibited at the stock show.

The participants in the show not only work hard with their animals, but also with their techniques in the ring. That's why there is a separate competition among the youngsters for showmanship honors in steers, barrows and lambs. A good showman can often make the difference in a judge's decision when picking among two similar animals (or hiding a flaw that might drop the animal a notch or two in the placings).

Bully! Bully! Bully!

bully adj : EXCELLENT, FIRST-RATE
-- often used interjectionally

Yes we're excited, but we are also talking about some of the fine examples of animal husbandry which will be exhibited in the coming Hereford Young Farmers Stock Show Wednesday, Jan. 22 thru Saturday, Jan. 25 at the Hereford Bull Barn.

The First National Bank of Hereford takes this opportunity to invite you to witness, first-hand, the hard work our area youth will be presenting during this year's stock show.

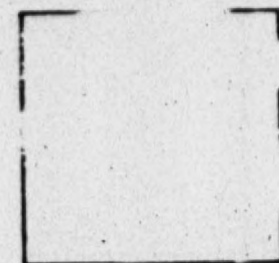

We applaud each individual effort and recognize the talents they have for future successes.
