Israelis attack Shiite outpost

KAFRA, Lebanon (AP) - Under heavy artillery cover, Israeli tanks and troops today withdrew to their self-proclaimed "security zone" in southern Lebanon after punching through U.N. lines in search of guerrilla rocket bases.

The incursion by three dozen tanks Thursday was part of a spiral of violence over the past week: Shiite Muslim rockets terrorized northern Israel; an Israeli air strike killed a radical Shiite leader and guerrillas killed three sleeping soldiers inside Israel.

The Israeli attack Thursday drew strong condemnation from the head of the United Nations and warnings from Syria it was ready to join the battle.

On Thursday, various sources said two Israeli soldiers and four Shiite guerrillas were killed. At least eight U.N. soldiers - seven Fijians and a Nepalese - were wounded, said Timur Goksel, the spokesman for the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon.

A commander on Israeli radio said the hunt for the rocket launchers was successful. But only hours before the Israeli pullout, several Soviet-designed Katyusha rockets hit the security zone.

Goksel said the Israelis launched a heavy artillery barrage to cover their withdrawal from the villages of Yater and Kafra, just north of the Israeli security zone and about 12 miles southeast of the port of Tyre.

Three hours before the withdrawal began, Israeli fighter jets swept low in mock air raids. Residents were jolted out of bed as the jets made repeated passes over Tyre and dropped parachute flares that illuminated the sky.

No bombing raids were reported. Lebanese army troops fired at the planes but scored no hits.

In Kafra, hundreds of gunmen wearing Hezbollah's trademark black headbands bolted out of shell-pocked houses, claiming they forced the Israelis to retreat.

Sheik Zohair Kanj, the party's regional operations chief, shouted, "God is Great. The army of God has defeated the army of Satan!"

But Kanj quickly disappeared when an artillery salvo hit the village, more than an hour after the Israelis had withdrawn.

No house appeared to have escaped damage. Cars smoldered in the main street, pulverized by tank tracks and shells.

Bursts of gunfire were heard today in several villages bordering the 440-square-mile security zone Israel established to guard against cross-border raids.

The area north of the zone is patrolled by the 5,800-member, nine-nation U.N. force established in 1978 after an Israeli incursion into southern Lebanon.

The Israeli advance followed three days of rocket attacks on northern Israel by guerrillas of the Iranian-backed Hezbollah militia. There were no fatalities, but the blasts showed Israel's vulnerability and led to a public outcry.

Feds investigate Hispanic care

HOUSTON (AP) - Federal investigators are looking into complaints that some Hispanics are neglected in Houston and Harris County health clinics because too few clinic workers speak Spanish, a federal official has said.

Dave Sanders, regional manager of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services Office for Civil Rights in Dallas, said Thursday that the investigation began last summer.

"We believe we have enough Spanish-speaking people to adequately take care of those who do not speak English," said Dr. Thomas Hyslop, county health director. "Our clinics have 20 to 50 percent (of their staffs) who are Spanish-speaking."

Hyslop said the county would like to have more Spanish-speaking employees, especially on the nursing staff.

Dr. Mary Kendrick, interim city health director, said the city tries to attract employees fluent in Spanish and other languages. "We have bilingual staff at every single clinic," she said.

If the department finds Hispanics being treated differently, officials would try to correct the problem, Sanders said. Federal funding could be deferred or withdrawn if those efforts failed.

"I wouldn't expect a cutoff of funds," Sanders told the Houston Chronicle. "Usually, (health-care providers) correct a problem."

Last year the eight city clinics received about $2.7 million in federal funds, and five county preventive clinics received about $2.6 million. The county hospital district could not provide a figure for its nine clinics in Ben Taub and Lyndon B. Johnson hospitals.

Tyson accuser claims $1 million offer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - The woman Mike Tyson was convicted of raping says she turned down $1 million to recant the charges before the boxer's trial.

"I said, 'No way,' I reported it to my lawyer, who took it to a higher authority, and it's being taken care of," Desiree Washington said in an interview to air on ABC's "20-20" tonight.

Marion County Prosecutor Jeffrey Modisett confirmed on Thursday that an East Coast FBI office had investigated Miss Washington's allegations, but said he understood no further action was planned.

Miss Washington declined to say who made the offer. But New York Newsday, citing a source close to the FBI investigation, reported today that it was a Providence, R.I., minister who knew Miss Washington's family but was not the family's pastor.

The minister, the Rev. Virgil Wood, confirmed to the newspaper that he contacted Miss Washington, but said, "I only played a pastoral role here."

Asked if he made her an offer, he said, "I don't want to be rude, but I'm going to hang up the phone now."

Miss Washington told "20-20" that she would have dropped the charges if Tyson had simply admitted what he did was wrong and agreed to seek help.

"I came forward and I said from the very beginning, from the day that I pressed charges, 'This man needs help, you know,'" she said. "And if he had come to me at any time before or gone to his lawyers or to anyone and said, 'I was wrong,' ... I wouldn't have gone through this trial."

ABC on Thursday released a partial transcript of the interview, which was conducted Monday. It was her first TV interview since Tyson was convicted Feb. 10.

The 19-year-old Coventry, Rhode Island, woman testified that she met Tyson when she was in Indianapolis last summer for the Miss Black America beauty pageant, and that he lured her to his hotel room and assaulted her.

The former heavyweight boxing champion faces up to 60 years in prison when he is sentenced next month.

Miss Washington said the person who offered her the money also told her what to say.

"They told me to say that I was afraid because of what happened to Patricia Bowman - that I was afraid because of how Anita Hill was exploited. They gave me a million excuses," she said.

Miss Bowman accused William Kennedy Smith, the nephew of Sen. Edward Kennedy, of raping her last spring in West Palm Beach, Fla. A jury acquitted Smith in December.

Miss Hill, a University of Oklahoma law professor, testified during Senate confirmation hearings last fall that she had been sexually harassed by Clarence Thomas when she worked for him. The Senate confirmed Thomas' appointment to the Supreme Court.

Wood's Pond Street Baptist Church is a member of the National Baptist Convention U.S.A. Inc., the nation's largest black religious group.

The organization's president, the Rev. T.J. Jemison, said Wednesday he also called Miss Washington to ask why she was going through with the charges and to say he hoped she would not use the trial to hurt Tyson.

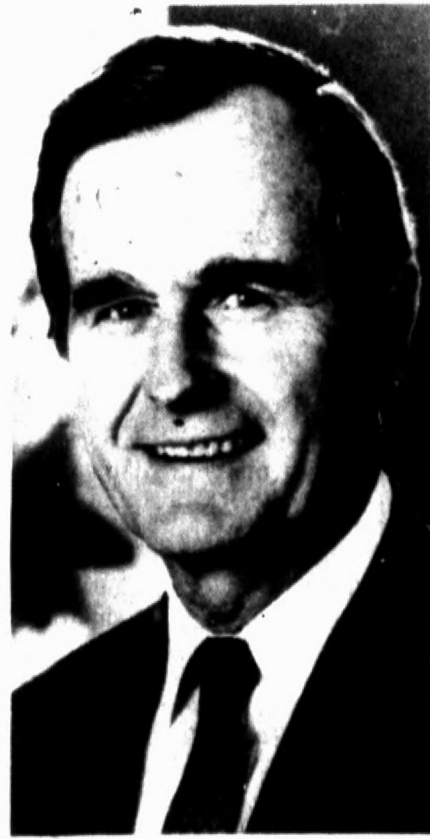

Bush approval rating plummets

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Bush's approval rating fell to 39 percent in a Gallup poll taken after the New Hampshire primary, USA Today and CNN reported today.

But the poll also found nearly three in five registered voters think Bush will be re-elected, and he would beat the two top finishers in the New Hampshire Democratic primary if the general election were held today.

Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton trails Bush 53-43 percent in the trial heat and former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas loses 54-39 percent.

The job approval rating, which was down 8 points from 47 percent on Feb. 2, was based on a poll of 1,039 adults nationwide taken Wednesday and Thursday. Results for questions about the election are based on the sample's 754 registered voters and have a margin of error of plus or minus 4 percentage points.

NASA exploring plants, potatoes and (maybe) sex

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP) - Space sex? Irish potatoes on Mars? Astronauts without The Right Stuff?

Those are among the out-of-this-world topics launched during an International Conference on Life Support and Biospherics at the University of Alabama.

Conjugal spaceflight is on the horizon as America looks to space stations on Mars or the moon - missions that could last years - in the coming century.

Regina North, a behavioral scientist at NASA's Johnson Space Center in Houston, says the agency is about to miss a golden opportunity to conduct its first research on sex in zero gravity.

Astronauts Mark Lee, 39, and Jan Davis, 37, who were married last year, are scheduled to be among seven people aboard an August space shuttle mission.

"We have this incredible opportunity, and there is no experiment planned," she said Wednesday. "This could be an experiment like no other life science experiment. We could monitor heart rates and determine what are the physiological problems that microgravity presents."

"NASA doesn't want to talk about (sex), but I'm thinking about that," she said. "It's a very Puritan society."

North concedes that spaceflight is so action-packed that taking time out for romance might be a problem: "They are using all their libido to do experiments. They're busy almost 24 hours a day."

The only data available on sex in space was a study of rats by Soviet cosmonauts, she said.

Although sex might not be high on NASA's list, food is. For extended missions, astronauts would grow some of their own food.

Ted W. Tibbitts of the University of Wisconsin-Madison told the two-day conference, which ended Thursday, that his research shows Irish potatoes would fare well. They grow easily in sterile environments, are nutritious and can be prepared many ways.

Astronauts Mark Lee, 39, and Jan Davis, 37, who were married last year, are scheduled to be among seven people aboard an August space shuttle mission.

"We have this incredible opportunity, and there is no experiment planned. This could be an experiment like no other life science experiment. We could monitor heart rates and determine what are the physiological problems that microgravity presents. NASA doesn't want to talk about (sex), but I'm thinking about that. It's a very Puritan society."

--Regina North, NASA behavioral scientist

"I recommend their use in space, not only for food but for oxygen," Tibbitts said.

With NASA working on life-support systems for long stays on Mars and the moon, the agency might have to change its standards for astronauts, whose gung-ho attitudes - and egos - were depicted in the book and movie "The Right Stuff."

The rigors of a long stay in space can lead to physical and psychological disorders in people who lack patience, North said.

"The current shuttle astronauts are perfect," she said. "They are pilots, they are self-sufficient, they love themselves, they do their jobs. But exactly what made them good for short missions may not be good for long missions."

Advocates seek closing of schools

AUSTIN (AP) - Six of Texas' 13 schools for the mentally retarded have been recommended to be closed this decade by advocates for people with disabilities.

The first schools recommended for closure are the Travis State School in Austin and Fort Worth State School.

Abilene State School, Lufkin State School, Mexia State School and San Angelo State School also should be closed and could be substituted as the first to go, four groups said in a letter to a task force making recommendations to Gov. Ann Richards.

The letter was signed by representatives of Advocacy, Inc., the Association for Retarded Citizens of Texas, the United Cerebral Palsy Association of Texas, and American Disabled for Attendant Programs Today.

The groups said they "do not believe that individuals are best served in segregated environments, such as institutions, where they are isolated from opportunities for regular connections with everyday community life."

Their recommendations for closing were based on criteria that included whether another state school is nearby; the percentage of residents recommended for community placement and where they would go; the percentage of residents who are profoundly retarded; and the number of children in the institution.

"Our designation of these six schools for closure is not an indication that we believe that these are the six worst schools in Texas, or that those we did not name provide a higher quality of care," the groups said.

The Facility Review Task Force, appointed by Richards, is to recommend by March 31 whether any state schools should be closed.

If the governor accepts the task force recommendation, it is to be implemented by the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

Linda Parrish, head of the task force, said the disability rights advocates' recommendations would be weighed along with other advice.

A settlement meant to end a federal lawsuit against Texas' system of caring for mentally retarded people includes closing two state schools. Under the agreement, most residents would be moved to group homes. Those unable to live in such settings would be transferred to other institutions.

The advocacy groups said that in closing state schools, money must be reallocated to community services such as group homes or assisted-living programs.

If schools are targeted for closure, the process would not be immediate. Officials said it likely would take several years to transfer residents to appropriate programs.

"We would hope that the first two could close within ... three to four years," said Diane Shisk of Advocacy, Inc.

Libby Doggett, executive director of the Association for Retarded Citizens, said the groups' "dream" would be to close all 13 state schools and provide community programs to suit all mentally retarded people.

But some parents of mentally retarded people believe state schools best meet their children's needs.

"We're the parents and the families of these people in the state schools, and we don't want them closed," said Fred Snyder, president of the Parent Association for the Retarded of Texas. "We should have a choice."

Candidate wants opponent's proof on pajama charge

AUSTIN (AP) - Texas Supreme Court candidate Charles Ben Howell says he will offer to withdraw from the race, but only if his primary opponent can prove reports referring to Howell wearing pajamas in court and being targeted by a disbarment attempt.

Howell challenged the reports in a letter to his Republican opponent, Chief Justice Craig Enoch of the 5th Court of Appeals in Dallas. Howell once served on the Dallas appeals court.

He cited three statements that he said appeared in Enoch's advertising as quotes from newspaper stories: "Howell has been ... reprimanded for appearing in court in pajamas ..." "He is best remembered for once showing up in court in pajamas and robe." and "The State Bar of Texas tried to disbar him."

Howell said in the letter, dated Friday, that "the underlying facts relating to each of the above statements is literally false or is misleading to (the) point where the average reader or hearer will in all likelihood gain a false impression."

Dee Klotz, Howell's spokesman, said his concern about the State Bar claim is that people would believe Howell was disbarred. Klotz said the pajama incident "flat never happened."

Howell said Enoch should present evidence within seven days that "the underlying facts ... are true and that they are sufficiently accurate as to not create a false impression with the average reader."

Howell said he would make the announcement Friday and give Enoch 24 hours to accept the challenge in writing. He said that Enoch also must agree that if he cannot prove the claims, he must issue a public statement that they are in error and quit using them.

If Enoch can prove the claims, Howell said he would withdraw from the campaign. Enoch said he had not received the letter from Howell and so could not comment on it.

In other political developments Thursday:

- Republican Railroad Commission candidate Barry Williamson bemoaned the fact that an energy bill approved by the U.S. Senate does not allow oil drilling in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge in Alaska.

He said that Democratic incumbent Lena Guerrero has not shown leadership on the issue. "By not allowing drilling in Alaska, Texas loses 60,000 jobs" in the energy business, Williamson said.

Ms. Guerrero said she had not seen the 60,000-jobs estimate before. She said it was necessary to keep out controversial items such as the drilling issue in order to pass an energy bill.

- Republican Railroad Commission candidate Carole Keeton Rylander said the Texas GOP should adopt a strong platform plank on energy strategy at its June convention in Dallas.

- Democratic Texas Supreme Court hopeful Paul Banner continued to pressure his primary opponent, incumbent Jack Hightower, to remove himself from cases that could affect companies that have hired Hightower's daughter.

On Wednesday, the Supreme Court rejected an attempt to remove Hightower from a property tax case because of an alleged conflict of interest.

Hightower's daughter, Amy Hightower Brees, worked as a lobbyist for an association that could benefit by the tax ruling which remains pending before the court on a motion for rehearing.

Banner also said Hightower should remove himself from cases that involve any of 170 insurance companies because his daughter works for the American Alliance of Insurers.

Hightower has said there was no conflict of interest on the tax case.

"I'll take the stand for him if I have to," she said Tuesday.

Ernie Lynn, 38, will be sentenced March 26. The younger Lynn, a member of his mother's band, was convicted in January of selling a gram of cocaine to an undercover agent. He could get up to 12 years in prison.

Loretta Lynn's rise from poverty to stardom was made into the 1980 movie "Coal Miner's Daughter."

Failed Olympians get another chance in '94 in Lillehammer

ALBERTVILLE, France (AP) - When figure skater Midori Ito fell early in this week's Olympic competition, her gold-medal chances likely crashing with her, Japan's national newspaper tried to console her.

"Don't Cry, Midori. There's Always Tomorrow," read the headline in Sankei.

There's always the lure of Lillehammer, too, just around the corner.

Athletes who flopped in France - and those who can't wait to add to their medals collections - are taking solace in the once-in-a-lifetime interim of just two years between Winter Olympics. Less than 24 months of training remain until the Games open in Norway at 1 p.m. on Feb. 12, 1994.

Tonya Harding, another top skater who went sprawling in the original program Wednesday night, will be pondering Lillehammer not long after she leaves the ice in tonight's free skate. After pointing to the Olympics for four years, her medal hopes went poof in mere seconds.

"I've not made up my mind, being that the Olympics are only two years away," said the 21-year-old from Portland, Ore. "I've been skating 18 years and I'm a little tired of it, but I love competing."

Ito, 21, the pre-Olympics favorite who stood only third going into tonight's finale, also says she's weary from all the stress and strain of competing in her second Olympics. But it will be tough for any athlete in his or her prime to walk away from a shot at comparatively quick redemption in Lillehammer.

Kristi Yamaguchi, the 1991 world champion, has the inside track on the gold medal tonight, with countrywoman Nancy Kerrigan and French leaper extraordinaire Surya Bonaly ready to claim it if she falters.

Like most of her foes, the 20-year-old from Fremont, Calif., prefers not to talk about 1994 just yet. But here's a hint: She said this week she wants to add a new triple jump to her repertoire, a sure tipoff she isn't ready to retire from competitive skating.

The Winter Games entered their climactic final phase today with two marquee events: the women's figures and a U.S.-Unified Team clash in the hockey semifinals that had everyone talking about 1980. The last time the Americans and Russians met in the medals round, it was in a 4-3 U.S. shocker en route to the gold at Lake Placid.

Italy, already buoyed by an unprecedented five medals in Nordic skiing and four in Alpine, three of them gold, today won only its second cross-country gold ever. Stefania Belmondo, attacking at the finish, beat triple-gold medalist Lyubov Egorova of the Unified Team by 21.9 seconds to win the 30-kilometer race.

Two Russian skiers got their fifth medals, tops in the Winter Games. Egorova is the most successful cross-country skier ever at a single Winter Games with three golds and two silvers. She earlier won in the 15K, the 10K and the relay and was runner-up in the 5K classical. Bronze medalist Elena Valbe also medaled in all five women's Nordic skiing events; her only gold came with the relay team.

The two medals enabled the Unified Team to carve into Germany's medals lead going into the final weekend. Germany had 25 medals and 10 golds, the former Soviets 22 overall and nine golds. Next came Austria with 19 medals, Norway with 18 and Italy with 11.

Germany jumped out to the first-day lead today in the four-man bobsled competition when Wolfgang Hoppe, the 1984 champion and 1988 silver medalist, piloted his sled to a two-run time of 1 minute, 56.52 seconds, narrowly ahead of teams from Austria and Canada.

USA I, bolstered by top-notch pushoffs from the last-minute replacement for NFL running back Herschel Walker, was .76 seconds behind in ninth despite nearly crashing in the first heat. Walker was yanked from the team on Wednesday for Chris Coleman, long-time brakeman for driver Randy Will. USA II was in 14th place.

The top U.S. sled tied for the third-fastest second run but remained a considerable .57 seconds but of third in its quest for the Americans' first bobsled medal since 1956. USA II was in 14th place going into Saturday's final two runs.

The United States earned its eighth medal Thursday night in the new medal sport of short-track speedskating, and for the sixth time in Albertville it was women who ascended the podium for the Americans.

Cathy Turner, 29, of Rochester, N.Y., anchored the 3,000-meter relay team that finished with the silver behind Canada. She was joined by Nikki Ziegelmeyer, 16, of Imperial, Mo., Amy Peterson, 20, of Maplewood, Minn., and Darcie Dohnal, 19, of Wauwatosa, Wis.

Kim Ki-Hoon set a world record in the men's 1,000, giving South Korea its first gold medal in Winter Olympics history.

The Norwegians surpassed their previous high of 17 medals, from the first Winter Games in nearby Chamonix in 1924, with a silver and bronze Thursday in the men's 10,000-meter speedskating. But it was the Dutch who celebrated the outcome when Bart Veldkamp cruised to the Netherlands' first men's gold in the sport in 16 years.

Julie Parisien had a chance to claim the Americans' first gold in Alpine skiing in eight years Thursday, but blew a first-run lead and lost a sure medal to an admitted case of nerves. Austria's Petra Kronberger whizzed to her second gold medal of the Games with the slalom run of her life in the afternoon.

Twins don't plan to rest on laurels

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Sure, the start of spring training means mixing sun, sand and surf with baseball. It also can mean a lot more.

To someone like Kirby Puckett, this is the time to work on the skills that will prolong his status as a star.

To someone like Todd Worrell, this is the time to see whether he will be able to prolong his career.

Puckett and Worrell were among those in Florida and Arizona who officially started spring training Thursday. Even though only pitchers and catchers were required to report in 15 camps, many players wanted to get an early jump.

About 20 players went through a voluntary but tough workout at Ft. Myers, Fla., for the World Series champion Minnesota Twins. The Twins said all 23 pitchers and six catchers on their roster were in camp and would be at today's first mandatory practice.

Puckett also was on hand, even though position players are not scheduled to report until next week.

"Working hard is our forte," Puckett said. "We can't rest on our laurels. That was 1991, and this is 1992. It's a different year. We were champs last year and the world knew it, so guys are going to be shooting for us. We've got to be on top of things from the start."

As always, the champions began the year saying that there would be no complacency. Reliever Rick Aguilera was the first to address the subject for the Twins.

"It doesn't look like we're going to sit on what we accomplished last year," he said. "We're not going to live off that. We all want to work hard to do it again. We all know it all starts in spring training."

Worrell knows that as well as anyone. Once one of baseball's top relievers, he has missed two seasons because of elbow and shoulder injuries.

Worrell was one of about 20 players who worked out at the St. Louis Cardinals' camp in St. Petersburg, Fla., one day before the first official practice. He's confident about regaining a spot on the roster, even though Lee Smith has claimed the Cardinals' role as the closer.

Last fall, Worrell was impressive in a short stint in the instructional league. Worrell, 32, had 30 or more saves in three of his four full seasons, and is one save shy of Bruce Sutter's team record of 127.

Mavs trade Donaldson to Knicks for Quinnett

DALLAS (AP) - The Dallas Mavericks' trade of James Donaldson frees the team of a center who went from star status to stumbling block for a franchise trying to restore its model image.

For the rising New York Knicks, it provides a backup for Patrick Ewing.

Donaldson, 34, a 12-year veteran center, was traded to the Knicks Thursday night in exchange for 25-year-old forward Brian Quinnett.

In the 7-foot-2, 278-pound Donaldson, the Knicks acquired a backup for Ewing while giving up their No. 3 small forward in the 6-8 Quinnett, who played in only 24 of New York's 52 games this season.

With the addition of Quinnett, the Mavericks now have eight players 26 or younger.

New York coach Pat Riley said it was the prototypical trade that meets the needs of both teams.

The Knicks plan on using Donaldson 10 to 12 minutes a game. That's about what Dallas had planned on before forward-center Roy Tarpley was permanently dismissed from the team on Oct. 16 under terms of the antidrug agreement between the league and the players association.

"James is a very effective low-post offensive threat," Riley said. "He's a threat down there and we have to maintain that threat. It was a deal we felt we had to make."

The Mavericks went for youth in Quinnett, nine years younger than Donaldson, who lost his starting job to Herb Williams this season and has clashed with teammates as Dallas fell to near the bottom of the Western Conference.

Donaldson is averaging 6.2 points and 6.1 rebounds in 22.6 minutes this season, but saw his playing time reduced significantly in recent weeks and didn't play in the Mavericks' last six games.

"Rebuilding is a difficult process," said Rick Sund, Mavericks vice president for basketball operations. "It can be a painful process, but it can also be a fun process.

"We're going to lose some more games. But our benefits are going to be a good draft pick this year and playing time for our younger players."

Quinnett, a second-round draft pick in 1989, averaged 3.1 points this season but averaged just 7.9 minutes in the games he appeared.

"If we like him - he will be a restricted free agent at the end of the year - we may talk about signing him in the summer," Sund said. "He stays with our youth movement. We are getting younger. James did not fit into our plans for the future."

Sund said Donaldson's scuffles with teammates last month had nothing to do with the trade.

Donaldson alienated teammates by brawling with guard Rolando Blackman during practice and then secretly tape-recording a meeting two days later.

Donaldson said he recorded the

Jan. 30 players-only meeting to keep an accurate record of what was said. He refused players' demands for an apology.

Guard Derek Harper, who called Donaldson a "7-foot punk," was scratched twice under an eye trying to break up the scuffle.

Sund said Donaldson this season took a subordinate role "because we wanted to play Jerry Davis more, and then Doug Smith more and then Donald Hodges more."

"He had asked, when he saw the directional change that we were going and he wasn't going to play, if he could be traded," Sund said.

Donaldson is the Mavericks' all-time leader with 4,589 rebounds and 615 blocks. For his career in Dallas, he averaged 8.8 points and 9.5 rebounds in 484 games.

"I'm going to miss Dallas, I'm going to miss my friends," Donaldson told WFAA-TV in Dallas. He said he'll miss the good old days like those in 1987-88 when the Mavericks came within one game of going to the NBA Finals.

But "I won't miss the losing," he said.

Dallas is 15-37, ahead of only Minnesota (10-41) in the Western Conference.

Donaldson's best season was 1984-85 when he led the NBA in shooting percentage, hitting 63.7 percent for the Los Angeles Clippers before joining Dallas in exchange for Kurt Nimphius on Nov. 25, 1985.

Lakers remain positive despite 6th loss in row

By TOM COYNE
AP Sports Writer

A six-game losing streak carries little historic significance for most teams. The Los Angeles Lakers aren't like most teams.

The team that once won 33 straight games has lost six straight for only the fourth time in its history. The Lakers haven't seen a worse streak since losing 11 in a row during the 1958-59 season, when Elgin Baylor was a rookie and the franchise called Minneapolis home.

Despite a 105-103 loss to the Seattle SuperSonics on Thursday night before a crowd of 30,847 at the Kingdome, the Lakers see reason for hope.

"One thing we did compared to the last few games was we communicated much better," said Sedale Threatt, who led the Lakers with 23 points. "If we can keep playing like we did tonight, we'll get it back."

"This team still has potential," said James Worthy, who scored 20. "I don't go by what the experts say. But every game is a challenge."

Ricky Pierce sank a 20-foot jump shot as time ran out to give Seattle its sixth win in seven games under coach George Karl.

Cavaliers 92, Knicks 89

New York led 83-76 with 4:25 left after a jumper by Greg Anthony. But a three-point play by Brad Daugherty and a 3-point goal by Craig Ehlo pulled Cleveland within one. The Cavaliers got that close three more times before Nance's decisive tip of Ehlo's miss put them ahead 90-89.

Mark Price scored 22 points and Daugherty had 19 points and 14 rebounds for Cleveland. Patrick Ewing finished with 26 points and 17 rebounds and Kiki Vandeweghe scored 17 points for the Knicks.

Rockets 110, 76ers 101

Hakeem Olajuwon scored 23 points and Houston jumped to an early lead and held off second-half challenges by Philadelphia as Rudy Tomjanovich guided the Rockets to a victory in his first game as interim coach.

Houston led 63-51 at halftime, but Hersey Hawkins scored 10 third-quarter points as Philadelphia closed to 79-77 with 3:48 left in the period.

The Rockets led 92-89 with 9:15 left before they took control with a 9-1 run.

Heat 111, Bucks 109

Glen Rice's tap-in with 1.8 seconds left gave Miami a franchise-record 25th victory and snapped the Heat's five-game road losing streak.

Rice, who scored 26 of his 30 points in the second half, missed a shot from the baseline. Teammate Grant Long got an offensive rebound, missed and Rice tipped in the shot.

'Horns rule SWC as Frogs croak

AUSTIN (AP) - A few weeks ago, Texas and Texas Christian appeared headed toward a close finish in the Southwest Conference race.

But things have changed drastically since Dexter Cambridge, the Longhorns' leading scorer, returned from a 16-game NCAA suspension and the Horned Frogs have been forced into suiting up - and playing - an equipment manager.

The two conference front-runners met Wednesday night in what was obviously a game between teams headed in opposite directions.

Texas' fast-paced offense and full-court defense wore out the Horned Frogs, helping the Longhorns cruise to a 99-77 victory that gave them sole possession of first place in the SWC.

The Longhorns are 8-2 in league action and 17-9 overall. TCU is 18-7 and 7-3, tied with Houston for second place.

"Right now, Texas is probably in the driver's seat. They're probably playing about as well as anybody," said TCU coach Moe Iba.

Not too long ago, when Texas was a struggling 12-8 without Cambridge, the Horned Frogs appeared headed for postseason glory. But TCU has spiraled, losing three of its last five.

The downfall began in December when four players left the team for various reasons. That was when Iba issued equipment manager Brandon Aldrich a uniform.

Surely, Iba hoped, he wouldn't be forced to play Aldrich. But then forward Kurt Thomas, the team's leading shot blocker with 29, broke a bone in his leg.

"He played in high school and he practices with us," Iba said.

A big reason why the Longhorns have March on their minds is Cambridge's return. Since the senior forward rejoined the team from a half-season suspension six games ago, Texas has won five straight.

Even better news for the Longhorns is that Cambridge isn't yet back in shape. His career-high 30 points against Georgia on Sunday and 27 points against TCU aren't bad for a guy whose coach pulls him every three to four minutes to catch his breath.

Texas coach Tom Penders has made a habit of making his team improve as the postseason nears. This year seems to be no exception.

"We're deeper than we've ever been," Penders said after Wednesday's game in which his bench scored 27 points led by a career-high 20 from Michael Richardson.

With the Razorbacks having emigrated to the Southeast Conference, Penders has a good chance to earn his first SWC title. As Texas nears the 20-win plateau, it also looks ready for a school-record fourth consecutive trip to the NCAA Tournament.

Although only leading by one game, Texas appears to have a firm grip on the conference race.

In their final four SWC games, the Longhorns face the league's three worst teams and Rice, which has lost 16 of its last 17 meetings against Texas, including all seven against Penders.

The Longhorns probably would have to lose twice for TCU to have a chance at the regular season title.

Since the teams split their two meetings, the next tiebreaking step would be record against the third-place team. If that is Houston, the Longhorns have beaten the Cougars twice while TCU still must play them in Houston.

Blue Devils rally past Terps

By The Associated Press

Mike Krzyzewski was mad, real mad. And it was hard to tell who upset him more - Duke's players or fans.

"When I came out after halftime I've never seen our students sitting down," he said. "I was in shock. I told my players to get off their butts. ... I think our students should get off their butts, too. I think that we are spoiled ... and maybe my team is too."

That outburst came after the No. 1 Blue Devils rallied in the final seconds to beat Maryland 91-89 Thursday night. Duke won its 27th straight home game, barely.

"We need to be a lot hungrier here at Duke University," Krzyzewski said. "A good team has to do it all the time. We played spoiled and cheered spoiled."

Firing up the fans and the team wasn't a problem at Arizona State, where the Sun Devils surprised No. 5 Arizona 77-74.

Arizona State had lost 11 straight to its intrastate rivals since the last game of the 1985-86 season.

"In my three years here at ASU we have accomplished some great things - the attendance, the postseason appearances, the recruiting classes are all great. But this hasn't been done in a long, long while," coach Bill Frieder said.

Duke (21-1, 11-1 Atlantic Coast Conference) trailed 89-88 with 38 seconds left after Maryland's Kevin McLinton made a 15-foot jumper.

Christian Laetner, who led Duke with 30 points, missed a short shot in the lane, but Antonio Lang followed up with a basket with 22 seconds to go.

In other games, No. 2 UCLA routed Stanford 96-70, No. 15 Southern Cal beat California 94-81 and DePaul downed No. 19 Cincinnati 71-69.

with Mel Phillips

The dust has settled, some 15,000 people have returned home, the fishing pros have departed, and now only the memories of Outdoor World '92 remain. But what great memories they are.

Kathy Magers, a Bass N Gal national champion from Rockwall, was the hit of the show as she gave outstanding fishing seminars to grizzled old bass veterans, followed by a quick trip to help the children catch their first fish at the indoor trout pond. Zebco is lucky to have a "her" on their team because she inspires the future of the fishing industry--the kids.

Big Bass Tournament at Lake Baylor--The entry fee for Saturday's tournament is $50 and can be paid at the lake. Entries are limited to the first 100 anglers, and fishing hours are 7 a.m.-2 p.m. Based on 100 entries, the winner will take home $2,500, and $100 will be awarded for the biggest bass caught each hour.

Warning: This is a "30/30 tournament." The forecast high temperature must be more than 30 degrees and the wind must be slower than 30 miles per hour. If a blue norther blows in, the tournament will be canceled. Call (806) 353-3654 for the latest information concerning this event. Sign-up is at the south ramp starting tonight at 7.

Winter walleyes--The visiting pros found the fishing tough as they caught a total of four keepers during their 13 days of fishing. Stan "call me Bubba" Berry is eager to give it another try but wants the water to warm up to the mid-forties.

It is no surprise that four touring walleye professionals didn't solve the mystery of Meredith during their brief stay. It is, however, a total shock that they caught no smallmouth bass.

Joe Kraai, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department biologist, is in favor of a 12-15-inch protection slot limit for smallmouth. The net effect of this change will be the harvest of the excess smallmouth shorter than 12 inches. With all respect to Mr. Kraai's research based on his chemical cove kills, few fishermen--who study the lake with a rod and reel--are in favor of wiping out large numbers of valuable bass.

The bottom line of Kraai's recommendation is to continue protecting the elusive walleye up to 16 inches while reducing the number of smallmouth shorter than 12 inches.

What do you think? Public hearings are scheduled for early March. Make plans to attend and let those government employees know how you feel.

Mel Phillips is an avid hunter, a tournament fisherman and host of a Wednesday evening talk show on KGNC-radio (710 AM). He is also an award-winning member of the Texas Outdoor Writers Association.

Palmeiro wins in arbitration

DALLAS (AP) - The Texas Rangers were forced to dig deeper into their pockets this winter. But if nothing else, they have a couple of delighted superstars on their hands for the summer.

Texas first baseman Rafael Palmeiro won $3.85 million in salary arbitration Thursday, just one day after teammate Ruben Sierra won a record $5 million.

Palmeiro's award is the third-highest in arbitration history behind Sierra's and the $4.25 million awarded Tuesday to New York Mets pitcher David Cone.

BASEBALL

York Mets, getting their teams in the right mental health is a priority.

"What we want to try to stress here is to play a team game," Torborg, in his first season with the Mets, said as camp opened in Port St. Lucie, Fla. "When you start to have difficult times, bad teams point fingers at each other, good teams are supportive of each other."

The Mets finished fifth in the NL East last season, 20 1/2 games behind the first-place Pittsburgh Pirates. The poor performance on the field and the constant bickering in the clubhouse cost manager Bud Harrelson his job.

The Reds also finished fifth last season, a year after winning the World Series. Piniella said he intends to change that from Day 1.

"We're going to work," he said. "We're going to stress fundamentals and have a lot of individual instruction. One of the most important things is to get people playing together and establish a team concept."

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

DRINKING WATER OUT OF A ROCK?

WHEN MOSES LED ISRAEL OUT OF THE WILDERNESS, THEY RAN OUT OF WATER. THE PEOPLE SAID THEY WOULD RATHER HAVE DIED IN EGYPT THAN TO PERISH IN THIS ARID LAND. MOSES AND AARON TOOK THE PROBLEM TO GOD. HE ORDERED MOSES TO SPEAK TO THE ROCK BEFORE THE PEOPLE AND THERE WOULD BE SUFFICIENT WATER FOR BOTH MAN AND BEAST. WHAT WOULD YOU DO UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES? WOULD YOU ACTUALLY ASK FOR A ROCK TO GIVE YOU WATER? MOSES DID! (NUMBERS 20:11) MOSES LIFTED HIS EYES AND SMOTE THE ROCK AND THE WATER GUSHED FORTH.

Here's An Idea That Can Strengthen Your Family

Tonight at the dinner table, read something out loud to your family. Tomorrow night, let another member read something. A news story. A Bible verse. A Robert Frost poem. A cereal box panel. History. Humor. Anything. Each night a different family member can read a selection. Imagine the wide range of subjects your family will read in 365 days. What a stimulating way to have your children develop good reading habits. We have 23 million illiterate adults in America. We wouldn't have one, if each of them had been served reading as part of their nightly diet. It's non-fattening, but enriching. And it doesn't cost a dime.

Child abuse topic of recent chapter program

Tammy Charest gave a program on child abuse and the procedures her department uses when members of Xi Epsilon Alpha Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority met recently in the Reddy Room of Southwestern Public Service.

Charest distributed a pamphlet among members from Child Protective Services. It named some of the things the department looks for during an investigation and it defined child abuse and neglect according to Texas laws. The speaker discussed several of the items and the steps their office goes through during an investigation. Following the program, Ruby Lee presented Charest with a gift of appreciation.

Opening ritual was led by Vice president Ruby Sanders.

During the business session with President Holly Bixler presiding, recording secretary, Melinda Henson, took a silent roll call and read the minutes of the previous minutes which were waived. Linda Arellano extended her appreciation to the chapter for the recent Sweetheart

Brunch which honored chapter sweethearts.

Arellano, service chairman, collected baby food from members and will deliver the items to the Good Shepherd food pantry. She also obtained members' signatures on a Valentine card which was sent to the chapter's adopted sister, Billie Brown.

It was decided by members to donate clothes to Good Shepherd. The clothes were left from the chapter's garage sale in May of 1991.

Danell Culp voiced her intent to transfer to transfer to Alpha Iota Mu Chapter and asked members about the proper procedures to do so.

Members adjourned the business meeting with the closing ritual and the Mizpah. Hostesses, Ruby Lee and Dona Hendrickson, served cake and hot tea to those present. They included Arellano, Marge Bell, Bixler, Sharon Bodner, Dalene Burns, Susan Cardinal, Denise Haflinger, Deann Harris, Henson, Peggy Hyer, Connie Matthews, Sanders, Susan Shaw and Kay Williams.

A chair like a bushel basket

Not much is more humble than the bushel basket. In the back yard or the back 40, the basket - thin strips of rough wood wired to form - can hold the harvest or the laundry. Upended, it's an ad hoc seat.

It's also the seed of an idea for chairs by architect Frank Gehry, but there's nothing humble about them. Knoll International commissioned them, and august museums are lined up to exhibit them.

"My goal was to make a very light wood chair that would be responsive to the human body," Gehry says. Ribbons of wood - smooth maple, actually - flexible enough to be twisted into shape seemed the way to go.

"As a kid I used to sit on bushel baskets," Gehry says. "I knew it would work, but everyone I talked to said 'no.'"

Everyone except Andrew Cogan, vice president of Knoll, who asked Gehry to design an innovative collection of furniture.

"He talked to us about his idea of doing something with thin wood strips," Cogan recalls. "It got us all excited. 'If it doesn't work, we know you will come up with something else innovative,' we told him."

But fitting in a new project wouldn't be easy for Gehry, one of the world's most celebrated architects. So Knoll built him a studio next door to his office in Santa Monica and stocked it with bandsaws, laminating presses and veneer and hired two craftsmen to execute prototypes of Gehry's designs.

It's not the use of laminated wood that makes the chairs remarkable. There have been other laminated chairs - by Charles and Ray Eames and by Alvar Aalto, for example.

"But nobody has ever pressed laminations this thin or used laminated wood strips to make the entire chair - frame, back and seat," claims Cogan. The lightest chair weighs only about 8 pounds.

Gehry spent 2 1/2 years on the design, and Knoll has invested more than $1 million on development.

Although Knoll is best known for commercial furnishings, the chairs have a homey feel and Cogan predicts they will be turning up in living rooms and dining rooms.

The finished collection includes three side chairs, one with arms; two lounge chairs, an ottoman and two tables. All are named for hockey plays in deference to Gehry's passion for the game. The chairs will be introduced to the trade March 18 at the wholesale furniture fair known as Westweek in Los Angeles. Samples are to be in showrooms sometime in May. Retail prices, not yet firm, are projected to start at about $800.

"If the furniture is successful and Knoll recoups some of their money, they might allow me to keep on designing," says Gehry. "I have couches and even cheaper versions of the furniture."

"The new chairs are a continuation of my search for the ultimate inexpensive furniture, something that could be sold cheaply and that would be acceptable to a mass market."

An attempt in the early 1970s led to furniture made from stacks of corrugated cardboard glued together, faced with hardboard and cut with a jigsaw.

In January, four of the strip chairs were given the imprimatur of an exhibition at the Museum of Modern Art in New York, making the furniture a museum piece even before it's off the assembly line.

Architect Philip Johnson, director of the department of architecture and design at the Museum of Modern Art, says Gehry's new design is "one of four technical innovations in chairs of the modern era."

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: In high school, I was your typical cheerleader—bouncy, preppy and popular. When I started to date the star on the football team, all the girls envied me. He wasn't your average rock-headed jock. He was sensitive and intelligent and I really fell in love with him.

We parted when I went east to college and he went west. It is now five years later and we are both back in the old hometown. Of course, the flame was rekindled and this is what I'm writing about!

The other night when we were getting intimate, he was impotent. I tried to make a joke of it and said, "You're not gay, are you?" Ann, I was totally shocked when he replied, "I'm not sure. Maybe I am." He then proceeded to tell me about a three-year relationship he had maintained in college with a male teacher's assistant. He says he is terribly confused and needs time to "work things out."

I don't know what to make of this. I still love him, Ann, but I no longer want to sleep with him. With all we hear about AIDS these days, I am scared to death. If he asks me to marry him, should I consider it? Please help me think straight.—Beside Myself in Seattle

DEAR SEATTLE: You are lucky the young man was so honest. Others may not have been. You must now face the fact that your friend may be a homosexual. If you have any interest in becoming intimate with him, you should definitely wait until he has been tested for AIDS and brings you the written results.

I recommend counseling for him. It is obvious that he has not come to terms with his sexuality. Until this matter is resolved and his medical report comes through, I suggest you put everything on hold.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My father and mother have been married for 40 years. He has a mistress with whom he has had a relationship for almost 20 years. I am sure my mother is aware of this woman because my father has spent every weekend away from home as far back as I can remember.

My father and his girlfriend visit my sister, "Kathy", almost every weekend. My younger sister, "Rachel," refuses to go to Kathy's house on weekends because of the girlfriend's presence. I enjoy going to Kathy's because she is a lot of fun to be with and my husband loves being around my father. They have a great deal in common and enjoy hanging out together. By being in her company, am I telling this woman that I think her relationship with my father is OK? Also, am I showing a lack of respect for my mother when I socialize with my father and his girlfriend? I have some very mixed emotions and would appreciate your opinion.—Divided Loyalties in New York

DEAR DIVIDED: Adult children who offer hospitality to or visit their father when he is with his girlfriend are giving tacit approval to the relationship. They are also being disloyal to their mother.

I suggest that you visit your sister when your father and his girlfriend are not there. Your husband can enjoy your father's company in YOUR home or his.

Since our society has become much more free-wheeling these past few years, I have gotten this question frequently and my response is one I've given a lot of thought to. I hope you take it seriously.

NEW YORK (AP) - Meredith Vieira is returning from maternity leave to be co-anchor of the "CBS Morning News."

Vieira, who left "60 Minutes" last year to have her second child, will succeed Giselle Fernandez, CBS said Wednesday. Fernandez will become a correspondent for the "CBS Evening News."

When Vieira became pregnant, she offered to stay with "60 Minutes" and work part-time. But executive producer Don Hewitt declined, saying he needed a full-time correspondent. She was succeeded by Lesley Stahl.

What you should know

In the last decade, more than 5,758,000 families became homeowners with the help of private mortgage insurance. A growing number of Americans are discovering home buying is not only easier with private mortgage insurance, the tax benefits may be greater.

First, with mortgage insurance you can put up much less of a down payment, sometimes as little as five percent. That means a family can purchase a $80,000 home with only $4,000 down rather than the traditional $16,000.

Trade-up buyers can also benefit from loans made with low down payments. Since interest on consumer debt is no longer tax deductible, the home loan is one of the few areas where homeowners can save tax dollars. Even if trade-up buyers can put 20 percent down on a new home with the profits from selling their old home, that may not be the best option.

For tax reasons, it may be better to only put about 10 percent down, and instead use the extra cash to pay off other debts such as a car loan or furniture loan or even to invest or save for the future. Talk to your local lender to find out which strategy would be best for you.

Lenders will generally allow you to take out a home loan with less money down as long as the loan is covered by mortgage insurance, because the insurance protects the lender in the event that the homeowner cannot make the payments.
