

Clayton Says Bill Would Avert Water Crisis

Texas Legislature Will Consider Water Plan

AUSTIN -- When the Special Session of the Texas Legislature opens on July 13, one item receiving top priority will be legislation that looks to the future water needs of the State.

Speaker Bill Clayton says his water trust plan will provide the citizens of Texas with the opportunity to finance much needed water projects at reasonable rates of interest -- even by today's standards.

The legislation, if passed by the legislature and approved by the voters at an election to amend the State Constitution, will establish a fund or funds to finance water projects in aiding water development, water conservation, water quality enhancement, flood control, or any combination of these.

Clayton said the legislation being prepared for the Special Session is the version which was pending before the Senate when the regular session ended in June. Earlier in the regular session the House had approved the concept, but there were a number of changes made when the legislation reached the Senate.

One-half of state revenues which exceed appropriations would be deposited in the fund or funds.

The management and expenditure of the money accumulated will be provided for in enabling legislation which will be offered during the special session. Under the proposed enabling legislation, one dollar of water funds could be used to guarantee up to ten dollars of bonds issued on the local level for water projects.

The other one-half of the surplus tax revenues would be used by the legislature as it sees fit. In fact, if the legislature wishes to use the funds earmarked for the water funds for purposes other than water projects, it may do so by a simple majority vote of both houses.

The Clayton plan also provides for a bond guaranty program in which a maximum of $500 million of the general credit of the State will be used to guarantee the payment of principal and interest on bond issues of qualified political subdivisions, the funds of which will be used for water projects.

Under the proposed enabling legislation, one dollar of State funds in the Treasury will guarantee two dollars of bonds issued on the local level for water projects. The guarantee will cause political subdivisions to be able to acquire a rating on its bond issue which means a possible savings of one and one-half to two percent on the interest rate of the bond issue.

The bill would also give the legislature the authority to use funds from any source to retire state debt. State debt is all debt issued and guaranteed by the full faith and credit of the State of Texas.

The Clayton plan goes on to provide that the legislature may authorize the transfer of revenue from the general revenue fund to any of the funds created under this constitutional amendment.

President Firm on Tax Cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) -- While Senate Republicans say yes and House Democrats say maybe to one last pass at a tax compromise, the White House insists that President Reagan is unwilling to give any more on his plan for a 25 percent cut over three years.

In the meantime, less than a month from the president's deadline for getting a bill to his desk, the Senate will defy tradition and go ahead with its own, Reagan-like measure without waiting on the House.

To the White House's surprise, talk of reopening negotiations was resurrected Wednesday by Senate Finance Chairman Bob Dole of Kansas. He said Republicans could give up an extra share of relief for low- and middle-income workers while Democrats could give Reagan the three-year tax cut he wants.

But there were no immediate takers.

House Democrats, battered in earlier confrontations with Reagan, were skeptical, although Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. said Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rostenkowski will meet with Dole, his Republican counterpart, to explore the possibilities.

At the White House, however, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes issued a carefully worded statement saying Reagan "will not compromise on the basic plan...across-the-board cuts for three years and 25 percent."

"That's what he agreed to," Speakes said. "He wants a tax cut for all Americans, not just some Americans."

Even that did not quiet Senate Republicans.

After the Speakes statement, Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker said he still thinks there is room for savings and investment. That would fit any compromise envisioned by Dole.

Rostenkowski did not react publicly to Dole

House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois said he thought talk of a compromise was "over-exaggerated."

And O'Neill, who already has lost three major tests over budget policy, did not sound excited about the prospect of another round of negotiations. He recalled that Democratic leaders tried for several weeks to negotiate a tax bill with the White House, only to have those efforts abandoned after Reagan struck a deal with conservative Democrats.

"Well, we got shot down so quickly when that tried to happen that I don't know whether it's worthwhile trying now or not," the Massachusetts Democrat said. "But Rostenkowski will talk to Dole again."

Youth Trapped In Well Near City

At noon today, rescue units were attempting to rescue a 4-year-old boy from an abandoned water well northeast of town.

The Brand was asked to withhold the name of the youth pending notification of a parent. Rescue workers had lowered oxygen and a flashlight, and movement was detected.

Workers were hoping the youth could secure a rope which was lowered into the well shaft, otherwise the possibility of drilling a parallel shaft was being considered. No voice contact had been made, but the depth of the trapped youth was estimated at about 175 feet.

The youth was reportedly playing with two brothers when he slipped and fell into the hole. The mishap occurred about 10:30 this morning.

Senate Appears Ready to Confirm

O'Connor Foes Find Little Support

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Conservative groups trying to mount a political offensive against Sandra D. O'Connor's nomination to the Supreme Court are finding a fight and seeing no support in a Senate inclined to confirm her.

At a Capitol Hill news conference backed by 21 conservative and anti-abortion organizations, a spokesman said Thursday that the Reagan administration may have "covered up" information about Mrs. O'Connor's alleged pro-abortion stance.

They claimed that as a member of the Arizona Senate in 1970 she co-sponsored and voted in committee for a measure that would have legalized abortion on demand. The bill never was enacted.

Within hours of the news conference, conservative Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., took to the Senate floor to denounce criticism of the Arizona appeals court judge as "a lot of foolish claptrap."

Later, in a television interview, Goldwater stepped up his counterattack by accusing the Moral Majority, and the National Right to Life Committee, two groups in the forefront of the battle against the nomination, of "taking more of a fascist line than a conservative line."

Howard Phillips, spokesman for the groups and head of the Conservative Caucus, told reporters that the O'Connor nomination was a "major blow" to the conservative bloc that helped elect Reagan last fall.

"It can be expected that the O'Connor nomination could diminish the prospects for Republican gains in the House and Senate in 1982," he added. Phillips noted that several senators have expressed a desire not to be "railroaded" into voting for Mrs. O'Connor; while acknowledging, "I'm not aware that any senator has taken an unequivocal position against the nomination."

An Associated Press survey Wednesday and Thursday found 33 senators committed to vote for Mrs. O'Connor and 20 leaning that way. There were no declarations of opposition, with 45 senators undecided and two

Most Texans Cast Vote For MX Missile Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) -- All but two Texas congressmen voted against a proposal Thursday that would have prohibited any funds for the controversial MX missile system.

The amendment, offered by Rep. Ronald Dellums, D-California, failed by a margin of more than 3-to-1, with all but Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Houston, and Rep. Ron Paul, R-Lake Jackson, voting with the 316-96 majority.

Leland spoke in support of the amendment by Dellums, who said the MX system would be "costly and dangerous." The amendment was to the Department of Defense authorization bill for the 1982 fiscal year.

The MX system would involve putting missiles in underground silos and shutting them from site to site so enemy nations would be unable to pinpoint their locations.

Officials recommended putting the system in Nevada and Utah, although at one time they considered putting some of them in West Texas or Eastern New Mexico.

"I have some disagreement with the expenditures for the MX. It is not the most effective way to spend our money. I would rather we spent it on anti-ballistic missiles, on defense, than on more offensive missiles," Paul said.

"Our firepower is adequate now. Besides, it's economically unsound to have the MX built in the West, and militarily I think it's vulnerable."

The same amount of money could be better spent, the Houston-area Republican said, on space cruisers, space shuttle activities and laser beams.

Showers Dot Area

Scattered showers again fell in the area last night and .03 of an inch of the precipitation was officially recorded as falling in Hereford. Last night's rainfall brings the week's total amount of precipitation to .37 of an inch.

The forecast for the weekend calls for more scattered thunderstorms through tonight and partly cloudy skies and warm temperatures through Saturday. Highs are expected to be in the 90's and lows are expected to be in the low 60's.

Ever think about the differences in Democrats and Republicans. Some congressman found an article on the subject and had it reprinted in the Congressional Record.

The story goes that a reporter covering the legislature for the first time wrote the following for his paper back home: "As a newcomer to working with the legislature, I have had many questions to ask the old pros in the business. They have been most helpful to me and perhaps I should pass along some of that knowledge and insight."

"For instance, just what is the difference between a Democrat and a Republican? Many people say the differences are insignificant. To those people, I say, pshaw. Consider these differences:

"Democrats buy most of the books that have been banned somewhere...Republicans form censorship committees and read them as a group. Republicans consume three-fourths of all the rutabaga produced in this country...The remainder is thrown out. Republicans usually wear hats and almost always clean their paint brushes. Democrats give their worn-out clothes to those less fortunate...Republicans wear theirs.

"Republicans employ exterminators...Democrats step on the bugs. Democrats name their children after currently popular sports figures, politicians and entertainers...Republican children are named after their parents or grandparents, according to where the money is.

"Democrats keep trying to cut down on smoking but are not successful...Neither are Republicans. Republicans tend to keep their shades down, although seldom is any reason why they should...Democrats ought to, but don't. Republicans study the financial pages of the newspaper...Democrats put them in the bottom of the bird cage.

"Most of the stuff alongside the road has been thrown out of car windows by Democrats. Republicans raise dahlias, Dalmations and eyebrows...Democrats raise kids, Airedales and taxes. Democrats eat the fish they catch...Republicans hang them on the wall.

"Republican boys date Democrat girls...They plan to marry Republican girls but feel they're entitled to a little fun first. Democrats make up plans and then do something else...Republicans follow the same plans their grandfathers made. Republicans sleep in twin beds...some even in separate rooms...That is why there are more Democrats." (From The Congressional Record.)

Senate Committee Says Life Begins at Conception

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Amid fights and power plays over tax and budget cuts, Congress is finding time to take up some life and death matters: when it begins and when it ends.

As a Senate subcommittee took the first step Thursday to provide an anti-abortion definition for life as beginning at conception, a presidential commission chartered by Congress in 1978 was saying a definition of death would be better left to the states.

Nonetheless, the commission said the states should adopt its definition of death as the "irreversible cessation" of all brain or circulatory and respiratory functions -- even if a person can be kept alive artificially.

But it cautioned that laws defining death should be kept separate from those governing termination of life-sustaining treatment and organ transplant donors.

Medical advances that can keep a body functioning after severe injury and disease make definitions of death based on a heart stoppage or cessation of breathing obsolete, the commission said.

Brain-dead people are "people who have expired whose hearts and lungs are kept working, though the function of the brain isn't there," said Alexander Capron, the commission's executive director.

Commission members said Thursday that a uniform definition of death would prevent problems that might result by a person being declared dead in one state and alive in another.

A Senate Judiciary subcommittee, on a 3-2 vote, approved the bill defining life as beginning at conception.

Anti-busing legislation appears headed for postponement until fall or winter. Senate leaders planned a cloture vote today to cut off a bipartisan coalition's filibuster on an anti-busing amendment.

The filibuster, led by Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., is aimed at preventing Sens. Bennett Johnston, D-La., and Jesse Helms, R-N.C. from attaching anti-busing amendments to a 1982 spending authorization for the Justice Department.

Regardless of the cloture vote, Johnston has conceded his amendment to curb court-ordered busing for desegregating schools may have to be shelved this year because Senate leaders prefer that the issue be taken up separately.

Ms. Dawson Likes Dealing with People

Born in Deaf Smith General Hospital, where she is now employed, and raised 35 miles northwest of Hereford, Phillis Dawson jokes, "I've really gone far in life, haven't I?" She may not have moved far from her beginnings, but she has accomplished much.

Ms. Dawson is the Assistant Office Manager of the hospital business office and finds pleasure in dealing with people in that capacity. Expressing an interest in patient and community welfare, she says, "People need to be aware of the services the hospital provides for the community so that they do not lose them through non-use."

She adds, "Our hospital is improving all the time and we have some excellent programs such as the LVN class and the ambulance service."

Ms. Dawson was first employed by DSGH in Oct.,

Away from the office Ms. Dawson's interests include a study group "ARE" in Amarillo, which she attends weekly. The group studies are centered around the works of Edgar Casey a Growing up in the country and attending school in Adrian as she did Ms. Dawson recalls that "Hereford was TOWN," where her parents came to shop, attend shows, and for doctor office appointments.

Border Patrol Rescues 12

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) — U.S. Border Patrol agents rescued 12 undocumented Mexicans who had no water from the Sonora Desert east of here Thursday, but arrived too late to save a 13th, the patrol said.

Discovery of the survivors, who agents said were also close to death, came one year to the week after 12 undocumented Salvadorans and one Mexican died in the Organ Pipe Cactus National Monument, about 60 miles to the east, while trying to enter the country.

Seventee other aliens found water just in time last month, according to patrol agents who tracked them.

The 13 men found Thursday crossed the border about 50 miles east of the San Luis port of entry and had walked about 30 miles with only a few gallons of water, border patrol officials said.

The water had given out by the time they were found Thursday morning, and an unidentified male in his 30s had died, agents said.

The others, whose ages were believed to range from 30 to 50, were given water and held for further questioning, but did not require hospitalization, an official said.

Investigators said the group apparently planned to stop off at Baker's Peak near Yuma in the hope of finding water. However, no water is available there at this time of year, officials said.

Border patrol agents searching the monument's 516-square-mile park on July 5 and 6, 1980, rescued 13 undocumented aliens but arrived too late to save at least 13 others and speculated that another six bodies were never found.

"We're living on borrowed time," the head of the Yuma patrol sector's intelligence unit told The Associated Press last week. "It's going to happen again."

Senator Considers Governor Candidacy

He said response to his candidacy "has been very gratifying so far" but added "... I realize that two people saying they want me to run for governor is certainly not a groundswell."

Olympic Velodrome Gets Underway

CARSON, Calif. (AP) — Shovels full of dirt gave evidence that physical preparations for the 1984 Summer Olympic games are under way.

A ground-breaking ceremony for the cycling velodrome at California State University-Dominguez Hills, the start of a $4 million privately financed structure, was held Thursday.

Actually, ground preparation had started a few days before the officials applied their shovels to the soil.

Peter V. Ueberroth, president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, commented, "Southern California now has the potential of being the cycling center of the United States."

Money for the velodrome comes from the Southland Corporation of Dallas, which operates the 7-Eleven stores throughout the nation.

The firm's board chairman, John P. Thompson, said while he wasn't a cyclist, he "hopes this will mean a resurgence of the sport in the United States. We haven't made very good showings."

The velodrome will be an outdoors facility with a paved course.

Emphasis was placed on the fact the LAOOC has asked private industry to finance the Games so there would be no cost to the taxpayers. The velodrome was the first facility to be started although several corporations have made commitments in other fields.

The oval will be 333.3 meters (11,093 feet) and will have 30-degree banking. There will be permanent lighting and seating for 2,000.

Ueberroth said 50 nations were expected to compete in cycling with about 550 individuals entered. The sport includes both the track racing and road road racing with individual and team events.

Airline Employees Urge Stock Purchase Approval

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Continental Airlines stockholders were to get a hearing in Superior Court here today on their class action suit aimed at blocking a plan by Continental employees to take over ownership of the airline.

The stockholder suit seeks a temporary restraining order against the employee stock ownership plan.

Meanwhile, at a rally Thursday, Continental Airlines employees threatened to demonstrate their anger at the ballot box if state officials do not approve their plan.

The 11,000 employees of the El Segundo-based airline want to purchase Continental stock to avoid a takeover by the Houston-based Texas International Airlines.

"If we lose this... we're gonna have a real good memory of who our friends are," said Paul Eckel, chairman of the Continental Airlines Employees Association.

He added that employees fear that the Houston airlines would dismiss thousands of workers if the takeover occurs.

"If TI wins control," he said, "within four months we'll be out of work."

The head of the state Corporations Commission, Geraldine Green, must approve the plan before it can go into effect. She was expected to make a decision on the matter early next week.

Salem is accused of hiring Texas Department of Public Safety undercover agent Charles V. Moore to kill Ismail Suleiman of Texas City, Texas.

Officials said Salem was apprehended by Longview Police, the Gregg County District Attorney's office and DPS officers when Moore went to Salem's residence in downtown Longview Thursday to get paid for the alleged contract.

Bullock Challenges Redistricting Bill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) —

Comptroller Bob Bullock will have no less than six different plans to offer the Legislative Redistricting Board, if the board must draw new districts for the Texas House.

That was the testimony Thursday of Bullock employee Richard Sorcee, who was subpoenaed in a lawsuit challenging the House redistricting bill passed by the Legislature.

State District Judge Harley Clark hears his fourth day of testimony today. He had planned on ruling by 1 p.m., but his timetable could be sabotaged by more testimony.

Bullock is a member of the Legislative Redistricting Board, which would draw new House districts if the courts strike down the plan approved by the Legislature.

The five-member board already must draw Senate districts because Gov. Bill Clements vetoed the Senate redistricting bill.

Bullock has been charging hard on redistricting. He set up a team last October to sift population data, challenged the House and Senate bills in requests for Attorney General opinions, and hired his former deputy, Robert Spellings, as a special consultant on redistricting.

A group of plaintiffs, including three Mexican-American legislators, is challenging the House plan.

The plaintiffs say the plan violates a state constitutional provision that says legislative district boundaries may not split counties unless necessary to equalize population. The House plan cuts 34 counties.

Sorcee said that because the redistricting board has only 60 days from the date it convenes to finish its work,

Bullock "prepared in advance."

He said the first of the six plans he wrote for Bullock split only 17 counties and had a maximum population spread of 10.2 percent between the largest and the smallest district.

But he said he had to divide 20 counties to get the 9.2 percent deviation contained in the House bill.

Sorcee, a non-lawyer, conceded under cross-examination that he could not say for sure that the bill would satisfy federal voting rights requirements. He added, however, that "I simply tried to maximize the number of minority districts in each of the counties."

"What do you mean by maximize the minority districts?" the judge asked.

"I tried to draw as many districts as I could with over 65 percent (minority) and over 70 percent in some cases," Sorcee replied.

Mayor Pro Tem William Stribling of Azle said his city should be represented by someone from Tarrant County, not its present representative, Bill Coody of Weatherford. The House bill put 11,000 people from Tarrant County, including all of Azle, in Coody's rural district.

"For me and my neighbors, it will deny us responsive representation," Stribling said.

Rep. Matt Garcia, D-San Antonio, a plaintiff, said the 18,000 Bexar County residents who were placed in a largely rural district would be "under-represented at times."

Rep. Robert Valles, D-El Paso, another plaintiff, said the House bill "damages Hispanic representation in El Paso County" and also hurts the 5,000 people from the county who were placed in the rural district.

"How can you have a state representative representing El Paso County from 200 miles away?" Valles said.

Some counties want new jails, but can't afford them. Red River County in North Texas needs a facility that could cost about $400,000. Viterna said it's out of the question for "the" local agricultural economy.

Viterna said some of the problem jails are the older ones in small counties.

"We still have jails built in the 1920s with gallows. They had a big ring in the stairwell and a trap door. The doors have been welded shut, but the rings are still there," he said.

But old is not necessarily bad. The Blanco County Jail in Johnson City is a turn-of-the-century model that is in compliance with commission standards.

Many of the larger counties are building jails. Jefferson County's 400-inmate jail is the largest one in the state that meets commission standards.

Harris County will open a 4,000-inmate jail in 1983. Dallas County is spending $42 million on its new facility. Bexar County is making renovations.

In Travis County, work is underway on the scaled-down jail approved by voters. The existing 50-year-old jail holds 273 prisoners. The new jail, scheduled to open in May 1982, will hold one less, but each will have a separate cell.

"It's going to be too small when it opens," said Sheriff Doyle Bailey. "We're going to be in bad shape over there."

Sullivan, who hates to see any jails built, is happy that Travis County is not building a bigger jail.

"We are very excited by the challenge that brings about. It will force the county to come up with alternatives. I think we're going to see a model jail here," he said.

Travis County already is looking for alternatives, and Bailey said they are needed.

"I don't think society is quite caught up with the fact that there are a lot of people who violate laws" but need something other than a county jail to help get them straightened out, he said.

State District Judge Jim Dear is in charge of a local committee looking into the county jail situation.

"The history of jails is that no matter how big you build them, you fill them up," he said. "The voters told us in no uncertain terms how big a jail they want."

The committee will report later this month on its findings. Dear said the report will make recommendations for keeping people out of jail.

Now, everybody who gets arrested goes to jail. Dear and the committee want that changed. Even though Travis County ranks high on early release of county jail inmates, Dear said it's not good enough. Up to one-third of the inmates at any time are waiting for a judge to set bond, he said, and they usually stay two or three days.

"We need a screening system to get people out faster so they don't take up bed space," he said.

The committee will recommend a central input to all jails in the county.

"Hopefully, we would get to the majority of the people before they ever go to any jail and take them to a magistrate," he said.

Israeli Jets Raid Southern Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) —

Israeli warplanes raided Palestinian guerrilla strongholds in southern Lebanon today, a Lebanese government spokesman said.

The raid came as U.S. envoy Philip C. Habib met today with Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan to talk about resolving the Syrian-Israeli confrontation over Syria's anti-aircraft missiles in eastern Lebanon.

The spokesman for the provincial governor's office in the southern city of Sidon said the jets bombed and rocketed the guerrilla-held areas of Habboush, Wadi El-Akhdar and Eitneit in several runs, beginning at 11 a.m. — 5 a.m. EDT.

There was no immediate reports of damage or casualties, said the spokesman who declined to be identified.

There was no Israeli comment on the report.

It was the first Israeli air strike reported in Lebanon since Israeli jets knocked out an Al Fatah guerrilla command post north of the port city of Tyre on June 2, killing six people and wounding 11, according to Lebanese authorities.

The targets of today's strike were between 11 and 12 miles north of the Israeli border in the area between the former market town of Nabatiyeh and the oil terminal of Zahran, according to the Lebanese spokesman.

As the air attacks got underway, he said other targets in the Nabatiyeh province came under intense artillery fire from Israeli border batteries and from Israeli-backed rightist Christian militia positions in the so-called "Free Lebanon" enclave along the frontier.

In Beirut, meanwhile, the Lebanese state radio said Wazzan asked Habib for an explanation of the U.S. position toward the latest efforts by the Arab League to defuse Lebanon's internal conflicts. The broadcast did not give Habib's response.

Habib refused to comment on the talks. He also declined to answer a reporter's question about whether he would head for Israel after his meeting with Wazzan. Habib conferred with Lebanese President Elias Sarkis on Thursday just after arriving in Beirut on his third trip to the Middle East since the missile crisis erupted in late April.

Home Secretary Says Troops Might Be Used To Stop Riots

MANCHESTER, England (AP) —

Home Secretary William Whitelaw said today army troops might have to patrol Britain's cities if the street rioting of the past seven nights gets worse.

Whitelaw, the government minister responsible for police and public order, said he opposed deploying troops or creating a special police riot squad, but that the use of soldiers could never be ruled out to deal with outbreaks of "extreme ferocity."

"It is not impossible they would be used in certain circumstances, but I hope it would never arise," Whitelaw said in Warrington, Cheshire, 20 miles from Manchester's trouble-torn streets which he was to tour later in the day.

He added that the experience in violence-torn Northern Ireland proved that sending troops in as a "last resort" created another problem: "How to get the army out."

Whitelaw said the government was "perfectly prepared" to reintroduce the Riot Act, repealed 14 years ago, to strengthen police powers to break up mobs and make arrests before violence erupts.

He said the government would certainly propose a law making parents responsible for criminal actions by their children.

Police Federation Chairman Jim Jardine, who met

Whitelaw Thursday, said he has asked for police to be supplied with body armor, armored personnel carriers, water cannons and plastic bullets to combat rioters.

Most officers now have only steel-reinforced helmets and plastic shields.

"If the police don't win, the rioters will take over the whole of the centers of Liverpool, Manchester or London. Then God help us," Jardine said.

On Thursday night, rioting spread across 11 London neighborhoods and broke out again in Manchester. But the police struck back forcefully and seemed to be getting the upper hand.

Suspects Picked-Up On Warrants of Arrest

Hereford Police yesterday

picked up two persons on warrants for arrest and investigated theft and burglary attempts.

The police picked up one suspect on a warrant for arrest issued from the Stanton Sheriff's office. The suspect was wanted in an assault case.

Also, the police picked up another individual on a local warrant for a traffic violation.

Mary Garfield, 413 McKinley, reported to police a burglary attempt at a neighbors home. She told the police that she saw some 8-10-year old kids enter a house at 405 McKinley through the rear door. Investigation revealed that nothing was stolen or disturbed in the house.

Lisa Snyder, 515 Westhaven, told police she saw her purse taken from her car at Edwards Pharmacy. The woman said a 10-13 year old boy wearing a football helmet took her purse from her car and rode off on his bicycle with it. The boy rode north until a witness yelled at him, at which time he dropped the purse and rode off. A police officer picked up the purse. Nothing was taken from the purse.

Gwen London, 306 Western, told police that someone shot a BB or pellet gun through his back glass door and shattered it.

Police also arrested David Cerda, 108 N. Miles Ave. for public intoxication.

Police received one report of a harassing phone call and a disturbance call report involving a husband and wife at Mr. Burger East.

Police issued six traffic citations and investigated two minor accidents.

failed to seek it, "I think it can be fairly said that information was covered up."

Goldwater, however, said Reagan "knew exactly what went on...In fact, I think she told him herself."

A July 7 Justice Department memorandum obtained by the groups did not mention Mrs. O'Connor's alleged vote against a call for an anti-abortion constitutional amendment in April 1974.

The memo also said Mrs. O'Connor had "no recollection" of how she voted on the abortion-on-demand bill in 1970. Goldwater said that would be understandable because most of the votes in question were voice votes and "I can't tell you how I voted 11 years ago even on the recorded votes."

However, the conservative groups said Mrs. O'Connor voted for the abortion legislation both in a state Senate committee and in the Republican majority caucus. They said they obtained that information from John Conlan, a former state senator and former Republican congressman from Arizona.

He added: "You are not arguing with conservative philosophy when you use the ERA or abortion because they can't be judged conservative or liberal."

Goldwater said the nominee should be "the best person to serve on that court whether she's a woman, black, brown, Christian, Jew...I don't like to see a very talented person who can improve the court crucified because a few people are opposed to one position she took 11 years ago."

The conservative groups held their news conference in a room arranged by Sen. Gordon J. Humphrey, R-N.H.

However, Humphrey spokesman Paul Carrier said the senator was undecided on Mrs. O'Connor and had made the arrangements without knowing what the groups intended to say.

Phillips, the Conservative Caucus chief, said the administration could easily have gotten information about Mrs. O'Connor's alleged pro-abortion positions by contacting pro-family groups in Arizona.

Phillips said if the Justice Department failed to pass on the information to Reagan or if the administration simply predicted the conservative attacks would not stand in the way of her confirmation.

Goldwater, in a Senate speech, labeled the conservative criticism "a lot of foolish claptrap (from) people who do not know what they are talking about."

In an interview Thursday night on Washington television station WQVW, Goldwater said of the Moral Majority and National Right to Life Committee: "I don't think they can call themselves conservative when they're really taking more of a fascist line than a conservative line."

There are 1,000 girls going to attend the convention, with 800 from the USA, and the rest from Foreign countries. This is the first Horizon convention since 1968 and the largest council or group present will be those from Hereford," said Ms. Dawson.

jects and it would allow construction to begin on many water projects, thus avoiding the tremendous escalation of construction costs through project delays because of lack of funding that have been experienced over the last decade. This is a unique funding plan that can help Texas avert a water crisis."

Simple Test Can Save Baby From Deformity

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A simple test that can save an infant from a lifetime of deformity and mental retardation has detected 106 cases of hypothyroidism in just over a year.

The State Health Department, following orders from the Legislature, set up the screening program, which also checks newborns for two other rare conditions, galactosemia and homocystinuria, in February 1980.

Hypothyroidism — also called cretinism — is the absence of a thyroid gland or the gland's failure to function properly. Without screening, its presence can't be detected until symptoms begin to appear about three months after birth.

It takes about $20 worth of medication a year to keep hypothyroidism under control and enable an infant to grow up normally, says Lois Brown, coordinator of the department's Newborn Screening Program.

"A child with untreated congenital hypothyroidism soon shows signs of cretinism — stunted growth and mental deficiency. With treatment, a baby can develop into a productive member of society. Without it, the future prospects are dismal at best," Mrs. Brown said.

The department said hypothyroidism occurs in one in 4,000 births, galactosemia in one in 88,000 births, and homocystinuria in one in 264,000 births.

Since the screening program began, six cases of galactosemia and one case of homocystinuria have been detected.

The health department has conducted a screening program for another cause of retardation, phenylketonuria (PKU) since 1966, detecting 217 cases, all treatable with a special diet.

Hypothyroidism is the biggest cause of retardation found by the screening program.

Screening is done with a simple blood test. Blood is taken from an infant's heel on a special filter paper that is sent either to the department or to a private laboratory certified by the department. The department's laboratory here processes about 40,000 blood samples a month.

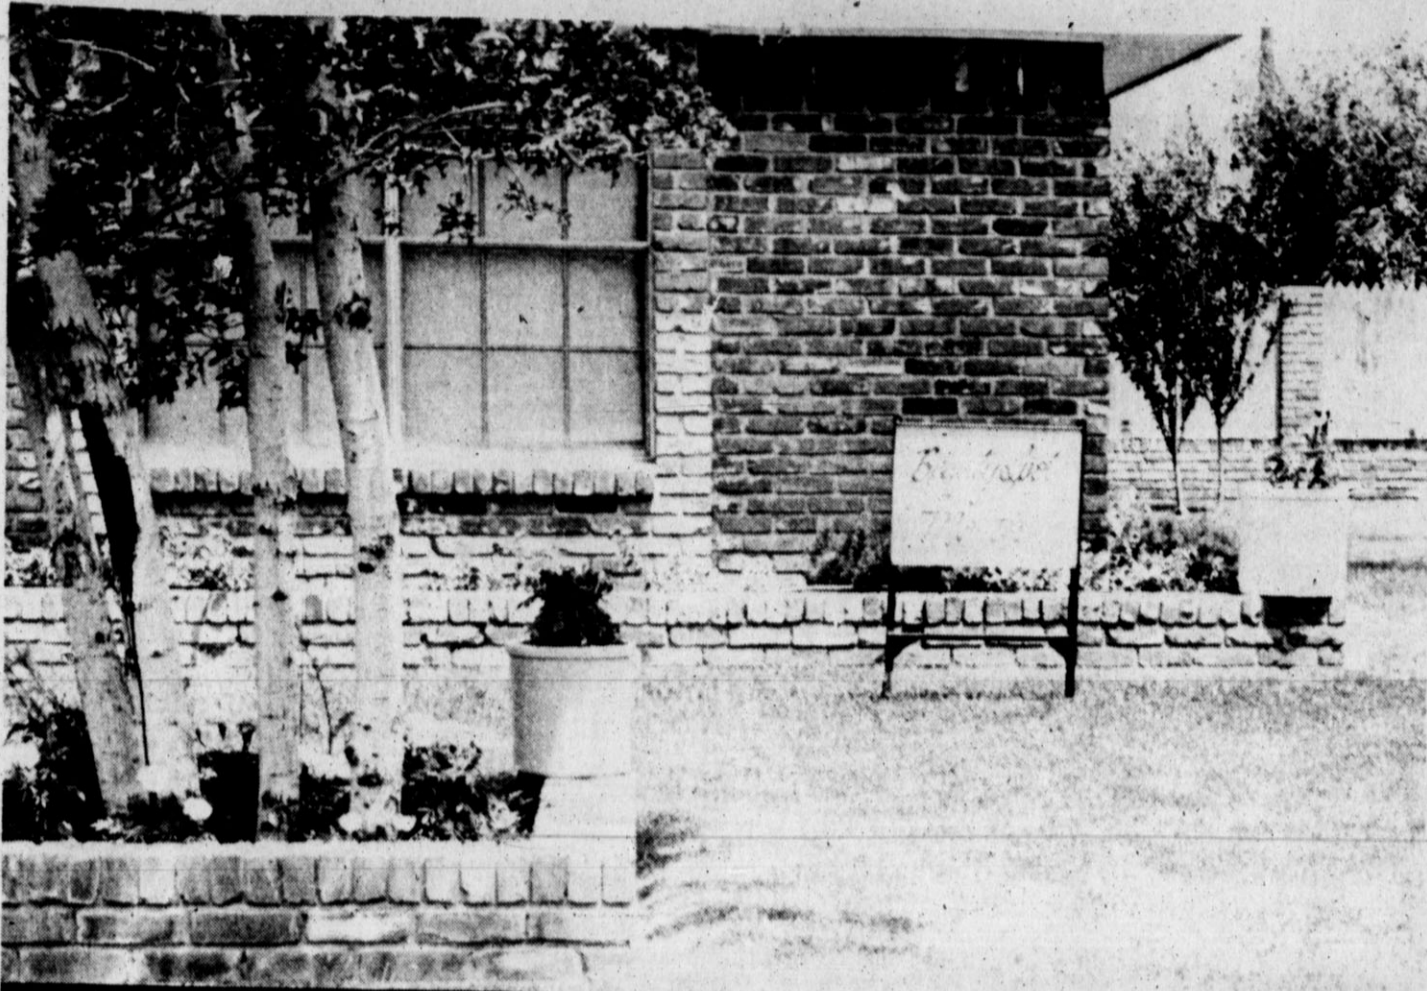

If any of the conditions are found, the baby's physician is contacted by telephone or mail for follow-up tests.

Once a condition is confirmed by further evaluation, treatment starts.

"Birth of a baby with hypothyroidism is an unsettling experience for the parents," says Dr. Allan Frank of Austin, who has two babies with the condition under his care. "... We reassure them that it is a treatable problem — some problems are not."

In some cases, however, parents are frightened and reluctant to get treatment for their children.

"Often, we find it necessary for the nurses to visit with mothers and convince them to take babies in for treatment so the babies will be normal. It is sometimes necessary to convince them that there is no stigma to having a baby with hypothyroidism, that it is just an imbalance which can be corrected with treatment," Mrs. Brown said.

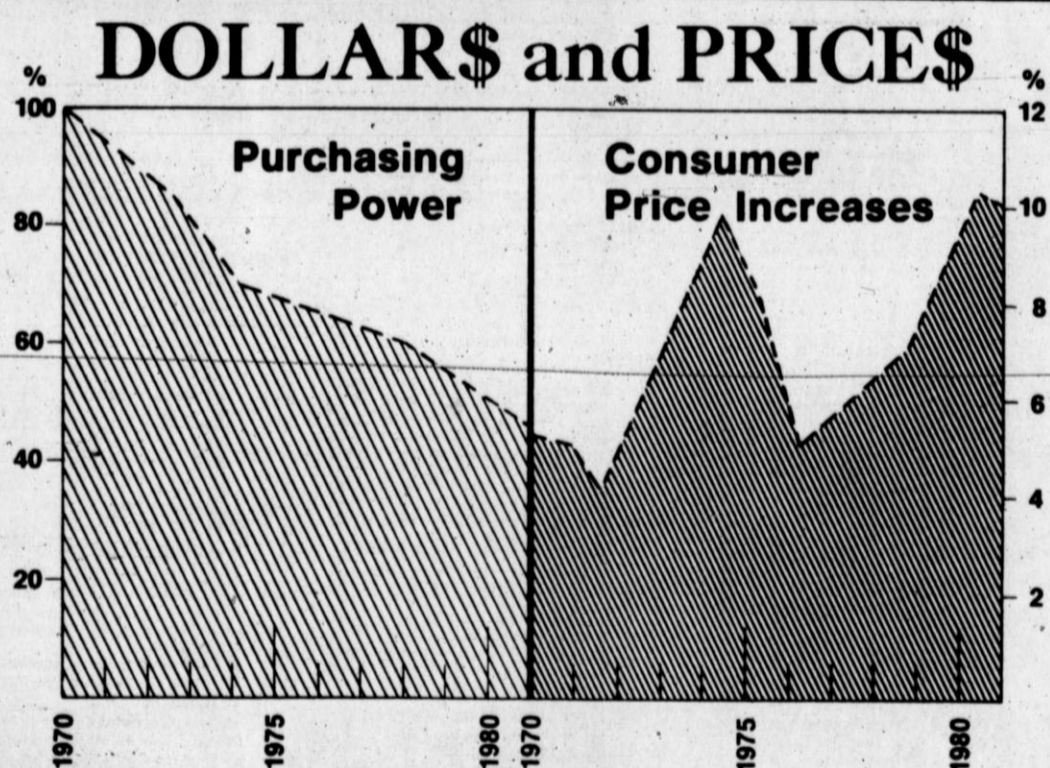

Beauty Spot of the Month

July Beauty Spots

The Chamber of Commerce Women's Division Beautification committee recently selected and announced its beauty spots for the month of July. Every month the committee after touring Hereford, selects a spot to represent the residential area and non-residential area.

Chosen as this month's residential beauty spot was the home of John David Bryant (top photo), 112 Kingwood. Non-residential beauty spot for July is KPAN Radio Station Studio, 218 E. 5th.

Two views of the dollar's decline in value are charted above. Its purchasing power, left, has been dropping steadily to less than half what it was a decade ago. The reason is inflation, measured at right by year-to-year increases in consumer prices. (Source: The Conference Board)

Ann Landers Friendly Handshakers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When I am introduced to a new person, I extend my hand. Most people reciprocate, but too many appear uncomfortable. Either they will not put out their hand, or when they do you get a dead fish. This goes for men as well as women, although women are the worst offenders.

Don't you agree that shaking hands is an appropriate way to say hello to new acquaintances? How does one handle the dead fish, or the no-shakers who just stand there?—Pleased To Meet You

DEAR PLEASED: Shaking hands on first meetings is a gracious gesture. Men do this, as a matter of custom, but only women who are poised and sure of themselves do. When you get a dead fish it tells you that person hasn't been around enough to know the value of a firm handshake. The person who would ignore an extended hand—is a hopeless clod, and I wouldn't give him or her a second thought.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I, like many young women, had a child out of wedlock. I had only dated the young man twice and blamed myself more than him for what happened. So, I decided to accept full responsibility for my daughter's support. He must realize now that I could have taken him to court for child support, blood tests, etc. He wasn't married, so I could see no reason why he would deny his own daughter.

She is my joy. He is missing out on a lot, but the problem is she is, too. What do you tell a child about not having a father? Do you feel that I should take all the blame?—Smoldering In Hegewisch

DEAR SMOLDERING: You tell the child her father was not able to marry you for reasons you never understood—that he was a good man and you are sure he would love her if he knew her because she is truly lovable.

No point in planting seeds of hate. You would gain nothing, and it could create unnecessary problems for the child. So pour a little oil on the troubled waters. You'll be glad you did. P.S. Remember that old saying—"Never spit in a well. You might have to drink from it."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This note is in regards to home, ask if you can go along and watch. Maybe you'll enjoy it. Just because I didn't doesn't mean you won't—or go to a movie or visit friends or family. Have you considered volunteer work?

Right now you are newlyweds. I know you don't want to be way from him very long, but what is a few hours a week alone compared to the rest of your lives together. Do you trust him? Then prove it!—Bowling Widow And Trusting Wife

DEAR WIFE: Couldn't have done better myself. Thanks for wearing my hat today.

Aloe Vera Products Not Safe

Products made with aloe vera, a cactus-like plant, are flooding the market these days. Some of the products are being promoted with outlandish and unproven claims that they will cure a variety of serious ills, including cancer, arthritis, diabetes, anemia, tuberculosis, and even blindness. Claims are also made that aloe vera based products can be used as a complete diet in weight reduction. But there is no scientific evidence that aloe vera in any form can cure or alleviate serious illness, according to the Food and Drug Administration. Nor does aloe vera have any nutritive value. Some promoters state that FDA has approved their products, but the only use for which aloe vera has been specifically approved is as a natural flavoring in food. Promoters have been careful, however, not to make medical claims on the labels of their products. If they did, they would be subject to misbranding charges and their products could be taken off the market. But the promoters often use testimonials in their literature and advertising. FDA warns consumers to be wary of any health-care product that is touted on the basis of testimonials rather than scientific evidence. Consumers should also ignore suggestions that aloe vera is rare or mysterious, as many of the sales pitches claim. The plant, one of several hundred species of the lily family, grows wild in many parts of the country, particularly in the southwest. It is also a common houseplant. The Food and Drug Administration is reviewing the safety and effectiveness of aloe vera used on over-the-counter (nonprescription) drugs. A substance obtained from certain species of the plant is used as an ingredient in some laxatives. A panel of experts that evaluated laxative products for FDA has said that aloe is an acceptable ingredient but should be used sparingly. However, some medical authorities, including the American Medical Association, believe that aloe should not be used as a laxative because of its unpredictable and sometimes violent actions.

Two other FDA advisory panels have found that there is not enough scientific evidence to show that aloe vera is useful for the treatment of minor burns, cuts and abrasions or for minor vaginal irritations. Both panels have recommended that further tests be made. FDA officials are studying the recommendations of these panels. In the meantime, drug products and cosmetics that contain aloe vera can continue to be sold. Ingredients in cosmetics do not have to be proved safe before the product goes on the market. Another reason to suspect the aloe vera products is the sales organizations themselves. These include pyramid type promotions and other alleged get-rich-quick schemes rather than straightforward methods that rely on the integrity of the product. For more information about aloe vera, contact your nearest Food and Drug Administration Consumer Affairs Officer at 500 S. Ervay, Suite 470-B, Dallas, Texas 75201.

'Cornerstone' to Perform At Avenue Baptist Church

"Cornerstone," along with the pastor and members of Avenue Baptist Church invite the public to attend the morning or evening services on Sunday, July 12 to hear the gospel singing group in concert.

The group is made up of five musicians and four singers and is led by Gene Duvall whose 12 year old daughter, Cara, plays the piano. Their music is classified as "middle-of-the-road contemporary", but is, most importantly, "music which testifies of Jesus Christ and the plan and purpose He has for our lives," said Rev. Buster Gigg, pastor. "Cornerstone" will perform the morning service at 11 and give a full concert in the evening service at 7.

Concert Scheduled

"Cornerstone," a Gospel singing group, will perform in concert Sunday, July 12 at Avenue Baptist Church according to Rev. Buster Gigg, pastor. The group, under the direction of Gene Duvall, has performed in the Hereford area previously. Their live music ranges from Country Gospel to Contemporary Gospel.

Shock Treatment Teaches God's Ways

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — The minister places the child on a small stool. As the Bible school class watches, he counts down from 10 and pushes a button, sending piercing shocks from a 6-volt battery into the child's buttocks.

The Rev. Dwight Wymer says he has been pushing the button for six years now as his way of teaching children how to "hear the word of God," and says the practice "is not dangerous."

"I've done nothing wrong — I'm teaching God's word," he said.

But Dr. Richard Potter, director of the city health department, said he thought the shocks did the children no good, physically or mentally.

"It seems to me like it would have the opposite effect and cause the child to reject the teachings because of the association with pain," Potter said.

Three children received shocks Monday night at the opening session of the one-week summer Bible school at Wymer's Immanuel Baptist Church. At Thursday night's class, some parents said they were uncomfortable with what was going on, but were not pulling their children out of the class. "Sometimes God talks to you and calls you and we just don't listen," Wymer told the children that first night. "But sometimes he can shock you into hearing his word, and this just makes that demonstration clear."

Brian TenHopen, 8, said the shock he received "hurt me until I went home and got in the tub. But it was fun, everybody was laughing, and I wanted to do it."

Seven-year-old Pat Popma said he volunteered for the shock but "wouldn't do it again. It hurts. I was going to cry, but all my friends were watching me."

Kent County authorities could not be reached on whether Wymer could be prosecuted, and the city attorney said he would not address the issue unless a complaint were brought against the minister. Wymer said he has received no complaints from parents.

The 36-year-old pastor has headed the church for two years and said he opened last year's Bible school by giving shocks to children.

He said he decided to build the stool after reading a magazine that provides suggestions to ministers who lead Bible classes. He said he has used it off and on for six years on children, mainly at parties.

The Rev. Bruce Bode of the non-denominational Fountain Street Church here said he was appalled. "I tried to imagine what religious beliefs are being communicated to these children," Bode said.

"Here again, it seems to me, that we have another example of the repudiation of reason by religion."

Yvonne Binder, a teacher in the school, said attendance has increased since Monday. She said news reports "took one little incident and ignored the prayers and the lessons that went along with it."

Oil Wells Bring Prosperity, Problems

PAWHUSKA, Okla. (AP) — To unfamiliar ears, the words rustle like summer leaves as Ed Red Eagle offers up quiet thanks to a supreme being his people know as "Waconda."

But amid the rhythmic sounds of the prayer is heard a recurring phrase, modern words for which there is no Osage equivalent — "oil, people."

The oil people, probing beneath the lake-laced hills of the Osage Nation homeland, have brought prosperity and some problems to the tribe that once dominated parts of Kansas, Missouri, Arkansas and Oklahoma.

The Osages own the mineral rights beneath the 1.5 million acres of Osage County, which stretches from Tulsa to the Kansas border. The Osages bought the land from the Cherokees in 1883 after they were forced out of southern Kansas.

Their expulsion has proved to be a blessing in disguise.

For the last five years, Osage County has ranked among the nation's top three counties in oil well completions. Almost 3,000 wells have been drilled since 1976; an estimated 10,000 are in production. Average daily crude oil output is 30,000 barrels.

The prayer of Assistant Chief Red Eagle sanctified an Osage Tribal Council meeting called to accept $4 million in bids from a June 17 tribal oil and gas lease auction. About 300 oilmen had crowded into the Osage museum and, beneath the painted gazes of tribal royalty from generations past, bid up to $140,000 for a 160-acre tract.

A similar auction in February brought in a modern record bid of $6.8 million. Another auction is scheduled in October.

The mineral income from bids and royalties, each holder of an Osage "headright" more than $35,000, has "been a curse to the Osages," said Chief Sylvester Tinker, 78.

"When you have plenty of money, you get idle and fat," Tinker said. "The sweat of your brow, you know, is what makes the world go. When people get more than that, they just sit and look and think."

"Wherever you have money, you have jealousy...Money is an evil thing," said Tinker, chief for 12 years.

But Ralph Adkisson, a Tulsa attorney and one of the eight members of the council, said: "The Osage people don't mind carrying this burden. Some people go ahead and fulfill active lives and work and are educated in spite of having an income like this."

The first well was drilled on Osage land in 1897, but the first highly publicized bonanzas to the Osages came in the 1920s. Adkisson said tribe members were preyed upon by the unscrupulous, and non-Osages married into the tribe only to gain shares of the oil and gas income.

Osages may not sell or give away their headrights, allotted according to a tribal roll completed in 1906. The Osages are unique in this individual disbursement of tribal income. Other tribes have long since sold mineral rights along with surface land. Still others use tribal income to develop industrial parks or build clinics.

There are about 10,000 Osages, but the 2,229 headrights are held by 2,210 people who were either on the 1906 list or had ancestors by blood or marriage named on the list. Some own fractions of headrights, while others have inherited more than one.

About 500 people who are non-Osage own about 300 headrights through marriage or inheritance. A 1978 law mandates that headrights must revert to Osage relatives upon the death of non-Osage owners.

About 200 original headright owners are living, including Tinker, who was 3 years old when the list was drawn up.

"We're about like the Mohegans," Tinker said of the original owners. "The youngest one is 74 and the oldest one is 92. We're all standing in line waiting for the undertaker."

Each quarter of the year, the mineral rights income is divided into 2,229 parcels and paid out. Money comes from the lease auctions and from a percentage of the income from producing wells. The percentage negotiated by the council ranges from about 16 percent up to 30 percent.

"When an oil company drills in the Osage he doesn't have any bookkeeping," Tinker said. "There's just one royalty owner and that's us. This is the cheapest place in my opinion for an oilman to drill."

Being on the Osage roll was worth about $8,000 a year in 1920. In 1979, a headright brought its owner about $20,000. This year, payments to owners of headrights have already totalled $18,000 for the first two quarters and are expected to exceed $35,000.

Some of the money finds its way into the economy of this community of 5,500 via new auto purchases and other expenditures, Adkisson said. But he said the Osages don't spend their money any differently from anyone else with similar income.

"Everyone likes to drive a nice car," he said.

Colson Operates 'Fellowship' As Prison Convict

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Charles "Chuck" Colson, whose fall from power to prison turned him into a Christian ally of convicts, has developed one of the fastest growing, most dynamic movements of modern times to reform prisoners — and prisons. "It's working," he says. "One thing was the vision, but another is to see it take place. It's happening." His "Prison Fellowship" operation has more than doubled in the last two years in scope and personnel, now involving 102 employees, an annual budget of $3.2 million and 6,000 church volunteers working in 126 of the nation's 600 state and federal prisons. "What's thrilling to me is to find all these people actively involved," he said in an interview. "Wherever I go, the momentum has really set in.

For the first time in history, we have a nationwide volunteer movement working in prisons." When Colson started the project in 1976, himself shaken by seven months in prison and gripped by a new faith in Christ to help those behind bars, he had trouble getting in to work in some prisons. But as once dubious officials saw results and commended them, the gates were thrown open to him and his co-workers on a wide basis. Colson, 49, ex-White House strategist who served prison time for his Watergate involvement under former President Nixon, said, "Once you've been in prison, you're never the same. It changes your life." He spends much time on the road, meeting with governors, testifying in state legislative hearings, speaking to civic and church groups as well as visiting prisoner — about 500 visits so far in 200 prisons, some repeatedly, getting to know hundreds of prisoners. Colson, a Boston-born former U.S. Marine and lawyer whose advocacy for faith retains his crisp, gritty style but with clearly wholehearted dedication, emphasizes that his prison movement is anchored in the teachings of Christ. "We don't go into prisons just to preach," he said, although forming Bible study and prayer groups is part of the process. "The answer is in a person going to an imprisoned criminal and establishing a one-to-one concern, one guy caring for another, Christians caring for other human beings in need."

Anti-Abortion Bill Faces Subcommittee Vote

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of legislation to define life as beginning at conception say they have enough votes to clear the first congressional hurdle in reversing the 1973 Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion. After several weeks of hearings, the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on separation of powers scheduled a vote today on the measure, which opponents say would make abortion tantamount to murder.

had enough votes without him to send the measure to the full Judiciary Committee.

Such organizations as the National Organization for Women and the National Abortion Rights League say some kinds of birth control could be outlawed.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said he had "serious constitutional questions" about the legislation but would vote for it to ensure a hearing before the full Judiciary Committee.

Besides such activity, now carried on in 28 of the 33 major federal prisons and 98 of the 567 state prisons, Colson's group also takes convicts out of prison for two-week training periods.

Airline Surviving Longer Than Planned

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Commuter airlines go in and out of business, listen to pleas from small-town mayors, and take federal "bribes" to fly into towns where few people climb into planes. "Fifteen years ago I'd have said we'll wake up tomorrow and they'll be gone," said Harry Rodgers of the Texas Aeronautics Commission.

version." Soltys said Metro "lost a lot of money" in the first 18 months — before deregulation — that it served Paris. After deregulation, Metro said it would pull out of Paris unless it got a federal subsidy. Out of the 72 seats available daily on Metro flights to Paris, only 12 to 15 are usually filled, Soltys said. Metro, Eagle, Rio and some of the other successful Texas commuter lines have managed to overcome "small-plane syndrome," according to Rodgers. "Some people won't fly on small planes. My mother, your mother, lots of people's mothers," he said.

Of the five subcommittee members, only Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., the senior Democrat on the panel, indicated he would oppose the measure. Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., a former judge, was known to be wavering, but opponents of legalized abortion said they

In the eight years since the Supreme Court affirmed a woman's right to an abortion during the first three months of pregnancy, there have been several successful attempts in Congress to limit federal spending for abortion. But no previous legislation to prohibit abortions has survived any congressional committee.

Similarly, they argue that a pregnant woman who has an automobile accident, or smokes or drinks and loses her unborn children could be subject to legal action. The proposal declares that "actual human life exists from conception" and declares that the 14th Amendment "was intended to protect all human beings." The bill, sponsored by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and pushed by East in the subcommittee, also would eliminate lower federal court jurisdiction in abortion cases.

A constitutional amendment would require a two-thirds vote in both houses of Congress and ratification by 38 states, while the Helms bill would need only a majority vote in both houses. The Judiciary Committee chairman, Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., has said he supports anti-abortion legislation only if it protects the life of the mother and permits abortions for rape or incest.

About 600 so far have spent such periods at his organization's headquarters in Great Falls, Va., near Washington, D.C., where about 70 staff members work. About 200 others serve across the country. Several are ex-convicts themselves. "A lot of guys out of prison are now working in the ministry," Colson said. "It's no more pushing dope, but holding jobs, running half-way houses, teaching Christ. "That's the payoff."

Cable Television: Everything And More

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cable television is more than fun and games, banking and business. It's burglar alarms and mug shots. It's news and advertising. It's restaurant menus and movie reviews.

Technological advances have made it possible to build cable systems with more than 100 channels capable of offering plenty of movies and entertainment, sports and news — and still have many channels left.

And it's more. Sermons and morality plays. Classes for doctors and lawyers — even schoolchildren. Research information. Home energy management. And, perhaps, one day medical screening. "We all have lot of habits that are going to be very dated habits in a couple of decades, all because of what is happening now in the world of communications," said Charles D. Ferris, former chairman of the Federal Communications Commission.

As the audience grows, experts say, non-entertainment programming for special interests will replace mass entertainment. "We already have the video magazine equivalent of Sports Illustrated, Time and Newsweek, and Ebony and Jet," said Thomas Wheeler, executive director of the National Cable Television Association.

"The very fact that we like to feel a newspaper to get our information; that we like to go to the bank to cash our check; that we like to get in our car and drive down to the center city to conduct our business — those are just some of the habits that are going to become dated."

Consider: The Columbus (Ohio) Dispatch, The Associated Press and 10 other newspapers are making their news stories available to the roughly 10,000 home computer subscribers of CompuServe, a subsidiary of H&R Block Inc.

Publishers, for one, don't think their product will disappear. "Newspapers are going to be strong and healthy for as far as the eye can see," James K. Batten, vice president for Miami-based Knight-Ridder Newspapers Inc., recently told an American Newspaper Publishers Association seminar on new technology recently.

American Telephone & Telegraph this summer wants to test a home electronic information service in Austin, Texas, revolving around Yellow Pages advertising. Newspaper publishers oppose the service. Cable operators in several cities now offer home security systems, which monitor for burglars and fire and report problems to a central computer and police or fire officials.

THE HEREFORD BRAND

364-2030

The tomorrows have passed and Rodgers, TAC director for air carrier administration, admits he was wrong about commuter airlines. The small carriers have weathered questions about safety and high fares. In 1980, about six million passengers boarded commuter flights in Texas. Ten airlines now hold TAC certificates to serve Texas points. Only Texas and Alaska issue such certificates. Southwest Airlines still carries a TAC permit, although it has outgrown commuter status. In all, 36 lines received TAC approval, but many gave up. The brassy public relations that preceded the airlines in-to small cities often faded in-to silence when there were not enough passengers to support the flights. Several Texas cities have had many commuter lines quit on them. Del Rio, Lufkin and Big Spring, said Rodgers, have had many airlines come and go. Big Spring may be the champion loser, having seen six airlines fly away. "I gave them my 'Put your money where your mouth is' speech," Rodgers said. That's when he tells local officials to guarantee the airline at least a small profit. "They think it's fine in theory, but at this time no one has put his money where his mouth is," he said. The people of Paris, Texas, have the system beat. The federal government puts its money where Paris' mouth is to keep air service in the Northeast Texas town. Metro Airlines is paid about $333,000 a year to guarantee a profit in its two flights a day into Paris, the only Texas city still getting federally subsidized air service. It's "money down the rathole...so the people in Paris can say they have air service," Rodgers said. Bob Soltys of Metro said the airline also gets federal money to fly to McAlester and Stillwater, Okla. The Clear Lake City-based airline took over the Paris route when Frontier, which got a federal subsidy, pulled out in 1977, smaller cities have had federal financial help in attracting airlines since 1947, according to Rodgers. The original program ended with the deregulation of 1978. "To cover their rear ends, congressmen established another subsidy program," said Rodgers. "It's another bribery...a different

13-Year-Old Babe Ruth All Stars Headed For Tournament

LEFORS - Back-to-back homers in the first inning, brilliant defense, and a steady pitching performance paved the way for the Hereford 13-year-old Babe Ruth All Stars to the state tournament here Thursday night as the local stars swamped the Randall County All Stars 13-0 to win the area tournament.

Bobby Martinez and Doug Watts slapped consecutive four-baggers in a five-run burst by Hereford in the bottom of the first frame, and hurler Jerry Brown took things well in hand to shut down the visitors through the run-rule-shortened game, which lasted only 4 1/2 innings.

Martinez, who went three-for-three in game, later just missed his second homer of the contest when a drive hit the top of the fence and bounced back into the playing field. Watts backed up Martinez' performance with a two-for-two stint at the plate as well.

Hereford will now advance to the State Tournament to be held at Brownfield, July 19-25. The state winner will advance to the Regional Tournament to be held a short time later in Pampa.

Brown and battery mate Watts baffled the obviously tired Randall County stars throughout the game, limiting them to four hits.

The Hereford stars were perfect in the field as well, handling all their chances without an error, while the losers committed a pair of miscues.

After the five-run first, the winners added three runs in the second, a solo tally in the third, and put icing on the cake with four more runs in the fourth.

Hereford defeated Hi Plains 7-6 in the tourney's first round Monday, then clipped Randall County by a 13-10 count in the tourney semifinals Tuesday. Randall County won a losers' bracket contest Wednesday to gain the chance to meet the eventual tournament winners again in the finals.

Baseball Strike Starts 5th Week Today

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The contents of mysterious envelopes delivered to representatives of club owners and players could hold the key to settlement of the baseball strike that entered its fifth week today.

Hours before the start of a meeting of all 26 club owners in New York Thursday night, federal mediator Ken Moffett delivered large envelopes to the adversaries' chief negotiators, the player union's Marvin Miller and management's Ray Grebey. Moffett also arranged for the negotiators' first bargaining session in six days for today at 2 p.m.

The New York Times said the envelopes contained a proposal designed to lead to an end of the strike.

"He didn't come all the way from Washington just to arrange a meeting (for today) and those envelopes did not contain engraved invitations to the meeting," the Times quoted an unnamed source as saying.

"I'm going to be very disappointed if nothing good happens" in upcoming sessions, Moffett said after returning home to Washington, D.C.

Both sides in the strike have claimed a united front after meeting among themselves this week. Player representatives had met in New York on Tuesday.

Ed Fitzgerald of the Milwaukee Brewers, chairman of management's Player Relations Committee, said after Thursday night's meeting that the owners had engaged in "a full discussion" and said recent reports of splits among them are untrue.

"There are no dissidents," Fitzgerald said. "The communications throughout have been excellent. The discussions proved we are all aware of how everyone else felt. We will continue the process we have been working on since we started seeking a solution."

"If there is dissension among the owners, it was not visible at the meeting today," said American League President Lee McPhail.

Eddie Chiles, owner of the Texas Rangers and reported to be one of the dissident owners, emerged from the meeting with handkerchief around his head as he met reporters.

"I'm bloodied but unbowed," he said.

He quickly added that he was joking.

"There was a lot of constructive conversation," he said. "It was not a meeting where specific proposals were presented, but a general discussion of the whole situation, where we've been."

where we're going and how we'll get there.

"There was quite a spirit of unanimity by all the owners." Meanwhile, hearings before a National Labor Relations Board administrative law judge were expected to conclude today.

Joe Burke, general manager of the Kansas City Royals, testified that management does not have complete control over baseball's salary structure.

Burke pointed to salary arbitration, where an independent third party chooses between wage proposals from the player and the club, and also noted more indirect influences.

"If you stop signing the players that make up the nucleus of your club, you come under tremendous pressure from your fans and the press," Burke said.

Burke was among five witnesses called during the fourth day of testimony before Judge Melvin Welles involving the Major League Players Association's charge of unfair bargaining by the owners.

The union, on strike since June 12, wants Welles to order the owners to open the clubs' financial records.

Miller, the players association's executive director, testified as a rebuttal witness that, without the financial records, the players "are still bargaining in the dark without very basic information."

The strike "is over a demand that the players give up something that they have," Miller said in reference to free agent movement without compensation.

"It is a demand which, in my mind, the players might give more consideration to if they saw that the clubs' financial situation was precarious," Miller said.

After the owners' first collective meeting since the strike started June 12, Fitzgerald said it was "merely an exchange of views. We're always interested to receive those views. As far as bargaining, we do that at the table. Views were exchanged and PRC was asked to continue what it has been doing — find a solution by bargaining."

Grebey, director of the PRC, called the discussions "the most positive meeting of PRC shareholders I've ever attended. We had a good dialogue and conversation and none of it will be wasted. It was a constructive meeting."

The session was held under tight security at the offices of Louis Hoynes, National League attorney and a member of the PRC bargaining committee. Each club was represented and the importance of the meeting was emphasized by the fact that John Fetzer, owner of the Detroit Tigers, attended.

Fetzer rarely appears at major league meetings, preferring to leave those matters to Jim Campbell, president of the Tigers.

In strike-related developments, AL umpire Mike Reilly said he had received his entire paycheck for the month of July although the umpires were contractually entitled to be paid only through July 12. Reilly responded that the league "probably wants to stay on the good side of us."

Major Leagues Take Vacation; Gold Sox Still On The Move

While the major leaguers are out enjoying a vacation from diamond warfare, the nation's minor leagues are providing all the action as far as baseball goes, and the Amarillo Gold Sox are no exception.

Hereford baseball enthusiasts will get a chance to catch the fever Wednesday, July 15 when the Gold Sox host "Hereford Night" at Sox Stadium in Amarillo. The Gold Sox will be entertaining the Arkansas Travelers, and general admission tickets to the game are available free to Hereford residents at several area locations, including the Hereford Brand, The Sports Stop, and the banks.

The Texas League game will start at 7:30 p.m. and the gates to Potter County Memorial Stadium will open at 6:30 p.m. The Stadium is located on the Tri-State Fairgrounds at Grand and East 3rd St.

The series will be the only time that the Travelers, a St.

Louis Cardinals affiliate, will play the Gold Sox, a San Diego Padres affiliate, in Amarillo this season.

The Texas League and the Gold Sox offer an exciting brand of baseball where fans can see future major-league stars today. All Hereford residents are invited to join the fun of Gold Sox baseball on Hereford Night, Wednesday, July 15.

For further information call the Gold Sox office at 372-3436.

'Heat Will Be A Factor In Davis Cup Tournament' Says McEnroe

By BOB GREENE AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The weather was expected to play a major role in the quarterfinal round of the Davis Cup tennis match between defending champion Czechoslovakia and the United States, which started today.

The National Weather Service predicted sunny weather with temperatures in the 90s and high humidity.

"It was in the 60's in England," newly crowned Wimbledon champion John McEnroe said Thursday. "You can be in shape to play in England, but the heat and humidity here will definitely be a factor."

Czechoslovakia, the defending Davis Cup champion, announced it planned to use only two players throughout the three-day match — Ivan Lendl, the world's fourth-ranked player, and Tomas Smid. The United States will retaliate with McEnroe, ranked No. 1 in the world, and third-ranked Jimmy Connors in the singles, while Stan Smith and Bob Lutz will play the doubles.

McEnroe and (Peter) Fleming are the best doubles team in the world," Ashe said in explaining why he picked Smith and Lutz, "but I don't want to have McEnroe playing all three days. I want him fresh for Sunday."

Under the Davis Cup format, there were to be two singles matches today, the doubles on Saturday and two singles on Sunday. Today's matches sent McEnroe against Lendl and Connors against Smid. The two Americans will change opponents on Sunday, while the McEnroe-Smith match leading off the final day of the best-of-five format.

ESPN, the all-sports cable network, will televise all of the matches in their entirety. Each day's matches begin at 1 p.m. EDT.

McEnroe said the draw was unfavorable, but noted it was made before Czechoslovakia defeated Argentina and then went on to beat Italy in the 1980 Davis Cup finals.

McEnroe, who with Fleming won the Wimbledon doubles title, defeating Smith and Lutz, refused to say whether he would have preferred to play the doubles along with singles.

The surface at the National Tennis Center at Flushing Meadow is just the opposite — a fast, hard surface. With the sun beating down, temperatures on the court were expected to rise about 100 degrees.

Czechoslovakia advanced to the quarterfinals with a 3-2 victory over Switzerland. The U.S. defeated Mexico 3-2 in the opening round.

In other quarterfinals this weekend, Sweden meets Australia, New Zealand takes on Great Britain and Argentina plays Romania.

If the United States defeats Czechoslovakia, it will advance to the semifinals against the Sweden-Australia winner at Portland, Ore., Oct. 24.

McEnroe had no comment Thursday when he was told that the Wimbledon Championship Committee had announced that he would not be invited to become a member of the exclusive All England Lawn and Tennis Club. All previous singles champions have automatically been accorded honorary membership.

The club, in a statement, said its decision was made "because his on court behavior brought the game into disrepute."

McEnroe was embroiled in controversy throughout the two-week tournament.

Moses Fails To Arrive; Lee Takes His Place

By MARC ROSENWASSER
Associated Press Writer

LENINGRAD (AP) — American star hurdler Edwin Moses failed to arrive in Leningrad only hours before the start of the U.S.-Soviet track meet, and a team manager said another American has been substituted for tonight's 400-meter hurdle race.

Moses' absence reduced to 11 the number of U.S. national champions who will take part in the two-day meet at Lenin Stadium, the first between the two track squads in three years and the first major U.S.-Soviet athletic competition since the American-led boycott of the 1980 Moscow Olympics.

Assistant team manager Fred Newhouse said Moses had been expected to fly in from Western Europe by this morning at the latest, but the 25-year-old hurdler from Laguna Hills, Calif., had not appeared by midday and was no longer expected to start.

Newhouse said Moses would be replaced in his event by David Lee of University City, Mo., who finished third in last month's U.S. national championship meet in Sacramento, Calif.

Moses, undefeated in nearly four years, was regarded as close to a sure winner for the U.S. team. His last defeat was in August 1977, and he has won more than 60 consecutive races since then.

Among the 30 American champions, others who passed up the U.S.-Soviet meet included teen-age sensation Carl Lewis, the U.S. titlist in the 100 meters and long jump, and Evelyn Ashford, U.S. women's champion in 100 and 200 meters.

Howlett and J. Michael Kenyon chose the lineups on the basis of All-Star balloting to date and season performance.

The only change is that Cincinnati catcher Johnny Bench was scratched as a starter because he's on the disabled list and replaced by Montreal's Gary Carter.

Howlett and Kenyon will manage the teams. Based on their decisions and lineups, the computer will spit out quick pitch-by-pitch accounts of what would be most likely to happen in the actual game.

When he's not programming

UW computers to track the effects of microwave radiation, Neuhaus might be found with a cluster of pals, drinking beer, munching pretzels and playing computerized baseball at his home terminal.

Neuhaus is commissioner of the Northwest Computer Baseball Association, which has eight teams that exist only in the integrated circuits and diodes of the computer.

"When I was about 13 we lived near Philadelphia and I got interested in the Phillies, who were busy losing 22 games or something. I liked the way they hung on," said Neuhaus.

"Like the statistical aspect of baseball a lot, too," he added.

There will be no rainout or walkout in his make-believe game. It will be played and taped Monday under strictest secrecy for airing a day later.

But even computers balk. Neuhaus' KVI terminal went on the blink briefly Thursday, prompting him to shrug, smile and brand it, computeristically, "cyber-strike."

YOU LIVE YOUR FAITH WHEN YOU SHARE WITH OTHERS

There is no greater expression of faith than the translation of it into good deeds: the sharing of our blessings with those less fortunate than ourselves. However, the concept of sharing goes far beyond the mere distribution of our material wealth to the poor; it also includes the gift of your time, patience, understanding and friendship. Visit the old and the sick; talk to them, read to them, run errands for them, give a ride to someone who is in need of it. Remember that the finest gift of all is that of yourself, given quietly and without fanfare; and you will be the better for it. Learn more about the true spirit of giving by attending your Church.

"He that hath pity upon the poor lendeth unto the Lord; and that which he hath given will he pay him again."

— Proverbs 19:17

Those who bring sunshine to the lives of others cannot keep it from themselves.

— Sir James Matthew Barrie
