

Gasohol Bill Might Lead to Plant Here

By JULIE SMILEY

Gasohol legislation could mean a five-cent-per-gallon exemption at the pumps, and may also prompt new industry in Deaf Smith County.

After efforts in the Texas Senate to filibuster, House Bill 24 was killed just hours before the end of the regular legislative session, however, it has not been buried yet.

The measure would exempt gasohol in Texas from the five-cent-per-gallon gasoline tax until 1987. The exemption would make gasohol competitive with gasoline and give incentive for the fuel alcohol industry in Texas to get started, according to proponents of the legislation.

According to Key Crawford, American Agriculture Movement, the gasohol bill cleared committee Monday afternoon. Legislators are now waiting for Gov. Clements to call for the bill and then it will be introduced.

New Mexico, Oklahoma and Louisiana have some type of legislation which encourages fuel alcohol production, however, Texas does not.

Three Hereford-area agribusinessmen purchased Big Tex Grain, two miles west of Summerfield, a year ago with plans to build fuel alcohol distilling facilities. Ray Gerk, Don Oppliger and Jerome Friemel took possession of the elevator June 1, 1980.

However, without gasohol legislation in Texas which would provide tax incentives to build the distilling plant, Friemel said the trio would not construct the plant.

Friemel said one possible reason why the bill has not passed yet is "not enough agricultural influence in the state legislature. They don't realize it is good for agriculture and the public."

He said if motorists will buy the gasohol, which Friemel said is better fuel for cars than gasoline, they'll buy it quickly. With the five-cent exemption, consumers will take advantage of the cheaper fuel.

In addition, he said interest rates on bonds have gone from 12 percent to 18 percent in the last year.

"It costs too much money. Without a tax incentive," Friemel said, "it is an exercise in futility to build one (a plant)."

Cost to build a plant is about $1 per annual alcohol production. Friemel said the plant they want to develop would produce between three and 20 million gallons of fuel alcohol per year, so plant construction costs would be between $3 and $20 million.

"We would have used local contractors, and manufacturers to build and install tanks for grain handling," he said. "So the plant would have been a boost for the Hereford economy."

He said Hereford is an ideal location for a fuel alcohol plant because of the local market for distillers grain byproducts which can be fed to cattle.

The Summerfield location, said Friemel, is ideal because of its access to rail facilities and available grain storage. The present structure also offers a room large enough in which to construct a distilling operation. The spent grain could be fed, without drying, to cattle in a nearby feed yard, which is another advantage to the Summerfield plant, according to Friemel.

"There is no way to build with the present tax structure. If we got an incentive (through legislation) a company from Hydra, Okla., may buy the site, and they would build the distilling plant," said Friemel.

He said the potential Oklahoma buyer has a fuel alcohol plant in its first months of operation. The plant runs better than expected, and may be running in the black sooner than the 30 to 60 days normally given for a plant to reach the profit-making level.

The key to a money-making plant is efficiency of conversion, said Friemel. A plant should convert one bushel of grain to 2.5 gallons of alcohol. Once a plant reaches this efficiency level, it will be profitable, he said.

At present, the three are still operating the Big Tex as a grain company, however, Friemel said, "We don't intend to continue running it as a grain company."

Tax Fight Heads for Close, High-Stakes Finish

Clayton's Water Plan Passes Stiff Senate Test

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton's plans to use surplus state revenue for future water projects passed a stiff test Tuesday in the Senate with a preliminary approval of 21-8.

A final vote is scheduled Thursday, when the Senate meets again.

The measure, which has been endorsed by Gov. Bill Clements, will return to the House for approval of several minor amendments.

The House approved the measure 113-19.

Sen. Ed Howard,

D-Texarkana, Senate sponsor of the proposed state constitution amendment, argued that dedication of part of the state's excess revenue to future water development was in effect tax relief because it would help local governments with their water worries.

Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, and Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, plus several other senators, hinted that Clayton wanted the state to finance transfer of East Texas water to water-shy West Texas.

Two key amendments offered by Farabee, and debated at length, would have removed any pledge about surplus tax money, but would have financed water assistance programs through the legislature.

Both failed by votes of 16-13 and 17-12. Most other attempted amendments failed by larger votes.

"You and the governor think you can solve water problems by just throwing money at them," Doggett told Howard.

"I think it might be cheaper to move West Texas to East Texas than to transfer East

Farmers Like Mud

Rain in Deaf Smith County has not only made happy farmers, but muddy farm trucks and tires. Overnight rain reports show 0.20 inch at Easter Grain; 0.25 inch at Bootleg; 0.20 inch at Walcott; and 0.03 inch for the city, making a total to date of 6.37 inches for Hereford. Westway and 13 miles northeast of the city report a light sprinkle which started about 6 a.m. H.L. Hershey reported, "We've had just a trace (of rain), but it's been better than a duststorm." Conservative Coalition May Be Crumbling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The coalition with conservative Democrats that gave President Reagan budget victories in the House is crumbling over a tax cut, an Associated Press survey shows.

At least six of the 29 Democrats who sided with the president on budget cuts said on the eve of the battle that they intended to vote for the two-year, 15 percent Democratic tax bill rather than the three-year, 25 percent plan favored by Reagan. Another nine contacted late Tuesday said they were undecided.

That left 14 of the original 29 firmly committed to Reagan. He needed 27 Democratic defectors to pass his tax cut — assuming all Republicans toed the line.

There were signs, however, that Reagan was somewhat successful in his effort to woo other Democrats on the tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress arrived today at a historic showdown months in the making, with President Reagan poised for a warmup tax-cut victory in the Senate and gaining on House Democrats in a high-stakes finish too close to call.

Reagan, who has called upon the power of the presidency this week in personal meetings with scores of congressmen, telephone calls and a national television address, said the House battle was "nip and tuck."

"This one is going to go down to the wire without any

'Life Open Book' Says CIA Director

WASHINGTON (AP) — Buoyed by new support in the Senate, a feisty CIA Director William J. Casey says he's looking forward to answering any questions about his past business dealings or management of the spy agency.

"The bottom of the barrel has been reached and there's nothing there," Casey says.

The 68-year-old Casey declared "my life is an open book" as he prepared to answer new questions today at a closed hearing of the Senate Intelligence Committee.

There were indications beforehand that Casey's counteroffensive was making headway.

An aide to one Republican on the committee, Richard G. Lugar of Indiana, declared flatly that the matter had been "laid to rest" and Democrats Lloyd Bentsen of Texas and Patrick Leahy of Vermont said they had seen nothing yet to justify Casey's resignation.

After a three-hour closed session Tuesday to review what its staff had learned about Casey, the committee summoned him to testify under oath. He had asked the panel Sunday to let him tell his side of the story as soon as possible in an effort to quickly extinguish the controversy surrounding his tenure.

Emerging from a meeting with Bentsen, Casey told reporters, "My life is an open book. I'm ready to discuss any phase of it, but not here, not at this time."

reductions to offset inflation starting in 1985.

The rival Democratic bill calls for a 15 percent cut over 21 months, with the largest share of relief going to Americans earning less than $50,000 a year. A third-year, 10 percent cut would be conditional on an improved economy.

Both would take effect Oct. 1, and either would be the largest tax cut in American history.

Because the cuts are permanent, the effect multiplies in future years, saving taxpayers and costing the government $700 billion over the next five years under the Democrats' version and $750 billion under Reagan's plan.

That's about as much as or more than the 1982 federal budget that Reagan succeeded in slashing in earlier congressional battles won with the help of a coalition of Republicans and conservative Southern Democrats.

Reagan found the votes harder to assemble in the tax fight, despite thousands of phone calls and telegrams from Americans responding to his plea for public pressure on Congress.

There are 191 Republicans and 244 Democrats in the House. If all Republicans side with the president, Reagan would need 27 Democratic votes for victory.

An Associated Press survey on Tuesday of 39 conservative Democrats viewed as potential swing votes showed 17 already in Reagan's column and seven siding with the Democratic plan.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. predicted that only 14 to 24 Democrats would defect, leaving the Democratic alternative a slim advantage. "This is the hardest bill the leadership has ever gone through," O'Neill said.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan said the House vote shaped up as "very close....We've narrowed the gap. We think we're about even and we'll surge ahead at the bell."

Senate leaders had hoped to Social Security System Solvent for Decade?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Benefit cuts already backed by Congress are enough to keep Social Security solvent through the end of the decade unless the economy falters, the system's actuaries say. Nevertheless, the Reagan administration still wants further reductions just to make sure.

Only if the economy deteriorates would the combined trust funds run short of cash to pay benefits over the next five years, the actuaries say.

Coming Thursday:

You don't have to be a woman to be a CPA, but Hereford has three of them! Staff writer Deba Graves interviews the trio for an interesting feature to be presented in Thursday's Brand.

Social Security's trustees warned Congress in their annual report on July 6 that even under a moderate economic projection the trust funds could become insolvent by 1985. The trustees said that only under optimistic assumptions could the trust funds get by, and then by only a thin margin.

But those projections ignored the impact of Social Security cuts backed by both houses of Congress, including plans to wipe out payments to college students and the $122 minimum monthly benefit.

The actuaries found that those cuts, which would save at least $22 billion by 1986, would keep the trust fund in the black until 1989 under moderate economic projections. Deputy Social Security Commissioner Robert J. Myers said in an interview Tuesday.

Under pessimistic and "worst case" assumptions, the combined trust funds still would run short in 1984 or 1985, he said.

Reagan has proposed cutting $88 billion in early retirement, disability and other benefits by 1986 to cure Social Security's short-term problems and to avoid an even deeper deficit in the next century.

But in a nationally broadcast address Monday, Reagan pledged, "In any plan to restore fiscal integrity of Social Security, I personally will see that the plan will not be at the expense of you who are now dependent on your monthly Social Security checks."

White House spokesman David Gergen said Tuesday that Reagan was not softening his proposed cuts in Social Security benefits by vowing that retired Americans will continue receiving checks "in the full amount due."

On Capitol Hill, Reagan's comments prompted 20 Democratic senators to call for a presidential explanation.

Old Midwife Custom Still Being Practiced Here

Midwives, Doctor Discuss Pros, Cons

By GAIL FIELDS
Staff Writer

Maria paces through the house. It's late in the evening and her labor pains have begun. She wakes her other two children, dresses them, and then she wakes her husband.

Finally, the four leave to help welcome another member to their already financially-strapped family.

But Maria isn't going to a hospital to deliver her baby. Her husband's on-again-off-again job situation won't allow them to afford a hospital delivery, and besides, Maria doesn't like hospitals; her first child was born in a hospital and Maria was unhappy with the assistance that was sometimes less than personal.

So Maria had her second child, and is about to have her third, in the home of a woman who has seen many babies born. This woman is a midwife; a woman who delivers babies to women, who, for some reason, don't wish to have them in hospitals.

Maria is not a real person, but many women exist in positions similar to that personified by Maria. Like Maria, many women today have chosen to have their babies delivered by midwives for several reasons.

Some of them can't afford hospital care. Some of them are afraid of doctors or hospitals, or they dislike the hospital atmosphere.

The midwives chosen by most women in the Hereford area are lay midwives, different from their professional counterparts, registered nurse midwives, in that they have no formal education in medicine. Lay midwives in the area learned their trade from other midwives, or from doctors of a past generation. According to registered-nurse midwife Linda Davidson, who works at the labor camp, a certified nurse midwife must be licensed by a state nursing board, be a graduate of a school of nursing, and have one year advanced training in midwifery.

Davidson said registered midwives in the Panhandle area serve mainly in a teaching capacity. They work with doctors and hospitals to teach pregnant women about pre and post-natal care and explain to them what to expect during childbirth. In Texas, nurse-midwives can assist with uncomplicated births, but only with a physician back-up.

Here in the Panhandle, nurse-midwives rarely deliver babies, but in the El Paso and south Texas regions they do. A Texas Department of Health statistics report indicates that in Health service region 8, located at the southernmost tip of the state, 238 babies were delivered by certified nurse-midwives.

There were no babies delivered in 1980 by certified nurse-midwives in health service area 1, which encompasses the Panhandle and includes Deaf Smith County. In region 1, the statistics indicate that 54 out of 7,388 babies were delivered by laymidwives.

But chances are, many more babies are delivered by lay-midwives than are reported. In fact, Pilar Gonzalez, a lay-midwife in Hereford, claims she delivers more babies than statistics indicate. By her estimate, she delivers about 60 to 80 babies in a good year. Some of these births are not reported, because she refuses to register the births with the county if the families of the children

Heart Patient 'More Stable' But Still Critical

HOUSTON (AP) — The man who already has survived longer than anyone sustained by an artificial heart was in a more stable condition early today, three days after surgeons transplanted a new human heart into his chest, hospital officials say.

Texas Heart Institute spokeswoman Hazel Haby said Willemrudus Meuffels' new heart is "beating well" and his blood pressure is stable.

"He is still critical," Ms. Haby said, "but maybe a little bit more stable."

The 36-year-old native of the Netherlands got a surprise visit from his wife Tuesday, Ms. Haby said.

"His wife came too see him and the moment he heard her voice he reacted," she said.

The artificial heart kept Meuffels alive when his own heart failed after a bypass operation last week. A nationwide search for a donor resulted in the transplant operation early Sunday morning.

Meuffels' condition was so critical until Tuesday, doctors would not allow a visit by his wife.

Meuffels, a retired bus driver, was only the third man to receive an artificial heart. The first recipient, in 1969, lived 65 hours on the plastic device and another 36 hours with a human heart before he died of pneumonia.

The second, in Argentina, lived only 15 hours on the device last August.

The donor heart came from a 27-year-old Belfast, Tennessee man who suffered brain death after oral surgery for injuries he received in an automobile accident. Officials in Tennessee said his respiratory system failed during the surgery.

Doctors said he was kept on a life support system and that his heart was still beating when he was flown to Houston.

The donor's family has requested anonymity.

Videotape Of Dead Officer Shakes Jury

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Members of a nine-woman, three-man state district court jury became visibly upset as they watched a videotape of a dead law officer during the capital murder trial of two Dumas, Texas, brothers accused of killing the policeman.

For more than six minutes Thursday, the panel watched the tape as it showed the body of Blaine McGuire, 26, lying in a pool of blood after he had been shot once in the temple Dec. 25.

Victor Gutierrez, 24, and Guadalupe Gutierrez, 26, are charged with McGuire's death. Two other men were arrested in connection with the shooting and are awaiting trial.

The four men are accused of killing McGuire during a routine traffic stop. The trial is scheduled to enter its third day of testimony today after being moved to Galveston from Amarillo on a chance of venue when a jury could not be selected.

The video tape, taken by Sgt. Greg Solis, was introduced into evidence by prosecutors after State District Judge Ed Harris overruled defense attorneys' objections that it would prejudice the jury.

McGuire's widow, Donya, left the courtroom while the tape was being played.

The tape was shown after earlier testimony revealed McGuire had twice radioed for assistance the night he was killed, and apparently tried to call for help again after he was shot.

Cuban Refugees Anger City Councilman

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — City Councilman Van Henry Archer says he's angry that Cuban refugees are receiving welfare in Bexar County at the same time he's receiving complaints about their conduct.

"I don't believe anybody ought to be allowed to go on welfare as soon as they get in this country," Archer said.

Dennis Donaldson, an official of the Texas Department of Human Resources, said a poll of food stamp offices showed an estimated 336 cases of Cuban refugees receiving food stamp support.

In addition, welfare officials said about 60 Cubans were receiving refugee resettlement assistance, a program similar to aid-for-dependent children payments.

"I've had numerous complaints about them (refugees) from residents of my district," said Archer, who represents an area north of downtown.

He said he knew of one apartment house filled with Cuban refugees.

"They are always hanging out the windows yelling at women who walk by, saying ugly things to them," said Archer, who also has campaigned to remove derelicts and winos from the downtown area.

Another day of scattered showers and thunderstorms and warm temperatures was on tap for much of Texas today.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were forecast for the South Plains, North Texas and South Texas.

Forecasters called for locally heavy rains over the South Plains extending southwestward into Southwest Texas. The shower activity in northern and southern sections of the state was to be mostly during the afternoon and early evening.

The remainder of the state was to have partly cloudy skies.

Highs were to be in the 90s except in West Texas where the rain was to keep the mercury in the 80s.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were reported during the night over southern sections of the Panhandle from just south of Amarillo to Oklahoma border and from the South Plains just south of Lubbock southwestward into the Guadalupe Mountains of Southwest Texas.

The heaviest rainfall during the night was at Lubbock where 1.33 inches fell during the nine-hour period ending at 4 a.m.

Prince Charles and Lady Diana Wed in Splendor and Majesty

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer became man and wife today in a ceremony glittering in splendor and majesty under the painted dome of St. Paul's Cathedral. Church bells pealed out the news across the land — the heir to the throne of the world's most famous monarchy had wed.

The nation rejoiced with toasts, block parties, revelling in the streets and village festivals.

"Forasmuch as Charles Philip Arthur George and Diana Frances have consented together in holy wedlock... I pronounce that they be man and wife together," the Most Rev. Robert Runcie, the Archbishop of Canterbury, said in sealing the union near the end of an 80-minute ceremony that resounded with trumpets, organ and choir voices.

Thus Diana, the blushing, 26-year-old former kindergarten teacher of noble birth, became the 9th Princess of Wales — the first in 80 years — and the future 48th Queen of England.

Charles, 32, and Diane rode separately to the church in a procession of 11 stately horse-drawn carriages past cheering throngs, many of whom had partied in the streets throughout the balmy night or curled up in sleeping bags four abreast on the sidewalks along the two-mile wedding route from Buckingham Palace to the cathedral. Crowds had begun to form as early as dawn last Monday.

The day began warm, dry and hazy and by 8:30 a.m. — 90 minutes before the first carriages of the wedding procession were due to leave Buckingham Palace — people were waving flags, singing songs and blowing trumpets. The sun was shining and at Trafalgar Square, scantily clad revellers jumped into the fountain for a cooling morning dip.

Queen Elizabeth II and her husband Prince Philip, Charles' parents, led the procession to the cathedral where a congregation of 3,000 gathered to see the Anglican wedding; ceremony first hand while millions here and abroad saw it on television. In the pews sat kings and queens, princes and princesses, dukes and duchesses and notables from other lands — among them the first lady of the United States, Nancy Reagan.

The family of the queen sat to the right of the center aisle while that of the 8th Earl of Spencer, Diana's father, sat to the left.

In his sermon, Archbishop Runcie told the congregation and the royal couple:

"This is the stuff of which fairy tales are made: the prince and princess on their wedding day. But fairy tales usually end at this point with the simple phrase, 'They lived happily ever after.' This may be because fairy stories regard marriage as an anticlimax after the romance of courtship.

"This is not the Christian view. Our faith sees the wedding day not as the place of arrival but the place where the adventure really begins."

It was the first royal wedding ever held in St. Paul's, and only the seventh marriage of a Prince of Wales in more than 600 years.

The classical language of the Anglican Book of Common Prayer was used for the ceremony but two modern touches were added.

Lady Diana promised to love, comfort, honor and keep her prince, but she omitted the traditional vow "to obey" him. Charles promised to "share" rather than "endow" his worldly goods with his wife.

London didn't wake early for this big day — it never went to sleep as boisterous, partying crowds, waving flags and wearing Union Jack hats, thronged the two-mile procession route from Buckingham Palace to St. Paul's Cathedral.

People began camping out along the route as early as Monday morning to be assured of a place from which to see the royal wedding party.

Letter To The Editor

Dear Editor:

The world food supplies are shrinking rapidly with weather devastating the Russian crops, and unsettled conditions threatening many key food growing areas. 400 insect species have developed partial or total immunity to pesticides, and the results are catastrophic.

Man has set himself above God and ignored His ways in our farming. Now, the fruit of this tragedy is becoming evident to all but those in the educational establishment whose funding by the multinational chemical companies over the years has resulted in seared consciences and blinded perception.

Meanwhile, government crop reporting systems have failed to take into account that much of the "wheat" that is being reported in this year's "record" crop is not even good pie feed. Millions of bushels stood in the fields for weeks while continuous rains ruined the quality. A record amount of wheat is being fed to animals due to low prices.

When the government and media people get around to noticing that we have a grain shortage this fall, it will be too late to do much about it. The nation has been lulled into a false sense of security regarding food. Hoses had it right. "My people are destroyed for a lack of knowledge."

Local Woman Reports Threatening Message

A Hereford woman came home yesterday to find someone had entered and disturbed her home for the second time, in two days, this time leaving a threatening message.

"Your time is up," was written with lipstick on Tracy Basic's mirror. Miss Basic, 610 W. Second, also told police that some of her undergarments were missing. This is the second incident of this nature to happen to Miss Basic and the third to occur in Hereford in the last few days.

Miss Basic told police yesterday that someone had ransacked her bedroom, messing up her bed and emptying her drawers. Another Hereford woman reported the same type of incident to police yesterday. The woman said someone messed up her bed, emptied her drawers and took some of her daughter's undergarments. Police report that prowlers have been spending time in the northwest section of the city lately. Another prowler in that area was reported last night. Mrs. O.G. Hill, 122 Hickory, told police someone was prowling around her home last night.

Jamie Coronado, 457 Poloma Lane, told police that someone attempted to enter his home last night through the storm door. Coronado said the prowlers tried to remove the storm door with screw drivers, but no entry was made.

Glen Anderson, 115 Ave. I, reported to police yesterday that two of his tires had been slashed last weekend. The tires are valued at $108.

Police answered 19 police-related calls, investigated one minor accident and issued 13 traffic citations.

Main Street America elected a new administration because God-fearing and Bible-believing working Americans wanted a change. Now we find our new administration attempting to sell government-owned stocks of silver and corn at well below the cost of production, further depressing and destroying already depressed markets. The corn, much of it in bad condition, should have been made into farmer's alcohol fuel, and the silver should be kept in our strategic stockpile.

Most importantly, interest rates must be lowered gradually, but immediately or we will soon see a scramble for liquidity that will make 1929 look like a picnic. This would be the end of freedom as we know it.

ty pass in their 11 horse-drawn carriages under the escort of mounted police and jingling cavalymen in breastplates and plumed helmets.

Thousands of police and soldiers kept watch over the crowds in what Scotland Yard called its biggest ever security operation.

Along with the revelry in London, there were grim reminders of the strife and unrest plaguing the country. Rioting erupted for the third night in the mostly black Tenth district of Liverpool, 180 miles northeast of London. In Northern Ireland, British army experts defused a 400-pound bomb found in a mobile home; military sources said they believed the guerrillas of the Irish Republican Army planned to blow up an army patrol with it as a "wedding spectacular."

Charles, the first Prince of Wales not forced to submit to an arranged marriage, made his last public appearance as a bachelor at a Hyde Park fireworks extravaganza Tuesday night, while Lady Diana remained at Clarence House — "tucked up in bed," she had said, to be ready for a 6:30 a.m. wake-up call from her maid and then the 20-minute ride with her father to St. Paul's.

In marrying the heir apparent, Diana gives up a career as a part-time kindergarten teacher who lived in a bachelor-girl London apartment with three friends.

Their romance bloomed a year ago after their first remembered meeting "in a plowed field" on the Spencer ancestral estate of Althorp, where Charles had been invited to a grouse hunt.

Once the courtship became known, Lady Diana's demure smile and ready blush became front-page news and only once during months since their Feb. 24 engagement did her coolness and charm break down. That was last Saturday when pursuing camera men forced her to flee in tears.

Her marriage to Charles gives her the formal title Diana Princess of Wales, sharing the many titles and considerable fortune of her husband, but if and when they become King Charles III and Queen Diana, she will reign and she will meet beside him as consort.

Test of Private Rocket Delayed

ROCKPORT, Texas (AP)

Owners of a rocket they hope will symbolize the beginning of a free enterprise space age say an engine test already scheduled for today will have to be delayed again.

Space Service Inc. engineers postponed a five-second burn of the Percheron rocket engine Tuesday and then scrubbed today's rescheduled test when additional problems developed Tuesday night.

"We have a major problem in the electrical switching down here and it is going to cause a major delay," said company spokesman Walter Pennino.

"We have some signals from valves in the fuel system and at the moment we don't know what they mean. We may have to test by possibly fueling the vehicle," said Pennino.

He said engineers will examine the electrical system today and may be forced to at least partially fuel the rocket in order to test the valves.

"We are not really sure whether it is a valve or a spurious signal in the instrumentation," said Pennino, who added that the problem would delay the test at least until Thursday.

Space Services had planned two engine tests this week — a five-second burn first on Tuesday and a 25-second burn scheduled a day later.

Tuesday's burn was postponed because "engineers weren't satisfied that, mechanically, everything was in order," said Pennino.

"They didn't want to run that risk until all the fittings and instrumentation and plumbing systems were in order," he said.

Space Services vice president Charles Chafer said the engine test delays were causing no problems.

"We're not on a time scale here," Chafer said. "Only in the launch business do timetables matter, and this is an engine test. This is only a test."

He said the delays would alter the timetable for the company's planned sub-orbital flight of the rocket on Aug. 12, but he did not know to what extent.

A group of investors formed the Houston-based company last year, saying they hoped to one day send commercial payloads into space.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, failed 18-11 with an amendment that would have split the water plan into three different votes.

Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, failed 18-10 with an amendment that would have required water projects to be selected from five geographic regions.

"This would assure that not all the money would go to West Texas," he said.

Texas water to West Texas," said Sen. Roy Blake, D-Nacogdoches.

"You think water is a hot political issue," Farabee told the Senate, "but property taxes will be a much hotter one... If you dedicate these surplus funds to water in future years you will be looking for increased property taxes to help pay for schools."

"This plan is like an alligator," said Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur. "When it's small it's cute, but 50 years from today it will eat everything in the pool."

A similar water funding plan failed in the regular session of the Legislature and it was made an issue of this special session by Clements.

The House-approved measure offered the Senate calls for a Nov. 3 vote on a constitution change that would dedicate half of any future revenue surpluses to a special water assistance fund.

The fund would be used for water development, water conservation, water quality enhancement and flood control.

The proposal also would: — Allow the state to guarantee up to $500 million in water bonds issued by and the Democratic leadership's bill dismissed by Reagan as "just another wealthy promise."

The House Rules Committee decided Tuesday to limit debate on the bill to one day and to allow no amendments to the rival tax-cut plans.

With every vote vital, both sides mounted intensive lobbying offensives.

Reagan, who brought 48 Democrats and Republicans to the White House for personal lobbying Monday and Tuesday, cleared his calendar for more of the same today.

O'Neill complained about that effort, saying Reagan was even trying to twist arms of members already committed to the Democratic plan.

fail to pay her, she said.
Pilar sat on her front porch one afternoon and candidly discussed her "profession," as several of the children she has delivered played in the yard. Sitting next to Pilar was her daughter, one of Pilar's seven children, who was holding her own baby girl, the last child Pilar has delivered.

If her $150 fee is not paid, Pilar will not register the birth with the county. Her fee covers the costs of infant clothes and food for the rest of the family, since many women come to her in labor with families in two and no baby clothes. Pilar takes care of the whole family until she decides it is safe for the woman to go home. Pilar has had to increase her price with the cost of living. She first began accepting what the families would give her, then began charging $50 to $60 then $80 and on up to $150. Pilar began delivering babies under a doctor's instructions when she was 16. Now she's 63 and she says she knows about as much about delivering babies as a doctor. She said she assisted several Hereford Doctors at their request.

Midwife says most women come to her for financial reasons.

She said most of the women come to her for financial reasons. A physician supervised hospital birth costs about $1,200, while a delivery by Pilar costs $150. Pilar delivers most of the babies at her home. Up until 16 years ago she traveled to nearby communities like Friona and Dimmitt. She said "welfare" made her stop because of the danger of trying to bring a mother and child to a hospital during bad weather if the birth was complicated. As far as she knows, the next child Pilar will deliver will be one of her own grandchildren. One of her daughters has asked that Pilar come to California to deliver her baby when it is due. Pilar has delivered almost all of her grandchildren, and she even gave birth-unassisted to some of her own children. Just outside of town, in the San Jose community, another woman sits on her porch with her daughter and talks about her career as a midwife. Josefina Garcia began delivering babies when she was 23. At 48, she has begun to teach her daughter Angie the trade.

Josefina delivers mostly Mexican babies, but says "I am not a prejudiced person."

Like Pilar, Josefina delivers mostly Mexican babies, and some white babies. She hasn't delivered any black babies, but she would if they came to her. "I am not a prejudiced person," she said. Josefina doesn't charge for her services, but she will accept what money the family can give her. Josefina says the births she oversees are registered as soon as possible with the county. Josefina delivers the babies either in her own home or in the homes of the families. Her introduction to midwifery came from another midwife. Both Pilar and Josefina take their jobs as a matter of course. As Pilar says, "Some of my relatives say it's dirty work, but it's not." She also said some people think she delivers babies as a money-making venture. "People say I deliver babies to make money; I just make a living," she said. Lay-midwifery in the Hereford area for most people may seem like an underground hush-hush type of practice, but certain circles are well aware of its existence. A resurgence of the practice has health and medical officials in Hereford, as well as across the nation, concerned about the safety of mothers who give birth at home without trained medical attention. Neither of the Hereford midwives has any formal medical training. In fact, Pilar says she can't write, but they both speak with confidence about their ability to handle deliveries. A family practitioner, Dr. Duffy McBrayer, however, speaks with skepticism about the midwife's abilities to recognize a complication during a delivery in time to get the mother and child to a hospital.

Reverting to home births is like taking a step backward in the medical world, says doctor.

In McBrayer's opinion, reverting back to home births is like taking a step backward in the medical world. McBrayer pointed out that delivering babies in hospitals is in its infant stages when compared with the history of man's existence. Also, huge advancements in hospital technology and knowledge has only recently made hospital births as safe as they are. A graph from the Department of Health indicates the infant mortality compatibility in babies can be detected and corrected during the pregnancy by a physician with sophisticated equipment. A lay-midwife, though she may have delivered hundreds of babies, generally does not have the knowledge or technology to detect diseases and complications in time to save lives. Pilar and Josefina stress that they recognize complicated births and they take the women to the hospital if there are any difficulties. Any medical institution that receives federal money must accept Medicaid, and Deaf Smith County General Hospital does. An alternative for women who don't qualify for Medicaid might be the South Plains Health Providers, a federal entity located locally in the San Jose camp and headquartered in Plainview. Fish said South Plains Health Providers charges its patients about 20 percent of the going medical rate. McBrayer is not alone in his opposition to at-home deliveries.

Both said the expectant mothers are often scared to go to the hospital, but the midwives insist. McBrayer said he has witnessed cases where babies have died because their mothers needed more assistance than a midwife could give them. Pilar, on the other hand, says she has seen women pay large amounts of money to give birth in hospital virtually unassisted. The cost of hospital births forces many women to seek out midwives when their babies are due but, as McBrayer pointed out, the cost of pre-natal and hospital care is small in comparison to the overall cost of raising a child to adulthood. McBrayer said cost is no reason for a woman not to have a child in the hospital. He said programs that cut hospital costs are available for women who can't afford the bill. He also pointed out that birth control methods are offered free, in some cases, for women who know they can't afford children, or don't want children. Ruth Fish, a welfare eligibility worker for the Deaf Smith County-Aid to Families with Dependent Children office, said her clients usually are single women. Many of whom are victims of the loved-and-lost syndrome. The father of their child walked out on them, or was not present long enough for the women to really know. Some are divorced from husband's who can't be counted on for child-support and some have husbands who are in jail or are disabled.

Married women might find it more difficult to get aid from welfare than single women.

A married woman with a husband at home might find it more difficult to get aid from welfare than a single woman, and Fish said probably most of the women who seek out midwives have husbands living at home. Women who qualify for welfare can receive Medicaid, a federal subsidy distributed through the states for medical aid. Just as the title "aid to families with dependent children" implies, a woman cannot receive Medicaid until she actually has a child. Prenatal insurance is not available in Texas. After a woman's first child is born, she can apply for, and receive, if eligible, reimbursements for hospital delivery costs. Medicaid also will reimburse pre-natal office visit costs, but only if they are included in one lump sum with the hospital cost. The plan has its drawbacks. Medicaid reimburses physicians only about $8 for a $20 office visit according to Fish, and for this reason, she said something less than 50 percent of the doctors will accept Medicaid; the reimbursements do not cover their overhead. Some Hereford doctors accept Medicaid, some don't.

Ann Landers
Cross-Dressing

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your column is informative and sometimes funny. It is also provocative as the Dickens because the true-life situations you capitalize get people to thinking, "What if...?" I was challenged by the letter from the couple who wanted to know if it is against the law to cross-dress. Your answer was "no." What if... a person who had cross-dressed had to answer nature's call when he (or she) was in a public place such as a theater or a restaurant? To which washroom would he or she go?—Curious In Welland, Ont.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Well...well...well...er...ah... I think his (or her) chances for staying out of harm's way would be a lot better if he (or she) went to the washroom matching the outfit. All women's rooms have at least one private stall with a door. Some men's rooms do not. A cross-dressed woman would be in a heck of a fix if she ran into one of those. (P.S. My advice: If you're going to dress up like that, go before you leave the house.)

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Some of the people I work with say their children and family members have written to you three and four times and their letters have never appeared in the paper. They say you publish only the letters for which you can come up with a clever answer. Would you care to comment? If this letter should make it in print, I would die of the shock.—Marion In Mexico, Mo.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Regarding the letter from the mother whose two adult daughters live with her: She said, "It's not that they argue or fight—they simply ignore each other." This is a recognized form of mental cruelty. My wife did it the first year we were married. She didn't speak to me for one month. After that she clammed up periodically every year of our marriage, sometimes for two months, sometimes three. The last episode lasted 11 months and precipitated our divorce. (After seven lovely children.) Now four of these children engage in this same practice between themselves and their spouses. I later learned that this sort of thing went on with my wife and her brothers and sisters. At West Point the cadets did it to the plebes, but it was finally stopped. There is no torture like being ignored. What makes it so bad is that there is no attack, no arguing, just silence. People who use this brutal technique are sadistic and should get professional help.—A U.S. Judge (Anonymous Please)

DEAR MARIAN: Call the coroner. The people who complained are understandably disappointed, but I receive over 1,000 pieces of mail every day and can publish only three letters in a single column. The problem is space. As for printing only the letter for which I have a clever answer...not true. What's so clever about this one? Can drugs be a friend in time of stress? If you keep your head together can they be of help? Ann Landers' new booklet, "Straight Dope on Drugs" separates the fact from the fiction. Get it today. For each booklet ordered, send a dollar, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (28 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995 Chicago, Illinois 60611.

DEAR JUDGE: The best way to combat silence is with more silence. Begging someone to "say something"

House Committee Approves Property Tax Code Changes

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Property Tax Code, or "Peveto Bill," has worried taxpayers since it passed in 1979, but a House committee has approved a bill designed to make it more palatable. An 8-1 vote in the House Ways and Means Committee sent the "fine-tune" or "clean-up" bill to the House floor for debate that probably will come Thursday. Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, has abandoned his own bill — much amended by fellow senators — and is waiting for the House bill, which he likes better. "I don't think you can ever fix the property tax system. I just want to make it work for the next two years. We may be back sooner than that after the reappraisal notices go out in October," said Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Salado, who directed committee work on the House bill. The Peveto Bill requires local governments to levy taxes on the full market value of taxable property, as determined by countywide appraisal districts, starting Jan. 1, 1982. The "fine-tuning" bill says governing bodies of two-thirds the taxing units in an appraisal district may delay full implementation for as long as three years. Other changes the bill would make in the Property Tax Code would: — Raise raises from five to 20 acres the amount of land on which a person may claim a homestead exemption. — Reduce the voter turnout requirement in elections to roll back property tax increases from 25 percent to 15 percent. — Enable elderly and disabled taxpayers to apply only once, instead of annually, for special homestead exemptions. — Permit appraisers to enter businesses to evaluate equipment and inventory. — Enable governing bodies of half the taxing units in an appraisal district to veto its budget or any of its actions.

— Exempt farm and ranch equipment from property taxes. While senators voted to require all appraisal district board members to be elected officials of taxing units, the committee rejected the idea. Its bill says board members may be elected officials but don't have to be.

"If elected people must serve, it creates a burden on them, and it could prohibit getting talented people on the boards," Schlueter said. The bill says the three-fourths rule cannot be used to reduce the voting strength of a taxing unit to less than a majority without its consent.

Lady Diana's Wedding Dress Finally Revealed.

LONDON (AP) — Lady Diana Spencer's wedding dress, probably the most closely guarded secret in fashion history, is a romantic fairy-tale gown in ivory silk taffeta and old lace, with a fitted, boned bodice and curved neckline.

It has a full skirt over a multi-layered tulle petticoat, intricately designed bodice panels, and the entire gown hand-embroidered with tiny mother-of-pearl sequins and pearls.

With the frills, flounces and 25-foot sweeping train of her gown, the tall, slim bride observed the tradition of wearing something old — lace, something new — silk especially spun at Lullington silk farm in Dorset, something borrowed — a tiara from the Spencer family collection, and something blue.

A small blue bow was sewn into the waistband. And a second good luck token, a tiny horseshoe in 18 carat gold studded with white diamonds, was also sewn into the intricately embroidered dress.

The cost of the original by London designers David Emanuel, 28, and his wife Elizabeth, 27, was not revealed.

Regular Emanuel wedding dresses start around $5,610.

Diana's low-heeled slippers were in ivory silk, top-stitched with pearls and sequins and the suede soles edged in gold.

Diana carried a cascade of gardenias and golden Mountbatten roses named after Charles' beloved godfather, Lord Louis Mountbatten, assassinated in 1979, mixed with white orchids, lilies-of-the-valley and freesias.

The bouquet included traditional myrtle and veronica, cut from bushes grown from cuttings from Queen Victoria's wedding bouquet.

Details of the bride's gown and the outfits of Queen Elizabeth II and other royal women were released in sealed envelopes Wednesday morning to be opened at the moment the 20-year-old bride stepped into the glass coach at Clarence House on her way to St. Paul's Cathedral.

The Emanuels made three gowns, to allow for a switch in case details of Diana's choice leaked ahead of the wedding. But they did not. A description published Tuesday by New York fashion magazine Women's Wear Daily proved wide of the mark.

Manufacturers poised to rush out copies of the world's most widely seen wedding dress. One Welsh firm said it hoped to have cut-price replicas, selling for around $467 by Wednesday afternoon.

Lady Diana's five bridesmaids — the eldest Charles' first cousin Lady Sarah Armstrong-Jones, 17, and the youngest Winston Churchill's great-granddaughter, Clementine Hambro, 5, wore ivory silk dresses, based closely on Diana's gown.

The two pages, in indigo blue tailcoats and white trousers, wore full dress royal naval cadets' uniforms of 1863. Charles wore the full dress uniform of a naval commander.

Disastrous Year For Automakers

DETROIT (AP) — This is shaping up as a disastrous sales year for American automakers, worse even than 1980.

But despite unrelentingly high interest rates that have kept many potential buyers at home and continuing pressure from foreign competitors, the U.S. makers have recorded a dramatic financial turnaround.

For the second quarter, they recorded an industry-wide profit of $566.3 million, a huge jump from their $1.5 billion loss in the second quarter of 1980.

General Motors Corp. completed the latest round of quarterly earnings statements Monday, reporting a $514.6 million profit for the second quarter, which ended June 30. Last week, Ford Motor Co. reported a surprising $60 million profit.

Chrysler Corp. earned $11.6 million, a paper-thin profit by industry standards but enough to push the company into the black for the first quarter since earning $43.1 million in the fourth quarter of 1978.

American Motors Corp., with a $19.9 million loss, was the only U.S. maker in the red, but the performance was an improvement on the $84.9 million deficit recorded a year earlier.

For the first six months of this year, the automakers have cut combined losses to $34.3 million — down from a whopping $1.96 billion in the first half of last year.

David Healy, an auto industry analyst for the New York investment banking firm of Drexel Burnham Lambert, said much of the improvement comes from tighter purse strings. "I think across the board, at all three companies, you've had some severe cost-cutting," Healy said.

Chrysler, for example, trimmed its expenses by $2 billion per year and reduced by half the number of cars it must sell to break even. It achieved those savings by gaining $783 million in wage and benefits concessions from its employees and paying off $686 million in debt with preferred stock. It was also helped with $1.2 billion in federally guaranteed loans.

In addition, Chrysler has closed eight plants, sold another and cut its salaried workforce nearly in half.

"We're a smaller company than we used to be," said Chrysler spokesman Bob Heath. "That's what it boils down to."

GM and Ford have also cut back their spending. Ford trimmed its salaried personnel by 22 percent, closed two plants and froze pay and bonuses for executives. GM laid off 12,000 salaried workers, eliminated executive bonuses and reorganized many of its operations.

For GM, the quarter was the third straight profitable quarter following heavy losses in 1980. Ford's gain broke a string of six quarterly losses.

Chrysler's turnaround, however, was the most striking. The breakeven point was an important psychological barrier for the No. 3 automaker and its chairman, Lee Iacocca, who proclaimed, "We're on our way back."

Gymnast Reaches Perfection At Sports Festival

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Gymnast Ron Galimore seeks perfection. And, Tuesday night, he reached his goal at the National Sports Festival.

Galimore, the son of the late Willie Galimore, a star running back for the Chicago Bears until his death in an automobile accident nearly 15 years ago, swooped down the long runway, flew off the springboard and soared to a perfect 10.0 score in the first of two attempts in the finals of the vault competition.

He added a 9.9 vault, giving him an average of 9.5 and the gold medal in that individual competition.

Galimore, one of the many U.S. athletes chosen for a 1980 national team but deprived of an Olympic appearance by the American boycott of the Moscow Games, was pleased by his showing in this six-day Festival of American sports, noting that most of the other top performers in gymnastics chose to be elsewhere.

Brian Meeker, 22, who won the men's all-around championship Saturday, was leading in the vault competition, even following Galimore's 10.0. But, on his second try, he hit the springboard too far back and crashed full force into the vaulting horse with his chest.

He was taken to Crouse-Ingling Hospital, where he was kept overnight for observation. Dr. Patricia Poter of the U.S. Olympic Committee medical staff said Meeker, the Big Ten all-around champion from Minnesota, apparently did not have serious injuries. He took the silver medal in the still rings before the mishap.

In other highlights Tuesday, Roy Palassou of Santa Clara, Calif., won two gold medals in men's gymnastics, winning the floor exercise and the parallel bars, and Richard Savage of West Monroe, La., gained a close decision in the feature bout in the boxing, taking the gold in the 119-pound class.

Brian Babcock of Enid, Okla., won the gold in the pommel horse, while Mark Caso of Syracuse and UCLA, who broke his neck last year in an accident in practice, won the rings and was third in the vault and parallel bars.

Savage, a 21-year-old bantamweight, beat his friend and arch-rival, Cruz, on a 3-2 decision. Afterward, he said he thought he'd won only the first and third rounds of the three-round match. Cruz, on the other hand, said he thought all three rounds were his, not Savage's.

U.S. Navy X-ray technician Mark Mahone hardly broke a sweat in disposing of Johnny Keys of San Francisco in the heavyweight title bout. Mahone stopped Keys on one punch, with the referee counting the loser out 10 seconds into the second round.

Tyrone Biggs of Philadelphia, who broke his hand while winning a fight Saturday night in which he qualified for the heavyweight finale, was awarded the silver medal. He was forced to withdraw from the tournament because of the injury.

In an upset, Mark Breland of Brooklyn, N.Y., scored a first-round knockout over Darryl Robinson, of the American Boxing Federation champion from Houston, in the 147-pound class.

Among the handful of events today — the last day of the U.S. Olympic Committee-sanctioned Festival — will be the gold medal battles in men's and women's basketball and ice hockey.

The West and South teams earned berths in the men's cage final with victories Tuesday night. The West beat the East 93-83 as Stuart Gray, a 7-foot UCLA recruit from Sepulveda, Calif., led the way by scoring 11 of his 15 points in the last nine minutes. Then Jim Master, a sophomore-to-be at Kentucky, tossed in 27 points to pace the South past the winless Midwest 81-80.

The gold medal contestants in women's basketball are the East and South. Lisa Ingram, a high school senior from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., scored 26 points as the South defeated the Midwest 121-100. And the East beat the West 80-73 behind Medina Dixon's 24 points.

The hockey gold medal matchup will be a replay of Tuesday night's meeting between Great Lakes and Central. Great Lakes won the well-played game 6-3, getting two goals and an assist from Notre Dame's Kirt Bjork of Trenton, Mich.

Both were 2-0 going into Tuesday's finale of the round-robin portion of the hockey competition and had been assured of meeting for the gold.

The New England and Midwest teams, which had been expected to be the favorites here, were to play in the bronze-medal game.

In soccer, the East beat the two-time defending champion Midwest 2-1 in a wild double-overtime, sudden-death shootout. And it was Syracuse University goalie Joe Papaleo who ended it, scoring against Midwest goalie Ed Gettemeire of Ballwin, Mo., in the 11th round of the marathon shootout.

Tuesday's rhythmic gymnastics finals saw Lydia Crabtree, 22, of Redondo Beach, Calif., who won the all-around competition Monday night, add a gold medal in the ribbon competition. Sue Soffe, 20, the six-time national champion from Arcoura, Calif., won the hoop.

Valerie Zimming, 16, of Cheviot Hills, Calif., was the gold medal winner in the clubs. She also was the silver medalist in the overall. Michele Berube, 15, of Rochester, Minn., won the hoop.

The Sun City Saints women's softball team was awarded the gold medal over the Raybestos Brakettes when rain washed out their game. Officials decided not to reschedule the contest because of a forecast for more bad weather today and because the Brakettes had to travel to the World Games in Santa Clara, Calif.

Sun City got the gold according to a complicated formula involving runs for and against during the tournament round-robin.

The men's Peterbilt Western softball team also was awarded a gold over Aurora Home Savings. The award was made on the basis of Peterbilt's 5-1 record in the round-robin competition. Aurora was 4-2.

Baseball Loses Innocence To Reality Of Strike

Perhaps the worst part of the strike that stopped summer is that the two sides have succeeded in robbing baseball of its most basic and perhaps most important quality — innocence.

For a century or so, the sport sold escape. You could go to the local ballpark, and for a couple of hours you could be free of the world's hassles. The stadium was a sanctuary of fresh air, a patch of green in the middle of a concrete city. It was set aside for this very special activity where grown men played a little boy's game.

Baseball restored for its fans a time of innocence in their lives. It supplied winners and losers with no time limits imposed. It provided mortal-sized heroes who didn't have to weigh 300 pounds or stand 7 feet tall to excel.

And most importantly, it supplied a very special continuity from one game to another, one pennant race to another, and one season to another. That was the essence of what baseball was all about.

Now all of it has been destroyed, shattered in the fallout of this strike, provoked by the owners (remember, they even went to court to force it) and carried out by the players.

It has been a sad sight to contemplate.

They have taken the bloom off the rose forever. For many of us, there no longer will be a special feeling for The Game. It will be just another industry, concerned with profit and loss — the bottom line.

Good-bye, innocence. Hello, reality.

The sweet sound of wood against horsehide, once so very special for a baseball fan, will be no different, essentially, than the noise of another factory drill press turning out its daily supply of widgets. This is no sport. This is a business.

With that in mind, baseball's bosses have been scurrying about piecing together various plans to salvage their season, save the playoffs and World Series and its important revenue. They should have worried about that back in early June when they argued so eloquently in the Rochester court of Judge Henry Werker against an injunction that would have postponed this mess for at least another year. But they wanted this strike now and they got it. The reason, a very businesslike insurance policy that wouldn't have paid $50 million next year.

Every time the slightest bit of progress in negotiations is made — and most of it has been just that, slight — plans begin surfacing about how to put the season back together.

Well, if management has any respect at all left for the fans, it will scrap these outrageous schemes. The strike already has created enough chaos to last a lifetime for baseball. We don't need more.

Green Bay Packers Considering Reinfeldt

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Coach Bart Starr said Tuesday that the Green Bay Packers would be interested in talking to the Houston Oilers about acquiring Oiler safety Mike Reinfeldt in a trade.

"I haven't talked to our people about it and it would be presumptuous for me to comment further," Starr said. "We certainly would discuss it. Anyone would be willing to talk about it."

Meanwhile, Oiler Coach Ed Biles said he was considering trading Reinfeldt, who has not signed a 1981 contract, for a backup quarterback if he can find the right deal.

The Packers have been trying to trade one of their six quarterbacks: veterans Lynn Dickey, David Whitehurst, Mark Miller and Mark Mancuso, and rookies Rich Campbell and Nickie Hall.

"We're seriously discussing a trade," Biles said after discussions between Reinfeldt's attorney and the Oilers broke off Monday.

"It's a fact of life, that the longer Mike stays out, the more of a problem he'll have getting his job back."

Reinfeldt, who attended the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee and who led the National Football League with 12 interceptions in 1979, played out his option last season. His attorney, Ron Grinker of Cincinnati, has been negotiating with Ladd Herzog, Oiler general manager.

"We're talking about a starter for a reserve," Biles said. "I'm not sure we'd make a one-for-one trade but that would depend on who we're talking about. We might want another player or draft choices in addition to a quarterback."

Czechs Ask Political Asylum In World Games

COLOGNE, West Germany (AP) — Twenty-five Czechoslovaks here for the 14th World Games for the Deaf have asked for political asylum, a West German newspaper reported.

It was not clear how many of the applicants were athletes participating in the games and how many were team officials or spectators.

3 WAYS TO CHARGE

Crippling Blow Ends Boxing Career

HOUSTON (AP) — Jeffrey Hall, a strapping young amateur boxer, had every reason to be confident the night of May 9, 1980. Of 40 previous bouts he had lost only 10 and was ranked fourth in the nation in the bantamweight division in 1977.

Hall, 17, was in Corpus Christi that night and was winning a Golden Gloves bout when his opponent suddenly landed a powerful punch on Hall's head, knocking him out for a few minutes.

The knockout blow was the beginning of another fight for Jeffrey that is still going on today. It has left the once handsome young boxer an invalid who cannot stand up without help and his mother says doctors simply don't know what to do.

The realization of the seriousness of Hall's problem was not immediately apparent, not even to him. After the Corpus Christi fight, his boxing coach brought him home that night to the 60-foot yacht in the Clear Lake area near here where Hall lived with his family, and told his mother, Jean Hall, what had happened.

At the time the teen-ager had a severe headache, but otherwise seemed all right, his mother said. During the night, however, Hall became nauseated. He slept throughout the next day.

"I figured it was good for him to sleep, and that he would be all right," Mrs. Hall said.

On the second night, his headache became unbearable, she said. The next morning Hall was taken to the hospital. On the way, he lost consciousness and had two convulsions.

By the time they reached the emergency room, his doctor said he was near death. Beyond that, the surgeon who operated on Hall refused to discuss the injury.

That day the high school junior underwent the first of four operations to help his condition. Surgeons drilled a hole in his skull to relieve pressure from blood and spinal fluid that was accumulating, Mrs. Hall said.

When he came home, Hall could neither speak nor swallow. His condition was so bad that a second operation was decided upon, Mrs. Hall said. This time the surgeon placed a shunt, an alternate path for circulation of blood, to drain the blood and spinal fluid into Hall's intestines.

He remained in the hospital until early in September. The third operation was performed to flush the shunt. A fourth operation was performed to replace the shut. Since then, Hall has suffered no convulsions.

But during this period his weight plummeted from 150 to 100 pounds. When he came home from the hospital the only movement he could make was with his eyes. He had to be fed intravenously.

Doctors told Mrs. Hall, who is divorced, the prospects were bleak. "We were advised to put him in a nursing home and wait for him to die," she said.

Another of her five children, Mickey Hall, in his early 30s, came home from South Africa about this time to help his mother with his younger brother. Using a tube and syringe, Mickey and his mother began feeding Jeffrey solid food. They made a "green goo" of raw liver, spinach, carrots, celery and vitamins.

This, Mrs. Hall believes, saved Jeffrey's life. With another brother, Scott, 20, they worked with Jeffrey, turning him every two hours to avert bed sores.

Mrs. Hall said she could ask Jeffrey a question and he would blink his eyes when he wanted to answer "yes."

After a while, he gradually began to regain some use of his arms and hands. "Around Thanksgiving I rigged up a board with the alphabet on it," Mrs. Hall said. Using a pointer, Jeffrey spelled out what he wanted to say.

"The first word he spelled was 'pumpkin,' because he liked pumpkin pie and he had seen some in our home," Mrs. Hall said.

In January, Jeffrey got better still — he began to regain the use of his legs and began making sounds — not words, but groans and grunts, Mrs. Hall said.

"He was making a great effort, and it came slowly," she said. One day Jeffrey said his first sentence since he lost his power of speech. Looking in the direction of the living room, he said "Want to go out there," Mrs. Hall said.

"It was very moving," she said. During the ensuing months, Jeffrey progressed slowly.

He began to walk, using a walker, but he was only able to walk on his tiptoes at first. In April, with therapy, he learned to walk normally, and twice-a-week treatments followed at the Institute of Rehabilitation and Research in the Texas Medical Center.

Then six weeks later Jeffrey suffered a stunning reverse.

He awakened one morning unable to walk or talk. He has improved only slightly since that time.

Why this occurred is a mystery, Mrs. Hall said. At the time no doctor was seeing him regularly and he was taking no medication. Mrs. Hall is arranging for a neurosurgeon to examine him to try to find out what happened and what can be done.

Today, Mrs. Hall describes her injured son as "very tired. He doesn't want to do anything. His voice is getting very weak. I have to lean down to listen to him whisper." She said his appetite has diminished and he needs help to stand.

The family left Idaho in 1977, bought the yacht in Rhode Island, sailed it to Houston and decided to stay here. Later the Halls got their divorce. Today the yacht is gone. Mrs. Hall has moved to a neighborhood in Harris County east of Houston.

She has quit her job as a bookkeeper to care for Jeffrey and owes $15,000 in medical bills not paid for by health insurance.

The Halls are Mormons, and members of their church have helped some during Jeffrey's illness.

Mrs. Hall says she does not know what the future holds.

"I can't guess ahead. He was doing so well. I had such high hopes. It looks like we are now back to the drawing board."

Negotiators Meet On Opposite Coasts

The 48th day of the major league baseball strike finds feuding players and owners' negotiators meeting some 3,000 miles apart. Whether the walkout is any closer to a settlement may be known after those separate meetings on each coast today.

While the 26 club owners were scheduled to sit down with their bargaining unit, the Player Relations Committee, in New York, the executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association, Marvin Miller, was to meet with a group of players in Los Angeles to brief them on the status of the negotiations.

There has been no bargaining since the talks collapsed in Washington, D.C., last Thursday just as an agreement was rumored to be imminent. No further meetings have been scheduled, but Ray Grebey, the owners' chief negotiator, said he was available for joint talks at any time and a source close to the PRC said it was likely that a session would be held Thursday in New York.

The strike has wiped out more than 25 percent of the season with some 579 games canceled through today.

Although Miller's office indicated that he may return to New York after the Los Angeles meeting, that session also may touch off a series of regional briefings to close what he called "a terrible information gap." He said the gap resulted from the news blackout imposed last week by U.S. Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan.

Meanwhile, American and National League owners will first meet separately in New York, followed by a joint session.

"The main reason for the joint meeting is that people lost track of things last week during the blackout on information," Grebey said.

However, there were reports that new pressure to reach a settlement may come from three moderate-line American League owners — George Steinbrenner of the New York Yankees, Edward Bennett Williams of the Baltimore Orioles and Eddie Chiles of the Texas Rangers.

The rival parties apparently are in agreement on how to compensate teams that lose a "ranking" free agent but remain at odds over where that compensation should originate. The owners want direct compensation from a team signing a free agent while the players insist on a pool of players.

During a five-hour meeting with the union's 30-member executive board in Chicago on Monday night — some 80 other players also showed up — Miller apparently eased the minds of many of them. There had been criticism from some players on how the negotiations were being handled.

In Kansas City, Dan Quisenberry, the Royals' player representative, said major leaguers living in the area would meet either tonight or Thursday for a briefing on the status of negotiations.

Orioles owner Williams, who has been outspoken in his demands for an agreement, said the owners' session would probably be "a good old country meeting. We'll keep meeting and meeting and meeting and, despite all the efforts to thwart me, I'll keep trying. We must settle this week."

THE HEREFORD BRAND FARM NEWS

ASCS News

BY JOHN FUSTON
ASCS County Executive Director
1981 WHEAT RESERVE
PROGRAM:

Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block announced July 23 that we do have a reserve program for 1981 crop wheat. It will be a 3 year program like the other reserve programs were. Our county reserve loan rate is $3.51, storage payments will be 2 1/2 cents, and interest will be charged the first year. We think the interest rate will be 14.5 percent. Second and third year interest will be waived. The release level will be $4.65 per bushel. We sure hope that this will increase our wheat market.

We think this program is worth looking into and think it might let a person get a little more for his wheat than what our markets are today.

CORN SILAGE:

We have some good looking corn in the county, but if you feel your corn would appraise less than 60 percent, based on a grain appraisal, then you need to have us appraise it prior to cutting it for silage if you want to be eligible for disaster payments. This is a must if you are going to qualify for any disaster payments on corn.

Some of our corn looks exceptionally good and if you feel you might want to prove a yield on your corn in the future, we also need to make an appraisal before you cut it for silage.

FINAL CERTIFICATION DATE:

September 1, 1981 is the final date to report Spring and Summer seeded crops. You are urged to measure and certify your corn, grain sorghum, cotton and any other crops planted on your farm.

The acreage must be certified on a field by field basis and dryland and irrigated acreages must be kept separate. If you have any trouble measuring your acres, we have a measurement service at a very nominal fee.

An accurate certification is a pretty cheap way to guarantee that you would be eligible for all benefits of the disaster and loan program and maybe also for wheat deficiency payments.

NEW TEXAS STATE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR: Mr. Wayne Mayfield, who previously was the Office Manager in Deaf Smith County, and has been the District Director for this area for the past few years, is our new boss.

We feel very fortunate to have Mr. Mayfield heading up our State office, and feel that he is a good man for the job and that he will not only give our area good representation but will do an excellent job for Texas.

Mr. Mayfield has a degree in Agriculture from West Texas State and also a masters degree in Animal Nutrition from Colorado State University. He is a native of Silvertown, Texas where he was engaged in farming and ranching in Briscoe County. He and his wife, Joni have four children, two boys and two girls.

World Weather Report: US Crops Look Good, Harvest Hurt in USSR

By DON KENDALL AP
Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - A government report on world weather says the crop situation in the United States is looking favorable but that some damage has been done to harvest prospects in the Soviet Union.

Seasonal or above-normal temperatures dominated Southern states during the week of July 20-26, while cooler weather prevailed over much of North, the Joint Agricultural Weather Facility said Tuesday.

Nationally, corn was reported in fair to mostly good condition. The winter wheat harvest was about 83 percent completed in the major production states, only slightly behind last year's pace.

In the Soviet Union, meanwhile, drought and high temperatures have put a crimp in prospects for spring-planted grain, the report said.

Although the weekly report did not include yield estimates, one official conceded privately that it did raise the possibility that a further reduction in 1981 Soviet harvest prospects may be in order if the situation fails to improve quickly.

Three weeks ago, the Agriculture Department estimated this year's Soviet grain harvest at 200 million metric tons, a reduction of 10 million from indications a month earlier. The reduction was entirely due to reduced prospects for spring-planted grain.

Moreover, officials said then, the current estimate of 200 million tons could be as much as 20 million tons less if poor weather continues.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of wheat or 39.4 bushels of corn.

The department is scheduled to issue a new estimate of 1981 Soviet grain production on Aug. 12.

Meanwhile, the weekly report said "hot, dry weather stressed spring-planted crops in southern and eastern European U.S.S.R." the past week, including damage to corn.

"In the middle and upper Volga Valley and the southern Urals, the hot, dry weather probably hurt late filling (grain development) of spring wheat and barley," it said. "Conditions in the southern Urals and western Kazakhstan may have been hot enough to damage nearly-mature grains."

However, in the New Lands region, beneficial rains were reported.

Last week, the facility reported that drier weather resulted in a "dramatically improved" harvest in the Ukraine, the Soviet Union's main breadbasket.

However, the heat damage to spring-planted crops will be watched carefully by Western observers. Most of the Soviet Union's total grain comes from those crops.

For example, based on estimates earlier this month, the Soviet winter grain harvest is expected to total 70 million metric tons, compared with the harvest of spring-planted grain of 130 million.

Exotic Ag Exports May Help Foreign Sales

By DON KENDALL AP
Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Want to sell some dried bear gall? A buyer in Japan is interested. For earthworms, try Italy.

The latest weekly report by the Export Trade Services Division of the Foreign Agriculture Service, an agency of the Agriculture Department, lists dozens of items prospective foreign buyers are asking about. It part of a referral service in the department's program to boost exports.

For example, the current report also lists an inquiry from a party in the Netherlands who wants some "peeled squash seeds" in 50-pound bags, one from Spain about "a large variety of vegetable seeds" and a query from Egypt about getting 10,000 metric tons of horsebeans.

Also, an importer in South Africa wants 15 to 30 metric tons a month of butter that "must be rancid" and for delivery as soon as possible.

One in Italy "wants live earthworm adults for reproduction" in a large-scale worm farm enterprise.

The brief item about bear gall said only that a Japanese importer wants 100 kilograms (about 220 pounds) a year. The gall, it said, "must be completely dried" and packed in cans for air shipment.

Most of the trade inquiries are much less exotic than bear gall and earthworms, however. And, in some cases, the listings indicate consumers in some countries are developing demands for U.S.-style livestock and poultry or ways to produce them.

The current report, for example, includes inquiries from:

-New Zealand, regarding meat and bone meal, dehydrated alfalfa, corn gluten, cottonseed meal, feather meal and other high-protein meal for making livestock feed.

Despite Uproar Malathion Safe

COLLEGE STATION - Despite the public uproar in California about use of the insecticide malathion to control Mediterranean fruit flies, the material has a proven track record of being safe and free of health hazards.

"Malathion has been with us a long time - since the early 1950s and is one of the most commonly used insecticides by farmers, homeowners and gardeners," points out Dr. Phil Hamman, entomologist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. Hamman said he has been inundated with telephone calls since the California controversy from people wanting to know about the safety of malathion.

Tests sponsored by the National Cancer Institute have shown malathion to be both non-carcinogenic (not causing cancer) and non-mutagenic (not causing genetic changes.)

According to Dr. Bill Plapp, research toxicologist with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, malathion is one of the least dangerous insecticides in use today.

"Malathion is routinely used by many homeowners and gardeners to control insects and mites on trees, shrubs, houseplants, flowers and vegetables. It is also used to control external parasites on pets," said Hamman.

Field Day Sept. 8

LUBBOCK - Research on potential new money crops, as well as on cotton, and scientific developments to help High Plains farmers cope with weeds, insects and weather will be demonstrated Sept. 8 at the 72nd annual field day of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at Lubbock and Halfway.

The Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center just north of Lubbock International Airport is the host this year, said Dr. Bill Ott, resident director of the station. The annual program alternates between the facilities here and at Halfway, in cooperation with the High Plains Research Foundation.

Five major displays are

In addition, he explains that malathion is used widely to control many different insect pests of crops. For instance, it has been used in large area control programs for boll weevils and grasshoppers in West Texas.

Another major use of malathion in Texas has been for mosquito control programs, points out the entomologist. "Malathion is used almost exclusively to rid urban and suburban areas of disease-carrying mosquitoes," says Hamman.

"In 1966-67 and again in 1971, vast areas of Texas, including major cities such as Dallas, Houston and Corpus Christi, were aerially sprayed with malathion to control outbreaks of St. Louis encephalitis and Venezuelan equine encephalomyelitis, diseases spread by mosquitoes."

The entomologist points out that in all of these uses of malathion, there has been no record of problems involving human health.

Of course, Hamman cautions users of malathion as well as other insecticides to follow common sense precautions for safe and effective results. This means following directions on the product label, avoiding any unnecessary contact with the insecticide, and washing your hands after use. He also suggests scrubbing sprayed fruits or vegetables before cooking or eating.

Holly Reports Earnings

COLORADO SPRINGS - Holly Sugar Corporation this week reported earnings of $2,941,000 or $1.86 per common share, on sales of $70,166,000 for the first quarter ending June 30.

This compares with earnings of $2,039,000 or $1.29 per common share, on sales of $58,776,000 for the comparable period last year.

Provision for federal and state income taxes is $2,647,000 compared with $2,160,000 for last year's first quarter.

President John B. Bunker attributed the improved earnings to higher refined sugar selling prices and greater volume compared to the same period last year. Current refined sugar selling prices are somewhat below market prices of the previous quarter, Bunker explained. He said that favorable prices have continued to make sugar beets a profitable crop for Holly's growers and that adequate acreage has been contracted in Holly's sugar beet growing areas.

"This positions Holly well for the coming processing season, since optimum factory operations depend on the availability of a proper supply of sugar beets," Bunker reported.

Bunker said that Holly's two Northern California facories set records during their spring campaigns in the amount of sugar beets sliced per day and in daily sugar production.

"These records reflect the aggressive plant operating and improvements programs begun several years ago, which have kept Holly's productivity high. We are confident that these programs will continue to yield benefits in future years as well," Bunker said.

Local Program Presents

Control With Roundup

By JULIE SMILEY
Farm Editor

Local farmers and family met Tuesday evening in the Hereford Community Center for a meal, and a program explaining the use of Roundup herbicide to control rhizome johnsongrass and bindweed.

The program and meal, sponsored by Monsanto and Hereford Grain, was presented by Dave Baumgardner. About 300 attended the fish and chicken catered meal.

Baumgardner explained the three types of applications of Roundup, and the advantages of each method. He said broadcast, spot and ropewick applications are used, however, broadcast will give the best results in controlling johnsongrass.

He recommended broadcasting when all rhizome johnsongrass plants are in the boot to head stage, using two quarts Roundup mixed with the label-specified amount of water per acre.

Spot application is used the most locally, and he said it was a good control method for johnsongrass in cotton. Killing the weed around the edges of a field before it enters a field will pay off, and he recommended a 1.5 percent solution for spot spraying.

He reminded producers that there is no such thing as a "good slow kill in johnsongrass." Users should follow recommended rates on the label of the product.

Ropewick application is not as thorough, according to Baumgardner, however, it will give a 70 to 80 percent control if administered properly.

He recommended slowing down to two to three miles per hour when applying the product, and making two passes through the field from opposite directions in the same day for best control.

He said Roundup gives best results when application covers leaves of the johnsongrass uniformly, and spraying when the weed has six to 10 inches of growth.

Bindweed is very competitive with wheat and can cause up to 30 percent wheat reduction in a field, according to Baumgardner.

Producers should wait until after Sept. 15 and before the first frost to apply Roundup. He said the weed must be actively growing before the best kill can be obtained.

Baumgardner reminded farmers that bindweed will not turn brown like johnsongrass after a treatment.

He said Roundup has no soil activity and users can wait seven days after an application, and plant wheat without fear of harming their crop.

FARM NEWS AG NOTES

Farmers and business people will honor Commissioner Reagan Brown with an appreciation dinner of homegrown food and homemade ice cream Thursday, at 7:30 p.m. in the Castro County Expo Building, Dimmitt.

The dinner is $5 per person and open to the public. Tickets can be purchased at the door.

Along with entertainment by the Flatland Bluegrass Boys, Brown will speak, and an update on the proposed lawsuit by local farmers suing the federal government will be given by Carl King, president Texas Corn Growers Association.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A midyear report shows the nation's inventory of cattle and calves at 125 million head, up 2 percent from 123.1 million a year ago.

The Agriculture Department report, released Monday, also showed the nation's cattle herd up 6 percent from 118.4 million head, on July 1, 1979.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says the Soviet Union has bought an additional 200,000 metric tons of U.S. corn for delivery in 1981-82.

Officials said Tuesday the latest purchases raised to 1.05 million metric tons the amount of corn the Soviets have ordered for the marketing year that will begin on Oct. 1.

The Soviet Union began buying corn last week, the first U.S. grain since President Reagan lifted the partial sales embargo on April 24.

For the current marketing year, the Soviets bought 8 million metric tons of U.S. corn and wheat, the maximum allowed while the embargo was in effect.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat.

Stricter Quarantine Needed

WACO - The Texas Farm Bureau has asked the federal government to strengthen the quarantine on fruits and vegetables from the Mediterranean fruit fly-infested quarantine area of northern California.

"The spray area should be expanded to include a one-and-a-half mile buffer zone around all areas in which medflies have been found," TFB President Carroll Chaloupka said in a telegram to President Reagan.

The Texas farm leader also told the President: "We are in complete agreement with your decision to deny the request of California Governor

Jerry Brown Jr. to declare fruit fly-infested areas a federal disaster area.

"We believe that the California governor has contributed to the spread of the fruit fly. We feel his actions have jeopardized an important part of the nation's food supply. In our opinion, he and the misguided so-called environmentalists of his state have permitted the spread of the infestation through their inaction."

"Governor Brown was told by competent authorities a year ago that the then small outbreak could be eliminated through three simple steps: stripping of trees and ground spraying, introducing sterile flies, and most important, permitting aerial spraying of the common garden pesticide, malathion. This is how we quickly and successfully rid the Rio Grande Valley of Texas of the dreaded pest in 1967.

"Yet, the Governor refused to use the safe aerial spraying, electing instead to mobilize an army of workers on the ground in a futile, $23 million effort to eliminate the pest. According to officials of the American Farm Bureau Federation, the medfly could have been eradicated in 1980 with an effective spray program at a cost of only $128,000."

Bentsen Tells Reagan: Sell CCC Corn to Poland

WASHINGTON - Senator Lloyd Bentsen July 21, said any U.S. corn sold to Poland should come from Commodity Credit Corporation inventories in the Texas Panhandle.

Bentsen made his views known in a letter to President Reagan. "The Polish government has stated that they will require some 15 million bushels of feed grains this fall in order to avoid having to slaughter their poultry flocks."

"You may recall that, due to the Russian grain embargo, the Commodity Credit Corporation purchased major quantities of corn which were to have been exported from the Midwest to Russia. Much of this corn is now stored in the Texas Panhandle area, where it overhangs the local grain markets even though CCC has designated 25 million bushels of it for the Disaster Reserve," Bentsen said.

"This corn was to have been sold to Russia, but these sales were blocked as a protest against the brutal invasion and occupation of Afghanistan. We are now being asked to provide grain badly needed by Poland, a country which has been under Russian domination since 1945."

COPE WITH LIFE

By Bob Wear

TO COPE IS "to maintain a contest or combat on even terms or with success; to overcome problems and difficulties." A friend told me the other day that he had just about run out of "cope." Of course, none of us can afford to do this.

THERE ARE PROBLEMS and difficulties, even after we do our best to prevent them. Yes, some can be prevented; but there are some with which we must be concerned. They are real, and part of the reality which involves us. Unless we have foolishly compounded our problems and troubles, we can "cope" with them. If perchance we have made them unnecessarily numerous and difficult, we can find appropriate assistance.

The Abundant Life

WE CAN COPE with life, and this is the fact to remember. We can find satisfactory ways to deal with our problems and difficulties. We may not be able to do so as quickly as we wish, but this must not be permitted to discourage us. In time, with the right kind of effort and perseverance, and sometimes with help from others; we can make satisfactory progress.

EACH VICTORY will give both additional strength and personal courage for more victories. Patient endurance, with knowledge and discernment will bring the victory. Many persons fail to "cope" with life, because they quit trying. They just give up, and this is most certainly not the spirit that brings us to a suitable level of "loving life and seeing good days."

"THE CONDITIONS OF CONQUEST are always easy. We have but to toil awhile, endure awhile, believe always, and never turn back."—Simms. Living by this formula, within the structure of available truth and wisdom, has proven successful time and time again. Many of the problems which the quitters permitted to overcome them are being overcome each day by the persons who remain steadfast within the bounds of the best available guiding light.

WE DO NOT LOSE, unless we give up. This means that we have a choice, and everybody has about the same choice to make. It may appear easier for some to "cope" with life than it is for others; and it may be so. Nevertheless, the point is that we can "cope"; however, we never really know how difficult it is for those who succeed.

WE MUST NEVER STOP trying, even though the last mile of the way. We may lose some of the battles, but we will win the war. Yes, we can "Cope With Life."

HEALTH
Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.
Runners' hematuria

DEAR DR. LAMB - I am a 25-year-old male and weigh 150 pounds. I began an exercise program this summer, mostly jogging. After building myself up to five miles at a time, twice a week, I experienced a clear red color in my urine. Later it turned darker and after two hours my urine returned to its normal color. I did not experience any pain, weakness or other discomfort and do not have any history of bladder or kidney infection. Since then I have stopped jogging and it has not recurred. Some time ago I read that this was common in people who are very active physically. I would like to know more about this, what it is and its effects.

DEAR READER - All of us would like to know a lot more about it than we do. I presume you are describing bloody urine, sometimes called runners' hematuria. This is not as common as your letter indicates, but it is not exactly rare either. The blood can come from several different locations from the kidneys to the penis. Many think it comes from the bladder and that the bladder is damaged or bruised from the mechanical actions that occur during running. This is the basis for some recommendations that you run with your bladder slightly full and just the opposite recommendation that you run with your bladder empty. I favor keeping some urine in the bladder to cushion mechanical effects.

You, and anyone else who has such a finding, should have a thorough examination to see where the bleeding is coming from. In some cases there is an underlying medical problem. Often the condition occurs without any symptoms, as in your case.

DEAR DR. LAMB - Recently I heard that the latest treatment for fibrocystic mastitis is vitamin E. Also the intake of caffeine in colas, coffee, tea and chocolate should be nil. I have had two nodules removed from the same area and now have another. Should I have surgery for a third time? What is the truth about these statements and fibrocystic mastitis?

DEAR READER - Any woman who has a lump in the breast should have it examined by a physician and follow his guidance, based on the characteristics of the lump.
Having given this warning I would add that if your physician feels that the lump is just fibrocystic disease and is sure it is not a malignancy, then you should certainly give yourself the opportunity to benefit by improving your life style. There are good studies that show that when the problem is fibrocystic disease and not cancer that a high percentage of women have regression of the lumps and cysts if they stop caffeine as you mentioned and also if they stop smoking cigarettes. Vitamin E shows promise, too, but needs further study to evaluate its use. But no woman should limit her treatment to such a self-help effort without a physician's examination and concurrence.

DEAR DR. LAMB - Just recently I was told I have a rectocele. This is a small protrusion in the vaginal area.

Is this very rare? I am a little on the stout side. Is sex permissible with this? I am a married woman with several children and I am ashamed to ask my doctor.

DEAR READER - Your question is a natural one to ask your doctor. It's unfortunate that you feel embarrassed discussing this with him. He would be surprised if you were not having sex.

A rectocele is a rupture. The vaginal canal is a muscular tube and there is a muscular wall between the vagina and the rectum. Mostly through the stretching effects of childbirth, this muscular wall is stretched and weakened. In the course of time this allows the muscle fibers to separate and the rectal tube to rupture through the weakened wall.

Like other similar ruptures, it is intermittent. When you are lying down the abdominal contents fall back against the spine. When you stand or sit up they press down against your pelvis. So the hernia tends to occur when you are sitting or standing and not when you are lying down as in bed. Sex should be no problem.

The hernia will pop out also when you increase the intra-abdominal pressure as in straining. That is why poor bowel habits increase the chances of the hernia occurring.

A prolapsed uterus and a cystocele are also hernias caused by a weakened vaginal wall. When they are mild they don't cause any serious problem. But if they cause a lot of protrusion or symptoms, it is often necessary to surgically repair the weakened wall and other structures. No, none of these is a rare condition.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I have a real problem. I am only 5 feet 5 and I'm 18 years old. I would give anything to be about 6 feet 2. I'm praying to God every night to make me taller. There must be some kind of operation or drug that could help. It's really terrible because all the girls are taller than I. I'm always insecure when I go out. I don't think I could go through life this short. Don't suggest counseling because I have already gone through that. It helped for a while but now I am in the same boat.

DEAR READER - X-rays that show your bone age help in determining if there is still any chance of increased growth. Once the zone of cartilage at the ends of the leg bones have calcified, growth stops.

Despite your comments, I am going to advise counseling. You are not nearly as short as many others and as you know, there are many girls who are 5 feet 5 or shorter. Your reaction to being short is extreme and out of proportion to the degree of your problem. I do wish there were a way to increase your growth but at your age it is unlikely. Even if it were possible, most physicians would not be inclined to tamper with things in someone who has attained as much height as you have.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I'm a 38-year-old male who jogs and exercises regularly. My doctor tells me I'm an excitable person and a worrier. At times I hear a very loud heartbeat in my chest. It is not irregular or rapid. It scares me. I'd appreciate your comment. My doctor also says I am experiencing something similar to a midlife crisis. What does that mean?

DEAR READER - Evidently your doctor thinks you are having some anxiety. Being reassured that you do not have heart disease should help alleviate your anxiety to some extent. Your ability to exercise should also be reassuring. Incidentally, sensible exercise is a good antidote to anxiety. A good walk or jog does wonders for some people.

I'm not so impressed with the term "midlife crisis." A person can get anxious or even depressed at any age. It is true that people often have a variety of stresses at midlife, including concern about their health. The latter is a good sign if used constructively to improve one's life style. Developing new goals, along with the realization that you are still young enough to accomplish them, helps a great deal.

POLLY'S PROBLEM

DEAR POLLY - We sprayed a popular brand of household cleaner on a mirror, but didn't wipe it off immediately. It left marks on the mirror. Any suggestions on how to get them off? - N.

DEAR N. - Try washing that mirror with full-strength white vinegar. That should cut through the dried cleaner. Actually, vinegar or vinegar and water is one of the finest glass cleaners you can use. It will polish up your mirror shiny-bright. - POLLY

DEAR POLLY - Here are some Pointers that I hope will help some of your readers.

Gloxinia or African violet leaves may be rooted by putting the stem through an empty spoon and floating in a glass of water.

Rose bush slips will take root if you stick the stem in a white potato.

To catch mice, place a gaudy drop in the trap. When the mouse eats the gaudy drop, his teeth will get stuck and cause the trap to go off. - MRS. D.J.

DEAR POLLY - I have a suggestion for making cheeseburgers without the mess and work of making the patties. Fry the hamburger in a skillet and drain. For flavor add a couple of tablespoons of steak sauce and ketchup. Spread shredded cheddar cheese evenly over the hamburger and cover until the cheese is melted. Then just scoop up onto a regular hamburger bun. - L.J.W.
