Lottery kicks off Friday

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

The wait is almost over. In less than 24 hours, you will be able to buy a lottery ticket in Texas. Texas joins over 30 other states Friday in conducting a lottery. Texas is unique: the lottery here will go to the general fund. In many other states, lottery profits are pledged to schools or highways and are often a bone of contention.

State officials know the lottery won't be a cure-all. Even if the lottery sells $1 million worth of tickets a day, the state's general fund would reap only $400,000 a day. (Lottery expenses will come from another 10 percent cut from proceeds.) Lottery sales may boom early on, but there will be a drop after the first few months. The lottery won't cure any big state financial needs.

The lottery, though, will be fun for at least a while. Several Deaf Smith County merchants will be trying to grab your attention, and a part of each dollar you spend on tickets.

"We're selling them because it really sounded interesting," said Sam Sossaman of Sam's. "I think it will help everyone concerned. In the town of Hereford we need something going on."

Sossaman said the lottery may bring increased traffic, but she is reserved about the lottery being a panacea.

"I'm kind of skeptical about it, but I hope we do well with the lottery," she said. "I hope everybody participates in it. I really don't know, I don't have any feel for how it may go over."

All signs point to lottery

Signs like this are posted throughout Hereford proclaiming stores that will sell Texas Lottery tickets beginning Friday.

Lottery officials are pushing the new "Lone Star Millions" game very hard. Media packets have been mailed to papers large and small throughout the state. Fourteen kickoff parties will be held today throughout Texas (for our area, it will be at the Discovery Center in Amarillo, from 5 to 7 p.m.), and advertisements will be featured in papers, on television and on radio. About 14,790 retailers will be selling tickets Friday as early as 6 a.m. Most (47 percent) will be sold at convenience stores, with grocery stores accounting for another 16 percent.

Lottery Director Nora Linares solicited applications from all businesses in the state. They all had to undergo security checks, and many passed. "We have a half-dozen accounting firms, three tortilla factories, the Richardson Bus Station and Wash Pot Laundry in Gun Barrel City," she said. "We also have the Big Fat Rabbit Amusement Club of Beaumont and First State Bank in Temple."

Linares said there is no cut off for businesses that want to sell lottery tickets. Mrs. Sossaman said no one is likely to get rich, though, from selling tickets.

"I know it's a lot of work," Sossaman said. "It's time consuming. It just adds to what you've got. No more than what you get, I don't know if it will be worth it, but everybody has doubts about something new."

"If everybody can pick up additional business, okay, but five percent isn't much money. You'll have to sell a lot of tickets."

Lottery officials figure to sell about $17 million worth on Friday. They've been right on with everything they've done. In fact, Battelle Memorial Institute (yes, the same folks who were here as an independent contractor on the nuclear waste dump) said the Texas process for the lottery, directed by Linares and State Comptroller John Sharp, was "superior to any we have seen in our experience base of more than a dozen large lottery procurements."

Study shows kids still like TV, not books

WASHINGTON (AP) - Students seem to be spending less time in front of the TV set at home but about the same amount of time hitting the books, an Education Department study said today.

And those who watched less TV had better reading proficiency, according to the National Assessment of Educational Progress, popularly known as the Nation's Report Card.

Despite the general reduction in TV-watching, the amount of viewing still was considerable:

- Sixty-two percent of the fourth graders surveyed said they spent more than three hours a day in front of the tube in 1990. That was down from 69 percent who watched three or more hours daily in 1988.

- Sixty-four percent of the 8th graders reported watching more than three hours daily, as did 40 percent of 12th graders. That was down from 71 percent and 49 percent, respectively, in 1988.

As for reading:

- Sixty-three percent of the eighth graders and 59 percent of the 12th graders said they read 10 or fewer pages each day for their school work in 1990, compared with 62 percent and 56 percent, respectively, in 1988. One-third of eighth and 12th graders read fewer than five pages a day for school in 1990.

- Thirty-four percent of fourth graders spent 30 minutes or less daily on homework, the same as in 1988. Twenty percent of eighth graders did 30 minutes or less in 1990, compared with 19 percent in 1988. Twenty-one percent of 12th graders reported that level of homework in 1990; 19 percent in 1988.

President Bush called the figures troubling and said they show "we've got a long way to go" to meet his goals of making American students the world's best in math and science by the end of the century.

The report said schools have been slow to implement reforms in teaching children to read.

The report found that in homes where there were ample reading materials and where the parents read a lot, their children performed significantly better than other students.

The report was prepared by the Educational Testing Service under contract with the department's National Center for Education Statistics, did not draw any conclusions about TV's impact on learning.

There was a solid increase in the amount of leisure reading. In 1988, 19 percent of the eighth graders and 18 percent of the seniors reported not reading for fun in their spare time. However, in 1990 the percentages increased to 30 percent and 29 percent.

The report results were based on studies of about 13,000 students in 1988 and 25,000 students in 1990 in grades four, eight and 12 at public and private schools. Students' average reading performance was rated on a scale of zero to 500.

In 1990, the national average reading proficiency was 233 for the fourth grade, 230 in 1988; 261 for eighth grade, compared with 263 in 1988; and 289 for high school seniors, compared with 287 two years earlier.

The Nation's Report Card is a congressionally mandated project that measures student abilities in a variety of subjects.

The report found that in homes with ample reading materials (magazines, books) and where the parents read a lot, their children performed significantly better than other students, the new study proved.

Top CEOs support Bush

NEW YORK (AP) - Most of Ross Perot's counterparts in the boardrooms of America's biggest businesses would vote for President Bush, Fortune magazine said in a poll.

The twice-monthly business glossy said the poll in its June 15 issue, on newsstands Monday, covered a representative sampling of chief executives from both the Fortune 500 industrial companies and Fortune 500 service companies.

The results, released Wednesday, showed 11 percent of respondents would vote for Perot, 78 percent for Bush and 4 percent for Bill Clinton, while the rest were undecided. Forty-four percent said they believed Perot had a serious shot at winning.

In addition, the poll showed 30 percent of respondents had done business with Perot, and of those, three-fifths liked the experience. But many also said Perot's demeanor in dealing with other corporate executives didn't necessarily translate into a political attribute.

"I don't think his slam-bang style would serve the country well from the President's office," Fortune quoted one respondent, Edward B. Brandon, chairman of National City Corp. of Ohio, as saying. "He would make a super benevolent dictator, but that's not our system."

Perot is a scrappy self-made Texas multimillionaire investor, philanthropist and founder of the Electronic Data Systems business sold to General Motors Corp. in 1984.

CEOs support Bush for re-election, not their peer, Perot

He has been an unofficial independent presidential candidate in a campaign that has captured national attention and harnessed anti-incumbent hostility among many voters. A number of recent polls have suggested a plurality of Americans would elect Perot for president.

Perot has insisted he won't officially proclaim himself in the race until he sees whether supporters will put him on the ballot in nearly all 50 states.

On Tuesday, Perot announced plans to relinquish his positions as chairman and chief executive of his

A sampling of the chief executive officers of the top companies in the nation by Fortune Magazine showed:

- 78 percent favor Bush for re-election.
- 11 percent would vote for Perot.
- 4 percent would vote for Clinton.

small computer-services company, Perot Systems, to another executive, Morton H. Meyerson. But Perot said the move wasn't meant to clear the way for him to officially run for president.

Fifty-two percent of the Fortune poll respondents said Perot's biggest weakness is a lack of experience, which could alienate other lawmakers.

"A dogmatic CEO like Perot would have difficulty functioning in Washington unless he could destroy Congress," the magazine quoted H&R Block Chairman Henry Bloch as saying.

The Fortune poll was conducted via telephone between May 18 and May 21 by Clark Martire & Bartolomeo, a polling concern in Englewood Cliffs, N.J. Fortune said of 450 CEOs contacted, 115 responded. The magazine didn't provide a margin of error and said respondents were guaranteed anonymity if they wanted it.

In a related story in the June 1 issue on where Perot puts his estimated $3.3 billion, Fortune said nearly 80 percent of it is tied up in U.S. Treasury bills, corporate and triple-A rated municipal bonds and cash.

Of the remainder, Fortune said $350 million is invested in Dallas, Atlanta and Kansas City real estate; $200 million represents his ownership stake in Perot Systems; $75 million is in a range of personal possessions ranging from Cigarette boats to Tennessee walking horses; $22 million is in small-company investments, $20 million is his 20 percent stake in the Next Inc. computer maker; and $15 million is in oil and gas properties.

Fortune spokeswoman Emma Dockendorff said the breakdown was derived from published information, independent appraisals of asset values and Fortune's own research. She said the magazine uses the same strategy to assess the wealth of all the entries in Fortune's annual billionaires list.

In the most recently published list, of September 1991, Fortune said Perot was worth $3 billion.

Jobless claims drop across US

WASHINGTON (AP) - The number of Americans filing new applications for unemployment benefits in mid-May unexpectedly fell to the lowest level in more than seven months, the government said today.

Initial jobless claims declined by 4,000 to 403,000 during the week ending May 16, the fewest since early October. However, the previous week's total was revised up slightly to 407,000 from the 406,000 first reported.

The latest drop came despite 1,400 claims in California attributed to the riots earlier this month. In advance, most economists were looking for an increase of about 4,000 claims nationally rather than a drop.

The most recent report marks the sixth time in the past eight weeks that claims have either fallen or held steady. The downward trend is reassuring economists that the recovery from recession is progressing and is not fizzling as it did at this time last year.

However, most analysts expect this recovery to be slower than most during the post World War II period and are not looking for an appreciable reduction in the nation's unemployment rate, 7.2 percent in April, until next year.

Economists caution that the claims report can be extremely volatile and look instead to a moving four-week average to discern trends. The average was 412,500 during the latest four weeks, down from 412,750 during the period ended the week before. It had hovered around the 450,000 mark during the first three months of the year.

Despite riot-related job losses, California had the biggest drop in new claims of any state, 4,992. State officials attributed the decline to an increase in farm hiring. California was followed by Ohio, which reported 4,563 fewer claims, and New York, with 3,010 fewer claims.

States with the biggest increases were Missouri, 1,505; North Carolina, 1,364 and Virginia, 1,256. Missouri and North Carolina listed layoffs in construction as among the contributors to the rise. Virginia cited problems in the textile and food processing industries.

The national numbers are adjusted for seasonal variation, but the state numbers are not.

Airlines price war favors consumer

Fare cuts escalate in attempt to lure travelers

NEW YORK (AP) - An attempt by Northwest Airlines to lure family travelers with a two-for-one ticket scale escalated into a fare skirmish as American Airlines responded by cutting its cheapest fares in half.

Rivals including Delta Air Lines, United Airlines and USAir said Wednesday evening they would match the discounts, although the cheaper fares for travel in the lower 48 states are expected to cost the airlines a bundle of money.

Northwest, too, decided to match the broader sale begun by American. "You're really getting down into the bone and the gristle with these kinds of fares," Delta spokesman Neil Monroe said.

American West and Continental had both matched Northwest's plan but said Wednesday evening they were still studying American's move.

Trans World Airlines had no immediate comment.

When Northwest launched its fare sale Tuesday night, it put American in a position of either backing off its new, simplified fare structure by matching Northwest's two-for-one discount or finding another way to remain competitive.

American didn't want to tamper with its highly-publicized simplified fare structure, which contains just four types of tickets. After studying Northwest's move Wednesday, American decided to chop its discount fares in half, cutting, for example, the round-trip price of a Chicago-Miami trip from $290 to $145.

That made American's cheapest fares competitive while keeping the four-tier fare structure in place.

American's fare sale, which runs through June 5, requires a seven-day advance purchase but offers fares half the cost of the regular 14-day advance purchase, the carrier's lowest regular fare. The tickets require a Saturday night stay and are non-refundable, although they can be changed for a $25 fee.

"While some of our competitors have announced a promotion in which one family member can fly free with the purchase of a ticket at full price, we are offering all of our leisure customers a much better value and much more flexibility," said Michael W. Gunn, American's senior vice president for marketing.

Rivals already worried about losing money because of the Northwest sale are now bracing for even bigger losses.

"It will definitely be worse,"

Delta's spokesman said. "There's no question."

Northwest launched its sale Tuesday evening, saying it was merely trying to get more families to take vacations this summer. The deal let an adult and a child fly together for the same price as one ticket.

Before American had made its response, Northwest's president and chief executive, John Dasburg, said Wednesday afternoon that he had launched the two-for-one sale because fares have gone up for leisure travelers, discouraging many families from taking summer vacations by air.

"It was clear fares last summer were lower than the fares this summer," Dasburg said in a telephone interview. "It seemed to us we needed to stimulate some demand and get some people excited about taking vacations with their kids."

"There's no hidden motive here directed toward either the much-ballyhooed, so-called simple price structure or any of that business," Dasburg said. "That would be silly. We don't have the time and the energy to do that, and that isn't productive."

American's simplified fare system, announced April 9, was intended to drum up more business by cutting the price of first-class and full-coach tickets, while limiting the number of discount tickets.

The American plan has been costing airlines millions of dollars as they refund money to passengers who had bought more expensive tickets and then sell new tickets to first-class and business travelers for cheaper prices.

But although American says the plan has been increasing its overall bookings, other airlines and travel agents say they have seen no increase.

Although American's fare sale negates the Northwest sale in terms of price, Northwest said Wednesday night it still planned to take extra steps to market its services toward families.

Dasburg said the carrier would even do some advertising on children's television shows, with hopes that the youngsters could pressure parents into flying, just as they now try to get adults to buy them cereal brands that contain "free" prizes.

Novelty business rises with Perot

DALLAS (AP) - Time was when businessman Bill Gorman was delighted just to gross $100,000 a year selling bumper stickers, bumper stickers and T-shirts. Then came Ross Perot's presidential campaign and all that changed.

"There's no doubt it will be millions this year," said Gorman with undisguised glee. "I am going to make some money off Ross Perot."

Gorman is one of an expanding number of entrepreneurs who have picked up on the Perot phenomenon and are now splashing the campaign with a full line of colorful trappings.

From T-shirts for toddlers to bumper stickers and buttons - you name it, they've got it.

And the growing support for the Dallas billionaire's still-undeclared race for the White House has made the good times roll for the button and bumper sticker business. "I'm doing so good I can't stand it," chortled Gorman.

The Dallas headquarters of Perot's national petition-gathering campaign has no financial stake in the burgeoning industry. But it encourages anyone interested to go right ahead.

"Just spell the name right," says Perot spokeswoman Sharon Holman.

Perot, a walking symbol of capitalism who has made a billion dollars for himself in his lifetime, is expected to announce his independent presidential campaign next month. He is already on the ballot in eight states and some recent nationwide polls have showed him favored over President Bush and Democrat Bill Clinton.

Sandy Hannington of Ojai, Calif., said the number of 50-cent bumper stickers sold at her small offset print shop, Printworks, attests to Perot's popularity in that community of 7,000.

"We've been so crazy that we work from about six or seven in the morning to six or seven at night and sometimes on the weekends," Mrs.

Hannington said. "I've never seen anything like this before."

She said the shop has sold about 2,000 stickers since becoming the area's Perot petition headquarters two months ago. Printworks also sells Perot T-shirts produced by a local artist.

"People have been eating them up," she said. "I never dreamed there would be such a response."

Mrs. Hannington, 40, may be making a buck off Perot, but she'd also like to see him in the White House.

"I've never been politically involved in my life," she said. "It's just a fun thing to be doing."

Rik and Natalie McCoy, who sell T-shirts, buttons and stickers in the corner of a Dallas shopping center parking lot, say they're crazy about Perot.

And they don't mind making money while spreading the word. For $12, they will sell you a Ross for Boss T-shirt and for $5 more a Perot cap. Eight dollars buys a toddler shirt that says, "For My Sake, Vote Perot."

"There's a tremendous demand for it," said Rik McCoy, who added he has sold $5,000 worth of merchandise over the past three weeks. "We make a little money, but ultimately he's the victor. The publicity is great."

Allied Marketing Associates of Wellesley, Mass., near Boston, has had its business boosted by the Perot headquarters there.

"It's always good to get the extra business out of the clear blue sky," said owner Jim Lourie. "It has helped us."

Despite the current demand for Perot products, the merchants know the fervor may not last long, so they're cashing in now.

"The field is already there," Gorman said. "All we have to do is go out and harvest it."

Quality of U.S. autos near Japanese make

DETROIT (AP) - Japanese automakers still have the edge when it comes to quality, but their U.S. competitors are narrowing the gap, a survey found.

The customer-satisfaction survey by J.D. Power and Associates is closely watched by automakers, who trumpet favorable results in their advertisements.

The study, released Wednesday, found that luxury Infiniti and Lexus cars and a range of Toyota trucks, all Japanese, generated the fewest complaints during their first 90 days of ownership.

The survey was based on responses from more than 44,000 people who bought 1992 cars and trucks. Overall, problems reported were at their lowest level since the survey began in 1987.

Domestic models had 136 complaints per 100 cars during the 1992 model year. That's an 8 percent improvement over the 1991 model year, when 148 problems were reported per 100 vehicles.

Japanese makes improved 6 percent to 105 complaints per 100 cars, from 112 complaints per 100 cars in 1991. European models improved 3 percent to 158 complaints per 100 cars, compared with 154 per 100 in 1991.

Infiniti was ranked as the best import brand and the Saturn subsidiary of General Motors Corp. topped all domestic car makes. Audi was the top European brand.

The top car brands and their number of initial quality complaints among 100 vehicles were: Infiniti, 70; Lexus, 73; Toyota, 85; Honda, 105; Nissan, 108; Saturn, 109; Lincoln 114; Acura, 115; Oldsmobile, 121; Subaru, 122; Audi and Buick, 124 each.

The industry average was 125 complaints per 100 cars.

Carmakers below that were BMW, Cadillac, Chevrolet, Chrysler, Daihatsu, Dodge, Eagle, Ford, Geo, Hyundai, Jaguar, Mazda, Mercedes-Benz, Mercury, Mitsubishi, Plymouth, Pontiac, Saab, Suzuki, Volkswagen and Volvo.

The industry average was 147 complaints per 100 trucks.

MILWAUKEE (AP) - Pool player Steve Mizerak, who parlayed his trick shots into TV commercials for Lite beer, has been fired by Miller Brewing Co. for making sexually suggestive remarks during a promotional appearance.

The Milwaukee Journal reported May 13 that Mizerak made sexually suggestive remarks to a female assistant.

Mizerak had worked with Miller for about a dozen years, demonstrating his pool prowess and appearing in advertisements.

The value of his endorsement agreement was not immediately known.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: Here's one for your pet peeves. Recently a magazine I subscribe to printed a short notice. It said that if I wanted my name removed from their mailing list (that they sell to other companies) I should write to them and ask them to do so.

Well, I feel very strongly that they are infringing on my right to privacy by putting my name on the list in the first place. I also believe they have no right to do that. Just because I order their magazine doesn't give them the right to give or sell my name and address to anyone else. — Barb Gath

Dear Heloise: Can you please tell me the address I need to write to so I can have my name removed from junk-mail lists?

Thank you. — Mrs. F. M. Baumchen, Dundee, Ore.

Here's the information for both of you. Mail your request to: Mail Preference Service, Direct Marketing Association, 11 West 42nd St., PO Box 3861, New York NY 10163-3861.

Include your full name as well as any variations (like Jane Smith, Mrs. James Smith, J. Smith, etc.)

The service is updated quarterly, so it may take a little while for your request to be processed. Please be patient. —

SHOWER TILE

Dear Heloise: I read in your column about wiping down the shower tile to prevent mildew.

I find that a squeegee works better than a cloth for this, and you don't have to keep wringing it dry. A quick wipe of the blade after each pass readies it for the next swipe. — Ed Tinknell, Longmeadow, Mass.

CLOTHESPIN BAG

Dear Heloise: A clothespin bag you no longer use for clothespins is great for hanging in your clothes closet to put gloves in. Either hang it on the rod or a hook. — Bertha Pike, Oshkosh, Neb.

Bulls need 1 more win to finish Cavs

CHICAGO (AP) - Michael Jordan knows numbers. The big ones he puts on the board and those that are ahead. "Six is the next number, and that's our next opportunity," Jordan said Wednesday night after he scored 37 points to lead the Chicago Bulls to a 112-89 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers and give them a 3-2 lead in the NBA Eastern Conference final. "We want to end it and move on," said Jordan. "Hopefully, this final period motivated us."

The Bulls can end the series with a victory in Game 6 at Richfield Coliseum. If a seventh game is needed, it will be played in Chicago Sunday night.

The Bulls were not looking that far ahead going into the fourth quarter when their nine-point lead had been trimmed to 73-71. Then a 15-0 run in a span of 5:40 put the game away for the defending champions.

A swarming defense, taking advantage of Cleveland's foul troubles, and scoring help from reserves Scott Williams, B.J. Armstrong and Cliff Levingston - each finishing with 12 points - completed the task.

"We had great defense in the fourth quarter," Jordan said. "We controlled everything. Cleveland became tentative because of foul trouble."

So much so that the Cavaliers did not score a field goal until Larry Nance hit with 3:41 to play, shortly before he fouled out along with John "Hot Rod" Williams.

"When your big guys are in foul trouble like that and you depend on them, it really hurts," Cleveland coach Lenny Wilkens said. "Brad (Daugherty) injured his hand early in the game and couldn't hold the ball."

Daugherty, the team's leading scorer in the playoffs with a 21.5 average, finished with five points. He injured the middle finger of his right hand in the first quarter and had it taped to his ring finger.

"We don't have a lot of adjustments to make," said Wilkens.

"Remember, we were in it all the way through the third quarter."

Unlike the first four games which were blowouts for the most part, there were seven lead changes and eight ties in a first half that found the Bulls on top 46-38.

The Bulls threatened to pull away several times in the third quarter, but three 3-pointers by Mark Price, who finished with 24 points, kept the Cavaliers within range.

Daugherty finally scored with 1:43 left in the third period and a three-point play by Danny Ferry cut what had been a nine-point lead to 73-71. The Cavaliers would get no closer, partly because Price missed most of the fourth quarter with a foot injury.

After Chicago's decisive run, the only excitement turned out to be Stacey King's flagrant foul against Ferry with 1:02 to play. King was ejected.

"I was going for the ball, there was nothing intentional," said King. "He just happened to be Danny Ferry."

Ferry said, "It didn't bother me. It probably looked a lot worse than it was."

Ferry earlier in the day was fined $5,000 for punching Jordan in Game 4 Monday.

Wilkens said he had "no thoughts" on the matter. But Chicago coach Phil Jackson said: "I was not upset with Stacey King. He played the ball. This team remembers what Danny Ferry did Monday afternoon."

Like Jordan, Jackson hopes the momentum from the fourth quarter carries over to Game 6.

"Our effort defensively was terrific, but our offense was out of sync," the coach said.

It was sporadic. Scottie Pippen finished with 14 points and 15 rebounds and Horace Grant had 13 points and 14 rebounds. Pippen has been hot and cold in the playoffs and Grant has not played up to expectations.

Oklahoma coach wins everywhere

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) - It has jokingly been hinted Oklahoma baseball coach Larry Cochell has trouble keeping a job. He's never been accused of failing to do the job.

Cochell will bring a third school to the College World Series, which begins Friday in Omaha's Rosenblatt Stadium. He previously coached Oral Roberts to Omaha in 1978 and brought two Fullerton State teams (1988 and 1990) to the CWS.

No one else has hit that level of multi-school success.

"I'm the Larry Brown of college baseball," Cochell said of his nomadic tendencies.

Brown is the successful college and professional basketball coach who has bounced from team to team, always finding a way to win.

"That's absolutely incredible," Florida State coach Mike Martin said of Cochell. "To me, that's one of the major accomplishments of coaching. How can anybody do that? To bring one school is tough enough, but three ... This day in college coaching, that is unbelievable."

Cochell said success is easy if you know what to do.

"No. 1, you really owe it to your players and coaches who get you there," he said. "The one thing I understand, I'm not the smartest guy in the world. I understand that the best way to win is surround yourself with quality people - assistant coaches and players. I've been lucky enough to do that."

The Sooners have been to six previous nationals, including a title trip in 1951. But no Oklahoma team has been to Omaha since 1976.

Oklahoma won the Big Eight Conference regular-season title but finished second to rival Oklahoma State in the post-season tournament. OU battled back through the Midwest Regional at Starkville, Miss., after an early loss to host Mississippi State to claim that tournament and earn the trip to Omaha.

Oklahoma (42-22) begins play in bracket two Saturday at 6:36 p.m. CDT against third-seeded Texas (46-15). That game follows No. 2 Wichita State (56-9) against No. 7 Pepperdine (44-11-1) at 12:06 p.m.

Friday's bracket one has No. 1 Miami (53-8) against No. 8 California (35-26) at 3:06 p.m. and No. 4 Fullerton State (42-15) against No. 5 Florida State (48-19) at 6:36 p.m.

All-District Whitefaces

These three Hereford baseball players made the All-District 1-4A squad. Junior outfielder Jake Head (left) made first team, and junior pitcher Sammy Casarez (middle) and sophomore outfielder Russ Watts made the second team.

Cornelius selected as all-star

Shantel Cornelius has been selected as a Track All-Star by the Texas Girls Coaches Association. She was selected as a shot putter after finishing second at the District 1-4A meet and fourth at the Region 1-4A meet.

The TGCA honors senior girls for each of the individual track events. All-Stars are chosen in two classifications: one from 5A and 4A schools and one from 3A, 2A and A schools.

There is no all-star track meet during the TGCA's annual summer coaching clinics in Arlington, but Cornelius and the other track all-stars will be honored at halftime of the TGCA All-Star Basketball Game July 10 in Arlington. Cornelius will play in the All-Star Volleyball Game July 11 in Haltom City.

Connors finished in France

PARIS (AP) - Now that he and John McEnroe have completed quick and possibly final exits from the French Open, Jimmy Connors is wondering what tennis is going to do without them.

After his draining five-set loss Wednesday to fourth-seeded Michael Stich, Connors, 39, said he's not sure the younger breed of champions can fill the void that he and McEnroe will leave.

"Nobody has really come out and taken the hand-off," Connors said at a crowded post-match news conference. "I mean, my time and McEnroe's time - we've had it. Isn't it time for somebody else to take over? I don't know if that's happening."

McEnroe, 33, lost his first-round match Tuesday and said afterwards he wouldn't be back for another French Open. Connors indicated he's leaning in the same direction.

Asked if he'd return, he replied, "Do I have to play?"

"I better take that one year at a time," he added. "But I will say that playing five sets on clay now, here, is very difficult for me. Maybe they will change my matches to two out of three sets."

Apart from the dramatic departures of Connors and McEnroe, the tournament has been marked by few surprises and by two mildly disruptive rain delays.

No. 6 seed Guy Forget, the hometown favorite, has been the only prominent casualty on the men's side, losing in straight sets Wednesday to Belgium's Bart Wuyts in the second round. All 16 of the seeded women have survived thus far, including five who've reached the third round.

There are plenty of younger powerhouses to succeed Connors and McEnroe, notably No. 1-ranked defending Jim Courier, 21. He was to face a tough clay-court player, Austria's Thomas Muster, in a center court match today.

Connors, who like McEnroe failed to win the title here despite repeated tries, said he wasn't impressed that Courier, like Michael Chang in 1989, had won the French Open at a young age.

"If they come in here and win it, good job," Connors said. "They have got another 10, 15 years to put on their career and to continue doing that, time after time after time, match after match after match. And that is what makes a career. Not a one shot here, a one shot there. And if they can stay around and do that for 10, 15 years, then they deserve everything they get."

Connors suggested that some young players were getting too much, too soon, without paying their dues.

"Basically, there's not as much of an emphasis on winning and being the absolute best anymore," he said.

"There is an overabundance of money in the game," he went on. "The only way to make a living when I first got in the game was to win ... which in turn got you a shoe deal or a racket deal or a clothing deal or a commercial - not the other way around. That wasn't made before you won."

Beyond won-lost records, he made clear his belief that the younger players lack charisma.

"Somebody in today's tennis is going to have to come out to the forefront with their tennis - project themselves in a way where they can take over now. And not only on the court, but also sitting here talking to you guys ... that gives you something to write about, outside of Connors and McEnroe."

Coles outduels Fernandez to give Belcher, Reds win

By JOHN KREISER
AP Sports Writer

Lou Piniella won his gamble. Darnell Coles won the battle. The Cincinnati Reds won the game.

Piniella, forced to revamp his starting rotation by Tuesday night's rainout in New York, opted to bypass Tom Browning and keep Tim Belcher on turn - even though Belcher had a 1-4 record and a 5.82 carper ERA against the Mets.

He was rewarded when Belcher pitched three-hit ball over 8 1-3 innings Wednesday night as the Reds beat the Mets 1-0, New York's third straight shutout loss at home.

"I have always tried to keep three of the five starters in complete rotation," Piniella said of his revamped rotation. "The big thing was pushing (Jose) Rijo to Sunday against San Francisco. There was no way I was going to pitch him against the Giants Saturday night.

"Now Browning will go in that spot. Belcher was outstanding, but give a lot of credit to Darnell Coles. He had a real professional at-bat, never lost his concentration and got a pitch to his liking for that big hit."

Coles won his own personal confrontation with Sid Fernandez (3-5) when he singled to left on the 11th pitch to drive in Barry Larkin with the game's only run.

In other games, it was Atlanta 9, Philadelphia 3; Los Angeles 9, St. Louis 2; San Francisco 6, Chicago 2; San Diego 8, Pittsburgh 7; and Montreal 8, Houston 5.

Belcher, now 4-5 after helping the Reds go 6-2 on the road trip, allowed three hits in 8 1-3 innings and struck out 10. He left after issuing his third walk, to Willie Randolph. Norm Charlton earned his 11th save when Dave Magadan's liner was speared by first baseman Hal Morris, who tagged Randolph to complete the double play.

time in 11 games. He also singled off Cliff Brantley (2-3) to start a three-run seventh inning that overcame a 3-2 deficit.

Expos 8, Astros 5

Moises Alou hit a three-run homer in the first inning, his first home run in the majors, and Montreal beat Houston in a game interrupted by a bench-clearing incident.

After Xavier Hernandez hit Tim Wallach with a pitch in the fifth inning, Hernandez came close with a pitch to Montreal's Dennis Martinez, who then walked about 10 feet toward the mound. Martinez was intercepted by catcher Ed Taubensee and both benches emptied. No punches were thrown and no one was ejected.

Martinez (5-4) won his fourth consecutive game, allowing all five runs and seven hits in five-plus innings. Loser Mark Portugal (4-2) gave up four runs and seven hits in four innings.

Dodgers 9, Cardinals 2

Todd Benzinger hit a third-inning grand slam to back knuckleballer Tom Candiotti's four-hitter over eight innings as Los Angeles won in St. Louis.

Candiotti (5-3) kept the Cardinals off balance, allowing only four singles, just one after the second inning. He struck out six and walked four.

The Dodgers trailed 1-0 before loading the bases in the third against Jose DeLeon (2-4). Benzinger then hit a 3-2 pitch into the right-field seats.

Padres 8, Pirates 7

Darrin Jackson doubled in the tying run with one out in the bottom of the ninth and pinch-hitter Craig Shipley singled with the bases loaded to lift San Diego past Pittsburgh, which lost its fifth straight and 11th in its last 12, finishing 1-8 on the West Coast.

Loser Stan Belinda (2-2) blew a save when he gave up Tony Gwynn's sacrifice fly in the eighth that tied it 6-6. But the Pirates went ahead in the ninth when Barry Bonds doubled off Randy Myers (2-1) and scored from third on Jeff King's grounder.

Giants 6, Cubs 2

John Burkett won his fifth consecutive decision and Mike Felder hit a bases-loaded triple in the ninth inning as San Francisco beat the Cubs at Wrigley Field.

Burkett (5-1) allowed six hits and one run in six innings.

Greg Maddux (4-5) lost his fourth consecutive decision.

Golfer Billy Casper has earned more than $1 million on both the Senior PGA Tour and the regular tour.

From 1958 to 1964, Arnold Palmer won the Masters in each of the even-numbered years.

Walter Hagen won the PGA championship four years in a row, 1924 through 1927, when it was match play.

Carter gets beaned; Jays, Brewers brawl

By The Associated Press

What caused the SkyDome scuffle between Toronto and Milwaukee remains a matter of debate.

The Blue Jays say Jamie Navarro was throwing at Joe Carter. The Brewers say no way, Jays.

When it was all over Wednesday night, Milwaukee won 8-4 in a game interrupted by one brawl, two player ejections and several other tense moments.

The brawl started when Navarro (4-4) hit Joe Carter with a pitch just above the right elbow in the fourth inning. After being struck, Carter fell to the ground, stood up a few seconds later and shouted at the pitcher. Then Carter charged the mound.

"He hit Carter, but he didn't hit him on purpose," Brewers manager Phil Garner said.

The Blue Jays, trailing 5-0, joined Carter in the dash for the mound and were joined by the Brewers. Some weak punches were thrown and, after about eight minutes of a lot of pushing and shoving, both benches retreated.

Carter was ejected and Toronto starter Todd Stottlemyre, Navarro and Garner were issued warnings by home plate umpire Greg Kosc.

Stottlemyre (4-4) was ejected in the sixth inning when he hit Paul Molitor with a pitch. Stottlemyre argued the ejection with Kosc, throwing his glove and cap in the air. By then, he didn't need them.

"The next inning when I came out after the benches cleared, (Kosc) just wanted to make sure that I understood if I threw anything that looked like I was throwing at a guy he was going to throw me out," Stottlemyre said. "I told him that he knows how I pitch, I like to pitch in at times and I'm not going to let a warning affect the way I pitch."

Rookie Pat Hentgen threw a pitch near Jim Gantner's head in the ninth inning, causing another staring match. Gantner took a couple of steps toward the mound before staying put.

Molitor and Greg Vaughn hit homers and Kevin Seitzer drove in two runs as the Brewers sent the Blue Jays to their eighth loss in 11 games.

and Albert Belle also homered off the four-time 20-game winner as Cleveland swept the three-game series.

Scott Scudder (3-5) allowed two runs and eight hits in 8 1-3 innings before Steve Olin finished for his ninth save.

Red Sox 4, Angels 3

At Anaheim, Jack Clark drew a bases-loaded walk from Bryan Harvey with two outs in the 10th inning to lift Boston over California.

Harvey (0-3) retired the first two batters in the 10th before Jody Reed singled, Mike Greenwell beat out a grounder up the middle and Tom Brunansky reached on an infield grounder to first, loading the bases.

Jeff Reardon (1-0) blew the save and a win for Frank Viola in the ninth.

Twins 5, Yankees 1

At the Metrodome, John Smiley (4-3) allowed one run in eight-plus innings and Minnesota scored four unearned runs after a third-inning error by shortstop Mike Gallego.

Melido Perez (4-4) allowed six hits and six walks in seven innings.

Mariners 7, Orioles 1

At the Kingdome, Erik Hanson stopped his six-game losing streak and Ken Griffey Jr. and Edgar Martinez homered for Seattle.

Hanson (2-7) allowed one run and four hits in 6 1-3 innings.

Ben McDonald (6-2) was tagged for seven runs and eight hits in five innings.

Tigers 11, Royals 2

At Tiger Stadium, homers by Lou Whitaker and Mark Carreon keyed a five-run first inning as Detroit sent Kansas City to its fifth consecutive defeat.

Cecil Fielder had three doubles, but just one RBI. Tony Phillips had two doubles and two RBIs.

Ryan remains winless

ARLINGTON (AP) - It's almost June and Nolan Ryan still doesn't have a victory.

In seven starts this season, Ryan has come close to No. 315. But either the Texas Rangers haven't scored enough or the bullpen has blown it for him.

He's not one to complain, though. On Wednesday night against the Chicago White Sox, it was a different story with the same result for Ryan.

Ryan pitched well enough to win but still failed in his quest for his first 1992 victory. He got a no-decision as Kevin Reimer's 11th-inning double scored Juan Gonzalez with the game-winning 4-3 victory over Chicago.

"My job is to give us a chance to win," the 45-year-old Ryan said. "That's what I'm here for."

Ryan has gone 53 days without a victory, longest for him in his 26-year major league career at the start of the season. It's Ryan's second longest winless streak since he went 66 days without a victory in 1987 with the Houston Astros.

In his three previous starts, the bullpen blew leads he had given them. In fact, in Ryan's seven starts this season, the Texas bullpen has an ERA of 6.25.

Ryan gave up two runs and six hits in seven innings. He struck out eight and walked none. The only damage off him was Steve Sax' two-run single in the sixth inning to snap a scoreless tie.

"Overall I'm pleased," said Ryan, who made 116 pitches, 86 for strikes. "I threw a bad pitch to Sax. I got behind on him and wasn't able to pitch him the way I wanted."

Ryan's misfortune turned a fellow veteran into a winner as Floyd Bannister earned his first victory since 1989 with three innings of one-hit relief. He hadn't won since May 15, 1989, for Kansas City.

"I have to give a tip of my cap to (manager) Bobby Valentine for giving me an opportunity," Bannister said. "I haven't had many lately. It was nice."

Texas moved into a virtual tie with Oakland for first place in the American League West with the A's only percentage points ahead.

Reimer's two-out double scored Gonzalez, who had walked, all the way from first base off loser Donn Pall (2-1) in the 11th.

Valentine said Bannister "was damn near perfect. His curveball was unhittable. I'm happy for him winning his first game in three years. I thought he was spectacular."

Chicago manager Gene Lamont said it was a tough loss for the White Sox who dropped a full game behind Texas.

"You can't lose too many games like this," Lamont said. "Our big hitters didn't get the key hits. We've been real good about closing games out. When you get a lead against Nolan Ryan you like to keep it."

Alex Fernandez pitched 7 2-3 innings and gave up only five hits. He left with a 3-1 lead.

Texas scored two runs in the bottom of the ninth off reliever Bobby Thigpen on a walk, a double by Gonzalez, and sacrifice flies by Reimer and Ivan Rodriguez.

"I know how Fernandez feels," Ryan said. "I've had the lead when I left my last few starts. But the important thing is we keep winning."

It was the fifth consecutive victory for the Rangers, and ninth in their last 10.

"If I keep pitching like I did tonight, the wins will come," Ryan said.

They always have.

Amarillo Symphony establishes chair

At a recent meeting of its Board of Directors, the Amarillo Symphony Orchestra established and endowed the Harrington Chair for Principal Bass and named internationally recognized bass soloist David Murray as its first recipient.

According to symphony Executive Director Cheryl Cox, "This will allow us to stabilize that chair so that we'll be able to continue to maintain the quality of that position. Our strong bass section is a direct result of David's strength as a bass player and his dedication to the orchestra."

Symphony orchestras of Amarillo's size usually only have about six basses. The bass section of the local orchestra currently includes nine high quality bass players.

Murray is recognized as one of the leading double bass soloists today. He is a winner of the prestigious International Society of Bassists Solo Competition. He was presented by the Society in a formal debut recital at Carnegie hall. He has performed throughout the United States and his native Canada to critical acclaim.

The bass attracted Murray's interest and attention at an early age. He became a private pupil of virtuosos bassist Gary Karr and studied with him at the Hartt Music School. Murray was a Concerto Completion winner at the school and a recipient of the Distinguished Performer Award. Murray has participated as a guest artist at several summer festivals, including the Scotia Festival of Music and the Tidewater Music Festival.

Murray currently is in his seventh year as the instructor of Double Bass at West Texas State University. His work at the university has made a tremendous contribution to the Amarillo Symphony Orchestra, where he is the Principal Bassist and with whom he has appeared as a featured soloist. Additionally, he also is the Principal bassist for the Dallas Chamber Orchestra.

Under Murray's direction, WT has developed an especially strong bass program teaching approach he employs has been tremendously successful. The students meet as a group once a week. They study the same course material and they all get the same information. Importantly, it provides them with a unique opportunity to share ideas, concepts and techniques for personal contributions to the Amarillo Symphony Orchestra bass section's expanding reputation as one of the finest in the nation

This chair is endowed by the Amarillo Symphony Orchestra in honor of Mrs. Sybil Harrington who has generously supported the Symphony for many years.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Well, REALLY, Ann, you of all people suggesting that mothers who nurse their babies in a restaurant do it "discreetly."

Have you been to a beach lately? If not, you ought to go. You will see women covered by no more than a narrow strip in front and with their entire bottoms in full view. Their breasts are completely exposed except for dime-size fabric pasties.

Turn on the TV and you can watch men and women in bed together, under the sheets, kissing passionately and well...need I go on?

And now some of your loony readers think a mother nursing her baby in a restaurant is offensive? Good grief.--Disgusted in Waco, Texas debts are paid in full. You don't deserve to be unhappy and abused. The longer you stay in this nutty relationship, the crazier you'll become. Reach out and get help NOW.--Free At Last

DEAR FREE: Thank you for giving "Maryland" that wake-up call. I hope she listens.

An alcohol problem? HOW can you help yourself or someone you love? "Alcoholism: How to Recognize It, How to Deal With It, How to Conquer It" will give you the answers. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Alcohol, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

DEAR WACO: The reader response to that letter was so heavy it nearly gave the mailman a hernia. Bravo to all who wrote to register a complaint.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I had to shake my head when I read the letter from "Mystified in Maryland" who is dating a man whose stories don't add up. His latest tale is that he's involved in the witness protection program.

Let me guess. Is he tall and handsome and has he told you that he is running from the Mafia because he will soon testify against certain congressmen involved in drug smuggling? Or maybe he will say the U.S. Army medical system, in cahoots with the Roman Catholic Church, is out to get him because of his involvement in the secret war in Central America.

If this sounds familiar, "Maryland," you are involved with my ex-husband. I was a 27-year-old professional when I met "Ted" in church. He seemed ideal--he didn't touch alcohol or drugs, and he was charming, funny, generous, mysterious and adventurous. I was alone and ready to settle down. Some of his stories didn't add up, but I was insecure enough to ignore my gut feelings.

We had a great year-long courtship and a quiet wedding. The fun continued--as long as I believed his increasingly far-fetched stories. He often stayed out late or didn't come home at all. He gave me a venereal disease and said I must have picked it up "somewhere else." Our credit was shot. When I refused to give him $3,000 to cover some mysterious debt, he beat me up.

I moved out the next day. He tracked me down, broke in and destroyed my furniture. He made threatening phone calls and stalked me for months. The police refused to become involved in what they called a "domestic dispute."

Now that the divorce is final, I'm living in a new place under an assumed name, but there is no way I can reclaim those lost years. All I can do is thank God I had the chance to start over.

Maybe no one can talk "Maryland" out of this relationship. I was stubborn and had to learn the hard way. I hope your correspondent will recognize herself in this letter. Sweetie, your

Fishing for family fun

Now that fishing season has arrived, kids may be eager to cast their lines and test their luck catching a favorite kind of fish.

Here are some suggestions to do with your children before they hit the dock or sit in a fishing boat.

-Practice casting the fishing line (without the hook) in the backyard or a park. Substitute a piece of Velcro attached to a weighted end for the hood. Place small toys with pieces of Velcro attached to them on the lawn. Try to "fish" for the toys. Or kids can use practice casting plugs. Place a Hula-Hoop on the lawn and try to cast into the ring.

-Make a pint-sized tackle box using an egg carton. Fill the spaces with useful items such as a bobber, corn kernels for bait and some mini peanut-butter sandwiches in case the angler gets hungry.

For safety:
-Use a metal file to remove barbs from fishing hooks that young anglers will be using. This precaution can help prevent serious injury to the skin, as well as prevent snags in clothing.

-Check to see if life vests fit your kids properly this year. Remind them to wear vests at all times while in a fishing boat or on the dock.

-Apply sunscreen and make sure your kids have hats with good visors.

911-Pets provides solution to missing household pets

Did you know that if your pet is lost, you have only a one in six chance of finding it?

Each year in the United States alone, over twelve million cats and dogs arrive at animal shelters as lost or strays. Statistics show that, incredibly, only two million are ever returned to their original owners.

Unfortunately, lost pets find their way to the local animal shelter have only seven days to be found by their owners, or adopted into another responsible family. Millions of lost cats and dogs are euthanized each year in this country and the numbers keep increasing.

What can you, as a pet owner, do to make sure your pet is returned to you if it is lost and to prevent it from being one of the millions inadvertently destroyed? Animal experts maintain that the number one reason lost pets never return home is because they simply don't have any identification. Providing adequate identification can protect your pet from being lost and will greatly increase the chances of recovery.

A Chicago-based manufacturer of pet products is offering pet owners a new solution to this lost pet problem--a lost pet protection service called 911-Pets designed to maximize the chances of finding your lost cat or dog. The 911-Pets service is a computerized pet database connecting all 50 states and Canada with a 24-hour, seven-day-a-week, 800-number hotline that helps owners recover their lost pets.

With the 911-Pets lost pet service the pet wears a small identification tag on his collar. If the pet is lost, the finder of the pet calls the 800-number on the identification tag. A 911-Pets operator then immediately notifies the owner of the exact location of the pet. After just a few phone calls, owner and pet are reunited. In addition to protecting the animals, the 911-Pets allows pet owners to maintain their privacy and security because no one but the 911-Pets staff has access to the pet owner's name and address.

Since the introduction of this service many lost pets have been reunited with their original owners. The 911-Pets service provide pet owners quick recovery because the finder of the pet has only one simple toll-free phone call to make.

Pet owners can find the 911-Pets lost pet identification kit anywhere pet supplies are sold. For more information on how to register your pet in the national computer database, call 312-376-2662.

BLAKESLEE, Pa. (AP) - Maybe it was research? "60 Minutes" correspondent Morley Safer told the state trooper who pulled him over for speeding that he was working on a story on just that topic.

Safer paid a $134 fine for driving 75 mph - 20 miles over the limit - in Tobyhanna Township last month.

"He said he was en route to do some sort of story about speeding," Sgt. Thomas Scales, a state police commander, said Wednesday.

Safer refused to comment, but a spokesman for the TV program said "a ticket was paid."

Cheerleaders announced

Members of the new Wayland Baptist University cheerleading squad were named after cheerleading and mascot tryouts were held at the university recently.

"The cheerleading squad for 1992-93 will be a young group and probably overall the most talented in the history of the school," said Joe Provence, sponsor.

The size of the new squad has been cut from the 10 members it had last year to eight, plus the Pioneer Pete mascot.

There are five veterans of the squad including Jennie Gast, sophomore from Cotton Center. Gast will serve as co-captain of the squad with Andy Lucero, Junior from Hereford.

Lucero is entering his third year as an instructor with the National Cheerleader Association. Gast has also been selected as an instructor with the NCA for this summer.

Gast is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Gast of Cotton Center and Lucero is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Rinaldo Lucero of Hereford.

Other returning cheerleaders are Rudy Barrientez, freshman from Hereford; William Carson, freshman from Clovis, N.M.; and Jill Brown, sophomore from Skellytown.

Barrientez is the son of Rudolfo Barrientez of Sweetwater; Carson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dewayne Carson of Clovis; and Brown is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Brown of Skellytown.

Newcomers to the squad are Christy Marez who will be entering from Slaton, and Philip Rhodes, freshman from Gooding, Idaho.

Marez is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jessie Marez of Abernathy; Oats is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Commie Oats of Slaton, and Rhodes is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Rhodes of Gooding.

Selected as Pioneer Pete for the 1992-93 school year is Chris Cobb freshman from Premont. He is the son of Carole Nicholson.

Judges selected the new squad during tryouts on May 2 from a field of 10 women, six men and four mascots.

According to Provence, the new group will be exciting to watch during next year's season. They will attend the National Cheerleader Association Collegiate Cheerleader Camp in July at Southern Methodist University in Dallas.

"Overall, this is probably the most talented group of cheerleaders ever assembled at Wayland," Provence says. "All members for the new squad are gymnasts with skills ranging all the way up to the expert level, when you consider the fact that two high school All-Americans did not make the squad, you realize the quality of this group."

"I am excited about this new group and the opportunities of the new year."

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Elizabeth Taylor, one of the first Hollywood stars to become an AIDS activist, donated $250,000 to AIDS Project Los Angeles.

"Elizabeth Taylor has individually raised more money for services for people with AIDS and for research for a cure to this epidemic than any other human being," APLA chief executive Leonard H. Bloom said Wednesday.

The actress helped organized APLA's first Commitment to Life dinner in 1985 and is on the agency's board of governors. She also is a founder of the American Foundation for AIDS Research.
