

Naturalized citizens are exceptional patriots

By CINDY SMITH
Staff Writer

Some of Hereford's most patriotic citizens weren't even born in the United States.

For those of us who don't watch the news, who don't think past Hereford, and who don't know what goes on beyond our own private little worlds - we have plenty to learn and to be thankful for on the Fourth of July.

"The freedom I have right now would not exist if there was no Fourth of July," declares Marwan Khoury, 28, a medical technologist at Deaf Smith General Hospital.

"People don't know what the Fourth of July really means," Khoury says. "You have more personal freedom here than in any other country in the world."

Khoury came to the United States from Palestine with his family when he was 10 to visit relatives. After they were here for approximately one month, the 1967 war in his country broke out. The family couldn't return home and the war definitely decided for the family to stay in the states. Khoury was raised here in the United States, attending school, graduating, and then going on to college. Khoury was 17 years old when he took the test for citizenship and remembers "standing before the judge and taking the oath of allegiance" very proud to be an American.

"America has the greatest degree of freedom I have ever seen," he said. "Freedom that you can do anything you want, say anything you want..."

"Americans in this country take their freedom for granted," stated Marwan, "if just once, the people could go outside of the states and look at what freedom is from there..."

The native Americans are often subject to gentle chiding by the naturalized citizens who have chosen this country for their home.

Warbride Annie Brashear, who has a picture of President Reagan sitting on the mantle in her living room, has lived in the U.S. for 37 years now and still becomes emotional when speaking of her American citizenship.

"This is the best country in the whole world," exclaimed Brashear, "worth fighting for; a country that is worth laying your life down for and that is what I did when I signed my citizenship papers!" said Brashear.

"I took the oath that I would give my life for my country and I still mean it," she declared.

"Coming from a country where you couldn't even open your mouth, for fear of saying that didn't suit the government," Brashear continued, "and coming to here, where you have freedom of speech, freedom of press, and most of all freedom of religion - this is why I came!"

"There are no barbed wires, and there is no wall to keep you in," proclaimed Brashear.

Brashear recalls "being a person without a country."

When Brashear left Germany, that country immediately took her citizenship from her. Her visa card was marked "staatenlos" in German, meaning "stateless."

"I remember a feeling of fear, of constantly worrying that if anything happened, no one (no country) would want me" Brashear said calmly as tears welled up in her eyes. "I was afraid the United States would deport me..."

Brashear received her citizenship papers in December of 1955 and "that was the happiest day of my life" she said.

So adamantly is Brashear proud to be an American that she says if someone doesn't like it here, she'll

Lake hearing postponed until August

While public comment was accepted at a Texas Water Commission (TWC) hearing in Canyon Tuesday, testimony recorded may have little bearing on whether the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is issued an amended permit authorizing a small dam at the west end of Buffalo lake near Umbarger.

Rodney Krey, refuge manager for the Buffalo Lake National Wildlife Refuge, said the hearing did not count as an official proceeding because the chief hearings examiner was ill and unable to be present for the meeting.

The public hearing was scheduled after the Buffalo lake Water District Board decided the granting of the amended permit. The board said Stewart Dike, which impounds shallow water for migratory waterfowl and other wildlife, could impede the flow of water into the deeper part of the lake should the main dam ever be repaired and the lake allowed to fill.

Concerning dike permit

Later the water district board said it would not fight the issuance of the permit if the F&WS agreed to remove the dike once the main dam is repaired.

The water board still maintains Umbarger Dam will someday be restored, and the drained lake returned to its original capacity. However the Bureau of Reclamation recently recommended instead that two additional dikes be built and the dam lowered so that small, deep impoundments of water could be maintained in a portion of the lake bed.

Krey said comment recorded Tuesday will have about the same status as written comments submitted to the TWC. He said the testimony most seriously considered is that given at the hearings, when attorneys for the TWC, the F&WS and the Buffalo Lake board will be able to cross-examine all participants.

The hearings examiner assumes the role of a judge during such a proceeding, Krey explained, and said a hearing cannot be official without his presence.

Comments during Tuesday's 9 a.m. meeting in the Canyon City Commission Chambers included those from both opponents and proponents of Stewart Dike. Several Canyon area residents voiced their disapproval of the structure and insisted the main dam be repaired.

Also attending the meeting, according to Krey, were representatives of several pro-wildlife, who also represented the Audobon Society and the Sportsman's Clubs of Texas.

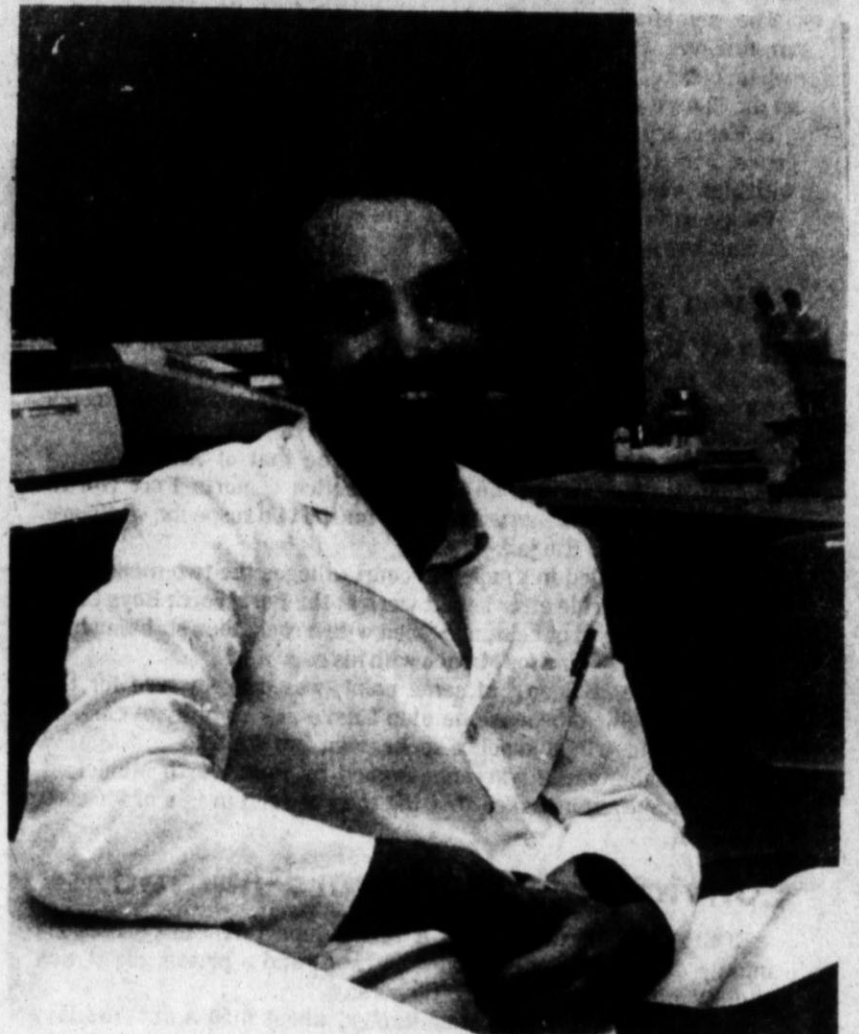

Larry Smith of Albuquerque was there on behalf of the Wildlife Association, and Steve Johnson from Tucson represented the Defenders of Wildlife.

According to Krey, their presence indicated that the struggle over maintaining the area as a wildlife refuge or restoring it to a water-based recreation area is no longer a local issue.

"It's a regional and national issue," he claimed. "Buffalo Lake is a National Wildlife Refuge, not a city or state park. The Buffalo Lake Water District Board is now going to have to compete with groups that have power and money."

Local members of the board were not available for comment this morning.

The hearing is expected to be rescheduled for sometime after the middle of August.

Trucking company may file

A local trucking company hopes to file criminal trespass charges against an Amarillo recovery firm, after a man entered its shop without permission to repossess a pickup.

The owner told police the pickup had been accepted as payment in a business deal and he was trying to obtain a clear title when the repossession took place. He said he was most interested in getting back shop equipment he had attached to the pickup.

Other incidents investigated Tuesday included two reports of windows shot, one with a rifle, the other with a BB gun, and the report of criminal trespassing and vandalism to a vacant mobile home.

Richard Hunter, Rt. 3, Hereford, reported the theft of an air compressor valued at $550 from the back of his pickup.

Two men were ticketed for allowing their dogs to run loose, and police tried to settle a dispute between several teenage girls.

A Dimmitt teenager was reported missing by his mother, who said he left her company while they were at a Hereford dentist's office Monday.

She said the boy had once told her he should probably leave home so she would not have to take care of him. She told police her husband had left the family in January.

Arrests made Tuesday included

Family squabble ends in suicide

A 35-year-old Hereford man who had been ordered away from his wife's home died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound Tuesday night after an altercation with his wife and son.

Melvin Nichols, whose address was not known by police, died shortly before 10 p.m. from a single gunshot wound to the head. The small handgun used in the suicide was found near his body, which police discovered on the front porch of his wife's 819 Irving home.

According to the Hereford police report, Mrs. Nichols had obtained a restraining order prohibiting her husband from entering her residence. Nichols reportedly rode up to the house on his motorcycle, and entered by the front door while his wife was locking the garage and back door.

Nichols became violent with his wife and 12-year-old son before going outside and firing the gun, according to statements the two gave to police. They said he fired several shots at the front door before turning the gun on himself.

Nichols' 14-year-old daughter witnessed parts of the incident from across the street at a neighbor's house, she told police.

The death was ruled a suicide by Forensic Pathologist Dr. Ralph Erdmann of Amarillo. Deaf Smith County Sheriff's deputies and the criminal district attorney's investigator were also at the scene.

Services for Nichols are pending at Rix Funeral Directors of Hereford.

Local man convicted of sexual assault

A Hereford man was convicted Tuesday by a Randall County district court jury of sexual assault on an 18-year-old West Texas State University student.

Clinton Ray Clark, 28, had been indicted for aggravated sexual assault but the jury found him guilty of the lesser offense.

The victim testified Monday in court that she was forced to perform sexual acts with Clark after he and a companion, Chester Monroe Pritt, picked up her and two male companions Dec. 18 on Interstate 27.

The pair had offered the three students a ride to Canyon after their car ran out of gas, but the woman testified they were instead driven to the country and the men put out of the car while she was assaulted.

The Randall County District Attorney's office said Pritt is scheduled for trial on the same offense sometime next month. Pritt testified during the two-day trial that the assault never took place.

Clark is married and his wife testified during the trial as well, according to the DA's office in Canyon.

Editions combined, deadline changed

Today's edition of The Hereford Brand is a combined Wednesday-Thursday paper since no paper will be published on July 4th. The holiday is one of four observed by The Brand during the year.

Since the office will be closed Thursday in order for employees to observe the holiday with their families, deadlines for classified ads will be changed. Calls will be accepted until 9 a.m. Friday for orders or changes in the classified pages.

The Brand, along with many offices and stores in Hereford, will be closed Thursday for the July 4th holiday. We hope you and yours have a safe and joyful Fourth of July!

Department of Agriculture officials delight in computing the amount of production by U.S. farmers. Their most recent computation reports that one American farmer produces enough to feed 78 people.

"We're not sure how they arrive at this but we do know one thing for sure," according to the recent issue of Southwest Farm Press. "A lot of farmers aren't making enough to feed their own families!"

Best wishes for speedy recovery go to a couple of well-known Hereford men. Homer Garrison, president of the Senior Citizens Association, is recovering from heart surgery in Lubbock's Methodist Hospital. Cleatus Savage, owner of Savage's Barbecue, is recovering from recent surgery in the local hospital.

Lavon and I attended the annual Texas Press Association convention at Austin the past weekend, and we thought one of the more interesting programs was on "Effective Stress Management".

As we entered the seminar room, people at the door placed "Biodots" on our hand. It works like a thermometer, clings to skin like a Band-Aid, costs only a dime and can change colors like a chameleon. The black dot was about one-fourth inch in diameter.

Shortly after we took our seats, I looked down and my black dot had changed to a bright green. Lavon's was still black, and several neighbors had amber and black dots.

Toxic waste prompts more suits

TEXARKANA, Texas (AP) — City residents who live on a toxic waste site have filed six more lawsuits against a company that 25 years ago ran a wood-preserving plant in the area.

The suits, filed in federal court in Texarkana this week, add to one other in seeking a total of $14.8 million in actual damages from Koppers Company Inc. of Pittsburgh, Pa. The first suit was filed last week.

The suits ask for unspecified punitive damages, the Texarkana Gazette reported today.

The plaintiffs claim that Koppers left behind toxic chemicals that caused three deaths, injured 10 people and devalued the homes of seven families in the Carver Terrace Subdivision.

The neighborhood in October was added to the federal Environmental Protection Agency's Superfund list of priority toxic waste sites to be cleaned up. There are 78 homes and a gravel yard on the 62-acre site.

In February, the EPA ordered Koppers to build a fence around the gravel yard to keep children from playing in the soil contaminated with high levels of pentachlorophenol, or PCP.

Long-term exposure to PCP can cause liver and kidney damage, officials say.

Two men held in slaying

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Two men, one of whom was arrested trying to drive across the Mexican border in an Arlington teen-ager's car, were being held today in connection with the teen's abduction and death, authorities say.

Authorities found a body believed to be that of Allen Edward Bolden Monday night in an isolated section of north Fort Worth. Capital murder warrants were issued for the two suspects, who were being held in a Del Rio jail.

An affidavit, filed in municipal court, alleges the two men asked Bolden, 17, for a ride after he left work at the Fort Worth Boys Club. The pair is accused of beating Bolden with a rock, then stabbing him in the neck and fleeing for Mexico with his car.

"We believe (Bolden), at some point, was overpowered for the sake of his vehicle because he didn't have any significant cash or jewelry," said Arlington police spokesman Jim Willett.

The probable cause warrants, signed by Fort Worth Municipal Judge Mary Navjar, asked that the men be held in lieu of $100,000 bond each.

Convict stabbed, guard injured

ROSHARON, Texas (AP) — A Texas Department of Corrections inmate died after being stabbed 18 times and a prison guard was slightly injured in the melee, officials say.

Pedro Izanga Ruiz, 25, was stabbed about 8:50 a.m. Tuesday, becoming the Darrington Unit's fifth and the Texas prison system's 15th homicide this year, TDC spokesman Phil Guthrie said.

Ruiz, serving a five-year term for Grayson County convictions of burglary of a habitation, robbery and sexual contact with a child, received multiple stab wounds to his upper body, Guthrie said.

Prison guard Thomas Hernandez, 27, suffered a superficial wound near the lower rib cage, Guthrie said.

A 40-year-old inmate who shared Ruiz's cell was being questioned about the attack, Guthrie said. The suspect is serving a 20-year sentence for an aggravated robbery conviction, the spokesman said.

"We have no motive," Guthrie said. "There had never been a problem between the two of them that we know of."

Guthrie said Ruiz was stabbed as Hernandez was preparing to take him to the shower.

NAACP loses round in court

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge has refused to bar the Reagan administration from seeking to overturn quotas for the hiring of women, blacks and Hispanics.

U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greene declined Tuesday to issue the injunction requested by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People on the grounds of separation of power and his court's lack of authority to interfere with litigation in other U.S. courts in the country.

Justice Department spokesman John Wilson said, "We are pleased with the result, which was anticipated." NAACP officials in New York and Washington could not be reached for comment.

Son of Nazi sues governments

WASHINGTON (AP) — The son of an alleged Nazi war criminal has filed suit against the U.S. and Yugoslav governments, claiming they conspired to violate his ailing 85-year-old father's civil and constitutional rights.

Yugoslavia tried to obtain the extradition of Andrija Artukovic, a top-ranking cabinet member in the Nazi puppet state of Croatia during World War II, some 25 years ago.

U.S. officials declined to deport him, but the lawsuit, filed Tuesday by Rad Artukovic of Los Angeles, says sometime after 1979 U.S. officials asked their Yugoslav counterparts to renew the extradition request and offered to help select evidence to make it stick this time.

Jury favors unwed teacher

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) — A lawyer for an unmarried woman who won a $3.3 million court award from a school board which fired her after she kept a baby says the verdict will help end discrimination against teachers who become pregnant out of wedlock.

After deliberating five hours, the six-person U.S. District Court jury on Tuesday awarded $2 million in compensatory damages and $1.3 million in punitive damages to Jeanne Eckmann, 38, who said she became pregnant after she was raped.

Six past or present members of the rural Hawthorn School Board that fired her after her son was born are liable for the awards.

After the verdict was read by Judge Stanley Roszkowski, the school board's lawyers said any decision on an appeal would be made later.

"This will give a message to school boards across the nation that they can't discriminate against women teachers who become pregnant out of wedlock," Donna Kotecki, one of the teacher's lawyers, said after Tuesday's ruling.

Rioting flares in four prisons

WARTBURG, Tenn. (AP) — A series of prison disturbances involving about 1,200 inmates ended today when nearly 200 convicts at the Wartburg facility returned to their cells after a convicted murderer was found beaten to death with a baseball bat, authorities said.

Elsewhere in the state's prison system, rioting that began Monday night at the Turney Center prison near Only ended Tuesday after inmates burned three buildings. Trouble hopped to a prison in Nashville and another in Bledsoe County, but those facilities were also under control by nightfall.

Injuries included five inmates stabbed or beaten, none seriously, and one who suffered a heart attack during the riots.

Overcrowded conditions and new prison uniforms with stripes along legs figured the uprisings, state officials said.

Corpus Christi chosen as site for Navy battleship

WASHINGTON (AP) — Corpus Christi can expect to gain 5,200 Navy and civilian personnel and an annual Pentagon payroll of $95 million to $100 million if Congress approves plans to place a battleship in the Texas coast city, the Navy said.

The figures exclude dependents or private-sector jobs generated by homeport status but include shipboard personnel, officials said.

The Defense Department announced plans Tuesday to spread 29 of the nation's warships among nine homeports on the Gulf Coast, sending the battleship Wisconsin and the training carrier Lexington to Corpus Christi and a planned new flattop to Pensacola, Fla.

Corpus Christi also would get three smaller warships under the plan, making it the clear winner in the intensive competition among Gulf cities for the Wisconsin and the job bonanza that often results from homeport status.

The plan, which would spread the vessels among nine Gulf ports, now goes to Capitol Hill. If approved, it would wrap up a massive planning operation to find homeports for the largest warships in the Reagan administration's buildup to a 600-ship Navy.

The plans, announced by Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and Navy Secretary John F. Lehman will be implemented late in this decade at the earliest, the Navy said.

Earlier, the Pentagon had announced plans for three of the four World War II battleships it is reactivating, sending the New Jersey to Long Beach, Calif.; the Iowa to Staten Island, N.Y., and the Missouri to San Francisco. At that time, it also chose Everett, Wash., as homeport for a 14th flattop it will add to its current fleet of 13 operational carriers plus the Lexington.

Under Reagan's buildup, the Navy will eventually have 15 operational carriers.

Weinberger said Tuesday the Wisconsin — the last of the four battleships coming out of mothballs — would call Corpus Christi home. He said a 15th carrier would displace the

The Biodot changes hues as the skin temperature changes, and that is an indicator of stress, we were told by the seminar speaker—Janine Sagert, an Austin stress management consultant.

"One of the first things that happens when stress is perceived is that blood retreats to the major muscle groups, and your hands and feet get cold," Sagert explained. Icy hands or the classic "cold feet" one gets before public speaking are likely to trigger the dot to turn black. As tranquility returns and blood circulates back to the extremities, the dot changes to amber to green to turquoise to blue. If you really get relaxed, your dot can turn to violet.

gladly pay their way back to the old country!"

In July of 1968, Brashear, on her first visit back to Germany, was contacted after only a week, by the American Consul saying they had a flight for her since she was American and no questions were asked.

"The marines had landed in Lebanon and there was a certain amount of danger involved—they wouldn't tell us," Brashear said. "Everybody was nervous—I just wanted to get back...get back to the U.S., to my family."

Brashear went on to say that anybody that has a want to become something, can accomplish it in America. And that's exactly what her children did.

Tears were streaming as Brashear told of her son who joined the Special Forces. Steve had called his mom to let her know he was O.K. "but there's something going on." He could not say what. Brashear remembers crying because she worried about her son and Steve saying "Mom, someone's gotta teach those people how to fight communism."

Brashear is very proud of her children, her son serving in the Lexington at Pensacola.

The Lexington would move from its current berth at Pensacola to Corpus Christi, probably in 1992, Weinberger said.

The other winners in Tuesday's homeport sweepstakes, which began last year with 16 Gulf Coast cities vying for the Wisconsin, are: New Orleans, La.; Lake Charles, La.; Mobile, Ala.; Pascagoula, Miss.; Gulfport, Miss.; Key West, Fla., and Houston-Galveston, Texas. The latter had submitted a joint application.

The Navy had announced in February six finalists for the Wisconsin — Mobile, Pensacola, Lake

Charles, Pascagoula, Corpus Christi and Houston-Galveston. Key West was described as in the running for smaller vessels. All seven applicants came away with some Navy vessels as did New Orleans and Gulfport, which had not been listed among finalists.

Weinberger also announced assignment of:

—A cruiser, destroyer and minesweeper to Corpus Christi.

—A mine warfare ship to Pensacola.

—Two frigates and three minesweepers to the Houston-Galveston area.

—Two mine warfare ships and an oiler to Lake Charles, La.

—Two fast sealift ships to Violet, La., near New Orleans.

—Two destroyers, two frigates and a minesweeper to Mobile.

—Two cruisers and two destroyers to Pascagoula.

—A mine warfare ship to Gulfport.

—A landing craft repair ship, a salvage ship and a shore-based ocean surveillance ship support group to Key West.

A decision on the Wisconsin had been expected no later than July, but the announcement of homeports for the other vessels came as a surprise.

Controversial Dike

An earthen dam on the west end of the Buffalo Lake bed, which impounds shallow water for wildlife, is the source of a dispute between wildlife enthusiasts and those who want to see the lake restored as a water-based recreation area. A hearing on the status of Stewart Dike was scheduled for Tuesday in canyon, but the chief hearings examiner was unable to attend and make the meeting official.

President says homecoming not complete without seven hostages

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, saluting the end of the terror-filled odyssey of TWA Flight 847, says "the homecoming won't be complete" until seven Americans still held captive in Lebanon finally are back home.

Reagan expressed a "deep felt sigh of relief" at nearby Andrews Air Force Base Tuesday as he welcomed 30 Americans back to U.S. soil 18 days after their flight was hijacked by Lebanese terrorists.

"There's only one thing to say, and I say it from the bottom of my heart in the name of all the people of our country: Welcome home," Reagan said as scores of relatives of the former hostages looked on.

But the festive air of the occasion was muted somewhat by what the president clearly saw as the unfinished business of Lebanese terrorism.

Alluding to the murder of Robert Stetham, 23, a U.S. Navy diver who was shot to death the day after the hijacking, Reagan said, "There will no forgetting. His murderers must be brought to justice."

En route to the arrival ceremony at Andrews, Reagan and his wife stopped at Arlington National Cemetery and laid a wreath at Stetham's grave.

"They beat Robbie Stetham without mercy, then shot him to death," Reagan said a few minutes later at Andrews. "Our joy at your return is substantial, but so is our pain at what was done to that son of America."

He expressed bitterness about the continued detention of the seven Americans who have been kidnapped in Lebanon over the past 16 months and remain in detention. "They must be released," the president said. "The homecoming won't be complete until all have come home."

Ann Landers

Another side presented

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please stop printing letters from nursing home employees complaining about how the elderly are being neglected by their selfish children.

These elderly folks have lived a long time. Once they were young. They raised these children you seem to think are so terrible because they don't pay attention to their parents in the twilight of their lives.

Wake up, will you, please? Child neglect and sexual abuse were not invented in 1985. All that stuff has been around for a long time. Those neglected, abused and battered kids have good memories.

Maybe that pleasant old gentleman beat his wife when he got drunk (which was often) and the children hate him for it. And it is just possible that the darling, white-haired lady in the wheelchair paid no attention to her children when they were growing up and that is why they feel estranged and resentful.

I have a couple of good examples in my own family. My husband's parents never gave him a kind word when he was growing up. Nothing he did was right. His brother was the star and his sister was "Miss Perfect." In fact, they referred to my husband opening as "the dummy" or the "big disappointment." It took three years of intensive therapy to repair the damage.

Nobody knows what went on behind closed doors 50 years ago.

Consider, too, that the elderly person who talks about the past isn't the world's most reliable reporter. So, please be evenhanded, Ann Landers, and print this letter. There is another side to this story.—STAR WITNESS IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR STAR: There is ALWAYS another side to every story, and I am glad to print yours. Thank you for writing.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Regarding your response to "Climbing the Ivy Walls in Connecticut," I think you missed the point.

I have been married for over 20 years to an English professor at Stanford University. I feel sorry for any woman who casts her lot with a man who chooses a life in academia. To begin with, a conscientious professor is married to his work. The wife and family run a poor second or third. All spare time is spent writing articles or books.

It's publish or perish, my dear. Professors who are upwardly mobile serve on committees and run themselves a little ragged trying to ingratiate themselves with department heads, the provost and the president.

I've climbed the walls and cried myself to sleep while my husband has traveled all over making speeches and attending seminars.

Widows aren't half as lonely as married women whose husbands put their jobs first. If I had it to do over again I would not have married a professor.—CAN'T COMPETE IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR CAN'T COMPETE: I asked a professor at USC what he thought about your letter. He said you have a legitimate complaint, but asked, "Did the woman not recognize that the man was egocentric and self-serving when they were courting?" He also asked, "Why does she put up with it?"

Maybe your husband is unaware of your needs and the extent of your unhappiness. Have you discussed it? If not, you should. He may be more responsive than you think.

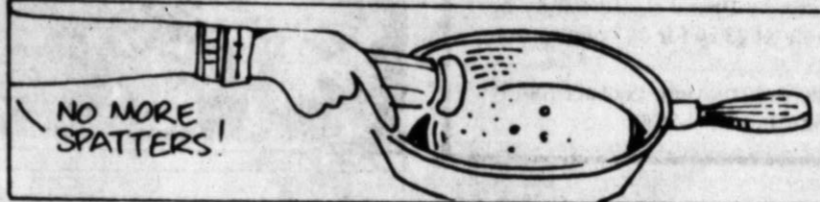

Ann Landers' booklet, "Sex and the Teenager," explains every aspect of sexual behavior—where to draw the line, how to say no, the various methods of contraception, the dangers of VD, the symptoms and where to get help. For a copy, send $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

This cake suits special diet

DEAR POLLY — I've been told that sponge cake is low in calories. Would this be a good choice for a low-cholesterol diet? I'm not supposed to eat cakes with butter or shortening in them.—DARLENE

DEAR DARLENE — Although sponge cake contains no pure fat such as butter, shortening or oil, it is rich in egg yolks, so it would be a poor choice for a low-cholesterol diet.

A far better choice would be angel food cake. It is not only comparatively low in calories (about 120 calories for a small slice — one-twelfth of a cake), but it contains no fat or egg yolks. The ingredients are simply egg whites, sugar, flour and perhaps vanilla. It has no dietary cholesterol or any type of fat.

For an occasional sweet treat, a small slice of angel food cake is a pretty safe choice for anyone who's allowed to eat sugar. And, happily, it's a pretty heavenly-tasting treat! —POLLY

Brand Policies

The Hereford Brand welcomes news articles of interest from local residents groups, and organizations. These guidelines should be followed when submitting news items:

- The Brand reserves the right to edit any and all copy submitted.
- Photos of club officers, donation presentations, etc., can be made at the Brand office, preferably after 2 p.m. Appointments for such photos must be made at least 24 hours in advance.
- On-location photos can be made, on approval, providing The Brand has at least two days notice.
- Reservations for cover pages need to be made as soon as possible to insure a desirable publication date. Arrangements for photographs need to be made with the photographer so that all photos are completed at least one week prior to publication date. The Brand also reserves the right to refuse a cover page request.
- New items or changes for the calendar of events must be submitted one week before the Wednesday or Sunday of publication.
- General news items for the Lifestyles section must be submitted by 1 p.m. the day before publication.
- The Brand has forms available to aid in preparing engagement announcements and wedding stories. Neither will be taken by phone.
- Engagements should be announced six weeks before the wedding to insure publication. Couples submitting engagement announcements after that deadline must choose to have either the engagement or the wedding photo published. Photos should be in black and white. A color photo may be used if the contrast is suitable for reproduction.
- Wedding and anniversary writeups must be submitted one week prior to the ceremony. Wedding notices submitted late will be edited considerably.
- Birth announcements are obtained from Deaf Smith General Hospital. Information on local babies born elsewhere, or who have grandparents in Hereford, must be reported to The Brand within two weeks. Forms are available, or the information may be called in.
- Club reports must be submitted within three days of the meeting or will be subject to considerable editing or omission. Forms are available at The Brand.
- Brief items of interest about former residents or children of Hereford residents are welcome when they concern degrees earned, academic honors, college news, career promotions, etc.
- Photos may be picked up from The Brand after 3 p.m. of the publication date. Published photos taken by Brand staffers may be purchased for $1. Reprints are available at $3.50 for 5x7 photos and at $4.50 for 8x10 prints.
- To submit an article or obtain more information, contact Sandy Pankey, Lifestyles Editor, or Cindy Smith, at 364-2030.

Kimball to conduct art workshop here

Gayla Kimball, art instructor at Hereford High School, will be conducting a three week workshop for children July 8-26 in Room 201 at the high school.

Registration fee is $22.50 for each participant. Those wishing to attend the session are asked to send the child's name, age and address and parents' name, address and telephone number on a sheet of paper and return it to: Hereford ISD, Attn: Kenneth R. Helms, P. O. Box 1698, Hereford, Tx. 79045. Enclose a check for registration fee.

Enrollment in the session will be limited to the first 20 paid participants. The one hour class will meet at 9 a.m. Monday, July 8.

Several art medias will be used during the workshop including drawing, painting, printmaking, construction of three-dimensional forms, manipulating fibers and photographic imagery.

Each participant will be asked to bring an old shirt as a cover-up and to wear old clothes. Otherwise, all supplies will be furnished.

Butter blend products growing in popularity

Americans eat more margarine than butter, but many still prefer the flavor of butter.

That's one reason for the growing popularity of new butter-blend and butter-flavored products, says a Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service nutritionist.

While the split between butter and margarine consumption was about half and half 25 years ago, margarine consumption is now about twice that of butter, says Marilyn Haggard.

Butter blends are so new that the U.S. Department of Agriculture has no consumption figures compiled. But preliminary figures from the National Cheese Institute show that the butter blends have cut more into margarine sales than butter sales.

"Evidently, some consumers would like to afford the flavor of real butter and find the blends a more desirable substitute than pure margarine," she explains.

Now consumers can also choose "buttery" flavored oils and vegetable shortenings or artificially flavored seasonings, condiments and other foods such as butter flavored salt or syrup.

Snack foods and side dishes such as butter flavored pretzels and dehydrated pasta and rice products flavored with butter are also in the markets.

Butter-flavored granules are made partially with dried butter and designed to be reconstituted. The butter granules can replace butter in many recipes and provide the butter flavor with fewer calories, the nutritionist says.

"Label-reading is a must when buying these new butter flavored products," Haggard cautions. For example, one spread with the word "butter" in its name contains no butter. It's made of 75 percent soybean oil, but does list sweet cream butter-milk among the ingredients.

The specialist advises reading the label to determine the source of the butter content or flavor.

Accent on Health

Tanning booths and couches may give you that healthy look, but at the same time they can create some health problems.

That's the warning of Mrs. Suzie B. Kent, who is with the Texas Department of Health's Bureau of Radiation Control.

"Early tanning booths used fluorescent sunlamps in an attempt to mimic sunlight. They bombarded the body with ultraviolet-B radiation, which increases the risk of skin cancer. The tanning industry today, however, uses a new type of lamp that provides over 95 percent ultraviolet-A radiation, and less than five percent ultraviolet-B," she said.

"Although these lamps are advertised as being safer, it's very likely that ultraviolet-A is associated with skin aging, because the rays penetrate the skin and attack the fiber that normally keeps it resilient," she explained.

You should not use a tanning booth or tanning couch if you sunburn easily and don't tan, Mrs. Kent advised. If you don't tan easily in the sun, you probably won't tan in a booth either, she said.

You should also avoid using a tanning booth if you get frequent cold sores, she warned. The ultraviolet radiation may aggravate them.

If you are taking prescription drugs, she added, check with your doctor first. Some drugs increase your reaction to radiation.

For those who decide to use a tanning booth after considering the risks, Mrs. Kent recommends the following:

- Use protective goggles. People have been seriously burned because they did not wear special protective goggles. Ordinary sun glasses, just closing your eyes, or using cotton balls is not enough.

- Be sure the booth has support bars or handles to protect you from touching or falling into the lamps. All entrances should open outward. You should be positioned in the booth so that you are at least one foot away from the lamps.

- Don't stay in the booth longer than the recommended time or tamper with the timer. Just as with natural sunlight, overexposure can cause eye damage and sunburn.

- Don't let the room temperature exceed 100 degrees Fahrenheit.

- Make sure someone is nearby to help you in case of emergency.

Arts committee to host regional meeting

The Texas Assembly of Arts Councils will hold its fourth annual series of regional meetings July 15-Aug. 1, in 12 communities across the state. Regional meeting for the Panhandle region will be held in Amarillo on Monday, July 15, at the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce, 1000 S. Polk, in the John Stiff Board Room.

The Amarillo Arts Committee is host for the meeting, which will begin at 9:30 a.m. There is no charge for the one-day meeting, and it is open to all interested artists or representatives of arts organizations in the area.

Representatives from the Texas Commission on the Arts, Mid-America Arts Alliance, Western States Arts Foundation, and the Southwest Alternate Media Project will also participate in the meetings, which are made possible through a contract with the Texas Commission on the Arts.

The Touring Arts Workshop portion of the meeting is mandatory for all groups and individuals who anticipate applying for TCA funding for a touring arts program, whether they be presenters or producers.

During the morning session, Peter Fox, Jr., president of the Texas Assembly of Arts Councils, will outline resources and services available to local arts organizations from the assembly, and will conduct a "networking" session during which attendees can exchange ideas and information about activities of local arts organizations in the area.

Co-director Tom Sims of the Southwest alternate media project will discuss media arts, and representatives from the Texas Commission on the Arts will explain the new state arts plan, recent legislative appropriations for the arts, and grant request procedures.

Individual appointments may be made to discuss on organization's grant request by contacting Becky Zenor at the chamber at (806)379-7800.

The Texas Commission on the Arts will sponsor a touring arts workshop from 1-4 p.m., conducted by Colleen Jennings and Sara Jones of the Western States Arts Foundation and Mid-America Arts Alliance. Topics will include general touring, in-state touring, and regional touring.

Anyone interested in presenting either performing or visual arts attractions must attend, as well as producers such as individual artists, performing companies, and those planning to produce visual arts exhibitions for touring purposes.

Grant applications to the TCA for Fiscal Year 1987 (September, 1986-August, 1987) will not be accepted without attendance at one of the regional meeting workshops to be held across the state in July. Other workshops in the area will be held in Lubbock, July 16, and Wichita Falls, Aug. 1.

For registration and further information, contact the Texas Assembly of Arts Councils, 121 E. 8th, Suite 1103, Austin, Tx. 78701 (tel. 512) 474-8495.

DR. GOTT

Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I've recently started to lift weights. Is it advisable to start using steroids to increase my bulk? I am a 14-year-old boy, 5 feet 9 and 140 lbs.

DEAR READER — Do not use steroids. At 14, you haven't yet experienced your growth spurt. Further, your own hormones are already producing dramatic changes in your body; the addition of synthetic steroids may not only affect your health, but may seriously alter your growth pattern.

Until you have reached your full hormonal potential, in another two to three years, I advise you to avoid power lifting and the use of really heavy weights. If you try too much too soon, you may damage developing muscles and tendons. Lift for recreation and definition now, and leave the bulk for later. Arnold Schwarzenegger was almost 16 before he was introduced to bodybuilding. At that age, he was 6 feet tall and weighed only 150.

One final comment. Weightlifting, when performed properly at an appropriate pace, is a safe and healthy activity.

Dancing keeps East Texas senior citizens going

GREENVILLE, Texas (AP) — The sounds of guitars and a fiddle carry through the glass doors and into the night air. By 7:15 scarcely an empty parking space remains in the lot at Wright Park Community Center.

Inside, couples fill the dance floor as the band plays "Have I Told You Lately That I Love You?" followed by an upbeat version of "Kansas City." Many of the dancers are gray-haired, and most of them have retired from a 40-hour work week, but when leaders Rosey Jackson or Floyd Roddy give the downbeat, these senior citizens swing.

"There're not enough men to go around, so some of the ladies dance together," said Polly Wilburn, who was collecting the $1.50 admission fees on a recent Tuesday while her husband, Pete, played in the band. "I'm not dancing tonight," she said laughing and pointing to her right leg which was encased in a cast, "but you think I couldn't?"

"You see that little lady out there with the white collar on her dress?" "She's 82... dancing's probably what keeps her going."

And so it is, according to the lady herself, Jewell Hampton. "Honey, I've got arthritis in my knees, and if I didn't dance and take some walks, I wouldn't be able to move," she said with a smile.

Probably the eldest of the 100 or so senior citizens who attend the twice weekly dances is Jerry Head, 90, who takes a few turns around the floor with his wife, Pearl. "He gets tired easily," explained Mrs. Head, "but he does enjoy the music."

Another regular at the dances is 85-year-old Willie Burchett, who twirls his partners with the grace of an Astaire. And lest the proceedings seem too tame, Ralph Waskom of Emory breaks into a lively solo jig in front of the handstand, to the applause of the spectators.

The band begins the "Cotton Eyed Joe," and some of the dancers join arms to form a line. "My husband and I couldn't do any of these steps when we first came here," said a woman catching her breath on the sidelines. "We took some lessons at the 'Y,' and now we know them all."

The majority of the musicians who play for the dances are also "seasoned" citizens, who come because they too enjoy the fun. "If I didn't, I wouldn't be here," said Rosey Jackson, leader of the Texas Swingers who perform on Tuesdays.

Marguerite Clark, who was filling in as drummer with the Swingers that night, arrived "on 10 minutes notice. I just got back in town today and was sitting in my gown in front of the TV when they called," she explained. "And here I am. I usually play on Thursday with my uncle, Floyd Roddy, and the Greenville Ramblers."

The original Ramblers were organized before World War II by Roddy. "We had a violin and two guitars then," he said. "This bunch here has been together four or five years."

Boyd Long, who still plays with him, is well known in fiddling circles in Texas and recently took two firsts in old fiddlers' contests.

The dancers are not all Greenville residents. Some come from Emory, Point, Floyd, Commerce, the Vansickle community and as far away as Miller Grove. No alcoholic beverages are permitted, and money from admission fees is used to cover building rental and the musicians' transportation expenses. In addition to the weekly dances at Wright Park, monthly dances are scheduled on the fourth Friday at E-Systems recreation hall, featuring Weldon Rogers and his musicians.

With music as a background, it is perhaps not too surprising that romance has blossomed among some of the patrons. One couple, now married, met at a dance four years ago. Another pair who are currently "going together" wear coordinated outfits to the dances — matching shirts or trousers.

Of Mexican government

Vote reaffirms PRI's control

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Elections in Mexico more than anything else serve to reaffirm the Institutional Revolutionary Party's control of the Mexican government, from the presidency to the smallest villages.

Even before Mexicans vote July 7, the ruling party, known as PRI, is expected to win most — if not all — of the seven gubernatorial races and to continue controlling the federal Chamber of Deputies.

Nevertheless, the campaigning is fierce as if the election outcome really was in doubt. In the capital, campaign banners flutter in endless rows above the main streets, posters hangs from utility poles and political slogans are painted on walls. The scene has been repeated throughout the country.

For PRI politicians, it is a chance to restate the underlying theme of Mexican politics — the 1910 Revolution continues and the government "never will take a step backward."

For the opposition, it is a chance to once again decry official corruption, a sagging economy and the "debilitation of the PRI."

PRI never has lost a major election and has controlled the presidency, congress and the governor's offices in the 31 states for more than 50 years.

Over the years, PRI and the government have become virtually synonymous to most Mexicans. The president is the leader of the PRI. The party's use of the national colors of red, green and white in all its campaign materials underscores the relationship.

It's a fact of life that PRI politicians become governors, cabinet officials and president — while opposition candidates complain about the system, lose elections and seldom achieve any real political power.

The PRI was created in 1929 by those already in power, seeking to establish stability in a nation rife with political disputes and violence.

The founders reasoned that by bringing the various factions under one banner, promising them all what they wanted, the nation's development could proceed unhampered by internal strife. PRI's strength is its ability to adapt to political and social changes over the years and to bring opposing forces under its control.

The elections, therefore, and the strength of opposition parties serve to point out how it must adapt.

In years when currents are running to the left, the PRI runs its campaign accordingly. This year, with the conservative National Action Party running with unprecedented strength — especially in northern Mexico — the campaign runs counter to the right.

Explaining Mexico's political system, President Miguel de la Madrid said, "The Mexican democracy has been formed from our history. It has been formed from our struggles. With its virtues and faults it is ours. It is what we can live with and it is what we will continue perfecting, because we are not satisfied with what we have achieved."

To a great extent, the political experiment has succeeded. PRI points to more than a half century of peace and claims that Mexicans have more individual freedoms and social welfare benefits than almost any other Latin nation.

In a region of the world where national leaders have measured their reigns in days and weeks, government stability indeed is unique. But the price has been absolute control of the government by PRI, whose leaders point out that stability and democracy do not necessarily mean alternating parties in power.

National Action, or PAN, is the largest of eight registered opposition parties. It has won several municipal elections since 1979, but has not made any significant inroads at higher levels.

Opposition parties, while allowed to march, protest and complain, are never allowed to become large enough or strong enough to pose a true threat to the status quo. PRI officials who control the election machinery have made sure of that.

Another common PRI tactic is co-optation — silencing an opponent by offering money, a well-paying job or something else the person wants more than political purity.

In extreme cases, the government will resort to strong-arm tactics to insure the status quo remains unchanged and to show who holds the real power.

This was evidenced during the May 1 Labor Day march when PRI-backed workers groups were permitted to parade beneath the presidential balcony at the National Palace. But when dissident groups tried to join the parade, they were met with club-swinging policemen with dogs.

The unspoken message is quite clear: those who support PRI benefit, those who don't, won't.

Diplomatese: "Open and forthright" means that both sides said "No" distinctly.

Yellow ribbons proclaim Laredo homecoming

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — Residents tied yellow ribbons around posts, doorknobs and mailboxes, and marching bands and drill teams prepared for an airport welcome of returning hostages Vicente Garza and Robert Trautmann.

Garza, 53, and his son-in-law, 37, among 39 Americans released by Shiite Moslems Sunday, were to return to Laredo by private jet sometime tonight.

They were expected to fly from Wiesbaden, West Germany, to Kennedy Airport in New York by this afternoon, then board private jets provided by a Laredo bank for home.

Mayor Aldo Tatangelo said two high school bands, a drill team, dignitaries and thousands of people are expected to turn out at the Laredo airport for the arrival.

"I think it's going to be one big evening for everybody," he said.

The men were taken hostage aboard a TWA jetliner bound from Athens to Rome.

Garza's wife Irma, 48, her daughter (Trautmann's wife) Irma Trautmann, 31, and Mrs. Trautmann's daughters Adriana Garza, 13, Ashley Trautmann, 4, and Katherine Trautmann, 3, also were aboard the hijacked jet.

But they were released soon after the 17-day hostage siege began.

Tatangelo said the hostage situation has caused great anxiety in Laredo.

"Laredo is only a city of 118,000 people and all at once an international incident happens and the names of the Garza and Trautmann families are mentioned," he said.

"Things like that don't happen in Laredo," he said.

Laredo residents, he said, were stunned by the hijacking and held 24-hour prayer vigils at local churches.

"Every mailbox and doorknob on city businesses had a yellow ribbon," he said.

"There has been a lot of anxiety," he said. "It came to the point that almost everybody talked about the Garza family. We are overjoyed to have them back," the mayor said.

Mrs. Garza's brother Javier Santos said the freed Laredoans would hold a short news conference at the local airport once they arrive, then go home for a private family reunion.

Trautmann, in a telephone interview with the Laredo News after his release, said the United States should consider retaliating against Lebanon for the hostage incident.

"I think something has to be done to punish the people who are responsible for this," he was quoted as saying in a copyright story published today, "to show the world that the United States isn't going to stand by and be put through this type of situation again and again."

Trautmann said he was held in a darkened 20-foot by 20-foot basement room in Beirut. He said he was blindfolded when he was allowed outside the room to go to the bathroom.

Later in his captivity, Trautmann said he was moved to a small upstairs apartment.

He said his captors treated him decently and he was never beaten or abused.

The sun is 400,000 times as bright as the full moon, and it gives the earth as much light as do all the other stars put together.

Ex-hostages detail their days in captivity

Captivity in Lebanon included beatings, vermin-infested living quarters, the sight of casual shootings and political propaganda, several of the 39 former hostages say in accounts that contrast with the rosier picture conveyed during their ordeal.

The hijacking of TWA Flight 847 was "a publicity stunt," said Richard Herzberg, 33, of Norfolk, Va., one of four men separated from the rest because of his Jewish-sounding surname. Herzberg said Tuesday his captors had "duped the American public into thinking this was fun and these are nice people."

"It was hell," he said. "It is still hell right now. If anybody thinks it was a party, they're sick."

At first, he said, "I was held in a cell for eight days without a shower, without seeing light, without having a toilet." On the ninth day, he and the other three captives were moved to what they dubbed the "Beirut Villa" because it had bathrooms and other basic comforts.

Thomas Cullins, 42, of Burlington, Vt., said on the "CBS Morning News" Tuesday that he now was embarrassed about telling reporters while in captivity that he and his fellow hostages appreciated the Amal's hospitality.

"In retrospect I always felt I made a mistake in that first press conference by using the word 'hospitality,'" Cullins said.

Arthur Toga, 33, of St. Louis, said in Wiesbaden that the hostages were kept in small groups in rundown apartments crawling with cockroaches and rats.

Peter Hill, 57, of Hoffman Estates, Ill., said today on CBS News' "Nightwatch" that he witnessed two shootings, one an accident, and that his captors apparently thought nothing of them. The accident occurred when one young Shiite was playing with a gun he thought to be empty, Hill said.

He said the Shiite Amal militia, which took control of the captives from the original hijackers, tried to indoctrinate the hostages.

He said that "the degree of terrorism and brutality that we experienced in the plane was deliberate and premeditated."

"You come from that environment and you're ready to fall in love with anybody that smiles at you. The Amal portrayed themselves as our protectors and our saviors. That's absolute nonsense. They were our captors."

He said there was a "definite affinity between the hijackers and Amal."

Hill and others also took issue with hostage Allyn Conwell and others who expressed strong sympathy for the Amal cause during their captivity.

"In most part I agreed with Allyn," said Jimmy Dell Palmer, who was freed last week because of a heart ailment. "But towards the last I was beginning to get the feeling that he was slipping a little bit too much toward their side."

"I'm being held captive by the people that are trying to indoctrinate me and tell me their cause and how right they are, and I cannot ignore the fact that I'm being held captive," Palmer said from his home in Little Rock, Ark.

"You have to understand that most of those people, those hostages, couldn't find Lebanon on a map three weeks ago," said Hill, who had been to the Middle East more than 100 times and was leading a group of 34 tourists at the time of his capture. "So the only thing they knew about this was the indoctrination to which they were subjected. So I don't blame them."

Conwell said in an interview on NBC's "Today" show that "we were a pretty large group, highly individualized people. Let's face it, we were Americans, and as such we have very varied opinions on just about anything that gets thrown up to the group."

Ex-hostage James Hoskins Jr., 22, said on his return to Indianapolis Tuesday that he became friends with both of his fellow hostages and some of his captors. "After a while, it became a friendly relationship with the people," he said. "They showed us how to work (a tank) and how to run it. The only thing they didn't show us was how to shoot it."

The worst accounts involved the first days of the hijacking while the hostages were still aboard TWA flight 847.

Clinton Suggs, a Navy diver stationed in Norfolk, Va., said he was "next in line to be shot" and was only five feet from fellow diver Robert Stethem, who was beaten then shot to death. Suggs said on the "Today" show that flight attendant Uli Derickson saved his life.

"While they were beating Robert when we had landed in Beirut the second time, I could hear him screaming and yelling and he was just in sheer agony. And then I heard the gun go off..."

"And then I could hear them say, 'One more. Five minutes.' And the hijacker came back where I was and he was kicking me and hitting me and calling me 'American pig.' And then the stewardess rushed over and she talked to him and said, 'No, please, please.'"

Her pleas apparently bought precious time, because within minutes other Lebanese militiamen boarded the plane. "And then right after that, we all stood up and we were rushed off the back of the plane onto a truck."

Henry Lee Lucas no-billed in murder cases

WACO, Texas (AP) — A McLennan County grand jury has cleared Henry Lee Lucas in three murder cases after testimony from his attorney, a jail counselor, Texas Rangers and others.

Grand jurors deliberated less than 15 minutes on Tuesday before deciding that Lucas was not responsible for the 1977 murder of Glen Parks of Bellmead, the 1978 murder of Rita Salazar of Georgetown or the 1981 murder of Dorothy Collins of Waco.

The bodies of all three homicide victims were found in McLennan County.

J.R. Closs, grand jury foreman, presented State District Judge George Allen with the jury's decision around 4 p.m., ending the inquiry that spanned 83 days and included testimony from about 20 witnesses.

But Attorney General Jim Mattox said his office will continue to investigate Lucas' travels from 1975-1983.

Lucas, now on Death Row, has confessed in hundreds of murders across the nation. But Clemmie Schroeder, the Georgetown jail minister who spent hours counseling with Lucas at Williamson County Jail, said Tuesday she does not believe Lucas committed any murders.

Ms. Schroeder, who spent about two hours testifying on Tuesday, said she brought with her "some old letters I had from Henry, and his daily prayer journal."

"He was made to confess to two murders that he was not guilty of, and then he wanted to kill himself instead of serving life in prison," she said.

"At the time, he thought that maybe he'd be able to show how law enforcement forced him to confess to those crimes. But then he got caught up in the lies and felt he was helping the families by solving cases. Also, it kept him off Death Row as long as he continued to confess," she said.

Parker McCollough, the Georgetown attorney who defended Lucas in the death of an unidentified hitchhiker, testified for around two hours Tuesday afternoon.

McCollough said he does not believe Lucas was responsible for the slaying of the woman, whose body was found near Georgetown on Oct. 31, 1979.

"I don't think he was involved in the number (of murders) I've heard," McCollough said.

Sgt. Bob Prince of the Texas Rangers spent about 20 minutes testifying. He said he brought some documents for the grand jury to consider.

The special grand jury for the past three months has been considering confessions made by the one-eyed drifter.

"We're glad we're through and can go back to work, but I don't have any comment at all," said Closs before leaving the courthouse. "We served as a jury and gave the judge our report, and that's all I have to say."

Mattox, who was not in Waco Tuesday, released a statement through his office in Austin supporting the grand jury's decision.

"District Attorney Vic Fezell and the grand jury took a long, serious look at the circumstances of these three crimes," Mattox said. "We are concerned about not closing the cases solely on the basis of Lucas' confessions. We want to see that the actual murderers are brought to justice."

Fezell, who along with Mattox headed the Lucas probe, told the Waco Tribune-Herald that he was pleased with the grand jury's decision to no-bill Lucas. Fezell said last week he expected the no-bills.

General Reed Lockhoof said that investigations conducted in conjunction with the grand jury probe will be compiled in a report to be released by the attorney general's office in August.

"I think it will give local authorities some indication of where Henry Lee Lucas was and when, instead of having to guess about the validity of his confessions," said Fezell.

175 California homes burn in firestorm; two dead

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Firefighters today battled a blaze that threatened the city of Ojai and forced the evacuation of thousands of people after six days of mostly arson-caused fires charred more than 80,000 acres, destroyed at least 175 homes and killed two people, authorities said.

Fires burned today in California, Idaho, Arizona and Washington.

The blazes, including one started by a plane crash and another by small-arms practice at an army base, have caused more than $30 million damage in California alone, authorities said.

Mayor Tom Bradley declared a state of emergency Tuesday as the third arson fire in three days left 65 homes in ruins and killed two people. San Diego Mayor Roger Hedgecock declared an emergency on Monday.

At least seven other fires burned out of control in California today.

One, a more than 9,000-acre fire that forced the evacuation of 1,000 residents near Ojai and 600 youths and counselors from Camp Ramah in nearby hills, burned toward the town, said U.S. Forest Service spokesman Earl Clayton.

"I don't know if we'll get this dude out before it gets into town," he said early today. Ojai is about 65 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

Most of the damage, including the Normal Heights fire Sunday that was San Diego's worst residential blaze ever, was caused by arsonists, authorities said after one fire roared up a slope Tuesday in Los Angeles' Baldwin Hills.

That fire, also believed to be arson, destroyed 52 homes, damaged 13 others and trapped two people who burned to death, officials said. Nine other people who were trapped in their homes and six firefighters and police were injured.

The blaze was being investigated as murder, said police Lt. Dan Cooke.

Meanwhile, firefighters neared containment today of the largest California blaze, 20,600 acres near Palm Springs.

A wildfire caused by a plane crash burned 740 acres, damaged five ranch buildings and closed the Riverside Freeway at Yorba Linda, 30 miles east of Los Angeles. Two people in the plane were killed, and three firefighters were hurt battling the blaze, Orange County fire spokesman Joe Kerr said.

At Fort Ord Army post, 100 miles south of San Francisco, small-arms practice at the 28,000-acre headquarters of the 7th Infantry Division ignited a 500-acre brush fire. It was controlled Tuesday.

At the Camp Pendleton Marine base, helicopters bombed a 2,000-acre brush fire with water Tuesday.

Another fire, blamed on arson, burned 7,200 acres near the Baboquivari Mountains, 50 miles southwest of Tucson, Ariz., authorities said.

In Goldendale, Wash., a 350-acre brush fire burned three homes and forced the evacuation of up to 50 people, said state Department of Natural Resources spokesman Rob Harper. The evacuees remained away from home today.

State district judge rejects request by white oil producers

AUSTIN (AP) — "White oil" producers in the Panhandle Field have lost another battle in what one says has become a "Panhandle War."

State District Judge Harley Clark on Tuesday rejected a request by white oil producers to block temporarily a Railroad Commission order that requires retesting of their wells.

Retesting, in fact, already has begun among those wells that use refrigeration — or LTX — units to chill vapor into a white-water liquid the producers call oil.

Some producers have acknowledged that if the commission disallows white oil in calculating whether a well is an oil well or gas well, they would have to shut down their wells.

An oil well is defined as a well that produces one barrel of oil per 100,000 cubic feet of gas, and operators who own only oil rights must have their wells classified as an oil well to produce. The tests would establish whether the wells in question can meet the criteria for an oil well without the refrigeration units.

Phillips Petroleum Co. and others maintain that the white oil producer are really just taking gas that Phillips and others who own gas rights eventually would produce.

Another advantage to having a well classified as an oil well is that one can be drilled on 10 acres. A gas well requires 640 acre-spacing.

Nineteen independent operators in the 1.5 million-acre Panhandle Field asked Clark for a temporary restraining order to halt testing of the LTX wells, which was set out in a May 13 Railroad Commission order.

Lawyers for the independents said their clients would suffer irreparable harm if the judge allowed the testing to continue.

Three witnesses testified at a 5½-hour hearing Tuesday, after which Clark issued an immediate ruling.

Bill Warnick of Lubbock, president of Aspen Petroleum, Inc., said his company had drilled 30 wells at a cost of $250,000 a well, and the majority now use LTX units. Asked if the commission's order could put his company's investment in jeopardy, Warnick replied, "Yes sir."

He said it would cost $1,000 a well to retest Aspen's wells, and he was asked if he could afford the $30,000 total cost. "No sir, I'm barely hanging on," he replied.

Warnick also said Aspen had not been paid for the past couple of years for casinghead gas, a byproduct of oil production, because the money was going into escrow.

Asked why Aspen had not been paid, Warnick said, "It's all these proceedings that are generally known as the Panhandle War that's been going on since 1981."

That was the year Phillips first went before the Railroad Commission to challenge white oil operators.

Austin lawyer Ivan Hafley, representing the white oil operators, described the commission order as "onerous, expensive and abnormal," but Jim Morrow, director of the commission's Oil and Gas Division, said he had heard testing costs reported as low as under $300 a well.

Morrow also testified that unless an operator refused to retest a well, no action would be taken by the commission until after Sept. 1, when the results of the testing could be reviewed. Operators refusing new tests would be subject to having their wells shut down.

Morris Enlow, who runs a well testing service in Pampa, testified that extra equipment required in the new tests would run his bid up from approximately $75 a well to $1,000 a well.

Asked if he was concerned some clients might not be able to pay, Enlow said, "Yes, I do have concern about that." He said new clients would be required to pay in advance.

Hafley said if producers put out money for new tests and then the commission order was held invalid, the producers could not recover their money.

Assistant Attorney General Harold Kennedy, representing the commission, said even if there was extra cost, "It is the cost of doing business in a regulated industry where the public interest is involved."

Hafley said, "The other side, if you'll pardon the expression, paints this as a black and white case. It's not, there are many areas of gray."

He said independent producers would decide within the next day or so whether to ask the Judge Clark for a temporary injunction pending a hearing on the merits of the case.

Communist Loas cooperates for first time

WASHINGTON (AP) — The remains of 13 American airmen killed in the crash of their Air Force gunship in Laos more than 12 years ago have been recovered by a U.S.-Laotian excavation team and returned to the United States, the White House announced Tuesday.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said the remains, recovered last February, have been identified by the U.S. Army's identification laboratory in Hawaii and the families of the victims have been notified.

The remains will be flown to Travis Air Force Base in California on Friday for burial later, the spokesman said.

It is the first time the communist government of Laos has cooperated in a joint recovery effort leading to the return and identification of Americans long listed as missing in action. U.S. officials are hopeful it will lead to others in the mountainous nation bordering Vietnam. Nearly 600 of the 2,464 American servicemen still listed as missing in Southeast Asia are believed to have died in Laos.

Speakes and Richard Childress, a member of the National Security Council staff, said the AC-130 gunship with 16 crewmen aboard was hit by anti-aircraft fire 10 minutes after it took off from Pakse, a provincial capital on the Mekong River south of Vientiane, on the night of Dec. 21, 1972.

The plane remained airborne but leaking fuel for about 10 minutes before it burst into flames and crashed, the spokesmen said. Two members of the crew parachuted to safety and were picked up that day by search-and-rescue teams, and the body of a third was recovered the next day and later identified.

The AC-130 is a Lockheed Hercules cargo plane converted into a flying gun platform with rapid-firing miniguns capable of laying down a carpet of fire at 6,000 rounds a minute. It was used extensively against suspected enemy troop concentrations and supply routes, including the Ho Chi Minh Trail through eastern Laos and Cambodia which served as North Vietnam's main infiltration route into South Vietnam.

Childress said the site of the crash could not be pinpointed at the time but that negotiations with the Lao government began in 1982 and led to the successful joint expedition nearly three years later.

Speakes said President Reagan plans to write the families "to personally express his sympathy for the anguish of their long ordeal during this period of uncertainty."

"We hope this is the first of many such excavations in Laos, and the president greatly appreciates the cooperation of the Lao government," the White House spokesman said.

Childress said the administration has been trying for a long time to improve relations with Laos, and he called the Pakse recovery mission "a major step in this process."

Pentagon spokesman Maj. Keith Schneider, identified the men, all of them Air Force personnel, as:

—Col. Paul O. Meder, of Jamaica, N.Y.

—Maj. Robert L. Liles Jr., of Shreveport, La.

—Maj. Francis A. Walsh, of Westport, Conn.

—Capt. Delma E. Dickens, of Omega, Ga.

—Capt. Stanley N. Kroboth, of Savannah, Ga.

—Capt. George D. MacDonald, of Evanston, Ill.

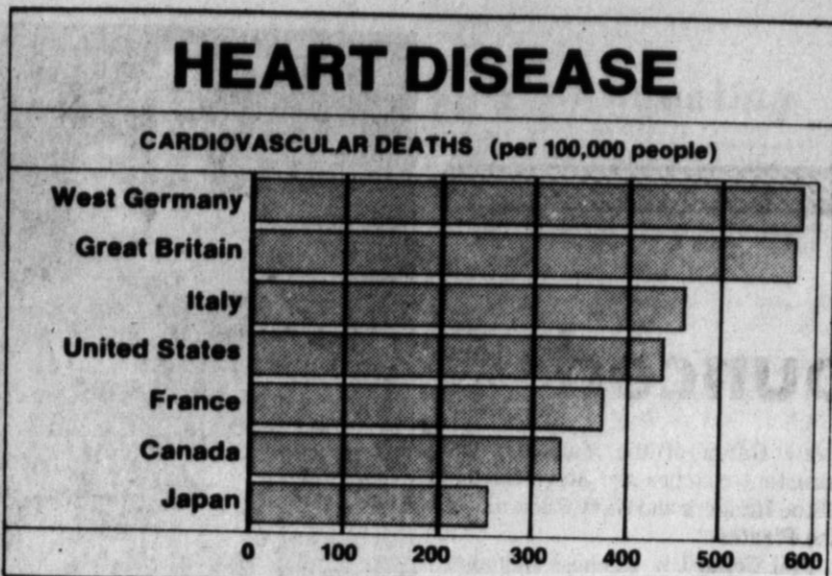

—Chief Master Sgt. James R. Fuller, of Cibola, Texas.

—Senior Master Sgt. John Q. Winningham, of Grover City, Calif.

—Master Sgt. Robert T. Elliott, of El Dorado, Ark.

—Master Sgt. Charles F. Fenter, of Tucson, Ariz.

—Master Sgt. Rollie K. Reaid, of Dora, Ala.

Lebanese airline would suffer from blockade

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — President Reagan's measures to close Beirut's airport to international aviation in retaliation for the TWA hijacking could mean the collapse of Middle East Airlines, the last link with the outside world for many Lebanese.

The airline, Lebanon's national carrier, is the only company that continued flying to and from Beirut following the June 14 seizure of TWA Flight 847 and the subsequent holding of 40 American passengers and crew as hostages.

The airline has kept flying despite the 10-year-long Lebanese civil war. Many times planes have taken off or landed with the sound of artillery fire echoing from the nearby mountains.

MEA, established in 1946, has a fleet that includes 15 Boeing 707 jets and three 747 jumbo jets. The Lebanese government owns 68 percent of MEA, Air France owns 28 percent, and private shareholders own the rest.

Capt. Saaduddin Dabbous, MEA's senior pilot until he retired several days ago, said the closing of the airport could lead to the loss of jobs for the airline's 5,000 employees.

MEA Chairman Salim Salaam issued a statement Tuesday saying that the Lebanese company, already suffering from the prolonged civil war, was the "prime innocent victim" of Reagan's measures.

Salaam said Reagan's moves to close the airport were an "arbitrary sanction that may cause it (MEA) tremendous losses and may expose the fate of thousands of families to a somber future."

Reagan's action specifically banned the once-a-week MEA flight to New York. Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Monday "the purpose is to place off limits internationally that airport until the people of Beirut place terrorists off limits."

Reagan urged other governments to take similar steps; a British Foreign Office statement indicated the British might follow the Americans' initiative.

Security at Beirut International Airport has been a major problem, with armed militiamen roaming the hallways and runways at will. The 17-day holding of the TWA jet was only the latest in a series of hijackings that either originated or ended up at the airport.

Lebanese prisoners freed

RAS AL-BAYADA, Lebanon (AP) — Israel today freed 300 Lebanese prisoners from among 735 captives whose release had been demanded by the Lebanese Shiite Moslem hijackers who held U.S. hostages for 17 days.

The release of the 300 came three days after the Shiite gunmen freed the last 39 U.S. hostages held in the Lebanese capital Beirut.

Most of the freed prisoners were members of the Shiite Moslem militia Amal, whose leaders had taken responsibility for the U.S.

hostages in Beirut from the extremist Shiite hijackers and brokered their release.

Israeli troops led by an armored personnel carrier escorted the detainees back into Lebanon, where about 100 Israeli troops remain in a border strip supporting a pro-Israeli Lebanese militia.

International Red Cross officials at Ras Al-Bayada, the northernmost Israeli checkpoint in a southern Lebanon, received the prisoners as they were freed one-by-one by soldiers wearing flak jackets.

Earlier, the prisoners filed out of the Atlit military prison in northern Israel into nine civilian buses for their 30-mile trip to the Israel-Lebanon border.

Citizens of countries earn more than U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The average resident of the United Arab Emirates, Kuwait and Switzerland all earned more than the average American in 1983, according to figures made public today by the World Bank.

The average income in the United Arab Emirates was $22,870, according to the figures. The UAE is a group of seven independent mini-states on the Persian Gulf, with a total population of 1,175,000. Their wealth comes from oil.

Oil was also the source of wealth in Kuwait, where the average income was put at $17,880. Its population is about 1,500,000.

In Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates, much of the average resident's income was in the form of free housing, education and health services.

The average income in Switzerland is $16,290, and $14,100 in the United States — slightly above Norway's average of $14,020.

The U.S. rating was better than it was in 1982, when Norway, Sweden and Saudi Arabia all had higher averages. Some of the difference may be due to the value of the dollar, which rose considerably on world markets in 1983.

The World Bank tries to make up for currency fluctuations by figuring exchange rates on the basis of a three-year average.

The United States won 83 gold, 61 silver and 30 bronze medals in the 1984 Olympic Games.

Switzerland, the Nordic countries and the United States are all among the bank's 19 high-income "industrial market economies."

They range down to Spain, where the average income was $4,780 a year. Those with average incomes over $10,000 were:

- Sweden, $12,470
- Canada, $12,310
- Denmark, $11,570
- Australia, $11,490
- West Germany, $11,430
- Finland, $10,740
- France, $10,500
- Japan, $10,120

Signup starts for YMCA racquetball leagues

Summer racquetball leagues with divisions for men's doubles, women's doubles, men's singles, and women's singles will open July 15, 16 and 18.

League competition will continue through Aug. 29. League play will include round-robin play for seeding, and tournaments to determine the league champions.

Doubles competition will be played on Mondays starting July 15. Men's singles play is scheduled on Tuesdays beginning July 16, and women's singles competition will be played on Thursdays starting July 18.

League competition will begin at 7 p.m. each night when matches are scheduled.

If enough participants sign up for the racquetball leagues, tournaments will be divided into class A and class B divisions.

Deadline to register for the leagues is July 11 at 5 p.m., with a fee of $15 per division entered for YMCA members and $25 per division for non-members of the YMCA. Players must furnish their own racquetballs.

Registration forms are available at the YMCA. For more information on the leagues visit the YMCA office or call 364-6990.

Astros edge Padres 3-2

Niekro gets 200th career win

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Houston Astros' Joe Niekro had just earned his 200th career victory, but he was already looking forward to 201 and to seeing his brother, Phil, team up with him to form a winning combination.

With Joe earning the victory Tuesday in a 3-2 decision over the San Diego Padres, the Niekros are 39 wins shy of the record of 529 held by the Perry brothers, Gaylord (314 wins) and Jim (215).

In the face of rumors that Phil, now pitching for the New York Yankees, may be in line to manage the Atlanta Braves should an opening occur, Joe predicted the brothers would soon break the Gaylord record.

"Who says Phil is going to quit pitching?" said Joe. "If we stay healthy, we should get the record. I hope to pitch five or six more years, and I know he wants to win 300. That means nine more if he does and I hope to get a few more too."

"But right now, I just want No. 201."

Niekro struck out six and walked four before giving way to Jeff Calhoun in the seventh, who fanned four in two innings and pick up his third save.

The Astros got their winning run when pinch-hitter Phil Garner hit a tie-breaking double in the eighth inning.

Garner, batting for Jerry Mumphrey with runners on first and third with one out in the eighth, doubled off San Diego reliever Craig Lefferts, who had just entered the game in place of starter Ed Wojna, 1-1.

"I thought I was going to be three or four hitters away. The biggest problem was settling myself down," said Garner. "You get a pumped up feeling when all of a sudden you get called on like that. But that's what it's all about."

Niekro, 7-7, recorded his fourth straight victory as he became the 84th pitcher in major league history to reach the 200-win plateau. With a 200-174 record, he also became the eight active pitcher to reach the milestone.

In the first inning, Wojna walked three of the first four batters he faced and managed an out only when baserunner Bill Doran was hit by the batted ball on Craig Reynolds' single to second. The Astros loaded the bases and produced a run on a groundout by Jerry Mumphrey.

Two of three passed balls by Houston catcher Alan Ashby in the game helped the Padres tie the score in their half of the inning. The first occurred on a strikeout that should have ended the inning, but instead Kevin McReynolds reached first to load the bases. Then Tony Gwynn scored on the other passed ball with the next batter at the plate.

San Diego's Steve Garvey, hitless in his 17 at-bats prior to the game, broke the tie in the fifth with his second hit of the contest. His two-out double scored Tim Flannery, who had an infield single and reached second on a passed ball.

Houston again tied the score in the sixth when Kevin Bass hit a two-out single to drive in Denny Walling, who had led off with a bunt single and stole second with one out.

In other National League action, Los Angeles defeated Cincinnati 3-0, San Francisco stopped Atlanta 8-3, St. Louis blanked Montreal 4-0, New York nipped Pittsburgh 5-4, and Philadelphia routed Chicago 11-2.

Dodgers 3, Reds 0
Fernando Valenzuela allowed just three hits in pitching Los Angeles over Cincinnati for his National League-leading fourth shutout of the season. Valenzuela, 8-8, struck out eight and walked two.

Pedro Guerrero had three hits and two RBIs as the Dodgers won their fourth straight game and broke a tie with the Reds for second place in the NL West.

Giants 8, Braves 3
Manny Trillo drove in two runs with a single and his first home run of the season and Jeff Leonard also knocked in two runs to power San Francisco over Atlanta.

Jim Gott, 4-5, allowed six hits and two runs over 6 2-3 innings before giving way to reliever Scott Garrelts, who was touched for an unearned run in the eighth before recording his sixth save.

The Giants rapped out 13 hits, eight against loser Steve Bedrosian, 5-7, and took advantage of four Atlanta errors for only their third victory in 15 games.

Dale Murphy drove in two runs for the Braves with his 20th homer, tops in the major leagues.

Cardinals 4, Expos 0
John Tudor won his seventh consecutive game, allowing only three singles, and Willie McGee rapped four hits and stole two bases to lead St. Louis over Montreal.

Tudor, 7-6, went the distance for the fourth time this season, striking out six.

Mets 5, Pirates 4
Ron Darling and Roger McDowell combined on an eight-hitter and Ray Knight knocked in two runs as New York snapped a six-game losing streak, their longest of the season.

Darling, 7-2, gave up all eight Pittsburgh hits before needing relief help in the ninth from McDowell, who gained his fifth save after snuffing a Pirate rally.

Larry McWilliams, 4-7, was the loser.

Phillies 11, Cubs 2
Glenn Wilson and Derral Thomas hit home runs and Shane Rawley scattered eight hits in his first complete game since Sept. 17 as Philadelphia routed Chicago.

Wilson's homer, a three-run shot, highlighted a four-run first inning for the Phillies off Rick Sutcliffe, 7-7, last year's Cy Young Award winner. Wilson now has 55 RBIs — tied for third in the NL — on only 71 hits.

Thomas' two-run homer came in the sixth inning, giving Philadelphia a 9-0 lead.

Rawley, 6-6, ended a personal three-game losing streak, striking out five and walking two.

"I felt I proved I could go the whole way," said Rawley, who has completed 20 games in 93 starts during his eight-year career.

At USFL meeting

Possible mergers discussed

By TOM CANAVAN AP Sports Writer

TEANECK, N.J. (AP) — Commissioner Harry Usher is looking for 12 good teams to play in the United States Football League in the fall of 1986.

Usher and league owners met for more than eight hours Tuesday at a local hotel to plan possible mergers, clubs transfers, team rosters and television contracts as well as a reduction of the 14-team league.

"I have expressed, as I have expressed in there, that 12 teams are the optimum number for 1986," Usher said. "That's part of the game plan and business plan I am going to try to effect over the next several months."

Usher planned at least three times with the owners this summer, but said there were no deadlines for deciding how many teams would make the switch from spring to fall, where they will be playing and what their schedules will be.

There also will be very little discussion of the details of the meetings, unless Usher is doing the talking. A gag order was placed on the owners and their representatives who attended the meeting, said Jerry Sklar, president of the Birmingham Stallions.

San Antonio, Tampa Bay, Denver and Houston were teams mentioned by Usher as possible candidates to be merged or moved during the league's 14-month hiatus.

"The issue of where Houston is going to play was certainly in the forefront," said Usher. "Whether it's going to go here, there or elsewhere is one of the topics of discussion."

He said Shea Stadium in New York City was not going to be the new home for the Gamblers' franchise.

The commissioner refused to say whether the Los Angeles Express would be one of the teams that would be eliminated in a reshuffling of the three-year-old league. The financially ailing Express was taken over by the league this season.

"It is my feeling that Los Angeles is an important market to have a USFL team," said Usher.

Usher said San Antonio is a good market for the league, and noted that officials in Tampa are "looking at the situation to see if it wants to merge, or whether it continues to exist in Tampa Bay."

Denver officials have been holding periodic talks about moving the franchise to Honolulu, said Usher, who added that Denver and Houston are possible merger candidates. He did not, however, say which existing clubs might absorb those franchises. Sklar said the next owners meeting would take place on July 12.

Most owners and team representatives refused to discuss the meeting.

"I can't tell you anything because I don't think anything happened," said Vince Lombardi Jr., president of the Oakland Invaders.

He remained confident the USFL would survive.

"Fellas, you can't get up in the morning and go to work if you don't think that."

Players of month named in baseball

NEW YORK (AP) — Pedro Guerrero, the Los Angeles Dodgers' outfielder who set a National League record for the month of June with 15 home runs, was chosen as the NL Player of the Month.

John Tudor of the St. Louis Cardinals, who was 6-0 with a 1.34 earned run average during June, was named the league's top pitcher.

In the American League, New York Yankees outfielder Rickey Henderson, the league's leading hitter, was named AL Player of the Month. Henderson batted .416 during June.

Reliever Jay Howell of Oakland, one of five players traded by the Yankees to the A's for Henderson during the offseason, was chosen as the league's top pitcher. Howell was 4-1 with six saves during the month.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Wilt Chamberlain are first and second, respectively, in NBA scoring, but Elvin Hayes took the most shots, a total of 24,272.

Pumped out in steady stream

Fitness books are numerous

By PHIL THOMAS AP Books Editor
NEW YORK (AP) — Americans, as yet, haven't gotten around to toting that barge and lifting that bale, but a lot of them are running, jogging, pumping iron, walking, exercising, and dieting in their pursuit of health and fitness.

The quest for a better body fad has been steadily building over the past several years, and the publishing industry, ever alert to satisfy new book markets, has been pumping out a steady stream of books aimed at this segment of contemporary society.

A number of these books have landed on the best-seller lists. Among the latest are "Dr. Abravanel's Body Type Program for Health, Fitness and Nutrition" (Bantam), by Elliot D. Abravanel and Elizabeth A. King, and "Weight Watchers Quick Start Program Cookbook" (NAL Books), by Jean Nidetch.

If you care to sample some others, and there are plenty of them, here are a few selected at random:

"Thin Within: How to Eat and Live Like a Thin Person" (Harmony), by Judy Wardell, in collaboration with Barbara Austin; "The Diet Workshop Wild Weekend Diet" (Delacorte), by Lois Lindauer; "Dr. Berger's Immune Power Diet" (NAL Books), by Stuart M. Berger; "The 4 Day Wonder Diet: Lose 10 Pounds in 4 Days" (Putnam), by Margaret Danbrot; "Maximum Sports Performance" (Random House), by James F. Fixx with the Nike Sport Research Laboratory, and "Lift Your Way to Youthful Fitness: The Comprehensive Guide to Weight Training" (Little, Brown), by Jan Todd and Terry Todd.

Other selections include: "The Venus Syndrome: A Four-Step Transformation for Improving the Bottom-Heavy Figure" (Doubleday), by Eugenia Chandris; "Running Without Fear: How to Reduce the Risk of Heart Attack and Sudden Death During Aerobic Exercise" (Evans), by Kenneth H. Cooper;

"The Complete Sports Medicine Book for Women" (Fireside-Simon & Schuster), by Mona Shangold and Gabe Mirkin; "Jim Palmer's Way to Fitness" (Harper & Row), by Jim Palmer, and "Diet for a Strong Heart" (St. Martin's), by Michio Kushi with Alex Jack.

Still can't decide? How about "How to Teach Your Dog to Play Frisbee" (Simon & Schuster), by Karen Pryor. Subtitled "An Illustrated Guide to Outdoor Exercise and Fun With Your Best Friend," the book's cover observes that in addition to exercising your dog it will "give you good regular workouts as well."

Second annual Amarillo Triathlon set in September

The second annual Amarillo Triathlon, which includes an 800-meter swim, a 40-kilometer bicycle race and a 10-kilometer run, is set for Saturday, Sept. 7.

The event gives athletes an opportunity to qualify for the national short course triathlon, scheduled in late September at Hilton Head, S.C.

More than 150 people participated in the 1984 Amarillo Triathlon, and at least 350 are expected to enter this year's event, reports Kevin Knapp, race director.

The overall winners in the men's and women's divisions will win a trip to the national triathlon. Trophies and plaques will be awarded to the top three finishers in each division.

Entry deadline for the triathlon is Aug. 28, or until the maximum number of entries is received.

Athletes interested in entering the triathlon may call Kevin Knapp at 373-7800, or in Texas only at 1-800-692-1338. Or, write to Kevin Napp, Box 9480, Amarillo, TX, 79105.

Electronic treatments

Muscle stimulation tried

By RON STATON Associated Press Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — Two months before the 1984 Ironman Triathlon, Therese Godfrey was still suffering from a foot injury suffered eight months earlier. When ultra-sound treatments, taping, physical therapy and cortisone shots failed, she turned to electronic muscle stimulation "as a last resort."

Miss Godfrey, 39, a vitamin and food supplement distributor, completed the grueling Ironman race, and attributes her strength to the electronic muscle stimulation treatments.

Glenn Lum, 41, was overweight and out of shape when he first tried electronic muscle stimulation. He quickly saw results.

Treatments four times a week, followed by 45 minutes of swimming, and proper diet have resulted in a loss of 15 pounds, Lum says.

"Sometimes after work, I am dead tired and don't feel like doing anything, but the treatments rejuvenate me and often I can go for a swim," says Lum, a teacher.

Electronic muscle stimulation (EMS) is the focal aspect of the Bio Health Center, which Pete and Sharon Meindersma opened a little more than a year ago.

"It has no cardiovascular benefit," says Meindersma. "But it helps circulation, tones and firms the muscles, increases the range of motion, and helps prevent atrophy."

"It re-educates the muscle to come into natural shape to function on a normal basis," he says.

"It's a new way to get in shape quickly with a minimum amount of stress on the body," says Mrs. Meindersma.

The procedure involves placing rubber pads on motor points of major muscle groups and applying mild electric impulses to force the muscles to contract. With wires leading from the pads to a machine, the procedure looks similar to an electrocardiogram test.

The level of contraction is controlled by an attendant operating a machine powered by two 9-volt batteries. The impulses last up to 3½ seconds with intervals up to five seconds in a 45-minute treatment.

While the center advertises that the golf tee was patented in 1899 by George F. Grant.

treatments will result in loss of inches, Meindersma says there is no loss of pounds because there is no burnoff of calories.

The center emphasizes exercise and good nutrition.

"Electronic muscle stimulation doesn't take the place of other forms of exercise," Meindersma says. "But it allows toning and strengthening to enable people to start on an exercise program."

"We've had women who have tried health clubs but their muscles are so weak they cannot push the weights," he says. "After a few sessions here, they can go back to do the weights."

"We don't claim to be a wonder-treatment, but at the same time we have seen good results," he says.

The idea is not new, and has been used for years in medicine and professional sports, particularly in East European countries, Meindersma says.

"Only recently has electronic muscle stimulation come into use in the United States as an aid to fitness," he said.

The medical community has been somewhat skeptical of the procedure, even though EMS, in the United States, has "medical overtones," Meindersma says. "But we're starting to get referrals from doctors," he says.

Although the Bio Health Center is not a medical facility, a physician and two nurses are on the staff.

The center's program includes nutritional counseling, hydrostatic bodyfat testing, cytotoxic food sensitivity testing, a hair restoration clinic, and a tanning bed that eliminates most harmful ultraviolet rays.

In Olympic bicycle competition, the word drafting is used to indicate one rider who stays right behind another to take advantage of lessened wind resistance.

Jackson hits pair of doubles

By ALAN SAYRE Associated Press Writer

California Angels Manager Gene Mauch says it's easy to tell when veteran slugger Reggie Jackson is in top form.

"You can tell when it's there," Mauch said. "Even when he takes (a pitch), he's in a good position (at the plate)."

If Mauch's theory is correct, Jackson must have been in the groove Tuesday night. He drove in three runs with a pair of doubles to lead the Angels to a 7-2 win over the Texas Rangers.

The win, combined with Oakland's 10-1 loss to Kansas City, boosted the first-place Angels two games ahead of the A's in the American League West.

Mauch said Jackson's touch with the bat comes and goes.

"Suddenly, sometimes it's there," he said. "No telling how long it will last."

Jackson said keeping hold of that ability to produce is one of the keys to the Angels' staying in first place.

"I need to be consistent to help this club," Jackson said, adding that Mauch is "doing what's best for me" by giving him periodic rests.

"It's not how many for me anymore," the 39-year-old Jackson said. "I'm not going to get as many at-bats, as many hits. But if I'm consistent, I'll help the club."

Jackson said his age now requires him to be more dedicated to his pre-game workout program — including stretching, running, hitting and throwing.

"I've got to get to the park by 4 p.m. to do the type of work I need," he said.

Rob Wilfong added a two-run homer, his third of the season, for the Angels, while Kirk McCaskill, 3-5, scattered eight hits, walked four and struck out three in eight innings to earn the win.

Wilfong's two-run homer and Jackson's two-run double highlighted California's five-hit, five-run first inning. Jackson's double to left knocked in Rod Carew, who walked, and Daryl Sconiers, who singled off rookie right-hander Bob Sebra, 0-1.

Sebra, making only his second start since being called up from Oklahoma City June 25, also surrendered a run-scoring triple in the first to Craig Gerber. Gerber's shot to right scored Bobby Grich, who had singled.

Sebra was pulled in the second inning for reliever Chris Welsh after Sconiers walked and scored on Jackson's double. Ruppert Jones then singled off Welsh to score Jackson.

Sebra, who was charged with seven earned runs in 1 2-3 innings, gave up six hits and two walks.

In the sixth, Texas got its first run on Bobby Jones' single. The Rangers scored again in the eighth on Pete O'Brien's sacrifice fly that brought home Alan Bannister, who had tripped.

Royals 10, A's 1

In June, George Brett had nine runs batted in. After collecting eight in the first two days of July and raising his batting average to a season-high .336, he still doesn't feel like he's hitting the ball as well as he can.

"I don't think I'm in the groove like in the past where I would come to the park knowing I'm going to drive the ball hard three or four times a game," Brett said Tuesday night after hitting a pair of towering three-run homers and a single to carry the Kansas City Royals to a 10-1 rout of the Oakland A's.

Charlie Leibrandt, who scattered six hits in eight innings for his seventh victory in 12 decisions, was far more impressed with Brett's hitting stroke than was the perennial American League All-Star third baseman.

"We expect him to pick us up and tonight he did it again," Leibrandt said. "His first home run really took the wind out of their sails."

Yankees 5, Blue Jays 3

New York's Rickey Henderson hit the first pitch of the game over the right-field fence for his 10th homer and finished with three hits and two RBIs to support Ed Whitson's strong pitching against Toronto.

Whitson, 4-6, allowed only three hits in eight innings.

Orioles 5, Tigers 4

Baltimore, after surrendering a grand-slam homer to Darrell Evans in the first, came back with four homers, including Mike Young's game-winner in the bottom of the 10th inning, to beat Detroit.

Young's homer and another solo shot — by Cal Ripken with two outs in the ninth and the Orioles trailing 4-3 — came against 1984 Cy Young Award winner Willie Hernandez, 4-4.

"I shouldn't have gone back out," said Hernandez, who had pitched two innings Monday night and 1 2-3 innings on Sunday. "My arm feels kind of tired. I made a fool of myself. The pitch to Young was a fastball inside with nothing on it. I'm not perfect. . . just a human being."

Twins 8, Indians 7

Greg Gagne had three hits and keyed a four-run Minnesota seventh inning with a tie-breaking double against Cleveland.

The Twins racked Cleveland reliever Tom Waddell, 2-5, for four hits in the seventh to overcome a 7-4 deficit.

White Sox 12, Mariners 4

Ozzie Guillen highlighted a five-run fourth inning with a bases-loaded triple and Harold Baines had five RBIs, including a grand-slam homer, as Chicago ended a six-game losing streak with a rout of Seattle.

A bases-loaded walk to Tom Paciorek and a passed ball gave the

Second Place Finishers

White Sox a 2-0 lead in the fourth before Guillen's bases-clearing triple down the first-base line.

Tim Lollar, 3-4, was the winner despite giving up three runs in the sixth, two of them on Jim Presley's 17th homer.

Brewers 4, Red Sox 3

Ted Simmons' sacrifice fly in the 10th inning lifted Milwaukee over Boston.

The Red Sox, who have lost four straight games and 11 of their last 14, were one out away from victory before Charlie Moore's double in the bottom of the ninth tied the score. Paul Molitor's leadoff double, his fourth hit of the game and 1,000th of his career, and a sacrifice set up Simmons' game-winning fly.

Research conducted on muscle development

By MARK WARBIS Associated Press Writer

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — In mid-March, Lonnie Snow weighed 172 pounds, spent most afternoons watching television and could do about 30 situps.

That wouldn't be too impressive, even for a man of 40. But Lonnie is 11. But six weeks later, heading into the stretch of an eight-week research project conducted by an assistant professor of physical education at Boise State University, Lonnie was 14 pounds lighter, could pump out 40 situps, and had "something to do after school."

He was one of 36 youths from 8 to 22 who volunteered to grunt and groan their way to muscle tone three times a week for Ron Pfeiffer's research on the comparative effects of weight training on pre-pubescent, pubescent and post-pubescent youth.

But what started out strictly as serious science for Pfeiffer turned into a sort of blossoming for some of the participants, including Lonnie.

It seems what Pfeiffer calls the "normal American cross-section of kids" involved in the program are developing more than just muscles.

"The young kids in particular are highly motivated," Pfeiffer says. "They feel they're getting stronger, and it's helping their self-image."

At a time of adolescent uncertainty, the weight-training regimen provided direction and the opportunity to cultivate self-discipline.

Lonnie wants to lose 50 pounds, and he wants to get stronger to become a better wrestler. When statistics on this spring's workouts are gathered dust on library shelves, he still may be reaping its benefits.

"Some of my friends don't really like doing sports," he says. "They'd rather stay home and watch TV."

But there were no sofa-sitters in Pfeiffer's lifting club, and no lack of excitement about an activity more paced members of the jogging and racquetball set might consider drudgery.

There's also a strikingly sincere desire to achieve goals, even though that's not required by Pfeiffer's program.

Charlie Wadams, 12, started out curling 25 pounds, and with two weeks left in the experiment was just 10 pounds from his goal of 55. Dennis Snow, 13, Lonnie's brother, set his sights on 70 pounds in the curl. He advanced from 20 pounds to 50 pounds in six weeks.

"It's more fun than regular weight-lifting courses because there's people to help you and make sure you do it right," he says.

Charlie says his enthusiasm has encouraged the rest of his family to get more involved with a general exercise program.

Pfeiffer's study, toward a doctorate at Brigham Young University, picks up roughly where one conducted last year by a professor at Northeastern University in Boston left off.

That research focused on children through puberty and emphasized susceptibility to injury, but Pfeiffer included older subjects in an effort to distinguish a difference in each group's muscle-development pattern.

His hypothesis was that children going through youthful "growth spurts" will gain strength faster than those who already have passed through adolescence. So far, the younger kids have been gaining muscle strength "just hand over foot," at rates at least proportionally equivalent to his older volunteers, Pfeiffer says.

Nine different weight exercises, designed to focus on major muscle groups, were conducted during 45-minute workouts under the constant supervision of research and teaching assistants. Weights and tensions were set according to age and ability.

Even before the research results were in, the project proved gratifying for Pfeiffer. Only four lifters dropped out, he says, there were no injuries, "and we haven't even had any kids who were sore."

Domino shack provides recreation

BEN ARNOLD, Texas (AP) — The afternoon sun has chased away a thunderstorm, and now the only sound around Ben Arnold is that of dominoes being slapped on a wooden table at the town's most popular hangout.

It's an old, small shack built from the leftovers of a demolished house about 25 years ago, something to provide shelter for those wanting to play dominoes, chew tobacco and tell jokes with the boys now and then.

About a dozen men, mostly retired farmers from the Milam County community north of Cameron, are whiling away this afternoon in traditional style.

"Why don't you just pass and get it over with?" one snaps.

"Here, try and play this," responds the other, slamming a domino at the end of the ivory chain.

Slam! The other plays a domino on it. "Give me 10."

No, they're not mad. They just act gruff and impatient to spice up the game. Slamming the dominoes? Just a little spirit.

"Means the game's getting hot," explains Fred "Pie" Folschinsky, 64, one of the more outspoken and gruff members of the daily gathering. "We don't get mad — what for? We just argue and have fun, pass the time away. Then we go home and garden."

He got his nickname for stealing an apple pie from his own mother when he was 5 years old.

No criminal records here, though. They don't even gamble in this place. Not that there's not an urge occasionally. It's just tradition, established by the founders of the shack to keep the womenfolk from worrying about losing the homestead.

"There's been more hell raised here than anywhere in the county," says Herman "Footh" Dorner, also 64. "But never has a nickel gone across this table. They decided long ago that there would be no drinking or gambling, because the women would get mad. There's been some drinking of late, but no gambling."

Well, there was one time several years ago when Dorner and two friends put up a nickel apiece for a game. "But there wasn't 15 cents difference in our pocketbooks when we got through," Dorner assures.

One of his cohorts in the only recorded gambling incident there was O.S. "Spud" Collins, 80, the only surviving member of the domino addicts who built the domino shack in the early 1950s. (It has never been given a name that could be printed.)

Collins remembers when he and his friends played dominoes at a filling station nearby, probably not long after the game of dominoes was invented.

After the station closed, they wandered like nomads in search of a place to play, toting their cigar box of dominoes. They played on a card table between the post office and the grocery store. They played in a friend's garage.

Then someone gave them a little house out in the country.

"We went over and tore it down, and here's the lumber right here," Collins says, pointing to the shack.

Some of the domino players had carpentry skills, and they directed the construction of the olive drab green shack and similarly colored table.

A funeral home donated the folding chairs, and the butane heater that warms the place in the winter is fed for free by a butane company in Cameron.

Folschinsky has been playing there for only a few years, because it wasn't until then he moved to town from a farm several miles out.

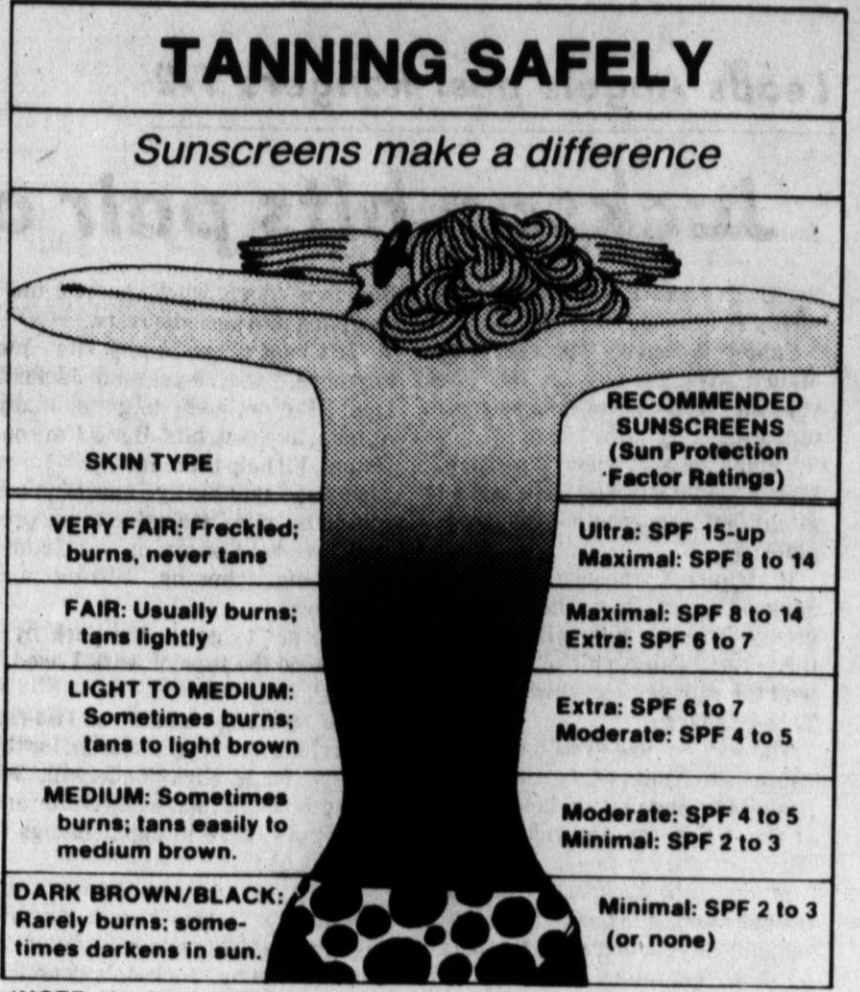

"It keeps us from drinking and running wild women," said Folschinsky, who was once a farmer. ("I didn't retire; I quit. Farmers just quit.")

"The people, we have a hell of a time here," he said. "We have barbecues, we eat watermelon."

The players say youngsters of today don't know what they're missing, what with all the distractions from the honest fun of dominoes.

House ag committee to begin final drafting on new farm bill

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House Agriculture Committee plans to begin a final round of drafting a new farm bill when Congress returns to work next week.

Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, committee chairman, said Monday the various subcommittees have completed work on individual sections of the 1985 legislation. On July 9, he said, the full committee will begin drafting a final package.

"My intention is to hold continuing sessions, including evening meetings if necessary, to finish work on this package as quickly as possible so we can have a bill ready for consideration by the House at the earliest possible time," de la Garza said.

The committee's schedule calls for three days of work next week, including evening sessions during the July 9-11 period. Additional dates will be announced, if needed, he said.

An aim is to have a farm bill ready for House debate this month, although other pressing business, including a list of appropriations bills, could delay floor action until after the August recess.

De la Garza and Rep. Edward R. Madigan, R-Ill., the committee's ranking GOP member, said it was important to American farmers to have quick action by the panel.

According to committee staffers, here's how the main commodity sections shape up at this time:

-For wheat, feed grains and soybeans, there would be a four-year program beginning with 1986 harvests. It would continue target price protection for wheat and feed grains, with targets increased from current levels but payable on 50 percent of each producer's acreage base rather than on all of his eligible land.

Price support loan rates, the amount a producer can borrow from the government by using crops as collateral, would be based on 75 percent to 85 percent of the average of past market prices. However, in years when this would mean a reduction in supports, the maximum cut would be 5 percent.

Also, the secretary of agriculture would get discretionary authority to use a modified "marketing loan" program for wheat and feed grains to make U.S. grain more competitive on the world market. However, producers would have the right to continue using the traditional price support loans.

-Cotton and rice programs would include price support loans at 85 percent of an average based on market prices, with year-to-year reductions restricted to no more than 5 percent. This system is already in effect for cotton but would be new for rice. Target prices used to compute "deficiency payments" to farmers would be frozen at 1985 levels next year. Beginning in 1987, target prices would be based on a production-cost formula, with an annual reduction limit of 5 percent.

Dairy supports would be linked to changes in dairy farm production costs and commercial demand for milk. This would be done in a five-year program beginning on Oct. 1, 1985, by basing each year's support initially on changes in production costs but adding a feature under which the support could be reduced if large surpluses develop or increased in case of future shortages. The program also would include a stand-by plan for farm-financed payments to dairy producers who reduce production.

-For sugar, wool and peanuts, the subcommittee proposal includes a provision to continue the sugar program for four years with the minimum price support rate kept to the 1985 level of 18 cents per pound on raw cane sugar.

The wool support program would be extended for five years and the support rate maintained at 77.5 percent of the amount produced by a formula linked to production costs.

Peanut growers would have their program continued for four years with a provision allowing marketing quotas to expand (with growth shared by new producers) as domestic needs increase. Price supports for peanuts needed to fill the domestic market's demand would be adjusted for increases in production costs.

Block says Egypt next target for export subsidy program

WASHINGTON (AP) - Agriculture Secretary John R. Block says Egypt will be the next target for a new $2 billion commodity export subsidy program aimed at gaining larger market shares for American farmers.

The program was announced in May by the Agriculture Department after Congress pressured the administration to offer the subsidy plan to foreign buyers in hopes of improving the U.S. farm export situation.

Block said Tuesday that Egypt will be offered the opportunity to buy up to 600,000 metric tons of wheat flour, equivalent to 800,000 tons or 29.4 million bushels of wheat, including a bonus to be provided by U.S. exporters from government stockpiles.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of wheat.

The move was seen as another slap at the European Community, which Block and other administration officials say has been nosing into traditional U.S. farm markets by paying export subsidies to lower selling prices.

Under the program, often referred to as export PIK or payment-in-kind, free surplus grain owned by the department's Commodity Credit Corp. is used as a bonus, effectively lowering the price to a selected foreign buyer.

Block said the CCC bonus will enable exporters to compete at commercial prices in the Egyptian market. Sales of 600,000 tons would represent more than 40 percent of Egypt's estimated wheat flour import needs for a year.

Until the European Community set up its system of internal supports and export subsidies, Block said, the United States had about 50 percent of the world flour market. But in 1984-85, he said, that share has dwindled to about 15 percent. During this period, the EC's share increased from about 20 percent to 55 percent.

Block said the latest export PIK offer "is targeted to the Egyptian market since it is one of that is clearly characterized by unfair trade practices by competing countries. Also, the sales would represent additional exports of wheat flour for the United States in the world market."

The first export PIK offer was made to Algeria on June 4. Block said that so far Algeria has not indicated it will take advantage of the offer, which involved sales of up to 1 million tons of wheat or about 36.7 million bushels.

At current farm prices for wheat estimated by USDA at $3.06 per bushel, the offer to Egypt would have an equivalent value of about $90 million. The offer to Algeria, involving up to 36.7 million bushels, would have an estimated U.S. farm value of $112 million.

The size of the bonuses and price details are to be worked out between private exporters, the countries involved and USDA technical experts.

500 dairy farms hit by support loss

WASHINGTON (AP) - About 500 dairy operations will disappear as a result of the government's July 1 reduction in milk price supports, according to estimates by the Agriculture Department.

The USDA figures show that 273,370 cow farms are expected this year. If the July 1 reduction in milk supports had not taken effect, the estimate would have been 273,870 cow operations, which are defined as "any place having one or more milk cows on hand" during the year.

Cow numbers, with the July 1 cut in supports, were put at 10,880,000 head, 20,000 fewer than if the reduction had not taken place. Milk output per cow remains the same, estimated at 12,689 pounds for the 1984-85 marketing year that runs through Sept. 30.

The estimates were included in an economic impact analysis of the milk price support program and the changes that have recently taken effect. A copy of the report was provided Tuesday at the request of The Associated Press.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block announced last week that the support would be cut to $11.60 per 100 pounds, the second 50-cent cut this year. On April 1, the support was reduced to $12.10 per hundredweight.

The reductions were authorized by Congress in an effort to cope with rising dairy surpluses. After peaking at $13.10 in 1983, supports were cut to $12.60 per hundredweight on Dec. 1 of that year.

Milk cow operations have been declining for many years and the current decline is minimal compared with some earlier cutbacks. In 1969-70, for example, there were 647,860 dairy operations. Through 1983-84, when there were 285,740 in operation, the decline averaged about 26,000 per year, compared to this year's drop of 12,370.

The report showed that total milk output, after declining in 1983-84 for the first time in six years, is on the rise again to near-record levels. Output in 1984-85 was estimated at 138 billion pounds, up about 1 percent from last year. Without the July 1 cut in price support, milk output might have climbed to 138.2 billion pounds this year.

Milk production declined last year as dairy farmers cut back under a paid "diversion" program financed by producers. Those that reduced production received payments. The 15-month program ended on March 31.

Prices of all milk sold to plants - which means all grades of milk - are expected to average $13.20 per hundredweight in 1984-85, down from $13.38 last year. That continues the downward trend since milk peaked at an annual average of $13.74 in 1980-81.

The report indicated that retail prices of dairy products, including butter and cheese as well as fluid milk, may rise about 1.4 percent this year, about in line with recent annual increases. The increase might have been about 0.5 percent more if the July 1 reduction in supports had not occurred, although other factors weigh heavily, too.

In spring, many folks turn to the greening of America. Lawn care is the top home-gardening activity - a favorite with 63 percent of U.S. households. It's followed by flower gardening (47 percent) and houseplant care.

Meat imports are below quota level

WASHINGTON (AP) - The latest estimate of meat that will be imported to the United States this year continues to fall short of the level that would trigger mandatory quotas on shipments, says the Agriculture Department.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block said Monday that 1985 meat imports, mostly lower-grade beef used to make hamburger, would not exceed 1.18 billion pounds. That would be about 139 million pounds below the 1985 trigger level of 1.319 billion pounds.

The Meat Import Act requires the president to restrict the imports if the estimate for the calendar year equals or exceeds the trigger level. The estimates are made every three months.

Block said that based on the July 1 estimate, there is no need to impose import restrictions in the third quarter.

"Our analysis of conditions in this country and abroad affecting meat imports strongly suggests there will be no need for import restrictions for the remainder of the year," he said.

The United States agreed in principle in 1972 to support a United Nations arms embargo against South Africa.

Dutch police and marines stormed a prison chapel near The Hague Oct. 30, 1974, and liberated 15 hostages held for four days by convicts.

The U.N. General Assembly voted in 1971 to admit mainland China and expel Taiwan.

BE COOL

Many people think that there is but one optimum temperature for each type of wine. It is, however, really not that critical. Just remember that the simpler the white is, the colder it should be served. Light reds only need light chilling. Do not overchill fine whites or champagnes. It numbs the flavor. Another point of note is that it takes but one to two hours to chill wine in a refrigerator. Do not store unopened fine wines in a refrigerator for more than few days. It can adversely affect the flavor. The quickest way to cool wine is in ice and water. It is much faster than with just ice alone.

Are you planning a summer wedding? If so, have you considered serving wine? Wine adds excitement to every meal. ## Farmers help bereaved family

The Hereford Brand, June 25, 1985

At least two dozen farmers in the western part of the county gathered Sunday to perform an act of kindness not unusual for a Texas Panhandle farm community.

The men spent the day cutting the entire wheat crop of Leland Burns, whose wife, Erma, died on Saturday. The couple had lived in the Adrian area nearly 30 years.

By using nine combines, Burns' neighbors were able to harvest the nearly 800 acre crop by around 11:30 p.m. Sunday. John Borman, who the Brand was told initiated the project, himself provided two combines, two trucks, a grain cart and the help of his two sons and hired hand. The wheat would probably have taken Burns ten days to cut.

Among those who helped in the effort were Lawrence Jackson, Harley and Greg Bronniman, Roger Green, Robert and Ricky Lloyd, Charles, Kenneth, Joe, Richard and James Meyer, Ray and Tom Skaggs, David Blankenship, John Noggler, Ronnie Fangman, Butch Borman, Frank Borman, John Borman and sons Randy and Greg and Jeffrey Fairchild.

How do you define a 'good neighbor'?

What are neighbors?

Neighbors are women cleaning a house when their own needs to be cleaned; loading a lawn mower in a pickup and hauling it miles to mow a lawn when their own has been begging to be mowed for days; cooking cakes and pies and casseroles and bread and fresh vegetables and hams and roasts and delivering them with a cheering smile, and doing a hundred different things that only they can see needs to be done.

Neighbors are a battalion of sunburned, work-hardened men mounted in gigantic threshing machines of green, red, yellow, and silver flanked by a squadron of trucks with engines revved-up waiting to haul someone else's grain to the elevator.

Neighbors are prayers and thoughts, expressed and silent. They are visits when companionship is needed and quietness when solitude calls. Somehow the two are measured in exact, blessed proportions.

Neighbors are something that cannot be bought, legislated, appropriated or voted into existence by a corporate board. In West Texas they are like a soaking rain when all appears lost—they just "are" and they defy explanation.

Neighbors are people that we see everyday and they are people we see only occasionally. They are people of the same church or a different church or no church at all.

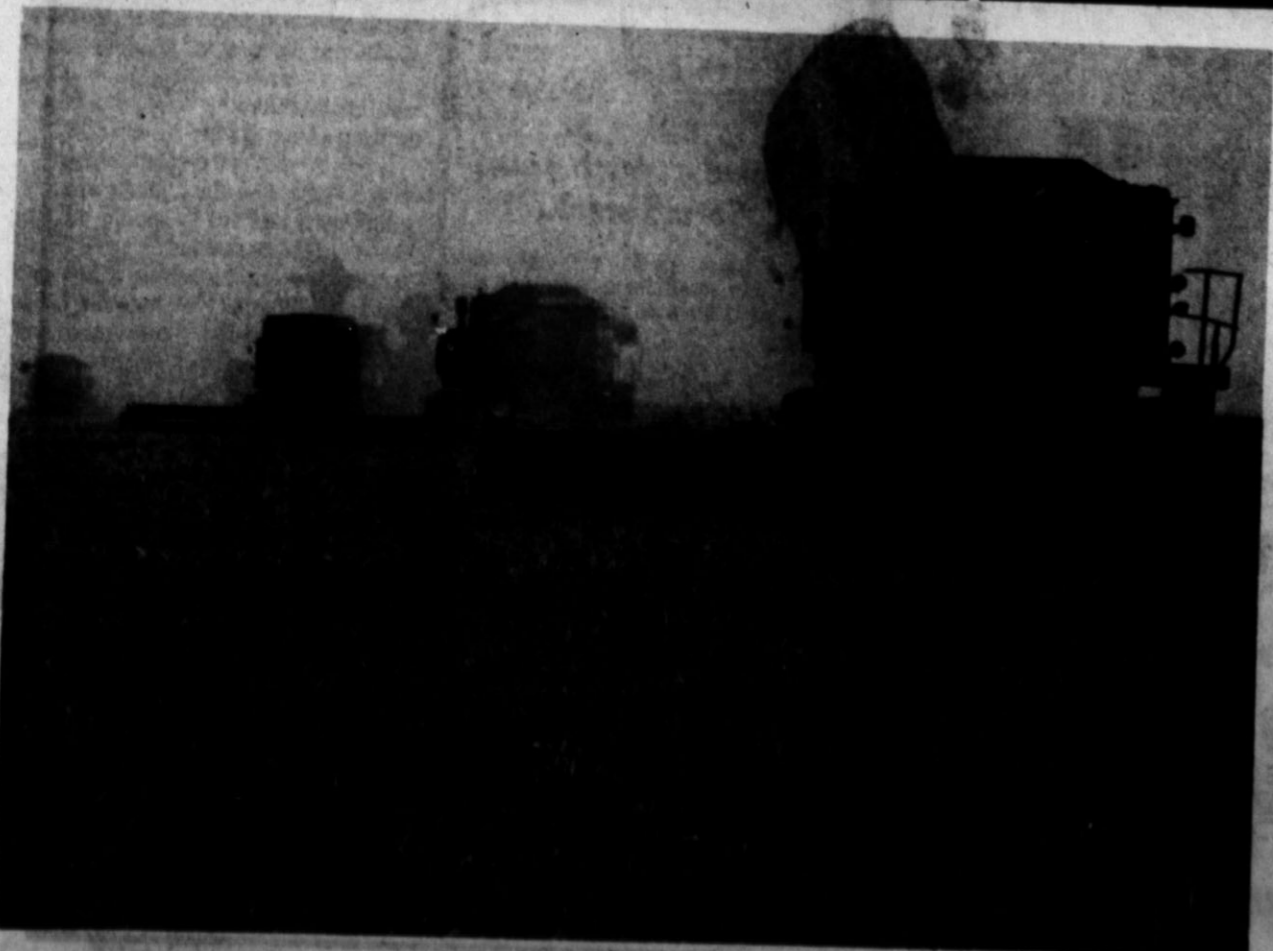

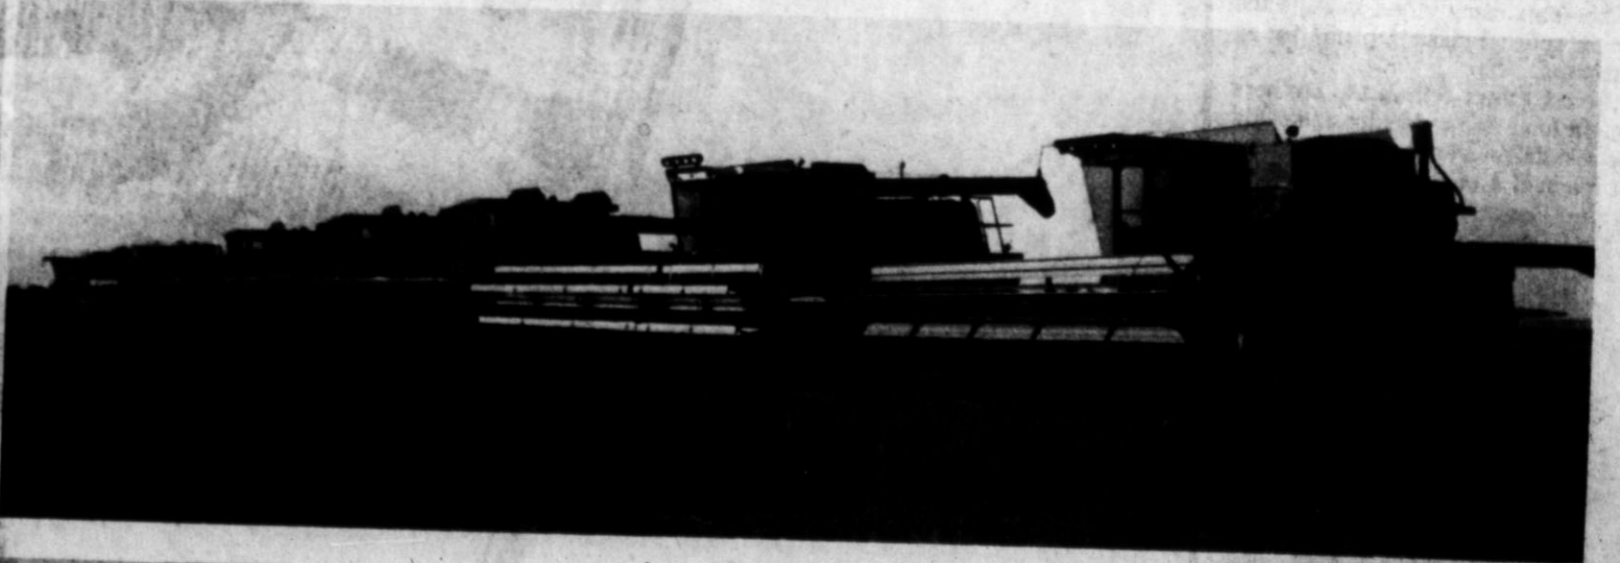

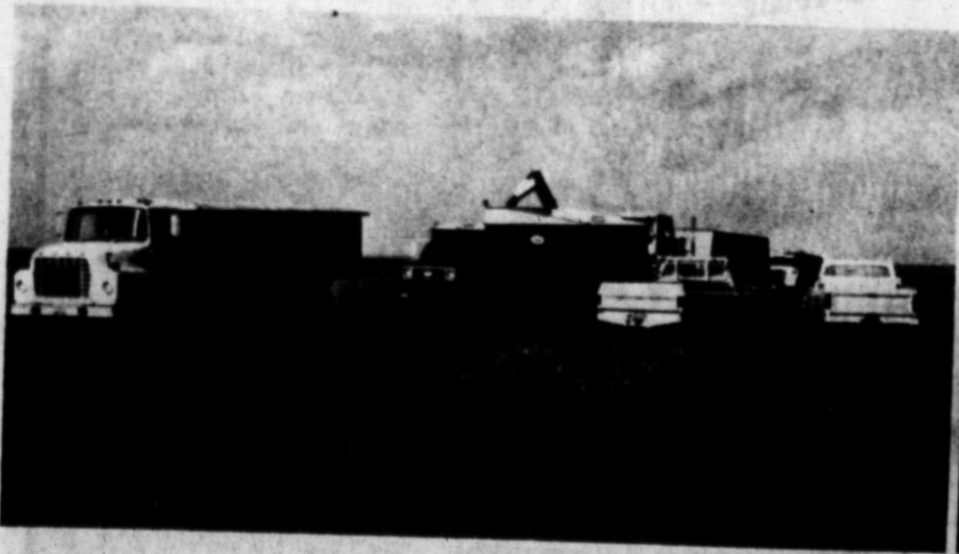

When things are running smoothly we may seldom think of them and they may seem few and far away.

But when a crisis arises or a burden appears too great for one person or one family to shoulder, they close ranks and become a legion. Like a mirage on a hot harvest day they appear. They do things for free and without being asked, things that ordinarily they couldn't be hired to do for any price because they could never find the time.

Neighbors like this represent the best of our region and of America. They reflect love in its purest, simplest, hand-rubbed state. There is no way we can properly thank them.

All we can do is say "thank you" with a lump in our throats and a silent vow in our hearts to return the favors in kind whenever and wherever possible.

Texas bearing brunt of dropping oil prices

AUSTIN—In these delicate days of budget peril due to dropping oil prices, several state officials are fighting for every cent due the Lone Star State.

In recent days: —Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro challenged the Supreme Court to reconsider a controversial ruling he says could lose millions in future revenues to Texas schoolchildren.

—Texas Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace warned that conditions are ripe for another Arab oil embargo.

Mauro Challenges Ruling

Texas Most Wanted Fugitive

BAYTOWN, Texas — Police say brothers George Duran Trejo and Servando Trejo Duran, Jr., have wandered the same path through most of their life.

They lived together in Baytown, worked at the same type of jobs, and even might have killed together.

Now they are linked together once again. The pair, wanted on warrants charging them with the December, 1984, murder of Eusebio Gomez, have been added to the Texas Most Wanted list. Rewards of up to $1,000 each are being offered for information leading to the capture of the two fugitives.

Detectives with the Baytown Police Department say that around 2:10 a.m. on December 15, 1984, Trejo and Duran got into an argument with Gomez around Harbor and Market Streets. A witness told investigators that Duran stabbed Gomez in the heart, while Trejo hit the victim on the head with a baseball bat.

An autopsy report indicated that either the stab wound or the blow to the head would have been sufficient to cause Gomez' death.

On January 24, 1985, the brothers were indicted on murder charges by the Harris County Grand Jury.

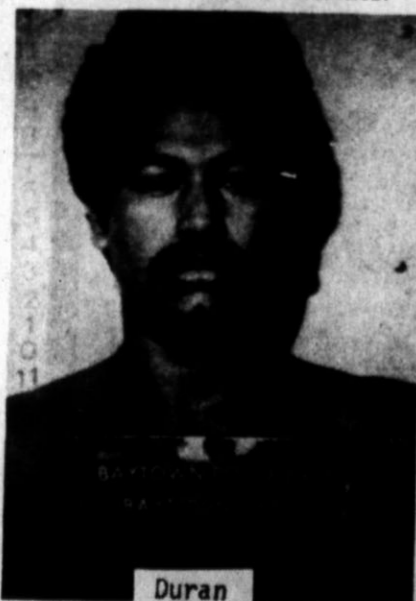

Servando Trejo Duran, Jr., is 23 years old, 6-0, 195 pounds, with black hair and brown eyes. When last seen by authorities, he was wearing a thick mustache. He has a tattoo with the name "Marie" on his right shoulder. Authorities say Duran sometimes uses the first name "Jimmy."

George Duran Trejo is 17 years old, 5-3, 210 pounds, with black hair and brown eyes.

Detectives say that although Duran and Trejo are brothers, one uses his father's last name and the other uses his mother's maiden name.

The pair usually find work in the construction industry, primarily as laborers.

Investigators believe the brothers might have fled to Mexico and could be residing in a border town, just out of reach of American authorities.

Christopher Columbus discovered Cuba in 1492 on his first voyage to the New World.

In June, the Texas Supreme Court gave shallow mineral rights on 817 acres to a Webb County property owner, a position opposite the state's long-standing claim of ownership.

But Mauro is challenging the high court to reconsider its decision, saying if applied statewide, it could eventually affect about seven million acres of land and the millions in revenues which finance Texas public schoolchildren.

Mauro manages that fund, the Permanent School Fund, and warns that as much as $918 million in future monies will be lost.

Texas Lawyers Surprised

The Court's ruling changes the traditional interpretation of the 1895 Legislature's intent when it passed the Relinquishment Act, allowing the state to sell the surface but not the minerals of public lands. Since then, the state has divided all mineral income off Relinquishment Act lands 60-40 with the surface owner.

But the ruling would take from the state its heretofore assumed ownership of the shallow minerals, coal and lignite, and Mauro is arguing that the Supreme Court "has given away the mineral rights to state land that the surface owner had never even paid for."

The case strikes near the heart of Texas' traditional mode of funding its public system, and the Texas legal world and several present and former state officials are much surprised if not astounded, by the high court's decision.

New Oil Embargo

Dropping oil prices are contributing to lower inflation, and if it weren't a Texas Railroad Commissioner sounding the warning, few would give heed to the thought of another oil embargo which caused high prices and long filling stations lines in 1973.

But Commissioner Mack Wallace is again warning of the folly of failing to plan for energy independence, and he's comparing today's conditions with those preceding 1973: foreign nations are flooding the U.S. with lower-priced, government-subsidized oil products and are driving American refineries out of business.

"I saw what happened in '73, and I don't want it to happen again. This is not a hollow threat. This is an economic war we are fighting now," Wallace said.

Texas Hit

Texas comes out as the man any other state, but the brunt of decreased domestic production, closed refineries, loss of thousands of jobs.

Some oil industry spokesmen are predicting from $4.78 billion in lost business for Texas by 1990. Domestic refineries would lose 63,000 American jobs.

Wallace says the free market isn't free, because nations like Libya and Saudi Arabia subsidize their refineries, which is why some Texans are calling for a tax or quota on foreign oil.

Skeptics may wish to recall that Wallace traveled the country with the same warning prior to the '73 crisis.

Believers can probably be readily found in Houston, where 35 percent of total employment is connected to oil and 120,000 jobs have been lost in the past 30 months. Area housing starts are down 47 percent, one-fourth of all Houston apartments are vacant, and some 37 million square feet of downtown office space is unrented.

White, Clements . . . Briscoe?

Former Gov. Bill Clements is happy about a movement to draft him to run against his old nemesis, Gov. Mark White, and White acted like he was happy, too.

Told of Clements' possible rematch challenge in '86, White said to reporters: "Come on, Bill! Come on, Bill!"

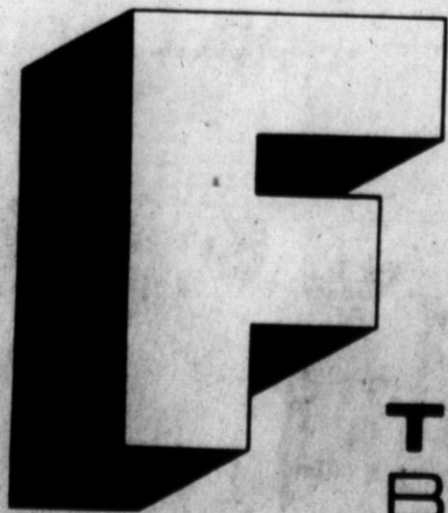

Clements, for his part, was flattered by the formation of a "Draft Clements Committee", but did not commit to a race. He has made no secret of his search for a GOP candidate to whip White, though.

But so far White has gotten the most fight from a Democrat, the second cousin of White's former boss, Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

Andrew Briscoe III, a Dallas businessman, criticized White for weak leadership, for raising taxes and for misleading voters about bringing lower utility rates.

White served as Secretary of State to Gov. Briscoe, also a strong supporter of White. The former governor was "a little hesitant" about the challenge.

Opposition party claims proof of voter fraud

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — The National Action Party says it found the proof it has sought for years to support its claim that elections are fixed in favor of the ruling party.

But National Action officials add that the discovery of thousands of "ghost" voters in the northern states of Nuevo Leon, Chihuahua, Durango and Coahuila and in the Mexico City federal district has come too late to affect Sunday's nationwide vote.

"We are thinking about requesting that the false credentials be declared null, but we don't have much hope of achieving that," said Pablo Emilio Madero, National Action's president. "It's a problem because we don't have much time to count all the (false) credentials," he said in a telephone interview from Mexico City.

National Action, known as PAN, is accusing the dominant Institutional Revolutionary Party of using fictitious names to inflate the voting lists. Because voting cards — which citizens must show in order to vote — are issued from the registration lists, the Revolutionary Party, or PRI, can then bring in voters from outside or simply stuff the ballot boxes, the opposition party charges.

Fernando Canales Clariond, National Action gubernatorial candidate in the northern border state of Nuevo Leon — of which Monterrey is the capital — says his party has "discovered the pattern they (the PRI) follow to inflate the voting list."

The registration numbers of nonexistent voters begins with the number 15 in the Monterrey suburb of Garza Garcia, a PAN stronghold, while in Chihuahua state the allegedly false credentials begin with the number 17. In Durango, voters whose registration begin with number 08 don't exist, in the northern border state of Coahuila the code number is 15, and in the Federal District numbers beginning with 2600 have been found to be false, Madero said.

Fernando Gonzales Quiroga, president of the Nuevo Leon state electoral commission, said technicians from Mexico City have been called to Monterrey to review the lists and determine if they have been falsified.

"Our lawyers are preparing a criminal suit against those responsible for handling voting lists in the federal Interior Ministry and against those responsible in each state," Canales said Tuesday.

He said the list is inflated by at least 15 percent in Nuevo Leon and perhaps up to 30 percent.

"This is a demonstration that the political system in which we live is a dictatorship because the choices we have in this really big problem are limited," Canales said. "Perhaps the only one they would understand would be to put thousands of people in the street and scream at them."

Madero, who was defeated in the race for Monterrey mayor in a 1976 disputed election and was the PAN's presidential candidate in 1982, said the PAN has no legal recourse to demand that the elections be postponed.

"Anyway, this will serve as an argument for after the elections to insist on a new electoral list," he said. "We haven't had in the past the proof that we have now."

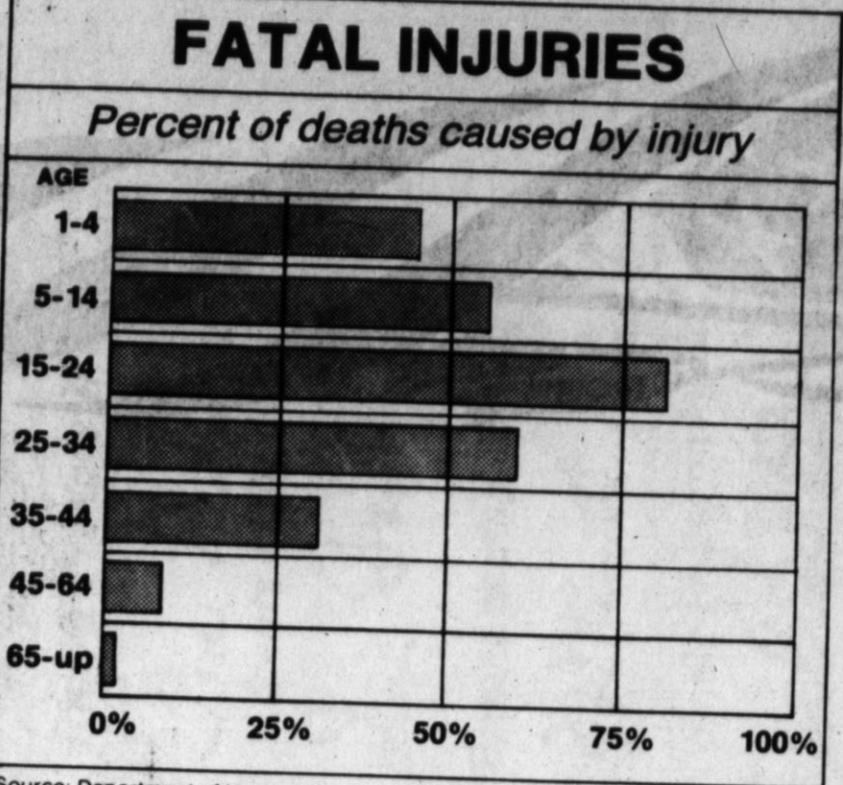

Sunday's elections are for the governorships of seven states, for federal representatives and some state and municipal posts.

Alejandro Paez Aragon, PAN candidate for federal representative in the controversial Garza Garcia district here, meanwhile, has published a handbill offering a 100,000 peso reward, or about $408, for the best photograph of ballot box stealing or stuffing or violence against the PAN on Sunday.

In another election dispute, the daily Monterrey newspaper El Norte published a story Tuesday which said teachers in the state have been told they will not be paid until after Sunday in order to require them to represent the PRI in the elections.

"Although they are placing us as representatives of the PRI at the precincts, our vote will be for National Action," El Norte quoted one unnamed teacher as saying.

PRI has dominated Mexican government and politics for more than half a century, but National Action is mounting an unusually strong challenge this year, particularly in the northern border states.

Water pressure low in North Texas community

ROWLETT, Texas (AP) — It's been a long, hot summer for residents of this North Texas community, where there often isn't enough water to operate the pool slide or wash clothes.

"We kept sticking to the pool slide because there wasn't enough water to keep it wet," said resident Kathy Ladebauche.

And Dawla Boyd said she can't wash her clothes on the weekend or certain week nights.

"It takes five minutes just to fill a glass of water," Ms. Boyd told The Dallas Morning News.

Other residents, mainly in western sections of Rowlett, said Monday that their water pressure is so low that they have problems flushing toilets, taking a bath or just washing their hands.

Officials said small pipes allow only a small amount of water to pass through at any one time, causing a lack of water pressure in some areas.

But officials said the problem should be resolved by July 15 when the first water lines are run to a new two-million gallon ground storage tank for Rowlett, located northeast of Dallas.

The town's growth is partly responsible for the water pressure problems, said officials.

"We're working as fast as we can and in a few weeks, the water should flow easy again," John Schroy, a Rowlett City Council member, said. "Our town is just growing faster than anticipated and the hot summer kind of crept up on us."

Schroy told the newspaper that census figures predicted the city would have about 10,000 residents this year, but the actual number is closer to 13,000. He said the new ground storage is supposed to accommodate a population of 30,000.

"Our problem is not with the supply of water — because we've got plenty of it — but it's the bottlenecks in the distribution system," Schroy said.

Pipes carrying the water are not big enough to carry the volume of water needed during peak morning, evening and weekend periods, Public Works Director N.L. Stewart said.

Schroy said water from nearby Lake Ray Hubbard could be used to control a blaze if the current system is strained in an emergency.

The city first became aware of a water pressure problem last summer, when they started making plans for improving the lines.

Rowlett officials have instituted a mandatory water conservation program until the new lines have water service back to normal. It restricted outdoor watering to odd-numbered addresses on odd-numbered days and even-numbered addresses on even-numbered days.

Today in History

Today is Wednesday, July 3, the 184th day of 1985. There are 181 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On July 3, 1863, the three-day Civil War Battle of Gettysburg, Pa., ended in a major victory for the North with the retreat of the Confederate troops. President Abraham Lincoln dedicated a national cemetery on the battlefield the following November.

On this date: In 1608, the city of Quebec was founded by Samuel de Champlain.

In 1775, Gen. George Washington took command of the Continental Army at Cambridge, Mass.

In 1890, Idaho became the 43rd state of the Union.

In 1898, the U.S. Navy defeated a Spanish fleet in the harbor at Santiago, Cuba, during the Spanish-American War.

In 1950, American and North Korean forces clashed for the first time in the Korean War.

In 1962, Algeria became independent after 132 years of French rule.

In 1976, Israel launched its daring mission to rescue about a hundred Jewish passengers and Air France crew members who were being held at Entebbe Airport in Uganda by pro-Palestinian hijackers.

Ten years ago: The Labor Department reported that the nation's unemployment rate fell from 9.2 percent in May to 8.6 percent in June, but officials called the decline a statistical aberration.

Five years ago: The Labor Department said unemployment declined to 7.7 percent in June, down a tenth of a percentage point from May — but officials called the decline a statistical aberration.

One year ago: The U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the Jaycees may be forced by state laws to admit women as full members with the same status as men.

Today's birthdays: Jazz musician Pete Fountain is 55. Playwright Tom Stoppard is 48. ABC News correspondent Geraldo Rivera is 42. Actress Betty Buckley is 38. Singer Laura Branigan is 28.

March for America parade planned

SWEETWATER, Texas (AP) — A dentist who discovered this West Texas city had planned no Independence Day celebration has organized a "March for America" in its place.

Dr. Al Densmore said he was disappointed when he learned no patriotic observances were planned in his hometown. His Fourth of July parade was scheduled for 9 a.m. Thursday.

"When I was a kid on the Fourth of July, there were always parades and picnics," said the Wisconsin native.

Densmore, 65, said the mayor confirmed Tuesday that municipal officials had no citywide plans to celebrate Independence Day.

The World War II veteran then organized the impromptu Fourth of July parade to the courthouse. He urged participants to meet at a grocery store parking lot for the march.

"This is going to be a 'March for America,'" said Densmore. "It's going to be a visible expression of our patriotism, of our love for our country."

Densmore said everyone with an uniform should join the parade and bring a flag. He said the parade was not limited to veterans.

He said he remains optimistic about the turnout because "I feel like there's a whole lot of people who would like to express their gratitude to their country and to God."

"It's going to be fun, whether there's only one or an army of us," he said, adding that the police department has agreed to "protect us from getting run down."

He said he has advertisements for the parade in the Sweetwater Reporter and on radio station KXOX.

Census Bureau says population is up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Those schoolrooms that have been standing empty in recent years will soon be facing a new crop of youngsters, new Census Bureau figures indicate.

The nation's pre-school population shot up by 9 percent between 1980 and 1984 as the huge post-war Baby Boom generation moved into their prime childbearing years.

Pre-schoolers totaled 17.8 million in 1984, with all but six states posting increases, the report said.

Those youngsters will soon be taking the places of the so-called Baby Bust, the current school-age generation which posted a four-year decline of 5.3 percent to 44.8 million, affecting four states out of five.

The largest declines occurred in the District of Columbia, Connecticut and Massachusetts. Only 10 states experienced increases in this group, led by Utah and Alaska, the bureau said.

The baby bust occurred as young people postponed marriage and family in favor of education and careers. However, that generation is now becoming settled into jobs, marrying and having families.

Ever wonder why so many drivers insure with State Farm?

Ask any one of them about our service, protection, and economy, then give me a call.
