County does not plan tax increase

Deaf Smith County commissioners will not raise taxes for the 1990-91 fiscal year.

County Judge Tom Simons explained that Deaf Smith County taxpayers will not have a tax hike in the upcoming year. Simons said he felt that Tuesday's article about the county's budget workshop wrongly stated that the county would likely raise taxes this year.

County commissioners will definitely not raise taxes, Simons said.

County Auditor Alex Schroeter did tell commissioners that the county's anticipated revenues for the 1990-1991 budget year will fall $220,006 short of anticipated expenses.

The county now tries to carry forward enough money in each of its accounts to cover expenses for a two-month period, according to Schroeter.

The county plans to pay for the $220,000 shortfall by using a portion of the county's year-end balances to cover the shortfall, Simons said.

According to Simons, the county will still have some money carried forward in its accounts to start the upcoming budget year.

"What we've been trying to do is tax for how much we need, not to maintain a carryover from year to year in addition to how much we need to cover expenses," Simons said.

Senior supper is Friday

The Senior Center will hold a Pancake Supper Friday from 5 to 8 p.m. as a fund-raising event, and all residents of the community are invited to participate.

Tickets are $3.50 for all you can eat, and children under 6 are admitted free. Tickets are available at the Senior Center, 426 Ranger, or they can be purchased at the door.

In conjunction with Pioneer Day activities, the classes of 1935 and 1940 will be meeting and dining at the Center on Friday evening.

Williamson honored at reception

Dr. Marc Williamson, center, was honored with a going-away reception Tuesday at the Hereford High School cafeteria. Williamson, Hereford's assistant superintendent for instruction, is leaving to become superintendent at the Pine Tree Independent School district at Longview. Visiting with Williamson are, from left, Alice Lockmiller, Hereford's curriculum director, Supt. Charles Greenawalt, Williamson's wife, Camille, and County Judge Tom Simons.

Rural students have higher failure risks

NEW YORK (AP) - The countryside offers no escape from the social and economic pressures that lead kids to do poorly in school, a study suggests.

A study that surveyed school officials in 312 rural, urban and suburban districts last year cast doubt on the popular image of rural children leading wholesome, trouble-free lives compared with youngsters in crowded communities.

The study asked officials to estimate the percentage of their students who fit into one or more of a dozen risk categories, including involvement in crime, sexual activity, drug or alcohol abuse, depression, child abuse, poverty or parents who are substance abusers.

Rural children fared worse than non-rural children in 34 out of 39 statistical comparisons, according to the survey by the National Rural Development Institute based at Western Washington University.

The report thus suggests that the social and economic strains facing rural schoolchildren are every bit as bad, and perhaps worse, as those facing city youngsters.

Isolation and rural customs are partly to blame, said Doris Helge, executive director of the institute based at Western Washington University, in Bellingham, Wash.

"A lot of it is attitude," Helge said in a telephone interview. "Sexual activity and dropping out of school is not that unusual in rural settings. There's an acceptance of low self-esteem. A kid has to be really deviant to get any attention."

A draft of the study, which also compared the state of students with mental and physical handicaps to that of non-handicapped children, was made available to The Associated Press.

There are brighter spots on the rural landscape, notably in Minnesota, North Dakota and Iowa, where residents have long put high value on education and completing school.

But Helge, an authority on rural education problems, said rural children with handicaps or psychological problems may fare worse than others because isolated communities often lack social services to address their needs.

Clements confident a bill will pass

AUSTIN (AP) - Although he vetoed the Legislature's $555 million school finance reform plan, Gov. Bill Clements says he remains confident that some plan will be enacted without court intervention.

"I think that the Legislature, in its wisdom, will write an acceptable bill before June 1. And I predict to you that it will pass," Clements said.

After a unanimous Texas Supreme Court ruled that the current finance system unconstitutionally discriminates against poor schools, lawmakers and Clements were given a June 1 deadline to take action.

If they fail, a court-appointed special master will write a new formula for giving state money to local schools.

Legislative leaders scrambled Tuesday to find either the votes to override Clements' veto or a substitute measure that would win his signature.

Several lawmakers predicted that the court would have to step in, but Clements said he's not worried.

"There's certain people in the House and Senate that are full of doomsday predictions. And doomsday has never occurred yet," he said.

State District Judge Scott McCown earlier said he would take control of all state spending for schools on June 1. Clements said he believes the "drop dead date" is June 21. That's the day McCown has ordered Special Master William Kilgarlin to present him with a final reform plan.

"I don't think the judge will actually take any action until June 21," Clements said.

"If we don't get this settled in this particular special (legislative) session, why I'll call another special session. And we're going to use our full time until June the 21st ... to try to solve this problem," he said.

But Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, the author of the Legislature's plan saw it differently.

"If we fail to override, I'm putting this button on. It says: 'Here comes the judge,'" said Parker, chairman of the Senate Education Committee.

In vetoing the school finance bill, Clements said he didn't like the half-cent sales tax increase that would be needed to pay for it.

"I won't agree to any sales tax whatsoever. Period. I've only said that about a hundred times, and one of these days everybody's going to start believing it," he said.

Lawmakers have been in non-stop special sessions since Feb. 27. The $555 million school finance bill they passed last week was the product of those 2 months of legislative wrangling.

The governor boasted before the Senate's unsuccessful try that the Legislature, which is controlled by Democrats, couldn't override his veto.

Senate Democrats immediately tried. But they backed down without an override vote after Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby failed to find the 21 supporters needed for the required two-thirds majority in the 31-seat chamber.

Sponsors of the override attempt gave up when Hispanic senators said they would join Republicans to uphold Clements.

While not agreeing with Clements, the Hispanic lawmakers said they would rather take their chances with a court-written plan than with the bill being debated.

"For a lot of us as minorities, we have had to look at the courts to do what's right ... I have a great deal of faith in the judiciary," said Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi.

"We have a big club behind us - and that's the unanimous Supreme Court decision and the appointment of a master," Truan said.

Afterward, Clements said, "A governor has to be pleased when he gets a veto to stick ... Gloating is not in my nature."

With 60 Republicans in the 150-member House, Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said he wasn't certain that chamber could override Clements' veto, either.

"I'm very, very, very disappointed. I think the Legislature has worked long and hard and I think we have done our job. I do not think this was in the best interest of the people of this state," Lewis said.

Administration raises S&L bailout estimate

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Bush administration today dramatically increased its estimates of the cost of rescuing the savings and loan industry, based on a new forecast that as many as 1,030 institutions will fail.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady told Congress the government will need to borrow between $90 billion and $130 billion to clean up the S&L mess, far higher than the $50 billion in long-term borrowing authority included in the S&L bailout bill passed by Congress last year.

These estimates do not include the cost of paying interest on the borrowings. When that figure is included, the S&L bailout cost is expected to top $300 billion.

Brady blamed the increased cost on a weaker economy, particularly in real estate. Slumping real estate prices mean that more S&Ls are likely to fail since the bulk of their loans are based on real estate prices.

When the S&L bailout legislation was passed last year, it was believed that between 450 and 550 institutions would fail.

The administration based its new cost estimate on a belief that between 722 and 1,030 institutions will fail.

Brady stressed that any estimate could be wrong because of the large number of variables. But he said the administration's new $90 billion to $130 billion estimate provided a reasonable range of what the ultimate cost will be.

"One could make even bleaker assumptions and make an estimate based on even higher populations of failed thrifts," he said in testimony before the Senate Banking Committee.

"While such a scenario is theoretically possible, we believe it to be quite unlikely under any reasonable set of economic conditions," Brady said.

The administration said that for just the 1991 fiscal year, which begins next Oct. 1, the cost of the S&L bailout will be $61 billion, almost eight times the projection made in Bush's budget request to Congress in January.

The higher S&L bailout estimates were described by one Treasury official as the "largest wildcard" plaguing administration and congressional negotiators trying to reach a compromise on the 1991 budget. The official briefed reporters on condition of anonymity.

Brady and fellow administration officials unveiled some of the S&L figures Tuesday during the third round of budget negotiations with congressional leaders. According to papers distributed at the closed-door session, an administration "guesstimate" is that the S&L rescue will cost $116 billion over the next five years.

At that three-hour meeting in the Capitol, Democrats and Republicans moved toward a consensus that about $500 billion in tax increases and spending cuts would be needed to balance the budget over the next five years. But they remained divided over precisely how much savings would be needed.

Participants in the talks emphasized that the administration estimates of the S&L bailout costs could change dramatically. Variables include how the economy performs, how many additional thrifts fail and how successful the government is in selling S&L assets it takes over.

It's "a real hit-and-miss number," said House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta, D-Calif.

Roddy addresses DARE graduates

Daphne Roddy (left, standing at podium) addressed Shirley School's sixth graders Tuesday at their DARE graduation ceremonies. Roddy, the 1990 valedictorian at Hereford High School, told the students that she had participated in two state track meets, won awards in speech and other activities and was the highest-ranking member of her class because she was able to stay drug- and alcohol-free. Also receiving certificates Tuesday were students from St. Anthony's School.

Sexual Assault Awareness Week proclaimed

Mayor Wes Fisher, center, has proclaimed this week Sexual Assault Awareness Week in Hereford. On hand for the proclamation signing were Shelly Moss, left, director of the Hereford Outreach Office of the Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence Center in Hereford and Sgt. Sammy Sanchez of the Hereford Police Department.

City proclaims sexual assault awareness week

This week has been proclaimed Sexual Assault Awareness Week in Hereford.

Mayor Wes Fisher proclaimed the week in Hereford on Monday. The week's theme is "Sexual Assault: A Community Response."

The theme highlights all of the different members of the community that work with survivors of sexual assault. It also enlists all of the citizens of Deaf Smith County to become involved in a more peaceful society by empowering them to action against sexually violent behavior.

Many citizens are working to offer care and assistance at all times through the Hereford Outreach Office of the Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence Center. Public education is offered through schools, churches and community organizations, and they have provided training for law enforcement agencies, emergency medical personnel, prosecutors, mental health and education professionals.

Also endorsing the week are the Deaf Smith County sheriff's office, the Hereford Police Department, the Hereford Brand, Child Protective Services and KPAN Radio.

The goal of the week and the services and education provided is to eventually eliminate the threat of sexual violence through active citizen involvement and support for changing public misconceptions and attitudes which perpetuate sexual violence.

Gilbreath sued for sexual harassment

AUSTIN (AP) - The state Republican and Democratic party chairmen are accusing each others' candidates for land commissioner of unethical conduct in a race that is increasing focusing on personalities.

Texas Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle on Tuesday demanded that Republican Wes Gilbreath withdraw from the land commissioner's race because a former employee has sued him for sexual harassment.

Gilbreath, a Houston businessman, immediately denied the accusations and countered with his own.

He and Texas Republican Party Chairman Fred Meyer said incumbent Democratic Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, who is seeking another term, was making illegal, personal gains from his office.

In a statement, Slagle said that Gilbreath has been accused by his former executive administrator, Lois Turner, of making sexual advances to her in October 1988 and then firing her when she refused to respond to his advances.

Slagle gave reporters copies of the lawsuit, which was filed by Mrs. Turner and her husband, Carl, in a Harris County district court.

The lawsuit stated that Carl Turner "was rendered impotent by cancer, and Wes Gilbreath tried to exploit that horrible family tragedy by forcing himself on the plaintiff."

The Turners in their lawsuit also alleged that Gilbreath stuck his tongue in Mrs. Turner's mouth, made other advances and told her, "I can make you feel good. I've got all the equipment."

Gilbreath said, "The suit filed against me in Houston was issued after I became a candidate for public office by a disgruntled former employee. It is politically motivated and groundless."

Flood victims helped by Red Cross assistance

HARDIN (AP) - As flood victims lined up for Red Cross assistance, the swollen Trinity River continued to go out of its banks "into places it has never gone before."

Five Red Cross centers serving seven flood-ravaged southeast Texas counties began interviews Tuesday to arrange food deliveries, clothing, temporary housing, household furnishings, medical aid or other needs.

Meanwhile, Liberty city employees and volunteers are continuing their efforts to shore up a mile-long levee that had floodwaters going over the top in places, threatening the Travis Park subdivision's high-priced lakefront homes.

For two weeks, truckloads of dirt and sandbags have been hauled to the top of the levee, which has been raised about 2 feet in an effort to stay ahead of the floodwaters.

Red Cross workers said flood victims are growing more discouraged as they realize their troubles may last most of the summer.

"We've got a madhouse here," said R.C. Sadler, who was directing operations at the Hardin center, serving victims who live on the east side of the Trinity River. "But we were prepared. We knew what to expect."

People began queuing up hours before the center opened at 10 a.m., prompting Sadler to pass out numbers to those waiting in line so they could come later in the day. An hour after opening, Sadler was into the 60s.

Denver S & L fails, Neil Bush scrutinized

WASHINGTON (AP) - One of President Bush's sons is becoming a focal point of a congressional inquiry into the $1 billion collapse of a Colorado thrift.

Neil Bush, a former director of Silverado Banking, Savings and Loan Association of Denver, approved $106 million in loans to a business associate who defaulted on the entire amount, a federal regulator told a hearing Tuesday.

Stephen Hershkovitz, deputy director of enforcement for the Office of Thrift Supervision, revealed the amount of the loss after a House Banking Committee member pressed him to testify on Neil Bush's role in the failure of the Colorado thrift.

Bush was scheduled to testify today before the banking committee, along with former Silverado chairman Michael R. Wise; former vice chairman and chief operating officer Richard K. Vanderpool; former vice chairman and chief financial officer Robert M. Lewis, and other former directors.

Bush, 34, was a director of Silverado from 1985 to August 1988, resigning two weeks after his father won the GOP presidential nomination. The savings and loan collapsed in December 1988.

White House spokesman Sean Walsh said the president would have no comment on the matter. "Mr. Bush is a private citizen," he said, referring to Neil.

Hershkovitz and other regulators testified Tuesday that Silverado made inflated loans to developers who had to reinvest part of the money in the thrift.

The regulators told the committee that under the "quid pro quo" lending program at Silverado, developers received loans to buy buildings at inflated values set by outside appraisers.

In exchange, developers were required to use the surplus part of the loan money to buy preferred stock in Silverado's holding company or to purchase an interest in a "loan pool" set up by the thrift.

The panel of regulators told the banking committee that Silverado's board of directors was a "rubber stamp" for management. They also said insider abuse occurred at the thrift.

Neil Bush had oil and gas business deals with two of Silverado's major borrowers, developers Kenneth Good and Bill Walters. Regulators have alleged that loans by Silverado to the two men were a conflict of interest for Bush, who failed to disclose the relationship to the board.

Hershkovitz said Bush voted to approve loans to Walters, but did not vote on loans to Good.

Here's tips for storing juices

NEW YORK (AP) - The Florida Department of Citrus has the following tips for storing frozen concentrated orange and grapefruit juices:

- Place frozen citrus products in the freezer immediately and keep frozen at 0 degrees F until ready to use. Citrus will store at this temperature for about 1 year.

- Keep frozen concentrated juice in its frozen state until ready to use. If the freezer fails and the juice thaws, reconstitute immediately.

- To reconstitute frozen juice, place the unopened can in the refrigerator. Do not thaw completely. For best flavor, prepare juice according to instructions, but allow the concentrate to continue to thaw in the juice pitcher or container.

Resources assist all types of collectors

The Postal Service promotes stamp collecting based on the firm belief that the hobby is fun and educational...easy and inexpensive.

But is it really fun and educational? From what I have seen in nearly 45 years in the hobby, stamp collecting provides entertainment and knowledge to virtually everyone who tries it.

Is it really inexpensive? It certainly can be because you don't have to spend a great deal of money to develop an enjoyable collection.

And, is stamp collecting really easy? Well, collectors and dealers traditionally are helpful and generous with their advice and expertise. But, establishing contacts, or knowing where and to whom to turn for assistance, is not always easy.

Fortunately, a wealth of information and assistance exists on almost any collecting topic you can imagine...and there are some excellent resources available to you.

For starters, you can write to the Linn's Club Center, Post Office Box 29, Sidney, Ohio 45365-0029 for help in locating stamp clubs near your ZIP Code area.

The American Philatelic Society, Post Office Box 8000, State College, Pa. 16803-8000 has a broad range of services and publications and, perhaps most importantly, an amazing variety of study groups—chances are, there is one or more devoted to each of your interests.

Interested in ships and boats on stamps? For data on stamps depicting watercraft, or any of hundreds of other stamp subjects, contact the American Topical Association, Post Office Box 527, Mansfield, Ohio 16933-0527.

Are you a youngster? The Junior Philatelists of America, Post Office Box 701010, San Antonio 76270-1010 can lend a helping hand.

Drawn to postal history (stamps on original envelopes)? Try the Postal History Society, Post Office Box 61774, Virginia Beach, Va. 23462-9129. Intrigued by cancellations? Touch base with the Post Mark Collectors Club, 4200 SE Indianola Road, Des Moines, Iowa 50320-1555.

The list of such resources is almost endless—the Council of Philatelic Organizations has as members more than 400 stamp clubs, organizations, societies, etc.

No, stamp collecting is not always easy. But with more than 20 million collectors in the U.S., and so many resources at your disposal, you don't ever have to feel alone or stymied in any corner of the hobby you choose to explore.

WEATHER REPORTS FOR BEACH OR BOAT

NEW YORK (AP) - Instant worldwide weather reports are available for boaters and bathers about to head for their favorite coastal beaches this summer.

Students receive degree

Two students from Hereford were among a record number 710 students who received associate degrees and certificates during the 32nd annual South Plains College graduation exercises, May 11, in Texas Dome.

Hereford students receiving diplomas were Basilio Villarreal, associate of applied science, drafting technology and Mary Johnson, certificate of proficiency, dietetic management.

Special recognition was also given to Irma Bollinger, SPC assistant professor of foreign language on the Levelland campus, and Pat Dennis, assistant professor of occupations on the Lubbock campus, who both received excellence in teaching awards on their respective campuses.

Honorariums were presented by the First National Banks of Levelland and Lubbock.

Darinda Darr of Levelland, who graduated with highest honors, received the Vera Sue Spencer Award, a cash award given each year during graduation to the woman student on campus who best promotes school spirit and enthusiasm. The award was established by the late Dr. Thomas Spencer, SPC's first president, in honor of his daughter, Vera Sue, who died while a student at SPC.

The first recorded execution of a "witch" took place in Massachusetts in 1647. The method involved was not burning at the stake, but hanging.

Dumars leads Pistons to 2-0 series edge

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) - Joe Dumars has made such a splendid name as a defender that teams tend to forget what an offensive threat he can be.

When Dumars scored 27 points in the first game of the Eastern Conference finals, Detroit teammate Bill Laimbeer called him sneaky. He scored 31 more to lead the Pistons to a 102-93 victory over the Chicago Bulls Tuesday night as Detroit took a 2-0 lead in the best-of-7 series.

"This is the time of year," said Dumars, who averaged 17.8 during the regular season, second-highest on the team. "It's when everyone is keyed up and you come out keyed up for every game."

Dumars, who was named to the NBA's all-defensive team this season, hit 12 of 19 shots. He scored 10 points in the first quarter when Detroit raced out to a 15-point lead and had 11 more in the third quarter when the Bulls suddenly made a game of it, taking a short-lived one-point lead.

"Once everything starts clicking, everything is easy," Dumars said. "You take better shots, you make more cuts to the basket, you get to your spots and you get your shots."

The Bulls, who trailed 53-38 at halftime, surged to a 67-66 lead with 3:35 left in the third quarter. But a basket 58 seconds later by Dumars put the Pistons ahead to stay.

"It's a funny game," Detroit coach Chuck Daly said. "You know, shooting comes and goes. Anybody know if there's a change in the moon?"

The action now shifts to Chicago Stadium for afternoon games Saturday and Monday.

"The Pistons showed their strength, especially in the third quarter," Chicago coach Phil Jackson said. "We had it going, but at the end we came back down and played to their defense."

Dumars, of course, played a key role on defense, too.

With Dumars plastered on him like a second skin, Chicago's Michael Jordan was held to just 20 points, half the 39.6 he had averaged throughout the playoffs. He was held to 34 points in the first game, eight in the second half.

Jordan was so upset, both with his own play and the play of his teammates, that he jumped on the team bus immediately after Game 2, refusing to talk with reporters.

"He didn't mention names, he was just so disappointed," Chicago forward Horace Grant said. "I can't blame him. Some guys don't know what the playoffs are all about. The guys know who they are. They've got to step up. They've got to get more physical."

Grant and Scottie Pippen each scored 17 points for Chicago.

"It was very frustrating when we made our runs because we couldn't maintain what worked so well for us," Pippen said. "We believe we can beat the Pistons. We had the opportunity to take control tonight, and we didn't."

Detroit's Dennis Rodman said he was not surprised when Chicago made its third-quarter run nor when it stalled.

"They're a young team and they are still learning," Rodman said. "When we got to the bench (during a timeout), we told ourselves, 'They made their run, now let's make our run.'"

The Pistons outrebounded the Bulls 44-34 and outshot them from the field 47 percent-41 percent. Detroit's bench outscored Chicago's reserves 39-24.

"Really, to beat this team, you have to play a near-perfect game," Chicago's John Paxson said. "They really frustrated us."

"If we're right on our game, no team can beat us," Rodman said.

Foyt rolls on at Indy 500

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Motorsports Writer
INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - People ridicule Lyle Alzado for trying to make a comeback in pro football at the age of 41, and Nolan Ryan is considered a wonder for continuing to pitch effectively in the major leagues at 43.

The announcement that onetime swimming superstar Mark Spitz will try to earn a trip to the 1992 Olympics after more than a decade of retirement and at the advanced age of 39 drew an incredulous response.

But in auto racing, many of the biggest stars are over 40; some over 50; and one of the most recognized and revered drivers just goes on and on.

A.J. Foyt Jr., driving in a fifth decade at Indianapolis, is 55 years old.

Yet, here he is, walking regally through Gasoline Alley and along pit road to the cheers and shouts of "A.J., A.J." and "Super Tex." He smiles and waves to the thousands of fans who look upon him as an icon.

Then he wriggles his stocky body - considerably thicker now than when he first sat in a roadster at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway in 1958 - into the cockpit of a sleek 1990 Lola-Chevrolet.

The car roars to life, the crowd roars its approval and Foyt goes to work - at more than 219 mph.

He qualified as a rookie at 143.130

mph. But the world has changed since then.

Speeds have skyrocketed, the engines have moved from front to back, the cars have become - amazingly - a lot safer and Foyt has gone from raw youngster to wily oldtimer.

In the intervening years, he became the first driver to win the Indy 500 four times, taking the checkered flag in 1961, 1964, 1967 and 1977. He is the only man to have won the race in both an old front-engine roadster and in a modern rear-engine racer.

On May 27, he will extend his Indy record to 33 consecutive starts.

Foyt is first in total miles here with 11,237 (and third in Indy earnings with $2.11 million. The money leaders are three-time winner Rick Mears with $2.74 million and Al Unser, the only other four-time winner, with $2.68 million; but both of them have had the advantage of hitting the peak of their careers when the money was escalating almost as fast as the speed.

That last fact has not been lost on Foyt, who will be the oldest starter in the 33-car field.

"I wish I was the youngest (driver)," Foyt said with a smile. "It's been a lot of fun."

But nobody will hold any benefits or feel sorry for A.J.

The Texan was so poor when he first came here that he slept in his car or on the floor of a garage. Now he is a multimillionaire, sitting on a variety of boards of directors. He dabbles in race horses, works on his ranch outside of Houston, flies to appointments in private jets, and enjoys life.

That enjoyment still includes strapping himself into rocket-like Indy cars and, on occasion, a stock car, for another speed thrill.

The fact that he is 55 and has not won an Indy-car event since 1981 or a race of any kind since 1985 has brought cries for Foyt's retirement from racing purists and fans afraid that his image will be tarnished or he will be killed or injured.

Foyt has always been his own man and he isn't about to listen to any of the doomsayers or apologists.

"People say I should quit because I'm not winning," Foyt said. "Well, if I felt like I did not have a shot, I'm not too proud to step aside and run the team and let a young driver take over."

"Right now I'm enjoying it and I still think I can hold my own under the right conditions."

The people's favorite finished a quiet fifth a year ago - his best finish here since a sixth in 1984.

Last May, he came here with an underpowered Cosworth engine and watched the cars with the Chevrolet Indy V8 dominate the month. Now he is here with a state-of-the-art car and engine combination, the best he has had in years.

"The last two years I've been trying to play catchup," Foyt said. "I was gone for 3-4 years (during the time his parents died). I was here but I wasn't. But now I've got the enthusiasm again. I want to learn the different combinations like I used to. I want to have fun."

"The Chevrolet engine makes our chances of winning much better."

"I never thought I'd be here this long, and that's a great honor," Foyt added.

Foyt's team was scrambling much of the month because of the late arrival of his Lola chassis and the rainy weather at Indianapolis.

"We brought a brand new car here, just as we did at Phoenix," Foyt said. "No one volunteered us a bunch of information. We had to take our stabs in the dark and I think we've held our own."

"For having a new car (chassis) and a new motor, to unload and go racing, I'd like to see other teams do that."

So, after all these years, all those miles, wins, losses, records, controversies, the sometimes fiery Foyt is in a feisty, competitive mood. He knows in his heart he still can win, and he isn't apologizing to anybody.

"I've always felt my good has offset the bad," Foyt said. I regret nothing."

Foyt has even decided how he wants to retire.

"The day I quit, I will never sit back in a race car. That's one reason when I make the final decision, I'll be through."

He just won't say when.

NFL heads meet in Irving

IRVING (AP) - NFL owners are scheduled to consider a site for the 1994 Super Bowl during a two-day business meeting beginning here today.

Owner policies and a management council report on the labor situation with players are also on the agenda.

The meeting will begin with briefings on drugs by two doctors who will be consultants for the league. The two are Dr. John Lombardo, whose specialty is steroids and performance enhancement drugs, and Dr. Lawrence S. Brown, who is an adviser on problems associated with street drugs.

The business session will include the discussion of corporate ownership and debate over a site for Super Bowl XXVIII. Atlanta, New Orleans, Tampa Bay, and Miami are the leading contenders.

Commissioner Paul Tagliabue named a panel of four club executives to assist Jack Donaghy, the management council executive director, to look for new alternatives to reach agreement with the players association.

One possible alternative would be to put everything - including free agency - on the table if and when there were new negotiations.

Gene Upshaw, executive director of the players association, has maintained that the players association is changing its tax laws and bylaws and no longer is a bargaining arm. He said his group now is just a trade association.

Upshaw said the matter will be settled in court.

A collective bargaining agreement covers many facets of NFL business, including Plan B free agency, a rookie wage scale, a team salary cap, drug testing, changes in pensions, and potential expansion.

Tagliabue has said he wants expansion by 1993.

Suns look to up tempo

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) - The Phoenix Suns want to increase the tempo tonight in Game 2 of the NBA's Western Conference finals.

And that's just fine with the Portland Trail Blazers.

"We definitely enjoy a fast-paced game," Portland's Terry Porter said. "We always try to keep an up-tempo game. In the long run, I think that will help us in this series because we have more depth than they do."

The Suns say they were just a pale imitation of themselves in their 100-98 loss to the Blazers in the series opener Monday night.

"We just weren't sharp," Phoenix coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said. "I didn't like the way we played. I think we can play better. I don't think that was the Phoenix Suns basketball that I like to watch."

The basketball Fitzsimmons (see PHOENIX, Page 5) prefers moves rapidly up and down the court, with lots of penetration by Kevin Johnson and plenty of easy baskets. The Suns had only 10

Dawson walks the line for Chicago

Reds hand outfielder five intentional walks

By JIM LITKE
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) - Andre Dawson likes respect at least as much as the next guy. But he admitted having second thoughts after the Cincinnati Reds fitted him for a strait jacket and walked him, still kicking and screaming, into the history books.

Eight times on Tuesday, the National League's grim reaper of late walked to the plate. And five of those times, by design, he kept on walking. The first intentional pass came in the first inning against the first Cincinnati pitcher, the last in the 16th against the seventh.

If that was difficult to follow, imagine how befuddled Reds manager Lou Piniella must have felt after dropping a 2-1 decision.

The revolving door that led to the mound at Wrigley Field spun so often that it made his head swim, and about the only constant he could remember afterward was instructing several of the pitchers who walked through it to walk the guy in blue pinstripes wearing No. 8.

"How many did he have?" Piniella asked reporters. "Five? My God."

It was a measure of respect never accorded the Babe or Henry Aaron - not to mention Willie, Mickey and the Duke - and only Roger Maris and Garry Templeton, with four intentional passes each, had ever sniffed such rarified air before Dawson. It became so predictable and moved so near comedy by the end that it seemed Rodney Dangerfield was batting behind him.

Dawson, though, was closer to a grimace than a grin by the time it was over.

"What did I do," he said to no one in particular, "to deserve that?"

Depends on where you want to start.

Coming into this season at age 35 and coming off his sixth knee operation, Andre Dawson was supposed to be getting older, not better. He was supposed to be disabled, not dominant. Sure, he beat the odds once, but who figured he would do it again?

In 1987, Dawson turned his back on the Expos organization and a $1 million salary after 10 stellar seasons in Montreal and found few invitations awaiting. Though those were the days of collusion, there was a consensus among baseball people at the time as well that he was over-the-hill and as such, overpriced.

When he showed up at the Cubs' training camp in Mesa, Ariz., the following spring and just about begged (on chronically bad knees) for a job, his new employer was not overly generous (Dawson signed for a $500,000 base salary, plus incentives) nor optimistic.

But with a work ethic almost unmatched in baseball, he posted numbers as fine as any in the past decade - .287 average, 49 home runs, 137 RBIs - and became the first National Leaguer to win the Most Valuable Player award while toiling for a sixth-place team.

Last season, he underwent knee surgery in May and managed to put up the kind of numbers in 118 games - .252, 21 HRs and 77 RBIs - that most of his counterparts could not match in 162.

Even Cubs manager Don Zimmer, who often sounds as though he is in awe of Dawson, didn't expect to have him around at the start of the season.

"When he came to camp and we had a look at him, we knew how hard he'd worked, but the knee looked so bad we planned to (put him on the disabled list) at the start of the season. We figured he, 'He's a cripple.'"

"But the last 10 days of camp, he suddenly started moving," Zimmer said, "like all that work suddenly paid off - just like that."

And just like that, Dawson started tearing up opposing pitchers. Coming into Tuesday's game, he was hitting .346, with league-leading totals in homers (13) and RBIs (41). Indeed, Dawson is on a pace to outstrip his 1987 numbers, and he has yet to get hot - by his definition, anyway.

"I don't feel like it - yet," he said. "When you're hot, you hit everything on the nose. The ball looks like a balloon. Those things haven't happened yet."

Cubs pull out 2-1 win in 16-inning marathon

By The Associated Press

Nothing personal, Andre, but take a hike.

Andre Dawson did just that, setting a major-league record by drawing five intentional walks. The fifth time, however, it backfired when Dave Clark's tie-breaking single with the bases loaded in the 16th inning gave the Chicago Cubs a 2-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds on Tuesday.

Ryne Sandberg singled off Scott Scudder (1-1), the seventh Cincinnati pitcher, with one out and went to third when Mark Grace's grounder went through shortstop Luis Quinones' legs for an error. That brought up Dawson, who leads the National League with 13 homers and 41 RBIs and was the league's Player of the Week last week after going 12-for-28 with five homers and 15 RBIs.

The decision was easy. "He just came up in situations all the time when there was an open base," Reds manager Lou Piniella said.

After the last intentional walk, Dawson glared at Piniella in the dugout.

"He looked at me, I smiled and said, 'It's not my fault. The guys in front of you are getting on,'" Piniella said.

Dawson understood. "As a young player I would have been upset about being passed over that many times, but as a veteran I understand you pitch around a hot hitter," he said.

Tuesday's six NL games each matched an East Division team against a Western club. In each case, the Eastern team won - Pittsburgh 8, Houston 4; Philadelphia 5, San Francisco 2; Montreal 6, San Diego

1; New York 8, Los Angeles 3; and St. Louis 4, Atlanta 3.

Dawson's five intentional walks broke the mark of four set by Roger Maris of the New York Yankees on May 22, 1962, and equaled by Garry Templeton of San Diego on July 5, 1985. The Reds tied a major-league record by issuing seven intentional walks.

Chicago's Mike Bielecki pitched 10 innings, yielding five hits, and Cincinnati's Tom Browning went nine, giving up six hits. Bill Long (2-0) pitched the 16th inning for the win.

Cincinnati's Chris Sabo broke the scoreless tie with a leadoff homer in the 13th inning, his ninth of the season, off Jeff Pico. Luis Salazar tied the game when he led off the bottom of the 13th against Randy Myers with his second homer of the season.

Pirates 8, Astros 4
Barry Bonds hit the first grand slam of his career in the third and Jay Bell had a three-run triple an inning later to help Neal Heaton win his seventh game of the season.

Losers Dan Schatzeder (1-2), making his first start of the season after 16 relief appearances, lasted 3 1-3 innings, yielding six runs - four unearned - and five hits.

Phillies 4, Giants 2
Ken Howell scattered three hits in seven innings and Len Dykstra doubled twice and drove in a run. Howell (5-3) allowed only one runner as far as second base before walking Brett Butler to start the sixth inning. One out later, Will Clark hit his seventh homer of the season. Roger McDowell pitched the ninth for his 11th save.

The Phillies scored three runs in the fifth against Rick Reuschel (2-5).

Expos 6, Padres 1
Tim Wallach homered and drove in four runs and rookie Mark Gardner pitched seven strong innings, yielding one run and four hits.

Wallach, who has seven homers and 20 RBIs in his last 15 games, hit his ninth homer of the season, a three-run shot off Ed Whitson (3-3), to give the Expos a 3-0 lead in the first inning.

Mets 8, Dodgers 3
Mike Marshall burned his former team with a grand slam and six RBIs and Bob Ojeda allowed a run and four hits in six innings for his first victory of the season.

Marshall's seventh career grand slam came on an 0-2 pitch from reliever Mike Hartley with two out in the sixth inning and gave the Mets a 7-1 lead.

New York's Kevin Elster had four hits, including his fifth homer, a solo shot in the ninth. The Mets had a season-high 17 hits.

Cardinals 4, Braves 3

Jose DeLeon scattered four hits in eight innings and drove in two runs and Terry Pendleton also had two RBIs.

DeLeon (4-2) walked two and struck out 10. He yielded two runs in the first inning on Jeff Treadway's RBI single and an RBI double by Dave Justice. Lee Smith pitched the ninth for his third save.

fast-break points Monday night. Portland had 26.

"We have to be more aggressive defensively," the Suns' Tom Chambers said, "create some turnovers, block some shots, get out and run and get some easy baskets. I thought our fast breaks were terrible the other night. Normally that's our strength."

Johnson said Porter sagged off him defensively and invited him to shoot from the outside. Johnson made 6 of 8 shots in the first quarter, but was only 2 of 12 the rest of the game. The Phoenix playmaker plans to pick up the pace tonight.

"I think I just have to look to create and penetrate in the transition game and in the early offense," Johnson said. "The halfcourt game is going to be difficult because of the way he's playing me."

Jeff Hornacek said the Suns have no one but themselves to blame for their opening-game loss.

"I think it was lack of effort, period," he said. "We were thinking too much instead of putting forth the effort. The effort was terrible."

Portland has won four of its six meetings with Phoenix this season, but all of the Blazers' victories have been close. Two were by two points, one was by one point and one was by eight in overtime.

"We feel that maybe one of these times we'll slip out of here with a win," Hornacek said.

After all his team has overcome to get this far in the playoffs, Fitzsimmons figures Monday night's opening loss was no big deal.

The Suns rebounded from an opening-game loss at Utah to beat the Jazz in five games in the first round, then stunned the Los Angeles Lakers 4-1 in the conference semifinals.

But if they are to keep their hopes for a first-ever NBA title alive, they're going to have to beat the Trail Blazers in Portland - something nobody has done thus far in the playoffs and something the Suns haven't done for six years.

"I'm not alarmed. I'm not shocked or anything," Fitzsimmons said. "We know what we have to do. We have to do it the hard way. We have to win a game here. Instead of one out of four, now it's one out of three."

Portland Coach Rick Adelman expects both teams to play better offensively tonight.

"I think what you saw Monday night was the first game of a very pressurized series," he said. "You have a tendency to go a little conservative in that situation and I think both teams were conservative Monday night. It was nip and tuck the whole way."

Earl Stagner says community must unite in positive manner to move forward again

By ORVILLE HOWARD
Special Feature Writer

Hereford must unite into a positive, progressive force if the town is to buck the national trend of rural migration to big city coalitions.

This was the way Earl Stagner turned a two-hour talk on Hereford economy into a single sentence--"We can do it. I've seen this town booming all over the place and I've also seen the lean times but somehow this community has always been able to pull itself through the bad years."

Stagner reflected briefly on the development of Hereford's vast cattle feeding industry and the cash flow from sugar beet production, then spoke of expansion of local business.

"It would really be great if we could land one of the big ones (new industry) but let's take a close look at what we have in hand. It's a proven fact that for every five new jobs you create, it takes another 1 1/2 jobs to service those five. Therefore, when you put people to work say out in our food factories or welding shops, then you bring in additional jobs in the service areas of restaurants, grocery stores and retail shops...its a snowballing effect that really works when it gets going."

Without making any exceptions, Stagner classed Hereford as the most progressive town in the United States in its population category--"I really don't why, but this town has always had a great driving force to develop new business like I've never seen before anywhere. Things are a little slow right now but I've seen it turn around before and I believe we can do it again if we'll just unite in a positive manner."

Having the General Motors dealership of Buick, Pontiac, GMC, Stagner is a strong supporter of Downtown Hereford, with a two-block location sandwiched between City hall, Main Street and U.S. 60. And to make his business even more meaningful, this year is the 20th anniversary of the Stagner-Orsborn Buick, Pontiac, GMC dealership.

Stagner and John Orsborn of Hereford are full partners in the new and used car business, but it is Stagner who heads the day-to-day operations.

John Orsborn credited with key role in establishing firm

"I want to make it very clear that if it had not been for John Orsborn, I would not be here in this business today," said Stagner. "I started out working in sales then worked into part owner. We operate the business today on a straight 50-50 basis." Mr. and Mrs. Orsborn were out of town at the time of this interview.

Stagner's son, John, is sales manager of the dealership which is expected to move around 200 new units in 1990, along with another 200 used units in the car/light-truck divisions. But the sales showroom and the rows of polished new cars and pickups are just the front-runners--there's a staff of technicians (sometimes called mechanics) that services portions of four panhandle counties with their expertise in the maintenance shops.

"The new models are built with such a high degree of technology in today's computerized field that our mechanics are not mechanics any more...they're truly technicians," said Stagner. "As a matter of fact, I think this would be a great career field for a young person to look into. We have lots of trouble in getting young, qualified technicians to come to the smaller towns. So, we're training our own."

Stagner has a staff of 20 at his two locations--the main showroom and maintenance shop at 142 N. Miles and a special truck repair division located across the street to the west. Several years ago, the Hereford businessman saw the need in servicing the heavier tandem jobs generally used in the commercial feedyards and on the farms. And the end package was a unique repair shop designed especially for the heavy-duty trucks. Stagner estimated that this unit services some 90 percent of the tandem units in the Golden Triangle of Deaf Smith, Castro, and Parmer counties.

"Even our mechanics are especially trained in the servicing and repair of the larger trucks," said Stagner. Veteran mechanic Gene Poteet, is foreman of the truck repair division of Stagner-Orsborn.

Stagner also speaks highly of his shop crew who are just a window away from the new-car showroom. The spacious nine-bay garage opens at 8 a.m. and closes at 6 p.m., with a staff of trained technicians, mechanics if you please, ready to handle roadway emergencies or give estimates on a major overhaul. And on one recent occasion, the shop foreman was acting as something of a baby-sitter while the lady of the car was getting an inspection sticker.

"Service is our business," said Stagner. "Without good service in the car business, you have nothing...we do our best in every phase of the business."

John Stagner's role in the showroom revealed a character of positive thinking as he walked from car to car--"This is a real beauty," he said, while passing a sleek Riviera, the top of the line in Buick sports cars.

For decades, the Riviera has reflected a premium lifestyle, a modern classic flaunting luxury in the purest sense of the word. Today, its electroluminescent coach lamps or the electric sliding Astroroof continue to give the stylish coupe a front spot among the fun cars.

The Park Avenue continues to be the front-runner in Buick sales around Hereford, a unique car designed with every convenience in the book--20-way power front seats, super stereo with seek and scan abilities, cruise control and power on nearly everything that's glass...the Park Avenue may also be billed as a great family car but it is also a great luxury car.

In the Pontiac line, the Grand Prix is the top of the line in sports travel and is outselling the Riviera in the Hereford area. But its the Bonneville that leads sales in all of the Pontiac lines.

"I really believe the Bonneville is one of the best Pontiac cars ever built in the GM lines," said Stagner, as he reflected on a life-long career in the car business. I believe the Park Avenue, however, is the best car ever built by GM."

Though Stagner-Orsborn offers every model in the GMC light truck division (up to one ton), the conversion built Trail Master short-bed is the one that's catching the attention of pickup lovers. The classy little job is now in its eighth year of production and as they say around the riggin' chutes, it contains about everything but the kitchen sink.

Fender-to-fender running boards with steps to the bed allows for convenient entrance, both rear and front. Its slanted windshield gives less resistance to the wind.

From bucket seats to a cherry Wood console, the Trail Master is known for its finer lines--rear AM/FM cassette stereo with head-phone jacks. The Trail master comes in extended cab pickups and in the short-bed models. A full line of suburbans are also among the GMC Trail Master lines.

Though Stagner speaks of the decade of the 1990s as a newborn babe, he has seen more than seven decades come and go around Hereford.

Stagner family moved here in 1905 with ties to Easter community

As one of nine children of Joe and Jennie Stagner, he was reared on farms in the Easter and Sunnyside communities. His parents came to the Hereford area in September 1905 from Itasca, tx., with the W.F. Easter family who had purchased a tract of land 12 miles south of Hereford, a site which became known as the Easter Community. Jennie Stagner was a daughter of the Easters who originally had come from Alabama. One of their first moves was to organize the old Easter School, but when school funds became exhausted, the Stagner and Easter youngsters transferred to the nearby Frio School.

In 1928, the Stagners moved to the Flagg Community where Earl Stagner attended the Sunnyside School. He graduated from Dimmitt High School in 1937, then went on to earn a degree from West Texas State University in 1941.

Young Stagner entered the U.S. Air Force cadet school in September of 1941, then received his flight commission and "wings" in May of 1942. A month later, he was flying a B-17 "Flying Fortress" on bombing runs across the South Pacific where he flew 72 missions. He lost several members of his crews to gunfire and brought shot-up planes back to base on two engines, but Stagner came through without a serious injury. Stagner was among the first group of B-17s to land on Henderson Field on Guadalcanal.

He returned stateside in 1943 as part of the Second Training Command and received his discharge in January of 1946. Upon returning from service, Stagner taught one semester at Hereford High School and in June of 1946, he went to work for the old Hereford Implement Co., an International Harvester dealership that was owned by Wayne Evans at the corner of the present-day First National Bank drive-in tellers.

Stagner stayed with Evans for the next 10 years, selling all lines of farm equipment, along with trucks and pickups. "Those were the days when we drove to Amarillo three times a week to pick up equipment," recalled Stagner.

During those years, Stagner and his wife, the former Joy Farmer, made their home in Hereford and became active in all phases of community and school work. Mrs. Stagner is a native of Sioux City, Iowa.

In 1956, Stagner joined Don Little in the B.F. Goodrich Store, and in the fall of 1959, he went to work for John Orsborn who at that time owned the Chevrolet/Olds-mobile dealership in Hereford, Orsborn had come to Hereford a couple of years earlier from Sulphur Springs, Okla., to buy the Hereford car firm.

Stagner worked as a salesman for Orsborn until 1965 when he was promoted to sales manager. He remained in that position until Orsborn sold out to Dick Norwood in late 1969. The following year, in January of 1970, Orsborn purchased the Buick/Pontiac dealership in Hereford and June 1970, Stagner joined Orsborn as a partner in the business and became general sales manager. D.C. Kinsey was also part owner of the dealership for a time, a veteran in the business who had come to Hereford in 1939 as a Chevrolet dealer.

As a seasoned car dealer, Kinsey once made the statement: "I thought I knew the car business until I met John Orsborn." Gene Poteet came to Hereford from Oklahoma with Orsborn whose first dealership was located a couple blocks east of Main just off U.S. 60.

Stagner said as result of the big energy crunch back in the early 1970s, three new phases were ushered in on the new car business--diesel engines, down-sizing of models and the federal mandates. He pointed out that federal mandates, everything from EPA intervention to safety regulations, have added greatly to the cost of new cars.

"A lot of times folks think the dealers are trying to rip off the public, but I'm telling you that those mandates have been some of the greatest factors in the rising costs of cars," said Stagner. "Our discount rates have come from 22 percent down to 11 and 13 1/2 percent--you can see that with this margin of profit, we're sure not going to get rich in the car business."

Stagner's general trade territory includes Deaf Smith County, the Eastern half of Parmer County and most of Castro County...the area of dealer responsibility. However, they frequently get customers from Eastern New Mexico to the west and Amarillo in the east and north. The Stagner/Orsborn operation also have complete GMAC financing and a GMC leasing program on all new vehicles.

Stagner speaks of employees on a first-name basis and loves to tell of their expertise in the car and truck business. Richard "Rick" Clark is shop foreman, a veteran in the car business that dates back to the 1960s with Orsborn. Mark Matthews is manager of the parts department, a division which alone will gross out a $300,000 inventory, and Poteet is in the truck service unit. Janie Victor, bookkeeper, is also a veteran of the business with 20 years of service.

Dealership rebuilt in 1973 after fire destroyed building

On Dec. 3, 1973, an evening fire destroyed the entire dealership, which was rebuilt new on the original site the following year to its present status. At that time, they also built the special truck shop and expanded the shop to 100 by 100 feet.

In addition to John, the Stagners have a second son, Gary, who is director of human resources for a convalescent firm headquartered in Dallas. John's wife, Sandy, is on the staff of The Hereford Brand.

"I haven't made a lot of money but I've made a lot of friends," said Stagner, as he reflected on some 45 years of active work in downtown Hereford.

"I don't think there's a finer community in the world--sometimes we become divided on some issues, but eventually we seem to bind together when it gets rough enough...you can't ever stand still, if you don't go forward you'll fall back."

Payday law still confuses

My office continues to receive questions concerning the new Payday Law. I thought it might be helpful to our readers to compile some of the most common ones and print them here for future reference.

COMMISSIONER
Mary Scott Nabers

TEXAS BUSINESS TODAY

POLICY OF THE EMPLOYER.

- Q. If an employer terminates an employee, how long can the employer wait to pay the employee's wages? Is it acceptable to wait until the next regularly scheduled payday?
- A. An employee who is discharged must be paid in full not later than the sixth day after the date of the discharge. If the employee resigns, then he must be paid in full not later than the next regularly scheduled payday.
- Q. Is it OK to give an employee's paycheck to his or her spouse?
- A. This is acceptable only if the employee has authorized it in writing.
- Q. Does an employer have to pay vacation or sick pay to an employee who is leaving employment?
- A. Failure to pay vacation, holiday, sick leave, parental leave, or severance can serve as the basis for complaint ONLY, if such payments are owed under a WRITTEN AGREEMENT WITH THE EMPLOYER OR A WRITTEN

- Q. The new Payday Law allows an employer to withhold part of an employee's wages for a lawful purpose as long as the employee gives written authorization. Is there a limit or percentage allowed for such withholdings?
- A. The Payday Law itself does not stipulate any limit or percentage to a lawful withholding. However, federal law prohibits an employer from allowing an employee's pay to fall below minimum wage. If, for example, an employer pays an employee minimum wage and also withholds money from his check for uniform rental, that employer would be in violation of the federal Fair Labor Standards Act.
- Q. How does a person file a wage complaint under the Texas Payday Law?

- A. Wage claims must be filed in person, in writing, and under oath at a local Texas Employment Commission office. Every local TEC office will have the necessary forms available along with written information on the Payday Law.
- Q. Is there a time limit on the filing of a wage claim?
- A. Yes. The employee must file the wage claim no later than the 180th day after the wages in question were due.

Cattle prices may stay at current levels

A livestock marketing economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service said beef cattle prices to the producer will remain near current levels for the next two years.

Cattle prices are at their highest in almost 10 years, trading over $80 per hundredweight.

Dr. Ernest E. Davis of College Station said producer prices will remain at today's levels with only some seasonal drops and rises in the market.

"We have fewer cattle available this year, and this has tended to keep prices up," Davis said. He thinks it will take two years for cattle numbers to rise high enough to drop prices.

While producer prices will stay steady or rise, consumer prices have not increased significantly and should remain steady for the next four months.

"For the consumer, beef prices have been steady and they are not expected to change in the near future," said Dr. Dick Edwards, an Extension Service food marketing specialist. He said demand for beef traditionally increases in the spring and summer. That should reduce any extra supplies and keep prices level.

Some beef cuts should remain on sale at supermarkets and some of the best buys are likely to include "family packs" and holiday specials for Easter and Memorial Day.

Davis said several factors are helping the price situation: drought in Texas and other producing states; the low beef inventories in cold storage; and the slaughter schedule of feedlot animals across the county.

Dry conditions in concentrated wheat area restricted grazing and stocker cattle were moved into feedlots earlier than normal.

"More animals were slaughtered and placed in the food chain earlier than normal," Davis said. "This has decreased the number of animals available for spring marketings as well as the total number of Texas beef cattle."

The current USDA cattle report shows a current inventory of 13.4 million head in Texas, about 200,000 less than at the same time in 1988 and 1989.

Texas feedlots placed 290,000 cattle and calves on feed during February, 16 percent below placements in February 1989. Marketings of fed cattle from Texas feedlots in February totaled 345,000 head, down five percent from the same period in 1989.

Cattle and calves on feed in Nebraska, Iowa, California, Colorado, Kansas, Arizona and Texas (the seven major cattle production states) totaled 8.32 million head, five percent more than in 1988 or 1989 and the largest number on feed since 1974.

INSURANCE ANSWERS

Homeowners have rights as well as duties under contract

If your home is burglarized, vandalized, damaged or destroyed, there is a good chance you are protected under your Texas homeowners policy.

In the event of a loss, you have both rights and responsibilities. Here are a few tips that should help make the claim settlement process easier:

- (1) Notify your agent or company as soon as possible after discovering the loss. Early assessment of the loss may prevent a lot of questions later.
- (2) Make necessary temporary repairs to protect your home from further damage. For example, if a window is broken, cover it to protect the interior of your home from rain damage. Be sure to save receipts and file for reimbursement for these expenses when you make your claim.

(3) The insurance company will pay your temporary additional living expenses if the damage to your home is so extensive that it is unlivable. Make sure you have a clear understanding with the company on any time or dollar limits that may apply.

(4) When your claim includes structural damage, the insurance company will send an adjuster to inspect the damage. Ask to be present during the inspection. You may want to bring your own contractor or builder to act as your representative. You also may want to take pictures before repairs begin.

(5) Following a catastrophe, such as a hail storm, it is not unusual for crews from out of town to go door-to-door in the affected areas looking for work. Make sure you know with whom you are doing business. Be suspicious of anyone who promises to "take care of the insurance claim" for you. Request references and touch base with the local Better Business Bureau.

(6) If you have a loss under your policy, you are required to file a "proof of loss" form with your company within 91 days after your loss. You also must provide an inventory of all personal belongings included in your claim. The insurance company can provide appropriate forms. Having an up-to-date inventory, with photos, can help expedite the claims process.

(7) If you have replacement cost coverage, you will need to provide an estimated cost of new items to replace those that were stolen, damaged or destroyed. Catalogs and local retailers are good sources of cost estimates. Find out before you begin your research whether the insurer wants exact costs to the penny or will accept rounding to the nearest dollar.

(8) Keep copies of everything you send to the company. Make notes when you talk to a company representative or agent, including names and the dates and times of the conversations.

(9) If you and the insurance company disagree on the value of your property, your policy offers a binding "appraisal" process to settle the dispute. Essentially, you and the insurance company each hire an appraiser, who will select a third appraiser to make a final decision if they cannot agree on the value.

(10) The insurance company must pay your claim within 60 days after you have filed your proof of loss, and you and the company have agreed in writing on the value of the claim.

(11) If you have questions about your claim or are unhappy with the claims settlement process, discuss the situation with your insurance company or agent. If you aren't satisfied, you can file a written complaint with the State Board of Insurance at this address:

State Board of Insurance
Attention: Complaints
(Div. 016-5)

Austin, Texas 78714-9091

Include your name and address, the company's name, the name of the agent or adjuster (if available), your policy number, the name of the person insured by the policy (if different from you), the date the loss occurred and a brief explanation of your problem.

The Community: Part 2

What is a community?

A community is a group of people who have something in common, shared by all. In our case, it's that we live in the same area. Our children go to school together. We attend the same churches, yell at the same ball games, play dominoes at the same senior center or domino hall.

Our taxes go into the same pot, to provide us with water systems, fire and police protection, roads, schools and hospitals. We share the same wide open spaces, the beautiful sunsets, the clear open skies at night. We cherish the small town atmosphere.

Most of us have chosen to live here even though we may have originally come from some distant place. Our community grows on you. The longer you stay, the harder it is to leave. Here we can raise our kids and know our neighbor, grow our gardens, or keep a horse.

The Hereford Brand is a vital part of this community. We read the local paper for news we can't get anywhere else, for ads we won't see anywhere else. The Brand feels the pulse of our community--city and county commissions, school board, hospital, senior citizens, school kids. It gives us honor rolls, lunch menus, birth announcements, weddings, ball games, chili suppers and church events. When we read the local newspaper, we see ourselves, our community, reflected.

If the local newspaper didn't tell us those things, nobody would. Not the Globe-News, not the Avalanche-Journal, not channels 4, 7 or 10. This isn't their community, it's ours. The local paper is not the center of the community. You are. But every community needs a good local newspaper.

Royals finally get relief; Rangers hold on for win

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

This one was worth saving for the Kansas City Royals.

The Royals' beleaguered bullpen did the job - barely - and Kansas City ended a 14-game losing streak at Tiger Stadium, defeating Detroit 9-8 Tuesday night.

Detroit had won seven straight games. The Tigers lost an early 5-0 lead, then seemed ready to rally against the Royals relievers, who had blown 10 of 15 save opportunities.

Trailing 9-7 in the ninth inning, the Tigers loaded the bases against Mark Davis and Jeff Montgomery. But Montgomery struck out pinch-hitter Mark Salas, retired Chet Lemon on an RBI grounder and fanned Mike Heath with runners on second and third for his first save.

"I was very confident out there, but it felt really good getting the last out," Montgomery said. "We didn't have a monkey on our backs here; we had a barrel of monkeys."

In other games, Oakland beat Toronto 5-4, Milwaukee defeated Seattle 3-2, New York downed Chicago 5-2, Baltimore beat Minnesota 10-2, Texas stopped Boston 5-4 and California defeated Cleveland 8-3.

Danny Tartabull's two-run homer capped a five-run seventh inning that put Kansas City ahead 8-6. The Tigers loaded the bases with two outs in their seventh, but left fielder Willie Wilson made a diving catch on Gary Ward's sinking liner.

Frank White hit an RBI double in the Royals' eighth for a 9-6 lead and Davis, who has blown four of nine save tries, took over. Detroit scored with two outs on Alan Trammell's RBI single, but Wilson made another running catch on a drive by Heath to prevent the Tigers from getting more.

Cecil Fielder and Lloyd Moseby opened the Detroit ninth with singles, chasing Davis. Montgomery, who had blown all four of his save tries this season, walked pinch-hitter Dave Bergman to load the bases before escaping.

Reliever Steve Farr (3-2), the third Kansas City pitcher, got the victory. Jack Morris (2-6) remained winless in seven starts.

Athletics 5, Blue Jays 4
In Toronto, Jose Canseco hit his first regular-season grand slam and drove in all five runs.

Curt Young (2-1) got the victory and Dennis Eckersley, the Athletics' fourth pitcher, worked the ninth for his 11th save. Frank Wills (3-2) gave up Canseco's grand slam.

Orioles 10, Twins 2
In Baltimore, Joe Orsulak hit two homers and drove in a career-high four runs.

Steve Finley got four hits, Mickey Tetleton homered and Cal Ripken ended an 0-for-18 slump with a bloop, two-run double. Orsulak hit a solo home run off Kevin Tapani (5-3) in the second inning and capped a six-run fifth with a three-run shot off Juan Berenguer.

Angels 8, Indians 3
In Cleveland, Chuck Finley outpitched Tom Candiotti in a matchup of starters who had been out of action. Wally Joyner homered and drove in four runs.

Finley (6-2) missed his last start after he sprained his ankle in Toronto while walking to the ballpark. He won for the 13th time in 16 decisions and Bryan Harvey pitched 2 1/3 perfect innings for his fourth save.

Candiotti (4-2) missed two starts because of an inflamed right elbow.

Yankees 5, White Sox 2
In New York, Bob Geren ended a 2-for-29 slump with a three-run homer in a game interrupted by a lively debate between Chicago veteran Carlton Fisk and Yankees rookie Deion Sanders.

Fisk and Sanders got into an argument at home plate at the start of the sixth inning, and both benches and bullpens emptied. There were no punches and no ejections.

Rangers 5, Red Sox 4
In Boston, Jack Daugherty got four hits.

Bobby Witt (2-5), won his first game at Fenway Park. Jeff Russell went 1 1/3 innings for his seventh save.

Boston, which trailed 4-0 in the fourth, rallied on home runs by Tom Brunansky and Ellis Burks. The Red Sox scored in the ninth on doubles by Wade Boggs and Brunansky, but Russell ended the game when Tony Pena was called out on strikes with the bases loaded.

Brewers 3, Mariners 2
In Milwaukee, pinch-hitter Billy Spiers singled home the winning run with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning.

Glenn Braggs and Charlie O'Brien singled off Bill Swift (2-1) with one out and Keith Constock relieved. Spiers bounced a single over the head of first baseman Alvin Davis.

Mark Knudson (3-1) gave up seven hits, struck out three and walked one.

Club officers installed

Hereford Study Club members were treated by Something Special in the home of Mary Herring when they met for their final meeting of the club year Thursday, May 17.

Following a salad supper, President Doris Bryant called the meeting to order for a brief business meeting.

New officers were installed by Bryant using the theme "The Hands of Leadership". A description was given on the many ways people's hands are used and it was stressed that coordinated, active hands are the hands that will guide Hereford Study Club in the year to come.

Incoming president, Gracie Shaw, was told that her hands should be humble hands for they have been entrusted with leadership of the club. Vice president Betty Gilbert was informed that she should have vigorous, confident and constructive hands with responsibilities for interesting studies and memorable meetings. Secretary-reporter Gladys Setliff was reminded that she should have creative hands, skilled and dedicated to accurately portraying and fully documenting the record of the club's activities. Corresponding secretary, Mildred Garrison, must always have busy hands, prompt and practiced as they receive and send communications.

Jean Ballard, treasurer, was told she would be the powerful hand that controls the money. In recording the club's history, Mary Stoy will have photographic hands, gathering news and recording the club's activities. The parliamentarian will have the hands of justice. The president then declared the future of the club to be good hands.

Other members present at the meeting included Barbara Allen, Joan Yarbrough, Bessie Stoy, Willie Braddy, Helen Spinks, Nedra Robinson and Addie Cunningham.

In the 3rd century B.C., the courtiers of the royal court in China were required to carry gloves in their mouths in order to sweeten their breath when addressing the emperor.

New officers installed

Hereford Study Club officers for the new club year were installed when they met May 17 in the home of Mary Herring. Gracie Shaw, seated from left, will serve as president; Gladys Setliff, secretary-reporter; and Betty Gilbert, vice president. Others include, standing from left, Mildred Garrison, corresponding secretary; Jean Ballard, treasurer; Mary Stoy, historian; and Doris Bryant, parliamentarian.

Abundant Life

ROOM FOR IMPROVEMENT BY BOB WEAR

The room for improvement is a large room, and we should be eternally grateful for the continuing possibility for making improvements. This is a great blessing, and one that is to be appreciated and used. We can improve self, our working skills; the way we relate to our fellowman; our family life; our community life; and just about everything else with which we are concerned. Opportunities are almost unlimited.

We must not wait for big things to do, but be fully aware of the relatively little things and the little ways in which improvement can be made. These are found in the areas of self-improvement, and also in the improvement of our surroundings. Improvement is a very happy and positive experience, and, improvement is improvement, and is cumulative in its effects.

"Humanity may endure the loss of everything; all of its possessions may be torn away without infringing its true dignity -- all but the possibility of improvement." - Fichte.

Change and improvement are not necessarily the same, because some change is regressive. Improvement is always progressive. Improvement is not applicable to some things. Established truth cannot be improved, and there are fixed and absolute values which cannot be improved. Some people make changes in some of these areas, but their changes are most certainly not improvements.

In some areas, we may be doing the best we can. If so, it is time for acceptance and appreciation. There are times and conditions when it is wise and right to be wholesomely satisfied. "We ought not to be anxious to encourage innovation, in cases of doubtful improvement, for an old system must never have two advantages over a new one; it is established and it is understood." - Colton

Room for improvement that is justified provides the challenges and the on-going interest which help us to stay alive while we live.

PARIS (AP) - Brigitte Bardot went on national television and used graphic film footage to condemn trafficking in wild animals.

Miss Bardot, 55, was the host of Wednesday night's "SOS Animal Trafficking," the latest in a series on animal abuse. Other programs have targeted vivisection, the ivory trade and the slaughter of elephants.

The President with the most children was Tyler, who had 15.

High blood pressure can affect children

If you think high blood pressure only affects adults, unfortunately, you're wrong. High blood pressure afflicts more than 60 million Americans age six and older. And nearly half of those people don't know they have high blood pressure. High blood pressure, or hypertension, is the nation's most widespread health problem and is a major risk factor for heart and blood vessel disease, the nation's leading killers. According to Karen Flood, president of the American Heart Association's Deaf Smith County Chapter, high blood pressure usually has no symptoms. Therefore, it is up to parents to have their children's blood pressure checked regularly. "Children who are overweight tend to have higher blood pressure than those who are not," Flood says. "However, some children inherit high blood pressure from one or both parents." Blood pressure is created by the heart as it pumps blood into the arteries. When pressure in the arteries increases above normal, the heart must work harder to push blood through the arteries. If the pressure increases above normal and stays there, the result is high blood pressure. Occasionally, high blood pressure is caused by other diseases, but the most common form of high blood pressure, called "primary" or "essential" hypertension, has no obvious cause. Studies have shown that the tendency toward high blood pressure may be inherited. No unusual symptoms are normally associated with the condition, and the only way to determine high blood pressure is to have it checked periodically. "Parents play an important role in being sure the blood pressure of their children is monitored by their physician or other appropriate health professional," Flood says. The American Heart Association offers the following advice to parents of children with high blood pressure: -If your child is overweight, discuss with your doctor a diet to gradually return the child's weight to normal. Of course, your child will need your continued support and encouragement. -Plan meals and snacks that are low in sodium. Try different herbs and spices to enhance the flavor of foods. -Encourage physical activity for your child as prescribed by your doctor. -If your child smokes, encourage him or her to quit. If you smoke, quit. You are a role model for your child. -Be sure your child takes any medication prescribed by your doctor and keeps all medical appointments. Children and teenagers with high blood pressure can lead normal productive lives. For more information, contact your local American Heart Association at 364-0480.

Foster parents sought

The Texas Department of Human Services is presently accepting applications for foster parents. There is a great need in the Panhandle for more foster parents. The children placed in foster care by the Texas Department of Human Services are children who have been victims of child abuse or neglect. Children placed in foster care are between the ages of birth and 17 years old. Homes are needed for younger children, but the greatest need is for homes that can care for older children and teenagers, and those who can accept the placement of more than one child to accommodate brothers and sisters placed together. Persons who apply to be foster parents can be married or single. They need to be financially stable and in good health. The foster home must pass a fire and health inspection. Foster parent applicants are required by law to pass a criminal and child abuse check by the Texas Department of Human Services and the Department of Public Safety. Foster parent applicants are approved for foster care after they have completed training, a foster home study, and the home has been verified to meet state requirements. Foster care is primarily short-term care for children. The length of time a child is in a foster home can be as short as one day or, in a few cases, permanent. The average length of time a child is in a foster home is usually three to six months. Foster parents can choose the age, sex, and race of children they wish to foster. Foster parents are individuals who are willing to accept the challenge of providing for an abused or neglected child who needs them. They are willing to accept the personal rewards, as well as the heartaches involved in caring for foster children. If you feel you would be interested in applying for the Texas Department of Human Services foster care program, contact John Spradling, Foster Home Developer, at 358-6211, extension 264, in Amarillo, or call the Hereford office of the Texas Department of Human Services at 364-1266.

Home prices still on rise

Although there may be short-term declines in various parts of the country, the overall picture for home owners looks pretty bright. The past decade alone has seen some spectacular increases in the price of a home. Back in 1980, the average house cost a little over $62,000. As of 1989, it sold for over $93,000, an increase of about 50 percent. Certain legislators are looking into ways to keep this trend up. For one thing, they're opposing a proposal to revise the rules governing how much the Federal Housing Authority (FHA) can guarantee and for whom. They realize that if the National Affordable Housing Act passes in its present form, it will let the FHA lure some people into buying more home than they can really afford. The typical first-time FHA home buyer, says an internal Housing and Urban Development analysis, "is stretching resources to a relatively dangerous level." This, explain the experts at the National People's Action Coalition, can lead to run down and abandoned buildings in some of our finest neighborhoods. It can also increase taxes, since it may mean the FHA will have to be bailed out the way Savings and Loans were. Many people who want to see housing values rising and homeowner's taxes holding back are asking their legislators to home in on this issue. Anyone can write Congress on either side of this or any issue at the U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C. 20510 and the House of Representatives, Washington, D.C. 20515. SLOTS MAKER MOVES CLOSER TO ACTION LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) - There's nothing like getting close to your customers to speed product deliveries, especially if they are located in the gaming capital of the world. That's why a major gaming machine maker - Bally Manufacturing Corp. - is building a 150,000-square-foot plant near Las Vegas, reports Metalworking News. The new plant will be used for assembly of slot machines, video game products and on-line lottery terminals, all key elements of gambling activity.

BURGERS AND CHIPS

ATLANTA (AP) - A survey by a fast-food chain in Atlanta has found that some customers would rather order their food from a computer than from a person behind the counter because they believe the machine provides more efficient service.

According to MIS Week, a management information systems journal, the finding came from a test of an automatic meal ordering system which allowed customers to order their food and beverages by using a touch-sensitive display screen.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This letter is to all the victims of molestation, not just children but adults as well.

I am not a victim of this hideous crime. Much to my sorrow and that of my family, I am the offender. Ten years ago, I molested my sister, Betsy (not her real name) who was only 11 years old at the time. I was 22. Betsy was too afraid to turn me in to the authorities, so she confided in a young friend, who was being molested by her father. When the authorities questioned the other girl, she brought up my name and I was arrested.

I had heard all the horror stories about what happens to child molesters in prison and feared for my life. A detective came to my home with a social worker. Much to my surprise, I confessed immediately, and later that day, I was taken to jail.

Unlike most other sex offenders, I cooperated fully. And unlike most families in such situations, mine was very supportive. Thank the Lord, they loved me and knew that I needed help. Like being an alcoholic, it's almost impossible to get well on your own.

Because of my family's willingness to stand by me, I served a year in jail and was put on probation for seven years. The probation ended a few months ago. During that time, I had group therapy and joined a support group called Parents United. I can't say enough about this organization. It is terrific.

Ann, I want to say something to every adult or child who knows that molesting is going on. Don't just keep quiet and do nothing. This is almost as bad as being an offender. No matter who the offender is TURN HIM OR HER IN!!! It is absolutely imperative that the awful secret be brought out in the open.

No longer need to worry about my world crashing down on my head. It has already happened, and I survived.

My arrest and rehabilitation made me a free man. I am no longer a threat to society. I feel like a decent person instead of a creep, and I hope and pray my letter will give others who are still out there the courage to seek help and live a decent life. -- New York

DEAR N.Y.: Thank you for a most unusual letter. You have made an excellent point that is so often overlooked and have performed a great service by sharing your experience. I appreciate your courage and your candor.

Child molesters are not necessarily shadowy figures who lurk around schoolyards with their hats pulled down over their faces. They can be a favorite uncle, or Grandpa, or a generous, good-natured neighbor who enjoys taking kids swimming, on hikes or to the zoo. They can be married or single, old or young, ignorant or well-educated.

Child molesting is a hideous crime. It robs children of their innocence and damages them in ways that often ruin their lives forever. These little victims desperately need to be rescued as early as possible.

I urge everyone who is reading this, if you were sexually abused when you were younger, please, tell somebody at once -- a friend, a neighbor, a doctor, a member of the clergy, a counselor or a therapist. The wounds will not heal by themselves. You need to talk about what happened to you, and the sooner the better.

When planning a wedding, who pays for what? Who stands where? "The Ann Landers Guide for Brides" has all the answers. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Brides, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $4.45.)

Avoid miracle cures

The sudden appearance and disappearance of arthritis symptoms make the disease a ready target for so-called miracle cures and quack products. During National Arthritis Month in May, Texas Medical Association urges arthritis sufferers to avoid these unproven methods and consult their physician for treatment.

"Because the common forms of arthritis represent diseases of antiquity, we should not be surprised that they're surrounded by myths and misconceptions," said TMA member Jerry C. Daniels, M.D., Ph.D., professor and director of the Division of Rheumatology with the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston.

Americans spend an estimated $10 billion each year in search of relief. The most common remedies sought are special diets and nutritional supplements. Advertisements also promote relief through use of dimethyl sulfoxide, magnetic bandages, vibrators, or other gadgets. Despite glowing testimonials, the relief may be only a result of the sudden disappearance of symptoms. People who suffer from arthritis pain and stiffness should be wary of these treatments, which are unproven may be unsafe.

Instead, arthritis sufferers should consult a physician for ways to relieve pain and stop joint damage. Although no cures have yet been found, promising research is underway, says TMA.

Arthritis, often incorrectly called "rheumatism," actually refers to more than 100 different conditions involving inflammation of the joints. In adults the most common forms are osteoarthritis and rheumatoid arthritis.

Osteoarthritis often is a painful condition that develops in the hips, knees and spine. Many people also have osteoarthritis in their fingers, which may give the hands a gnarled appearance.

A more descriptive term for osteoarthritis is degenerative joint disease because wear and tear on the inside surface of the joint frequently is a cause. Heredity and excessive weight are other contributing factors.

Rheumatoid arthritis is a more serious condition usually affecting the smaller joints—knuckles, toe joints, wrists, knees, ankles and neck. Sometimes it is associated with inflammation of other body systems, including the heart and lungs.

In this disorder, the thin membrane surrounding the joint becomes inflamed and swollen. In severe cases, deformed joints collapse and become distorted. If the neck is involved, paralysis or even death may result, although this is rare.

In both common forms of arthritis, high-dose aspirin frequently is an effective initial medication, although a physician may prescribe a newer anti-inflammatory pain medication, or occasionally a steroid injection.

Physical therapy, heat treatments, a balance of exercise and rest, and swimming in a heated pool also may be helpful.

Surgery sometimes is necessary to remove an inflamed joint membrane or replace a severely damaged joint with an artificial one. No matter how severe your symptoms, TMA urges you to consult your physician for proper treatment.

The Texas Medical Association is a professional organization of more than 29,000 physician and medical student members. It is based in Austin and has 17 component county medical societies around the state. The Association represents more than 80 percent of the state's physicians, and its goal is to improve the health of Texans through the professional and personal development of its members.

Do your children seem to "live" on candy, cookies, popsicles, sugared cereal and cola? Like many parents, you may be worried that too much sugar is leading to tooth decay and reducing the nutritional quality of

Sloppy Joshes a favorite

Kids love these sandwiches because they're simple enough for them to fix and they're fun to eat. Bulgur wheat - little nuggets of precooked cracked wheat berries - adds a little chewiness and nutty flavor. Easy go-wits to make a meal for family or the gang: tortilla chips, pickles, crisp vegetable sticks and milk.

SUPER SLOPPY JOSHES
1 pound lean ground meat (beef, pork, or turkey)
1/2 cup chopped onion
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
2 to 3 teaspoons chili powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
One 8-ounce can tomato sauce
One 6-ounce can tomato juice
1/2 cup shredded carrot
1-3rd cup bulgur wheat
6 whole-wheat hamburger buns, split
1/2 cup shredded cheddar cheese (2 ounces)

In a 10-inch skillet cook meat and onion until meat is brown and onion is tender. Drain off any excess fat. Stir in mustard, chili powder and salt. Cook and stir for 1 minute. Add tomato sauce, tomato juice, carrot and bulgur wheat. Bring mixture to boiling; reduce heat. Simmer meat mixture, uncovered, for 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Meanwhile, toast hamburger buns, if desired.

To serve, spoon meat mixture onto toasted buns; sprinkle each sandwich with shredded cheese. Makes 6 servings.

your children's diets. You may be able to do something about the problem, especially if your children are still young, but it could require changing some of your habits and attitudes as well as theirs.

Children come by their desire for sweets honestly. Studies have shown that infants are born with a preference for sweetened liquids over plain liquids. This preference will continue, especially if children have continued positive experiences with sweets.

As parents we create many of these experiences, by offering sweets to comfort or reward our child, to express affection and to celebrate special occasions. We sometimes use sweets to compensate when we're busy or tired, or to keep the children distracted or quiet. That doesn't mean we need to give up birthday cakes or stop eating cookies. In fact, giving children sweets in "positive contexts," is not the only reason for their attraction to sugared foods. How often children actually eat sweets is more important. This is determined mostly by the parents' own consumption of sweets, and how much television the family watches.

What and how parents eat has a powerful effect on children. Children learn to be sweet-eaters from their parents just as they learn other food preferences, such as liking meat or disliking vegetables. There is also a connection between children's sugar intake and how much television they watch. Children who watch more television tend to eat sweet foods more often because they are bombarded with commercials for highly sweetened foods, especially during Saturday morning cartoons. Because they watch at least some of the shows their children see, parents may become more familiar with the foods advertised and more receptive toward eating the foods themselves and serving them to their children.

If you really want to change your child's sweet-eating habits, cut back yourself. Also, talk with them about the differences in the variety of foods we eat for good health in "real life" and what they see in the make-believe world of television.
