PANHANDLE PROUD

Quality flour from Dawn mill will boost economy

For years, the Texas Panhandle has imported flour for bread, tortillas, and pastries, from Oklahoma and Dallas because the closest milling facilities are 250 miles away.

But a group of gentlemen near Dawn are hoping to change all that. Construction on a facility that will produce different types of flours is entering its final stages and mill manager Todd Dodd can't wait for Panhandle Milling to start on its first load of wheat.

"Right now we are just waiting for the contractor to finish the construction of the plant so we can really begin to set up the milling equipment," said Dodd.

Dodd, who comes to Deaf Smith County via Kansas and North Dakota, has been in the milling business for over 14 years.

"Panhandle Milling will be one of the most modern milling facilities in the country," Dodd said. "There are not very many mills in the country anyway, and most of those are older, not as technological as this mill will be."

Dodd said Panhandle Milling will employ 12 people and run around the clock.

"With the computer automation we will be using, along with checking the quality of the product every four hours, it would be feasible we could run the processing of milling with only one person, but we will be using more people to keep with any needed maintenance and sanitation."

Dodd said the mill should be completed in early spring. "We are about 75 percent finished now, and we have already begun to use a crane to place some of our equipment on to the top floors, before they finish putting up the walls and the ceiling."

The milling equipment that Panhandle Milling will use is manufactured in Cremona, Italy, by Oerim, Inc.

"When we started to look for the milling equipment, we could find only three places that could fill our needs, and they were in Italy, England, and Sweden," Dodd said. "Oerim has been helping us with the design of the plant so we decided to get our equipment through them."

Dodd said that the mill should not have any problems finding good, quality wheat in the panhandle.

"We have been running protein checks on the wheat the farmers have been harvesting and almost all of it exceeds our requirements for protein. They grow very good wheat around here."

The president of Panhandle Milling is Harold Dillehay, a long time resident of the Panhandle. Dillehay and Dodd will be helped by Leo Cantwell, who will serve as the mill's sales manager.

"What we are shooting for is to supply all the area bakeries with their flour needs. We want our products to be used throughout the Panhandle," Cantwell said.

The mill will be able to produce 300,000 pounds of wheat per day, with the capability of producing up to 500,000 pounds per day.

Winter storm warning issued

By The Associated Press

A winter storm warning was in effect for the Panhandle and travelers advisories were issued for a vast area of West Texas as forecasts called for as much as 2-4 inches of snow across western sections of the state.

Travelers advisories were issued for the South Plains, Permian Basin and Cocho Valley through tonight and for the Panhandle and South Plains through Friday.

The National Weather Service said early today a low in the Rio Grande Valley will deepen today in response to a cold moist low aloft crossing the southern Rockies.

Forecasters said moisture being drawn up from the southeast will converge with colder air in the Panhandle before the low moves southeastward Friday.

Forecasters said the air mass will undergo cooling and rain and drizzle will turn to freezing rain and freezing drizzle and snow in the Panhandle late today. Snowfall of 2 to 4 inches is possible with an additional 1 to 2 inches tonight. The South Plains could receive 1 to 2 inches of snow tonight.

Forecasters warned of treacherous road conditions across the Panhandle through tonight as icy conditions develop.

A weak stationary front was located across the southern half of the state early today. The front stretched from the Big Bend area to Del Rio and eastward into Southeast Texas.

Showers were reported at dawn along the front between San Antonio and Del Rio and parts of the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas.

Elsewhere around the state, some scattered showers were reported over extreme North Texas. The showers extended at dawn from along the Red River westward into northeast sections of the Texas Panhandle where colder air turned the precipitation into snow.

School hearing set on campus changes

Hereford School Board members have scheduled a public hearing for Monday night to get the community's opinion on combining the two junior highs or looking at other options concerning campus changes in the district.

The hearing will be at 7 p.m. Monday in the high school cafeteria. Some decisions on a Long Range Planning Committee proposal will be made at the board's regular meeting on Tuesday, Jan. 13.

Ideas about changing campuses have been prompted by some concerns about equality in the educational opportunities for junior high students and the striving for a united community. Also, the board is looking at a possible influx of students with whatever the Department of Energy does concerning the nuclear waste repository exploration studies. Another concern is the need for a new gym for varsity sports.

The Long Range Planning Committee presented to the board in a 7 a.m. meeting today a four-phase plan for campus improvements. By the fourth phase, a decision would have to be made on where junior highs and the high school would meet in the fall of 1988.

Option A would call for new classrooms at La Plata Junior High and new offices at Stanton Junior High, then putting 7th and 8th grades at La Plata, and putting 9th grade with the high school and using part of the Stanton building for the extra classrooms.

Option B would move 9th through 12th to the La Plata campus and put 7th and 8th at the present high school building. Possibly, 6th grade would join the 7th and 8th to form a middle school.

Combining junior highs, new gym among proposals

For total renovations on using Option A, the cost for all four phases would be $3,167,000. Option B would cost $6,265,000.

Superintendent Dr. Harrell Holder estimated that to provide funds for the Option B, school taxes would be raised by approximately 7 cents. He also told the board that even with going with Option A, which could be afforded without a tax increase, that taxes may have to go up for other requirements mandated by H.B. 72.

The plan presented by the committee is as follows:

PHASE I: This phase would consist of renovating the High School, Stanton Jr. High School (North Part), and La Plata Jr. High School. Each of these renovating projects would consist of cooling and heating systems, lighting, restrooms, walls, ceiling, windows, floors, etc. High School would have 8 new classrooms constructed for science, arts, and languages.

PHASE II: This phase would consist of constructing a new auxiliary gym with 2 full size practice areas on the west side of the present La Plata gym. Also, in this phase would be the renovating of the La Plata gym as the new varsity high school gym which would include new floor, new seating, redoing dressing room areas, and paving areas for parking.

PHASE III: This phase would consist of general renovations of restrooms, ceiling, floors, etc. at Tierra Blanca, West Central, Northwest, Bluebonnet, and Aikman Schools. Also, completing the roofing repairs in various campuses would be in this phase.

PHASE IV: Option A - This phase would consist of constructing 6-8 new classrooms at La Plata Jr. High School and constructing an office area at Stanton Jr. High School. This phase would be coordinated so that it would be finished and in place by the Fall of 1988. At that time the two Jr. High Schools in Hereford Independent School District would be combined with the 7th and 8th grades being at La Plata Jr. High School and the 9th grade being moved to High School, utilizing the North part of Stanton Jr. High.

PHASE IV: Option B - This phase would consist of moving the High School, 9-12 grades, to the La Plata Jr. High School and moving the 7th and 8th grades to the old High School. This, naturally, would entail a larger building program and would be the most costly. However, for the future of Hereford, the fact that nearly all of the high school sports facilities are located near La Plata Jr. High School area, and the transportation needs of the 7th and 8th grade students, this phase might be in best interest in the long range for all people and students. Also, it might be worth considering moving the 6th grade to the old High School (Middle School concept) to help alleviate the crowded conditions at elementary schools.

Diamond Shamrock considers takeover offer by Pickens

DALLAS (AP) - Diamond Shamrock officials were considering a second takeover offer from a partnership led by corporate raider T. Boone Pickens who said he is willing to buy 20 million of the company's shares for $15 each.

Lucky Partners, a partnership that includes Alabama businessman John M. Harbert III, Wednesday began a partial tender offer three weeks after dropping its stock swap offer. Analysts say the new offer may be too much for Diamond shareholders to resist.

"The (Diamond Shamrock) board will make its recommendation to stockholders promptly, and in any event by January 20, 1987," company officials said in a statement. "Until that time, Diamond Shamrock requests that all stockholders refrain from accepting or rejecting the offer."

An earlier bid by the Pickens groups, which includes Mesa Limited Partnership, an Amarillo-based energy group, to acquire the Dallas-based energy concern for securities valued at $2 billion was rejected by the company Dec. 18, and the offer was dropped the same day.

"It's just too attractive," said Don Bustos, an analyst with Duff & Phelps in Chicago, of the $300 million offer. Together with the 5 million shares the partnership already owns, the 20 million shares would give the partners about 22.5 percent of Diamond Shamrock's approximately 111 million total shares outstanding.

David Batchelder, president of Pickens' Mesa Petroleum Co., said Lucky Partners' decision to make the tender offer came as a result of Diamond Shamrock's "hostile response" to the original offer.

"We're saying to the shareholders, 'Look, we want to increase our ownership level and we're willing to pay $15 a share to do it,'" said Batchelder. "We're intent on acquiring the company."

On the New York Stock Exchange, Diamond Shamrock's common stock closed Wednesday at $14.50 a share, up $1.12 1/2 from Tuesday.

"We have happy shareholders," said Batchelder. "This is a stock that hasn't traded at $15 over a year."

Batchelder said the tender offer would be financed primarily from the working capital of Mesa Limited Partnership, which has an 85 percent commitment in the deal. The remaining 15 percent would be financed with working capital and borrowing, he said.

Lucky Partners said its tender offer was limited to 20 million shares because certain provisions of Diamond Shamrock's "poison pill" anti-takeover measures take effect if a stockholder acquires more than 25 percent of the company's stock.

Bustos predicts the offer will be over-subscribed, and Lucky Partners may accept end up buying more than 20 million shares, but will stay under the 25 percent ownership ceiling.

Lucky Partners said they believed the offer would "increase the likelihood that the company's stockholders will receive the opportunity to judge for themselves the merits of any proposal" the partners might make to buy the remaining stock.

The tender offer expires Feb. 4. Once completed, Batchelder said Lucky Partners would make a proposal to acquire the rest of the company's stock.

Engineer Says Signals Conflicted

CHASE, Md. (AP) — A Conrail engineer said he had prepared to slow down and proceed through a track juncture when he saw a signal telling him to stop moments before his locomotives were rammed by an Amtrak train, according to an investigator.

Just before the crash that killed 15 people and injured more than 170, the engineer, R.L. Gates, sent a radio message to a track monitor saying a collision was imminent, Joseph Nall of the National Transportation Safety Board told a news conference Wednesday night.

Nall said Gates and surviving brakeman Edward W. Cromwell testified in "open and forthright interviews" Wednesday before a NTSB panel.

Gates reported seeing an "approach limited" signal about two miles from Sunday's crash site, Nall said. The signal told him to slow to about 30 mph and proceed to a signal 500 feet from the crash site, Nall said.

When Gates saw the second signal telling him to stop, he applied the emergency brakes but it was too late, Nall said.

Federal investigators have said the train appeared to have been traveling at 60 mph when the brakes were applied.

It should have been traveling no more than 15 mph when it approached the final signal, according to sources close to the investigation quoted in today's editions of The Washington Post.

Gates estimated the train was going about 5 mph when the crash occurred, according to his attorney, Stephen Tully. The Amtrak train was going about 100 mph en route from Washington to Springfield, Mass.

Cromwell, the brakeman, told investigators he didn't remember seeing any signals along the tracks because he was eating lunch, Nall said.

Three Conrail engines rolled from a side track onto the main line in the path of the 12-car passenger train, which carried about 600 passengers.

Amtrak spokesman Clifford Black said all trains between Washington and New York were operating as of Wednesday morning but were slowing to 30 mph through the crash area.

Gates also denied tapping over a warning whistle inside his train's cab. According to Nall, Gates said the whistle was automatically disengaged when he mechanically acknowledged seeing the first signal to slow down.

Tapping the whistle would be a federal safety violation, Nall said. Train crew members sometimes silence or muffle the whistle to avoid the annoying sound, according to some engineers.

In another development, the Federal Railroad Administration called for maximum civil penalties against Amtrak because it did not test surviving crew members for drugs and alcohol after the crash, as required.

Investigators Say No Arrests

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Police said they found no connection between the Dupont Plaza Hotel fire and bomb threats that forced hundreds of people to evacuate a hospital treating fire victims and offices investigating the blaze.

Seven sites, including the U.S. commonwealth's Department of Justice, received telephoned bomb threats Wednesday, but no explosive devices were found, police said.

The department is coordinating the investigation into the Dec. 31 fire at the 22-story beachfront luxury hotel that killed 96 people and injured more than 140. Officials have said it was deliberately set.

No arrests were made or suspects identified as of Wednesday, federal and local authorities said.

Dan Cabrera, the resident agent for the U.S. Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, refused to comment on a published report that the investigation was focusing on hotel staff who are members of Teamsters Local 901, which was threatening to strike at midnight New Year's Eve over a wage dispute with the hotel.

Union local president Rene Rodriguez said union members were cooperating with the investigators. "We have nothing to hide," he said.

Police and the FBI would not comment on whether any arrests were imminent, but said no one was being restricted from leaving Puerto Rico.

"We're still interviewing a lot of people — management, union officials, guests from the hotel, in short, anyone with any information," FBI spokesman Diader Rosario said.

The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms was expected to complete its laboratory analysis of evidence in the fire this week, Jerry Rudden said in the bureau's Washington office.

Police scrambled Wednesday to keep up with the bomb threats that were called in to locations around the metropolitan area.

Justice Department workers stayed put despite the threat on their office, but at the Industrial Accidents Hospital, a few miles from downtown San Juan, about 300 people, including patients, doctors and nurses, were evacuated for about three hours.

Among six Dupont Plaza survivors evacuated was Kenneth Johnson, 61, of Winthrop, Mass., listed in critical condition with burns over 50 percent of his body. Johnson was put in an ambulance. Other patients were transferred to University Hospital in the same state medical complex or rested outside in wheelchairs or on stretchers.

Health Secretary Luis Izquierdo Mora, who has worked for the last week with relatives of those killed in the fire, blamed the hospital's bomb threat on a mentally disturbed person.

The New York Times reported today that police on Wednesday found a wooden box containing batteries and wires that may have been intended to look like a bomb at a municipal building in Toa Baja, about 15 miles south of San Juan.

Five Killed in Artillery Exchange

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Beirut's airport was barraged with shellfire today, and police said an empty jetliner was hit and exploded in flames. Moslem and Christian militias blamed each other for the attack and traded artillery fire, killing five civilians.

An airport employee was injured in the bombardment and the airport was closed after the 45-minute attack, police said.

The shelling came a day after former President Camille Chamoun, now the finance minister, was wounded in an assassination attempt. A remote-controlled bomb car bomb exploded in Christian east Beirut as his motorcade passed, killing four other people and wounding 35 passers-by. Chamoun is a Maronite Christian.

The newspaper An-Nahar said today an anonymous caller claimed responsibility for the attack on behalf of a previously unknown group called the Lebanese Forces-Free Bashirians-Vengeance Squads.

The word Bashirians appeared to be a reference to Bashir Gemayel, brother of President Amin Gemayel. Bashir Gemayel was killed in a bomb explosion in east Beirut two weeks after being elected president in 1982.

In today's airport bombardment, at least nine shells exploded on runways and the tarmac.

Police said the burning aircraft was a Boeing 707 belonging to Middle East Airlines, Lebanon's national carrier.

Wheat grower says Reagan trying to wreck farming's financial base

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Association of Wheat Growers has little good to say about President Reagan's budget proposal for operating the Agriculture Department, particularly its plan to reduce target prices.

Bud Leuthold, association president, said Tuesday the administration's plan would cut deeply into the income of wheat producers and

"wreck agriculture's financial structure."

Leuthold also criticized Reagan for proposing cuts in some export programs that many farmers say are needed to help them regain a fair share of the world market.

"It's insulting to have the White House say that its proposals will solve farm program problems once and for all," Leuthold said. "Our farm problems are rooted in the global economy and will hardly be solved by shifting support away from our farmers."

The Reagan proposal would reduce target prices on wheat, feed grains, cotton and rice by 10 percent a year. The targets are bookkeeping figures used to compute "deficiency" payments to farmers when market prices are low.

Leuthold said the "income protection" of the wheat target price has been frozen at $4.38 per bushel since 1984, despite annual inflation increases. If Congress allows the Reagan plan to proceed, the target price would be cut 44 cents per bushel in 1988 and by $1.19 over the next three years.

"The farm economy is now burdened with over $200 billion of debt which, because of low prices, increasing numbers of farmers may be unable to repay," Leuthold said in a statement.

Leuthold, a Billings, Mont., wheat farmer, said the Reagan budget plan would cause more repayment problems and farm foreclosures, all of which would jeopardize the rural economy and the banking system.

The USDA says legislation is being developed to reduce target prices but that no fixed formula has yet been adopted. However, cutbacks are expected to result in massive savings in commodity program costs over the next few years.

In the fiscal year that ended last Sept. 30, those outlays rose to a record of more than $25.8 billion and are expected to be $25.3 billion this year, second-highest on record.

But if Congress goes along with the Reagan proposals, costs of operating USDA's commodity programs could decline to about $21.3 billion in the 1988 fiscal year that will begin on Oct. 1 and annually thereafter. Other measures would include a tighter lid on payments to individual farmers and "decoupling" those payments from crop production.

If adopted, the USDA predicts that total costs of commodity programs could be reduced to $10.5 billion in 1992.

However, Leuthold said the administration "has failed to recognize that it shouldn't tamper with farm income during a crisis" and that it "should accelerate, not back off, on export initiatives."

Leuthold referred to a Reagan budget proposal to cut funding for some USDA export programs. Levels of those would decline by $2.1 billion next fiscal year, including cuts for export credit guarantees to finance sales of wheat and other commodities.

"With U.S. farmers facing a reduced share of a shrinking world grain market, the administration's plan to cut export program funding amounts to economic suicide," Leuthold said. "Increasing competition from the state treasuries of other countries should prompt a strong, well-considered, well-financed response from our government."

Valley produce growers forming co-op to control prices, supply

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Rio Grande Valley produce growers are forming a cooperative to set prices and control supply because they say another unprofitable year could snuff them out of business.

"This could mean the life or death of the vegetable industry in the Valley," says Steve Johnson, communications director for the Texas Citrus and Vegetable Association.

"We have excellent crops down here. We have the best cabbage grown anywhere, excellent celery, beautiful broccoli, and cauliflower you can't beat. But these guys aren't making any money," he said. "We've just been run into the ground. The vegetable people are saying if we have another year like last year, it could spell the end of the individual farmer."

Incorporation papers for the cooperative were delivered to the secretary of state in Austin this week and await approval, Johnson said.

It's against anti-trust laws to fix prices, unless it's a farm cooperative, Johnson said Wednesday.

"These guys always said 'We won't work together until we're poor enough' and I guess it got to that point," Johnson said.

The Valley's produce growers have been rocked by prices below production for the past couple of years, leading up to the movement to form a cooperative in September.

Johnson says it will be a loosely formed organization with separate branches for each kind of produce.

The committee investigating the cooperative's implementation is checking on a telephone system that would let producers of a certain vegetable get on the phone at the same time to discuss the day's shipments and prices, Johnson said.

How the cooperative will work "is still kind of in the dark," Johnson said. But the cooperative would allow producers to ship their own goods under their own label, rather than having all produce go to a central shed and be shipped under one label.

"It's being set up so that anyone in the state can take part, but right now just Valley people are interested."

List of 'ins, outs' given

NEW YORK (AP) — Sorry, Bill Cosby. You may be television's top dad, but this year, according to W magazine, you're "out."

But you're in good company. Also on the "out" list are actors Harrison Ford, Rob Lowe and Sam Shepard. Atop the "in" list are Richard Nixon, Paul Hogan and Elizabeth Taylor.

Forget eating cajun food in 1987, the magazine says in its 15th annual "What's In, What's Out" list. What's in this year is plain old American food like roast chicken, waffles and corn on the cob.

Thinking of going to Paris even in the springtime? It's very out, they say. Go for Hot Springs, Ark., instead.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

The Amarillo Globe-News editorial reprinted in Sunday's Brand argued that those of us opposed to a nuclear dump in Deaf Smith should stop pestering the Department of Energy and let it proceed with selecting the nation's first high-level nuclear waste site. If the opposition did that, the author claimed, we would soon be able to get answers to questions such as "Will the dump be safe?" and "How will it affect our economy?" I think that approach to fighting the repository, however, is misguided.

The government's record in giving correct answers to questions like these does not inspire faith in the Globe-News's theory. Granted, if all the legal, legislative, and financial fetters on the DOE were unfastened, it would only be months before we could hear answers like "The repository will probably be safe. It will be a boon to our economy." But would those answers be worth the press releases they were written on?

No. The government answered that underground nuclear tests in the 1950's and 1960's would be safe. Actually, radiation leaked over 40 times. The government answered that nuclear and chemical wastes stored at the DOE's facilities in Oak Ridge, TN, and Hanford, WA, would not leak. Actually, leaks have occurred at both. Every year the government has an answer for farm problems. Actually, those problems are still here. These comparisons have been made so many times that they have become cliches—but that doesn't make them any less relevant. The Globe-News doesn't realize that much of the time, government "answers" do more harm than good.

What, then, can we gain by slowing the Department of Energy? First, there is the chance that if we make enough noise against the dump and cause enough trouble, Congress could reexamine the nation's nuclear waste disposal program. In 1982, when the Nuclear Waste Policy Act was passed, an underground, mined repository seemed a politically and scientifically safe idea. Since that time, new opposition groups have pointed out the many weaknesses in that method. It is my belief that our nation's leaders and scientists can find a much better way to isolate wastes from people, water, and land. Second, the harder it is to put a repository in our county, the easier it will be for the DOE to stick nuclear waste on land that is already in the grasp of the government (i.e., Nevada). It may seem unreasonable to force a dump, on them, but is more unreasonable (considering the government's track record) to give the DOE even the slightest chance to put nuclear waste under the water supply for eight states.

I believe that slowing and fighting the Department of Energy at every opportunity, then, is the course to follow. We must not make it easy for the DOE to endanger the safety of our county's future generations.

Sincerely,
Dale West

Fat substitute shows promise

There is a new polyester on the scene — one that you eat. Sucrose polyester is a fat substitute that shows promise in treating obesity and diabetes.

"It works as a substitute for fat because it is not absorbed in the intestines and adds no calories to the diet," says Dr. Scott M. Grundy, director of the Center for Human Nutrition at The University of Texas Health Science Center at Dallas. "It also reduces the absorption of cholesterol and can lower plasma cholesterol."

In liquid form sucrose polyester can be used like cooking oil. In solid form it has the consistency of lard but can be flavored to taste like butter. Sucrose polyester is not available to the public. The substance is undergoing clinical tests to determine its usefulness in treating nutrition-linked diseases.

The November 1986 American Journal of Clinical Nutrition published the results of tests of sucrose polyester on 10 patients at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in San Diego, California. Grundy was one of the investigators, along with Drs. Jeffrey Abrams and Y. Antero Kesaniemi of the University of California-San Diego and Dr. Jack V. Anastasia of the Procter and Gamble Company.

All of the patients in the study weighed at least 24 percent more than the ideal weights for their heights. Four of them were non-diabetic; three were diabetic; the final three had high blood levels of triglycerides in addition to diabetes.

The combination of problems was chosen for study because obesity is a major problem for many diabetics. "In about 80 percent of adult-onset diabetes could lose weight, they would be much better off, and their glucose metabolism would not be so severely deranged. They would be nearer to normal and might not require insulin or other drugs." In addition, obesity stimulates the overproduction of triglycerides in the liver, and diabetes compounds the problem.

The patients in the study spent at least a month on each of three different diets: weight maintenance, caloric restriction plus sucrose polyester and caloric restriction without sucrose polyester.

The diet in the first period established a baseline for comparison with the others. It consisted of a liquid diet with enough calories to maintain the starting weight. Calories in the diet came from 40 percent fats, 45 percent carbohydrates and 15 percent milk protein. The diet was supplemented with cholesterol to reveal any effects of sucrose polyester on cholesterol absorption.

During the second period, the fats in the diet were replaced with sucrose polyester, thereby cutting down on the total calories by 40 percent. Once again cholesterol was supplemented.

Because diabetic patients had poor tolerance of the regimen for the second period, they were restricted to 1000 calories a day, with 400 calories in the form of fat. Sucrose polyester was added in the amount of 75 to 90 grams a day. This regimen lasted 37 to 56 days.

During the third period, the restricted caloric level of the second period was maintained, but the 40:45:15 ratio of fat, carbohydrate and protein was resumed. Diabetic patients continued to be restricted to 1000 calories a day. Patients were on this regimen from 30 to 60 days.

Although the total number of patients in each group was small, the results within each group were fairly consistent. The non-diabetic patients lost 11 to 15 pounds during the second period of caloric restriction plus sucrose polyester. In addition, their total cholesterol fell an average of 20 percent, and low density lipoproteins (LDL-cholesterol) fell 26 percent.

The beneficial effect on blood lipid levels probably occurred because of a decrease in saturated fats, a reduction of total calories, and inhibition of cholesterol absorption, Grundy says.

The diabetic patients were unable to tolerate as much sucrose polyester as non-diabetic patients. Large amounts of the fat substitute resulted in abdominal discomfort or diarrhea for most diabetic patients, but smaller amounts were tolerated fairly well.

Caloric restriction plus sucrose polyester resulted in weight loss, lower total cholesterol and lower LDL-cholesterol for diabetic patients as it did for non-diabetics. Blood lipid levels rose slightly during the third period, but not to the baseline level.

As a way of adding food without adding calories, substituting sucrose polyester for some fats will help diabetics reduce weight.

For those diabetic patients who also had abnormally high triglyceride levels, reducing calories (with or without sucrose polyester) caused a marked reduction in blood levels of triglycerides.

This series of tests, says Grundy, confirms the results of an earlier series conducted solely with non-diabetic patients. Besides aiding in weight loss, sucrose polyester blocks the absorption of cholesterol. And while patients didn't relish this fat substitute, they didn't seem to mind it. "None of the patients complained about the taste, and there were no serious side effects," Grundy concludes. "On the plus side, some of the patients said they felt less hungry during the period they were taking it."

Scientists have discovered that the mating call for the Mediterranean fruit fly has exactly the same frequency as lower F3 on the harmonica.

Drugs

DEAR READERS: Drugs are everywhere, not only in the United States, but worldwide. Drugs are in factories, the armed services, the law enforcement agencies, athletics, the performing arts, the medical profession (this means physicians, nurses and aides), the legal profession (lawyers and judges), junior high schools, senior high schools, colleges and universities. Drugs are in the church, the airline industry, the railroads and hospitals, and on the highways. Drug users include Wall Street traders, musicians, bus drivers, taxi drivers, pilots and locomotive engineers, journalists and artists. We must start somewhere to eradicate this all-pervasive problem. The best place is in the schools.

These are the key recommendations listed by the United States Department of Education in its report "What Works: Schools Without Drugs." Parents are vital if the program is to work. Here are the directives:

PARENTS

1. Teach standards of right and wrong and demonstrate these standards by personal example.

2. Help children to resist peer pressure by supervising their activities, knowing who their friends are, and being available to talk to them about their interests and problems.

3. Be knowledgeable about drugs and the signs of drug use. When symptoms are observed, respond promptly.

SCHOOLS

1. Determine the extent and character of drug use and establish a means of monitoring that use regularly.

2. Establish clear and specific rules regarding drug use that include strong corrective actions.

3. Enforce established policies against drug use fairly and consistently. Implement security measures to eliminate drugs on school premises and at school functions.

4. Implement a comprehensive drug prevention curriculum for kindergarten through grade 12, teaching that drug use is dangerous and harmful.

5. Reach out to the community for support and assistance in making the school's anti-drug program work. Develop arrangements in which school personnel, parents, school boards, law-enforcement officers, treatment organizations and private groups can work together.

STUDENTS

1. Learn about the effects of drug use, the reasons why drugs are harmful, and ways to resist pressures to try them.

2. Use an understanding of the danger posed by drugs to help other students avoid them. Encourage other students to resist drugs, persuade those using drugs to seek help, and report those selling drugs to parents and the school principal.

COMMUNITIES

1. Help schools fight drugs by providing them with the expertise and financial resources of community groups and agencies.

2. Involve local law-enforcement agencies in all aspects of drug prevention: assessment, enforcement and education. The police and courts should have well-established and mutually supportive relationships with the schools.

Are you, or is someone you are about messing around with drugs - or, considering it? Are all drugs bad? What about pot - in moderation? Ann Landers' all-new booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope," separates the facts from the fiction. For each booklet ordered, send $2.00, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a woman in my mid-30s who is recently divorced and plans to start dating soon. Unfortunately, early in my 10-year marriage, my husband brought home herpes. Fortunately, I have a light case and outbreaks occur only about once a year. I am now struggling with the ethics of this disease insofar as new relationships are concerned.

Do I need to tell a potential sex partner if I am not experiencing an outbreak at the time I feel I am ready for intimacy? If I DO tell him, what are the chances of scaring off a wonderful guy?

You would perform a great service for millions of reader by printing this letter, Ann. I am not alone with my problem and it is one that is not easily discussed.--WAITING IN BOULDER, COLO.

DEAR WAITING: You must NEVER have sexual relations with anyone without telling him that you have herpes.

I suggest that you ask your friend to accompany you to your physician's office. When the doctor explains the nature of the problem and tells him that abstinence during outbreaks is almost total protection against the disease, he should be fairly comfortable about it.

In the past year the medication for Herpes Simplex II has been greatly improved. All doctors who are up on the latest know about it. It's available in drugstores. Also contact the Herpes Resource Center. The address is Box 100, Palo Alto, CA 94302.

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Los Angeles Raiders owner Al Davis and Gene Upshaw, current head of the players' union, both known for their feuds with the NFL hierarchy, head the list of 16 finalists for the 1987 class of enshrinees to the Pro Football Hall of Fame announced today.

Joining Davis and Upshaw as finalists are 13 former players, including wide receiver Fred Biletnikoff, offensive tackle Bob Brown, running back Larry Csonka, quarterback Len Dawson, defensive tackle Joe Greene, quarterback Bob Griese, running back John Henry Johnson, offensive guard Jerry Kramer, center Jim Langer, offensive guard Larry Little, wide receivers Don Maynard and Tommy McDonald and defensive tackle Alan Page, as well as former Cleveland Coach Blanton Collier.

The finalists, determined by the Hall of Fame's 30-member board of selectors, will be considered for enshrinement when the Hall's selection committee meets in Anaheim, Calif., Jan. 24.

Davis has served as a head coach, general manager and Commissioner of the American Football League, in addition to his current duties as principal owner and chief executive officer of the Raiders. Davis engineered the Raiders' controversial move from Oakland to Los Angeles in 1982 and has been embroiled in several legal battles with the NFL over the move. Under his guidance, the Raiders won three Super Bowls.

Upshaw, a 15-year veteran as an offensive guard with the Raiders, attended Texas A&I. He played in six Pro Bowls and was the offensive captain of the Raiders for eight seasons. He is currently the executive director of the NFL Players Association.

The 1987 enshrinement class will be announced immediately after the selection committee meeting Jan. 24.

The class will be inducted at the Hall of Fame in Canton on Saturday, Aug. 8.

BASEBALL

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego Padres asked waivers on imprisoned pitcher LaMarr Hoyt because of repeated drug problems, according to the club.

The team decided to give Hoyt his unconditional release, nullifying his $1 million agreement, signed prior to the 1985 season. The Padres contended the right-hander had breached his contract by failing to abide by a good citizenship clause.

If Hoyt is not claimed by another team, he will become a free agent on Monday. He still faces possible disciplinary action from the commissioner's office.

The release could cost the former Cy Young award winner $3 million. A source close to the club said the team would not pay Hoyt for the remaining three years of his contract.

NEW YORK (AP) — Al Bianchi, assistant coach of the Phoenix Suns, was fined $1,500 and suspended without pay for one game by the NBA and three players were fined for fighting during the Suns' game with the Lakers in Los Angeles last Friday night.

Frank Brickowski of the Lakers was fined $2,500 and his teammate Wes Matthews was assessed $1,000 while Grant Gondrezick of the Suns was fined $750.

The penalties were levied by Rod Thorn, NBA vice president for operations, following an investigation by the league's security department.

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Layden, whose Utah team compiled a 12-3 record for the winningest month in Jazz history, was named NBA Coach of the Month for December.

Utah won all six of its home games and went 6-3 on the road in the last month of 1986. The six road victories were by a total of 19 points and all were decided in the closing seconds.

NEW YORK (AP) — Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who last year became the first player to draw more than 1 million votes in NBA All-Star Game balloting, has increased his lead in the voting for this year's contest.

The Los Angeles Lakers' guard, who is averaging 23.5 points and 11.8 assists per game, now has 362,937 votes.

Akeem Olajuwon of Houston leads the voting among centers and is second to Johnson in the overall balloting with 323,638.

At forward, Ralph Sampson of Houston still leads with 284,839, followed by Kelly Tripucka and Karl Malone, both of Utah, at 229,815 and 198,848, respectively.

Benson-Manley matchup is key one in NFL playoffs

By TOM CANAVAN

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — A bandage covers scar tissue on the bridge of his nose. The number 79 written on a white piece of adhesive tape is stuck above his locker to remind him of the play he blew.

And over the loudspeaker in the New York Giants' locker room, Brad Benson hears Dexter this, Dexter that. The reporters never seem to go away, either.

It's "Hell Week" again for this offensive tackle as the New York Giants prepare for Sunday's NFC championship game against the Washington Redskins ... and Dexter Manley.

The Benson-Manley matchup has achieved larger-than-life status since Benson prevented the All Pro Washington defensive end from registering a sack on Dec. 7 and earned NFC offensive player of the week. All Pro honors came the next week.

And this third matchup of the season between the pair has become a focal point of the game, for at least the media.

"Attention members of the press, Brad Benson will not be able to talk to you today because he had the Dexter Flu," nose tackle Jim Burt said over the loudspeaker in the Giants' locker room. "His dog Dexter gave it to him."

Five minutes later Benson was still in the Giants' training room.

"Attention members of the press, Brad Benson will be coming out momentarily." It's Burt again.

DENVER (AP) — With several Denver players hobbled by injuries, Coach Dan Reeves may reactivate tight end Clarence Kay this week.

Except for Denver guard Paul Howard, whose season is over after a severe knee injury, all of the Broncos' walking wounded were on the practice field Wednesday as the team geared up for Sunday's AFC championship game at Cleveland.

They were joined by Kay, who had been sidelined for four weeks while undergoing drug rehabilitation.

Midnight tonight for unsigned baseball players

Free agent deadline nears

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Tim Raines, Andre Dawson and Lance Parrish seem certain to leave. So might Bob Horner and Rich Gedman.

Doug DeCinces and Brian Downing will probably stay. It's anybody's guess what will happen with Ron Guidry and Willie Randolph.

A total of 15 free agents and their teams faced tonight's deadline — either the two sides reach agreement by midnight EST or the clubs cannot re-sign their players until May 1.

Some discussions took place Wednesday, but the real scramble was likely to occur today, or not at all.

"It will probably go to the limit," Tom Reich, the agent for California's Downing, said Wednesday night.

But Reich, who also represents Raines and Parrish, said those All-Stars will likely be looking for new homes come Thursday.

The Detroit Tigers have stayed firm in their offer of a $1 million, one-year contract to Parrish, while the Montreal Expos have not wavered in their $4.8 million, three-year proposal after a season in which he batted a league-leading .334 with 70 stolen bases.

Raines, Parrish and Dawson have said they do not intend to re-sign with their teams. Last year, facing a similar deadline, the Tigers went down to the last hour before re-signing free agent Kirk Gibson.

The Expos seemed to be walking the thinnest free-agent tightrope. In addition to Raines, Montreal faced the prospect of losing its other All-Star outfielder, Dawson.

Dawson has rejected the team's $2 million, two-year offer and says he wants to play for the Chicago Cubs. No discussions were planned today between the Expos and Dawson.

Horner, of Atlanta, and Gedman, of Boston, also seemed prepared to play elsewhere.

The Braves originally presented Horner a three-year contract worth $4.5 million, but withdrew the offer. Atlanta General Manager Bobby Cox said the team's newest offer guarantees a lesser amount, but would pay Horner more if he meets certain incentives.

Cox said the Braves have offered their other free agent, Doyle Alexander, a two-year deal for $1.7 million.

"We just can't get together," Cox said. "They turned down everything. That's where we're at."

The Red Sox have offered Gedman a two-year contract worth $750,000 per season, but he wants more. This week, Jack Sands, Gedman's agent, told the New York Yankees the All-Star catcher would like to play for them, but was rejected.

The Yankees and the Angels went to final hours to make decision regarding their free agents. New York has four of them, including co-captains Guidry and Randolph, while the Angels were talking to Downing, DeCinces and Bob Boone.

Just how much interest other teams will have in unattached free agents remains to be seen.

Several agents and teams have speculated those players will sign somewhere, but likely for less than they would get from their 1986 teams.

In other baseball news, major league batting champion Wade Boggs of Boston filed for salary arbitration. He joined teammate Bruce Hurst as the only players among the 139 eligible to file for salary arbitration to do so. The deadline for them filing is Jan. 15.

Benson grinned as he walked toward his locker. A glance at the 20 reporters waiting for him took the grin off his face.

"You guys can ask me questions all week and I'm not going to give you one good fiery answer," said the nine-year veteran, who has played each of the five positions on the offensive line for New York.

Since moving to left tackle permanently about two years ago, Benson and Manley have faced each other five times.

Manley, who had 18½ sacks this season, has had five sacks in those games, including two in the first game of the season between the Redskins and Giants.

"There has never been anything personal said," Benson said when asked if he spoke with Manley on the field. "It's always been clean. He is good clean competitor. He is a classy guy."

Ways with Wine
by David Hutchins

RED VS. WHITE
The real difference between white and red wines lies not in the color, but in the way they are made. In short, white wine is pressed, while red wine is crushed. The underlying universal rule is that, to make white wine, the juice must be extracted from grapes as quickly as possible. The juice must be separated from the skins so that it may ferment and become wine on its own. For red wine, the grapes are merely broken up into a pulpy mass of juice, pulp, and skin. Fermentation starts with the completed crushed grape. Each component contributes something to the eventual wine. The extra flavors which red wine gets out of the skins during fermentation take time to settle down. White wine starts like ready to drink.

Mavericks score 108-103 win over Spurs

DALLAS (AP) — The Mavericks are off to a 22-10 start in the NBA this year, but a 108-103 victory over San Antonio reinforced Dallas Coach Dick Motta's opinion that something has been lacking of late.

"The game seemed to be a continuation of the Indiana game. The rebounding was good, the intensity on the boards was good, but we didn't shoot very well (42 of 93 for 45.2 percent). We made some good plays, but we couldn't put the game away," Motta said after Wednesday night's game.

Dallas lost to Indiana 144-135 Monday night.

Wednesday, they had a 99-87 lead with 5:04 left in the game, but San Antonio outscored them 10-2 over the next four minutes to cut the lead to 101-97 with 47 seconds remaining.

Derek Harper hit an 18-footer for Dallas, but Anthony Jones' three-point basket narrowed the Mavericks' lead to 103-100 with 21 seconds left. Mark Aguirre, who finished with a game-high 27 points, hit one of two free throws. Sam Perkins hit a pair, and Aguirre hit two more to give Dallas a 108-100 lead with five seconds left.

Aguirre, who had a season-high 12 rebounds, had a rough first quarter and was replaced by Detlef Schrempf.

"While I was sitting there, I thought about it and when I got back in, I got after it," Aguirre said.

The Spurs are 8-25, their worst record since joining the NBA 10 years ago.

San Antonio trailed most of the first half but took a 45-43 lead on David Greenwood's basket at 5:01 of the second quarter. Aguirre countered with two quick baskets to give Dallas a 47-45 advantage, but Alvin Robertson (25 points) scored four points as the Spurs outscored the Mavericks 8-5 in the last 3:50 to lead at halftime, 53-52.

San Antonio coach Bob Weiss, who was Motta's assistant for six years before this season, said his team "hit a dry spell and they capitalized on it."

"I was pleased with the way the team played. It could be easy for them to just give up, but they keep on fighting. Artis (center Gilmore who had only eight rebounds and no points) had a tough night.

"We had a great defensive effort, but Derek Harper's (shot) there at the end just did us in," Weiss said.

For the Mavs, Wednesday night's game was a club-record ninth consecutive sellout (17,007). No. 10 will come Friday night against Denver, which is already sold out. The Mavericks are averaging 16,947 (99.6 percent of capacity). The last non-sellout was against Sacramento on Nov. 26 when they drew 16,954.

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Boston 119, Milwaukee 92; New Jersey 118, Washington 96; Philadelphia 109, Atlanta 102; Detroit 122, New York 111; and the Los Angeles Lakers 147, Denver 109.

Celtics 119, Bucks 92

With four days off to rebuild their strength, the Boston Celtics were ready to pound injury-plagued Milwaukee — even without Larry Bird to join them.

Kevin McHale scored 28 points as the Celtics beat the Bucks 119-92 Wednesday night for their sixth straight victory. Boston's last loss was 120-100 to the Bucks in Milwaukee on Dec. 20.

Bird missed the game with a lower back strain, but guard Danny Ainge said that being off since last Friday helped the Celtics overcome his absence.

"When Larry's out, you know there's no room for a letdown," said Ainge, who scored 17 points. "But we had three good days of practice and our intensity level was up."

Lakers 147, Nuggets 109

Los Angeles, which has won eight straight games by an average of 23.1 points, crushed Denver as Byron Scott scored 23 points and Magic Johnson added 20 points and 12 assists.

The Nuggets have lost five in a row.

76ers 109, Hawks 102

Philadelphia handed Atlanta its second loss in 14 games at the Omni this season as Cliff Robinson scored 31 points and Charles Barkley added 25 points and 15 rebounds.

Dominique Wilkins scored 22 of his 24 points in the last two periods.

Nets 118, Bullets 96

Buck Williams had a season-high 28 points and 18 rebounds as New Jersey beat Washington for its sixth straight home victory.

Pistons 122, Knicks 111

Detroit shook off the absence of leading scorer Adrian Dantley and got 33 points and an NBA season-high 19 assists from Isiah Thomas against New York.

Dantley was sidelined by bruised ribs.

Patrick Ewing led New York with 30 points and 14 rebounds.

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Cleveland Browns' offensive linemen are confident they can control Denver's Rulon Jones and Karl Mecklenburg on Sunday ... if they can find them.

"They're not the type of defense that's going to anchor itself in one place," offensive tackle Cody Risien said Wednesday. "They move around and do a lot of stunts."

Jones, a defensive end, had 13½ quarterback sacks this season and Mecklenburg, a linebacker, had 9½.

"A lot of what we have to do is recognize where they are on the field," Cleveland center Mike Baab said. "We have to identify them, find them and block them."

The Browns' offensive success has largely depended upon the protection given to quarterback Bernie Kosar. In Cleveland's only loss during the second half of the season, a 27-14 decision against the Los Angeles Raiders on Nov. 23, Kosar was sacked six times and pressured all game.

Howard Mudd, Cleveland's offensive line coach, said the protection schemes for the AFC championship game against the Broncos, will have to take into account the way Denver's defenders move around before the ball is snapped.

"That does present a problem," Mudd said. "They try to take their best pass rusher and isolate him against your poorest pass protector."

The shifting means no single Cleveland lineman can count on being lined up against a certain Denver lineman or linebacker all game, Mudd explained.

"So each guy has to prepare for them," he said. "You can't just say, 'I'm going to design everything to block Rulon Jones,' because they've got other guys who can rush the passer. You just don't hear about them as much."

The Browns are scheduled to return to Cleveland tonight after three days of practice at Dodger-town, the Los Angeles Dodgers' spring training complex. They'll work out Friday and Saturday at their Baldwin-Wallace College training facility near Cleveland before hosting the Broncos.

Redskins faced with stopping Lawrence Taylor

By DAVID GINSBURG

WASHINGTON (AP) — Redskins offensive tackle Mark May says he has come up with a few infallible ways to stop New York linebacker Lawrence Taylor.

Controlling Taylor, who had three sacks Dec. 7 in the last meeting between the teams, has been the main topic of conversation at Redskins Park this week as Washington prepared for its NFC championship game with the Giants on Sunday.

Speaking Wednesday before the Redskins, who have lost twice to the Giants this season, went through their initial practice of the week. May claimed he had a few novel ideas on how to control Taylor this time.

"We're going to chip in all our playoff money and hire someone to kidnap him," May said. "If that doesn't work, we're going to line up nine guys to the left of the football and attack him."

While May was joking around, defensive end Dexter Manley was shockingly stoic and subdued.

Manley, one of the league's most outspoken players, answered "No comment" to about half the questions posed to him by a host of reporters.

"I'm just taking a different approach this week," said Manley, who usually handles interviews in much the same fashion as did his boyhood idol, Muhammad Ali.

Manley, named an All-Pro for the first time following the finest season of his career, said he was not specifically instructed to be quiet. But Coach Joe Gibbs and owner Jack Kent Cooke both viewed the interview from a window overlooking the practice field, and Manley knew it.

"I didn't tell Dexter to be quiet," Gibbs insisted later. "I told the whole team not to say anything stupid."

None of the players did say anything inflammatory. In fact, most had gushing words of praise for Taylor, an All-Pro selection whom May called "phenomenal."

Said May: "No matter what you do, he's tough to stop."

Fitzgerald plays wife in film

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In 1969, Geraldine Fitzgerald helped found a theater that worked with people affected by street violence. Now, she is playing a role created by a former member of her troupe.

Not surprisingly, "Night of Courage," being broadcast Monday night on ABC, is about street violence. The movie tells what happens after an elderly couple appears to turn away a teen-age boy who then is beaten to death. Barnard Hughes stars as the husband and Daniel Hugh Kelly as the boy's teacher.

Fitzgerald was reluctant to reveal much of the plot. "It has a surprise ending that is elevating and enlightening," she said. "It deals with heroism and sacrifice. The boy's teacher gets to the crux of it."

The movie, which was filmed in Chicago, originated as a one-act play at the Eugene O'Neill Memorial Theatre Center. The play and screenplay were written by Brian Williams, who had been a member of the Everyman Street Theatre, which was established in New York City in 1969 and lasted until 1975. Fitzgerald was awarded New York's Handel Medalion, that city's highest cultural award, for her work founding the Everyman.

"We were safe because we worked with the families of the kids who were rioting," said Fitzgerald, who lives in New York but recently was in Los Angeles to film a segment of the television series "St. Elsewhere."

"We had a radical concept. No one was auditioned. Anyone who wanted to be a member of the company was admitted," she said. "We did rock operas, like 'Macbeth' as a street gambler at a street fair. The whole story was told in those terms."

Fitzgerald was born in Dublin, Ireland, where she began her career at the Gate Theatre. She made her Broadway debut in 1938 opposite Orson Welles in "Heartbreak House." Her first movie was "Dark Victory" in 1938 with Humphrey Bogart, Bette Davis and Ronald Reagan. She received an Oscar nomination for her portrayal of Isabella in "Wuthering Heights" in 1939.

She since has been in more than 40 films and many plays and television shows. Recently, she was in "Arthur," "Easy Money" and "Poltergeist II — The Other Side." She was Rose Kennedy in the NBC miniseries "Kennedy" and Tuesday Weld's battered mother in CBS' "Circle of Violence — A Family Drama." In NBC's "St. Elsewhere," she has a now-and-then role as Margaret Ryan, the former girlfriend of Dr. Daniel Auschlander (Norman Lloyd).

The famous steam engine "Tom Thumb" raced a horse-drawn cart on Aug. 5, 1829. The horse won after the steam engine broke down.

E is the most frequently used letter in the English alphabet. It is estimated that Q is the least.

Moore gives program on Scherenschnitte

Members of Garden Beautiful Club met recently in the home of Audine Dettman with Marguerite Newell presiding over the business meeting.

Vice president Newell opened with the reading of a poem entitled "Things To Be Thankful For" by Helen Steiner Rice. She then introduced Kimberly Anne Stevens Moore who gave the program on Scherenschnitte.

This scissor cutting art originated in China during the third century and was founded in the European countries of Holland, Germany and Austria in the early 1600s.

Some of the first cuttings were of Valentines and for other special occasions. Moore distributed a variety of framed pieces of scherenschnitte along with descriptions and history of each.

Refreshments of banana bread, cookies, cheese roll, crackers, coffee and spiced tea were served to Dorothy Noland, Ruby Carmichael, Louella Cowser, Dottie Darden, Janie Sides, Hilda Gavens, Ina Mae Gilbreath, Jean Dowell, Marguerite Newell, Rosalea Gilbreath, Camelia Jones, Louise Axe, Winnie Wiseman, Margaret Young and hostesses, Audine Dettman and Nadine Hill.

Spinhirne elected to serve as secretary during meeting

The Board of Directors of Deaf Smith General Hospital Auxiliary met in its first session Monday with Irene Reinart presiding.

Apricot Ice

1 1/2 cups dried apricots 1/4 cup sugar
2 tbsps. lemon juice

Place apricots in a saucepan with enough water to cover and bring to a boil over medium heat. Reduce heat, cover and simmer until fruit is soft (about 20 minutes). Drain and reserve 3/4 cup of fruit liquid. Cool. Puree fruit in a food processor or blender with reserved fruit liquid.

Add lemon juice and sugar to fruit and puree an additional 30 seconds.

Pour into an 8-inch square pan, place in freezer, and stir every 15 minutes until creamy. Cover and freeze until semi-hard.

Yield: 4 servings

NOTE: Just about any pureed fruit may be used to make this refreshing dessert: strawberries, pears, honeydew, pineapple, mango and papaya to name a few. If fresh fruits are used, the proportion is 2 cups of pureed fruit to 1/2 cup of water.

Second-hand smoke health hazardous

The American Heart Association issues a new warning to all Texans: exposure to second-hand smoke may be hazardous to your health.

The Heart Association's warning matches similar findings released by the U.S. Surgeon General late last year. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop, M.D. presented scientific evidence on the harm to non-smokers of breathing exhaled smoke or the smoke coming from the tip of a burning cigarette.

The Heart Association says pregnant women should not smoke, and parents who smoke should avoid exposing their children to the harmful effects of involuntary smoking.

"The evidence on smoking or health has been air-tight for years," says Addison A. Taylor, M.D. president of the Heart Association in Texas. "But recent evidence strongly points to a connection between second-hand smoke and increased risk of heart disease." This is the first time the Heart Association has commented on the risk of cigarette smoke in the air around non-smokers.

"The Surgeon General's report is the most comprehensive collection of scientific evidence on the hazards of passive smoke," says Taylor. "The implications are alarming. The health of non-smokers must be protected. The most logical way is to restrict smoking in public places."

The most recent Texas Poll shows an overwhelming majority of the public agrees with the Heart Association position. Legislation to limit smoking in public places was favored by 77 percent of Texans surveyed in November. Asked if employers should be required to establish policies to accommodate non-smoking workers, 67 percent of Texans said yes. Support on both questions cuts across lines of education, age, occupation, ethnic background, income, political party, and region.

A statewide coalition of the American Heart Association, the American Cancer Society, the American Lung Association, and others is working to pass a bill to be introduced in the Texas Legislature this month. The Texas Smoke-Free Indoor Air Act would prohibit smoking in public places, except where a sign is posted permitting smoking.

"We want to change the status quo in this state," says Taylor. "Right now, smokers can light up anywhere, unless they see a sign telling them not to. We want smoke-free air to be the norm. Most public places, if smoking is permitted at all, should have specific areas designated for smoking. Then, smokers couldn't light up unless they saw a sign telling them it was okay."

"Smokers jeopardize their own health," according to Taylor, "but they also create a health hazard for non-smokers who breathe second-hand smoke. We need to restrict smoking in our schools, government offices, shopping malls, offices and other public places."

Schooling testimony continues today

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Parents can tell "from day to day, from minute to minute" how their children are progressing when they are taught at home, a witness said in a trial to determine the legality of home schooling in Texas.

Arlington parent Gary Leeper said Tuesday he chose home schooling because he was concerned about the quality of education his children were receiving.

Leeper is one of nine couples who filed suit two years ago asking that home schools be declared private and be exempt from the compulsory attendance law. Testimony in the trial was to resume today.

The ruling in the trial will affect all Texas parents who teach their children at home.

Merrill Hall of Baltimore, a witness in the trial and headmaster of a Calvert School in Maryland, testified that Texas law allows home schooling.

Calvert is a private school that provides instructional materials to parents who want to teach their children at home.

Assistant Texas Attorney General Kevin O'Hanlon contended that no parents who are members of Calvert's home school program have faced prosecution and none of the plaintiffs has been prosecuted.

"If Texas has been prosecuting all these people all these years, it hasn't affected your business, has it?" O'Hanlon said.

Texas are among the top participants in the Calvert program, Hall said.

The state agrees that home schools are legal, but simply proclaiming one's home a school is not sufficient for exemption, O'Hanlon said.

Richard Wells, who now lives in Oregon but was prosecuted three times in El Paso for violating the attendance law, testified that he would continue home schooling regardless of court decisions.

"My Christian conviction is that I'll provide home schooling. Nothing will change it," Wells said.

Leeper said he had no problem with truancy officers inquiring about his children's attendance nor testing the children's progress.

But he said home schooling is different from traditional schools in that parents can tell how their child is doing.

The parents' attorney Shelby Sharpe said he plans to call about 20 more witnesses to testify this week.

On Monday, Massachusetts author Samuel Blumenfeld testified that more and more parents are pulling their children out of school because public schools, in Texas as well as other states, are giving students less than they need.

The case is being tried in Judge Charles Murray's 17th Judicial District Court. Murray scheduled the case for trial after an agreement between the parties that would have defined home schools fell through.

Parents want a decision in the case because they fear truancy prosecution from some school districts.

Some said the law is applied unequally in school districts. Others contend the current law interferes with their religious beliefs.

One witness said there are from 12,000 to 15,000 families in Texas who teach their children at home.

Art Guild meets here recently

Members of the Hereford Art Guild met recently in the home of Ina Mae Gilbreath. The hostess presented a program on needlepoint and crocheted dolls and gave the history of the art of needlepoint.

Margarite Newell brought Amish dolls for the group to examine as she gave the history of each. Both Gilbreath and Newell are former members.

The next meeting will be held at 2 p.m. Jan. 27 at the Community Center with Nell Culpepper giving the program on the art of China painting. Guests are welcome.

WREATHS

NEW YORK (AP) — A gaily decorated wreath is one of the season's friendliest greetings — indoors and out — and the nicest wreaths are those the family makes itself.

Starting with a styrofoam ring and the wire and picks for floral displays, Family Circle magazine says you can "build" a wreath with a cover of boxwood leaves or spruces or heather. Decorate these with holly or pine cones, kumquats, cherry tomatoes or anything that will light up your doorway.

To preserve, spray evergreens with acrylic floor wax to trap moisture inside the greens.

DR. GOTT Three treatments can help allergies

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Our son, 13, is constantly blowing his nose, and his voice gets funny from drainage in his throat. The ENT doctor did cryosurgery on him a year ago, but that didn't help. The allergist just says he's allergic to dust and mold. Could something be done for the boy?

DEAR READER — Your son seems to be showing the classical signs of inhalation allergies. If, as the allergist suggests, he is sensitive to dust and molds, desensitization shots may help.

With any allergy, there are three basic treatments: avoidance of the substance, use of medicines to control symptoms and administration of injections to reduce the severity of symptoms.

Dust and mold are so prevalent in our environment that avoidance is virtually impossible; antihistamines do reduce nasal congestion and mucus production. However, the only suitable long-term solution to your son's allergies is probably a program of regular injections. Ask the allergist about this treatment.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I breast-fed my child until he was 10 months old. Now my breasts are soft. What can I do to firm them up?

DEAR READER — When breasts are producing milk, they enlarge and become firm. After a woman stops nursing her child, the milk glands shrink and the breasts become smaller (and softer). I am not aware of any natural method to enable you to regain the characteristics of lactating breasts. However, synthetic methods — such as plastic surgery — are worth looking into if the condition of your breasts really bothers you.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I've read that a person living next to a power plant might have his heart rhythm upset by all that electricity. Is this true?

DEAR READER — It's false. The heart is not affected by external electric or magnetic fields. Therefore, living near power plants or transmission lines is not harmful — although nuclear power plants might cause concern for other reasons. In short, living near a power plant is more likely to foul up your television reception than your heart rate.

Electricity can be damaging in only two cases. First, when electricity enters the body directly — such as in a case of electrocution — it can stop the heartbeat and cause cardiac arrest.

Second, artificial pacemakers are definitely affected by electromagnetic fields, since pacemakers depend on a steady, battery-powered electrical impulse. This is why patients with implanted pacemakers must avoid such microwave sources as broadcast or radar transmitters, security devices or — in some cases — microwave appliances.
