Bush sworn in as president

WASHINGTON (AP)—George Bush became 41st president of the United States today, promising "our best days are yet to come" as he crowned a government resume more than two decades long.

The noontime transfer of power at the West Front of the Capitol marked the transition from a self-proclaimed political outsider to an ultimate Washington insider.

Barred by the Constitution from seeking a third term, Ronald Wilson Reagan, 77, a onetime Hollywood actor, California governor and conservative hero, yields power to George Herbert Walker Bush, 64, born to wealth and privilege, a decorated navy combat pilot in World War II, Yale man, Phi Beta Kappa, Texas oilman and millionaire, congressman, U.N. ambassador, GOP chairman, envoy to China, CIA director and vice president.

Organizers distributed 140,000 tickets to the inaugural ceremony, and extraordinary security was in place.

For the first time, people standing closest to the inaugural platform, nearly a third of the crowd, had to pass through metal detectors. So did everyone within a two-block area near the White House.

In a nod to history, inaugural organizers borrowed for Bush the Bible used for George Washington's swearing-in 200 years ago. It was loaned by a Masons lodge in New York. A Bush family Bible also was on hand.

A simple 35-word oath written into the Constitution marked the beginning of the Bush presidency:

"I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the Office of President of the United States, and will to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

In a handwritten note, Bush scripted his day: up at 6 a.m. to watch news shows and drink coffee, "play with grandkids, pray, go to White House, go to Capitol Hill, get sworn in."

The rest of his day looked like this: lunch at the Capitol, the inaugural parade and 11 invitation-only inaugural balls.

The prayer service was at St. John's Episcopal church, across Lafayette Park from the White House. From there, the Bushes were heading to the White House for coffee with Reagan and his wife, Nancy, along with Dan Quayle, Bush's vice president, and his wife, Marilyn.

An armored limousine was reserved to take the Bushes and the Reagans to Capitol Hill. To keep the limelight on Bush, Reagan planned no public remarks.

Immediately after the swearing-in the Reagans boarded a helicopter at the Capitol for the brief hop to Andrews Air Force Base, where Air Force One was waiting to whisk them back to Los Angeles and a home bought for them by friends.

The whole Bush clan, five grown children, their spouses and 10 grandchildren, spent the night before inauguration in Blair House, the elegant government guest quarters across from the White House.

Predicting no problem sleeping before the big event, Bush said, "I don't feel the tension that I thought."

In an address to young people, Bush exuberantly described the future, "I really feel this: Our best days are yet to come."

And at a star-studded gala, Bush told the black-tie crowd and a national television audience, "I expect that every one of the other 40 presidents pledged in his mind and soul to represent all the people. Well, this 41st president-to-be feels exactly the same way."

Bush seemed relaxed as he previewed his inaugural address in an interview with several reporters Thursday.

"It will be just a broad appeal to the American people to pitch in and help. It'll be an expression of satisfaction about how far we've come as a nation, and a recognition that we've got a long way to go."

"It will be a re-emphasis of my conviction that many of these problems that remain unsolved can best be solved by engagement of the 'thousands points of light' concept" of people helping people instead of relying on government.

He said that in the first days of his administration, he would order a sweeping review of U.S. relations with the Soviet Union, make the federal budget deficit his top priority and meet on Tuesday with the bipartisan leadership of Congress.

Crisis Center seeks helpers

BY ANDREA HOOTEN
Staff Writer

The Hereford Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence Center is putting a call out for volunteers willing to counsel battered women at odd hours of the night or just answer the phone at the office.

And one doesn't have to be a woman to be a volunteer, said Bonnie Browder, coordinator for the Hereford office.

"We have 12 or 13 volunteers right now and they're all women," said Browder. "It would be such a positive reinforcement to these women victims seeing a kind man that treats others well. These women feel all men are abusive."

Volunteer training will be Feb. 2-16, Tuesday and Thursday from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. and Saturdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"Volunteers can do pager duty (when volunteers carry a pager in case they're needed on a case), speak at functions, provide child care during support groups meetings," said Browder.

"One thing I really need to stress in all my potential volunteers is the need for confidentiality. Neither my volunteers nor I am allowed to talk about individual cases."

Browder also said each volunteer must be 18 or older and be a U.S. citizen.

Gloria Salinas Hubner was one of the first volunteers since the Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence Center was established in Hereford.

"I always count my blessings after I help individuals. If not for the grace of God, it could be me being beaten," Hubner said. "When I help someone, I don't expect a payback—it just gets passed on at one point or another. I can say I don't need this center's services right now, but my kids or grandkids might."

Reagan says U.S. still 'custodians of freedom'

WASHINGTON (AP)—Ronald Reagan leaves the White House with an unshaken belief that Americans are the "custodians of freedom for the world" but frustration that he could not obtain that same freedom for his nine countrymen still held hostage overseas.

On the eve of his departure from the White House Reagan expressed his confidence in both the nation and his successor, calling George Bush "the man who should be in this office replacing me."

Reagan was making a last nostalgic visit today to the Oval Office where he presided as the nation's 40th president, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

Afterwards, the president and first lady Nancy Reagan were slated to bid a private farewell to the household staff in the residence.

As their final social duty in the executive mansion, they were treating Bush and his wife Barbara, Dan Quayle and his wife Marilyn, and the members of the congressional inaugural escort committee to coffee and pastries in the Blue Room of the executive residence.

Then, for the last time, Reagan leaves the White House as president, his first lady at his side.

After Bush's swearing-in, the Reagans travel by helicopter from Capitol Hill to Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington, from where they will fly to Los Angeles.

On the eve of his inaugural, Bush and Reagan met privately for about 10 minutes to the Oval Office, reminiscing about their eight years together. Then the pair went next door to the Roosevelt Room to bid farewell to about 80 senior members of the White House staff, Fitzwater said.

"The president just said he wanted to thank everyone for eight years of work on his behalf," Fitzwater said, adding that Bush paid tribute to Reagan, saying, "I wouldn't be the president if not for my teacher here, and my friend."

Reagan told the group he appreciated Bush's support over the years, quipping, "George never took my pulse once."

The president spent his last full workday doing routine paperwork, giving interviews to reporters, and presenting the Medal of Freedom to Secretary of State George Shultz and former U.S. Ambassador to Japan Mike Mansfield.

Reagan's speech at the event was delivered in the patriotic vein that has marked his addresses for decades.

"There is nothing so precious and irreplaceable as America's freedom," Reagan said. "America's freedom does not belong to just one nation. We are custodians of freedom for the world."

In an interview with wire service reporters, Reagan acknowledged that he was leaving office frustrated over his inability to free Americans held hostage in Lebanon. "We don't know where they are," he conceded.

Even to the end of his presidency, Reagan said, officials continued to explore "quietly and privately" how to win freedom for the nine Americans. "There hasn't been a moment that this isn't on our minds," he said.

And, he added, "George is the man who should be in this office replacing me."

Demos biding time

WASHINGTON (AP)—Democrats sidelined during the capital's weeklong inaugural hoopla are spending the time assuring themselves that their party will come later.

For a group that hasn't been able to celebrate a presidential victory since Jimmy Carter's 12 years ago, the glitz and indulgence as GOP revelers took over Washington was a little hard to bear.

"If you're competitive, and you lose a contest, and you're at the hall where the other side is having its victory celebration, it's not a very uplifting time," said Rep. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D.

"Democrats aren't just sitting around in a sour mood. But all of this does remind us that we lost."

Rep. Beryl Anthony, D-Ark., chairman of the party's House campaign arm, said that "when the euphoria of this week subsides, George Bush will wake up and say, 'I've got to go deal with the Democrats to get my agenda passed.' We're not wallflowers. We're power brokers."

To remind his colleagues that all was not lost in the election, Democrats padded their House majority by three seats, and their Senate advantage by one. Anthony threw a "Majority Party" Thursday night in a small ballroom at a downtown Washington hotel.

It was the only room in the city that wasn't already booked by Republicans.

"We had to give the Democrats something to do," said Howard Schloss, a spokesman for the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee.

Four arrested in raid

Almost 3.5 grams of what police think is methamphetamine was found in a drug raid Thursday night at 314 Ave. A. The estimated street value of the drug was $400.

Bart West, 29, and Jeffery Boldon, 21, both of Hereford, were arrested on charges of possession of a controlled substance.

Bond was set at $5,000 each.

Police detective Mike Ahrens said police obtained a search warrant after an anonymous caller informed police that methamphetamine was being sold from the residence.

Two other men were arrested on charges of possession of drug paraphernalia.

BABBLING BROOKS By John Brooks

By JOHN BROOKS

There's nothing quite so "charming" as living in an apartment. I have lived in an apartment for most of my adult life, but I don't know why. It's not so hard living in an apartment when you're young and first out on your own. You want your friends over quite often so you can "discuss" things. Important topics like the quality and price of various beers and other party goods.

Eventually, you outgrow that. Or you're supposed to outgrow that. After a while, you tire of having 30 people surrounding you, and you want to move to a more isolated setting. One less like a dormitory.

Well, I've been living in an apartment ever since I moved to Hereford, but I think after last night's ordeal I'll start looking for something a little less like our old college dorm. I doubt I'll be buying a house: Our housing market and prices may be depressed, but it's not THAT depressed.

Last night was an all-timer. Imagine yourself, in your house, asleep in your own bed, awakened several times by "craftsmen" trying to find a gas leak.

It wasn't a major gas leak, or I wouldn't have been in my own bed. I would have been at a motel.

These guys turned off the gas, then tried in vain for hours trying to find the source of the leak.

I'm not sure of what measures they took to find the leak, but they worked in my apartment, the apartment next door, across the hall and down the hall and up in the attic, and they worked until 12:30 this morning.

They took several steps to find the leak. They clanged vent pipes together as noisily as they could, trying, I suppose, to scare the daylight out of the leak, thinking it would give itself up.

They used something that sounded like a stereo roto-rotoer, trying to force the gas leak into a corner and pummeling it to death. It refused pummeling, but they kept trying.

They also tried the old fashioned cursing method. Despite several words longer than this line of type, some of them very creative that made you really use your imagination to conjure up the scene, the source went undiscovered.

They used a variety of heavy tools to try to drive it away. They used the heavy tools to bang on my heater, the pipes around the heater and the hot water heater, and on the floor. Since I live in an upstairs apartment, I'm sure the people who live below me were just as impressed as I was.

I think these guys were also reliving their childhood.

You know that game you play when you're a kid, when you go in and out and in and out and in and out the door, and your mother eventually says "In or out! Make up your mind and stay!"? These guys played "in and out and in and out" during the evening, through the night, and the early morning.

About 10 p.m. last night, I told them I was going to bed, but they were free to come in and out since they had a key.

First thing they did after I went to bed was to ring the doorbell.

They never found the leak, so they all said "I@#S%^&*O|<>" and left.

That was okay, but they didn't have to stay there as the temperature plummeted to 50 degrees in the apartment over the course of the night.

And since there was nothing to heat the water, the hot water heater was the tepid water heater this morning.

So here I am, cryogenically frozen last night in my own apartment, trying to thaw out, and looking real hard at "houses for rent" in today's want ads. With a good, working, heater.

Programs besides welfare should help poor, says group

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Investing in America's youth, through child-care development and education programs and not in more welfare programs, could help reduce the number of chronically impoverished Americans, the head of an effort to reduce persistent poverty says.

James Gibson, director of the Equal Opportunity Program of the Rockefeller Foundation, which is looking into the problem, said that the country's chronic poor more than tripled between 1970 and 1980 and that the majority of those were minorities.

Because minority groups are steadily growing, the problem of persistent poverty needs to be rectified because those groups will need to enter the job market by the next decade in order to meet the country's labor demands, he said.

"If we ever grow to accept that some people could and should remain permanently in circumstances that put them in the lower permanent class, then we change the character of society, then we remove the basis of optimism and that, in turn, means we get the potential for civil strife that could be ultimately destructive," Gibson said.

The Rockefeller Foundation is expected to spend about $100 million over the next five years to find out why and try to erase some of the causes of persistent poverty by examining people in six ethnically and racially diverse cities.

Those involved in the study have gathered this week in San Antonio, which along with Denver, Boston, Washington D.C., Oakland and Cleveland, are being studied.

Gibson said San Antonio historically has been a low-income city and is worse off than the others. He said Boston and Washington, because of current economic vitality, are better off than the other six cities.

Programs in Oakland, Washington and Denver were among the first funded and are farther along in their research of the poverty problem, Gibson said.

Hustlers welcome new firm

Ben's Appliance, located at 212 N. Main St., was welcomed as a new business in Hereford Thursday by the Hustlers, a goodwill ambassador group of Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce. A group of Hustlers watch as Ben Barrick, owner, and his son, Brett, perform the traditional ribbon-cutting for the new store. Ben's features Westinghouse appliances and provides service on all brands. The store also carries used appliances.

Court cites mental ward, orders statewide review

AUSTIN (AP) — A federal court monitor is examining whether the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation is complying with court orders, after a finding that an Austin State Hospital mental ward was in violation of such orders.

U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders in Dallas has told his court monitor to determine by Feb. 15 whether the department is in compliance. An Austin State Hospital mental ward where four sexual assaults occurred was found to have violated federal court orders, the Austin American-Statesman reported Thursday.

The hospital superintendent said the facility is working to improve programs.

Austin social worker David Pharis, the monitor, also was asked to find out whether the $1.5 billion 1990-91 budget proposed for the department by the Legislative Budget Board is adequate.

Department officials say they need $2.2 billion to provide proper services and achieve court-ordered reforms in the eight state mental hospitals and 13 state schools for mentally retarded people.

Sanders' order came after Pharis and another mental health expert paid a surprise visit to Austin State Hospital and found that patients with long-term mental illnesses do not receive proper psychotherapy and training programs. The so-called psychosocial programs were ordered seven years ago.

"From our point of view, they (the hospital unit) are not providing programming," Pharis said.

A court settlement agreement signed by the state in 1982 requires the mental hospitals to provide patients with 30 hours of weekly treatment programs tailored to individual needs.

Pharis and Dr. Raymond Leidig, a Colorado psychiatrist who serves as a court consultant, visited the hospital's Extended Care Unit, which serves 90 chronically mentally ill patients on two wards, the American-Statesman reported.

In the past seven months, Austin police have investigated four sexual assaults of female patients on the unit by male patients. The suspects were not prosecuted because the patients declined to press charges.

Hospital Superintendent Kenny Dudley said the hospital is familiar with the problems Pharis and Leidig found and has been working to solve them.

"Nobody was happy with (the programs). There were things we could do better for that population (of chronically ill people)," Dudley said.

"We're trying to develop a state-of-the-art psychosocial rehabilitation program on our Extended Care Unit," he said. "But you just don't create it overnight."

Dudley said the MHMR Department and plaintiffs in the long-running lawsuit were at odds for many years over what type of psychosocial programs should be provided in the mental hospitals. It was only in the past year that a clearer understanding was reached, he said.

But Pharis said the requirement for 30 hours of weekly, individualized treatment programs "is an old requirement" of the lawsuit.

THE ROAD TO PEACE goes through a difficult territory called Trust and Forgiveness.

'From what I heard it was a satanic group, a home-grown group dabbling in the occult. I talked to one young man who said he was a part of it, but got out of it when he became a Christian. When he told them he wanted out they told him they would kill him.'

City stunned by cult attacks

RICHMOND, Texas (AP) — By some accounts they were an organized gang of devil-worshipping youth, by others a loose-knit band of misfits gone astray.

Regardless of how the teen-agers are viewed, the crimes they are accused of committing have shocked this usually quiet community southwest of Houston.

They called themselves Wolverines, and in a 12-hour period on a September night, authorities say, the youths turned weapons on their parents in a scheme to run away from home leaving no survivors.

One woman was killed. Police say her 15-year-old son repeatedly swung a baseball bat into her head.

Three other parents survived gunshot wounds.

"I think it's just disbelief more than anything," said Susan Lowery, an assistant district attorney for Fort Bend County.

"The crimes being committed by an adult would be terrible enough. But when you think of it being a 15-year-old and this being his own mother, it just makes it that much worse," she said.

Authorities say the youths planned to steal money, weapons and a pickup truck and escape to a place where they could live off the land. Their destinations, however, suggest to prosecutors that the teen-agers were more vicious than they were sophisticated.

"They wanted to go to either Canada, Louisiana or Port Lavaca," Ms. Lowery said, noting that the latter is just 70 miles away. "That tells you something about their thinking. There are just a lot of things in this that don't make any sense on a normal level."

Prosecutors say a 16-year-old girl was ringleader and ordered the attacks, including a shotgun assault on her own parents.

"She was very manipulative. She was definitely the leader of the group," said Alan Small, an assistant district attorney.

"It's not like she took normal everyday kids and turned them into criminals," Small said. "They didn't come from good homes. They all had a bad family situation to start off with, and then they found each other and agreed to kill their parents." And the case took a twist Tuesday, three of the teen-agers had been certified to stand trial as adults.

The alleged ringleader and the boy accused of bludgeoning his mother now face new certification hearings because the Huntsville psychologist who examined them was charged with misdemeanor perjury.

James C. Whitley, a witness for the prosecution, was charged Tuesday for allegedly lying under oath about notes he took while examining the youths' mental competence.

Ms. Lowery said Whitley testified twice that he had shredded his notes. He later told a prosecutor he still had them, but had lied because he didn't want to be cross-examined on them, Ms. Lowery said. Authorities with a search warrant recovered the notes from Whitley's office.

He is free on a $2,000 bond. His lawyer, Hal Ridley of Huntsville, said Whitley believed the notes had been destroyed at the time of his testimony, and never intentionally lied.

The two youths must be certified as adults before a grand jury can consider criminal charges against them. They now are being held under juvenile law.

So is a second 15-year-old who was certified as an adult after examination by another psychologist. A grand jury was impaneled last week to consider charges against the boy, who is accused of shooting his father in the arm with a shotgun.

The fourth teen-ager, Eugene Lewman, 19, is charged with attempted murder in the shotgun attack allegedly ordered by the girl against her parents.

Police reports suggest the group was involved in satanism, although prosecutors question whether there were any serious ties to the occult.

"One kid (in the group) was asked one time if he loved the devil and that's it as far as we know," Small said. "There was no apparent devil worshiping, not meetings, none of the animal sacrifices that are generally associated with satanism."

Detective Lt. Marshall Whichard of the Fort Bend County Sheriff's Department said the avowed leader of the Wolverines reportedly tested recruits with three questions: "Do you believe in God? Do you love the devil? Will you do what (I) tell you?" Police estimate there were, perhaps, 10 members in the

Miami's cease-fire good for Superbowl

MIAMI (AP) — This riot-weary city prepared to kick off a festive Super Bowl weekend today, and police said a peaceful professional basketball game just blocks from the center of the week's violence showed that calm had been restored.

Officials reported occasional gunfire and minor rock and bottle throwing Thursday night, although one gang of a dozen Overtown youths reportedly beat three people. Twelve riot-related arrests were made, and police said they planned to return to normal patrols.

About 100 officers formed a barrier between the Overtown area and Miami Arena, where the Chicago Bulls defeated the hometown Heat in a National Basketball Association game. Some 13,000 fans attended the game, with no reports of trouble. Tuesday night's game against Phoenix was canceled because of the violence.

"The game definitely shows things are under control," said police spokesman Armando Villorin. "It was a test, and we feel great about it."

"We're grateful that the focus has returned to the Super Bowl," said police spokesman Ray Lang.

Raymond Scales, a high school counselor at the game, said it took him only a half-hour to sell 25 T-shirts that read "I survived Miami 1989. It was a riot." Fans snapped up the shirts at $10 apiece.

The fire department estimated damage to buildings from three days of rioting at less than $1 million, although shopkeepers digging out Thursday said their greatest losses were in inventory and equipment that was looted or destroyed.

The rage touched off by a Hispanic police officer's shooting of an unarmed black motorcyclist Monday left one man dead, seven others shot and some 370 people jailed — most of them suspected looters under 18, police said. More than 100 had criminal records, including 17 murders and 196 drug offenses.

Some remained in jail pending the posting of bonds, and that helped maintain the quiet, Miami police Sgt. Michael Mazur said.

For Miami, Sunday's Super Bowl really begins today with an onslaught of parties and performances, fireworks and frivolity.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I've just read another story in our newspaper citing two more attacks of pit bull terriers on children in our area.

I know you've written about this in the past, but I believe you ought to go back to this subject one more time.

When in God's name will there be legislation to phase out this breed of animal? Can you imagine the agony of the victim during the attack, whether he survives or not? TO be attacked by an animal is every person's most terrifying nightmare.

Are the owners and defenders of this vicious strain of animal unable to love any one of dozens of other breeds of canines? This bloodthirsty creature is the result of man's tinkering and has no place in a loving home.

I do not know a pit bull owner nor have I ever met a victim, but I am outraged every time I hear or read about a pit bull tearing a person apart.

Please! What can be done?--A Florida Reader

DEAR READER: A highly respected veterinarian who asked that his name not be used told me that the viciousness of the pit bull is in the genes. Although some breeders insist that the dogs are gentle unless provoked, most are not.

If pit bull terriers are neutered, they will be calmer and less apt to attack. Neutering will, of course, phase out this breed, which would not be a bad idea.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am ashamed to admit it, but I have been taken for a large sum of money because of my stupidity. My son who was in prison gave his cellmate my name and address. This guy said he just wanted someone to write to and that he liked the way I looked from a picture.

"Mike" and I exchanged letters for a few months, then he wrote and said that for $1,700 he could get my son released, one way or another. I was to send cash, and he would get things started.

I sent the cash. Soon, after, Mike wrote to say he was in solitary confinement and would be there for six months and couldn't give the money to his "source" until he got out of solitary. That was the last I heard from him.

Please print this letter to warn others who may be as gullible as I was. I can't believe I was so stupid.--Grand Rapids Idiot

DEAR G.R.: We checked with Pervis Staples, the mail room supervisor at Cook County Jail in Chicago.

He said all mail except legal correspondence is opened by mail room personnel before going to the prisoners. (They check for contraband.) If money is found it is taken to the trust office and put on the books. A note goes to the inmate telling him or her the money was received and will be handed over when he or she leaves the facility.

It is possible that a dishonest mail room employee might keep the money, but it is unlikely since mail room personnel are carefully supervised.

Prisoners are told to instruct their friends and relatives not to send money. Sorry about your loss. Thanks for writing to warn others.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My wonderful brother died of AIDS. I think it is just terrible that whenever this word appears in the newspaper it is printed in capital letters, like this: AIDS. No other disease is treated in this way. I have never seen where anyone died of CANCER.

Please ask newspapers not to add to the heartbreak of the families. Thank you.--Jackson, Miss.

Hughes is Honorary Cowbelle

Hereford CattleWomen held their regular meeting Tuesday at Hereford Country Club and presented the 1988 Honorary Cowbelle Award.

Bob Hughes, owner/operator of The Country Store, received the award during a presentation by President Karen Keeling. Keeling cited Hughes' many contributions to the community as well as his efforts in promoting beef.

She noted that Hughes has lived in Hereford since 1963, when he opened Bob's Hickory Pit on Park Avenue. He later opened Bob and Marcy's Feed and Supply in 1976, then The Country Store and Bob's Hickory Pit in 1986.

According to Keeling, Hughes "is married to a very supportive wife, Marcy, and together they have raised six children. During this time he was involved in the board of directors of Camp Fire, the booster club of Hereford High School athletics, band parents, FFA and 4-H parents, Hereford Riders Club and the HHS Rodeo team.

"He has been a sponsor for Camp Fire, Young Farmers, the concession stand at the stock show, Girls' Rodeo Association and Kids, Inc., where he served as a coach.

"He received the Friend of 4-H Award in 1988," Keeling added.

Special guests, in addition to Bob and Marcy Hughes, were three of their daughters, LeAnne Vogel, Michelle Jimenez, and Becky Hazelwood.

During the meeting, 1989 yearbooks were distributed to members by Lori Hall, vice president and program chairman, who gave a brief overview of upcoming programs. New members, Pat Graham, Judy Barrett, and Kyla McDowell were introduced; another new member, Jan Furr, was unable to attend.

Several members were accompanied by their spouses, and a special welcome was given to Hadley Bunch and Tanner Heflin, infant sons of Mr. and Mrs. Kevin Bunch and Mr. and Mrs. Randy Heflin, respectively.

Those in attendance were: Scott and Lori Hall, Randy and Renee Heflin, Scott and Karen Keeling, Bob and Marcy Hughes, Rachel Hunter, Violet Reinauer, Loraine Anthony, David and Pam Wagner, Steve and Leisa Lewis, Judy Barrett, Mildred Garrison, Bob and Sue Sims, Dee Anne Trotter, Char-mayne Klett, Nancy Joaserand, Don and Pat Graham, Nance Perrin, Brenda Johnson, Darwin and Connie McGill, LeAnne Vogel, Michelle Jimenez, Becky Hazelwood, Cathy Bunch and guest, Lucy Slentz, Linda Gilbert, Linda Fitzgerald, and James and Kyla McDowell.

Bain hostess to Kingdom Seekers

Erma Bain was hostess to the Kingdom Seekers Sunday School Class when they met Tuesday for their regular monthly meeting.

The opening prayer was voiced by the hostess. Members answered roll call with their favorite woman of the Bible.

Dorothy Sargent gave the devotional entitled "Attitude." Bain gave a reading about friendship.

Plans were made to meet at K-Bob's Steak House on Feb. 14. The meeting adjourned and Fannie Townsend led the closing prayer.

Refreshments were served to a visitor, Perry Keyes, and members Pauline Landers, Trudie Gray, Nita Houle, Velma Carol, Rosie Wall, Luella Thomas, Wilma Bryan, Townsend, and Sargent.

NEW YORK (AP)—There's a reason that dairy calcium — milk and yogurt — is preferable to calcium supplements for helping to maintain strong bones: sugar.

According to the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau, research by USDA-Tufts University found that a teaspoon of glucose taken with calcium increased the body's absorption of calcium by 25 percent.

Yogurt and milk have built-in sugar, which helps you absorb the bone-building calcium better.

Hereford's Carmen Brockman, left, drives past Levelland's Carol Bailey during Tuesday's game at Whiteface gym. The Lady Whitefaces will try to rebound from Tuesday's 38-29 loss tonight when the HHS basketball teams travel to Wolforth to meet Frenship High School.

Casey takes over Clippers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Don Casey says he is somewhat uncomfortable about taking over as coach of the Los Angeles Clippers because the man he replaces, the fired Gene Shue, is his friend.

But he wasted no time in putting his young, injury-prone and lackluster team on notice.

Casey, an assistant under three Clippers head coaches, was named interim coach for the rest of the season after Shue was fired Thursday.

The Clippers are 10-28, the same as the expansion Charlotte Hornets.

"This team, to me, has not stood up and declared itself — whether it's a pure fastbreak team, if it's a power inside team, or if it's a pick-and-roll team," Casey said at a news conference Thursday evening. "I don't think the character and concept of this team has declared itself."

"My one rule is, I'm going to say to these players (today), 'Listen, this is my day in the sun. If you don't play hard, you're not going to play and I don't care who you are ... I've got 44 games and I'm going for it. If you're with me, fine. If you're not, you go your way.'"

"These fellows are young, they're used to playing a lot because they're right out of college, they're used to being the star. But they're in the NBA now, and this is what's coming down," Casey said.

The Clippers have foundered despite having had three first-round draft picks each of the last two years, including No. 1 pick Danny Manning in 1988. But Manning is out for between nine months and a year with a knee injury.

The Clippers dropped their 11th straight game Wednesday night, bowing 111-90 to the Los Angeles Lakers.

Since they are off until next Wednesday's game at Dallas, the Clippers will work out at UCLA's Pauley Pavilion for three or four days, Casey said. "It will be a period of hard work and we'll get acquainted."

Casey, 51, was in his fifth season as a Clippers assistant and had served as Shue's assistant for the past two seasons, during which the Clippers had the worst record in the NBA.

Shue was the winningest active NBA coach, with 784 victories, although he also has lost 861 games.

Shue's Clippers had the distinction of providing both the Hornets and the other expansion team, the Miami Heat, with their first-ever NBA victories.

Shue could not be reached for comment. An answering machine was on at his home.

VIVID MEMORIES

DENVER (AP) — Sam Graddy, a wide receiver for the Denver Broncos, has vivid memories of the ceremony which attended his Olympic Gold Medal in 1984 in Los Angeles.

Graddy was a member of the United States championship quartet in the 400-meter relay.

THE game almost here

MIAMI (AP) — Somewhere, out there, is a football game. THE football game.

For the Cincinnati Bengals and San Francisco 49ers, Sunday and the Super Bowl can't arrive soon enough.

"Right now, I'm ready to go home," said cornerback Eric Wright, one of six 49ers seeking a third NFL crown this decade. "I wish we had come in on Friday and been able to treat this like a regular week."

It became a regular week for the Bengals on Wednesday when All-Pro nose tackle Tim Krumrie tangled with tackle Brian Blados during practice.

"That usually happens to me on Wednesday or Thursday," Krumrie said. "If they turn around and there's a fight, they can pretty much guarantee I'll be in it."

Normality rarely accompanies Super Bowl week. This year, the usual media crush, the hype and the wait have been accompanied by civil unrest.

Is it any wonder the players are ready to do the one thing they came here to do, play football?

"Somehow, this game isn't just about football," Bengals All-Pro tackle Anthony Munoz said. "At least, it isn't until Sunday."

"We talked about it all last week, how you have to hang in there, put up with this. By now, I have to admit, you get a little tired of it. Practice comes as a relief."

Except when shoving matches break out?

"Nah, that's just how we keep track of Krumrie," Munoz said with a laugh.

Keeping track of Krumrie and other strategies pertinent to the game were not main topics of conversation Thursday. The players have answered enough questions about those things — and everything else, many of them say — and the media seems to have tired of asking them.

"This is our 24th game," said Mike Wilson, who will start at wide receiver if Jerry Rice's ankle sidelines him. Rice did some light work Thursday as the 49ers continued to drill without pads. "We started off in London (an exhibition game with the Dolphins) and it's a long road."

"At this stage, both teams are in the best possible shape for this time. That makes the way you handle things mentally important."

"Most of what we've been doing for the last week is mental preparation," added Jeff Fuller, the ultra-physical strong safety. "Except for healing up, there can't be much physically you have to do."

"The key is not to lose the focus, even with all this stuff going on, all the press and all the questions."

Except for Rice, every key player is healthy. Including Rice, they're all anxious to get down to business.

"The best thing for me is having the time to get my ankle strong," the 49ers' game-breaking receiver said. "But if I was 100 (percent), I'd want to get at it now."

Since they can't get at it until the "Welcome to Florida" salute, hosted by Burt Reynolds; the "Beach Blanket Bingo" number featuring Frankie Avalon and Annette Funicello; a tribute to NASA and the Kennedy Space Center as eight astronauts participate, and Billy Joel singing the national anthem, the only thing left is the verbal battle.

The main protagonists have been cornerbacks Tim McKyer of the 49ers and Cincinnati's Lewis Billups.

"I think we can blow these guys out," McKyer said. "We've got better skill people on offense and our defense is better than theirs. Do you see why we're favored?"

"Eddie Brown doesn't compare to Jerry Rice. He's not in Jerry's class, doesn't come close."

"Billups makes more noise than the law allows. He's a big talker. But he's been quiet this week."

Until Thursday.

"He has no class, that's all," Billups said of McKyer. "He had a couple of picks (interceptions), so he feels like that gives him the right to talk. I think he's just more immature than probably anybody over here."

"If he came over here and played, I don't think he'd play on nickel here, so he's got to use his mouth."

Billups began predicting outcomes late in the season and didn't hedge on a Super Bowl selection.

"My prediction is 28-13, us, more or less because our defense will come up with the big game. We're not even supposed to be here, our defense, that is. I think that just will prepare us mentally and emotionally to play better."

McKyer and Billups probably can't brag much better.

"It's up to the individual how to handle all this stuff," Wright said. "Tim likes to talk, that's his way."

And Billups' way.

"They're enjoying themselves," Boomer Esiason said. "They're soaking all this up. They seem relaxed."

Or so uptight they can't wait for Sunday, so they're jousting verbally now.

"It's just words," Wright said. "It ain't football."

Until game day, it rarely is.

Henson worried about new rank

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

Illinois coach Lou Henson is a worrier. Now he's worried his team might be ranked No. 1 in the nation next week.

"No one deserves the curse of being number one," Henson said after his undefeated and second-ranked Illini got by Northwestern 75-70 Thursday night.

Of course Henson was worried about the Northwestern game.

"We knew it would be difficult to win," he said. "Everything was set up for an upset. We were coming off the Michigan game and there was an article in Sports Illustrated on us, and that usually does it."

Henson was worried about Northwestern's Jeff Grose, and he had every right to be. Grose scored 20 points, including five 3-pointers.

But Kenny Battle and four of his teammates scored in double figures to lead the Illini to their 16th consecutive victory this season, including 4-0 in the Big Ten. Northwestern is 7-8 and 0-5.

The Illini may move into the top spot because No. 1 Duke lost to North Carolina on Wednesday night.

Elsewhere Thursday night, it was No. 16 Ohio State 102, No. 7 Iowa 91; No. 9 Arizona 97, Southern California 69; No. 10 UNLV 102, Utah State 80; No. 19 Indiana 61, Wisconsin 58 in overtime, and California 75, No. 20 Stanford 64.

Three times Northwestern came within a point of the lead in the closing minutes, but the Wildcats were unable to tie it.

Battle finished with 23 points, Kendall Gill 14, Steve Bardo and Lowell Hamilton 12 each, and Nick Anderson 10 for Illinois.

No. 16 Ohio State 102, No. 7 Iowa 91

Jay Burson scored 26 points and Jerry Francis had 20 as hot-shooting Ohio State crushed Iowa in a Big Ten game.

The Buckeyes, 13-4 and 3-2, jumped off to a 12-0 start and led 54-44 at halftime. They then began the second half with a 13-4 run and never led by fewer than nine points in the game's final 35 minutes.

B.J. Armstrong had 23 points for the Hawkeyes, 13-3 and 1-2.

No. 9 Arizona 97, Southern Cal 69

Sean Elliott scored 19 of his 26 points in the second half and Anthony Cook added 23 points to lead Arizona over Southern California. It was the Wildcats' fourth straight victory and improved their record to 7-1 in the Pacific-10 and 12-2 overall.

Arizona led 42-31 at halftime, then put the game away with an 18-2 run that gave them a 64-38 lead with 12:27 left.

Ronnie Coleman had 20 points and eight rebounds for the Trojans, who fell to 0-5 and 7-9.

No. 10 UNLV 102, Utah State 80

Stacey Augmon scored 22 points and Nevada-Las Vegas broke open a close game with a second-half surge to beat Utah State. The victory was the 11th in a row for the Runnin' Rebels, now 13-2 overall and 8-0 in the Big West.

UNLV led only 42-38 at halftime, but the Rebels opened the second half with a 10-2 spurt.

Utah State, 6-10 and 4-3, was led by Reid Newey with 22 points.

No. 19 Indiana 61, Wisconsin 58

Jay Edwards scored five of his 27 points in overtime as Indiana held on to edge Wisconsin.

Wilson considers Super Bowl scene

MIAMI (AP) — Stanley Wilson considered the Super Bowl scene, the hype, hysteria and hoopla of an American sports extravaganza. A thin Mona Lisa smile crept across his lips as he thought about how he happened to get to this particular place. It was no simple trip, not by a long shot.

In the middle of this celebration of football, Stanley Wilson celebrates other things, simple things like being alive. That's because he nearly killed himself with cocaine.

"Slow suicide," the Cincinnati running back called his addiction. Five times, he went through rehabilitation. Three times he was suspended by the NFL. Twice he missed full seasons.

And yet, here he is in the Super Bowl.

This week, Wilson briefly got caught in the middle of Miami's street riots and his car was hit by a rock. It was a frightening brush with danger, a reminder, he said, that "there is a lot going on outside football. There's more to life than the Super Bowl."

This will come as startling news to the football fraternity, which worships each January at this shrine called the Super Bowl. But most of those folks haven't always enthusiastically embraced Stanley Wilson anyway.

"Ten years from now," he said, "Nobody will know who Stanley Wilson is. If they could focus on his being and who he is, he would be a success."

What he is now and what he intends to be then is a recovering drug addict, taking each day as it comes, staying busy, avoiding idle time, keeping his life on a schedule. Recovery is no easy task. Wilson failed at it often enough to be an expert witness.

"I haven't met anyone yet who had a bad problem and got it the first time," he said. "The saddest thing about people in the system is that they make a hero and then want to break him down."

Stanley Wilson made it easy for them. One day he was the high profile running back, drafted out of Oklahoma by the NFL Cincinnati Bengals. The next day, he was just another addict, trying to pick up the pieces of his shattered life in a rehabilitation program.

He walked into rehab thinking he was special, a sports star people would recognize. He got over that fast when he saw the rest of the customers, actors he had seen on television, doctors, lawyers. There were no names, just people telling their stories, people looking for help.

And Stanley Wilson, the football star, was one of them.

The first rehab attempt came five years ago, after his rookie season. Over a 10-month period, Wilson went through three rehabilitation programs. And when he tested positive for drug use in October, 1984, he was suspended.

There was another rehab and a full season's suspension in 1985 and the same scenario in 1987. You begin to understand why the last place you'd expect to find Stanley Wilson is at the Super Bowl. But Commissioner Pete Rozelle gave him another chance this season and everything fell in place.

Today is Friday, a drug test day for Wilson, who delivers urine samples three times a week as part of the agreement that returned him to active player status.

This week the Super Bowl's klieg lights focused on Ickey Woods and Boomer Esiason, the media stars of this sports spectacle. Life's light, though, was in Stanley Wilson's eyes, where it didn't always shine so brightly, where it once hid behind the cloud of cocaine.

Proposition 42 may be postponed

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — Following a week of pressure from Georgetown John Thompson and others, the presidents of the NCAA and of its Presidents Commission decided to ask that Proposition 42 be postponed.

Proposition 42 was designed to tighten academic eligibility guidelines for freshman athletes. Thompson attacked the proposal because it mandates certain scores on standardized tests, which some say are biased.

The proposal was passed last week at the NCAA convention in San Francisco and Thompson refused to coach last weekend against Boston College and Wednesday at Providence.

At the request of Georgetown and the Southeastern Conference, a meeting was held Thursday to discuss "the wide range of academic, athletics and socio-economic concerns" arising from Prop 42's passage, an NCAA statement said.

Proposition 42 would change some of the requirements in Proposition 48, which went into effect prior to the 1986-87 school year. Proposition 48 requires that incoming freshmen have a 2.0 grand-point average and a minimum score of 700 on the SAT or 15 on the ACT to be eligible to play.

So-called "partial qualifiers," those who satisfy only one of the requirements, could receive a scholarship but, like a non-qualifier, couldn't play or practice during the freshman year and would sacrifice one year of eligibility.

Proposition 42 was designed to close the "partial-qualifier" loophole which, according to NCAA estimates, had allowed some 1,000 athletes to receive scholarships the last three years.

The NCAA Academic Requirements Committee "wanted no changes made in Proposition 48," the statement said, adding that "the majority of the Division I chief executive officers of the Presidents Commission concurred."

NCAA president Albert M. Witte and Martin Massengale, chairman of the Presidents Commission, "will recommend to the NCAA Council and the Division I membership of the Presidents Commission that legislation be introduced at the next convention to postpone any changes" until a study of Prop 48 is completed.

"In my judgment, the potential negative impacts that changes ... could have on young people who want to pursue a college education and participate in athletics outweighs any need to amend this legislation before all data on the first five years of the survey have been collected and studied," Witte said.

Local students plan to jump rope for heart

Four Hereford schools will be among 38 area elementary, middle, junior high, and high schools whose students are planning to jump rope to raise funds for local divisions of the American Heart Association this year.

Jump Rope for Heart features teams of students who take turns jumping rope for a total of three hours. Depending on the school, the event is either conducted over the course of several physical education classes or as an after-school or weekend event. Jump Rope for Heart encourages teamwork, fun and fitness using jumping rope as a form of aerobic exercise.

Local "Jump Rope for Heart" schools and their coordinators are: Shirley Intermediate, Dan Odell; Tierra Blanca Elementary, Judy Schumacher; Walcott School, John Morrow; and West Central Intermediate, Sara Gallagher.

In the event, students recruit families and friends to make donations or pledges based on each minute their team jumps rope. Funds are collected and turned in so that students are eligible for prizes according to the dollars they raise. Prizes range from colorful jump ropes, t-shirts, and sweatshirts to a watch radio and a portable AM/FM cassette recorder.

In turn, each participating school is eligible to receive statewide prizes based on total dollars raised. In 1988, Linda Nichols and her students at Rex Reeves Elementary School in Canyon were the top money raisers in the Panhandle, collecting $8,696 for the American Heart Association and winning $250 of physical education equipment for the school. St. Andrew's Episcopal School students, led by Kim Buccola, raised $90 per participant, which was the highest in the 35 schools participating throughout the Panhandle last year.

Jim Brock, director of health and physical education for the Amarillo Independent School District, encourages all P.E. teachers to register to conduct a Jump Rope for Heart event. "Jumping rope is great physical exercise. It requires a minimum of space and equipment, and can be pursued and enjoyed throughout life while strengthening one's heart," Brock stated. He added, "In Jump Rope for heart, we're working toward a dual purpose—to teach children about the importance of aerobic exercise in staying healthy, and to support the American Heart Association in their fight against early death from heart disease."

Jump Rope for Heart is co-sponsored by the American Heart Association and the Texas Association for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance (TAHPERD). More than 100,000 students across Texas are expected to participate this year, including more than 6,500 in the 25 counties of the Panhandle.

For more information about Jump Rope for Heart, call Veronica Young or Jo Rogers at the American Heart Association, 374-8291.

First service in Week of Prayer slated tonight

The 1989 Week of Prayer for Christian Unity continues as two special services approach.

Tonight will feature the first service at St. Anthony's Catholic Church library. The event will begin at 7:30 p.m. and will be led by laity, and Jim Haile. Nurseries will be provided at both services and a fellowship hour will follow each service.

Theme for this year's special event is "Building Community: One Body in Christ." It is sponsored by the Hereford Ministerial Alliance and is fostered through the Commission on Christian Unity of Texas Conference of Churches.

Several local churches, representing various denominations, are participating in the event. Money collected from the week-long event will benefit local organizations who minister to the needy.

Hereford Ministerial Alliance committee members in charge of the Week of Prayer include: Rev. James Peach of Westway Baptist Church, president of the Alliance; Rev. Bob Huffaker of the Church of the Nazarene, host pastor of the event; Jeff Love, music minister of the Church of the Nazarene; Steven Sobczak, minister of music at First United Methodist Church; Dennis Latham of Community Church; Rev. Jim Hickman of Dawn Baptist Church; and McDougal, who is a representative of the Texas Conference of Churches.

A mosaic cross accompanies the 1989 theme, representing the Christian church as "a mosaic of gifted persons in many colors and shapes whose differences, when blended, make a thing of beauty not possible for any one piece alone."

The public is invited to participate in the special services.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Promising mayhem but no bodily injury, magicians Penn and Teller are bringing their award-winning Broadway show to Philadelphia, where they performed on the streets during the late '70s.

During what Penn Jillette described as "the world's most efficient press conference" Wednesday, he said "horrific" things would occur during the "Penn and Teller" show at the Shubert Theater.

While he spoke, Teller, his quiet partner of 14 years, was submerged in a locked tank of water.

The fast-talking Penn got a little carried away describing the comedy team's ascent to fame and only took notice of the time when Teller began banging on the glass tank, splashing reporters, photographers and his partner.

"Time just flies by," Penn said as he glanced at his watch. He assured the reporters, "It's OK. There's a signal he would give if he were really in trouble."

Penn opened the tank after a mere five minutes and 47 seconds had elapsed.
