Pickens close to governor decision

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

T. Boone Pickens Jr. told the Hereford Lions Club on Wednesday that he will make a decision within the next six weeks on whether or not he'll run for Texas governor in 1990.

Pickens cited four reasons why he wouldn't run for governor, but admitted he was interested and cited ways he feels government, and the Texas economy and the state as a whole can be improved.

During a 20-minute speech and a 25-minute question-and-answer session, Pickens hit on points ranging from the state's education and prison systems to Dallas and Japan.

Pickens said he has to help please the 176,000 stockholders in Mesa, the company he started in 1964, work with the growing United Stockholders of America, rectify problems he is facing from Japan's corporate structure in his latest business venture, and justify "running (for the governor's office) for one year and serving for four years," Pickens said.

"I can do a good job, and can be a good governor," Pickens said. "I will make a decision in the next 30-45 days."

Pickens addressed ethics problems that have faced the federal government in recent weeks, including the resignations of Speaker Jim Wright and then-third-in-command Rep. Tony Coelho (D-Calif.).

"Some things have gone so far in Washington that the American people have become outraged. Both sides of the aisle are guilty," Pickens said. "What happened to Jim Wright should have happened to him. I may have been born at night, but it wasn't last night."

Pickens also said the Coelho "got out before they could get him."

Pickens said he learned his biggest ethics lesson while running a newspaper route in Holdenville, Okla., when he found a man's billfold and received $1 from the man for returning it to him. Pickens' mother and grandmother made the youngster return the dollar.

"My grandmother said you should not be rewarded for being honest," Pickens said. Pickens had been pleading with his folks to keep the dollar while, outside, rainfall was becoming heavier by the minute. In a last attempt to keep the dollar, Pickens said it was raining too hard for him to go to the man's house.

"They said if I had gone when they first told me, I would have been there and back before the rain started," Pickens said. "The lesson damn sure stuck with me."

Pickens said that Harvard University is beginning a program, with $34 million funding, to teach ethics. "How do you teach ethics to 20-year-olds?" Pickens asked. "If they don't have it by then, they won't have it."

Pickens said he felt there was not so much an ethics crisis as there was a leadership void.

"We need leadership to set an example, to motivate the country," Pickens said. He said he didn't know how to identify or create a leader, "but you all know when there is one around, we see a leader when he's there before us, and we know when we don't see one."

"We need leadership in Texas," Pickens said. "Our economy is improving, but it has a long way to go." He said the state was at a crossroads where days when the next oil boom was just around the corner were gone. While the collapse of oil affected everyone in the state, "the good part was it strengthened us to run with a lean efficiency. You had to stay alive, and you found out how many notches there were in your belt. I always think there is one more notch," Pickens said.

Pickens said there was a place for belt-tightening in the state government, and outlined a three-part plan to help strengthen the economy.

1. Continued restructuring to make the state competitive and efficient as possible.

2. Encouragement of entrepreneurship. "Entrepreneurs create the most jobs in America," Pickens said. "Texas has more entrepreneurs than the rest of the country, and the US has more entrepreneurs than any other country in the world."

3. Provide a healthy business climate.

To implement the plan, however, Pickens says the education system must be further strengthened. He said the most glaring example was that 85 percent of the inmates in the Texas Department of Corrections cannot read or write.

"With no basic education, they end up down and out and usually in trouble," Pickens said. "50 percent of the people who finish the first grade have problems, and by the eighth grade they hate the system. For the rest of their lives, their opportunities are limited."

Pickens suggested spending less money in the junior and senior years in high school and spending that money instead in kindergarten and first grade. "We need to nurture the little ones," Pickens said.

On other topics:

--In response to a question about gasoline prices, Pickens said, "We are seeing major oil companies do what they do best. Gouge us. Hell, no (prices at the pump don't reflect prices at the well)." Pickens said that major oil companies are making more money today than they did in 1981, when the price of oil was almost twice what it is today, because they are making higher profits on their "downstream" products. "However, we still have the cheapest gasoline of most anywhere in the world," Pickens said.

--On workers' compensation, Pickens said he "really didn't feel expert," but felt that whatever came out of the June 20 special session "will beat what we have had."

--On his problems in seeking a board seat in a Japanese company in which Mesa hold 20 percent of the stock, "We want to change their ways of doing business... We have to break down their system if they are going to be competitive in the 21st century. All we want is a level playing field. I think we'll see some changes in Washington is our attitude toward Japan."

--On the recent move of 30 Mesa employees to Dallas, "we don't plan any further moves, but we wouldn't close out that option." Pickens explained that the persons moving to Dallas are involved in the financing-and-deal-making end of the business, "and they wanted to move to Dallas or New York to be more in the mainstream. Amarillo is not an easy place to get to. We need to be in that market because we are deal people."

--On prisons, Pickens said that improving the educational system would help the prison system in the future. "For right now, it's like a car going around the track at 200 mph. You need to fix the engine, but you can't get it to stop."

Traveling drug salesman jailed

A raid conducted at a local motel Wednesday evening led to one arrest and the confiscation of a large quantity of heroin and cocaine.

Alfonso Magdaleno Hernandez, 46, was charged with possession of a controlled substance with intent to deliver. Officers reported finding about two grams of cocaine and 32 balloons of heroin in Hernandez' possession.

Officials received information early Wednesday afternoon that an individual was selling drugs out of a motel room. A search warrant was obtained, and officers from the Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Office, the sheriff's reserve and the 222nd District Attorney's Office made a run on Hernandez in his room at about 7 p.m. Wednesday.

At the time of his arrest Hernandez gave his name as Joseph Eloy Chavez and his age as 51. Officials later found that the man was using an alias and a false birth date.

Bivins enjoys Senate experience

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

State Sen. Teel Bivins said Wednesday he doesn't believe the June 20 special legislative session will have an easy time working out a solution to the state's worker's compensation crisis.

Bivins, who spoke to about 20 persons at the Hereford State Bank on Wednesday evening, said the "wheels came off" a worker's comp reform movement during the regular session, despite a $500,000 study headed by Rep. Richard Smith and Sen. Bob Glasgow to study other systems across the county and what Texas can do to improve its system.

"The House took great strides in trial de novo (the method used to settle claims and disputes), how workers would be compensated, and other areas," Bivins said.

While the House approved a "solid plan," the Senate was faced with strong opposition from the Texas Trial Lawyers Association, a plaintiff's attorneys group that wanted the system left unchanged.

After lengthy debate, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby pulled the Senate together as a committee of the whole to work out a bill that would pass out of the senate. That bill, Bivins said, made only minor changes in the current system.

"It went to conference committee and we could not bridge the gap between the House and the Senate," Bivins said. "I don't know what will happen, but my best assessment, or maybe it's wishful thinking, is that everyone will mellow a little before the special session and loosen up from their polarized positions. There have been concerns on all sides, and maybe we can turn around some votes in the Senate."

"The horrible hypothetical is that we'll reach another stalemate, wait until the industry requests another rate increase, then call another special session."

Bivins said his freshman session in the Senate, his first venture into political office, was "one of the most incredible experiences of my life."

"It was an experience like no other," Bivins said, who pointed out that the legislature was able to escape without a tax increase for the first time in eight years.

"The legislature finally decided to live within its means," Bivins said.

Bivins said the 31st district, which includes most of the Panhandle, was able to "escape this session." He credited a team approach, with Bivins working with the representatives from the district to present a united front on most issues. The group met for breakfast once a week where they would discuss Panhandle issues and develop strategies on bills.

"We had a spirit of teamwork and cooperation that had been missing for several years," Bivins said. "We had a little more credible voice in the legislature."

Bivins said his vote on the education measure that passed was "the toughest vote I cast." The bill attempted to deal with inequalities among the state's school districts by tossing $450 million at the funding problem. The attempt to decrease inequities will mean a $280,000 increase in state funding for the Hereford Independent School District, but will mean huge cuts for most of the state's urban school districts.

"That's not near enough money, but that's what we had to make a start," Bivins said.

The part to which Bivins most objected was the issuing of mandates without funding, but funding was eventually included for most of the mandates.

"We had a pretty good bill come out of the Senate, but what emerged from the conference committee was an entirely different animal," Bivins said.

The Amarillo senator said that the legislation that eventually renewed the Texas Department of Agriculture was something with which he wasn't completely happy, but was happy to see that a new commission will handle pesticide regulations in the future.

"The votes weren't there to make the commissioner an appointed position, and there would have been damage to the governor and the Republican Party by making a martyr of a guy who has already had too much attention," Bivins said. "Just with the European import issue, he has cost cattle producers $10 a head."

Bivins also pointed out that the legislature took steps to create alternatives to incarceration to help the prison system, while also allocating more money for prisons.

FBI still wants 'older' fugitives

By DANIEL J. WAKIN
Associated Press Writer

Three allegedly killed or robbed for radical causes. One was accused of killing a police officer. One was charged with poisoning his estranged wife's drink and one with bludgeoning his family.

They are six FBI fugitives wanted longer than John Emil List, the church-going accountant authorities say was arrested in Virginia last week for the 1971 fatal shootings of his wife, mother and three children in Westfield, N.J.

As in the List case, investigators are hoping to pry these fugitives from their new lives.

They follow leads, thicken files, contact colleagues around the world and prepare their cases as proposals for the television show "America's Most Wanted," the fugitive showcase that prompted a tip leading to List's arrest.

List, who claims he is Robert P. Clark, faced a hearing today in Richmond for extradition to New Jersey.

The FBI maintains a file of about 100 long-term fugitives, including the 10 most wanted, deemed worthy of special attention. Most of these cases have reached dead ends.

"There becomes a time when you're literally down to publicity," said Thomas Bush, northeast supervisor for the FBI's fugitive unit in Washington, D.C. "You've done every kind of record check you can do."

If such long-term fugitives have anything in common, it's a "different kind of personality" that allows them to cut all ties with relatives and their past, said Bush, who has been chasing fugitives for a decade.

The oldest case on the books is perhaps most tantalizing for law enforcement officials.

Joseph Michael Maloney went to his estranged wife's house one day in 1967 in Rochester, N.Y., for their son's fifth birthday party. The next day, June Fisk Maloney went to a hospital feeling ill, and died a few days later.

Police allege Maloney served his wife an orange juice cocktail poisoned with wood alcohol.

"It was an especially horrible death," said Monroe County District Attorney Howard Relin.

Maloney was arrested but escaped from a hospital while undergoing psychiatric tests and moved to Ireland, apparently in the early 1970s. He changed his name to Michael O'Shea, married and fathered two children, authorities said.

He was under surveillance for 11 years in anticipation of an extradition treaty with the United States, Irish authorities said. In 1985, he was arrested but Ireland's high court overturned the treaty and Maloney was freed. Relin said recent reports have placed the 53-year-old former handyman and builder in Canada.

Relin now is seeking help from "America's Most Wanted."

Another case being prepared for the program is strikingly similar to the List case.

EPA identifies high-risk plants

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Environmental Protection Agency today identified more than 200 industrial plants in 37 states that it says release enough toxic chemicals to pose a severe cancer risk.

Risk estimates for those exposed are a thousand-fold greater than the cancer risk level most policy makers consider acceptable, said Rep. Henry A. Waxman, who released the figures.

Waxman, chairman of the House Energy and Commerce environment subcommittee, cautioned that the list could change later because the figures are preliminary. Nonetheless, he said, the numbers represent a "stunning demonstration of the urgency of the public health threat" from the now-unregulated toxic emissions.

The estimates assume a 70-year lifetime exposure to the contaminant at the maximum exposure level.

Waxman coupled release of the data with introduction of legislation to control toxic releases from industrial sources and motor vehicles; prevent accidental releases; protect the Great Lakes, which have been seriously damaged by airborne toxic chemicals; and control emissions from small businesses.

Waxman wants to incorporate the legislation into a comprehensive clean air bill that also would address urban pollution and acid rain.

The figures show that 205 facilities pose cancer risks for the most exposed individuals that may exceed 1 in 1,000. Forty-five of these facilities have maximum individual risks of greater than 1 in 100, and one has at least a 1-in-10 risk.

In comparison, when ordering cleanup of toxic waste dumps, the EPA tries to reduce potential cancer risks to 1 in 100,000, or less.

The new estimates represent evaluations of the maximum individual cancer risk that might arise from the inhalation of a single toxic air pollutant from an individual facility. The estimate does not indicate the risk for the entire population in the community, because not everyone would suffer the same exposure.

For example, a risk estimate of 1 in 1,000 means that one person out of 1,000 could be expected to contract cancer from maximum exposure to a single pollutant.

The EPA said the new, preliminary list is the first of its kind, although Waxman noted that two previous studies found cancer rates two to four times the national average near some major chemical facilities.

There are strong indications the risk is even worse because the data is so limited, Waxman said.

For instance, the information only measures cancer risks, but not other potential hazards such as birth defects, nervous system damage or respiratory disease.

The figures do not reflect the combined cancer risk of all air toxics released by each facility, but only measure a single pollutant.

Friendly troops replace hated 27th Army

BEIJING (AP) - Hundreds of military trucks roared into the city center today as busloads of foreigners, fearing a battle in Beijing between rival armies, rushed to the airport to catch emergency flights out of China.

But residents claimed the hated 27th Army, which massacred hundreds of people in a weekend invasion, had left the city, replaced by friendlier troops.

Lines of trucks drove toward Tiananmen Square this morning in a procession lasting more than an hour. While some were laden with supplies and equipment, a few were loaded with soldiers who aimed rifles at passers-by and bicyclists.

It was still not clear who was running the government or if armies loyal to forces opposed to the use of troops against civilians were still on the outskirts of the city.

Outside troop-occupied areas there was a semblance of normalcy in Beijing for the first time since the slaughter early Sunday that cleared Tiananmen of pro-democracy protesters. Bicyclists were able to pass unimpeded on the south side of the square and catch a glimpse of the huge military encampment there.

Soldiers milled about washing and exercising. Other armed troops lined the streets but there were no confirmed reports of troops opening fire on crowds, a common occurrence until today.

South of Tiananmen today, troops were seen with brooms rather than automatic rifles, sweeping the streets.

A few vehicles ventured onto main streets, but gas stations remained closed, public transportation was stopped, mail and newspapers weren't delivered and many stores were closed.

People visited hospital morgues looking for relatives amid the unidentified bodies of those killed in the attack.

In buses and caravans, many bearing their country's flags, foreigners left for the airport, where chartered flights took them out of the country.

The official Xinhua News Agency said many people are hoarding food and some were sending their babies to relatives outside Beijing because they can't find food for them. Long lines formed outside those groceries that were open.

But disturbances still wracked many provincial cities.

A Chinese source in Sichuan's capital of Chengdu, where anti-government violence has been reported, said troops had come into the city but left.

In Shanghai, much of the work force stayed away from jobs because of street barricades set up in anticipation of a military assault.

Other cities where protesters have barricaded rail lines and roads and besieged government offices include Nanjing, Harbin, Tianjin and Lanzhou.

An estimated 200,000 troops were stationed around the Chinese capital today, many from army groups said to oppose the massacre by the 27th.

People on Beijing's streets said the 27th, which left the city in two large convoys of thousands of tank-protected troops, had not returned.

They said that among the "more peaceful" troops that had replaced it were the 63rd, 68th and 20th armies.

Soldiers said to be from the 20th Army group engaged in relaxed conversation with groups of residents just southeast of the square.

License plates that would identify their unit have been taken off many military vehicles.

Senior leader Deng Xiaoping, President Yang Shangkun and Premier Li Peng, the leaders believed to have ordered the violent suppression, have all stayed out of sight for more than two weeks.

There have been persistent rumors that Deng is dead, Yang has fled south with his family and Li has taken off for Inner Mongolia. None could be verified. Li was last seen May 25, five days after he declared martial law in the capital.

The fortunes of Qiao Shi, the Communist Party's law-and-order man, appeared to be on the rise.

Qiao, 64, was mentioned prominently on Beijing radio Wednesday, indicating he may be in line to succeed Zhao Ziyang, the moderate party chief reportedly purged for recommending compromise with student activists.

Qiao might be acceptable to the 84-year-old Deng because, like Deng, he supports economic reforms but will not countenance political reforms that might cause social unrest.

The hardliners who last week appeared to have gained the upper hand in a behind-the-scenes power struggle issued two new harsh edicts Wednesday.

One said troops were authorized to "forcefully dispose of, on the spot" anyone who resists arrest.

Another warned that any Communist Party members who "plotted, organized and led the rebellion" during the student protests would be expelled from the party and punished severely.

Drug issue delays bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House and Senate face pressure to resolve their differences speedily over a long-delayed spending bill, but the widest gulf is over one of the hottest political issues: illegal drugs.

A bipartisan Senate voiced approval Wednesday for legislation pouring an extra $3.3 billion this year into veterans, student loan and other programs. The vote capping lawmakers' fourth day of debate came more than two months after President Bush asked Congress for a $2.2 billion version of the bill.

The House passed its own $3.7 billion measure on May 24 on a contentious party-line vote. As is usual with spending legislation, each chamber sprinkled its own bill with provisions boosting individual lawmakers' favorite projects.

The biggest difference between the two bills is $822 million the House included for a host of anti-drug programs. Majority Democrats there inserted the money into the bill, over veto threats from Bush administration officials arguing that the spending would further inflate the deficit.

The Senate version contains no drug monies. Despite public opinion polls indicating that illegal drugs is the pre-eminent domestic problem, Senate Democrats heeded Bush's warnings and joined Republicans in preventing some legislators from putting drug spending into the bill.

Massachusetts Rep. Silvio Conte, ranking Republican on the Appropriations Committee, said he did not believe it would be difficult for the two houses to work out their differences over financing new anti-drug efforts. "I think I can get the White House to compromise on something," he told a reporter.

But one administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity,

Valuable baseball card stolen

WEST PITTSBURG, Calif. (AP) - Police believe the theft of a possibly fabulously valuable Honus Wagner baseball card, the "Rolls Royce of baseball cards," may have resulted from a carefully planned plot.

"The more we get into the case, the more it looks like a conspiracy," Contra Costa County sheriff's detective Phil White said Wednesday.

The 1909 baseball card was stolen from 14-year-old Rene Montoya, who had plans to perhaps use the money from its sale to pay for college, by a teen-age boy who grabbed it from the victim.

The pasteboard, now apparently in the possession of the thief, could fetch as much or more than $100,000, or it might be a reprint, White said.

"It's the most valuable, the biggest prize of all the baseball world," said Dave Stehlin of a Lafayette collectors shop. "They should have had it insured."

The Honus Wagner card was originally designated "T-206," a so-called "tobacco card" distributed in the backs of cigarette packs of that era.

During the May 24 theft that just recently came to light, the card was mangled in some way, Montoya told White. Stehlin said the card, if it was not ripped in half, could be worth $100,000 - and double that if in mint condition.

The detective waxed nearly emotional in his sympathy and admiration for the young victim and his family.

"They're a simple, good, hard-working family," he said, noting that Rene and his two sisters and a brother live with their grandmother, Victoria Flores, who has a disability income and is the entire family's main support.

"They have a difficult life," the detective said. "He's a very responsible young man for 14 years old. He holds a job, goes to school, plays a guitar. The whole family feels bad about this."

An authentic card, one of 50 to 100 believed to exist, is worth so much because of its rarity.

The big problem, White said, is that young Montoya never had the card with the photo of the famous Pittsburgh Pirates shortstop competently appraised, and only got the idea that it might be much more than an ordinary baseball card a couple of months ago.

Wagner himself tried to get the cards out of circulation because they were distributed with cigarettes.

Wagner, who chewed tobacco and didn't mind adults smoking, was outraged that kids might buy cigarettes to get the cards. The story goes that the company and bought up the packs containing his cards.

White said Montoya happened to watch a TV show on the value of baseball cards, including a Wagner card. Montoya, who received the card from his grandfather six years ago, took it out of his regular collection and put it in the family Bible.

Montoya apparently freely discussed his Wagner card and its possible value with friends and classmates, White said.

"I think word got out," the investigator said.

Sometime after that, said the detective, a boy a little older than Rene came to his door and introduced himself as "David," recently of Lake Tahoe.

On the night of the theft, the investigator said, Montoya's "new acquaintance" persuaded the victim to pose with the card for a photograph.

The thief, described as perhaps two or three years older than Montoya, grabbed the card and ran. Montoya tackled him. A scuffle followed, and the other boy - with Montoya in pursuit - got away and ran a half-block to waiting car.

"Let's go!" Montoya quoted the other boy as saying to the driver.

Crop eradication not affective against drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) - A top U.S. drug-control official says efforts to stem the cocaine trade by eradicating crops in South America will not produce substantial results for years.

David Westrate, the Drug Enforcement Administration's assistant administrator for operations, offered that assessment Wednesday in testimony before the House narcotics committee.

"Escalating coca cultivation and cocaine production in the Andes has at no time been more critical nor posed as profound a threat to the United States and its allies," Westrate said.

But while progress is being made in eradication, "We will not see substantial effects for years against coca," he said.

Michael M. Skol, deputy assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, said the State Department is considering "new directions" in the eradication effort.

He did not spell them out, but suggested they will be expensive.

"Money is a crucial part of the narcotics trade, and unfortunately in this time of tight budgets, money may be one of the most effective weapons we can muster for our anti-narcotics programming," he said.

U.S. policy, he said, must consider "what happens if and when we are successful" in eradicating cocaine production: what will happen to the peasant farmers earning their livings growing coca, to the economies of those countries and to the governments that, by wiping out the cocaine business, will be confronted by an angry populace.

He said increased economic and military aid will be required.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Enclosed is a clipping from a Michigan paper that made me furious. As you can see, it is a photo of an 8-year-old boy with a snake wrapped around his neck. A look of terror is in the child's eyes. An adult male is laughing. I would like to know what is so funny. Why do so many adults (almost always men) think that scaring children is great fun?

My husband, "Jim" does this with our 5-year-old son, "Billy." Jim is a good father, but for some unknown reason, he gets a charge out of frightening the boy. He insists that Billy watch scary movies with him. I refuse to look.

I've seen Jim sneak up behind the boy and grab him by the neck. When we're at our summer place, Jim will pretend to push Billy off the pier and then "save him." Billy ends up laughing, but for the moment, I know he is scared stiff.

The boy has nightmares. He calls, "Mommy, Mommy," and when I go to him he tells me about his bad dream. When I cuddle him my husband says I'm making a sissy out of the boy. What do you suggest, Ann? Jim refuses to go for counseling, and I am beside myself with frustration.--Michigan Mom

DEAR MICH.: Adults who frighten children "all in fun" are acting out their deep-seated hostility. They enjoy the power they have over these little ones. Almost always someone did the same thing to them when they were children.

Give Billy as much emotional support as possible. When Jim behaves in an abusive manner toward the child, stand up to him and say, "Cut it out! It's not funny." In other words, verbalize your feelings and let Billy know that you understand his fears and you are on his side.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just saw myself in your column. The letter was from the girl who wanted to marry a guy nobody liked but her. You asked, "Where's the fire?"

How right you were to question a 17-year-old who wants to rush into the most important decision of her life.

When I was 17, I married a guy nobody liked but me. It wasn't long before I didn't like him very much either. I stayed with him for 37 years, even though he was mean and abusive.

He rarely spoke a civil word to me. My life was a nightmare. I don't know how I survived his cruelty. I cried my eyes out for years, and when the tears dried up I became bitter.

I left him when the children were grown, even though I had no money and no education, but I was free at last. I am 76 years old now and a little lonely perhaps, but at least I have peace of mind and I no longer live in fear of saying or doing the wrong thing.

I pray that the girl who wrote to you reads this letter, Ann. I want to say to her, "Don't do it, child."--No Name please (Nashville)

DEAR NO NAME: The most useful part of this column is hearing from people who have been there and offer counsel born of experience. Thanks for writing, Nashville. I, too, hope that the 17-year-old sees your letter and listens.

Hints from Heloise

COUPONING FOR A CAUSE

Dear Heloise: I often see free trial-size coupons or money-off coupons for items that I do not use nor want. It seemed like such a waste not to take advantage of them.

Now each week I have a $1 budget to use with these coupons. I give the proceeds to my local church "care bank" and no longer raid my pantry for odd canned goods to give. I can donate several items per week at a minimum of time and cost and my contributions are much appreciated. — D.A.C., Phoenix, Ariz.

How thoughtful. Small things can add up to big things! Thank you for sharing your heart hint. — Heloise

LETTER OF WARNING

Dear Heloise: Please inform your readers never to leave any appliance running unattended. Years ago I had a neighbor whose dryer caught fire during a short trip she made to the market. Her home suffered quite a lot of damage.

I heeded her words and never left an appliance running when I wasn't home. Well, you guessed it. I was doing laundry and my washing machine shorted out and started smoking. I unplugged it and decided to call the fire department just to be on the safe side.

The fire department said it was a good thing that I had been at home or I might not have had a house to come home to. I was lucky that all I got was a lot of smoke. — Dell Gilbert, Cypress, Calif.

Good words of advice! — Heloise

ALL QUIET ON THE WAR FRONT
ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) - The superpowers have avoided major war since 1945 - but not because of nuclear weapons, says John Mueller, a political scientist at the University of Rochester.

"The real reason we've avoided war," says Mueller, "is that modern nations haven't thought a war would be remotely in their interest. Memories of the horror of conventional warfare, a pragmatic Soviet ideology and the superpowers' satisfaction with the status quo have been quite enough to deter World War III."

League meetings continue in Austin State hoops tickets are hot item

AUSTIN (AP) - In a state where high school football has long been king, tickets to the state boys' basketball tournament have become such hot items that scalpers are selling them for $50 each, says Bailey Marshall, director of the University Interscholastic League.

Marshall told the UIL Athletics Committee on Wednesday that if good parking spaces could be sold, they would go for as much as $200 for the three-day tournament in March.

The tournament is held at the Frank Erwin Special Events Center, which seats over 16,000, but sellouts are becoming common.

UIL Athletic Director Bill Farney said, "It's a tough ticket, a hot ticket."

The issue was raised when the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches asked the Athletics Committee to recommend that the UIL mail ticket forms directly to all head boys' basketball coaches, instead of to superintendents and principals.

Under the coaches' proposal, coaches could order a maximum of two tournament tickets in the lower arena area. Then, the UIL would mail ticket forms to superintendents.

Farney said coaches like to "mix and mingle," but there are only 1,700 seats in the bottom 10 rows.

Schools whose teams are in the tournament are offered from 1,500 to 3,000 tickets to their games, Farney said.

Farney said some coaches have been using press tickets to sit at the arena level.

The Athletics Committee, which includes five superintendents, recommended that the UIL staff "continue to monitor this area of concern."

Private schools charged with recruiting

AUSTIN (AP) - The University Interscholastic League staff, at the direction of a UIL committee, will review a rural superintendent's complaint that non-public schools are recruiting athletes from public school teams.

Dr. Richard Gott, superintendent of the Chilton Independent School District, had said a non-public school was "raiding" the Chilton athletic program, and suggested a statewide boycott of athletic competition between UIL schools and schools that are not members of the UIL.

"Non-UIL schools are recruiting superior student-athletes from UIL schools," Gott wrote. "Schools that operate under the rules and guidelines of the UIL are at a distinct advantage with non-UIL schools because they are unable to match the monetary incentives to amateur athletes."

UIL Athletic Director Bill Farney said Wednesday non-public schools "are actively recruiting" athletes from public schools, often after getting a firsthand look at the athletes in competition between the schools.

One possible advantage non-public schools have, Farney said, is that they do not have restrictions on the number of games they may play.

The Athletics Committee also recommended a study of a proposal to create a statewide grading system for high school basketball officials, and instructed the staff to review the soccer season to see if it conflicts with other sports seasons.

The Texas Association of Basketball Coaches proposed the statewide evaluation system for basketball officials, which suggested that coaches hold evaluation cards for at least a 24-hour "cooling-off" period before mailing them to the local chapters of the Southwest Basketball Officials

Paper bids to sponsor grid finals

AUSTIN (AP) - The Athletics Committee of the University Interscholastic League instructed the UIL staff Wednesday to study a proposal to play the five state championship football games at Texas Stadium in the Dallas suburb of Irving.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram offered the UIL $276,000 per year in exchange for sponsorship and promotional rights to the championship games.

"We want to make the state championship a wholesome, fun event and we feel strongly about that," said Maureen Hathaway, director of marketing and promotions for the newspaper. "Texas high school football already has a big-time reputation, and this deal only would enhance it."

The proposal guarantees that the Star-Telegram will pay for everything, including the promotion of the games, stadium rental costs, game officials, trophies, printing of tickets, programs and kits for the news media.

The Star-Telegram guarantees $50,000 for each of the two Class 5A finalists; $25,000 for 4A; $20,000 for 3A; $15,000 for 2A and $10,000 for each Class A finalist.

The UIL was guaranteed $36,000. All these payouts, according to figures submitted by the newspaper, exceed averages for the last four years.

The motion adopted by the Athletics Committee instructs the staff to study the proposal and survey UIL member schools for their views.

The committee agreed that the newspaper presentation should be repeated in October for the Legislative Council, which is composed of 24 superintendents from throughout the state.

Association. The chapters would tabulate results and provide the UIL with a list of the top 10 percent of officials, who would be rewarded with regional and state tournament assignments.

The Athletics Committee voted to ask the 24-member UIL Legislative Council to set up a special study or committee to report on the proposal.

A proposal to push back the starting date for soccer practice led to the request for the staff to survey UIL member schools about how soccer fits in to the overall athletic seasons.

The committee recommended that the Legislative Council remove a restriction that only seven players from a school soccer team may play on a non-school soccer team. It tentatively approved a proposal to require the use of an official clock and timer, where available, at soccer matches.

The council meets Oct. 15-16. The committee instructed the staff to survey UIL schools as part of a study on whether to implement fast pitch softball for girls, which was sought by James Stewart, a Georgetown parent, and had numerous supporters.

The committee rejected proposals that would:

- Authorize student-athletes to miss school to make official college recruiting visits.
- Replace the girls' 800-meter relay with a 3,200-meter relay.
- Allow tennis teams to have a dual match the same week as a Friday-Saturday tournament.

White Sox come back on Rangers, 6-4

ARLINGTON (AP) - The Chicago White Sox didn't look like the worst team in the American League.

They collected 15 hits off 5 Texas Rangers' pitchers in a 6-4 victory and did it without pregame hitting practice because of heavy rains.

It was the most hits in 20 games for the White Sox who won their 4th game in 12 outings. The 15 hits ties the second highest of the season for Chicago. It had 15 hits on May 9th against Milwaukee and 16 hits on May 11th against the Brewers.

Chicago is last in the AL West with only 21 victories.

"It has been awhile since we had that many hits," said manager Jeff Torberg. "I knew this club would hit but we really started jumping on the ball tonight. We've been due but we kept good mechanics. Two weeks ago we were pounding the ball."

Three White Sox hitters, Ron Kittle, Ivan Calderon, and Ozzie Guillen had three hits each.

The hitting outbreak came a night after the White Sox collected only three hits off Texas' Kevin Brown.

"It was a big win for us," Torberg said. "We needed a confidence boost."

Guillen agreed.

"I'm getting my confidence back," he said. "Jeff dropped me from second to eighth in the batting order and it paid off. I think the way I can help the team more is to bat second. Batting eighth means you miss the first part of the game."

Ken Patterson struck out Rafael Palmeiro to stifle a Texas rally in the seventh inning and earned his third victory against no losses. Bobby Thigpen got his 10th save.

"Baseball's a funny game," Patterson said. "I throw a couple of pitches and get the win. What can I say?"

The loser was Cecilio Guante, who dropped to 3-3.

Texas manager Bobby Valentine said he never thought of going to ace reliever Jeff Russell after Chicago

The White Sox hope to earn a split of the four-game series tonight when they send Eric King (4-7) against Nolan Ryan, 6-3.

Ryan had a one-hitter in his last outing, roughed up Guante, who gave up three runs in the eighth inning.

"Russ had pitched the last two nights so I didn't want to use him," Valentine said. "It was just one of those nights and a tough one to lose. They got a lot of hits. They deserved to win."

Texas' Cecil Espy was the Rangers' lone offensive bright spot. He had a homer, double and a single in the eight-hit Texas attack.

Puhl, Scott lead Astros over San Diego, 3-2

HOUSTON (AP) - For Houston's Terry Puhl the unthinkable was to leave the winning run stranded.

In the sixth inning, Puhl slammed his second double of the game to center field to drive in Glenn Davis with the go-ahead run in the Astros 3-2 win over the San Diego Padres Wednesday night.

The power-hitting Davis had tripled to center with two outs to knock in Billy Hatcher with the tying run.

"They were throwing me a lot of breaking balls, Puhl said. "After Glenn chugged all the way to third base, I couldn't bear to leave him there."

Puhl definitely feels the pressure of batting in the fifth spot behind Davis.

"You want to get in there and do well so you can stay," Puhl said. "I'm hitting in a spot where you've got to do something or they move you out. Hitting behind Glenn is tough because he can drive the ball."

Puhl and Davis helped Mike Scott, 10-3, win his third game in six days and also pushed the 33-25 Astros into a three-way tie for third place in the National League West with San Francisco and Cincinnati.

"Three wins in six days is the quickest for me," Scott said. "I'm just out there at the right time."

Houston has won 12 of its last 13 games and the Astros have had to rally in the last four wins.

"That just shows you the character of this team," Puhl said. "Three weeks ago, who'd have thought we were in first place."

Scott pitched seven innings allowing seven hits and two runs while striking out five and walking three before Dave Smith posted his 11th save by working the ninth inning.

"He was very beatable today," San Diego manager Jack McKeon said.

"When you've got Scott on the ropes you've got to cash in. We had more opportunities to win than that."

The Padres took a 2-0 lead in the third inning period. Roberto Alomar's double scored Walt Terrell and Alomar was driven in by Jack Clark's single.

"When I left the game," Scott said, "I was a little tired. In the sixth inning I told them to get someone ready."

Terrell, 4-7, lost despite pitching a complete game. Terrell has dropped two of his three complete games this season.

"It doesn't really matter how well I pitched. I made a bad pitch to Glenn Davis and it was a big mistake. It cost us a ball game."

In Terrell's seven losses, the Padres have scored only 11 runs.

"Obviously, I've been out pitched when we don't win," Terrell said. Houston now leads the major leagues with 17 wins in 27 one-run decisions, but Scott wants the Astros to lead only in the standings.

"We were out by five games a couple of weeks ago, but we're really playing well now," Scott said. "Maybe in a couple of weeks, everyone will be chasing us."

Magic even more important to Lakers

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) - In times of trouble, the Los Angeles Lakers turn to Magic Johnson.

It's that time again.

The Lakers lost one of their top scorers, then lost their intensity and the first game of the NBA Finals to the Detroit Pistons.

With starting guard Byron Scott sidelined at least through tonight's second game of the best-of-7 series, Johnson, who took just 12 shots in Tuesday night's 109-97 loss, must pick up the slack.

"I have to do more and be more assertive," he said. "I have to take more than 12 shots. I have to step up."

That prospect scares Detroit guard Isiah Thomas, who led all scorers with 24 points in the opening game.

"Some people have a nuclear bomb, but they don't have a guy in control who will push the button," he said. "These guys have a guy in control who will push the button. That's not good for Detroit."

Los Angeles coach Pat Riley said he expects "MVP play" tonight from Johnson, the NBA's most valuable player.

"He knows we need more from him now, more leadership and more strength," said Riley, who also needs better play from others.

James Worthy made just six of 18 shots and scored 17 points, tying Johnson for team scoring honors in Game 1. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar had eight points and played only 14 minutes. Michael Cooper, who started for Scott, finished with three points.

"We have to play as a team more now than ever and not get into ourselves," Riley said. Johnson "definitely has to give us more, as does James, but we really have to play better as a unit in all facets of our game, period."

On Tuesday night, Detroit went ahead for good at 20-18, led 55-48 at halftime and by 20 points late in the third quarter. The margin ranged from 13 to 21 points after that.

"Their intensity level will definitely be better in Game 2," Detroit's Bill Laimbeer said. "I don't think they knew what to expect from us after their (eight-day) layoff" following the Western Conference Finals. "Game sharpness and game intensity (are) very hard to maintain during any kind of layoff."

The Pistons also beat the Lakers by 12 points in the opener of last year's title series. But Los Angeles won the second game the same margin and went on to take the series 4-3.

The situation is much different this year as the Lakers seek their third consecutive title.

The Pistons, who hadn't been in the Finals since they moved to Detroit in 1958, now have that experience.

The Lakers don't have Scott, their most dependable outside shooter who had 24 points in Game 2 last year.

He suffered a partial tear in his left hamstring during Monday's practice. His status will be re-evaluated before Sunday's third game in Los Angeles, but he said Wednesday the injury would have sidelined him for at least three weeks if it occurred during the regular season.

Valezuela gains first win of year

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

There were those who wondered whether Fernando Valenzuela would ever win another major-league game. Valenzuela put those doubts to rest - at least for a day - with his first victory in nearly a year as the Los Angeles Dodgers held off the Atlanta Braves 5-4 Wednesday night.

"I waited for a long time. I just want to do my job and hope to be winning again," he said after his first victory since last June 14. "It took a long time to win one game."

Valenzuela had lost a career-high eight straight decisions and was winless in 19 starts. He was not impressive this time but he won in Atlanta, the same place he made his big-league debut on Sept. 15, 1980.

Valenzuela gave up four runs on nine hits in 6 1-3 innings. He walked four and struck out two.

"I feel happy for the first win, but I don't think tonight was one of my best games this year," he said.

In other National League games, St. Louis beat Montreal 5-2, Cincinnati routed San Francisco 12-5, Philadelphia defeated Pittsburgh 7-5, Houston edged San Diego 3-2 and New York downed Chicago 10-5.

Valenzuela, 1-5 with a 4.37 earned run average, has struggled most of the season. There was talk that with his fastball barely at 80 mph, the one-time star of the Dodgers' staff might be through at age 28 - two years younger than current Los Angeles ace Orel Hershiser.

"We're very, very happy that Fernando finally got that first win," Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda said. "To get that win under his belt really helped him a lot."

Valenzuela, a good hitter early in his career, helped himself with a two-run single. It was his first hit in 20 at-bats this season.

Valenzuela took a 5-1 lead into the seventh inning, but Tommy Gregg doubled with one out and Andres Thomas walked. Dale Murphy's RBI single finished Valenzuela.

Ricky Horton got Darrell Evans to pop out and pinch-hitter Dion James greeted Alejandro Pena with an RBI single. Pinch-hitter Jeff Wetherby, in his first major league at-bat, followed with a run-scoring single to center before Jay Howell relieved for his 11th save.

Reds 12, Giants 5

Paul O'Neill homered twice, including a grand slam, and drove in a career-high six runs.

O'Neill hit his first career slam and the first by a Reds' player since last June 14. He also hit a solo home run, his ninth, and an RBI single.

Rick Mahler, 8-5, allowed 10 hits, including solo homers by Terry Kennedy and Candy Maldonado, in his fifth complete game in 14 starts. Alce Hammaker, 5-4, lasted just 1 1-3 innings and gave up seven hits and six earned runs.

Cardinals 5, Expos 2

Tom Brunansky homered and drove in three runs, leading St. Louis past Mark Langston and Montreal.

A crowd of 30,214, the largest in Montreal since opening day, turned out to see Langston in his home debut since being traded by Seattle. Langston, 1-1, pitched seven innings and gave up four runs on seven hits. He struck out eight and walked five.

Ken Hill, 3-4, won for the first time in seven starts since May 4.

Phillies 7, Pirates 5

Curt Ford's pinch single keyed a three-run eighth inning that sent Philadelphia over Pittsburgh.

Ford singled with the bases loaded, breaking a 4-all tie. Darren Daulton's two-run, pinch double provided insurance.

Barry Bonds homered twice for the visiting Pirates.

Reliever Jeff Parrett, 2-4, got the victory. Bob Kipper, 0-3, took the loss.

Mets 10, Cubs 5

Dwight Gooden improved to 17-3 lifetime against Chicago as Kevin McReynolds homered and drove in four runs for New York.

Howard Johnson also homered for the visiting Mets.

Gooden, 7-2, gave up five runs in five innings.

Jays close roof, beat Milwaukee

By The Associated Press

The Toronto Blue Jays' first victory ever in the SkyDome was an open and shut case.

Wednesday's game between Toronto and Milwaukee started under sunny skies, so the roof was left open. However, a heavy downpour hit around the fifth inning and the retractable roof was quickly set in motion.

By the end of the game, almost everyone was dry and the Blue Jays had a 4-2 victory over Milwaukee led by Ernie Whitt's three hits and three RBIs.

The closing operation began at 8:48 p.m. EDT and ended at 9:22 - too late to prevent a six-minute stoppage in play. When the roof is working perfectly, the procedure is scheduled to take 20 minutes. But SkyDome officials are still working out some minor problems.

As three of the four panels moved to cover the stadium, the plate area was left exposed. Home plate umpire Rich Garcia, his shirt soaked, stopped play briefly and ordered a tarp placed over the dirt areas in the infield.

Two sections running up the five levels on the third- and first-base sides were left exposed during the 34-minute operation, forcing the fans to find cover as others sat comfortably.

As the roof closed, the people in the stands stood and cheered.

"I couldn't figure out what was going on," losing pitcher Chris Bosio said. "I thought maybe they traded their whole outfield or something. People here in Canada cheering about a roof. What a joke."

Rob Ducey even felt a little patriotic, being the only Canadian on the Blue Jays.

"To see the dome close during a game was a sight we've been waiting for a long time. I was excited," Ducey said. "Not only as a player and a fan, but as a Canadian. It was an important moment for me."

Elsewhere in the American League it was Oakland 3, Minnesota 2; Kansas City 9, Seattle 6; Boston 6, Detroit 1; Chicago 6, Texas 4; and Cleveland 1, California 0. Baltimore at New York was rained out.

Toronto's John Cerutti, 3-3, took a seven-hit shutout into the ninth when Glenn Braggs singled with one out and Rob Deer followed with his 13th homer. Cerutti allowed 11 hits en route to his first complete game of the season.

Whitt, 3-for-3, blooped a run-scoring double just inside the left-field line and Ducey had an RBI single to put the Blue Jays ahead 2-0 against Bosio, 6-4, in the second inning.

Whitt also had run-scoring singles in the fourth and eighth innings.

Indians 1, Angels 0

Greg Swindell pitched a two-hitter and Luis Medina homered in the seventh inning to snap a scoreless tie.

Swindell, 7-1, pitched his second shutout of the season and seventh of his career.

Medina ended a 1-for-17 slump by hitting a 1-2 pitch from Chuck Finley, 7-4, for his fourth homer.

Red Sox 6, Tigers 1

John Dopson and Rob Murphy combined on a four-hitter as Boston beat Detroit.

Dopson, 6-4, allowed one run and four hits in seven-plus innings and Murphy pitched hitless relief.

Carlos Quintana had a two-run pinch single to give the Red Sox a 2-1 lead in the sixth.

Athletics 3, Twins 2

Rookie Larry Arndt started a three-run fifth inning with his first major-league hit.

Tony Phillips and Dave Henderson hit RBI singles.

Bob Welch, 8-4, got the victory and Todd Burns struck out pinch-hitter Greg Gagne with two outs and runners on first and third for his third save.

Frank Viola, 4-8, took the loss.

Royals 9, Mariners 6

Kevin Seitzer had three hits and three RBIs as Kansas City got 18 hits and beat Seattle at the Kingdome.

Mark Gubicza, 6-4, gave up 12 hits in eight innings. Jeff Montgomery finished for his first save. Bill Swift, 2-2, was the loser.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: President Reagan had surgery on his hand for a condition called Dupuytren's contracture. I have this condition and would like additional information as to its cause, treatment and possible prevention.

To date, it only appears as a slight thickening in the palm of my hand. Lifting weights or using tools such as screwdrivers seems to make the area sore. Do you advise wearing a glove or other protective device for these activities?

DEAR READER: The palm has a thick layer of tissue called fascia just under the skin. Normally it is pliable and stretches easily. In Dupuytren's contracture this tissue thickens and contracts. As it contracts, it may contract the fingers as well, making it impossible to open the hand completely.

The cause is not known, but it is prone to occur in families. The area of thickened and contracted tissue can be surgically removed, returning the function to the hand.

Protecting your hands is fine, but you should see a hand surgeon. If the thickened tissue is allowed to progress too far, before it is removed, it may result in a permanent disability.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713. Although Dr. Lamb cannot reply to all letters personally, he will respond to selected questions in future columns.

EXCELLENT GOOD FAIR POOR DON'T WASTE MONEY

Some really wacky movies opened this week. The best of the lot is... "VAMPIRE'S KISS": Starring Nicolas Cage and Maria Conchita. This is one strange movie -- you are either going to like it a lot, or hate it. If you fall into the latter category, you'll probably walk out shortly after the opening scenes. But if you go: first, you need to be a Nicolas Cage fan, and that's not always easy. This is an actor who has redefined the term overacting. Second, you are going to have to be really laid back to find all the humor. (It will also help if you like vampires.) Nicolas Cage plays a literary agent (The script stretches your imagination from the very beginning) named Pete Loew. He's not a very nice literary agent, either - he's not even a nice person. His main form of entertainment is making the single's bars every night. This makes him unhappy and sends him to the psychiatrist's couch. He tells the psychiatrist that he leads a shallow life and also that he is being visited at night by a bat. That's not too bad - but, he finds this bat very interesting and exciting.

He thinks that his cavorting with the bat has given him a strange disease -- vampirism. (I told you this was a strange movie.) Stranger still - he likes being a vampire. In fact he walks down the street shouting, "I'm a vampire!". Even his girlfriend is strange - she bites him on the neck at night and disappears during the day. You'll have to see the film to find out what happens next. Maria Conchita plays Alva, his browbeaten secretary, and is very good in a difficult role. Jennifer Beals is the girlfriend and Elizabeth Ashley is wasted as his psychiatrist - although she does a fine job with part.

The film is directed by Robert Bierman, a British filmmaker making his American debut. Maybe Robert Bierman is the clue to this movie. You know, the British warped sense of humor. If you laugh at odd and weird things, you'll like this movie. If you don't like or appreciate warped humor - stay away. Rated R. Two Boxes.

For modern western fans... especially young fans...there is... "RENEGADES": Starring Kiefer Sutherland and Lou Diamond Phillips. This is a modern western story about avenging heroes that is strictly formulaic and very predictable. The most enjoyable part of this film are the stunts - they are terrific and well worth seeing. Renegades is all about good guys in white hats and bad guys in black hats - it's that obvious.

The byplay between Kiefer Sutherland and Lou Diamond Phillips is excellent - they establish a wonderful rapport that really comes across on the screen. The two set out to avenge the death of Lou Diamond Phillips' brother. To do so they get into car chases, over-the-rooftop flights and subway car getaways. There's enough action in Renegades to fill two movies.

You'll guess the ending long before you get to it - but you'll enjoy the performances by Lou Diamond Phillips and Kiefer Sutherland along the way. Rated R. Three Boxes.

weeks. His target turns out to be a clumsy botanist (Elaine May). Elaine May, rich beyond belief, and naive to the point of total gullibility, is seeking immortality by searching for a new specimen of plant life (hence one element of the title.)

Walter Matthau is at his sly best and Elaine May demonstrates timing so splendid that it is a real shame that she does not make more movies.

The first-night-on-their-honeymoon scene is so hilarious that you will laugh until you sides hurt and your eyes water - but you will not be the only one. I defy anyone seeing this film not to find at least one scene that will cause them to laugh uproariously. A New Leaf is a true find...certainly not to be missed. Rated PG. Four Boxes. If you don't see Vampire's Kiss but would like to see a good Nicolas Cage comedy then rent "RAISING ARIZONA": (1987) Starring Nicolas Cage and Holly Hunter. Raising Arizona is an almost indescribable lunatic comedy. Nicolas Cage plays an ex-convict married to a policewoman played by Holly Hunter. Both want children but cannot have any. So they decide to help themselves to one. What follows is a delightful offbeat comedy that is extremely fast paced, with eye-popping cinematography and decidedly different characters. Rated PG-13. Four Boxes.

HBO's new 'Tales' not for kids

NEW YORK (AP) - HBO's new anthology series, "Tales from the Crypt," might be based on comic-book stories from the 1940s and 1950s, but it is definitely not for kids.

HBO in fact pitches the series as "an adult anthology," no doubt due to the R-rated nudity, language and violence.

The first three half-hour stories in the series, premiering as a trilogy on June 10 and running separately in June and July, are stylishly directed by top filmmakers Robert Zemeckis ("Back to the Future," "Who Framed Roger Rabbit"), Walter Hill ("48 Hours") and Richard Donner ("Superman," "Lethal Weapon").

The first in the trilogy, "The Man Who Was Death," was directed by Hill and stars Bill Sadler as a state executioner who decides to go free once when the death penalty is outlawed by the Supreme Court.

Zemeckis directed "And All Through the House..." a tasteless Christmas Eve horror story. Larry Drake, who plays the gentle, retarded office assistant from "L.A. Law," is cast here as a homicidal escapee from an insane asylum, roaming a suburban neighborhood dressed as Santa Claus and hatching residents.

Donner's offering is "Dig That Cat... He's Real Gone," an amusingly nasty comedy about a bum (Joe Pantoliano) who is given the nine lives of a cat in a scientist's experiment. The bum, Ulrich, turns the gift into a lucrative circus act, but - and you can see this one coming a mile away - he has a slight problem keeping track of how many lives he's used up.

In between the stories, viewers are entertained by an unpleasant creature-host, the Crypt-Keeper, a special-effects creation of Kevin Yagher, who created the Freddy Krueger makeup and effects for the "Nightmare on Elm Street" movies.

The three stories were originally published by William M. Gaines in the comics Haunt of Fear, Tales from the Crypt and Vault of Horror. Gaines is better known nowadays as the publisher of Mad magazine.

Of the three, the most engaging is "The Man Who Was Death," probably because its death-penalty motif is the most relevant on some other plane than sheer gory entertainment. There's even room from some analysis of the story's symbolism, to-wit: the hypocrisy illustrated by the state's use of the executioner, who finds himself faced with the punishment he had once meted out on behalf of the state just because he did what the state once paid him to do. ... Nah.

The script, by Robert Renau ("Action Jackson") and Hill has some clever if mostly vulgar dialogue. When Niles is cuffed by the prison system, he talks to his bartender about the efficacy of televising executions. "If they put executions on TV, it'd be the highest-rated show ever. Be Nielsen through the roof. Other networks would start killin' people just to compete. Pretty soon Geraldo Rivera be pullin' that switch."

The piece has a film-noir look and an appropriately haunting score by Ry Cooder.

RENTAL MOVIES

If you like really wacky movies; real off-the-wall stories with subtle, genuine humor, then now is the time to recommend an absolute favorite.

"A NEW LEAF": (1971) Starring Walter Matthau and Elaine May. A rare and wonderful triple play from an American female talent: writer-director-star Elaine May. This outstanding talent makes an impressive mark with this latter-day screwball comedy. Her inventiveness keeps you laughing throughout the movie.

Walter Matthau plays a role he was born for - a bankrupt rogue who must find a rich woman to marry, and he must marry within six

TDH To Test School Water For Lead

In response to a new federal law meant to protect children from lead contamination, the Texas Department of Health (TDH) will begin in July to test water samples from all Texas schools and day care facilities.

The Lead Contamination Control Act, signed into law by President Reagan last October, requires that all U.S. schools, kindergartens, and day care centers ensure that drinking fountains are lead-free.

Anthony "Tony" Bennett, of the TDH Division of Water Hygiene, explained that many older water coolers were manufactured with lead-lined tanks, fittings, or lead soldered joints which contaminate the water. "Our lab will be responsible for testing samples from all drinking fountains known to contain lead, as well as some fountains believed to be lead free," he said.

Bennett said that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has compiled a list of the manufacturers and models of coolers that are not leadfree. By using the list and a document called, "Lead in Schools' Drinking Water," school officials and day care operators can learn whether their drinking fountains contain lead components.

Since TDH has been named responsible for informing schools and day care centers of the testing requirements and procedures, the agency has received numerous telephone calls for more detail. "Some school and day care administrators have received their copies of the product list and guidance manual," Bennett said. "But anyone who hasn't should contact the TDH Division of Water Hygiene, at (512)458-7497."

Bennett said that most of the other calls have been to confirm the following:

*The TDH laboratory is the only EPA certified laboratory authorized to conduct lead analysis of water samples required by the new law.

*The lab will begin accepting applications for analyses by July 1, pending approval of the Texas Board of Health.

*The fee for each analysis will be $17.

*Until testing can begin, school officials and day care operators should complete their inventories of the types of water coolers they have, to determine whether any contain lead components.

*Any fountains found to have lead-lined tanks should immediately be removed from service.

*Other coolers which are not known to be lead-free should be flushed for at least three minutes daily before buildings are open for children, to ensure the lowest lead content until testing is complete.

Bennett added that when all details about sampling and testing procedures are complete, TDH will notify schools through the Texas Education Agency and licensed day care centers through the Texas Department of Human Services.
