A Breakfast Table Tragedy in one act

(Reading time: 20 seconds.)

"Right in the eye too," gasped the kid sister disgustedly as a spray of grapefruit drenched the organ in question.

"A-ha! A hole in one-shouted the young brother unsympathetically. After concentrating a moment, the same young brother exclaimed, "I know now why it does that! It backfires.

Even words have histories it seems. Here is what Christopher Morley says about them.

"Any word as you see it here was dipped up from a bottle of Stafford's Jet Black, then hammered out through a typewriter ribbon, then punched in type on slivers of hot lead. It lived for a while on long galley sheets and was murdered, for syntax only not for esthetic ecstasy in the Patient sing song of the proofreader. It was rammed into soft wax, went bathing in acid, drew to itself sparkling wraith-atoms of copper, strengthened itself for the world (as any idealist must) with heavy backing of alloy, lay down on the bed of the press, was run over by rollers of ink and crushed by huge sheets of paper. How alive they are, those presses!"

Speaking of words, one youngster is said by a certain man to have defined quinine of the bark of a tree and canine as the bark of a dog. Other notable boners mentioned are the following: "A sure footed animal is an animal that when it kicks it does not miss," "Milton wrote "Paradise Lost," then his wife died and he wrote "Paradise Regained."

"A complement is when you say something to another which he and we know is not true."

"To keep milk from turning sour you should keep it in the cow."

"A monolog is a conversation between two people, such as a husband and a wife."

"Mushrooms always grow in damp places and so they have to look like umbrellas."

"The animal which possesses the greatest attachment for man is woman."

"Socrates died from an overdose of wedlock."

"The Prodigal Fathers sailed for the New World in 1620."

"Algebra is the wife of Euclid."

"The Declaration of Independence was signed at the bottom."

Loans To Be Made To Aid Farmers In Planting Crops

Regulations relative to loans for crop production from the 50 million-dollar fund made available by congress have been issued by Secretary Hyde. These loans are to be made only when farmers are unable to obtain funds from any other source. They are limited to $400 for any one individual, who must have acreage fit for seeding. Except for truck crops they must not exceed $3 an acre. When the use of fertilizers is necessary loans for all purposes may run to $6 an acre for ordinary crops, $10 for tobacco and $20 for truck crops. Special provision is made for purchase of spray materials. All applicants must agree to use approved seed and methods. The rate of interest will be 5 1/2 per cent as a maximum.

Other restrictions are that applicants must have no other means of livelihood than farming, have operated a farm in 1931 and must limit their acreage to that grown in previous years. Where cotton or tobacco is grown the acreage must not exceed 65 per cent of crops planted last year. Crop mortgages, pledges or liens must be signed by applicants as assurance that government loans will take precedence over other obligations.

These regulations take into consideration the difficulty of adjusting loans with probable excess production. The tendency to obtain government loans without any intention of repayment will meet with conditions that will discourage those who are so minded. The regulations favor constructive farming by those who are absolutely in need of assistance.

If local committees who are responsible for recommendations make the same effort as those who have formulated the rules to direct funds into proper channels little or no criticism of this rehabilitation work will arise. There is a definite indication that funds advanced will be repaid except where drought, flood or hail results in crop failure.

O. E. S. Honors Anniversary Of First President

Social Hour, Supper Follow Patriotic Program

The bi-centennial anniversary of the birth of George Washington was observed with a special program and supper given on Tuesday evening at the Masonic hall by the local chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star.

"The Life of Washington," was the topic of a talk by Miss Ruth Friend. The main events of the life of the great president from his birth in 1732 until his death in 1799 were sketched by Miss Friend, who closed with an appreciation of what Washington has done for our country.

Frass Talks

"Anecdotes of Washington" were discussed by Henry Frass, Jr., Worthy Patron of the Eastern Star. Mr. Frass created much amusement by reading the original cherry tree anecdote and intimate letters of Washington and by his own remarks on the topic.

"Our Washington" a reading, was given by Mrs. J. M. Robinson, Worthy Matron of the local chapter.

Special musical number included vocal duets, "Wrap Me in the Dear Old Flag, Boys," and "Our Homeland," sung by Mrs. M. H. Flock and Mrs. H. Lash. Mrs. Otis Travis accompanied at the piano.

Supper Is Held

The entire chapter participated in singing "America" and in giving the salute to the flag.

Members of the program committee in charge of the Washington program were Mesdames Carson Altmiller, G. A. Jenkins, Hiram Wright, and Stella Beck.

A supper and social hour followed the Washington program.

A Weekly SERMONETTE

THRILLS

By Arthur B. Rhinow.

A young lady whose body was recently found buried in the sand of the beach left a diary in which she says that she experienced about all the thrills that life can give.

Not so. The lady was sadly mistaking.

The diary discloses that her thrills were those of hetic pleasures, the kind that resemble sky-rockets, going up like a streak and a blaze and coming down like a stick. But there are other thrills: the thrills of healthy life. They are like a steady glow.

The delights of physical health alone are keen, when every nerve seems to tingle with eagerness for expression, when brain and body exult with joy in just being alive. What fools we are ever to waste so great a boon.

And the delights of mind are no less fatiguing. To see a truth as in a flash after we tried hard and long to understand is a thrill that no one can appreciate who has not experienced it. And the raptures of art are unspeakably sweet.

To be able to do the work that one really likes, and to work at it with all ones might, is one of lifes deepest satisfactions.

And the thrill of a healthy soul-life! To overcome temptation, to do some good from motives of sheer love, to commune with God in honest prayer to consecrate ourselves to the Almighty unreservedly, so that we are born anew; those are thrills that enrich life.

The hectic thrills of a morbid life, like all intoxication, are followed by depressing reactions; the thrills of the healthy life are a joy forever.

Let's Clean Up Our Town

Clean-up week for Darrouzett has been set for the first week in March by the local Chamber of Commerce.

Beginning immediately every citizen of the community should see that his premises are cleared off as much as possible. Trash, tin cans, and other rubbish should be removed or burned. Vacant lot should be cleared of weeds and all trash.

Situated as it is between two creeks lined with trees, Darrouzett has perhaps the most beautiful location of any town in the county. A little effort on the part of its inhabitants to keep it cleaned up would do much toward making it the most attractive little village of its size anywhere around.

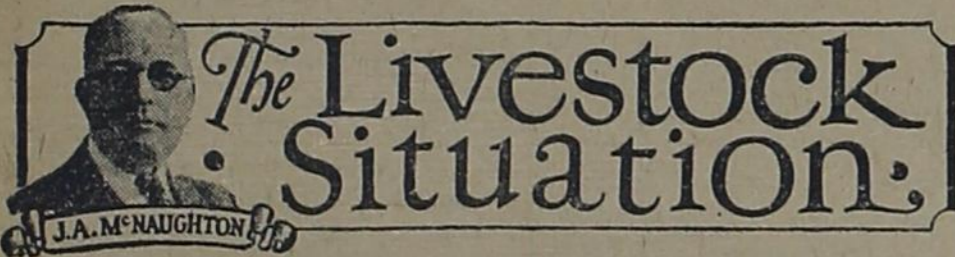

LETTERS

Letters, letters, that dart across the miles,
Some of them are stark with pain—but some are wreathed in smiles.

Letters, letters that cross the seven seas,
Some are touched with tragedy—some blossom with soul 'sease.

Bringing me a sense of peace, and loveliness and wonder.

Letters, letters—from friends placed far apart,
Oh, their messages are balm upon a tired heart!

The livestock trade was somewhat surprised to receive Government estimates showing an increase in the number of cattle, hog and sheep on farms as of January 1, 1932.

The number of milk cows have increased, according to the government estimate, notwithstanding the depressed condition of the market for milk and dairy products, and the wholesale marketing of dairy stock through beef channels. A decrease is shown in numbers of horses and mules.

Many close observers were of the opinion that the depressed markets, drought and forced liquidations had caused a decrease in cattle numbers. However, the government report indicates that numbers of all cattle, including dairy stock totaled 62,407,000 in 1930. These figures include animals in feedlots.

Hog numbers made a substantial increase in 1931, according to the report, the January 1st estimate being 59,511,000 head, as compared to 53,370,000 a year ago and 55,511,000 two years ago. This increase should not be unduly bearish, however, as there have been many times during the past thirty two years when there were a great many more hogs on farms. January 1st estimates in 1900 placed the number of hogs on farms at 62,868,000; 1908 61,300,000; 1928, 61,200,000; 1919, 63,800,000; 1923, 69,044,000; 1924, 63,361,000 head. After perusing these figures, it may be assumed that hog numbers do not present a statistical oversupply although of course, supply tells only half the story, as demand must also anything like a normal domestic and export demand, hog numbers could not be considered burdensome.

Sheep numbers show a decrease, although this was not true in California estimates. The total number of sheep in the United States is estimated at 51,383,000 two years ago. California is credited with 3,444,000 3,588,000 sheep and lamb population with Texas first with 7,312,000; and Montana third with 3,820,000. increased to 672,000 compared with 560,000 a year ago and 590,000 two years ago. The eleven Western states are now credited with 2,333,000 a year ago and 2,248,000 two years ago.

Grazing conditions in California this year promised to be the most satisfactory in a long time, as a result of general rains which have brought precipitation in most parts of the state above normal. Low temperatures held back feed growth during the winter but the unusually good spring feed seems assured. It is also likely that bumper crops of grain will be had.

In driving through the country, it is apparent to this writer that cattle supplies are far below normal on the ranges. After several short years because of drought, range feed this year should be unusually good and it probably is just as well if there are fewer cattle, as this gives the range growth a chance to sort of recuperate and will increase carrying capacity in many districts.

There are reports of heavy death losses of ewes and early lambs in many parts of California—a result of heavy rains, cold weather and shortage of feed last fall to build up resistance of ewes. Losses through the sheep raising districts are variously estimated at 5 to 15 per cent, the heaviest in the past ten years. Spring lambs are about 2 weeks later this year than last, and it is likely that California's early lambs will be marketed over a longer period of time than usual. This is because of the promised abundance of cheap feed and it is believed that owners will feel disposed to market their

The Preacher Who Ran Away From His Congregation

He had a large congregation—undoubtedly several thousand in number—and interested. For had he not miraculously fed and healed them, and was he not seriously mentioned as the one to lead them to freedom against their conquerors?

In the narrowest streets of the village they thronged him, jostling to catch a glimpse of him even from windows and rooftops. What an opportunity to cram them with truths! But he, pressing his way through their midst, set off up the street.

For a time they all followed him, but it was not easy for one to keep up with his stride, and some began to drop out—those who had come to him to be healed of their physical infirmities, the curious, the critical. At the edge of the village still others turned back. And when they realized that he was leading them up a mountain trail, more and more of them gave up the quest. Until, as he rested at last, far up the slopes, and glanced back at the sound of voices, it was to find only a few straggling followers. To these he gave the sermon on the Mount.

Why to these few instead of the thousands? Because those of all who had started out, meant business—were willing to go all the way. Jesus needed then, as he needs today, not those who center life around healing and the purly physical. He wants for his followers those who believe in him enough to follow him up the mountains—people who means business, people to whom his business is the greatest business in the world. —By Worth Stewart of St. Paul Minn.

Here is one of the phase of the prohibition success that does not receive headline attention, but which indicates very decidedly the benefits derived from the Eighteenth Amendment. It comes to us from the W. C. T. U. Survey. "The Passing of the Keely Cure."

"In the place of the Keely Cure Institute branches and three hundred competing institutions there is now only the parent institution at Dwight running at around 35 to 50 patients, with a dozen 'branches' most of them very small."

If for nothing else is it not a blessing to humanity to remove drink from those who desire not to drink but who have not the power to resist the temptations set before them on every hand. Stand by this great blessing—the Eighteenth Amendment, else we or ours might be brought under its clutching influences sometime.

lams at somewhat heavier weight than the majority of trade interests will desire.

There has been little to inspire confidence in the market since the opening of the new year. Hog and cattle prices generally over the country are lower than at any period in 1931. It appears that consumer purchasing power for the present, at least, is less than any time in years. Producers may find some solace in the fact that meat is a more popular item of the Southern California than ever before, probably because prices of meats now offer the most real food for a given amount of money. That there is an appreciation of this fact is evidenced by greatly increased slaughter records in Southern California.

It is apparent that the livestock interests must wait for some definite improvement in business conditions before they can expect a material improvement in market values.

"The proposition was kept before our people by a display advertisement in the county paper several weeks prior to corn planting time. As a result we have more corn raised in the county this year than ever previously, regardless of the need of rain in many sections," said one of the bankers in reviewing the results. Third and Fourth Grade Activities

Monday was George Washington's birthday and all the students had a very busy day. A flag was hung in the front of the room before nine o'clock and three girls placed a stencil of colors of Washington on the board. Sentences concerning his life in colored chalk.

Last week some new art work was attempted which proved very interesting as well as constructive. All sorts of figures were carved from soap of several different colors. Some of the rabbits, elephants, clocks, etc. looked almost as real as the original.

Health inspectors for this week are Jewell Fiskin, Loren Fausset and Claud Hamilton.

Monday the entire English period of both grades was spent in paying tribute to Washington. A branch from a tree had been secured and cut to represent the 'famous cherry tree' then was put in the sandtable with young Washington standing near it with a hatchet in hand. His father was standing near the tree, also, supposly questioning George about it.

In English, students acted this out striving to say what was said between the two. Short stories were told about Washington's honesty and his life; the period closed by saluting the flag.

Health classes of both grades suggested their own plan to encourage good health habits in the rooms. The teacher was asked to draw a large castle which is to be the students health castle. They are to build the rock walls of all colored rocks and are to be shaped in fruits and vegetables. A boy or girl does not have the privilege of helping build it unless the rules of health; brushing the teeth, etc. have been folowed.

The castle is drawn and on the wall, all ready for work to be begun on it.

Jack Phillips is dinner pail monitor for this week.

Ross Montgomery has charge of the reading table, and Dorothy Stransko and Frances Fausset are the new housekeeper.

WANTED: Six white Minorca hens. See or telephone Mrs. Laura M. Draper, Darrouzett, Texas.

Dear Doc,
 Say Doc— Some guy played an onery trick on me the other day, and I want to get even with him without hurting him. Please suggest some plan not dangerous to him or me that will cause folks to laugh at him for a change. The horse laugh does not fit well with A mule.
 A. M. Ule.

Mr. Ule,
 I must say that you have me cross-reined. I've been in the same fix a hundred times and no two plans will work more than once.

Maybe this will help you though. Pull that old one about the pile of apples where he will make three trips and take half of the apples there each time until he has one apple left. If he can work it I forfeit my bet, $0,005 that it couldn't be done, to you.
 Yours mandably,
 Doc.

The Mystery of Prospector's Cave

A Serial Written By The DARROUZETT PRESS CLUB Installment No. Three
 by Willard Smith

John pulled his gun again and started down the tunnel to find out what the scream came from. He came around a bend and saw Rachel lying on the ground. Rushing over to her he began trying to revive her.

At last she came to. The two young people decided to see what had made such a noise. As they walked along, they could hear a low growl and a sound of scratching. Suddenly Rachel clutched John's arm. "Look! There's a light. Is that one of its eyes?" she asked.

"No, that's a lantern. And look, there's a man beside it. Why he must be crazy the way he is digging. He acts as though he found something. D'you reckon he's struck gold? John whispered excitedly, as they drew closer.

Again Rachel clutched Millers arm. "John, thats Escrim. He's supposed to be at the house with Lee watching him! How did he get away. Where is Lee? Oh! Look at him!

The old man whirled around savagly as he heard their footsteps. Still clutching the shovel he muttered, "What uh doing here? Get out, While you healthy!

"Oh, Mr. Escrimm. Dont take a brain storm; we only heard a yell and came to see what it was. Was it you?" said Rachel soothingly.

"Yeah, I reckon I did. But consarn it, who would'nt if they found what they had been looking for all their lives. Course its only a little vein, but it'll pay. Say! What are you doing here anyway. And I thought you hated John, Rachel. Ha. you should jump! Heh! Heh- What a fine match tho!" he ended.

John started to explain. "Well from Rachel. "Look! Water! Com-Miller was interrupted by a scream from Rachel. "Look! Water! Coming from that hole. Look out, Mr. Escrimm. Its coming faster!"

The old man grabbed an armfull of tools and started to run toward the entrance. John seized Rachel's hand and followed Escrimm.

Suddenly the water spouted forth in a large stream, covering the floor of the cave. Almost at once it became ankle deep. Then the roof caved in ahead of them. The icy water swirled up around their knees, getting deeper every second. "We'll be drowned like rats in a trap! No one will ever know where we are! Rachels brain pounded out in a sickening dizziness.

Boys Sport News

The basketball season is over but it is being followed by as busy a season, (the interscholastic meet.) The days since the tournament have been filled with preparations for the meet. The last few days we have been having eliminations in tennis.

Character Sketches

Listen: I am that dignified Senior president. I have the prettiest brown hair. If people do not notice it I call their attention to it. I drag a lot of power around the press club too. Who am I?

I am a little sophomore. I have blue eyes and dark hair. I live up to the old maxim—"Little boys do mischief. Who am I?"

What is that? Oh that wee little sophomore. So small yet so mighty. My hair is tipped with gold, and my nose is tipped to. As for my hobby, please give me a basketball with-out a guard, that is as big as some that I know, and I do like declaiming without a audience. Guess who I am?

Primary Room Notes

By MRS. J. E. SPEER

About one-third of the students from the primary room was absent all of last week because of the flu and chicken pox.

Washington's birthday was celebrated in the primary room on Monday; small red, and white, and blue hatches were placed on the windows and a story was told of Washington, and the cherry tree, all students learned how to salute the flag, and the second grade gave a play from their book, called, "The First Flag".

The students of Mrs. Hennigh's room and those of the primary room are having a contest to see which group can keep their room the cleaner for the week. Mr. Chappel decided each afternoon which is the cleaner.

Dorothy Woods brought two new books to school on Monday.

The students of the primary room were busy all of last week making posters about Washington and the Indians.

Pupils in the room, with the exception of one, are all back in school again.

The choral singing group is learning to sing "America" now.

Fifth and Sixth Grade Notes

By MRS. RUTH WRIGHT

Several pupils were absent from our room last week on account of illness. Oscar Taylor and Rachel Littau had the 'flu'; Marie Bellah had the severe cold and cough, and Erma Hennigh had the chicken pox. We hope that they will all recover and be able to attend school again soon.

Friday morning we had the final elimination contest in spelling. Helen Hanschu and Wilma Lash will be our entries for the county contest. The two alternatives have not been decided definitely.

Each member of the fifth grade history class presented his own idea of the Battle of Quebec with original drawings. The St. Lawrence River the city of Buebec, position of the French, and the English climbing the steep cliff were all shown by the sketches.

During citizenship class Thursday we began making George Washington booklets. On each page of the book is given a different phase of Washington life in very brief forms.

We find that map drawing helps us a great deal in learning geography of different sections of the country. The sixth grade is making maps of the North Central States and locating on them the principal crops grown, and sections noted for coal, salt, lead, zinc, iron and copper mining.

The fifth grade drew maps of France and located important manufacturing towns, three large rivers, and one mountain range.

Friday afternoon we had only nine pupils in our room after recess as some of the girls went to Sunset to play groundball. The last thirty minutes we played number games and had a jumble word contest.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Mosley and son, Lloyd were in Perryton on Sunday.

Miss Gwen Pugh spent Thursday night with Mrs. J. W. Clark.

Gilbert Terrel of Follett visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Terrel on Sunday.

A. H. Montgomery and J. H. Carter went to Beaver, Okla., on business Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Perry and sons were in Follett on Sunday visiting Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Perry.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Perry and sons visited Mr. and Mrs. "Tooter" Smith on Sunday evening.
