It Should Net A Good Return

Approval of a grant of $25,800.00 through the State Health Department to help finance the modernization of Rising Star's sewage disposal plant assures this project of reality. And not a moment too soon.

The grant and the proceeds of approximately $65,000.00 of revenue bonds make it possible to relocate the old, out-moded treatment plant and to rebuild it on a design which will insure the most effective and modern treatment of the City's waste, eliminating a serious health and water pollution hazard.

Of major importance is the fact that by getting rid of the noisome odors that sometimes spread over an area east of town through which Highway 36 arrives—not a very complimentary atmosphere of introduction to our community, you will agree—one very real deterrent to the residential and commercial development of a most attractive part of the community will have been eliminated.

It is reasonable to suggest that the Rising Star area will gain improvements and increased values worth many times the investment in the project.

The City is to be commended for undertaking the project and the citizens for supporting it.

There are other improvements that need to be made, but they will come. A community which has kept itself in good financial condition, which owes only what it can pay without excessive taxes, is in a good position to accomplish these improvements.

Not An Invitation to Excess

A new 70-mile-an-hour speed limit will go into effect on Texas highways within a few days. The new limit recognizes the excellent character of Texas highways, the high standards of road construction, including the most advanced safety features, that enter into their design and building, and the capabilities of the modern automobile. On much of the Texas highway system a speed limit of 60 miles an hour was too restrictive.

But it is only reasonable to point out that the 70-mile-per-hour allowable is the TOP speed allowed by law. Moreover, it is not permissible on all highways. And it certainly does not overrule the obligation that every motorist assumes to operate his car with due regard to the conditions and hazards existing about him.

Many sections of the State's highways will be zoned to speeds which engineers of the State Highway Department find prudent for those sections, and motorists will be required to observe these restrictions.

But no matter how carefully speed regulations may be engineered, no matter how well highways are designed and built, how good mechanically an automobile may be, or how well the regulations governing traffic are enforced, there is no safety factor that can take the place of the conscientious motorist. Highway safety, in the end, depends upon his skill, circumspection and good judgment. And, we might add, his essential courtesy.

The higher speed limit is not an invitation to "stretch it" a mile or so. The new limit is a concession to traffic realities and good highways. If it becomes an invitation to excess in the mind of the careless motorist, it will be most unfortunate.

Something to Face up To

Our hat is off to Philip Cortney, an industrialist who believes with the 17th century philosopher, Thomas Fuller, that: "Moderation is the silken string running through the pearl-chain of all virtues." Specifically, Mr. Cortney is uneasy lest an individual consumer may buy and use more of his product than she should!

"In the mysterious and wonderful way in which teenage girls reach for the distant star of adulthood and maturity," he says, "cosmetics play a part, sometimes subtle, too often obvious."

Mr. Cortney, like the rest of us, is all far advancing the "innate and natural feminine urge for beauty in spirit and appearance," but, as head of Coty, Inc., urges restraint in the use of cosmetics. In fact his firm is distributing to teenage girls everywhere "who are all living the adventure of growing and learning" the six-point "Coty Credo" that offers some advice that mere parents might not dare mention.

"The use of cosmetics is an art," says the credo, "requiring intelligence, refinement of taste and practice to develop. Give it the time and devotion it deserves."

The purpose of cosmetics, it notes, is to enhance the uniquely personal qualities of beauty" every girl possesses, not to mar or conceal them. Warning against "exaggerated make-up," the Credo points out that cosmetics are "an aid and not an alternative to true glamor and loveliness."

It reminds young ladies that individuality comes from an enriched mind and spirit" and that enjoyment of music, literature, the arts and nature rank with good grooming as beauty aids. And since, as Mr. Cortney's directive points out, beauty is a development of body, mind and spirit, "cosmetics are (properly) an extension of personality and not a substitute for it."

It would be nice if all of America's teenage young ladies were to paste Mr. Cortney's message on their dressing table mirrors — where their older sisters and mothers might see it too.—Washington Exclusive.

Letters to The Editor

Dear Editor:
Enclosed is a check for the Rising Star paper. Correct us if this is not correct.
Please publish this letter. We are urging our citizens here to write our congress on these matters. I hope your town has started it, too. If not, find more material and inform the people how the communists are taking over our country.
For more information write: Mrs. Ralph Clark, 715, E. Baja, Hobbs, New Mexico. Sincerely, Mrs. C. W. Walker. Hobbs, New Mexico July 15, 1963

TO THE EDITOR:
In September of 1961, Congress approved a bill to establish the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, programmed to negotiate peaceful disarmament of the United States and allies and the Soviet Union "in order to promote world-wide prevention of future wars." The list of fifteen Senators and sixty-nine Representatives who voted against this bill does not include our two Senators and two Representatives from New Mexico.
The agency submitted a plan to the Geneva conference which was printed in forms by the State Department and the Disarmament Agency and made available to the public. The step-by-step plan proposes to reduce the military strength of the United States and allied nations, and the co-operation of the Soviet Union to proceed in like manner with her military strength. As the armed forces of each nation is reduced, the armed force of the United Nations is built up, by materials, equipment and personnel, to a force capable of dealing with international affairs on a world basis. The individual nations will be left with only forces necessary to deal with local and internal affairs. There are points involving small arms and privately-owned equipment.
In the two years since 1961, one fact most clearly recognized is that the United States can be, and is being, disarmed unilaterally, and with very little effort except the demands of the Soviet Union contingent to their signing the proposed treaty of disarmament and arms control.
The Disarmament Agency recently received the Senate's approval of additional funds, in spite of a reported $8 million. The agency has no need of additional funds unless the authorized funds have been diverted to other agencies or departments.
Four house bills, now in committee, are worded exactly like Senate Bill S. 777. They are H. R. 5917, 6082, 6130, and 6294. One of them will soon be selected and sent to the House for approval.
There is also a proposed amendment in Committee introduced by Sen. Curtis, Senate Concurrent Resolutions

No. 21, and by Rep. Bursleson, a House Concurrent Resolution No. 83. This Resolution is referred to as the Bursleson-Curtis Amendment to the Disarmament Act. It proposes the following points:
"1—Complete on-the-spot inspection of all areas involved in arms control or disarmament, with Members of Congress included as members of the inspection team.
2—Reporting of the President of the United States to appropriate committees of Congress, any and all steps taken by him which would tend to alter ratios of weapons and effectiveness between this nation and its allies, and the Soviet bloc of nations and
3—All preliminary and final arms control or disarmament agreement be embodied in treaties subject to the advise and consent of the Senate of the United States.
These safeguards seem essential to any treaty of disarmament signed by the United States, and it is incredible that they weren't written into plan of arms control and disarmament.
It seems time for serious consideration and an honest evaluation of the functions of the Disarmament Agency, and the ways they affect our individual and national lives.

Dear Editor:
I have just returned from a month's visit in California and Old Mexico—object, fun and relaxation.
However, as usual, the "teacher" came out, and while enjoying deep sea fishing, the Flip, the zoo, the electronic mysteries of the new Centaur, and various un-scholarly pursuits, I was most impressed with hearing Dr. Max Rafferty speak.
He is the newly elected California State Superintendent of Public Instruction and his lion's roar is being heard throughout the nation. His book, "Suffer Little Children," is an incendiary indictment, destroying the icons of progressive education.
The following are quotes: ". . . A return to the sinewy three R's, the well-sung heroes, and enlightened inquiry. He would encourage the gifted student, boot the switchblade-carrying slob out . . . Public education, dedicated to ineptness, conformity, and mediocrity, has crippled the minds of American youth."
"We are teaching trivia."
". . . Hurl the eternal lie into the teeth of those who decry the significance of subject matter, who sneer at history and poetry and mythology and all those magical creations of the human mind which have raised man to a place a little lower than the gods."
"There is really only one great problem in American Education today . . . This is the tragedy of declining

IT'S THE LAW in Texas

JURY DUTY
Jury duty is an experience that everybody ought to have. In a criminal case twelve jurors have a duty to do justice as each one sees it, and yet be unanimous. In most trials both sides have much to say, and the evidence is conflicting. The jurors vary in their ability, temperament, character, education, and their experience in the world, and in the question at stake.
Yet a jury made up of both sexes, with wide age and educational differences, jobs and origins must all come up with the same verdict. Upon their verdict much depends—the life or liberty of others, and the public good. So it may take them days of talking among themselves all to agree.
Jury duty calls for insight, common sense, courage, tact, fairmindedness, patience, (especially toward the jurors who disagree with you), good humor, tolerance, balance, willingness to hear others out and change one's mind, readiness to go over the facts to find something to bring agreement. In short, jury duty demands a "decent respect for the opinion" of others.
More and more women share civic duties, especially as jurors.
Time was in Texas when women could not serve on juries. They still cannot in four states.
A jury finds facts. It hears. It hears and weighs evidence then comes to a verdict. It does not make the law—the legislature does; and the judge "charges" or instructs the jury concerning the law applicable to the particular case it is considering.
The judge will tell you not find the accused guilty until he is proved so under strict rules of evidence. If you have any "reasonable doubt,"—not imaginary or far-fetched—acquit the accused.
(intellectual) standards." The Philistines are still strong among us. They scoff at standards. They deride the importance of culture. They stand squarely athwart the path which leads upward to the golden highlands of literacy and scholarship. They represent a sullen, leaden menace to us all."

Weed It Out
A Burford, England, Miss won first place in a weed-growing contest with a weed 134 inches long.
Rustling Wind
In the days of the Old West, Montana ranchers feared the cattle rustler. However, a Great Falls, Mont., farmer discovered that some hombre had harvested 26 acres of his wheat, worth about $1,500, and hauled it away.

Browsing With Bev

By Beverley Nicholson, County HD Agent

Some of the best times a family can have together are at picnics and backyard cookouts—and some of the best eating is kabobs.

Although in the near East a shish-kabob must be made of lamb, in the United States anything goes. Kabob combinations are as limitless as your imagination.

Right now, beef, chicken, and summer vegetables appear on the U. S. Department of Agriculture's list of plentiful. Try pork, fish, and the occasional lamb on a stick.

Select foods that require approximately the same cooking time. Alternate meats and vegetables on the skewer, keeping each piece away from the next so the heat can reach all sides.

For extra flavor, marinate the meat for a few hours or overnight in a seasoned vinegar sauce. Spoon the sauce over the meat as it cooks. Broiling will take 10 to 16 minutes, depending on how well done you want the meat.

Here are some kabob combinations you might want to try—

Beef cubes, mushrooms and sliced onions.

Franks cut into 1-inch pieces, pineapple chunks and sliced bacon.

Chicken livers, slices of bacon and mushrooms.

Beef cubes with quartered tomatoes, carrots and small cooked onions.

Cubes of bologna, sliced onions and sliced bacon.

Ham with sweet potato and pineapple chunks.

To serve, push the cooked kabob from the skewer onto a toasted bun, a chunk of split French bread, or directly onto the plate.

Stockmen Warned Of Prussic Acid Poison Danger

College Station—Stockmen in many sections of the state with grazed-out pastures are turning to supplemental pastures including drought stunted plants of the sorghum family. Dr. C. M. Patterson, veterinarian for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, points out that some danger of poisoning exists when these plants are grazed.

The danger is from prussic acid, he explains. Prussic acid is the breakdown product of a glucoside normally present in some young, actively growing plants. It does not occur in a plant unless the growth is stopped by moisture stress or frost. Moisture stress may result from inadequate soil moisture or from excess moisture loss due to high temperatures and low relative humidity.

Dr. Patterson says all members of the sorghum family, including Johnsongrass and Sudan, produce the glucoside under favorable levels of fertility and that this group of plants is the most dangerous of commonly grazed forages. The more luxuriant the plant growth, the more likely it will be dangerous when wilted.

If moisture stress is from depleted soil moisture, the plants may remain toxic for long periods of time. If hot, dry winds cause the stress, the plants may be toxic only during the periods when evaporative losses exceed the plant's ability to pick up moisture from the soil. To illustrate, hungry animals turned into a field during the hot afternoon might be poisoned, but if turned in early in the morning, might fill up and quit grazing during the period of one day, when the forage would be toxic.

Younger plants have a higher glucoside content than plants nearing maturity; therefore, if wilted would be more toxic. He suggests grazing a few animals on fields in question early in the morning and under close watch for an hour. If no trouble occurs, it should be safe to turn in the herd. But, if any animal shows a tendency to become restless and breathe fast, get them out in a hurry. Death or recovery usually happens within an hour or two. Drenching with a syrup or sugar solution slows the release of prussic acid in the rumen, but a veterinarian should be called immediately for further treatment.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Smith and two daughters visited Mrs. Smith's sister in Brady and spent some time on the San Saba river.

Comanche Riders Will Sponsor Junior Rodeo

The Comanche Roping Club will sponsor and produce an American Junior Rodeo Association approved rodeo, August 15-16, 17, each at night at 8 p.m. Approximately 200 contestants from Texas, Oklahoma, and New Mexico are expected to participate in this first AJRA show for Comanche.

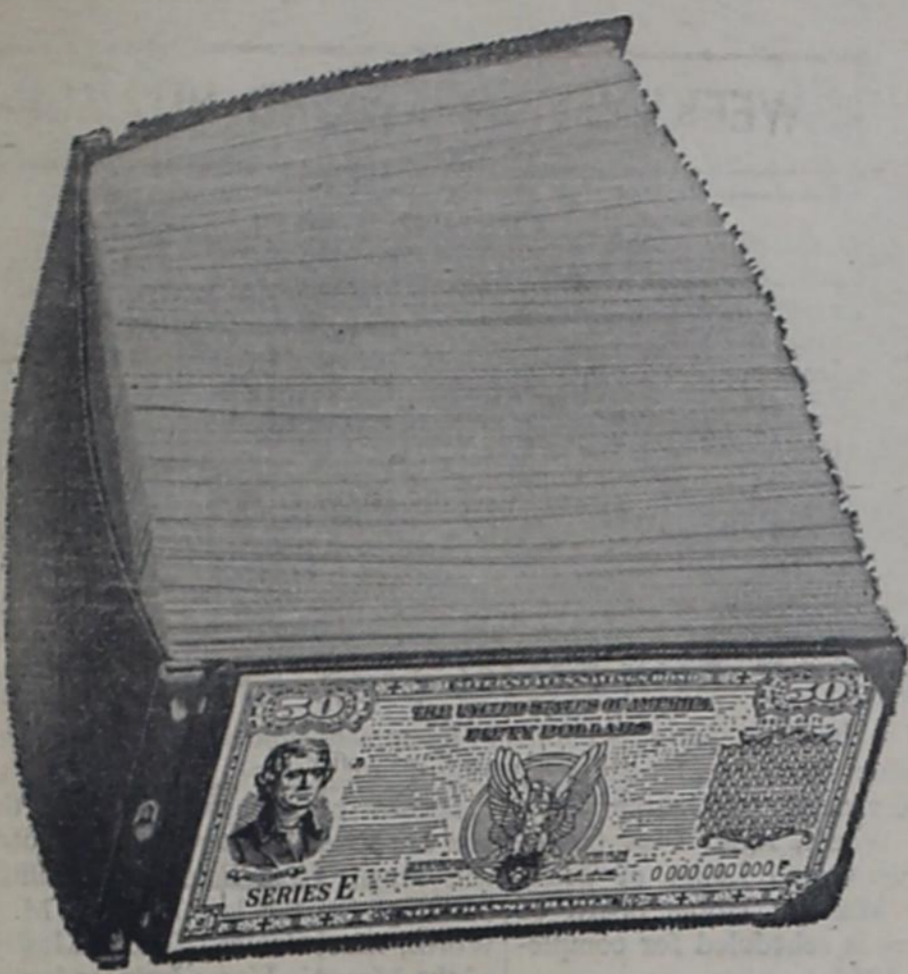

The American Junior Rodeo Association is made up of approximately 600 members from all over the United States but the membership is concentrated mostly in Texas, Oklahoma, and New Mexico. The boys and girls pay entry fees and contest for the entry fee purse plus AJRA points which are counted as a contestant wins at the different shows. Approximately 29 annual championships are decided and championship awards are made each year at the National AJR Finals Rodeo—which will be held this year August 21-24 in Odessa, Texas.

Contestants will be competing for approximately $2,000 worth of prizes in the Comanche show which will represent one of the biggest prize lists of the year in AJRA rodeo. Non-members are welcome.

Biggest "savings book" in the world

Keeping the Free World free is a mighty expensive proposition.

And our enemies are doing everything they can to make it so. They've said they expect to "bury us" economically.

They see us as soft, self-satisfied, lazy. They don't think we're prepared to make any sacrifices for freedom.

But there's a "special book" in the U. S. Treasury Department that says they're as wrong about that as they are about a lot of other things.

It's a symbolic "freedom book" which shows that tens of millions of American families have invested 46 billions of dollars in their country in the form of U. S. Savings Bonds. Dollars the government uses to keep our economy strong. To help keep the Free World free.

This is one way you can meet the challenge to Americans. And there's no need to feel funny about collecting good interest on Savings Bonds. The financial strength of your family is part of the strength of the nation.

So help yourself as you help your country, by regular purchase of U. S. Savings Bonds . . . through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work, or from any bank.

Quick facts about U.S. Savings Bonds

- You get $4 for every $3 at maturity
- Your Bonds are replaced free if lost, stolen or destroyed
- You can get your money anytime
- You can save automatically on Payroll Savings

New Speed Limit Goes Into Effect On August 23rd

AUSTIN—More than two-thirds of the Texas highway system will come under the new 70-miles-per-hour daytime maximum speed for passenger cars which becomes effective August 23, the Texas Highway Commission revealed today.

Under the speed control law all highways not zoned down by the Commission will automatically go to the new 70-mph speed August 23. This means that some 41,500 miles of the state maintained highway system will be allowed to come under the higher maximum speed.

The commission passed a Minute Order which zoned some 18,640 miles of the highway system at a maximum of 60 mph daytime and 55 mph at night for passenger cars, effective August 23. These highways will be restricted to the lower speed limit because engineering studies indicate they are inadequate to accommodate a 70 mph maximum.

The Commission's action followed a series of engineering traffic studies conducted throughout the state by the Highway Department's 25 highway districts.

A large percentage of Texas' Farm to Market Road System will come under the 70-mph maximum, although some of these roads (and some of the older primary routes) will be restricted to the lower 60-mph maximum where conditions warrant.

THE DOLLAR YOU SPEND FOR ELECTRICITY BUYS MORE THAN EVER BEFORE

How much is your monthly electric service bill? Probably more than in years past. But that's because you use more electricity today and NOT because the rate is higher.

Truth of the matter is that as the cost of living has gone up and up, the average cost of a kilowatt hour of electricity used in West Texas homes is 17% less than 10 years ago.

But the USE of electricity has increased; many homes today are using twice as much. Using more and getting more customer benefits, for today there are 166 wonderful electric ways to bring more comfort and convenience into the home, to save time and to eliminate drudgery. Use in the long summer months may be even heavier, because of continuous use of air conditioning.

Yes, the dollar you spend for electricity buys more than ever before. It's today's best value, biggest bargain.
