Death Toll of Eight Forecast For July Fourth

AUSTIN — The Director of the Texas Department of Public Safety reported today that past experience indicates eight persons will be killed in traffic accidents during the coming Fourth of July holiday in Texas.

Colonel Homer Garrison, Jr. announced that "Operation Motorcide" will be in effect from 12:01 a.m. through 11:59 p.m. July 4, and that during this period the regular Highway Patrol force will be joined by units of the License and Weight and Motor Vehicle Inspection services in the general traffic supervision effort.

Garrison called for the "cooperation of all Texas drivers to help prove that the estimate of eight traffic deaths compiled by our Statistical Services Section is too high." He continued: "The Fourth of July marks the mid-point of the summer vacation period, when Texans are really on the move. It is the time of the year when they go more places to see wonders Texas offers its vacationers."

"With the tempo of travel picking up it is important to drive according to traffic laws and regulations — the rules set down for the protection of the driving public.

"Common sense says it is hard for a person to enjoy a trip if he is constantly squirming out of dangerous traffic situations caused by unlawful driving — his own or someone else's."

Garrison said the Fourth of July could be the turning point in the battle against death on the highways this year. During the first five months department records showed a six per cent rise as compared with the same period in 1961.

The public safety director cited the large number of wrecks which have occurred in recent weeks. The first few days in June five accidents killed 24 persons and, in each accident at least one traffic violation was a causative factor. As usually the case, he said, the most common of these were excessive speed, driving while drinking, improper passing or driving with defective equipment.

"Operation Motorcide" is a program designed to focus public attention on the added dangers of traveling by motor vehicle during holiday periods, Garrison explained. During the 24-hour period of the Fourth of July, all fatalities resulting from traffic accidents over the state will be tabulated. Motorcide bulletin will be issued at 10 a.m., 3 p.m. and 8:30 p.m., with a summary bulletin to be issued the morning of July 5.

MRS. WINDHAM DIES

Mrs. T. M. Windham, widow of "Top" Windham of the Byrd's Store community, died Tuesday.

Site For Gas Plant Bought

Purchase of a tract of three acres from L. J. (Buck) Collins just southeast of Rising Star by the United Conservation Gas Co. has been consummated and work of grading the tract as the site of a reported gasoline plant was under way. A water well has been drilled.

The company, of which William J. Cray of Denver City is president, has made no announcement of its plans as yet, but it was understood that contracts have been made with gas producers in the area to supply natural gas for the plant which it is reported would manufacture propane, butane and other petrochemicals.

Contracts were said to have been made with Joyce Brothers, N. M. Dillard, Rudco and Coastal States all of whom have gas producing wells in the area.

It was understood that orders have been placed for equipment to erect a plant of 6,000,000 cubic feet per day capacity, and that if the project proves as feasible as anticipated, the plant capacity would eventually be increased to several times that figure.

Building of forms for the foundation will await confirmation of machinery orders, it was said.

Three Rising Star Boys Catch Record Fish At Brownwood

Three Rising Star boys — Coy Edmiston, Darwin Cain and Larry Nichols — are credited with having landed the biggest fish to be caught at Lake Brownwood so far this year.

The fish, a yellow cat weighing 28 pounds, was caught on a trot line. It required a lot of effort to get the big catch off the hook and into a boat, the boys said. They had no gaff. It measured 38½ inches in length.

The catch was made at what is known as Anderson's Bend and perch bait was used.

Master Plan Needed, RAD Specialist Tells Group In Meeting At Eastland

EASTLAND — Approximately 35 persons were told recently in Eastland that cooperation is the key to the economic re-vitalization of this county.

Frank W. Sheppard, specialist in rural area development of the Texas A&M Agricultural Extension Service, was the main speaker, and explained the varied programs now being tried over the county.

Backgrounding his talk, Sheppard explained that re-development is necessary because of the mechanization revolution.

Mechanization has created a condition, he said, in which there is more and more farm product produced every year but with less and less labor help needed. This has resulted in farm families being forced out of farming unless they are able to make the step to large-scale technological advances necessary to compete.

There was a decrease of 1,000 farm families in this county in one ten-year period, he said.

And the soil bank program has shown that these effects are felt throughout an area. Even though the farmer gets a soil bank check, the implement dealer and the seed supplier in town report drops in sales.

"When the farm income catches cold," he said, "the cash registers in town take pneumonia." The Rural Development Program was initiated in 1955 under the Eisenhower administration

RSC Fund Nearing $16,000

The total of subscriptions to the stock of the Rising Star Development Corporation had risen to 15,600 Tuesday a noon with prospects of other subscriptions to be received before the week end.

The total, announced by Charles Rutherford, chairman of the temporary directors who are carrying out the organizational drive is more than 5,000 greater than the minimum amount of stock which must be sold before the corporation is activated.

Application for the charter in Austin and action upon it at the Department of State is expected this week end.

Subscribers who inked subscriptions to the stock since the published report last week, include:

Fred Roberds, $200; H. L. Geyer, $100; Ed Witt, $100; Mrs. Ed Witt, $100; M. G. Joyce, $100; Aubrey Goss, $100; Alton F. Clark, $100; W. A. Richburg $100; Alton Roan, $100; Mrs. D. B. Reed, $300 and Henry McCoy, $100.

The list as published last week erroneously listed F. B. Joyce as F. B. Johnson. Mr. Joyce was one of the original subscribers with a subscription of $500.

As soon as the charter is issued, CoC President James Rutherford reminded the chamber of commerce at noon Tuesday, a board of permanent directors will be chosen by the stockholders who will be responsible for the management of the corporation, and the selection of projects to be undertaken. He urged stockholders to be giving thought to the men they wish to entrust with the operation of the community organization.

The chamber of commerce sponsored the organization to provide basic financing and provide industrial and other development which will add to the economic support and the growth of the community.

The project has drawn wide spread attention and the interest of other communities, some of which have indicated that they will undertake similar programs if the Rising Star "pilot program" proves effective.

Funds for the projects to be undertaken will be sought from various government lending agencies.

In all this mess of recrimination, apology and analysis of our troubled economy, why doesn't somebody tell us the truth?

We don't like to work; we have lost all respect for the dignity of human labor.

That is I believe, the underlying reason for all our multiplying problems of economic and social welfare. When you lose respect for the principle of an honest day's work for a fair return, you lose respect for yourself.

We can blame our leadership all we want, but we didn't have to elect that kind of leadership. The truth is that our politicians are doing exactly what we want them to do.

Ever since the great depression we have been telling ourselves that this nation is so rich and powerful that it can take care of everything and everybody with as little effort as a Percheron carrying a two-year-old child. We accepted the principle that deficit financing — spending more than we take in — is sound business for government because "we only owe it to ourselves."

Drive Carefully The 4th

We did a lot of bold, brave things back in the Depression days, some of them very good indeed. We installed a Social Security system, one of the finest institutions our country ever organized — too much of a success, perhaps, because they are now trying to make it a carry-all for all manner of vote-getting schemes of socialistic welfare; we developed the REA which brought the modernizing benefits of cheap electricity to the rural areas of the nation; we did something about ruinous stock market speculation; we undertook a vast conservation program to save our soil and water; we did a lot of other things which demonstrated the power and the will of a great democratic people to work out their own salvation.

But we did some other things; we made some remarkable discoveries. Most important of all, we discovered the anonymous effect of a government check. We took it to the bank and got good hard money for it. Then we discovered that nobody was making us work for those dollars. There were no bosses telling us what to do. We made another discovery. We were our own bosses — we were just giving ourselves a check. The U. S. Treasury had plenty of money and it was our melon; we needed only figure some way to cut it — how to work less and get more. The labor unions also made some discoveries; they, and not the people who hired them, were the bosses. It was a wonderful discovery. After generations of telling children about Santa Claus we found out he was real.

Back in the olden days, when our forefathers fell upon hard times — which they did — they buckled down and worked harder. They didn't know they could give themselves a check and go fishing. But not us. We cut the work week; we said the country owed us a living and we were going to have it. We developed the idea that all we had to do was put dollars — spending power — in the hands of the people, and this "pump-priming" would make prosperity flow.

Drive Carefully The 4th

But there seemed to be a hitch to this beautiful reasoning; somewhere its logic got all fouled up in realities. A lot of people appeared to have the idea that when you can get more dollars for less, then you should get even more for making the less. And why worry about prices? Strange as it seems in an economy where we appear to be living high on the hog, certain scarcities develop, scarcities in terms of high prices. Inflation keeps stealing the purchasing power.

Mrs. Lila Jarrett Completes 28 Years With Higginbotham Stores On June 19

Tuesday, June 19, went quietly for Mrs. Lila Jarrett. But it was an anniversary, nevertheless. On that day she began her 28th year of continuous service with the Higginbotham company.

Since 1934, when she returned to Rising Star from Breckenridge after the death of her husband, she has been with the dry goods department of the company here, for the greater part of that time in charge of the piece goods department.

She began her service with the company as a school girl working during the summer and the holidays. Her first sales experience was with the Star Trading Company with which she was part-time employed for about a year.

She is a member of one of the old families of the Rising Star area. Her parents were John Euchanan, who was reared in the Amity community and her mother the former Dora Ayer, Star from East Texas. A brother, Ayer family moved to Rising Star was a small girl when the er of Mrs. Jarrett is A. L. Buchanan, prominent Rising Star farmer and stockman living just west of town.

Completing High School here, Mrs. Jarrett went away to college and then spent two years as a teacher. It was while she was a member of the Breckenridge faculty that she met Benjamin M. Jarrett and married him in 1930. Her husband, who was in the oil business, died in 1934.

She has one child, a son, Bennie Ray Jarrett a teacher in the Gail schools in Borden County. "I have no plans for retirement," said Mrs. Jarrett. "I guess I'll just keep on working."

AS IT LOOKS FROM HERE

By Omar Burleson, M. C., 17th District, Texas

WASHINGTON, D. C. — It is difficult to find time to do very much "outside" reading, since continuous study is required of hearings, reports and briefs in connection with legislation pending before Congress.

However, some of the writings of statesmen of long ago are helpful as a guide in meeting present day issues.

Since time immemorial there have been the extreme views. Our history indicates that some of our great men in the past felt at certain times that our Country was on the brink of disaster, while others at the same time viewed the situation with open optimism.

It is helpful to me to review many of the writings of Thomas Jefferson. He produced numerous documents in the form of letters to his contemporaries, regarding the Constitution, the division of powers between the Legislative, Judiciary and the Executive Branches of Government, and a great concern that States' rights be protected.

In 1789 Thomas Jefferson expressed his strongest views concerning the concept of limited government. During his Presidency, Jefferson was faced with a major Constitutional question in 1803, in regard to the power of the Federal Government to acquire the Louisiana Territory.

President Jefferson clearly favored a Constitutional Amendment to authorize the transaction, but he was persuaded to proceed with the purchase by reason of the pressure of the moment. It was felt that Napoleon would withdraw his offer if closing of the agreement should be delayed by the slow processes of an amendment.

Congress, in ratifying the act, Jefferson concluded, must "throw themselves on their Country for doing for them, unauthorized, what we know they would have done for themselves had they been in a situation to do it."

In other words, there comes a time when the exigencies of the moment produce great pressures for action on matters which seemingly will not wait. We find ourselves in this position often today, but to involve basic principles of usurping power by the Federal Government becomes a dangerous thing.

Thomas Jefferson, after his retirement, wrote leaders of his Party in 1812, expressing the fear that the Supreme Court under Chief Justice John Marshall gave judicial sanction to a doctrine which implied that the court was acting beyond its authority in a series of decisions which gave more strength and authority to the Federal Government at the expense of the States. His views were set out in a letter to Judge Spencer Roane of the Supreme Court of Appeals of the State of Virginia, who was also an outspoken critic of the United States Supreme Court. In criticizing a book by William C. Jarvis, entitled "The Republican," published in Massachusetts in 1820, Jefferson said that under our system there was "no safe depository of the ultimate powers of the society but the people themselves."

In 1823 Jefferson wrote to Justice William Johnson, whom Jefferson, as President, had appointed to the Supreme Court. In his letter he said, "I see with deepest affliction the rapid strides with which the Federal Branch of our Government is advancing toward usurpation of all the rights reserved to the States, and the consolidation in itself of all powers, foreign and domestic."

Jefferson was a strong defender of States' rights, and although not one of the signers of the Constitution itself, had a great influence upon its formation.

Numerous times during the 186 years of our history there have occurred periods of extreme uncertainty; periods as to whether our form of government would endure, but always the pendulum has found its way back from an extreme swing.

Today we find situations comparable to many of those which have occurred in the past. There is need to keep a confidence and faith, not only in our system, but in those who established it and in the people themselves.

FOLLOW SIMPLE RULES IN AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENTS

Vacation time is here. Some millions of people will be driving about the country, and automobile accidents will occur with increasing frequency. What should a person do when involved in an accident?

At such times it is hard to keep your wits about you and know just what to do. It is therefore a good idea to plan in advance just what you would do in event of a smash-up. Here are a few simple rules that every driver should commit to memory:

1. Stop! Failure to stop can result in serious criminal consequences.

2. Render Aid. If anyone is injured: (1) Render first aid. (2) Stop bleeding. (3) Call a doctor or ambulance or both. (4) Do not move an injured person in any way that could possibly add to his injury.

3. Protect the Scene from Further Damage. You may be liable for damages to approaching drivers, unless they are properly warned. If the highway is obstructed at night, have someone turn his headlights beams in the wrecked vehicles.

4. Call an Officer. Policemen, Highway Patrolmen, Sheriffs and their deputies are trained accident investigators whose testimony may be invaluable in establishing your civil claim for damages.

5. Gather Information — Write it down. Don't trust your memory. Don't guess — be specific. Measure skid marks. Step off distances. Be sure to obtain name and addresses. You are required by law to exhibit your driver's license to the other driver — and he must do the same.

6. Be Careful What You Say. Even if you feel you probably are to blame, it is best to make no admission. You may learn later that the other driver was equally at fault, or more so. Emotional comments can be misconstrued by others, or may be misquoted. Whatever you say, make it factual.

7. See Your Doctor if there is the slightest chance you may be injured. Serious injuries do not always result in immediate pain or bloodshed. Consult Your Lawyer Immediately. The sooner your lawyer is brought into the matter, the better he can advise you and protect your rights. He can obtain statements from the witnesses while their memories are fresh, and do many other things to insure that the true facts are preserved. Get your lawyer's advice before giving interviews or statements to investigators or adjusters for the other side.

9. Inform Your Insurance Company Promptly. Failure to do so may void your policy.

10. Report the Accident to the Department of Public Safety. This is required by law if there is any injury, death, or total damages exceed $25.00.

An official accident report may be procured from the Police, Sheriff's Dept., Highway Patrol, or State Dept. of Public Safety.

USDA Developed Insect Repellent Safe, Effective

COLLEGE STATION — You don't have to spend time fighting off insects this summer while you are out-of-doors. Such pests as mosquitoes, ticks, flies, fleas, chiggers and biting flies can be made to keep their distance by applying a repellent developed by U. S. Department of Agriculture scientists on exposed skin areas.

The repellent is commonly called deet. Diethyl-toluamide is the chemical designation. It was synthesized and tested by chemists and entomologists of USDA's Agricultural Research ready-to-use containers under Service. It is now available in several trade names, and has been approved as the standard military repellent.

Deet is effective and safe for general use on the skin or on certain kinds of clothing materials. However, instruction covering the use of the repellent should be followed closely, because the chemical may effect certain paints, varnishes and some of the plastic materials. The repellent is safe for use on cotton or wool fabrics if they contain no synthetic fibers.

Smearing evenly on exposed skin areas, deet is effective for several hours. It has little or no odor, and it does not cause a greasy feeling on the skin.

For homeowners who are no longer finding DDT an effective chemical against houseflies, USDA scientists suggest the use of one of the commercial sprays containing pyrethrins. Many products containing pyrethrins are available in aerosol containers. The scientists suggest that one be purchased which specifies on the label that it will control flying insects. They recommend the continued use of DDT in areas where houseflies have not developed a resistance to the insecticide.

4-H'ers Tally Year's Work On Dairy Projects

Raising dairy cattle and demonstrating the use of dairy products in meals are popular 4-H Club projects. Hundreds of girls and boys throughout the state, in checking project results, are probably asking themselves the question a prize-winning dairy-maid asked herself.

"Where would I be today if I had not had the opportunity to join 4-H?" According to the youths' own stories, they learn good health habits, accept responsibility and work with others. And they usually profit from their efforts.

The dairy project is open to boys and girls who have one dairy animal or an established herd. Many young dairy members started with a single heifer, and in 10 years or less built a valuable herd.

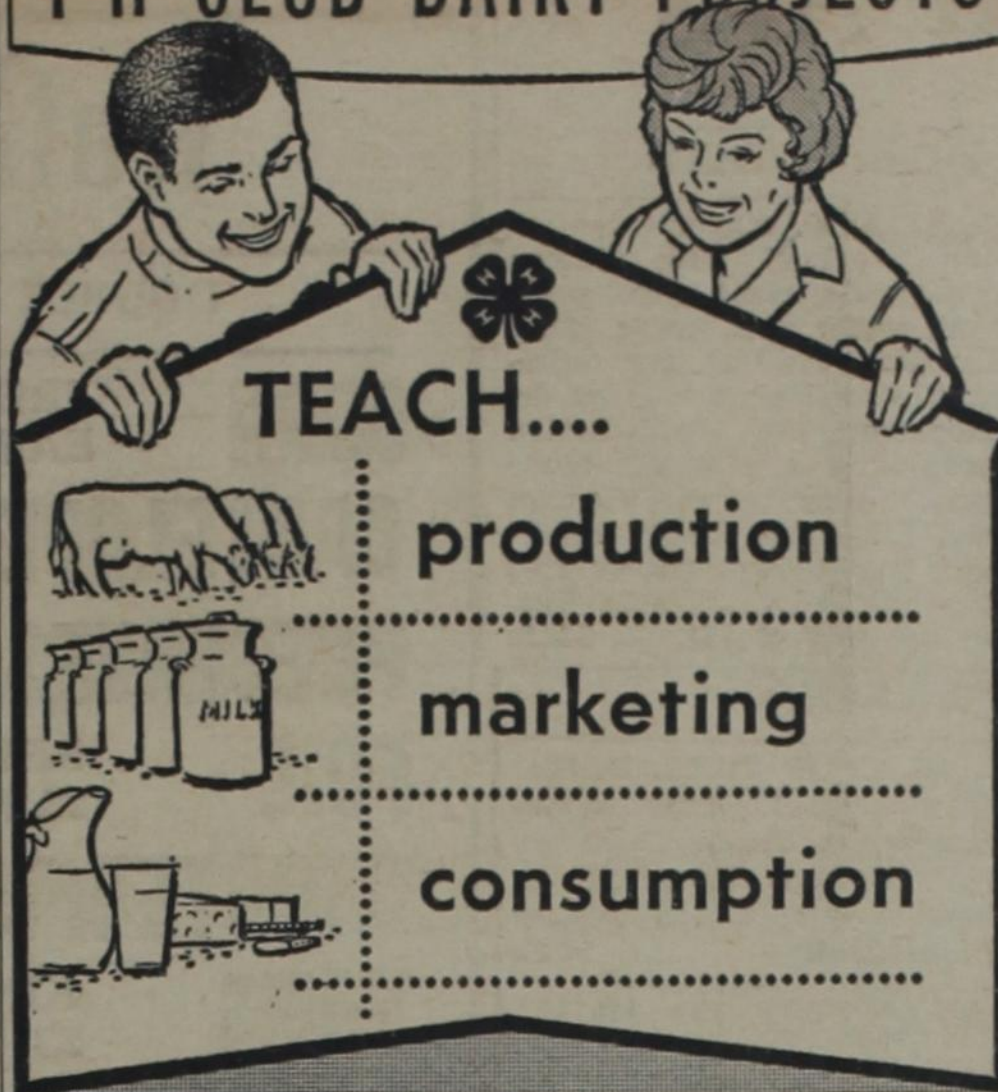

Of the 134,000 club members in 50 states enrolled in a dairy animal project today, about a third are girls. This ratio held among the six national dairy scholarship winners last year.

Cows Cooperate

The 4-H'ers not only learn how to care for dairy animals, but also adopt proven scientific methods of feeding, milking, marketing and breeding.

Showing and judging cattle are exciting aspects of the dairy program, according to the members. Extension dairy specialists, dairy industry personnel and volunteer club leaders help the young people acquire know-how and skills that will enable them to continue a modern dairy operation.

4-H CLUB DAIRY PROJECTS

the dairy foods demonstration program.

The "know-how, show-how" project is a favorite of the younger teenagers. Sometimes the girls pair off and work up a team demonstration. Others develop a solo demonstration. Audiences range from a few club members, groups of adults, to television viewers.

Rewards Vary

Among favorite recipes are frosty milk drinks, cottage cheese salads, cakes, sandwich spreads, snacks and party fare. The recipes are double-barreled, youthful meal planners point out, because they are packed with nutrition and good eating.

Each of the 4-H dairy programs has a sponsor that provides incentive awards in the form of medals, wrist watches, educational trips and college scholarships.

This year marks the 15th anniversary of the dairy foods demonstration program sponsorship by the Carnation Company of Los Angeles.

The Oliver Corporation of Chicago, for the sixth straight year, provides the dairy animal program awards.

County, state and national winners are selected by the Cooperative Extension Service, and awards are distributed through the National 4-H Service Committee.

Cancer In Animals One of Projects Now Under Study At A&M College

(Editor's note: This is one in a series of especially written articles telling of Texas A&M College faculty and staff probes deep into research areas, one of the great frontiers. Some of the research results in immediate rewards in dollars-and-cents for Texans, other projects add to mankind's knowledge and provides the basis for further ventures along the frontiers of research.)

By Henry L. Alsmeyer Jr.

COLLEGE STATION — (Sp1) — Cancer in animals is one of the research frontiers at which Texas A&M College scientists are working successfully.

The School of Veterinary Medicine at A&M long has served Texans and the world of learning through its extensive, highly respected program of teaching and research.

The use of radioactive Cobalt in the treatment of cancers of the eyes and eyelids of cattle and horses is among the newer developments at the School.

So far as is known at A&M, the Veterinary Medicine and Surgery Department team is the only veterinary organization using the Cobalt 60 treatment on a clinical basis.

The technique of implanting "Cobalt needles" has been especially effective in treating carcinomas likely to develop in Southwestern animals having little pigmentation near the eyes. White horses are particularly susceptible to this type of cancer.

There was no hope for animals so afflicted until research led to the new treatment. Dr. W. C.

Banks, professor of Veterinary Radiology, and his staff have treated 100 or so large animals with wholly satisfactory results in about 85 percent of the cases.

There is an apparent close relationship between the animal carcinoma and eye cancers developed by persons in the Southwest — particularly middle-aged persons of a fair skin who spend much time in the outdoors. Radioactive Cobalt also is used effectively in the treatment of such cancers in man.

Another radioactive material, Strontium 90, also is being used by A&M veterinarians. The strontium is used clinically in the treatment of many animals for ocular diseases, those centering in and around the eye. The Strontium 90 is used to remove the blood vessels which have invaded the cornea and tend to interfere with sight. The radioactive material removes the undesirable blood vessels without damaging deeper tissues in the eye.

The annual Texas Conference for Veterinarians held on the A&M campus late each spring is one of the ways in which information gained through on-campus research is made available to veterinarians with local practices. The conferences also feature prominent speakers from across the nation, who bring reports on research elsewhere. And then, of course, results of research at A&M are made known through professional journals.

The Memorial Student Center, the "living room" of Texas A&M College, was completed in 1951.

Hoppers Increase In Some Areas of Texas

COLLEGE STATION — June — Grasshoppers are increasing in numbers in some sections of Texas and may pose a threat to crops and pasture forage unless controlled while still young, advise Associate Extension Entomologists C. F. Garner and R. L. Ridgway.

They list several chemical control measures and their limitations for use on pastures or ranges being used for grazing beef animals but point out that only sevin and malathion should be used on areas grazed by dairy animals.

Dieldrin is recommended for use along ditches, roadsides, on wastelands and non-crop areas including soil bank land.

Development, which is primarily a finance program in which areas are given loans, and in some cases, grants for certain projects.

It functions in areas that have been designated for re-development (frequently called distressed areas), he said, and there are now 49 Texas counties so designated with little likelihood at this time, of other counties being designated.

Some $40 million in loans is now being sought in Texas through this program and two or three loans have already been made.

He advised that it might be well for this county to build around the existing Program Building Committee, organized in 1955, for work in certain agriculture areas — specifically horticulture (pecans), dairy and livestock raising.

"Downgrade industrial development," he said, "and grow your own smoketack." He listed about a dozen areas in which this county could expand its agriculture possibilities, resulting in turnities.

He stressed the point that the area needs a master plan.

be sold to the public for its use. It is a tax burden upon the prices of all other goods. It is non-creative spending to a very great degree.

The truth is we are living in a sort of dream world. We have concealing the deficit with inflation. But we are rapidly losing our ability to compete in a free world market, and plete in a free world market, and if we should suddenly lose the great domestic market which is enriched by government spending, we would be in one awful fix.

The European Common Market which our money helped create, is becoming a dream of America in reverse. Our capital already is emigrating to it; it would not be surprising to find our working people doing so in the not too distant future, just as the workers of Europe came to America in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.

The law of economics cannot be repealed. "In the sweat of thy brow shalt thou eat bread" was not an Adamic curse to be exorcised by some fancy political theory. It is the statement of an inexorable law that operates in every relationship — chemical, physical and spiritual. It is a law of creation and it points the only sure way to human happiness, security and prosperity.

There must be things to use before there can be prosperity; the raw materials of earth must be shaped to human consumption and somebody must do the work that shapes them. Goods and services are the real wealth; the money on earth is useless and valueless without them. Money cannot create itself and even if it could, what would it buy if nobody made the furniture, the bread, the lumber, the medicine and all those things which secure and enrich our lives on earth?

It stands to reason that the more we produce, the harder and more efficiently we work, the more wealth we have to share. This basic fact cannot be repealed no matter what financial manipulations or fancy theories of economic fruition we may employ.

Two and two always, and eventually, equal four. We need to go back to work. We'd find a lot of our problems fading away.
