Texas Offers Prize For New Cotton Use

The Texas Legislature passed and Governor O'Daniel has signed a bill by Senator George Moffett of Chillicothe, offering a ten thousand dollars award to anyone who will discover a process or method, which causes consumption of cotton to increase 300,000 bales or more annually.

A new use for cotton is something that has been needed for a long time and since this incentive has been offered, it is likely some new use will be presented to the South. A person does not have to be a scientist to enter this contest or to be the winner of the prize ten thousand dollars.

5,000 WILL ATTEND 4th ANNUAL REUNION OF PIONEERS ON 18th

Between 4,000 and 5,000 people are expected to attend the fourth annual reunion of the old timers of Callahan county to be held in Cross Plains August 18, opine officials of the association.

Mrs. L. L. Blackburn, of Baird, chairman of the entertainment committee, announced yesterday that a full day's program had been completed and indications were that this year's program would surpass all previous efforts.

Miss Eliza Gilliland, secretary of the Callahan County Pioneers Association, told the News in a telephone conversation Wednesday afternoon that she expected 5,000 people to attend this year's celebration.

"More than 3,000 were present at the first meeting of old settlers held on the McCoy Ranch in 1896 and the crowds have grown with each year, I believe there will be at least 5,000 people on hand this year," she said.

The program will open at 10 o'clock with the welcome address which is to be extended by Paul V. Harrell, Cross Plains attorney. District Attorney Bob Black will respond. Mr. Black will speak from the angle of a son of a pioneer, his father having come to Callahan county in 1770.

Basket lunch will be spread at 12:30.

The afternoon will include a variety of entertainment. There will be jigs, old fiddlers and range song contests; the introduction of the oldest resident, the oldest citizen in point residence, the oldest native son and daughter, the family in which the most generations are represented at the reunion, the old timer coming the greatest distance to be present.

Late in the afternoon there will be an old fashioned square dance. Jack Scott, publisher of the Cross Plains Review, will be master of ceremonies.

Members of all committees working on various phases of the celebration are to meet at the courthouse in Baird Saturday afternoon, August 12, at two o'clock, the Review was told yesterday. It is being urged that all committeemen make a special effort to attend this meeting as there are several matters of importance to be disposed of at that time.

NEW REAL ESTATE LAW REQUIRES A LICENSE

There is a new law regarding real estate dealers and people who are trading in land should make themselves familiar with the law. The new law goes into effect September 21st.

It will require that any person or company dealing with any phase of the real estate business must secure a license which will cost three dollars, and must measure up to certain ethical standards before a license will be issued.

The new law will regulate about 12,000 real estate dealers in the state at the present time. This bill passed by the senate about thirty minutes before adjournment of the recent session of the legislature.

FROM CONGRESSMAN CLYDE L. GARRETT

UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES:

The House Committee investigating un-American activities will resume hearings August 1 and is expected to continue until the end of the year. Chairman Dies says the committee will spend a month in Washington obtaining testimony regarding the Nazi, and Fascist groups. Communist activities are also expected to be investigated. Further hearings will be made in Chicago, Pittsburg, and the Pacific Coast.

ANTI-TRUST LAWS:

The fight against monopolies was just begun by the Temporary National Economic Committee. In its first report, the committee claims that there is a definite tendency toward monopoly in American industry. This is resulting in a concentration of wealth, increased unemployment, and smaller markets. The Commission thinks that this trend can be stopped by tightening the Anti-trust and Patent Laws. The Committee recommended that the government press civil actions against Anti-trust violators and claim damages of twice the total income earned by corporations during the period of violation. They also suggest that the government take action to suspend or discharge officers responsible for the Anti-trust Law violations.

SOCIAL SECURITY:

A House approved bill to liberalize the Social Security Act was passed by the Senate and sent to conference. This revision is expected to bring 1,000,000 additional workers under its benefits, but holds the payroll taxes at the present rate for the next three years.

T.V.A.:

The President received a plan to purchase private power utilities, such as the Tennessee Electric Power Company as part of a development program. The authorization of $100,000,000 as proposed by the Senate was cut to $61,500,000.

TAX EXEMPT SECURITIES:

The proposal, favored by the Treasury but opposed by many state and local executives, to prohibit future issuance of tax exempt governmental securities was shelved. The Ways and Means Committee of the House voted instead to have a sub-committee study the subject during the recess, in connection with other studies whose objectives are a thorough revision of the Federal Tax structure.

1939 DUCK STAMPS:

The 1939 "duck stamp" went on sale in all first and second class post offices throughout the country. Certain third and fourth class post offices in duck-concentration areas will also sell the $1 stamps, which must be purchased by all hunters of migratory waterfowl over 16 years of age.

DEMAND FOR FARM PRODUCTS:

There was some improvement during late May and June in general economic conditions affecting the consumer demand for farm products. Industrial production recovered sharply from the low reached in April and early May, and some additional improvement during the remainder of the year is indicated by conditions in the important industries. But the changes in business activity and consumer purchasing power probably will not be great enough to warrant any change in the outlook. Industrial production and general economic conditions in foreign countries which are important markets for our farm products, have shown further improvements, mainly as a result of expenditures for war materials, but this has not yet been reflected in any important increase in foreign demand for United States farm products.

TURKEY GROWING NOW $70,000,000 INDUSTRY:

Nearly 70 million dollars' worth of turkeys (at farm prices) were produced last year. This figure was somewhat less than for 1937, but was larger than in any year in the current decade, and probably the second largest in the history of the industry. Since 1929 the production of turkeys has increased more than 65 per cent—from less than 17 million birds in that year to more than 26 million in 1938. Peak of production during the decade was nearly 28 million turkeys in 1936.

POULTRY CONGRESS:

The World Poultry Congress in Cleveland, July 28 to August 7, combines a spectacular popular exposition and specialized world's fair with an unspectacular international scientific assembly. More than 200 scientists from more than a score of countries expect to attend the poultry science meeting that provides the occasion and the nucleus for the exposition. Many of the scientific delegations have provided popular displays. The seven scientists of the United States Department of Agriculture poultry research staff are on the program.

Mrs. Jack Cabaness of Hobbs, New Mexico, has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Fred Cook and family several days. Mrs. Cook and daughter, Fredalyn plan to accompany her to her home in Hobbs, where they will remain several days. They will be joined by Mr. Cook later, who will enjoy a short vacation there.

CONSUMPTION OF COTTON IS LESS THAN 1937-38

According to the report of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, the commercial crop in 1938-9 was makes the world's carry-over of 10,758,885 bales, as compared with 14,371,000 bales two years ago. It American cotton, not including linters 13,438,000 bales, against 12,955,000 last year and 5,740,000 two years ago. The carry-over of lint cotton in the United States was 12,326,000 bales, as compared with 11,025,000 last year, and 3,908,742 two years ago. The world's consumption of American cotton excluding linters, was 11,086,000 bales two seasons ago. Total exports 3,622,000 against 5,954,000 bales in 1937-38. This is a falling off of 2,332,000 bales or about 41 per cent. The United States has all of the carry-over except 483,000 bales.

LENDING AND SPENDING

Raymond Clapper in an article in the Fort Worth Press expresses our opinion so much better than we can on the question of lending and spending, in discussing the proposed lending of the $3,800,000, proposed by the President as a recovery measure so we are passing Mr. Clapper's ideas to our readers. He said, "there is nothing novel about the proposal. It is in line with recent testimony of numerous economists before the O. Mahoney TNEC, who said a large field of useful public improvements should be worked to stimulate the heavy industries; but it avoids some of the more adventurous devices suggested, such as the Erie capital bank, it adheres to the orthodox financing method, even eliminating the gift element.

The theory meets one real objection, namely that much public work expenditures lack the continuing dynamic force of private enterprise expenditures. If you spend $1,000,000 on a bridge you do, during the construction, stimulate employment and industrial production; but after the bridge is built, that is the end. It provides convenience to the public; but it no longer gives work contributions toward industrial production.

"But if you put $1,000,000 into a factory, you not only have the employment afforded by the construction of the project, but when the job is done, then the factory employs men, uses material, provides freight, traffic for the railroads and becomes a continuing multiplier of economic activity.

"In this sense the greatest need now is not continuation of public works activity; but private activity which will exert continuing effect upon employment and production. Not all public works lack the dynamic force, but a considerable portion of them do. That rather than the spending boggy, is the point at which the Roosevelt program falls short.

The danger is the practical application. If the program is to be used to perpetuate a series of Passamaquoddy tide harnessing projects or Florida ship canals, then the scheme can come to no good end. The treasurer will be left holding the sack.

This is line with the argument used in the Putnam News for the past five years, that industry was being taxed to the limit and the money taken from industry was being invested in on productive projects, that furnished employment only while they were being constructed and in most cases were liabilities rather than an asset when constructed. We can not blame industry for not employing people when they are being bled to death, trying to make employment by investing every dollar into some non productive enterprise.

If the people who create the employment were left alone, and permitted to go ahead and put their money in factories and other productive enterprises, the unemployment would begin to decrease and it would not be many months until most of the unemployed would be re-employed. But not so long as we keep trying to make employment with non productive enterprise. We are creating liabilities.

SCHOOL LEVY HIKE FORECAST The new bill passed by the last legislature may compel Texas property owners to pay at least eight million dollars more school tax in 1939, than they did in 1938. This bill was not subjected to the lengthy, and bitter debate that was meted out to S.J.R. No. 12. The eight million bill authorized the State Board of Education to set the per capita school tax for the public fund and made it mandatory on the State Automatic Tax Board to adopt such "recommendations." The latter board consisting of Governor O'Daniel, and State Treasurer Lockhart and State Comptroller Sheppard. The board is scheduled to meet during this week to put the official O.K., on the per capita of $22 as fixed by the State Board of Education. In previous years the automatic tax board had all the power; but this authority was wiped out by the last legislature and transferred to the educational board. The following tax make up the state rate. For the general fund 35 cents on the $100 valuation. For schools 35 cents on the $100 valuations, and old soldiers pension fund 07 on the $100 valuations making a total 77. The rate fixed by the Automatic Tax Board in 1938, was 35 cents for the general fund 07 for pensions and 07 cents for schools. This will be a raise of 28 cents or in other words the rate last year was 49 and it will be 77 cents this year. M. M. Little and sons Truet, and Osborne returned from a prospecting trip to the New Mexico oil fields Wednesday of last week.

Oplin Crop Tour

Final plans for the trench silo filling demonstration and tour of crops of the Oplin area have been worked out and it is expected that a large crowd will be on hand August 9 to spend the afternoon looking over some of the many demonstrations. At 1:45 the group will meet at the Raymond Dick's farm where the proper method of placing bundles of feed in a trench silo will be shown. From there visits will be made at Sid Harvill's farm to look over some cotton varieties. The next stop will be at the Wallace Johnson farm for the purpose of comparing the practice of planting feed crops two rows and skip one over the every row system. In dry years (and many of them are dry) the former system is recommended by experiment stations that have the data to show that more feed is made. The group will then swing over to W. L. Atwood's place and study the beginning of a modern poultry plant. The last stop will be made at Clint McIntyre's farm for the purpose of looking over some of the oldest terraces in the Oplin area. Clint's farm has been terraced for more than ten years and they have proved so valuable in holding soil and water on the farm that a thousand dollars would not buy them if they could not be replaced. Clint has said. All farmers and others interested are cordially invited to be on hand Wednesday, August 9 at 1:30 p.m. at the Raymond Dick Farm where the first stop will be made.

Trench Silo

Filling demonstrations will be given next week at the time and place shown below: Tuesday, August 8 at I. G. Mobley's farm North of Putnam; Wednesday, August 9 at Raymond Dick's farm South of Oplin; and Thursday, August 10 at Geo. Parker's farm Southwest of Rowden Store. All of the meetings will start at 1:30 p.m. The proper method of placing bundle feed in a trench silo will be demonstrated at each place by the county agent. F. S. McKnight, F.S.A. Supervisor, is cooperating in these demonstrations by inviting all F.S.A. clinics in the vicinity.

Evan Barton of Denton reports that cotton in the community is doing fine but will need rain in the next day or two to make a good crop. Mr. Barton's cotton crop averaged over 200 pounds per acre last year. This compares with the county average of a bale to 10 acres last year. Evan knows his cotton.

Texas Fruit and Peach Show

Is the name given to Stephenville's latest exhibit and will be held Wednesday August 16 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Attractive prizes are offered for exhibits of peaches, grapes, plums, apples, pears and figs. Those interested in showing some of Callahan county's best fruits are invited to see your county agent for further information about the show.

Two New Trench Silos

Have been dug by Norman Finley that will hold 400 tons of feed. The plans are to fill these with bundle red top cane grown on neutral acres under the 1939 farm program. Walter Jones of Bayou plans to dig a 60 ton trench to store some red top cane. Since silage is an excellent feed for making breeding stock and milk cows give lots of milk so essential in producing good ewes

Somebody has sagely said that an expert is just an ordinary fellow a long ways from home.

And there is a man in Granbury (according to A. I. Crawford of the Hood County Tablet) who always orders two eggs for breakfast one for himself and one for his vest. From the "memory book" of a reporter: One Saturday night, Fort Worth and Dallas officers "shook down" beer taverns and dance halls in the City of the Hour" looking for a bandit who had held up the Grapevine bank that day. This chronicler tagged along on the hunt. Exactly a week later, authorities had a tip their man would be at a certain spot in Dallas. Officers, including the Fort Worth deputy sheriff who had driven our car the other time, lay in wait. (I was not along this time.) A visitor showed up but sensed the trip and ran back to his car firing. The Fort Worth deputy was killed. The man who had been "flushed wasn't the bank bandit; it was Clyde Barrow. We might easily have jumped him the week before.

Both Ambassador and Mrs. Daniels were gracious. He delighted the visitors with several good stories. As members of the group were taking places on the steps for a photograph, the ambassador said that a woman with a large number of little sons and daughters visited a studio and asked, "what would you charge to make a picture?" The photographer answered, "Six dollars a dozen." The woman said, "Well I have only 11 children." To which story this columnist countered with the one about the woman who boarded a street car with a flock of youngsters. Moved by curiosity, a passenger asked, "Madam, pardon me, but are all these your children or is this a picnic?" She said, "They're all mine, and, Mister, believe me, it's no picnic."

We were served coffee poured from a ponderous silver urn into dainty cups, along with chocolate cake. (I received a corner piece which had a double amount of chocolate). We strolled about the beautiful patio, thrilled at the sight of "Old Glory" fluttering in the breeze and, as we were leaving, signed the guest book.

When the Lions were given a reception at the American embassy in Mexico City a while back, a lady from the Old South who was in our party said, "Now, I feel at home," and smilingly indicated a picture of Robert E. Lee.

THE BOOK SHELF by Lexie Dean Robertson "On this book shelf always look for anything except a book"

Santa Fe! The very name brings memories of the Conquistadores, long trains of covered wagons, the click of castanets, and the quiet foot steps of the Frairs who followed the conquering flag of Spain with cross in hand! It nestles at the foot of the Sangre de Christo Mountains, an enchanting blend of the old world and the new. Here is the Church of San Miguel, the oldest Mission in America, with its lovely carvings and paintings that were brought from Spain long before the Plymouth fathers landed on their Rock. On one side of the Plaza, a small park which is the central feature of every Mexican town, is the old Palace of Governors. It too was built before the Pilgrims landed and was the seat of the government of New Spain. It was here that Lew Wallace wrote his famous novel, Ben Hur. Under the portals here on Saturday the Indians from the various pueblos sit, displaying their native wares: Dark polished bowls from the Santa Clara, each with its own design sacred to the gods of rain or sun or lightning; Warm clay-colored bowls with paintings in white and black and maroon from other tribes; Indian drums from thumb size to the great ones used in the native dances, gaily decorated gourds, great piles of hammered silver bracelets, rich turquoise set in rings or strung in lumps on long chains, bright blankets made from their own sheep wool, spun, dyed with vegetable dyes, and woven to last for a hundred years. Many of these Indians have been graduated from the government schools, but nevertheless they sit on folded knees the whole day long, silently offering their wares to the passing tourists pausing only to eat a banana at lunch time.

Nearby is the Art Museum which houses paintings of artists whose names are known the world over; the rich store of paintable subjects here together with the clear golden light and the ever new beauty of the mountain skies make this state popular with artists who come to visit and remain for all of their lives. One of the most memorable pictures is "The Stole" painted by Joseph Henry Sharp who was an eye witness of the scene he depicted. Along a tortuous mountain trail is seen an Indian man walking with bent shoulders and bleeding back; the painting shows an Indian chief whose beloved son had been accidentally killed and to prove his ability to bear pain he had killed his son's three favorite ponies. The heads of these ponies by raw hide thongs, interlaced through the flesh of the chief's back, and all day long under his grim burden he walks the mountain, his face bearing no trace of his broken heart.

Matt Pearce's new book called "Cartoon Guide of New Mexico" says it is unnecessary to bring umbrellas or galoshes to Santa Fe; we might have used both, since with our arrival came the first rain in more than four months. But somehow rain in New Mexico doesn't make you feel clammy and disagreeable... it strokes your face with soft cool fingers and you skip nimbly over the running gutters and sit in the charming patio of the luxuriously elegant La Fonda with never a thought of dampened

WITH OUR WILDLIFE By JOHN R. WOOD State Game Warden Texas Mountain Sheep Inroads of domestic sheep and elk upon the range of the wild mountain sheep in Texas will keep those nimble-footed and interesting animals from increasing much beyond their present number, it is reported by Bob Snow of the Texas Game, Fish and Oyster Commission who has just completed a survey of wild sheep with the assistance of the U. S. Bureau of Biological Survey.

Mountain sheep, which are found in the Beach of Diablo Mountains of West Texas, now number fewer than 400, according to Snow, who counted 130 in the Beach Mountains and who believes, after his survey, that there are approximately 250 in the Diablos. Those mountains are the only ones upon which there is suitable range for wild sheep. Elk have taken over some of it and domestic sheep are making huge inroads upon part of the range.

While it is not likely sportsmen will ever have an open season on most colorful animals in the Lone Star State, three ranchmen of the Trans-Pecos are leading the fight to help the species survive. They are A. F. Yates, Vivian McAdoo and T. M. Pyle upon whose lands most of the wild sheep range.

A Crippled Doe There is a crippled doe on the Gibbons ranch in San Saba county that had her sixth set of twin fawns this year, according to John Gibbons. The doe had probably been shot when very young and left her right hind leg useless. Even under this handicap this old doe is surely doing her part in helping restock San Saba county with deer. She ranges in the same locality each year.
