HOLY WEEK

Homer Henderson

On Palm Sunday with the traditional celebration of Jesus' triumphal entry into Jerusalem, Christians the world over recognized the beginning of Holy Week. This Thursday marks the Last Supper of Jesus with his disciples; thus it is called Holy or Maunday Thursday. Then Good Friday is the day of crucifixion followed by Silent Saturday, a day of waiting and praying for the joyous new life of Easter Sunday morning. Indeed, it can rightly be said that Holy Week is the climax of the Christian year.

The Christian faith receives its foundation and power from the two central events of Holy Week: the Cross and the Resurrection. Before these two scenes in the historical Biblical drama of redemption, man is called to make a decision of faith. How we understand the Cross and the Resurrection is basic to everything else we believe as Christians and to every one of our doctrines. Is the event of Cross and Resurrection the intervention of God's Word into human life and history? That is the question.

An affirmative answer to this question can only be one of faith. Yet it is possible for such faith to be grounded in some tremendously persuasive realities: First, the Cross is historical. There is absolutely no question of its authenticity. Jesus of Nazareth was executed early in the first century by authorities of the Roman government. Besides the Biblical records, the Roman secular historian Tacitus makes reference to the death of Christ (Christ) after whom Christians are named.

The second reality is the fact that several other teachers similar to Jesus were also crucified by the government of Rome. The book of Acts refers to two such men, Theudas and Judas, the Galilean (5:36-37). These men and others like them collected bands of disciples and went about teaching and preaching just as in the case of Jesus, the forces against them finally led to their execution. And just as the disciples of Jesus betrayed him, denied him and forsook him, so did the disciples of these other teachers.

The third reality is also a historical fact. Following the execution of teachers such as Judas the Galilean, their various disciples were never heard of again. But soon after the execution of Jesus, his disciples gathered together to witness to His teaching and to begin the preaching of His gospel. Now even the most embittered skeptics must face with honesty this question: What motivated the disciples of Jesus to regroup even in the face of severe government and religious opposition, when the disciples of these other teachers did not? What caused them to reverse their earlier decisions of denial? What force could have been strong enough to lead to the founding of the Church which has continued the witness of the disciples down through the centuries?

There seems to be only one possible conclusion: There is a fourth historical reality, namely, the Resurrection of Jesus-Christ. However we may wish to interpret it, we must be willing to affirm that this miracle is indeed God's Word of new life written into our history. What more can we say than to join in the ancient liturgy of the Church: "Christ is risen! He is risen indeed!"

Good Friday Cantata At Methodist Church

The Chancel Choir of the First Methodist Church will present a Good Friday Cantata at 7:30 p.m. this Friday, March 24. The public is cordially invited to attend.

The cantata, by Lloyd Pfautsch, is the "Seven Words of Love" based on the seven last words of Jesus spoken from the cross.

Running throughout the cantata is the Biblical text of the crucifixion which will be read by Phillip Goodrum, minister of the First Baptist Church. There will be a short commentary on each of the seven words written by various Church fathers including Martin Luther and Saint Augustine.

The entire program is less than an hour in length but proposes to be a meaningful celebration of Christ's death upon the Cross.

By George-

COMPLEXITY CHALLENGE, PROGRESS, WORK—These four words are descriptive of the 60th Session of the Texas Legislature as members undertake the sometimes insurmountable solutions to numerous and sundry problems of the State of Texas.

Issues range from such controversial measures as liquor-by-the-drink and pari mutuel wagering to the garnishment of wages and legislative redistricting. As your State Representative in Austin, I know you are vitally concerned and affected by the many far-reaching measures which must be dealt with by your elected officials. Now that the Hockley County Legislative Community Council has been organized and oriented on some of our more complex issues, we are all more cognizant of the need for citizen participation in our state government. The views you express by telegram, telephone, letter, and personal conversation are invaluable to the decisions which must be made in the challenging days ahead.

Through this column, I shall attempt to present to you a few of the many issues which will inevitably affect our role as citizens.

Legislative redistricting, an issue which expected to draw only minor attention, has forged to the front as a major problem of the State Legislature. The difficult situation came about through the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court which invalidated the legislature redistricting measure passed by the Legislature two years ago. Redistricting was forced on the State Legislature at that time as a result of the one-man, one-vote principal laid down by the Court. We realized that minor changes, specifically those involving elimination of the 11 flatorial districts, might be held invalid. However, as a result of the Supreme Court's action, a minor task has now become a major task of Texas legislators.

Proposals before the Constitutional Amendments Committee, of which I am a member, include debate on such controversial issues as revision of the State Constitution annual sessions of the legislature, repealing the section of the Constitution prohibiting the garnishment of wages in Texas, and re-establishment of the veteran's land program.

The Texas Legislature is confronted with decision making on the measure to outlaw daylight saving time in Texas. The Federal Uniform Time Act of 1966 will place Texas on daylight saving time from May until October unless the legislature acts by April 30 to exempt the State. The measure has drawn little attention until recently, but now various elements are lining up to support daylight saving time, while others vigorously oppose the measure. Though I feel that uniformity of time throughout the Nation might be beneficial in so far as radio and television stations are concerned, it appears that our

West Texas area stands to benefit more economically by our retaining the standard time under which we now operate. Your views regarding this matter are desperately needed. Thus far, I have received six letters from the district on the measure, all of which prefer to exempt Texas from the daylight saving time schedule.

May I encourage you to express your views to me either individually or collectively. Pertinent material on various issues may be obtained from the Chairman of the Legislative Council, Mr. Dave Stanley South Plains College, the Secretary, Mrs. Inetha Cooke, or from my office. Our decisions are more substantial, concrete and sound when all views are expressed and analyzed. It is nice to see so many of you in Austin from time to time, and I appreciate your dropping by the office, whether on business or just a friendly chat.

State Representative

BEST SOME THOUGHTS—

Wasn't Sundays rain nice. There was even some puddles.

It's been so long we were tempted to step in the middle of them to see if they were wet.

Thanks to Commissioner Myrl Brock for grading the City streets this past week. With no wet weather, it has been impossible to grade them, but they looked pretty nice, even before the rain.

Looks like Bill Chandler hit it once again on the rain.

How about these long days, a person can really get tired before the sun goes down.

Our son says there is just one disadvantage to this time of year, that's the storms, and there are several advantages, like for one looking forward to the end of school.

Here March is almost gone, and we have hardly realized the new year has started. We are always behind time, but hardly ever three months.

A small town may be where everyone knows everyone's business, but it is also a place with a feeling of closeness, of belonging, and one person's tragedy is shared by all.

Women generally age by growing outward, men usually age by growing through the top of their hair.

There's one thing about being bald headed, it's neat.

And we pass the following on to you, handed us this week:

John: Have any of your childhood dreams been realized?

Bill: Only one. When my mother combed my hair, I used to wish I didn't have any.

We are living in a rush age. You rush from one thing to another, never having time to really enjoy what you are attending, for worrying about the next thing on the agenda you have to rush to.

Wonder how long it has been since you took time off and went and visited with someone, for just the pleasure of visiting.

Our lives move at such a fast pace any more the majority of us meet ourselves coming back.

Especially at this time of year is there a lot of activities. The schools are overrun with things for not only the students to do, but also requires the presence and participation of the parents.

Before our children got into higher grades, it seemed we were at school continually for one party or another.

In our opinion this requires too much time, effort and money. If a person has more than two children in school, they cannot make all of the parties, and find themselves running from one room to another, so one child will not be slighted.

And, you have not begun to run until you have a senior.

And so we close with the following:

The mother, putting Billy and little Bobby to bed, noticed that both boys' feet were dirty—but the elder boy, Billy had the dirtiest feet. She exclaimed, "Billy, you should be ashamed of yourself. You're a big boy now and you have even dirtier feet than little Bobby." "Well, maw," complained Billy, "I've been livin' longer than him."

Our thanks to Dorothy Martin for the jokes this week.

Water Being Piped To North Ropesville

Mayor Boots Moore this week informed us that the City is now preparing to pipe water to the Harris addition in north Ropes.

Joe Harris has staked off part of his land that will be sold for residential lots.

There is 1500 foot of six inch pipe being installed, and 200 feet of two inch pipe, and two fire hydrants are being added in that end of town, one being located close to the Mission Baptist Church.

Ropes has long been short on good real estate for people to locate their homes on, and this comes as good news.

The next thing of prime interest to everyone is a sewer system. Our present Council is working hard toward this goal, and perhaps it will be a reality instead of a dream in the near future.

BRING YOUR FAMILY AND COME TO THE MEETING

Nola Knows

By Nola White

Dear Nola - My daughters are 15 months apart. Until about two years ago they were very close. Now they are 15 and 16 years old, and they hardly act like sisters. They won't talk to each other. They don't fight; they completely ignore each other. The only time I've heard them speak is to call the other to the phone. I want my girls to love each other and act like sisters. What can I do?

Mother of Strangers

Dear Mother - All those whose children fight all the time would envy you your peace and quiet. The teen years are trying times for youngsters. They have a lot of personal problems to learn how to handle. Obviously, these girls are secure in their relationship with each other. As adults they will probably be extremely close again. I suggest you wait as quietly as your daughters and let time solve the "problem."

Dear Nola - I have a problem that makes me so mad I am going to start shooting. My neighbors leave the lids off their garbage cans. The neighborhood dogs (and some that don't belong in the neighborhood) get into them every night. That would be so bad, but they bring the litter over to my yard to eat and leave. Every morning when I wake up and find that stuff I see red. What's the next best thing to shooting these dogs?

Litter Bugged

Dear L. B. - Seems to me you should shoot the neighbors instead of the dogs. Dogs can't be blamed for the things they do instinctively. When they're hungry, they eat whatever is available. Neigh-borers who leave lids off their garbage cans and neighbors who let their dogs run loose at night are the culprits. If they won't listen to reason, call the authorities—for the sake of the dogs as well as your own.

Dear Nola - This may seem silly, but I need a husband who is 40 or thereabouts. There seem to be plenty of young men around and plenty of single women. But I can't find a single man who is 40 or over.

Getting Grey

Dear Getting - Your problem is that men who would now be in the over-40 ranks are the very ones who fought World War II. Hundreds of thousands were killed. The ratio of men to women is always out of balance, but as women of your age are finding out, World War II made it more so. If women had any sense, they'd acquire the necessary political power to stop wars for this reason, if no other. My suggestion is that you stop husband hunting and learn to enjoy life without one.

Dear Nola - What am I going to do with my son? He won't bring his report cards home for me to sign. He's 17.

High School Mom

Dear Mom - Somebody must be signing them—and that somebody is probably 17. Call your school principal and squawk. If the boy gets by with this, it will encourage him to try something worse.

Send your letters to Nola Knows, Box 411, Temple, Texas. For a personal reply, enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.
