Inquiry to Be Made at Lubbock State School

Wolfforth Receives Ambulance

Wolfforth's newest resident arrived in the city a week ago. About 30 people were on hand at city hall to welcome the newcomer to the city. The vehicle was delivered by the coordinator for the Emergency Medical Service System.

About 30 Wolfforth residents were on hand last week at city hall to welcome a new resident to that city.

At approximately 8 p.m. Wednesday night, a new ambulance, part of the county-wide Emergency Medical Service System, was delivered to the city by Stuart Haggard, coordinator of EMS.

The delivery included demonstration of equipment, including a saw used to cut through metal, tours of the vehicle, and later, rides for members of the community.

In a ceremony held in city hall, Haggard presented the keys to the vehicle to Mayor G.A.

Members of the Mental Health and Mental Retardation subcommittee of the Health Welfare Committee will look into allegations that six employees of the Lubbock State School were threatened with loss of their jobs if they testified during an inquiry by the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation (MHMR).

The investigation, which will begin at 10 a.m. Monday, December 15th in the High Plains Underground Water District Office in Lubbock will be chaired by Michael Ezzel, a state representative from Snyder.

Ezzel said the "main thing in the investigation was the allegation that people had been threatened as far as their jobs" if they testified during a previous inquiry last August.

At that time, Dr. Keith Stewart, assistant deputy commissioner of MHMR conducted an investigation into allegations of "improper personnel practices" regarding two former nurses at the school, child abuse, allegations that "amoebic dysentery was running rampant" at the institution, and unanswered questions about the death of another patient.

The August inquiry found "no basis" to the original charges which were brought against the school by the two former employees.

Ezzel said the subcommittee would look into the original charges "if they come out during investigation."

However, the Snyder resident said "the first thing we will concern ourselves with is a few individuals (who) felt they'd be fired if they testified."

The subcommittee decided to look into the matter when Ezzel was forwarded a copy of a letter sent to the commissioner of MHMR after the August investigation which said that six employees at the institution had been threatened with "loss of jobs" if they testified.

Dr. John Gladden, superintendent of the Lubbock State School, said he had not been contacted by the committee.

"I don't know what they're going to investigate," he said.

Gladden explained that the original investigation was started after a letter written by "two nurses and some others made charges about medical care and personnel practices" was sent to the State Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, the central agency which administers the school.

According to Gladden, the letter said "that we have an amoebic parasite, that it's caused a large number of deaths, and that there's been a coverup."

The August investigation revealed that there were cases of amoebic dysentery, and that steps were taken to cure the problem.

"At the present time there are no actual cases" of amoebic dysentery, he stated.

Over the past six years, 130 residents of the school have died, Gladden said. The majority were natural deaths, though the number included two "accidental deaths."

"The rate isn't different than any other institution of the same size," Gladden stated, adding that the school deals with a large number of "birth anomalies," or children who, because of birth defects, stand a greater chance of early death.

The August investigation found "no evidence in any of the reports to suggest child abuse or neglect" in the case of one girl who died.

The same report did not find "any improper conduct resulting in the death" of another infant.

Gladden said the investigation "could be a response to some of our employees out here." In the past, the school had problems with a "few employees," but complaints against them were investigated, he said.

Gladden stated that he did not think there was a possibility that the nurses who wrote the original letters were upset by their co-worker's actions towards patients.

Former Aviation Writer Lands District Job

Mary Lou Mulch, a former Ropesville resident, has been named Director of Information for the Lubbock County Hospital District.

Mrs. Mulch was one of two people added last week to the 15 member staff which will aid in planning the teaching hospital for the Texas Tech University School of Medicine.

The former Mary Lou Watts attended elementary school in Ropesville before moving to Lubbock. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J.D. Watts, also former Ropesville residents, now reside in Plainview.

A former Avalanche-Journal photographer and aviation writer, Mrs. Mulch has had 13 years of newsroom experience.

She attended Wayland College in Plainview, majored in political science at the University of California, and has studied law at the Lincoln University School of Law in San Francisco.

Currently, she has two daughters attending school at San Jose State University in Calif.

"I'm glad to be back in Lubbock," Mrs. Mulch said. "All my life I've considered it home."

When the teaching hospital is completed in 1977, it will receive referrals from 116 counties in West Texas and Eastern New Mexico.

Attempted Break-Ins at Two Locations Reported in Wolfforth

Both White's Auto and Frenship High School had unwanted visitors this past week.

Late Saturday night, persons unknown attempted to enter the high school through the Home Economics room by pushing an air-conditioner back into the building. The attempt was unsuccessful.

Mr. Walter "Mac" MacDonald, chief of police, said the incident was reported to him Sunday morning by Clyde Strong, Frenship High School principal.

"We believe it either happened late Saturday night, or early Sunday," MacDonald said.

The chief of police said he was "surprised at the area because it (the Home Ec room) was across the street from two teachers houses."

"There was no injury to the school," MacDonald reported. "The only damage was 5 or 6 screens" which had been sliced with a knife.

Another attempted burglary occurred at White's Auto Tuesday, the constable reported, "but the alarm saved the night."

"A person attempted to enter the White's building from the rear," he said, leaving "a hole big enough for a man to crawl through."

The attempted entry set off an alarm which scared the burglar away.

MacDonald noted that this was the second attempted burglary to the White's building. The other happened "eight or nine months ago," he said. One other burglary attempt was made before White's owned the building.

The police chief said he did not think the attempted break-ins were made by the same people. "If they made an entry and set off both alarms, they will not try it the same way," he said.

When asked what advice he had to give to cut down on burglary attempts, the police chief said "look out for your neighbor, be observant of things around you, secure your property, and don't leave temptations to the burglar in public."

"The alarm (at White's) has done its job. It has paid for itself," MacDonald said.

No suspects were reported in either case.

DPS Advises Public To Check Drivers License for Address

The Texas Department of Public Safety advises that all Texas drivers should examine their Texas drivers license to verify that the address on their license is correct. If his address is incorrect, it will be necessary to contact the local Drivers License Office as soon as possible. It is a misdemeanor offense for not changing your address within 10 days after moving. This particular law is going to be enforced more strictly in the future. The procedure for changing an address on a license is to have a duplicate license made with a new picture and a one dollar fee.

Anyone, or any group in the Wolfforth and Ropesville areas interested in having their events covered, or in contributing news to The Plainsman should contact Richard Mason, 763-4883 or Martha Morris at 866-4895.

The district manager for General Telephone Company asked the Perryton city council last week to allow a 26 percent rate increase for local telephone usage because of rising operating costs.

If permitted, the increase would raise the rate of return on company earnings from 5.8 per cent to 9.4 per cent and increase company revenues $206,000.

The company currently earns $790,000 each year.

Perryton city council members postponed action on the request until January. Last February, the council granted a 19 per cent increase in rates to the telephone company.

A Vietnamese mother and her three children, waiting to be reunited with her husband in Iran, arrived in Slaton last week and will stay three or four weeks.

The family is sponsored by the Slaton First Baptist Church.

Linch Phan Thi, age 25, her two sons and a daughter have not been in contact with her husband since she was evacuated from South Vietnam in the airlift last summer.

Last Monday, Ms. Thi received word that the government had contacted her husband in Iran and was making arrangements to reunite the family there.

SPORTS

Stated simply and plainly, Texas A&M can, if it wants, attribute its defeat at the hands of Arkansas to greed. Had the Aggies not agreed to change their scheduled game from Nov. 1 to Dec. 6, the odds are strong that they would have beaten the Hogs.

A&M was rolling along. Arkansas was having its share of problems. But A&M saw a chance for national exposure and a pretty good bundle of cash. It yielded to temptation.

The Aggies got national exposure, all right, of the type that no school wants. It also got a bundle of money, which won't salve wounds, repair scars or straighten dents in their image.

It was a costly licking. For the second straight year the Aggies blew the Southwest Conference title and a berth in the Cotton Bowl. And the question that must be going through the minds of all Aggies, in College Station and elsewhere, is, can we win the big one? It's a good question.

So far the answer must be no. They had a golden opportunity last year, were humiliated by Texas. They had the same chance Saturday, were humiliated by Arkansas. Last year the Aggies went nowhere. At least, as some balm, they go to the Liberty Bowl.

But this was the No. 2 team in the nation. This was the team that led in defense, both total and against rushing. It was inconceivable that an injured club like Arkansas would win.

The Aggies were caught in an ideal position. They had just come off a hard victory over Texas, a game that had to have more emotional outlet than could be obtained just a week later.

Arkansas had two weeks to heal some of its injured. The Razorbacks also had Frank Broyles, who manages to rise to the occasion. And when the Aggies missed that chip shot field goal, you could almost hear the air escape from their balloon.

Then momentum, that word that you read about so much, entered. With only seconds left in the half, Arkansas connected on a touchdown pass and the glove was thrown.

The Aggies didn't recover. Indeed, they went downhill more and more in the second half, fumbling, failing to make the big defensive play, looking demoralized. And when time mercifully ran out, even the defiant Aggie Warm Hymn couldn't erase the misery, the utter dejection, the complete defeat.

This was to have been A&M's finest hour—an undefeated season, a conference title, a Cotton Bowl berth, the Open Sesame key to top recruiting, national recognition.

This was a team that had, much like a Juarez fighting bull, been developed for just such success. It was laden with experience, size, strength. It stood on the threshold of the pinnacle of success—just in time for the rug to be pulled out from underneath its feet. The Aggies may never recover from the resulting crash.

Okay, Howard, tell it like it is. All right, Texas Tech's basketball team looked, for much of 40 minutes last Saturday, as though they were the Christians being thrown to the lions. And they helped those lions with exceeding generosity.

Oh, there were flashes of the team that beat Kansas State, but much of the time they played as though in shock. They didn't rebound well, they took bad shots, they let the press bother them, they couldn't hit free throws, they fouled, they had turnovers.

I felt sorry for Gerald Myers and his assistants, and I had to agree with Gerald when he said that he thought that, if they had played their usual game, they could have won.

Notre Dame was not that impressive and, on the occasions when the Raiders played good defense and worked for good shots, they looked capable. Unfortunately, they weren't consistent and the Irish gladly accepted Tech's generosity.

Possibly the most disappointing phase of the game was Tech's almost complete intimidation on the boards. Notre Dame outmuscled the Raiders, who seemed to fear injury.

Having seen Big 10 in person, officials grant much more leniency on the boards. It boils down almost to you can do anything that you're man enough to do, including shoving, elbowing, holding, pushing, or what have you.

The Raiders, in the foul-conscious SWC, are not used to such treatment. As a result, the Irish dominated the boards and the Raiders reached out gingerly instead of being aggressive, as you must in Big 10 territory.

Still, the tightness was obvious in their lack of free throw shooting ability, at least twice blowing two free throws with no apparent pressure on them.

It was disappointing, of course, not only for the Raiders themselves, but because they could have struck a blow for the conference. Instead, there will be tittering in other conference about "the best" in the SWC being beaten by 25 points.

It should make a better team. It also should make the Raiders a little easier to coach. If so, all is not lost by this game. Indeed, I think the Raiders will bounce back and become the team it is capable of becoming.

Most people have some good in them and all people some evil.

Charles Whitfield, Frenship Kindergarten Teacher

When kindergarten students entered this past fall at M.E. Casey Elementary, they came into contact with a situation most students do not experience until they are in junior high.

Their teacher was a man. Charles Whitfield, 27, decided to become an elementary school teacher five years ago. The Lubbock resident had just spent 10 months in Vietnam as a casualty reporter and was working while his wife, Lynn, attended school.

"All of a sudden, it just came to me that I wanted to go back to school for four years," Whitfield said. "You're never happy in life unless you do what you want to do."

So in 1971, he enrolled in Texas Tech University with the intention of becoming a 5th or 6th grade teacher.

Whitefle said he spent a lot of time thinking about his own education. "I realized that I hadn't had very good experiences when I was in school. I thought knowing what I know, I could change things."

The decision to become a kindergarten teacher was not made, however, until he was a junior at Tech. Whitfield said he came into contact at that time with professors who were interested in early childhood problems.

And he learned that social, academic, and emotional problems start very early. "80 per cent of a child's personality is formed by the time he's 5 years old," Whitfield noted. "And the earlier you can get to work with children, the better."

Since state law only requires a student to stay in school until he is 16, it may be too late to start correcting academic problems in high school students, Whitfield explained.

As an instructor, Whitfield sees himself as a "person who cares about children: someone the children can trust."

"I believe it's very important to provide a warm, nurturing atmosphere," he said.

Whitfield noted it was harder to work with younger children "because of the language problem. There is so much they don't know. It's hard to express yourself, coming down to their level."

The former marine said he has not had much trouble with parents accepting him as a male kindergarten teacher. "Mothers accept it a lot more so than the fathers. There are some people who have said, 'I can't believe a man would do that.'"

"I think that people have become socially concerned enough that they can see the importance. For boys that grow up without male influence, (the Process) can be a traumatic experience."

"Students may not see a male teacher until junior high school," he said.

And there has been "no problem with student acceptance," Whitfield added.

As a teacher, Whitfield said he was still learning. "When I got out of Tech, I thought I knew it all. But I've learned quite a bit this last semester."

Instrumental in aiding him were Mrs. Parrish and Mrs. Omenson, two Casey teachers, he said.

Presently, in his spare time, Whitfield tinkers with electronics and mechanics. His wife, Lynn, teaches 6th grade at McWhorter Elementary School in Lubbock.

Surveying the teaching profession, Whitfield said "a good teacher can take children at any age and make significant changes in their lives."

Charles Whitfield wants to be that teacher.

appointed to the Joint Committee on Textile Industry Development by Lieutenant Governor Bill Hobby.

The committee, which consists of three senators, three House members and three citizens appointed by the governor, is responsible for the promotion and development of the textile industry in Texas.

Texas currently imports more than $80 million in woven fabric from other states and countries to supply the apparel and garment industries.

Though Texas leads the nation in the production of cotton, wool and mohair, only 1.5 percent of the material is woven into fabric by state textile mills.

According to recent reports from the Department of Commerce, size is a factor in the cost of governmental operations in both cities and counties.

Smaller cities are more economical with taxpayer's money than are larger municipalities, Robert Brown, director of the Tax Foundation, said.

"Cities under 50,000 population spend an average of $158 per year per capita for services. But in cities over a million, the average is $682 per capita," Brown noted.

Counties with under 25,000 population spend an average of $421 per capita while those with over 50,000 people spend $680.

Edwards. Haggard told members of Wolforth's Emergency Medical Technician volunteers they could begin operating the ambulance after he and other members of EMS demonstrated the operation of the ambulance equipment.

Should an emergency arise, however, the volunteers could operate the vehicle, Haggard told the group.

Wolforth and Idalou were the first two of the five Lubbock County cities slated to receive an ambulance to have their's delivered. Slaton and Shallowater do not yet have the qualified personnel to operate a vehicle, and special provision must be made for Abernathy since part of the city lies in Hale County.

"I'd rather explain higher gas bills than why you don't have gas."

Your natural gas bill is higher. And, you have every right to know why.

One reason is lower temperatures brought on by winter.

The main reason, however, is simply that you are paying more for natural gas. Because we are paying more. This chart shows how much:

This increase hurts both you and Pioneer. It adds to your bill and to our cost . . . a cost for which Pioneer is not entirely compensated. It is passed through without mark-up or additional charges.

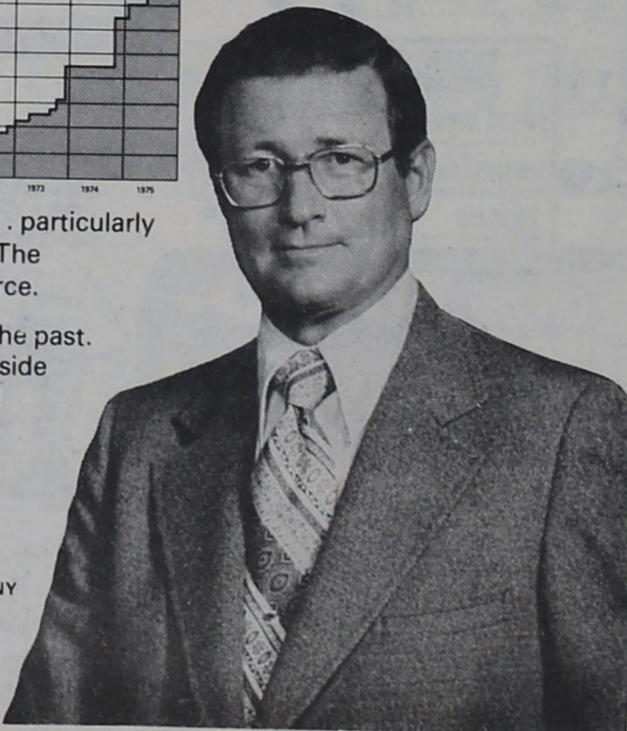

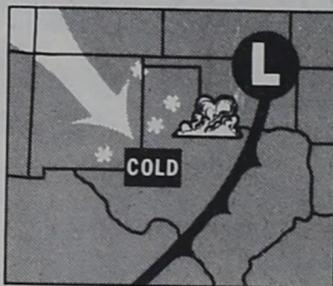

Why does gas cost more? Competition . . . particularly from petrochemical and other industries. The competition for gas has never been so fierce.

We will have to pay more for gas than in the past. But by working together, and without outside interference, you'll have the gas you need today and in the future.

Police Beat

Now that Christmas is near, so is the increase in house burglaries. Every year at this time, there is a sharp increase in house burglaries, as well as vehicle burglaries. The City of Shallowater will be no exception. Most vehicle break-ins are because people will leave packages in the car instead of putting them into the trunk. A lot of people forget to lock the door to their car. However, even if the car door is locked, it does not take long to open it. So always remember to place Christmas packages in the trunk of your car. If a burglar does not see any packages, he will not spend the time to open the car door. This would only increase the chances of his getting caught.

We are beginning to see the rise in house burglaries already in our city. We have had several more in the month of November than we had in October. If we don't try to do something to help the Police Department in stopping this, then we can look for more. There are several ways that you as citizens can help. They are:

1. If you are going to be gone from home for a while and do not want to tell the people next door, then call us and we will drive by your house while on patrol.

2. When you leave home, turn on some lights and leave the drapes open so we can see any movement inside the house when we drive by.

3. Leave your radio on. It will not cost much, and because of the noise, any burglary will not know whether or not you are home.

4. Get to know the people who live next door. Learn what car they drive and where they park it. (This can tell you whether something is wrong or not). Tell them that you will watch their house for them when they're gone and they may do the same for you.

5. If you see a vehicle or a person that does not belong in your part of town, call us. We try to watch everything, but we can not be every place all of the time. (One house was stripped in 25 to 30 minutes. It does not take long for these guys, because they work at this all of the time, and they have their own system worked out.)

6. If you are expecting a package to be delivered, tell your neighbor so they can sign for it if you are gone.

7. If for any reason you are going to be out of town for a day or two, have someone pick up your papers, have your milk and any other deliveries stopped until you return. Above all, call us and let us know. It does not take long, and it just may save you a hardship.

8. Above all, do not leave a porch light on. This is a sure give-away that you are not at home.

9. If you see a strange car driving around your area, one that you have never seen before, call us, then we can check on it.

10. Do not place all your valuables in one place in your house. Put them in different places. The burglar does not want to spend time looking for items in several places. Of course, the best thing to do is to get a safety deposit box and put valuables in it.

11. Either mark, or take the serial number of everything in your house. Make a note of where and how you marked them, then place these records in a safe place. Put either your driver's license or social security number on any items marked.

The Police Department has two marking pencils at City Hall for you to borrow; all you have to do is sign for one of them, use it and return. One thing you must always remember is that if you should come home and find that you have been burglarized or think that someone may be in your house, call us. It may save your life.

These tips will not insure that your home will not be broken into, but the harder we make it for the burglary, the better the chance the burglar will not try, and even if he does, it will increase the chances of his getting caught.
