As a result, people from all faiths enjoy their singing and they are heading the popularity list across the land. Their youthful appeal, Christ-centered singing, and old fashioned dedication have been the ingredients to a rapid climb and most unusual success. As Bruce has stated, "We try to present Christ in the most spiritual kind of program possible."

General Telephone Company Cuts Speed Limits on Company Vehicles

General Telephone of the Southwest announced that the speed limit on all company vehicles will be 50 miles per hour effective immediately.

General Telephone with headquarters in San Angelo, serves more than 405 exchanges in Texas,

New Mexico, Oklahoma and Arkansas, maintains a fleet of almost 3,000 vehicles.

"We are doing this voluntarily prior to passage of any laws which are expected to make compliance mandatory," L. Gray Beck, president of General Telephone said. "By lowering our speed now we can make a sizeable contribution to gasoline conservation. Our corporate citizenship dictates our need to share the conservation responsibility."

General Telephone earlier reduced building heat to 68 degrees, turned off all outside and ornamental lighting, except that used for security, and reduced lighting in all non-work areas to a minimum.

Home Economics at A Glance

Avoid wasting food and money during the holidays, make overeating a "no-no". Also, use refrigerated left-overs within two or three days and frozen ones while still in prime condition.

Larger turkeys serve more people per pound. A four-pound bird provides four servings, an eight-pounder 10 servings, a 12-pound turkey 20 servings and a 20-pounder 40 servings.

Telephone, electric and cable television companies often discard empty wooden or metal spools used for storing wire. These various-sized spools can be painted and used for handy round tables. Or, stack several into a tier table,

The holiday season is at hand. Make plans now to have the cookie jar filled. Prepare some now, freeze them and bring out when needed.

Pearl Harbor

Thirty-two years ago this December 7th—a Sunday—the radio broke the news that the United States naval base at Pearl Harbor and air fields in the vicinity had been suddenly bombed by Japanese aircraft.

Though President Roosevelt knew such an attack was possible, though military commanders there had been warned, though an enlisted man on radar watch picked up the incoming raid, and though an intelligence colonel in Washington had concluded the attack was imminent and was struggling with superiors to warn Pearl, the attack was highly successful.

The battleship fleet was wrecked. Thousands were killed. Many aircraft were destroyed. But, by good luck, the few U.S. aircraft carriers in the Pacific were not in the harbor that morning. As it turned out, the carriers were the most vital ships in the resulting war, and they turned the tide in June of 1942, at Midway, six months later.

In this 1941-45 war, the U.S. was attacked; either the nation fought or surrendered. (Hitler declared war on America four days after the Jap attack.) Few Americans proposed surrender, thus the nation was united. In that sense alone, it was a good time to be an American—if one survived the war.

The nation was behind its fighting men, the overwhelming majority of citizens sought to do their part. And unity achieved miracles. In three and a half years the effort of unified Americans produced the world's mightiest military force. The lesson is obvious; unified, the nation can overcome practically any obstacle or problem, even Watergate. We can remember this profitably today—thirty-two years after Pearl Harbor.

Wallace & 1976

Rules for the 1976 Democratic convention have been redrawn and it seems Alabama Governor George Wallace will have a better chance of influencing the outcome in the nomination derby as a result.

Wallace is likely to have more delegates at the convention—if he runs—because the rules for 1976 provide state delegates be split among those competing in the state primaries. Whereas heretofore Wallace has run strongly in many non-southern states, often the winner-take-all system meant he had no delegates from them at the national convention.

Actually the division of delegates in proportion to the primary vote each received is a desirable reform, long needed.

Another reform effected was elimination of the "unit rule" at conventions by which entire state delegations vote as a unit for that candidate with majority support within them. This change is also a democratic reform.

Democrats have, in addition, also abandoned the racial quota rule of 1972, which attempted to force every state delegation's makeup to reflect racial percentages of the population; unwisely, they retained a rule requiring delegations be divided equally between males and females. (The principle is the same in both cases—delegates should be those who are fairly selected in their states because of their interest, qualifications and effort, without regard to sex or race rules, other than one assuring all-races and sexes representation.)

The changes now being hailed by Wallace undoubtedly increase his potency; if he has four hundred, or five hundred delegates, rather than two or three hundred, he might well play the role of kingmaker. Conceivably, he could be nominated but that is considered unlikely by most political experts.

If Senator Ted Kennedy remains the favorite for the party's top nomination, the latest changes in convention rules increase Wallace's influence; they give him a much improved chance to be the number-two man on any ticket—if he would accept it.

NEWS REPORT FROM WASHINGTON

Another War? Washington's Move— A Costly Policy— Japan's Plight—

Washington, D.C.—The resupply of Arab armies by the Soviet Union has posed serious questions concerning a renewed outbreak of fighting in the Middle East.

If the war is resumed, can President Nixon again give and loan billions to Israel, perhaps risk another confrontation with Russia, in view of the fact that Israel promises the U.S. nothing specific in return, such as compliance with U.N. resolutions that she withdraw from seized Arab territory?

Can the U.S. afford to send so much of its modern military equipment to Israel again without running unwise security risks? Can Washington further alienate many European nations, and Japan, by a dual policy of maintaining Israel's military supremacy while refusing to impose a settlement on Tel Aviv as a price for this immense, vital support?

World sentiment is overwhelmingly against Israel, and the U.N. has repeatedly voted resolutions calling for an Israeli withdrawal from captured Arab territory.

Only a U.S. veto barred U.N. action in this direction earlier this year.

Tel Aviv's stubborn policy of holding on to Arab lands, especially its decision a few months ago to start settling Israeli citizens there helped precipitate the latest war.

Washington is now faced with the necessity of either facing domestic political repercussions at home in telling Tel Aviv to bow to world pressure and overwhelming international sentiment or facing more and more alienation all over the world.

The Japanese, for example, didn't appreciate a State Department objection to their emergency warning to Israel to evacuate captured Arab lands or risk a break in diplomatic relations. The Japanese see Israel's hard stand as a direct threat to their nation's economy and health, and reprimands from Washington are hardly likely to alter this stark fact of life. Rather, they aggravate friction between the two countries.

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's recent trial-balloon attempt to intimidate the Arab countries, in hinting this country was not helpless in facing the Arab oil threat and could counter with economic retaliation, brought once-friendly King Faisal of Saudi Arabia solidly to the defense of the Arab cause, with a sharp warning that oil production might be cut eighty per cent in this key country.

Meat Prices

Despite the fact that wholesale meat prices have dropped sharply recently, prices at the grocer and butcher have not followed the trend very far.

One way consumers can force retail prices lower is to eat less meat. As demand slackens and meat goes unsold, the price will inevitably come down.

There are today many meat substitutes, some of which are more healthful and just as nutritious as meat. Cutting down on meat consumption, especially meat with considerable fat content, will not be harmful individually and will help in the fight against inflated prices.

Such a cut would produce chaos in countries depending on Saudi Arabian oil, and vastly increase disenchantment with the pro-Israeli policy of the United States. Since the Arabs have now been rearmed, Washington is facing this possibility plus the possibility of a new war.

ASTROLOGERS WORSHIP CHRIST

"Then Herod sent a private message to the astrologers, asking them to come to see him; at this meeting he found out from them the exact time when they first saw the star. Then he told them, 'Go to Bethlehem and search for the child. And when you find him, come back and tell me so that I can go and worship him too!'"

After this interview the astrologers started out again. And look! The star appeared to them again, standing over Bethlehem. Their joy knew no bounds!

Entering the house where the baby and Mary his mother were, they threw themselves down before him, worshipping. Then they opened their presents and gave him gold, frankincense and myrrh."

by Joe Kelly

To Jim Carlen: Congratulations, coach, you not only made it, you made it big. For the first time in my memory, Texas Tech has given a football coach a pact that insures longevity.

I think it's safe to say that, based on the record of the Raider football teams over Carlen's four seasons at the big spread, the contract was deserved. He has demonstrated that he can recruit the type of player needed to produce a winner, that he can assemble a top staff, that he can organize and direct, that he is a winner.

I think it's also safe to say that Jim has been a controversial coach, especially in his first two seasons here. As a result, not everyone will jump up and cheer, although even those not overly sold on the man personally give grudging tribute to his record.

Indeed, one of the first things mentioned was that he still hadn't beaten Texas. If he had won this year, he probably would have been given a lifetime contract!

The long contract should put to rest the last serious opposition to Coach Carlen. Those who were disgruntled the first two years, and who investigated the possibility of buying up his contract, have been squelched thoroughly.

In fact, the long-term contract should unify people behind Carlen and Texas Tech football. The 10-year pact was not a frivolous, spur-of-the-moment action. It showed abiding faith in him. Anything less than complete support would be fantastic stupidity.

Don't get excited, Tech basketball fans, the season is young yet. What's more, this is the toughest non-conference schedule Tech has had in years.

Gerald Myers has a rebuilding job to do and it isn't going to get done overnight. People don't realize, yet, just how much Ron Richardson and Ed Wakefield meant to last year's championship club. The first home game helped bring it out, though.

Vanderbilt, with an experienced, seasoned team, kept pecking away at the Raiders. They pressed on defense. They harried Tech players from behind. They gambled on the passing lanes to intercept. They didn't panic, kept their poise and forced Raider turnovers.

Vandy had good shooters, too. They had good, quick movement of the ball. At times they faked Tech defenders out of their sneakers. They kept the pressure on.

All of which isn't to say that Tech doesn't have the makings of a good team. It does. The difference right now is that it has too many inexperienced players for topflight competition that is seasoned, canny and poised.

But that's the reason for tough non-conference games. It gives new players the experience they need. It helps a team jell. And when the conference campaign rolls around, it's a new ball game.

There were bright spots in Monday night's loss, and not just the fact that Rick Bullock scored 27 points. Rick was expected to be a prolific scorer this year.

But I thought that Grady Newton showed signs of becoming a good forward, with more experience. He came up with some good points on the board and he handled the ball well at times. Forward, of course, is the spot that bothers Gerald the most.

William Johnson should develop into a strong player, while Richard Little and Don Moore are steady at guard. Both, however, are capable of better games than Monday night.

Tech, at times, moved the ball well. The Raiders were alert and several times took advantage of Vandy mistakes. One area that needs strengthening is rebounding, where Tech too often was out of position, allowing Vandy to come up with too many rebounds.

In short, the picture looks encouraging.

To the surprise of just about everyone, Rice took third place in the conference grid race and Baylor finished on the bottom without a victory. Arkansas did a little better than expected and SMU didn't do as well, despite its finish.

Fans ought to mark down Arkansas and Baylor as two capable of causing trouble next year. The Hogs got stronger as the season progressed and Baylor, in view of the 0-7 record, may be overlooked. Thus, this could make the Bears a real factor.

The news of Andre Tillman's selection to the AP All American team came as a surprise and a non-surprise, both. But the honor was richly deserved for an outstanding football player.

Tillman has been brilliant at split end. Because he wasn't used as a prime receiver much of the time, there was a tendency to overlook him. That would have been tragic, because he blocked brilliantly and was a key to Tech's offensive performance. The honor is earned.

The arrival of two open-end spinning frames at the Texas Tech Textile Research Center during the week of November 25 gives added hope that the recent announcement of three commercial open-end plants on the Plains is "just a beginning," says Ray Joe Riley of Hart, President of Lubbock based Plains Cotton Growers Inc.

"The open-end system is being hailed as a major innovation in the textile industry," Riley states, "and it could be the means for turning an already promising future into a brilliant future for the production of High Plains cotton."

Open-end spinning of cotton yarns, in addition to being three or four times as fast as conventional ring spinning, does not require or even favor raw cotton with micronaire readings in the premium priced 3.5 to 4.9 range. On the contrary, testing to date has shown that low micronaire cottons, normally in abundant supply from the High Plains crop, may well produce yarns on the open-end system superior to those made from higher micronaire cottons.

"These tests are conclusive enough to serve as one of the reasons that an existing mill on the Plains is switching much of its production from ring to open-end spinning, and two other such mills are on the way," Riley notes, adding that "PCG will be doing additional, more extensive research on the two machines at Tech, with the results used to encourage both the establishment of other spinning mills on the Plains and the use of High Plains cotton in open-end operation around the world."

Careful plans are being laid by PCG, the Textile Research Center and others toward these ends. A meeting at the PCG offices November 30, for example, drew research recommendations from PCG, the Textile Research Center, the South Plains Research and Extension Center, the Federal Ginning Laboratory at Lubbock and from principals in the existing and planned commercial operations.

"PCG is also looking ahead to possibilities for other new and perhaps even more revolutionary yarn forming methods yet to be proven commercially," Riley states, "as well as considering research of new weaving and finishing techniques."

"The objective," he continued, "is to make sure our cotton's ability to perform on these new systems is recognized far and wide."

The existing mill to which Riley referred is Southwest Textiles, Inc. of Abernathy. The plant is replacing some of its ring spinning with seven open-end frames (1400

Youth Committies Begin Plans for 1974 First Baptist Church Activities Here

This past week, two committees of several youth each have met to discuss plans for two important activities at First Baptist Church in Shallowater, which will be happening in 1974.

The first of these is the Bob Larson weekend March 1,2,3. Mr. Larson is a very highly respected authority in the field of youth culture and music who has traveled extensively over the world lecturing on these topics. He is a very gifted musician and author. His weekend here will be a combination of lectures and evangelistic services, with special features for youth and adults alike.

This committee meets again Saturday, December 8, to make further plans.

The second activity is the July 22-27 Institute in Basic Youth Conflicts in Dallas. The senior high youth through adults are encouraged to make this trip to perhaps one of the most valuable learning weeks to be had anywhere. Information on this trip will be available in detail soon.

spinning units). Three of the frames should be in operation before the end of this year and the other four in place by the Spring of 1974.

One of the two mills mentioned as "on the way" is Feather Fabrics, Inc., a joint venture between Lubbock area investors and Nijverdal-Ten Cate, the Netherlands' oldest and largest integrated textile firm. This plant will be located in Lubbock, will begin with 2400 spinning units, and should be in production by the Fall of 1974.

The other mill slated for the Plains will be known as Daiwabo Texas, Inc. and will be jointly owned by two Japanese firms, Daiwa Spinning Company and the Marubini Corporation. A specific site for the plant has not been announced but it has been confirmed for the High Plains area. It is expected to be in operation by late 1975 with about 4000 spinning units.

The Primary Music Makers Choir will present their Christmas program Wednesday evening, December 18, at 7:30 p.m. They will sing Christmas carols interspersed with narration and poetry presented by the children. Following their presentation, the Junior Young Musicians Choir will present the Mary Davis cantata for children's voices, "The Children of Bethlehem." This cantata is the story of the children who followed the arrival of Mary and Joseph at Bethlehem, and the events which surrounded the birth of Jesus.

It is hoped that everyone will support these choirs in their program, and will attend both services, as the story of Christmas unfolds through music.

by Jewel Robinson Turkey-In-The-Sack

Cooking turkey in a bag has been a very popular way of cooking. These directions have been requested. Many times we buy the special bags for baking which does the same thing. In case you have the special bags and they are the wrong size, you might like these directions also. Anyway, we nearly always have a paper grocery bag:

Combine and let stand at least 10 minutes:
1 teaspoon pepper
2 teaspoons salt
3 teaspoons paprika
4 teaspoons hot water
Add-mixing well: 1 cup cooking oil.

Wash and dry turkey, then rub inside and out with cooking oil mixture—14 to 16 pound turkey (should not exceed 16 pounds).

Pour remaining oil into large paper sack (type used in grocery stores) and add enough oil to coat inside of sack. Be sure all inner surface is coated in oil. Truss turkey as desired and place in sack, breast up. Fold over end of sack and tie securely. Bake in moderate oven (350 degree F.) approximately ten minutes per pound. Since sack is airtight, turkey is cooked by live steam. Open sack with care. If desired, coat turkey with glaze when cool.

Thinking usually means less talking.
