UNDERSTANDING VERSUS ADVICE

A woman who is an alcoholic cried out to me, "If only people would NOT say, 'If I were you.'" What she was meaning to say was that she could not stand any more advice from others. What she needed was for someone to help her understand why she was an alcoholic. She needed to know why she would choose alcohol and a state of drunkenness over her husband and her children. She needed to understand why, for if she could ever understand why she had to have alcohol, then there would be a chance for her to recover, to heal. This is why advice does so little good to those who are suffering from mental hurts like grief, or alcoholism, or divorce or nervous breakdown. Advice does not help us to understand why we are acting as we do, and if we can ever understand why we do something, then we can find a way to heal the hurt.

All of us, whether we be a counselor or a friend, can remember that understanding is greater than advice. If we really understand someone's problem, then we have taken on a share of that problem and we have shouldered a part of the load. But, if we simply give out advice, we have not shared the trouble.

Now, what is understanding? Understanding is to have a full grasp of the whole situation. Understanding is to comprehend the complete whole. For instance, if I cry, you may assume that I am sad. This assumption does not take understanding—only observation. But, if I tell you I am crying because I have lost a loved one in death and if you respond by also feeling sad, then understanding has occurred. You have taken on a part of my load of grief. And what is most important, you have not tried to give me advice like: quit crying, it makes your eyes red; quit crying, it does not look good in public; or, quit crying, everything will be all right. Rather, you have felt what I feel. You have taken on a part of my load of grief. You have understood.

Once you have understood me, and I am assured of your understanding, then together we can seek to solve the problem that is now our problem. Once it was mine alone, but when you dared to understand it became your problem as well as mine. And, as we have understood the least of God's children and helped to shoulder the load, we have also loved God.

And to love him with all the heart, and with all the understanding, and with all the soul, and with all the strength, and to love his neighbor as himself, is more than all the burnt offerings and sacrifices. (Mark 12:33 KJV)

The oldest of the living children is Mrs. Mary Lee Weeks, 62. The youngest person attending was Kevin Scott Epperson, 2 months old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Epperson of Ropesville.

21,000 ATTEND NAZARENE COMMUNION

More than 21,000 members of the Church of the Nazarenes jammed Memorial Coliseum Sunday, June 21, for communion services on the first day of the denomination's general assembly, according to The Oregonian, a newspaper that is printed in Portland, Ore.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Lovelless and daughter, Mrs. Mansfield Thomas and girls, Brenda and Libby, attended this outstanding assembly, and report an experience of a lifetime. Mrs. Thomas handed us the paper with the account in it, which continues:

This was the largest crowd ever in coliseum history, according to Portland Fire Bureau officials. The previous high was 12,200 in 1961 for a Harlem Globetrotters basketball game.

With miraculous organization and planning, deacons and ushers served communion to an estimated 17,000 members. They were jammed in the main auditorium, outside in the concourse, in the Georgia Pacific room, where they watched services on closed circuit television, and in meeting rooms throughout the vast structure, where sermons were piped by loud speaker.

The faithful formed an awesome sea of faces reaching from the flower decked stage, where a uniformed choir sang to the farthest reaches of the cavernous building.

It was only an eleven-hour decision by a member of the fire marshal's office which allowed all who wanted in to attend.

With services to begin at 10 a.m., there were 18,000 inside the building and about 3,000 outside at 9 a.m. At 9:15 the fire marshal ordered the doors locked. The parking lot was jammed with cars with license plates from virtually every state.

At 10:15 the fire marshal relented. The doors were opened and the record broken.

IT TAKES MORE THAN ONE

In Russia there are no 4-H Clubs to teach boys and girls a better way of life, and work on agricultural extension service to show better methods for raising crops and livestock, or specialists to help improve homemaking skills, no business men to support this "massive, informal, educational program" which includes 4-H.

However, Premier Khrushchev did learn something about the Cooperative Extension Service during his visit to the U.S. In a Pravda article Khrushchev revealed a "secret" to the Russian people. He admitted that certain extension practices were "borrowed" from the Soviet agricultural system and were overhauled recently.

Explains Service
"I have in mind," he said, the introduction of scientific achievements in the United States of America a farmer's service exists under the universities and colleges. The agents meet with the farmers and persuade them to introduce this or that method, help them in organization of production and furnish them with plans."

He got most of the extension picture, but apparently missed the role of extension in the last 60 years in developing the 4-H Club program.

In the long days of 4-H, the trained extension agents worked with the children of farm families. The plan provided the wedge that opened the door to the agents to reach the farmers and their wives.

No Free Enterprise
It has been suggested that Khrushchev might furnish us with some ideas under communism as he also had initiated a program for youth patterned after the 4-H Clubs seventy other foreign countries have. But Russia lacks the initiative and backing provided by private enterprise.

U.S. industry and backed 4-H work right from the beginning. It provides technical know-how, financial aid and recognition. More than 50 leading business firms cooperate with the extension service and the National 4-H Service Committee in sponsoring individual projects.

Today there are at least three dozen areas of 4-H Club work. Some of the newer programs and their sponsors are: Photography, Eastman Kodak; Conservation, John Deere Foods-Nutrition, General Foods, Alumni Recognition, Olie Mathieson; Job Care and Training, Ralston-Purina.

Fifty years ago there were only a few projects growing tomatoes and raising pigs to eat the corn.

Long-Time Support

Sponsors that have supported 4-H for 50 or more years are: American Society, Santa Fe Railway, Burlington Railroad, Milwaukee Railroad, Chicago & North Western Railway, Cals & Clark, General Electric, Coca-Cola, Pillsbury, General Foods, International Harvester, A&W, Glass, Standard Oil, U.S. West, Montgomery Ward, Sears-Roebuck Foundation, Postgraduate Educational Foundation, Wilson & Co., Standard Oil, Ohio, General Motors, American Oil Foundation.

Collectively they make the National 4-H Club Congress possible. One of the most coveted awards for a 4-H'er is the congress trip given to one boy or girl per state in a specific program. Altogether about 1,600 young people from 50 states travel to Chicago each fall to participate in this educational event.

ing crowd filed quietly into the coliseum.

Dr. D. B. Williamson, of Kansas City, a general superintendent, preached the communion message.

Setting the stage for the mass communion to follow, he said, "We see in the offering of Christ, God making his heart bare for all mankind."

Noting the growth and spread of the new church, he said, "The church is a river which flows down the mountain of Calvary and touches the souls of millions. So short time ago there came to be a tributary of this great stream. And it was the church of the Nazarene. And it will grow . . . We prepare our hearts for an invasion of the spirit and pray to be moved into the realm of the divine."

Then hundreds of deacons and ushers in black suits with white carnations moved to appointed "islands". These were white clothed tables on which were stacked paper plates, each with mounds of tiny wafers. Near these were stacked cardboard containers, each with about 40 holes filled with tiny plastic vials, filled with grape juice.

The ushers first passed the ceremonial host and then, with almost military precision the grape juice, serving the 17,000.

A SUNDAY afternoon service highlighted missionary work and D. I. Vanderpool, retiring general superintendent, spoke Sunday night.

This church was formed in 1908.

The Loveless' and Mrs. Thomas report it was an experience they will never forget, thrilling their souls.
