THREE WAYS

.....Ted Dotts

Man, whether he is a Ropes farmer or an ancient Greek philosopher, has always sought to find that which makes life worth living, meaningful. It seems true that so long as great tragedies and hurts do not enter our lives we can slide by without looking for life's meaning. We may pass our days in meaningless pursuits that act like opium and keep us asleep to life's need for meaning. But, as is inevitable in all life, the moment of tragedy will occur whether it comes with death, divorce, loss of job, defeat or failure.

In the moment of tragedy man reaches out for meaning as one clutching at a twig when drowning. Many who do not find meaning at the first clutch simply glide out of life on the wings of suicide or become living corpses through alcohol or mental asylums. But some do not give up at the first clutch. Some continue in spite of the Hell of their individual experiences to reach out.

There are at least three ways to continue the search for life's meaning. First, we may find meaning in the work we do. In his work man is a creator. Whether he cleans a room, harvests cotton, reads a book or mows a lawn; man's work can be meaningful because it allows him to create something. So, in order to find a meaning in life, each one ought to look at the work he does and view that which he has created. If he can discover what he has created, he will also discover meaning. And, of course, if he discovers no creation, then this in itself is meaningful, since it reveals his need to either change work or ask why he is doing it.

Secondly, meaning can be found in personal encounter. There is current theological circles today those who are called "Existentialists". It is the central theme of these theologians that meaning for life is found when we really enter into a depth relationship with those about us. No man can find any meaning for his life if he is an island unto himself.

Finally, meaning is found in life through the attitude we take towards life. We may not be able to determine one other thing about our lives but we can always determine the attitude we take toward life. We may be caught in a particular kind of work. We may have to be farmers all our lives or housewives or storekeepers. But nothing and no one determines our attitude toward our work, but we ourselves. We may have to live within the confines of Ropes Community all our lives and thereby be tied to personal encounters with a limited number of people. But, we freely determine our attitudes toward these people.

If our attitudes are of hate and disgust, then life's meaning is lost to hate and disgust. If our attitudes are of love and seeking faith, then life's meaning takes on the character of seeking and love.

EAGLES LOSE TO AMHERST 51 TO 0

Amherst intercepted seven Ropes passes, and ran back several kicks for long yardage which led them to a lopsided victory over the Eagles. They were not that much better than us; our boys were still giving one hundred per cent when the final whistle blew.

This week we have to forget all of that, and play strong Class A Paducah. Paducah is coached by Paducah's ex-coach, Judd Maxfield. They have won 2 and lost 2. Their two losses were to Class teams; the two victories over Class B teams. Paducah has a 185 pound fullback and a 200 pound fullback.

Last week's honors went to Lineman of the week, Bill McCormick, and Back of the Week, Terry Bradshaw.

Nola Knows

By Nola White

Dear Nola - Does a girl have to be pretty to be popular? I'm certainly not pretty I've never had a date. Should I speak first, and meet a boy half way being friendly? What should I talk about on a date? Fourteen

Dear Fourteen - No, a girl doesn't have to be pretty to be popular, but, of course, it helps. Make the most of what you've got, and by that I don't mean pile on a lot of make-up. Pay careful attention to your grooming, take care of your skin, learn to use cosmetics becomingly, watch your diet and your posture, and forget the way you look. Speak first to everybody. Be the friendliest person in school. If you're always cheerful, considerate of others, and fun to be with, both boys and girls will beat a path to your door. If you develop your own interests, hobbies and sports, boys interested in the same things will be attracted to you, and you'll never have to wonder what to talk about.

Dear Nola - I'm engaged to a fine woman who has qualities which I'm sure will make her a good wife. Recently a twice-married divorcee who is a friend began writing urging me not to do something I'll regret. This has made me wonder if I'll be happy married after being single so long.

Bachelor

Dear Bachelor - That two-time loser is no friend. In all fairness to your fiancée, all postpone your marriage until you're sure.

Dear Nola - My husband does not love me any more and it's all my fault. I've been jealous over nothing, I've nagged him, I've been too particular about the house, and an all around rotten wife. He still treats me well because he thinks it's his duty. Is there any way to win him back?..... Broken hearted

Dear Broken - You've made a giant stride just recognizing that you've been at fault. Don't say another word about your past mistakes either to him or to yourself. By your actions, show him you want to make amends. Be pleasant, cheerful, congenial and happy. Work ten times harder to be a good wife. What he thinks is duty may still be love. Stranger things have happened.

Dear Nola - I'm in college and the girl I love is insisting we get married. She says she'll drop me if I don't. I've told her I can't support her, but she says she'll support herself until I finish college. I don't want that, but I can't see any other way. Can you? Sophomore

Dear Soph - Yes, I can, but you aren't going to like it. This girl is bad news. She's totally selfish and not very bright. If you let her drop you, or better still tell her to hit the road, you'll be doing yourself a big, big favor.

Send your letters to Nola Knows, Box 411, Temple, Texas. For a personal reply, all fairness to your fiancée, all postpone your marriage until you're sure.
