BACIAL NOMENCLATURE

Homer Henderson

For the sake of convenience, we often speak of the three major groups of people who inhabit our community as "An glo", "Latin", and "Negro." Although we all know what we're talking about, the fact remains that the use of these three terms is grossly inaccurate. The term "Negro" designates race while both the term "Anglo" and the term "Latin" designate language origins. The inaccuracy and the injustice arises at the point when we begin to suppose that there are three different races in our community when there are actually only two: Caucasoid and Negroid.
