PETTY WRITES FROM AUSTIN

With the $32.9 million tax bill safely through both houses of the Legislature, attention now turns to the biennial appropriations bill. The limit of general fund appropriations is circumscribed by the revenue measure.

The 1963 tax bill stands as a monument of team work. Before the measure ever came out of the House Committee the governor, lieutenant governor, speaker and chairman of the House Committee, who was author of the bill, sifted through the areas of disagreement and settled upon the areas of agreement. The tax measure passed through both houses without an amendment.

This is something new for the Texas Legislature. There is little reason to believe that it will ever happen again. The next major tax battle in Texas, whether it comes two, four or six years from now will bring into focus all the differences of tax philosophy that were aired two years ago when the State took the first step into the broad based tax field.

Awaiting the governor's signature is H. B. 50 which authorizes a maximum speed of 70 miles an hour for passenger vehicles under certain conditions. The new regulation will not be effective until 90 days after adjournment of the Legislature. During this 90 day period, the Texas Highway Department will be busy zoning the federal, state and Farm-Market roads.

House Bill 50 charges the Highway Commission with the responsibility of fixing a reasonable and safe speed for any section of a highway. This may be at any maximum speed below 70 miles an hour which is considered safe under the condition that exists on any particular stretch of highway.

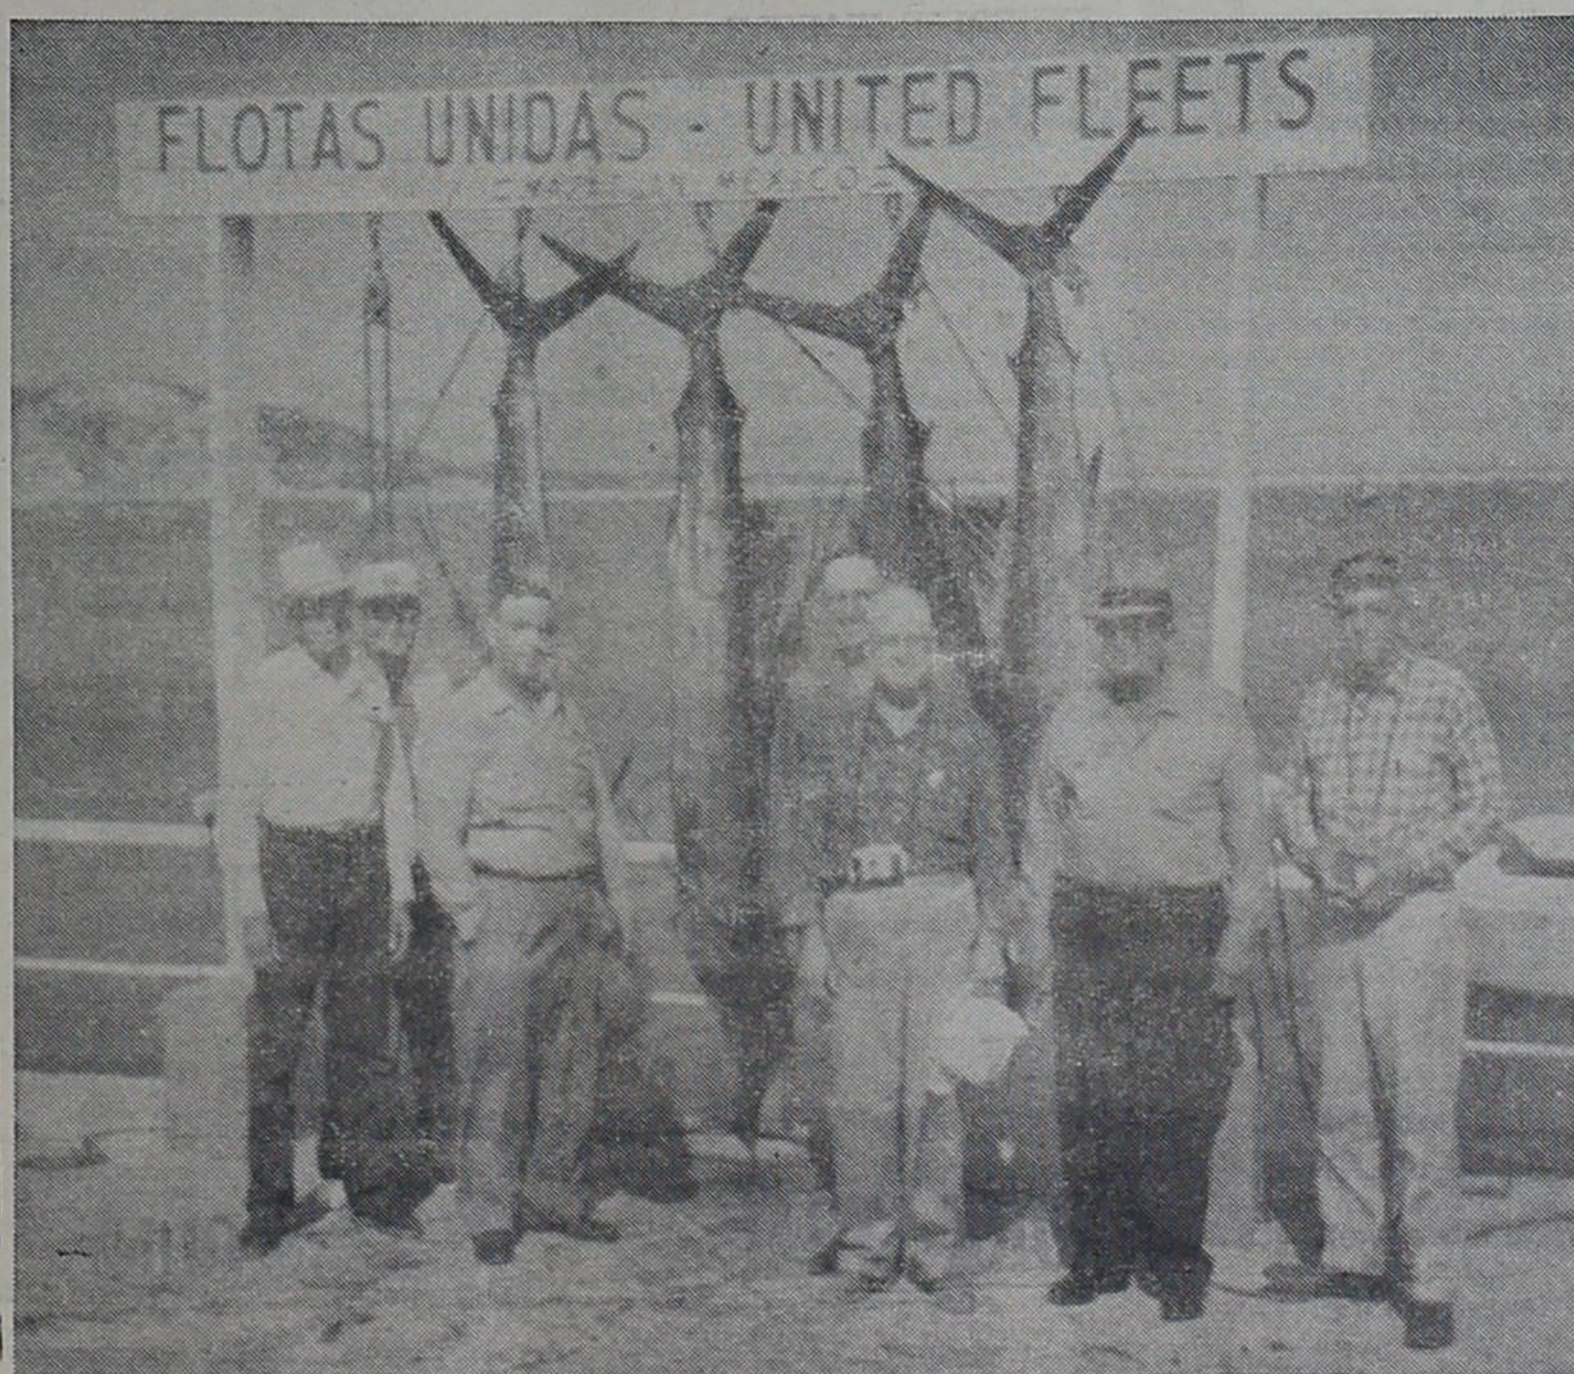

Road signs will be the driver's guide to the maximum—and in some cases minimum—speeds.

Governor Conally said Monday he will ask the legislative conference committee considering the $3.1 billion appropriations bill to include in its report a $3 million item for screwworm eradication.

Conally's office said livestock producers and sportsmen have donated $3 million for the program. The state money would match the voluntary contributions Federal matching funds also are available for the program.

House members refused 107-38 Monday to do away with death in the electric chair. The vote on Capital punishment came as the House discussed an omnibus recodification of Texas' code of criminal procedure.

The House passed to the Senate Monday a measure which could give Texas its shortest legislative session in 20 years. The measure, a resolution by Rep. Ben Atwell Turn to Page 3
