Vibia Perpetua —Ted Dotts

Last week Perpetua, twenty two year old maiden of North Africa was condemned by the Roman Empire to die by the beasts in the arena because she was a Christian. In today's article we see Perpetua before the crowd at the arena who have gathered to see she and the other Christians die.

"Then after a few days Pudens the adjutant, who was in charge of the prison, who began to show us honour, perceiving that there was some great power within us, began to admit many to see us, that both we and they might be refreshed by one another's company. Now when the day of the games approached, my father came in to me, worn with trouble, and began to pluck out his beard and cast it on the ground, and to throw himself on his face, and to curse his years, and to say such words as might have turned the world upside down. I sorrowed for the unhappiness of his old age."

(Here ends Perpetua's personal account. From now on we read the account written by some observer who is anonymous.)

"The day of their victory dawned, and they proceeded from the prison to the amphitheatre, as if they were on their way to heaven, with gay and gracious looks; trembling, if at all, not with fear but with joy. Perpetua followed with shining steps, as the true wife of Christ, as the darling of God, abashing with the high spirit in her eyes the gaze of all. And when they were led within the gate, and were on the point of being forced to put on the dress, the men of the priests of Saturn, the women of those dedicated to Ceres, the noble Perpetua resisted steadfastly to the last. (The Romans acted out pagan rites when killing people in the arena. The dress referred to here was the dress of one of the Roman Religions.) For she said: 'Therefore we came to this issue of our own free will, that our liberty might not be violated; therefore we pledged our lives, that we might do no such thing: this was our pact with you.' Injustice acknowledged justice; the commanding officer gave permission that they should enter the arena in their ordinary dress as they were. Perpetua was singing a psalm of triumph, and when they came in sight of Hilarian, they began to signify to him by nods and gestures: 'Thou art judging us, but God shall judge thee.' The people, infuriated by this, demanded that they should be punished with scourging before a line of beast-fighters. And they for this at least gave one another joy, that they had moreover won some share in the sufferings of the Lord."

(Next week the Conclusion—Death.)

Nola Knows By Nola White

Dear Nola, My daddy is eighty-six years old and a few months ago he married a woman younger than I am... (I'm 60) How in the world am I supposed to introduce this woman to people? Am I supposed to say this is my "step-mother" as young as she is, or do I just say my father's wife? Puzzled Over Daddy Dear Nola - Talk this over with your father's wife and find out which she prefers. She probably can solve the problem for you and feel flattered that you were considerate enough to ask. Dear Nola, My husband is a cranky old man 30 years older than I am. When we married he promised me that I could do as I pleased, but he has changed his mind and wants me to stay home all the time. I don't do anything but go to the neighborhood tavern and drink a little beer with my friends, but he thinks this is wrong. To keep down trouble I have taken to hiding my car in a vacant lot to keep him from seeing it in front of this tavern. Now, my problem is this: The other day a man who doesn't have anything to do with the vacant lot told me that if I parked there any more he would report me. How can I get him to mind his own business? Send your problems to Nola Knows, Box 551, Temple, Texas. For a personal reply include a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Confused - He may smell a roast, but I smell a rat. Put a padlock on the refrigerator and give your wife's friend the address of a good restaurant. Personal to Born to Lose: You sure can't win a race you don't enter. Personal to Cat Troubles: You're not the only one with cat troubles. Think of the poor mice! Send your problems to Nola Knows, Box 551, Temple, Texas. For a personal reply include a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Spray new Caparol after cotton is 6 inches high to control weeds.

Control most annual broadleaf weeds and grasses in cotton with new Caparol* herbicide. Simply apply as a directed spray to the base of your cotton when it is six inches or higher.

You'll get good knockdown of weeds and grasses that are less than two inches high... plus some killing action through the roots of later-germinating weeds.

The cost of this treatment, when Caparol is applied in a 10 inch band, can be as little as 85 cents per acre. Compare this with the $2-3 per acre it would cost you for hoe hands.

Later on in the season, you can go in and make a layby application of new Caparol to control weeds until the cotton is high enough to shade them out.

With new Caparol, you'll have no reason to worry about soil residue carryover to harm next year's spring-seeded crops.

Ask your supplier for new Caparol.
