IF you think you've been warm to already, consider the fact that the longest day of the year, Monday, will seem to be a long day, no matter what the weather.

Final average daily attendance figures qualify the school for just 69 classroom teachers next year, as compared to 70 this year, it was reported. This means that the 70th teacher, which will be hired, must be paid out of local funds. Supt. J. C. McClesky noted that had Slaton schools had an average of four more persons attending daily, the school would have qualified for financial aid for 70 units again.

Resignation of Mrs. Frances Schluender as junior high science teacher was accepted. This resignation leaves three vacancies at present. Also needed are a high school basketball coach and a building trades instructor. Hired Tuesday night were Sgt. Bobby Joe Jackson for ROTC; Miss Ellen Field, junior high music; Mrs. Donna England, junior high English; M. L. Gierhart Jr. for junior high mathematics; and these SELCO personnel: Miss Sue Lewis and Candace Odom for Cooper; Mrs. Vicki Hart and Denise Caviness for Slaton; Cynthia Lea Boyd for Roosevelt and Southland; and Mrs. Betty Hall for Southland.

Three persons were appointed to a Board of Equalization which will meet June 27. They are Robert Hall Davis, Earl Forester and Bob Kern Jr.

The school depository contract for two years was awarded to Citizens State Bank of Slaton.

Supt. McClesky reported on new legislation affecting the school, noting that one bill requiring employees to come under the workmen's compensation law will cost the district about $4,000 more in operating expense each year when it becomes effective in July 1974.

New Christmas decorations downtown will be leased and installed this season, Chamber of Commerce Manager Earl Bartley told the Chamber board of directors in that group's monthly meeting Tuesday. Bartley said various merchants had agreed to an assessment of $60 per year to pay for the lights which cost $1337 per year for three years.

Ernie Davis reported that 54 youngsters are taking part in the summer recreation program.

School Gets New Bus, Offers Land For Sale

Slaton Independent School District will offer a 7.9 acre tract of land for sale, and will seek bids on the property located adjacent to U.S. 84 south of Smith Ford property, trustees voted Tuesday night.

The property originally was bought by the school with the idea of building an elementary school on it, but federal regulations later put into effect made such a plan impossible. The board voted to consider sealed bids on the land on Aug. 14.

Board members were advised that a new International 72-passenger school bus has been delivered. The bus cost $8,543.

FOOT NOTES
BY MARGRET CRISPIN

Hello again! It is nice to be back at the typewriter. I was surprised to find that the old Slatonite Staff could do without me a week. They say there were fewer problems and they got the paper out earlier than when I'm here. They sure know how to make a gal feel missed! This week we're having to do without our regular red-head typists because of mumps in the family, and our tall-all-round gal just took off for a summer's vacation. So, according to the record of last week, things should go twice as fast as usual with practically no problems at all! (I can guarantee you that that is NOT the way it is though!)

If you know me, you probably know that I just returned from a wedding trip (my own). My family and I are now making our home in Wilson, but you're not going to get to do without me around here.

I certainly can sympathize with the little brides and their mothers as they rush around to make arrangements for everything. All of our plans didn't work out just as planned, but I guess we were the only ones to notice that. Everything worked out beautifully, and in my biased opinion, it was a lovely wedding and reception.

I now realize that the ultimate in humiliation is to be told that you snore, being told, of course, by one's new husband, and in front of family and friends that you are trying to impress with your new mate. That kinda takes away from the beauty of the moment, I'll say.

Got back just in time for the big sidewalk sale and flea market set this Saturday. The much-publicized event shows all the signs of being a great success. Most businesses, organizations, and many individuals will be sporting bargains for everyone as the day gets underway. Don't miss it!

Have you entered your child in the Mr. and Miss Slaton contest yet? Better do it, because I'm sure you know that YOUR child is the best looking one in town. I know mine is!

ALA Scholarships Are Available

The American Legion Auxiliary will give two scholarships to seniors at Slaton High School. Applicants must have been accepted by the school of their choice before they can receive the awards, including a $100 and a $50 scholarship.

The $50 will go to a person in nursing training. The ALA committee contacted Methodist Hospital, and found that applications are being accepted in X-ray technician school and operating room technician school. The two schools pay a monthly salary after three months of training. These two fields of work need trained personnel. The Auxiliary is also interested in the teaching field. Persons interested can contact Mrs. Carter Shaw, at 735 W. Scurry, phone 828-3744.

IT WAS A BASEBALL -- Mothers of Pee Wee League baseball players sort of had a game Saturday to raise funds for renovation of the park. About $120 was raised in the fun game, and moms expressed appreciation to donors and buyers of concession items. In the photo above, left, Lila Serenil rounds third base as Susan Bowlds stands by wishing

LOSS OF TEETH FEARED BY MEN

A recent survey by the International College of Oral Implantology discloses that women face the prospect of dentures with more equanimity than men.

Dr. Charles Weiss, President of the International College, explains the difference this way. "It seems to be the men who, after 40, have the greatest emotional problems. Often they are beginning to lose their hair and this, along with the loss of teeth, can be highly destructive to their morale. Removable dentures can seem especially disastrous to a man whose livelihood depends on selling to others. The executive who must conduct meetings will often cease to smile, talk as little as possible, and may even suffer a severe personality change."

That is why, according to Dr. Weiss, the modern dental implant technique that eliminates the need for removable dentures is such a boon. This modern implant, which was developed five years ago by Dr. Leonard Linkow and designed by Drs. Linkow and Weiss, provides substitute roots so that replacement teeth are permanently fixed, rather than removable.

Dr. Weiss points out that while women are better patients and statistically seek better dental care than men, nevertheless the prospect of losing teeth is a traumatic one. If the patient is young, she feels she will be unattractive to men. And if she has a family, with the attending pressures sometimes become depressed with a feeling of intimidation. She frequently stops eating in some cases, even needs psychiatric help.

Traditional Stock Split May Be Halted

The traditional "stock split," used by many corporations to reduce the market price of their shares to a more attractive level and often increase total dividends paid to stockholders, may be replaced soon by a new idea, according to the top executive of one of the nation's major forest, gypsum, pulp, paper and chemical companies.

The idea was detailed at a New York City security analyst meeting by R. B. Pamplin, chairman and president of Georgia-Pacific Corp., which early in 1973 accomplished the equivalent of a 25 per cent stock dividend or "split" by spinning off 20 per cent of the $1.9 billion company's assets into a new independent company, Louisiana-Pacific, and distributing the new company's stock to G-P stockholders.

The plan was worked out with the Federal Trade Commission, which thus accomplished its purpose of increasing competition in the industry without destroying individual small stockholders' equities.

While setting a new federal guideline to increase competition, it also gave individual stockholders ownership of two growth companies instead of one.

"We and other companies may do the same thing again in the future instead of traditional stock splits," Pamplin told the group.

With its new-style spin-off completed, Georgia-Pacific this year has already reported sales, earnings per share and net income higher than they were a year ago before the spin-off. It did so while operating under the new, more specific anti-monopoly guidelines.

The company now expects to double its sales, net income and earnings per share in the next five years through better distribution systems and new and better products.

To determine what's a good buy, consider your family, their nutritional needs, time, cost and product quality, suggests Mrs. Gwendolyn Clyatt, consumer marketing specialist.

Students Named To Honor List

Glen Akin, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Glen D. Akin was recently named to the Dean's Honor Roll at South Plains Junior College with a 3.62 average. He graduated May 18 with an Associate Degree in Animal Science. Next fall he will be enrolled at Texas A & M as a Junior.

Also named to the Dean's Honor Roll at Texas Tech University was Cynthia Akin. She was one of 245 students enrolled in the College of Arts & Sciences who made a grade-point average of 4.00. Cynthia is a Sophomore Pre-Med major at Tech.

Prepackaged orange juice, only one example of today's processed foods, keeps 180,000 tons of peels and pulp out of New York City's waste each year, says Georgia-Pacific Corp., a major national manufacturer of disposable paper packaging.

Modern frozen food packaging containers, the packaging experts note, bring countless products into every town and city minus the skin, bones, scales, feathers, innards, stalks, peels, leaves and other mountains of solid waste that would cause catastrophic local disposal problems.

Food and beverages account for 56 per cent of all consumer packaging, the paper coming from commercial timber grown for that purpose.

The newest, and perhaps most unusual, big U. S. export item is air pollution—or at least a major cause of such pollution. The Japanese are manufacturing it into paper for their domestic market. The former source of soot, cinders and smoke, which Georgia-Pacific Corp. says will amount to over 7,000,000 tons this year exported from its West Coast docks, is in the form of surplus wood chips made from sawmill and plywood plant waste that once poured into smoking incinerators or was piled as flammable solid waste.

New moldings for doors, window frames, baseboards and other uses look like real wood but are made mostly from common salt. Georgia-Pacific Corp. says response from do-it-yourselfers as well as professional builders who use the non-splitting, sawable and nailable PVC (polyvinyl chloride) foamed moldings has been excellent. The basic ingredient for PVC is chlorine, which the company makes from salt. The chlorine also is used for household bleach, swimming pool and municipal water purification as well as tertiary sewage treatment.

Set Goals For Handicapped Child

By BOB GERMAN
(Office of Early Childhood Development)

The family with a handicapped child needs a set of goals for that child so he might grow into as self-sufficient and mature a person as possible.

There are four important goals the family should adopt. One, the family should realistically recognize and help the child to recognize, accept and adjust to his problem. Two, they should find a way for the child to become as independent and self-sufficient as possible. Three, they should make sure the child achieves a high degree of self-confidence. Four, they need to help the child overcome, as much as they are able, his feeling of "difference."

Experts suggest that the parents of a handicapped child they can with themselves about the extent of their child's disability, and that they be frankly honest and open with the child. As a matter of fact, says Dr. Ernest Gots of the University of Texas special education department, "Parents should talk to their handicapped child as much as possible, giving him love, support and stimulation—as much as the normal child."

Dr. Florence Goodenough, former exceptional child specialist at the University of Minnesota, once pointed out that the handicapped child, "Must learn to ignore the curious glances of strangers, the well-meant but still embarrassing questions and the sympathetic remarks of friends and relatives and the thoughtless jests of other children. Often he must learn to bear pain without complaining."

The child will do this through observance of the parent's attitudes.

Open acceptance of a disability by parents and child is obviously no simple task, but the alternative is to let the child withdraw into himself in greater and greater isolation and dependence. "These things are not easy," Dr. Goodenough has admitted, "but they must be accomplished if the child's personality is not to be crippled along with his body."

Independence should be a goal all parents set for all children, but in the handicapped child it becomes a matter of the utmost concern.

Dr. Gots says, "Even in the ordinary family, it's a big middle class American hang-up: we keep our children dependent far too long. In my opinion, independence is the greatest gift you can give to a child, 'special' or not. Ideally we should want every handicapped person to be able to achieve economic independence and self-respect. The cost in doing this may be large. The cost in not doing it is far larger."

Dr. Goodenough has said that there should be a natural progress from dependence on others to reliance on the self.

Practically speaking, the way to accomplish independence is to provide the handicapped child with as many learning opportunities as possible. At the same time parents should make sure that not too many things are forced on the child at once, confusing him and possibly causing him to react away from self-help.

"Emphasis should always be upon the child's abilities, not upon his handicap," said Dr. Goodenough, "and there should be liberal praise for all accomplishments. The physically handicapped child may excel in character and personality, and he may acquire much knowledge and skill within the limits set by his actual handicap."

Parents should find at least one area in which the child can excel.

"It's what he can succeed in that we have to search for," says Dr. Willard Abraham, chairman of special education at Arizona State, "What sports, studies, hobbies, talents, or skills can help him stand out even a little bit? What individual or group activities can give him the recognition he needs?"

Finding out where the handicapped child can succeed may require, in some cases, getting specialized training.

Dr. Goodenough has said parents should always be on the alert to help the handicapped child "to find ways of utilizing his undamaged capacities as compensating mechanisms to minimize the effect of his defect."

Helping the child to find special skills will go a long way towards giving him the self-confidence he needs. "Self-confidence is increased by finding that he (the handicapped child) can do many things for himself," Dr. Goodenough has said. Toward this end parents should not always try and prevent the child from the normal nicks and scratches, or the petty offenses of other children.

Maturity also means obtaining a certain level of "frustration tolerance" to the lesser troubles of life. Some provision should be made to allow the child to make his own mistakes and overcome them by his own means. Over-protection becomes a dangerous sticking-point when parents realize how much it inhibits maturity and self-confidence. The child will eventually express his need for independence, and every parent should encourage that expression. Lastly, the child should be helped to overcome his feeling of difference. Parents should give their handicapped child the benefit of the best medical and surgical aid available. At the same time, they should accept his handicap as openly and casually as possible. They should also encourage normal socialization. All children should have friends. If the child is capable of going to a regular public school, he should go. Only when the handicap is especially severe or when there is a serious danger of the child's being rejected should he be put in special school. Dr. Goodenough has said that the handicapped child, "Must be taught to keep his resemblances in mind, to forget his differences, and to take an active part in the life and activities of his mates. Few defects are so severe that they must necessarily suffer from them. Overall, the handicapped child will need love and friends and social play and recreation control and discipline, and varied important expectations. Gots, "The child as normally thought about patience, he does measure that he can wants to."

I REMEMBER

From Mrs. Lois Euton, Massillon, Ohio: In the early 1930's there were eleven of us children to be fed on a railroader's pay. I remember some of the snacks we had in those days.

Sugar sandwiches were a favorite! Sugar would be spooned on a slice of bread, then sprinkled with water to anchor it, since there usually wasn't any butter to spread under the sugar as a base. Grease sandwiches would be made by spreading meat grease on a slice of bread and topping it with salt and pepper to add to the flavor.

In season there would be persimmons with all their pucker-power, and of course we had paw-paws, which we called country bananas.

In the winter we had snow-cream. We would fill a large container with snow carefully chosen from a nice clean and undisturbed spot. Then came sugar, vanilla flavoring and a little evaporated milk. Sometimes if it was available, we would add cocoa to make chocolate snow-cream.

In the summertime we took advantage of the wild berries. Those snacks of yesterday nourished our bodies, and to this day, they keep enriching our memories.

Water Gate Story Is Related In Bible

As Dr. Goodenough has pointed out, even in cases where total self-sufficiency is impossible, "If the child is given sufficient guidance and encouragement, he can as a rule pass much further along the road to independence and self-reliance than would otherwise be the case."

A contemporary translation, "The Living Bible", published two years ago and now appearing on best seller lists, tells about weeping and confession of national sins at Jerusalem's Water Gate, 2500 years ago. Then as now, the participants were high government officials. But in that incident, the confessions were voluntary. It all came about when the Jewish nation, after 70 years of captivity in Babylon, returned and rebuilt the ancient gates of their capitol city. One of these was the Water Gate. A mass meeting was convened at this gate to discuss the fact that the clergy, political leaders and average citizen alike were disobeying the laws God gave to Moses a thousand years earlier. Two of these same laws...

"Thou shalt not steal," and "Thou shalt not lie," ... are prominent again in today's Watergate affair.

In the earlier event the people broke out into weeping and confession when they realized how many of God's laws they themselves had broken along with their leaders. But it ended for the good of all concerned. A national reform was decided on, and agreement reached for every-one...politicians and average citizen alike...to obey all of God's laws thereafter. A happy celebration was begun, giving gifts and feasting, because everyone felt so glad that righteousness had again prevailed and God's laws were being enforced again.

The Living Bible tells of this historic event in the Old Testament book of Nehemiah, chapters eight and nine: "In mid-September, all the people assembled at the plaza in front of the Water Gate and requested Ezra, their religious leader, to read to them the law of God which He had given to Moses. So Ezra the priest brought out to them the scroll of Moses' laws. He stood on a wooden stand made especially for the occasion so that everyone could see him as he read. He faced the square in front of the Water Gate, and read from early morning until noon." --Nehemiah 8:1-3.

The purpose of the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973, passed by the Senate 78 to 9 on June 8, as stated by the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry from whence it came, is "to assure the production of adequate supplies at reasonable prices to consumers by insuring producers against losses if their expanded production results in prices below the target prices."

It is hard to find fault with this objective, says Executive Vice President Donald Johnson of Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., Lubbock, "but unless some changes can be made in the law before enactment it has little or no chance for achieving such a goal."

"The bill as it came from Committee had some very objectionable features," Johnson continued, "and these are still intact along with the further complication of a $20,000 payment limitation adopted on the Senate floor."

On a vote of 45 to 37 the Senate voted to reduce the limit on farm program payments from the current $55,000 per farmer per crop, in effect since 1970, to $20,000 per farmer on all crops produced.

"The key to the bill's chances for accomplishing its goals is in 'insuring producers against losses,'" Johnson believes, "because if this isn't done consumers can in no way be assured of adequate supplies at reasonable prices."

The bill, S-1888, sets a target price of 43 cents per pound for cotton and provides that producers should receive a payment equal to the difference between this figure and the average spot market quotations for SLM 1-1/16 inch cotton with 3.5 to 4.9 micronaire during the first five months of the marketing year, August through December.

"This method of determining the per-pound payment rate, alone, is enough to inhibit the production of adequate cotton supplies," Johnson thinks. "Since spot market quotations do not accurately reflect prices paid to farmers for cotton, and since the price for SLM 1-1/16 inch cotton may or may not parallel prices for other cotton qualities, the formula doesn't insure producers against anything."

It is Johnson's contention that to be used at all payments should be based on the difference between the target price and the prices actually paid to farmers for an average of the entire U. S. crop. "Otherwise, the chances for assuring production without producer losses are greatly reduced and some producers will benefit while others suffer."

The hope of PCG is that some of these inequities can be corrected in the House version of a farm bill, on which the House Agriculture Committee is already at work. "And in all honesty I'd have to say our chances for relief on the payment limitation issue in the House as of the moment don't look too bright," Johnson concluded.

FEEDLOT COURSE -- Texas A&M University will be combining professional instruction with maximum industry exposure when it launches a new graduate study program in feedlot management this summer. The five-week course for three hours of graduate credit will begin July 13 at the USDA Southwestern Great Plains Research Center at Bushland, announces Dr. Lowell Schack, assistant professor in A&M's Department of Animal Science. A course in feedlot diseases will also be taught at the same location.

FEEDING OPERATIONS, clean air act -- The Texas Air Control Board has in effect a permit program for confined livestock and poultry feeding operations, says an agricultural engineer for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. The program, set up under an amendment to the Texas Clean Air Act of 1967, considers the proper handling of manure and runoff to minimize odors and dust. Permits are required for both the construction and operation of a feedlot and for the construction and operation of a feedmill in conjunction with feeding facilities.

TURKEYS -- A BARGAIN -- Turkeys are still one of the best buys available, both economically and nutritionally, says a poultry marketing specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. The national average for turkey prices in 1972 was 55 cents a pound compared to 49 cents in 1965. Fifteen years ago, one hour of labor would have bought 4.7 pounds of turkey. Today, one hour of labor by the average factory worker can buy 6.7 pounds of turkey.

You are invited . . . to good times, good food

. . . in your own backyard with an outdoor gas grill and gas light. You can cook up a party at a moment's notice, because a gas grill is ready to cook in minutes. And it's so easy to cook on because you can control the heat. With a gas grill there's no charcoal mess, and you still get that delicious, outdoor char-broiled flavor that comes from the smoke of meat juices dripping on permanent ceramic briquets.

Besides the good times you'll have cooking out, you enjoy the convenience of having a gas grill. You'll probably find yourself cooking on it just because you wanted to get out of the kitchen or didn't want to mess up the broiler of your kitchen range.

One man, using a newly developed gun, can now plant 1,600 forest trees a day, says Georgia-Pacific Corp., a major U. S. tree farmer.

Only 10 men can plant a 40-acre farm in a day to grow timber for homes, paper and man's other forest-oriented needs.

The new trees will mature when today's school children are active adults, some of whom will be planting the next crop of trees.

Then rinse, dry thoroughly and replace, advises Patricia Bradshaw, housing and home furnishings specialist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University.
