Lamesa Keen for Visit of the Slaton "Rooters" to That City Armistice Day

According to word received by the Slaton Chamber of Commerce from Wm. A. Wilson, manager of the Lamesa chamber, citizens of Lamesa are eagerly awaiting the visit which Slaton people will make to that city on Armistice Day when the Slaton and Lamesa grid teams will have their annual tussle.

A letter from Wilson said that "Lamesa people are living in anticipation of November 11 when you roll a 'hot' train toward Lamesa."

The letter also expressed appreciation for services rendered this past year by Slaton people in judging Lamesa's first annual home contest. The judges were Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Bruner, Mrs. J. M. Wolf, Mrs. M. A. Pember.

On Wednesday of next week, the entire Slaton club will hold an inter-city meeting with the Lubbock Rotary club at the Hotel Lubbock, furnishing the program for the meeting.

There is no use trying to poke with a woman. The other day Uncle George Marriott heard a pretty good conundrum and decided to try it on Mrs. Marriott when he went home. Uncle George said, "do you know why I am like a mule?" "No," she replied promptly, "I know you are, but I don't know why you are." Uncle George is wondering.

Legion Auxiliary Install Officers

The American Legion Auxiliary met Friday evening at the clubhouse in a special meeting. Members and guests were welcomed by Mrs. E. C. Foster, president, who called the meeting to order and introduced Mrs. Tillman Jones, of Post, chairman of the Fifth Division of Texas, who installed the officers for the ensuing year. After the installation Mrs. Jones related many interesting things about the work and also the State Convention which was held at Austin the first part of September. She urged that all interested in purchasing leather purses, hook-rugs or tapestries, to buy them from the disabled veterans who are making these articles.

Little Artell Green gave a reading. Mrs. Alvin O. White and D. E. Kemp, sang "Little Gray Home in the West."

The State song, "Legionnaires" was sung by those present after which the hostesses for the evening served delicious apple pie with whipped cream and coffee.

Weights and Measures of Various Countries

Anybody who has been reading the reports from the world's grain markets lately must find himself puzzled by the different standards by which wheat is measured in different countries.

Our bushel of wheat, weighing 60 pounds, has to be translated when the wheat goes into export trade. England measures wheat by the "quarter." A quarter is 400 pounds; everybody has forgotten what it is a quarter of. It may contain eight English bushels, or sometimes eight and a quarter. Germany deals in wheat by the quintal, but a quintal may be somewhere from 101.2 pounds, as in Argentina, to 220.46 pounds, which is the metric quintal, one-tenth of the metric ton of 1,000 kilograms, equal to 2,204 lbs. France sticks closely to the metric weights, but German grain merchants talk also in terms of zentners and double zentners, while in Scotland and Ireland the way of 41.282 bushels is the standard wheat measurement, the quarter being theoretically one-quarter of that.

Russia, whose activity in the wheat market has revived interest in these world-wide variations in measurement of wheat, deals in pods. A pod is 36.113 pounds, and like everything else Russian, it seems to have no relation to any standards known outside. But whether wheat is measured in tons, quarters, pods or bushels, makes little difference to the grower who must sell it at a loss.

LUBBOCK CITIZENS GUESTS OF SLATON C. OF C. AT BANQUET

Completion of Highway Paving Observed Last Tuesday Night at Clubhouse; Forty-Nine Persons in Attendance

On last Tuesday night, Slaton said "Thank you" to Lubbock citizens who assisted the state and county to lay $30,000 worth of paving through the Slaton city limits last summer in connection with the paving of the Lubbock-Slaton section of State Highway No. 7.

The occasion was a banquet held at the Slaton Clubhouse, with the Slaton Chamber of Commerce acting as hosts to twenty-five citizens of Lubbock business men and leaders of that city. Twenty-three Slaton leaders were present, making a total attendance of 48.

The banquet also served as a means of joining with the Lubbock visitors in celebrating completion of the paving between Lubbock and Slaton, this being the first paving laid under the county's highway program which, including state and federal aid, will reach approximately $2,700,000 when finished. The county's part is $991,000, provided for by a bond issue voted in December, 1929.

Tuesday night's affair was informal, free and easy, with the Slaton hosts doing their dead level best to show forth a spirit of unrestrained hospitality and friendship for their neighbors from the "Hub city."

Following the turkey dinner, with all the trimmings, served by women of the First Methodist church here, W. H. Smith, president of the local Chamber of Commerce, extended words of welcome to the guests, and expressed appreciation for all assistance rendered in helping Slaton to get the paving laid through the city limits. He also voiced his pleasure at seeing the Lubbock-Slaton highway paving completed.

T. M. George, Slaton mayor, followed Mr. Smith, giving similar testimonials in behalf of the City Commission of Slaton.

J. H. Brewer, highway committee chairman of the Chamber of Commerce and member of the City Commission, was the next speaker to say "Thank You."

Then in succession, brief addresses were heard from many of the Lubbock guests. Among those responding to invitations to speak, were: C. E. Maedgen, vice-president, and A. B. Davis, manager of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce; J. J. Clements, mayor; E. L. Pitts, county judge-elect; County Commissioners L. C. Denton and J. T. Pinkston; Dean J. M. Gordon and Dean A. H. Leidigh, of Tech college; E. L. Klett, Lubbock attorney; Jed A. Rix, B. Sherrod, Chas. A. Guy, editor of the Avalanche; Journal publications; W. R. Blake; Al M. Hill, of the South Plains Farmer; Guy R. Johnston, resident engineer of the State Highway department; and T. E. Roderick, Slaton newspaper publisher and Abe Kessel, Slaton business man.

At one time during the course of the meeting, a special tribute was paid to the memory of Chas. F. O'Neal, who led the county in the campaign for good roads when the bond issue was voted in December, 1929, and whose death occurred just a few days after the campaign was ended. The entire group present at the banquet stood in respectful silence for thirty seconds, thus remembering the work and ideals of the man whose death ended an useful career.

During the evening, many references were made to the differences of opinion and the varied difficulties which were encountered in the three attempts made by the county to vote the road bond issue, but all of these references served to emphasize an excellent spirit of cordiality and good will between the two principal towns of the county—Lubbock and Slaton.

L. A. Wilson, secretary of the Slaton Chamber of Commerce, who presided as toastmaster at the banquet, even went so far as to say that, in view of the cemented friendships that had grown out of the three fights for good roads, he believed it was good that the first two bond issues failed. And the assembly voiced its approval by applause.

Cooperation between Slaton and Lubbock in future undertakings for further development of the county and section was pledged by the representatives of both cities.

Music for the evening was furnished by B. E. Clark, Santa Fe electrical engineer here; and Coke Oliver, Slaton division storehouse manager of the Santa Fe. They paired in guitar duets and piano and guitar numbers. Upon each appearance, encores were demanded by the audience.

Among the various groups of officials represented were: Directors of the Lubbock and Slaton Chambers of Commerce; members of the City Commissions of Lubbock and Slaton; County Commissioners' Court members; and members of the highway committees of the chambers of commerce of the two cities.

Tribute was paid to the work of the Lubbock County Commissioners' Court and of Resident Engineer Guy R. Johnston of the State Highway department and other officials of that state body.

Those attending from Slaton were: H. S. Riggs, J. A. Elliott, T. E. Roderick, W. H. Smith, J. T. Pinkston, Floyd C. Rector, P. G. Stokes, E. R. Legg, J. S. Edwards, R. D. Hickman, Abe Kessel, T. A. Worley, Jr., W. Tom Overby, J. H. Brewer, J. W. Hood, T. M. George, E. N. Pickens, F. B. Tudor, Harvey Austin, George Green, Coke Oliver, B. E. Clark and L. A. Wilson.

Guests from Lubbock were: W. R. Blake, L. C. Denton, C. A. Burrus, J. H. Goodrich, W. H. Rodgers, Al M. Hill, J. B. Maxey, A. H. Leidigh, J. A. Hankins, Guy R. Johnston, Charles A. Guy, J. F. Hankins, B. Sherrod, W. O. Stevens, E. L. Klett, Jed A. Rix, James M. Gordon, France Baker, N. A. Payne, J. J. Clements, H. W. Simms, C. E. Maedgen, E. L. Pitts, Jack Parsons and A. B. Davis.

Local Church Is Winner of BYPU Banner for Week

Taking 180 delegates from the First Baptist church, Slaton, to the final rally of the week and showing a better record for the week than was shown by other competing groups, the BYPU organizations of the Slaton church won the banner in the Slaton BYPU revival in Lubbock Baptist association, which ended when a general meeting was held last Sunday afternoon at the First Baptist church, Lubbock.

Other churches which competed for the banner were: First Baptist, Calvary church, Lubbock; First Baptist, Levelland; and First Baptist, Morton. Miss Grace Conn, of the state BYPU department, Dallas, directed the work with the local church, helping make the victory possible.

Second place was won by the BYPU groups of Levelland, scoring 740

Second and Third Slaton Teams Tie Lubbock Reserves

Coach Paul Wright's second and third string Slaton High Tigers played the second string Lubbock High Westerners to a 13-13 tie here last Friday afternoon.

In the first half of the tilt, the Slaton second team defeated the Lubbock second team, 13 to 0, and in the last half the Slaton third team lost to the Lubbock second team, 13 to 0, thus making the score for the entire game, 13 all.

The members of the local Post of the American Legion appreciates the patronage extended them.

T. A. Worley Jr. was a Tahoka visitor Sunday afternoon.

Misses Vinita Bowen and Ollie Mae Gaither spent Sunday in Lubbock.

Inter-City Meet of Slaton-Lubbock Rotarians To Be Held On Wednesday

Tigers To Play At Brownfield

The Slaton High Tigers will go to Brownfield on Friday afternoon to meet the Brownfield High team in the second conference game the Tigers have had this season. They defeated Idalou here two weeks ago, 34 to 0. This victory, however, was expected and was an easy one.

The tilt with Brownfield will not be easy picking for the Slaton gridders, it is declared by those who know of the work done this year by the Brownfield lads. They defeated Tahoka, 7 to 6, and have been showing up in good form throughout the season.

After losing to Brownfield, the Tahoka eleven allowed Lamesa to take a 19 to 6 victory from them. Hence, after the Slaton-Brownfield game is over it may be possible to speculate interestingly upon the comparative strength of the Slaton and Lamesa elevens, scheduled to have their annual Armistice Day fracas at Lamesa on November 11.

A good-sized delegation of Slaton people at the Brownfield game would help the Tiger boys considerably, it has been pointed out.

Wheat Pastures Helped By Rains

Farmers who have recently sown wheat pastures for fall and winter grazing purposes are jubilant over the generous rains which have soaked the Slaton territory during the past two weeks. Wheat that was planted last week is up and doing splendidly, thanks to the moisture, it was stated.

Practically all the farmers who received seed through the Slaton Chamber of Commerce deferred payment plan completed their sowing last week, and are enthusiastic over the prospects, they reported this week.

The wheat pastures will be worth thousands of dollars to farmers of this territory, it is estimated, and much feed buying and sacrificed sales of livestock will be averted.

The rains this week totaled as much as five inches in some sections, with practically no area of the Slaton region receiving less than two to three inches between Saturday and Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Anderson and daughter, Claudia, returned Tuesday from Oklahoma City where Mrs. Anderson and daughter have been for several weeks. Mr. Anderson left Slaton the latter part of last week to accompany them home.

"Corporal Eagen" To Be Presented for Second Time

The American Legion reports the cast and everything in tip-top shape for the second production of "Corporal Eagen" to be staged again tonight at the high school auditorium. This war comedy is one of the biggest amateur productions ever staged in this city and it is a real treat for you to see.

The production is a story of army life and the scene is laid on the company's streets with army barracks as the background. The show takes place during the late war and the principal characters are rookies who have been in camp only thirty days. The lead character is Red Eagen, who afterwards becomes a corporal in an Irish American Doughboy and is a very brave fellow when alone, but is very scared when anything happens. His Jewish buddy Izzy Goldstein is also a big hit and around these two characters, played by Dayton Eckert and A. C. Swint, most of the comedy revolves.

The members of the local Post of the American Legion appreciates the patronage extended them.

T. A. Worley Jr. was a Tahoka visitor Sunday afternoon.

Misses Vinita Bowen and Ollie Mae Gaither spent Sunday in Lubbock.

The Rotary clubs of Slaton and Lubbock will hold a joint membership meeting at Hotel Lubbock next Wednesday at noon. It has been announced by Lloyd A. Wilson, president of the Slaton club. The Slaton Rotarians will be in charge of the program for the luncheon session of the two clubs.

Plans for the inter-city meeting have been considered for several months, but a suitable date was not chosen until now. The details of the program next Wednesday, was not been revealed. A committee composed of Dr. W. E. Payne, J. Tom Overby and Jim A. Elliott is in charge.

On account of the visit with the Lubbock club Wednesday, the Slaton club will not hold its regular luncheon here next Friday, and all members of this club are urged to attend the luncheon with the Lubbockites, it was announced.

Miss Forrester to Become Head of Expression

Miss O'Bertha Forrester, whose home is at Wilson, ten miles south of Slaton, and who has been teaching expression this year in the Robstown, Texas, public schools, was elected on last Tuesday night as head of the expression department of Slaton public schools, to succeed Miss Frances Adams, who has resigned to enter Columbia university, New York, this month.

Miss Forrester will begin her work in the local schools next Monday, October 20. She is a graduate of Baylor college, Belton and of Curry School of Expression, Boston.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Forrester, have resided in Wilson for several years, and are well known in this part of the state. Mr. Forrester was at one time publisher of the Wilson Pointer, a weekly paper.

Miss Adams' resignation was not unexpected, as it has been known that she was seriously considering a continuation of her studies in institutions of higher learning.

Fort Worth Chamber Issues New Booklet

A new, 32-page industrial pamphlet, entitled "Industrial Fort Worth," has been issued recently by the Fort Worth Chamber of Commerce, under direction of Roscoe Ady, publicity director of the organization. A copy of the new publication was furnished to the Slaton Chamber of Commerce this week. The booklet has about fifty pictorial scenes showing main industries, principal building projects and many other points of interest in Fort Worth.

Being published since the 1930 census was completed, the new figures for Fort Worth are given in the booklet, showing that city to have 163,277 people. In 1920, the population was 108,482. The increase is thus seen to be 56,795.

RAILROADS

George Gould's ambition was to own a railroad system which would stretch from the Atlantic to the Pacific. He died with his ambition unfulfilled. E. H. Harriman, James J. Hill and Commodore Vanderbilt failed in their similar efforts. The Canadian Pacific and the Canadian National systems run from coast to coast in Canada, but only this year the first system under one control to cover the whole nation was completed.

In 1916 the Van Sweringen Brothers of Cleveland wanted a right-of-way for a trolley line to their real estate development, Shaker Heights. They could get it only by buying the decrepit Nickel Plate railroad, which they did, mostly on credit. That gave them a line from Buffalo to Chicago and soon they were up to their ears in the railroad business. Now, after 14 years, they control also the Erie, the Chesapeake and Ohio, the Hoeking Valley, Pere Marquette, Wheeling and Lake Erie, Chicago and Eastern Illinois and Missouri Pacific.

Their 18,000 miles of road is the largest railroad system in the United States. It is capitalized at $200,000,000 and valued at over two billion.

That is going a long way in 16 years.

The Gloucester fishing schooner, "Gertrude L. Thibaud," specially built to race for the cup offered by Sir Thomas Lipton for a match between American and Canadian fishermen. The Canadian schooner "Bluenose" will be her opponent.

enjoyed by all. Mr. and Mrs. Wilhite entertained with a humorous stunt. It is very encouraging to see so much interest shown in our local P. T. A. work. The welfare of our boys and girls should be of vital interest to every parent, and it is through these meetings we hope to discuss problems relative to the welfare of our children, and to become better acquainted with our teachers who are giving so much time to our boys and girls. Everyone is invited to attend these meetings, on the first and third Tuesday of each month. Interesting programs will be rendered at each meeting.

The Way of Life BRUCE BARTON

GIVING

A man met his lawyer, and said: "One of these days I shall want you to revise my will."

The lawyer nodded encouragingly. "When you drew it," the man continued, "I hadn't accumulated much. Naturally, I left everything to my family. Now I am better fixed, I'd like to provide for relatives, give to the men who have helped me make my money, and contribute to charities. There's no hurry about it, of course. In another ten years I ought to be considerably richer. The amounts I can give now are small in comparison with what I expect to do then."

The lawyer advised him to have the will rewritten that very day. "If you live ten years and prosper you can revise the figures upward," he said. "But suppose something should happen to you tomorrow. You would die leaving a selfish will."

Two very rich men have died recently, leaving very selfish wills. The great business of one of them is already dwindling. The men who manage it were given no share in it; their heirs are not in their work.

The other rich man, a bachelor, who paid small salaries but promised his younger associates that they would be "taken care of," left his millions to a museum. By those who do not know the facts it was hailed as a princely gift. It was no gift. Having trained every faculty to get, get, get, he simply could not give. He merely dodged the issue by writing in the name of a museum which he had hardly even seen.

You say, "What has this to do with me? I am not a millionaire."

The fact is that you, an average American, have more money today than you used to think you'd ever have. Are you giving any?

The muscles of the soul are like the muscles of the body. If you say, "Some day in the future I'll take physical exercise," you find, when the time comes, that you can't. The muscles have atrophied.

If you say, "Some day when I have more I will begin to give," you will never give. The habit requires cultivation.

We are about to have new standards in this country. Our day of worshipping wealth is past. Money no longer confers distinction; a millionaire is no more uncommon than an automobile, and not nearly so uncommon as a horse.

The givers will be the heroes of the future. And the time will come when those who merely get will be held up to scorn. And their children will hang their heads.

Giles Chitttenham swears to avenge the death of his young half-brother Rodney, driven to suicide by the notorious Julie Farrow who had spurned his love. He will make Julie love him, then throw her aside as she threw Rodney. He meets her in Switzerland, goes with her to the hotel on the St. Bernard Pass, and succeeded in winning her love. To his amazement, he discovers that he has fallen overwhelmingly in love with her himself! And he is married, to an American girl with whom he has nothing in common. Then he discovers that this girl is not the same Julie Farrow who ruined Rodney, but her cousin of the same name. She scorns him when he confesses his love and his inability to marry her. They meet later in London, where she is going the pace that kills. Another man, Lawrence Schofield, wants her, in spite of her wild

"I used to hope for an opportunity to, well—" He shrugged his shoulders and smiled. "Avenge" is such a melodramatic word, isn't it?" "There is no other word that gives quite the same explanation," she answered. "Don't you still hope for it?" "No."

"What made you change?" a program lay from her down the all be given a restaurant, and in an aching imagination he saw again the bare, ugly room of the mountain hotel, and heard the wind howling as it flung the soft snow against the windows. "Something happened—" he said. She did not answer at once, then she said quietly:

"Well, whatever it was, I am glad. I don't want to be hated any more. I don't think anyone—even your mother—could hate me any more if she knew what I know." "What do you mean?" Julie lowered her voice. "If you would like to drive home with me afterwards I will tell you." "What is it you are going to tell me?" Giles asked after they got into her car. He felt an immense curiosity in this woman, and also an inexplicable pity for her, which somehow angered him.

According to all accounts she was worthless and heartless, and yet . . . once before he had blundered into tragedy through listening to and believing the things other people said. The car stopped. "We are just home," Julie said. "Come in, and I will tell you."

Julie threw herself down into a big chair with a half sigh. Giles said nothing. He stood leaning against the mantel-shelf looking down at her, vaguely conscious of something tragic that seemed to have stolen into the room during the last few moments. Suddenly Julie raised her eyes.

"I'm glad you don't ask thousands of questions," she said. "You're such a restful person, Chitttenham. I can be quite sure that you won't say 'Oh, my God!' or anything like that when I tell you that I am going to die." "I don't look like it, do I?" she queried whimsically. "But it's true, all the same. It's quite signed and sealed, with no hope of a reprieve. I've been to every specialist in London who would take my money, and they all say the same thing. There could be an operation, but I won't have it. I hate the idea of a knife, especially as it can be a cure—but only just a way of prolonging life for a little while. I don't think I want to prolong it either. It's not been such fun when one looks back."

"What are you going to do then?" "I'm going abroad. Couldn't bear the idea of dying here in London, where so many people know me, so I'm going right away where I shan't know anyone, and nobody will know me. What do you think of it, Mr. Chitttenham?" "I think you're a very brave woman," Giles said, and suddenly he leaned down and took her hand. To his surprise the tears welled up into her eyes and splashed on to her frock. "That's foolish of me, isn't it?" she said. "And they're not because I'm frightened—these tears! It's just because the way you took hold of my hand reminded me of some one—" She drew a hard breath as if of pain. "Some one I really loved. There was a man I once really loved, Mr. Chitttenham."

"I am sure there was." "He died—" Julie sat very still for a moment, then she gently drew her hand away. "That finished me, in the same way that something of the kind has finished the other Julie too. He died, and then it was as if I died too, all that was best of me at least, and all the hateful rotten part lived on! My cousin Julie is like that now! It must be in the family. Perhaps you don't know her well enough to see it or recognize it, but I do! I knew directly she came home from Switzerland—We're never been great friends—I told you she didn't approve of me! But the other day after she came home—about six weeks ago, I suppose it must be, or more—she came to see me, and she said: 'I want to ask your pardon for all the hard things I've said of you and thought of you. You've been right, and I've been wrong all the time. It's no use trying to be good—it's no use trying to lead a decent life. The only way is to get every ounce of pleasure possible, never mind at whose expense. That's what I'm going to do in the future—that's what she said.'"

"I said: 'You poor little fool!—there's no man in all the world worth breaking your heart over'—she wouldn't admit anything, of course, but I knew!" Julie laughed softly. "And now there is something I want to ask you—something I want you to do for me. Will you be kind to Julie?—the other Julie? I'm sorry for her. I know just what she's going through. I've been through it all myself, you see. And I think you could help her. You're the sort of a man who understands. If you'll just be friends with her—" "I'll do anything I can, but—" "She's got amongst a horrible set of people," Julie said. "Not really vicious people, but silly and worthless! They make her drink too much, and swear—and sit up all night, and she's not that sort! She won't be able to bear it as well as I used to. I saw her the other night. She's got hold of a new friend—"

"You mean—Schofield. He's not a bad fellow—" "No. It's a girl—a common little American—" "American?" "Yes—a girl named Sadie Barrow—why, do you know her? for Giles had made a sudden convulsive movement. "No—yes—at least—no, I don't know her." Not know her! Sadie Barrow? His own wife.

So Sadie had come to London without acquainting him of the fact. Giles Chitttenham felt cold with anger. How the devil must be laughing at this successful double-cross which had not only brought Sadie to England when he least wished to see her, but had thrown her across Julie's path. Confound all women! Chitttenham thought, then he looked again at the one sitting crouching in the chair before him. He stooped impulsively towards her and took her hand.

"I should like to be your friend, too, if I may. I should like to be able to help you." "Thank you, and, Giles—" "Yes." "I was never quite so wicked as people have made me out. It was not my fault about—Rodney. I told him so many times it was useless—why, he was only a boy compared with me—a spoilt, weak boy." "I am afraid he was." "So don't think too badly of me." She drew her hand gently away. "And now—please go. I'm so tired."

She did not look at him or rise from her chair, and Giles walked reluctantly to the door, pausing when he reached it to look back. It seemed horrible to leave her like that—alone! Horrible to think that of all the friends and lovers she had known there was not one to stand by her now and hold her hand as she went thru the dark valley lying before her.

A day or two later he saw a small announcement in a newspaper to the effect that she had gone abroad, and would be absent for some time, and that no letters would be forwarded. It was the same night that his mother rang up on the telephone to inform him that she was giving a party. "When?" he asked, ruthlessly cutting short her voluble explanations. "Tonight. Twelve midnight, Giles. There'll be ham and eggs and hot coffee about four." "Good Lord!" "Don't talk like that. It will be such fun. Every one's coming!" "Who is 'every one'?" "Doris, of course—she's bringing a party. And Lawrence Schofield—" "What made you ask him?" "To please Miss Farrow, of course. They're always together! I really believe they will make a match of it." "I thought you didn't like Miss Farrow?"

"Well, just between ourselves, I don't! but I find that one must be broad-minded in these matters. You see, it takes all sorts to make a world." "It certainly does. Who else?" "A lot of people you don't know—" She rung off and Giles turned away from the phone with a shrug of his shoulders. It was only when he was in his mother's house that he suddenly realized that in all probability Sadie would be there also. For a moment he hesitated, a sudden chill feeling at his heart, then he philosophically pushed the thought aside and went on.

She was almost the first person he saw when he entered Mrs. Ardron's crowded drawing room. She was talking to a group of people which included Julie Farrow and several others whom Giles knew slightly, and it was Julie who first caught sight of him and waved an airy hand. Giles went straight across to her. He did not know in the least what sort of reception to expect from his wife, but after he had greeted Julie and the others whom she knew, it was she who said in her insistent way: "Present your friend."

It was Julie who obeyed. "Mr. Chitttenham. Miss Barrow—" "Pleased to meet you," Sadie said impudently. There was a twinkle in her eyes for which Giles could have shaken her. Schofield was with Julie, beaming happily upon every one. "We haven't met lately, Mr. Chitttenham," Julie was saying. "Where have you been hiding? So kind of your mother to ask me here tonight."

"So kind of you to come," Giles answered formally. He could see that Sadie was maneuvering to reach his side, and presently there were a little apart from the rest. "Isn't it a scream?" Sadie demanded "Fancy meeting you in your own mother's house, and she not knowing that she's entertaining a daughter-in-law unawares?" "You are at perfect liberty to tell her if you choose," Giles answered coolly, though inwardly he was raging. "I have no doubt that you have told other people already." Sadie gave a little scream of repudiation. "Tell any one! Not me! It would cook my little goose once and for all if it was known that I'd got such highly respectable relations. No thanks. Freedom for me all the time, and if there's anything left over, freedom again."

"Why have you come to London?" Her face changed subtly. "Not to find you, my lambkin, so don't worry! I've come to have a good time, and don't you interfere, or it will be the worse for you." "Sadie, the situation is impossible—" She laughed in his face. "Rubbish! Don't pretend that you want me to come back to you." Sadie shrugged her naked shoulders. "Times change!" she said. She moved away from him, her slim, scantily-clad body swaying with a little impudent movement.

Giles watched her with hard eyes. And this was his wife! This common little—he pulled his thoughts up sharply, ashamed of them. After all, he had once thought her good enough to marry. Giles turned again to Julie. "I suppose it would be utterly useless for me to ask you to drop this damnable play-acting?" "My dear man, what on earth do you mean?" "What I say. You're never natural for a single moment. You hate this sort of—of piffle—as much as I hate it. You—you despise people like—like these people here—" Julie laughed serenely. "I brought Lawrence and Sadie Barrow. By the way, what do you think of Sadie?" "Is she a new friend of yours?" Continued Next Week

Didn't Think He Would Ever Find Relief Medicine

"I Am Gaining In Weight and Feel Like I Have A New Life Before Me Since Taking Argotane"

It's a fact I have actually gained in weight and feel that I have a new life before me, since taking two bottles of Argotane," said George W. Carter, of Ropesville, Tex., while talking with the Argotane representative in Lubbock a few days ago.

"I was in just such a terrible condition," he continued, "I was bothered with kidney and indigestion trouble and suffered something terrible with the severe pains I would have in my back and sides . . ."

"I was in a very run-down condition, and got to where everything I ate disagreed with me, and I was getting disgusted with every condition I didn't think I would ever find a medicine that would relieve me, and had taken so many, was very nervous and couldn't get any rest at night, and had just given up all hopes of being a well man again.

"A friend persuaded me to try Argotane and the results have been remarkable. Argotane has restored my health after everything else had failed. I am gaining in weight, eat anything I want and sleep like a log every night. I'm not bothered with indigestion or kidney trouble, and feel fine all the time, I can never say too much for Argotane, and am glad to recommend it to everybody."

Genuine Argotane may be bought in Slaton at Teagues Drug store.

SAFETY

One reason why flyers like Lindbergh, Coste and Byrd are acclaimed as heroes is because everybody appreciates the risk they ran in their historical flights. When we think of their feats we think of the pilots, not of the planes.

The Graf Zeppelin has flown around the world, crossed the Atlantic four times without mishap. The R-100, British dirigible, was the first aircraft of any kind to cross the ocean, eleven years ago. The R-101 recently voyaged from England to Canada and back. Our own Los Angeles cruises all over the United States. Nobody remembers the names of the pilots in these ships; we think of the ship, not the man.

The reason is that we sense the immensely greater safety of the dirigible. The latter's passengers and crew can hardly be said to be risking their lives at all. The important air travel of the future will be done by dirigible rather than by plane.

LUBBOCK AND SLATON

We are pleased to read the editorial appearing in the Avalanche of Wednesday morning, October 15, under the caption, "Slaton and Lubbock." The gathering of Lubbockites and Slatonites was one notable affair. The spirit of hospitality was mightily manifested. The brew was all that could be asked for. It being simply looking through the other fellows' glasses.

The language was all that one could ask for, for it was truly West Texas. The celebrating on the completion of the Highway, No. 7, that closer binds the two cities, is but the forerunner of events that will come again. We must be ready to avail ourselves of these matters as they come with a firm and united front. Lubbock and Slaton will build and in building they will assist in building this mighty empire of West Texas.

We are sure proud to speak the common language of West Texas. Are glad that we are Texans, either by birth or adoption. The Plainsman aptly quotes a Biblical passage in part. It should have been quoted in full for it bears strongly upon us all. "Behold; how good and how pleasant is it for brethren to dwell together in unity. It is like the precious ointment upon the head, that ran down upon the beard even Aaron's beard, that ran down to the hem of his garments, or like the dew of Hermon, or the dew that descended upon the Mountain of Zion, for there the Lord commanded his blessing, even life for evermore."

The dew of heaven has fallen upon Lubbock and Slaton. Brotherly love prevails. Good will and friendship exists. May it continue to descend upon us all. May we be actuated by the teachings of Jehovah, emulating the Divine and living in peace and harmony.

Lubbock, come and see us, the latch-string is hanging away out for you.

PAY NOW

"Buy now" clubs are being formed in many communities to encourage people to buy supplies with greater freedom thus making business more active. But it strikes us that a mighty good slogan would be "Pay Now."

These kind of clubs would also be useful. If people would make an effort to pay their old bills more promptly the merchants could order more goods and idle people would be set to work.

Many persons run up monthly bills for groceries and other supplies. They could help the situation if they would pay cash as they buy. If the grocer could have the money coming in each day he could save some expenses and losses. If people who persist in buying on monthly credit would settle their bills the day they receive it, they would do much to make the business machine run more smoothly.

Those people who let their bills run up month after month, and only pay up at long intervals, are one of the heavy loads which business has to carry. They would do much to bring any remaining depression to a sudden end if they would settle these old accounts and give the business men some real money which they could spend for the enlargement of their trade or for things they need personally. There is just as much money in the country today as there ever was, but it is not circulating fast enough. Many people are hoarding it on account of imaginary fears about the industrial future. Prompt payment of bills and the making of purchases on a cash basis have the effect to speed up the circulation of money, and thus are an important factor in bringing about the prompt return of prosperity.

Some people are slow in paying their bills because they are hard up all the time, and they pay out their money as fast as they get it. But there are many more who could pay promptly who fail to do so as the result of mere negligence and a lack of ready cooperation with measures desirable for community betterment. These folks could and should join the "Pay Now" club. It would not then be necessary for merchants to notify the public of the credit stand they have taken, insisting that their bills must be paid or there will be no further extension of credit. This is surely a word to the wise.

As the Retail Merchants association states, "Credit is a mighty force in our business system, why not protect your credit, by promptly meeting your obligations."

THE RIGHT COLOR FOR A BARN

What is the best color to paint a barn?

That question is agitating some of the Eastern newspapers. Some think that to keep up with the times farmers ought to paint their barns white. They must be referring to "agriculturists" rather than to farmers. An agriculturist is a man who earns his money some where else and spends it on the farm. There are many such in the East, city men who keep up country places which they like to refer to as farms, but which are really country estates.

"Which will you have, milk or champagne?" asked one of these gentlemen farmers of a guest. "They cost me the same."

The real controversy is not over the question of white paint, which any practical farmer will tell you is too expensive in both first cost and upkeep when the area of the barn's exterior walls is considered, but whether a barn should be painted at all. There is one school which holds that a red barn is not only an attractive thing to look at but that it will last longer than an unpainted barn. But the opponents of this view proudly point to the unpainted barns which dot the Eastern landscape, which have stood many of them, for a hundred years and then some, and whose white pine boards are still sound and weather-proof.

The unpainted barn, its advocates declare, becomes part of the landscape; it is nearer to nature than if it were painted in any color at all. Grant that, and the question still remains a practical one rather than one of beauty. From the farmer's point of view, it would seem to be a question of climate and the kind of wood used in building the barn. Some lumber will stand a century of unpainted exposure, other kinds of wood will speedily decay unless painted.

It is not an important question, but it has its amusing suggestions. What if we were to paint barns in the gay pinks, blues and yellows, which the peoples of some European countries effect for their buildings? Or why not decorate their exteriors, if not with the landscapes, then with "modern" art in strange bands, triangles and curlicues of vivid red, green and purple? If the purpose is to add to the gayety of the scene, why not?

There was a time when most barns, in some sections of the country, were at least partly painted. What has become of all of the advertisements of curealls for man and beast which used to decorate the farm outbuildings? Farmers today don't tolerate the use of their property for such useless advertising. About the only signs we see on the progressive farmer's barn are the owner's name and the announcement that he is member of the Farm Bureau and his cows have been tuberculin tested.

AN HONEST MAN

A man died the other day in New York, whose business record contained not a single blemish. Daniel Guggenheim and his five brothers, sons of Meyer Guggenheim, made money by literally tens of millions. They made it in one of the three fundamental industries. There are three lines of business which increase the world's basic wealth and only three; they are farming, fishing and mining. The Guggenheims were miners, owners of the world's largest sources of copper. They let others share the profits of their mining enterprises, but they never let anyone share their losses. If a mining prospect "petered out" before it had returned the money invested in developing it, the Guggenheim brothers shouldered all the loss; if it made money, every investor got his share in proportion to his investment. In one instance they repaid more than $1,500,000 to investors, out of their own pockets, because the mine in which they had invested did not turn

His Dream Come True

Fifty years ago Thomas A. Edison conceived the idea of a flying machine, which would rise by means of a horizontal windmill. Last week the "Wizard" visited Newark flying field and saw his dream come true, when a helicopter flew in from Philadelphia.

defense and vindication of our Lutheran Church, permit me to quote sections from the News Bulletin's dealing with the incident.

"Such public excitement was aroused over the action of the Iron Ridge, Wisconsin pastor, even before the Conference in Milwaukee supported his stand, that members of other Lutheran groups throughout the Northwest were kept busy for weeks explaining to reporters and others that they had no connection with either of the Synods in question and held no such views concerning the Legion."

Dr. J. B. Markward of Springfield, Ohio, president of the Board of American Missions of the United Lutheran church, when interviewed, made public the following statement: "It is ridiculous to believe that Lutherans generally will ex-communicate their church members who are also members of the American Legion. We are proud of the patriotic service rendered the United States during the World War by the hundreds of thousands of loyal sons of the Lutheran church who served, and we shed a tear with the thousands of Lutheran Gold Star mothers who so bravely contributed their sons to their country. We are proud to have contributed more boys per capita to our country's service than any other religious communion. Any organization these boys establish or join with their comrades, the Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, or any like Association, deserved the respect of loyal Americans."

The points I would register are these: the body that took that blundering and lamentable stand is but a very small per cent of the ministry of the Lutheran church in our country, less than two per cent; they are members of that wing of the Church in America that has too often taken an unwise, unjust, "narrow" position on like questions; that they were surely not authorized to speak for the Lutheran church at large; that they surely did not interpret the spirit of the Lutheran Church in America.

The record of the Lutheran church in the history of America, from the days of George Washington to the days of Herbert Hoover, is one of the most glorious chapters in the history of our church. As for the record of our Church during the late World War, ex-President Calvin Coolidge is my authority for this statement: "Six per cent of the Lutherans in America were in the services of their country during the World War, as compared with four per cent of the general population."

And hundreds upon thousands of these Lutheran ex-service men are today members of the American Legion and Lutheran pastors, here and there, are chaplains in local or state organizations.

I sincerely hope these expressions of sentiment and these statements of facts will correct false impressions where they were created by that press report from Milwaukee, will show that the action of that conference is not in accord with the spirit of the overwhelming majority of the more than eleven thousand ministers and the near to five million members of the Lutheran church in America.

H. C. ZIECHE, Pastor, Trinity Lutheran Church, Lubbock.

Letter from Lutheran Pastor; Rev. Zieche

Dear Slatonite. Some time ago your paper, as many others over the country, carried the report that "in Milwaukee on September 16 two hundred Lutheran pastors, members of the Missouri and Wisconsin Synods, upheld a fellow pastor for barring members of the American Legion from Communion" because "he considered the Legion anti-Christian, since it does not officially recognize Christ in the prayers of the organization."

Today I received my news bulletin from the publicity bureau of the National Lutheran Council, an official agency that represents all Lutheran church bodies in the United States and Canada with the exception of the Missouri Synod and its allies. For the information of your readers, and in

"He's your Dog" exclaimed the Police Captain

Yes, he's lop-eared... Sure. It's the right one."

Police-Captain Smith frowned into his telephone. How many times, he wondered, must he repeat these details?

Two hundred miles away at Jonesboro, an anxious owner was hanging on every word that came over the telephone wires. Hopefully, he was seeking to identify his lost dog.

"What?" barked the captain irritably. "You want to speak to him!"

Then—understandingly—"By George! I believe you've hit the nail on the head. Just a moment. I'll hold him up to the telephone."

What was said is known only to the man and the dog. The dog's actions, however, spoke for themselves.

"He's your dog, all right," exclaimed the police captain.

Thus, happily, ended a two-week search.

Incidents like this furnish constant proof of the value of "long distance." Whether it be the identification of a lost dog, a business deal involving thousands of dollars, or sweethearts' important nothings, your telephone stands ready to serve you.

If you aren't accustomed to using "long distance," you will be surprised at its speed, clarity, low cost.

Most calls are completed while you remain on the line. You can usually hear as clearly as though you were talking to your next door neighbor.

The cost is low. You can talk a hundred miles for 60 cents (station-to-station rates).

The best way to prove it is to try it. If you will use the attached coupon to send us the names and addresses of relatives or friends in other cities, we will send you, without obligation, an "Out-of-Town Number book" containing their telephone numbers and the cost of a three-minute call to each. Southwestern Bell Telephone Company.

Manager SOUTHWESTERN BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY CITY

Please send me an "out-of-town number book," giving the telephone numbers of the persons listed on the attached sheet, and the cost of a three-minute talk to each.

Arm Highway Signs Are Needed

Efforts to Be Made This Winter To Get All States To Adopt Same Motor Vehicle Rules

By CALEB JOHNSON

Uniform regulations for the issuing of drivers' licenses, and uniform traffic regulations in all states, will be urged this winter upon the legislatures of the forty states where the lawmaking bodies will convene after January 1. Such uniformity, once agreed upon and enforced, is expected to cut down materially the toll of traffic accidents, which cost the United States more than 33,000 human lives last year, and made permanent cripples out of many thousands more.

The American Automobile association is back of the movement to have all states require that no one may get a driver's license who is unable to understand highway warnings or direction signs in the English language. There are still a few states which require no licenses at all, and in those the percentage of traffic accidents is higher than in the states where licenses are required. But among the states where licenses are necessary before one may drive on the roads, the thirteen states which have the literacy provision in the law show a smaller percentage of accidents than any other state.

Even more important than this uniformity in licensing regulations is the need for uniform traffic laws, and the standard which will be urged upon all legislatures is that agreed upon by the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety, of which Robert P. Lamont, Secretary of Commerce, is chairman.

One of the important recommendations of the conference is that no car shall be licensed until it has been inspected and declared fit for use. Under the Pennsylvania laws more than 1000 cars have been ruled off the roads because they were mechanically unfit and a danger to others.

Speed limits which now vary greatly from state to state and even from town to town, would be uniformly fixed, under this proposal, at 20 miles an hour in business districts, 25 miles in residential district and in public parks within cities, and 45 miles outside of business and residential districts.

With respect to slow driving the code declares: "It shall be unlawful for any person unnecessarily to drive at such a slow speed as to impede or block the normal and reasonable movement of traffic except when reduced speed is necessary for safe operation or because upon a grade or when the vehicle is a truck or truck and trailer necessarily in compliance with law proceeding at reduced speed."

Concerning passing of vehicles proceeding in opposite directions the code requires that drivers "shall pass each other to the right, each giving the other at least one-half of the main traveled portion of the roadways as nearly as possible."

Regarding overtaking and passing cars the recommendations provide that the driver of an overtaken vehicle "shall give way to the right in favor of the overtaking vehicle on suitable and audible signal and shall not increase the speed of his vehicle until completely passed by the overtaking vehicle."

It is also required that "the driver of a vehicle shall not drive to the left side of the center line of a highway in overtaking and passing another vehicle proceeding in the same direction unless such left side is clearly visible and is free of oncoming traffic for a sufficient distance ahead to permit overtaking and passing to be completely made without impeding the safe operation of any vehicle overtaken."

When approaching curves, etc., the code rules against driving to the left side of the center line of a highway "when approaching the crest of a grade or upon a curve in the highway where the driver's view along the highway is obstructed within a distance of 500 feet."

With respect to municipal traffic regulations, the recommendations provide that a left turn at an intersection be made on the green light. The regulation, as contained in the model municipal traffic ordinance, declares that "the operator of a vehicle or street car intending to turn to the left at an intersection where traffic is controlled by traffic control signals or by a police officer with proper care to avoid accident and shall proceed to make such left turn only upon the 'go' signal, unless otherwise directed by a police officer."

That there may be danger, however, in too much traffic regulation, in inducing a sense of safety on the part of drivers who would otherwise look out for themselves better, was suggested to me the other day by Mr. Robbins B. Stoeckel, the Connecticut Commissioner of Motor Vehicles. Mr. Stoeckel has just returned from a visit to England, where motor accidents are few and speed limits unknown except when a motorist is driving "to the common danger."

"They have few traffic policemen in England," said Mr. Stoeckel, "but everybody is a traffic man. It is everybody's business that a car be properly directed and all drivers, pedestrians and even the man seated on his porch, help by suggestion and direction. Always, too, in a kind and matter of fact way."

"A great many times during the tour I recently made, it happened that the driver ahead would indicate that a vehicle was approaching from the opposite direction. Our own driver invariably did the same for following cars."

"There is another characteristic of English traffic which might be beneficially copied here. It is that more responsibility is placed with each driver and there is a consequent development of self-reliance."

"There are, with the exception of a few Bobbies on bicycles and on foot, no police on rural roads. The abhorrence with which a reckless driving case is generally viewed seems extraordinary to an American but is very effective."

"The thought is left, after viewing the absence of official supervision in England, that we in America may be in danger of overdoing it. After all the man is the key to performance; his education is the all important factor for safety. We must help him all we can in his traffic activity but must be certain that we do not, by our well meaning efforts in one direction make pitfalls in another.

"One of the experiments we ought to make if we can get up courage to do it sometime is to try a plan of letting traffic regulate or direct itself. Such a tryout might be dangerous in the extreme unless everybody understood plainly that he was on his own."

"With that understanding might it not be possible that an accentuated sense of danger and the call for initiative consequent upon it would bring out self reliance and judgment to a greater extent than they are supposed to exist England does it with the help of a dangerous environment."

Again Konjola Gives Proofs of Its Worth!

Wichita Lady Glad To Praise Medicine That Relieved Neuritis and Stomach Disorders

MRS. ETHEL RUSSELL

"Konjola well deserves to be known as the master medicine," said Mrs. Ethel Russell, 1320 South Mead street, Wichita. "My appetite was very poor, and nearly every meal was followed by severe indigestion pains. Gas formed, crowding around my heart, nearly shutting off my breath. I was constipated, and then there was the misery I suffered from neuritis. These pains struck me like electric shocks, passing from one part of my body to another, and I became very nervous."

"Only a very short treatment of this wonderful medicine, Konjola, relieved me of stomach trouble and neuritis, and corrected constipation. I can now eat anything I care to without suffering afterwards. Every trace of neuritis has disappeared and my nerves have become much stronger. I have been greatly benefited in every way, and I am glad to endorse this splendid medicine."

Konjola loses no time in getting to work: many are amazed at the quick results, but it is best to take a full treatment of from six to eight bottles for best result.

Konjola is sold in Slaton, Texas, at the Red Cross Pharmacy, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.
