SANTA FE GETS MORE MEN HERE

Fifteen Workers From Orient Line Coming In August

Fifteen Santa Fe employes are coming to Slaton from the Orient lines on and after Aug. 1, at which time the Santa Fe assumes control of the Orient Railway system, of which the Altus, Okla., to Alpine, Texas, section becomes an integral part of the Slaton Division of the Santa Fe, effective Thursday of this week.

It became known here this week that the fifteen Orient employes will be transferred to Slaton and will be employed in the offices and shops here. The changes are effective Aug. 1. The addition of the Orient line from Altus to Alpine as a part of the Slaton Division was announced officially several days ago.

Included among the new employes will be the force of dispatchers from San Angelo, together with office workers and others. Seven road men, who will be busy on the new extensions from Alpine to Presidio and from San Angelo to Sonora, will also work under the Slaton Division headquarters, although due to their work's location they will spend little time here for the present, probably being here only for the week-ends. Counting these road engineers the total number of new employes for the Slaton Division reaches above twenty, of which fifteen will reside here and will spend their entire time here.

Addition of the Altus-Alpine line to the Slaton Division gives the division a total mileage of 1,030 miles. Of this amount, 564 miles was included in the original Slaton Division, while 466 miles of track is included on the Orient section. This makes the Slaton Division one of the largest, if not the largest, on the entire Santa Fe system in the United States.

J. A. Gillies, of Slaton, is superintendent of the entire division, with headquarters here. A. J. Cleary, former Orient superintendent, is now assistant superintendent of the Slaton Division and will reside in San Angelo.

She was formerly Miss Louselle Leverett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Leverett, who made their home in Slaton for several years until a short time ago when they moved to Portales, New Mexico. She was a graduate of Slaton High School.

Mrs. Martin was twenty-six years of age at the time of her death and leaves a daughter, Welcome, three years of age, also her husband, W. E. Martin; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. R. ## Slaton's Leading Citizen Will be Chosen by Legion

"The American Legion of this city and state believes good citizenship should be properly rewarded," said Dan W. Liles, Post Commander of the local Legion Post today. "Carrying out this idea, the state Legion Commander, Rufus Sett, Jr., has furnished us with a beautifully engraved certificate to be presented to one of Slaton's citizens during the next few days," Liles said.

"Various organizations are being asked to submit nominations for the honor of being Slaton's most distinguished citizen. Each nomination must be accompanied by a statement of the qualifications of the nominee whose achievements must be of a civic nature and such that have helped to make Slaton a better, safer, healthier, and happier place in which to live during the past year. Accomplishments of the nominees during the immediate year just past are to be considered only," Commander Liles stated.

Liles declared that this must not be mistaken for a "popularity contest," which is not at all the idea, and matters like partisan politics and religious differences should be carefully avoided in selecting candidates, he said. Awards will be based strictly on individual service to the community, Liles stated.

Each Slaton pastor, the mayor, the president of the Chamber of Commerce, the president of the Slaton Rotary Club and the commander of the Slaton Legion Post are expected to submit nominations. Each nomination will have a statement of reasons for such nomination submitted with it, after which the members of the local Legion Post will select by ballot the nominee whom they consider to be most worthy of the title of Slaton's "most distinguished citizen".

Voting on the nominees will be held next Friday night, Aug. 9, at the regular meeting of the Slaton Legion Post, which will be held at the Slaton Club House, it was announced by Commander Liles. All Legion members are urged to attend and take part in making the selection.

"The boys who served you during 1917-18 are now to judge as to who among our many distinguished citizens they consider has best and most unselfishly served this community during the past year, and his name, along with other distinguished citizens from Texas cities will be inscribed on a parchment scroll and hung in the State Legion Headquarters in the Capitol Building at Austin," Mr. Liles announced.

Six Cylinder Cars Lead in Production

DETROIT, Mich.—For the first time in the history of the automobile industry, six cylinder cars promise to lead the field in production this year, according to a survey by the Chevrolet Motor Company completed recently. Up until this year four cylinder cars ranked first in annual production volume.

Comparative production figures for the first six months of this year are offered in support of the forecast. During this period there were produced approximately 1,900,000 sixes as compared with approximately 1,265,000 fours, an indication of what the total for the year is apt to be.

How the change comes about is illustrated in the survey. Chevrolet's manufacturing goal for the year is 1,350,000 cars. Chevrolet's change-over from a four to a six means a deduction of this enormous total from the four cylinder field and adds it to the six cylinder field.

How the automobile picture has changed almost overnight will be noted in an inspection of the 1928 showing. Last year when Chevrolet was producing a four cylinder car, four cylinder manufacturers built approximately 2,098,000 cars, with one large manufacturer of four cylinder cars on limited production due to model change, while six cylinder manufacturers were making 1,617,000 cars.

As it now stands the year 1929 should show approximately 3,000,000 six cylinder units as compared to only 2,250,000 four cylinder units.

Consequently this significant development, which will make the current year an epochal one in the annals of the automobile business, comes about chiefly as a result of the entrance of Chevrolet into the six cylinder field. In lay circles, this event is seen as a tribute to the automobile industry and the newest step which this gigantic business has taken in the direction of

Pasture Now is No More Than Exercise Ground

From the time pasture grass ripens in July till the cows are taken into winter quarters, pasture should be considered nothing more than exercising ground.

The cheapest milk is produced when cows are on pasture, if the pastures are of the right quality. But pastures alone are not sufficient. In late summer, grass has lost its valuable protein content, the cows must have feed from other sources.

All of us are familiar with the usual decline in milk flow that comes during the late summer months. Dairymen are disposed to attribute this decline to hot weather and flies. The hot weather may have a slight effect on milk flow, but the influence of flies is negligible.

The real reason for the mid-summer decline in milk production is insufficient feeding of the cows. High producing cows, rarely, if ever, get enough feed for their requirements, on pasture. Pasture grass provides neither enough feed, nor the proper kind, and milk is bound to suffer.

Protein is the food material most likely to be missing, and protein in abundance is needed for milk production. Early spring grass is high in protein. As grass ripens, however, it loses its protein content, and a grain ration should supplement pasture feeding.

During the late summer when grass is dry and scanty, a mixture containing about 20 percent protein should be fed. Such a mixture suitable to supplement late summer pastures may be made up from 300 pounds ground corn, 200 pounds ground oats, 100 pounds wheat bran, and 370 pounds linseed meal. Feed one pound per day for each four or five pounds of milk produced, depending upon the condition of the pasture.

Tulia's ton litter work in Swisher County is showing up some good results. J. K. Adams weighed his litter of seven pigs at the age of 110 days and found 1040 pounds of live weight. The total cost of this gain is $28.45 or $2.73 per hundred pounds. The pigs have had access to alfalfa pasture and were fed a protein supplement.

The Warnings Are Coming

Famed Jazz Orchestra to be Heard in All-Talkie 'Syncopation'

Fred Waring and his famous Pennsylvanians known throughout the world by their talking machine records and tours as well as throughout the greater part of the United States, by reason of their long engagements in the larger picture houses, are to be seen and heard in "Syncopation," the RKO All-Talker, coming to the Palace Theatre for a three day run, commencing Sunday.

Fred Waring enjoys a unique distinction in the world of music. Beginning the organization of his present band when he was a student at Penn State College, he gathered his fellow students together and formed the now internationally known orchestra. In several American cities they have played for as long as forty weeks, while but recently they concluded a long and successful engagement at Des Ambassadeurs, famous theatre-restaurant.

AN UNSUNG AND UNSEEN HERO OF "LILAC TIME"

Hickox was chief cameraman in charge of a crew of twenty men that recorded the spectacular air duels, smashups and "dog fights" that make the film one of the most talked about in history. The intrepid photographer earned the respect and admiration of the entire company by his skill and daring. He obtained several screen thrills that amazed such veterans as George Fitzmaurice, the director, and John McCormick, producer of Miss Moore's pictures.

During the war Hickox was chief photographer in the United States naval air service and upon being discharged turned to movies, where he rapidly rose to the fore.

WELL KNOWN NEGRO DIES IN LYONS, KANS.

(From the Wellington (Kans.) Daily News.)

The body of John W. Horton, 50, probably the most widely known negro man in the state for the reputation of his ability to drink cases of pop, eat egg shells, glass, a bunch of bananas and then the stalks, as well as newspapers and catalogues, will arrive here tonight on Santa Fe No. 21.

Reports received here by relatives say that Horton dropped dead on the streets in Lyons, Kans., some time Wednesday. He was visiting there with his brother, Joe Horton. His sister, Miss Florence Horton, left Wednesday night to accompany the body to Wellington where the funeral services and burial will be made. He is also survived by his mother and a brother of this city.

Horton was known far and wide for his ability to eat large quantities of food. During his lifetime, the Negro entertained hundreds of crowds by exhibiting his prowess as an eater.

He was an average Negro, around six feet in height, and carrying with this height, broad and muscular shoulders, but his stomach, ah! 'twas a stomach what was a stomach. It would put the stomach of a thirsty camel to shame. For the Negro could store vast quantities of water away into the abysmal depths of his osmium. He had drunk as much as three gallons of water before turning away from the bucket, satisfied—?

Yet, water was not the only drink which the Negro made a hobby of assimilating. He would drink two cases of soda pop without stopping.

Responsible Wellington citizens say that Horton ate all kinds of things, ranging from brickmason's cement to a dozen or fourteen two-pound friers. And the cement was the only blemish on his reputation, for it made him sick, but he probably would have done it again on a bet.

Horton was an eater, both by trade and by appetite. The easiest thing he ever attempted to eat, on a bet, he once declared, was fourteen two-pound friers. He had a hard bet once, he declared, and that was when he ate a dozen ordinary lemons without sugar.

Horton was somewhat of a vegetarian. For instance he was fond of bananas. He was willing to wager that he could eat a whole stock of bananas, a feat that he had accomplished, or a couple of bushels of tasty ripe apples, or a 40-pound watermelon, rind and all. Or, if one would prefer, he would have been willing to bet that he could eat the hearts out of an ordinary wagonload of melons.

He was also fond of hen fruit. He boasted that he had eaten eleven and a half dozen eggs at one sitting.

But because of the fact that he was strong for water, soda pop, fruit and eggs, does not mean that he would not eat meat. He would offer to bet he could eat a cow's liver raw without coming up for air, ten pounds of raw beef, or other meats in proportion.

Horton was but one of the many men of his race who was fond of pie. While traveling in Nebraska once he found another Negro who, Horton said, thought he could eat pie. Promoters, anxious to see a real pie-eating demonstration, arranged for a contest between the two. Horton chose custard pie while his challenger was biased to apple.

"What ah mean, mistah," Horton related once, "dat shine done a mighty good job of devouring dem pies."

"How many did he eat, John," the negro was asked.

"Nineteen."

"So he beat you, did he, John?"

"Beat me? Law, no. I done eat 27."

And so it went. Horton was exceedingly proud of his prodigious appetite, and when he could excite a curious crowd about him, would unfold what his marvelous hobby was.

On cold days he would stand on sunny street corners, if nowhere else, and tell children of his "box car excursions" here and there over the country. Several months ago an easterner read of Horton's astonishing feats. He wrote to the chief of police at Wellington and asked him if it were true. The chief promptly answered and told the inquiring stranger that whatever he had heard, the half had not been told. Others, too, had received inquiries along the same line from persons in practically every section of the country.

He received national prominence when he was featured by Riply in "Believe It Or Not" as Black Joe of Wellington. He had also exhibited his prowess in many states besides Kansas.

Remove Stomach of Widely Known Negro.

To make sure that the body of the late John W. Horton, 50, widely known colored man, who died last Wednesday in Lyons, Kans., will not be molested after burial, immediate relatives of the deceased have had the stomach removed and sent away for safe keeping.

Mrs. Florence Dulin, a sister, said that they were told and warned by friends that if the body of Mr. Horton was buried, the grave would be robbed by persons, who would like to have the stomach for study and for examination. Huge sums of money would have been paid for the body.

John Horton was known over the state and the country for his "wonder doings", many of which were unbelievable, and relatives thought it better to have the stomach removed before burial was made, than to have the grave robbed and the body mutilated. Mrs. Dulin made no statement concerning the condition of the stomach upon its removal.

ALIEN LABOR RESTRICTED IN GREAT BRITAIN

Washington, D. C.—The unemployment situation in England has forced the British Government to guard very carefully the right of entry of foreigners for employment in that country it is reported by the Bureau of Labor of the Department of Labor.

An order was issued in 1920 by the British Government prohibiting the entry, without written permit, of a foreigner into the United Kingdom to enter employment. Under that order the employer must first guarantee that no worker already employed will be displaced by the foreigner; second, prove that he cannot fill the position from the workers available, and third, prove that the prevailing rate of wages will be paid to the foreigner. Permits are usually issued for only a limited period of time.

Permits are usually issued for young foreigners, male or female, who desire to take minor positions in banks, offices, and the like, with a view to obtaining some knowledge of the English language and English business methods, as it is felt that such persons are a valuable link later on in life for the furtherance of British export trade.

Acidity

The common cause of digestive difficulties is excess acid. Soda cannot alter this condition, and it burns the stomach. Something that will neutralize the acidity is the sensible thing to take. That is why physicians tell the public to use Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this delightful preparation can neutralize many times its volume in acid. It acts instantly; relief is quick, and very apparent. All gas is expelled; all sourness is soon gone; the whole system is sweetened. Do try this perfect anti-acid, and remember it is just as good for children, too, and pleasant for them to take.

Any drugstore has the genuine, prescriptive product.

"There wasn't a day in all that time that she didn't suffer misery from indigestion, and a swelling of her legs," he continued, "and the more she suffered the weaker and more run-down she got, until I just couldn't see how she would ever get well again. Her food would sour in her stomach and form gas that would bloat her up and choke her until she thought it would almost take her breath. Her nerves were so torn up that she would jump and start at the least little sound, and long into the night she would lay awake unable to rest. In the morning she would get up all sluggish and drowsy and tired and she grew so despondent that I did not think she could stand it much longer.

back to her every day she lives. When she sits down to the table she can relish every bit she tastes and her appetite is just dandy, she never has a bit of trouble afterwards. Instead of being blue and worried like she used to be she gets at her house work as bright and cheerful as a school girl at play, and when night comes she sleeps like a baby, for her nerves are as steady as a clock since her troubles have disappeared."

THE FARMER'S VACATIONS.

The comfortable theory is advocated that everyone should have a vacation, preferably during the hot weather. But many folks never get a real one. Among those who are usually without a summer vacation are the farmers.

The time when millions of the people are wandering around the country on care free outings, is a time when the farmers have to put in their best ticks. If they can get by the planting and the cultivating and the harvest seasons without working 12 and 15 hours a day, they are lucky.

The summer visitors who come out into the country, look over the barnyard fence, and to them the farmer's activities out in the verdant fields seem quite poetic. But if they had to take hold and wield the rake and the hoe themselves, the poetry would disappear. Yet the farmers of the South Plains are not an unhappy class of people.

If they can make a comfortable living in the face of all difficulties, they are as a rule contented. They are not much afflicted by wanderlust. They find a certain satisfaction in watching the growth and development of crops and farm animals, which gives their life much of variety.

The farmer and his family should have their periods of relaxation. It is not good for people to spend every day in every year rooted to one spot, and they should have some chance to travel around a bit. Something is wrong with rural life if the farmer is not able to afford an automobile that will give him and his family the chance to see something of the country. The farmer's wife is a harrowed personage and she needs rest. The country must be generous to its farming population, and see that economic conditions are made so that they get their fair chance for the fun that is going.

THE MENACE OF TAXATION.

No person can escape being affected by the cost of government. It is reflected in employment conditions, the purchasing power of wages, industrial activity, and, perhaps most important, the cost of the necessities and luxuries of life.

When the individual is over-taxed the whole community suffers. And when a business is over-taxed, the cost must be passed on to the ultimate consumer, who pays all overhead.

There are localities in the United States where vast acreage of land has been returned to the state or county, seized for non-payment of taxes. Industries are driven away. The unemployment problem appears. The inevitable result is stagnation.

At the present time the small town is offered an unrivalled opportunity to progress and prosper, because of the trend of manufacturers away from the great centers of population. And the industrial cities of the future will be those which, along with the natural rural advantages, have a reasonable tax rate and economical government.

ROAD EQUALITY FOR ALL TAXPAYERS

A present road necessity is to build paved secondary roads into rural sections and do for the remote farmer and taxpayer what main highways have done for urban residents.

Developments in oil and asphalt types of pavements that give dependable, long-wearing surfaces at a low original and maintenance cost, are making the secondary road program possible and practical. Such roads must replace worn-out gravel and macadam which are a source of constant expense and discomfort.

WHO PAYS FOR IT?

In the end who pays the cost of advertising?

Like all questions this one cannot be answered briefly and simply. The cost may be paid by the non-advertiser. It may be covered by the manufacturer. But usually it is impossible to prove just who pays the advertising bill.

In rare cases the consumer pays. We do know of a few articles that are higher in price than the non-advertised competitive brands. But such cases are rare. They are offset by the number of advertised commodities that undersell unadvertised items of the same grade and quality.

Sometimes the advertiser pays, but not if his advertising is effective and his business methods efficient. Advertising is a part of his sales expense. He gauges it by his volume of business, by results produced.

A manufacturer opens new markets with advertising. This enables him to produce his product on a bigger scale and thereby effect economies in manufacturing—economies that are more than enough to offset all advertising cost. Who pays the bill in that case?

Advertising must not be regarded as an expense, either by the individual who used it or by the community in general. It is a vital part of the normal expense of distributing an article, of bringing it to the attention of the buyer. By making possible mass production, by eliminating the work of many salesmen, by reaching great numbers of possible buyers at small cost per buyer advertising is a powerful force making for economy in all American business.

Galloway, Landrum Chapman, Hugh Russell, and Holly Cross has just returned from a Texas rifle contest held at Ft. GOOD POLICY.

Preaching is one thing; good business policy is another. Men find things to criticize in preaching; only a dumb-bell opposes the safe and sane business proposition.

If you study your newspaper as you should, then take note of the great number who are overtaken in crime, folly, and other wrongdoing. Set the number down in your memorandum book each day for a month. The number will astonish you—and the sad total will be a shouting, thundering argument for right living.

There is absolutely no excuse for doing wrong—for it is the poorest business policy in the world; why? because it leads inevitably to disaster.

Take intoxicating drink, for instance. Over-indulgence, or, for that matter, taking it under any circumstances save under advice of a good doctor for illness—is a very, very poor business policy. Why? Because its victims are legion.

If cheating, defrauding and falsifying were not wrong morally, it would remain one of the worst business policies. Such an operator may apparently succeed for a time, but will surely be exposed in time, and bring sorrow to the perpetrator.

The price of a clear conscience is beyond doubt effort well expended. Compared with the dividends reaped, the clear conscience pays more than the best stocks on the market today. To maintain a spotless character and reputation is to have the best credit and backing in the world.

Every man knows right from wrong by native intuition. Every man has been at the forks of the road. It has always paid to turn to the right. There is no better business.

The square shooter is the happy man; the crook does not know the meaning of happiness, because always apprehensive; he is never sure of being safe; his restlessness becomes self-torture in the course of time. The best business policy in the world is—the Golden Rule.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite,
Shawnee, Oklahoma

Burns Hegler, Editor of The Shawnee (Okla.) News, says:

THAT newspaper advertising has reached the point where it rightly can be classed as commercial news. It is as necessary to conducting a successful business or the operation of a well regulated home as rain is to growing crops, or as food is to a human being. It would be impossible to estimate the saving to the American housewife through this medium.

Merchants who doubted the advisability of advertising a decade ago, and who then classed newspaper advertising as an expense, now regard it as an investment, which will prove good or bad according to the attention they give this modern method of contact with the buying public.

Among all the forms of advertising offered, newspaper space still requires the least investment for the value it offers, and all others merely are supplementary to it; most effective when used in conjunction with it. No merchant can lose by putting his money into newspaper advertising if he merchandises what he has to sell, studies his market and sticks to the truth.

The Jewish race is credited with having an unusual amount of business acumen, and one of the strongest arguments in favor of advertising is that no one puts more money into it than the successful Jewish merchant.

There is not a new idea in what I have said, but there is no dodging the established facts regarding truth-telling, go-getting newspaper advertising.

"When my second child was little, I was in very bad health. I did not pick up as I should have. I was weak and sickly. I do not believe that I would have come through, but for Cardui."

"Very Latest"

By Cecile

Quite a bit has been said about the charm of the bouffant organdy frock for formal wear—but never has there been such a fascinating model to show you. 'Tis by Lanvin—a dance frock of organdy in seven shades ranging from orange through to deep amber.

The skirt is formed of graduated squares applied to a foundation of lighter tone and outlined with metallic thread. A panel of squares extends upward on the bodice front—and you will observe that the new natural waistline is a feature.

Novelties in Knitwear

Godets inserted—or knit—into the skirt of a new knitted sports frock;

the high waist line in sweaters indicated by a 4-inch band of fine ribbing running perpendicularly; silk threads inlaid in modernistic designs in the wool meshes of light-weight cashmere sweaters—these are three style notes you may look for in knitted sports togs that are very latest.

Suit Mode to Continue in Fall

Looking forward a scant month or so—there will be no abatement in the vogue for suits and blouses. In fact the blouse member of the outfit will display even greater distinction and originality than was observed in Spring and Summer models. The V-neck, either flat or relieved by a scarf tie or collar, persists as the most flattering line for suit wear. Fine pin tucks arranged in fair-shaped pattern furnish a feminine trimming motif for the dressy blouse.

Tweed—Printed Silks A Practical Choice

For the cool days of July, August and early September, when one feels so forlorn in frilly, light-colored frocks, nothing seems so smartly practical as the ensemble or short jacket suit of silk printed in a tweed design. The weaves of wool tweed furnish the pattern for these clever silks which give us the tailored chic of the wool fabric—with none of its weight or warmth. Colors, too, closely follow those of imported tweeds.

Merchants who want a nice quiet time this summer, with plenty of chance to sleep, should not advertise bargains in their stores.

OLD FOLKS SAY DR. CALDWELL WAS RIGHT

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice.

He treated constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a combination of senna and other mild herbs, with pepsin.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs!

A bottle will last several months, and all can use it. It is pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. Elderly people find it ideal. All drug stores have the generous bottles, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

MRS. CUNNINGHAM DISCUSSES LAWS BEFORE FARM WOMEN. A. & M.

COLLEGE STATION, Texas, July 31.—Prohibition, the tariff, the Shepard-Towner act and the agricultural marketing act were outlined in brief before the homemaking section of the Farmers Short Course here by Mrs. Minnie Fisher Cunningham, of New Waverly, in a discussion of "Some Laws Every Woman Should Know." Mrs. Cunningham cited legislation in the four fields mentioned as having a particular interest for women. Laws dealing with these subjects, she said, "are the most advertised, the most fundamental, and those having to do most intimately with women's interests."

Concerning prohibition enforcement, she suggested that in the triumph of national legislation against liquor, it is possible that strongholds gained in the fight to that end have fallen again into the hands of enemies of prohibition—local strongholds where vigilance has not been kept up. The tariff she characterized as the "most fundamental piece of legislation that Congress is ever called upon to pass" and she illustrated briefly the purpose and the workings of the tariff, deprecating its operation in some instances to increase, as she said was the case, the cost of commodities made at home at the expense of the purchaser and enrichment of the manufacturer.

In trying to solve the problem of "poor, sick agriculture," the "trained and skilful help of the scientific student of economics" is needed more than the "rough doctoring of politicians," the speaker declared.

Mrs. Cunningham expressed much regret that the provisions of the maternity and infancy protection act, passed in 1922, expire this month. How it has functioned in an educational way in teaching the care of mother and child was discussed briefly.

"UNBIASED PRESENTATION" IS ALL PUBLIC UTILITIES WANT

"Material on debatable public questions should give unbiased presentations," declared the report of the propaganda committee of the National Education Association, which declared "the propagandist is knocking at the school door."

"Unbiased presentation" is all the public utilities desire and the fact that the presentation being made through textbooks was neither unbiased nor correct was the reason public utilities sought to get the unfair presentations removed and factual presentations substituted.

WINDOWLESS BUILDINGS FOR BETTER VENTILATION; GAS FOR HEATING AND COOLING

Floyd W. Parsons, fuel specialist, predicts full insulated houses heated with gas in the winter and cooled with gas in the summer.

Roger W. Babson, economist-statistician, predicts office buildings, factories and apartment houses will be built without windows in order to obtain better ventilation. Babson visualizes overhead bridges at corners for pedestrian traffic, two-storied sidewalks, and the manufacture of clothing by something like the printing press which will take the cloths at one end and at the other turn out suits or dresses pressed and boxed for instant delivery, with shoes made from some entirely new product, standardized like automobiles, and every home having a hangar on the roof when the helicopter plane is perfected.

It has been forty-odd years since Edward Bellamy wrote "Looking Backward," and more than a few of his fictional predictions have come into being in that time.

Columbus Started Gum Chewing in America

"If anyone thinks gum-chewing is a modern acquired art of this present flapper age, they have another think coming," remarked Louis Condra to a reporter recently.

Mr. Condra claims he seldom chews gum himself, but sells plenty of it, and because of the numerous customers for this maxillary exerciser has become interested in it to the point of some extensive research and investigation.

"Christopher Columbus may not have been a gum-chewer himself, but unquestionably he brought the habit to America in 1492. History states that when Columbus started out to find a new route to India, which trip ended on the shores of the new found continent, he "requested" of Queen

Isabel "as much gold as can be supplied, spices, cotton and chewing gum, also as much sloswood and as many slaves for the navy as their majesties will wish to demand." And that's that.

"Gum chewing," said Mr. Condra, "was a common form of mastication back in the fifteenth century, betal leaves and nuts being chiefly used. America, however, can doubtless take credit for the successful exploitation of chicle gum in the world's markets, since more than $100,000,000 was spent for chewing gum in this country last year.

That means about 90 cents per capita.—Exchange.

ELECTRICITY APPLICABLE TO 150 FARM USES SAYS A. S. A. E.

Electricity is applicable to 150 uses on the farm, according to the American Society of Agricultural Engineers in session recently at Dallas. The largest development so far has been in refrigeration incident to dairy and poultry products, the discussion brought out, but electric lights for household purposes and for trapping and killing insects are also coming widely into use on farms, with current also in growing use for poultry hatching and brooding. In seventeen states more than 10 per cent of the farm homes are connected with central power plants and more than 500,000 farm homes in America are using electricity, according to speakers at the session. In Texas slightly more than 1 per cent of the farm homes are being served from central plants, but the number has been growing at a very rapid rate over the past couple of years.

Texas shipped more than one-seventh of all the mixed vegetables shipped in the United States in the 1928-29 season. Totals: U. S. 35,000 cars; Texas 7,856 cars.

Texas streams carry into the Gulf of Mexico approximately 26,913,000 acre-feet every year.

The knockers who claim their home town is asleep, may not be enough awake themselves so they would attend any kind of a booster meeting.

Texas was the fourth largest shipper of dressed poultry to Chicago in May, Iowa, Missouri and Kansas ranking ahead of it.

"Very Latest"

Both sensible and comfortable are the sports costumes that may go into the tub and out again, as fresh as only soap and water can make them. And this year the washable silks show more than usual character. In the smart sports ensemble illustrated we combine two favorite fabrics—the cool frock of plain PK crepe—a new tub silk weave sponsored by Stehli, of Paris,—and the jaunty little jacket of polka-dot design.

In a season where contrast is the order of the day this use of different weaves, variety in design, tunes in most harmoniously.

Lace Straws Uniformly Flattering

With these filmy summer frocks there is nothing more becoming—and nothing more appropriate, of course—than the large drooping hat of lacy straw. This may be horsehair or one of the imported lace straws that are equally summery; but in all cases trimming is smartest when it is a simple band of ribbon or velvet in a harmonizing shade that accents the color of the straw.

Sometimes the wide brims are pressed in folds or a V toward the front of the hat, and this irregularity proves very effective for many types.

Broadcloth a Popular Summer Fabric

It seems that cotton broadcloth has established a definite place in the realm of sports wear. Its softness and high lustre commend it, for one thing; and then, too, this season the weavers have given us the most fascinating designs in plaided and figured broadcloths.

One may have these frocks sleeveless or otherwise, and with or without shorts, as the spirit moves.

The Versatile "Dyeable" Shoe

One strap slippers made of dyeable fabrics that can be tinted to match the dance frock are fads of the moment. Heels are extremely high; straps ride well up over the instep, and one may have a tiny brilliant ornament at the buckling point, if desired.

They are called loan sharks because they attack when you're out of your financial depth.

ARTICLE XIX WHEN NATURE "MOTHERS" THE EGGS—

Don't Leave the Whole Job to Your Hens if You Use Nature's Method of Hatching—Careful Following Out of Simple Rules Insures a Maximum Degree of Success.

Editor's Note—This is another story in a series of 52 stories on poultry raising written by the well known national poultry authority, Dr. L. D. LeGear, V. S., of St. Louis. The entire series will appear in this paper. Our reads are urged to read them carefully and clip them out for future reference.

The question which is best, hen or incubator, has been discussed pro and con almost as much as that prime factor of old time high school debating societies: "Which came first, the chicken or the egg?" The real solution of the problem depends largely on circumstances. For a number of reasons, the commercial poultry raiser is forced to use an incubator. For the owner of the average back yard or farm flock, however, it often happens that hens will serve the purpose just as well and for a much smaller outlay. Unlike the commercial breeder, he can usually afford to wait until hens are broody and the problem of securing enough broody hens for his entire hatch is not very often encountered.

As far as results are concerned, one method is as good as the other if proper methods are employed. First of all, considerable care should be exercised in the selection of hens used for hatching eggs. The following points are very important. The hen should have a well developed broody inclination; should be even tempered, free from nervousness and not too offensive when approached while setting. A yearling or two-year-old is more dependable than a pullet; never use pullets if you can avoid it. Use only hens that are large enough to thoroughly cover the desired number of eggs with a little to spare. Use only healthy, vigorous hens, in good flesh and having bright eyes and red combs.

Eggs should not be put under any hen until she has shown well developed signs of broodiness. It is a good plan to put several china eggs under her ladyship at first and confine her to the nest for a day or two. If at the end of the second day she still shows unmistakable signs of broodiness, remove the china eggs and give her the eggs to be hatched. Let her feel the eggs under her before releasing her. Then confine her to the nest for a day or two so that there will be no danger of her deserting her trust.

A sitting hen should be given a place to herself where she cannot be disturbed by other hens trying to crowd into the nest with them. When it is necessary to set hens indoors, each one should have an individual run fenced off with chicken wire. If that is not practical, hens must be confined to their nests and only released at regular intervals so they can eat and exercise. Unless this plan is followed, you will often find two or more hens crowded onto one nest with eggs growing cold in the other nests.

If sitting coops are placed on high ground with sufficient drainage all around, nests may be placed directly on the ground. Scoop out a depression so the nest can be properly shaped to keep the eggs from rolling out. If conditions make it necessary to have a floor in the coop, sod or loose dirt can be used to support the outer edges of the nest. Better still, make the nest in a box about 6 inches deep and 15 inches square for ordinary breeds. For Asiatics, nest boxes should be from 18 to 20 inches square. Pack sod or earth in the corners to round them out. Then arrange your nesting material inside the depression so formed. The use of sod or earth is advisable because it helps to conserve the moisture so necessary during incubation.

To my mind, the ideal nesting material is clean fine straw or hay. It is difficult to shape a nest with long coarse straw. Leaves are sometimes used for nests and are quite satisfactory.

Having provided the hen with adequate nesting facilities, the next consideration is to provide proper food and exercise. The hen should be permitted to leave her nest occasionally to eat and exercise, but must not be allowed to stay off the eggs until they get chilled. Feed her equal parts of wheat and corn on the ground or in a pan near the nest, but feed no mash. Provide plenty of pure, fresh water, grit and charcoal. The sitting hen will usually leave her nest once a day for feed and water. If she does not, take her off and close the nest so she cannot get back too soon. If she stays away too long, take her gently away from the food and put her back on the nest. If the weather is rather cool, she should not leave the eggs more than 10 or 20 minutes. In mild weather she may stay away somewhat longer.

Visit your hens regularly while they are sitting and watch them closely. If a hen is a good sitter, she will stick right on the job and give you very little trouble, but some hens are restless, mash the eggs by moving about or mash newly hatched chicks. Chicks should be taken from such hens as fast as they are hatched and put in an incubator or under some other hen. Always remove empty shells. Otherwise they may slip over other eggs and smother chicks struggling to get out of their shells. Also whenever an egg is broken during the earlier stages of hatching, remove it. If its contents are smeared over other eggs, wipe them clean with a wet cloth and return them to the nest at once. Use only lukewarm water for this purpose. Make necessary examination of the nests while your hens are eating to avoid disturbing them.

Needless to say, thorough sanitation of nests and coops is necessary.

The coop or building in which hatching is done should be thoroughly dusted with lice powder before hatching is started and again on the seventh day.

"Yes," she said, "he did—exactly like a man. He blamed it all on his wife."

Remember Steddon, a pretty, unsophisticated girl, is the daughter of a kindly but narrow-minded minister in a small midwestern town. Her father,

Rev. Doctor Steddon, violently opposed to what he considers "worldly" things, accepts motion pictures as the cause for much of the evil of the present day. Troubled with a cough, Remember goes to see

Dr. Bretherick, an elderly physician, who is astonished at the plight in which he finds her. Pressed by the doctor, Remember admits her unfortunate affair with Elwood Farnaby, a poor boy, son of the town sot. As Remember and Dr. Bretherick discuss the problem a telephone message brings the news that Elwood has been killed in an accident. Dr. Bretherick according persuades Remember to go West; her cough serving as a plausible excuse; to write home of meeting and marrying a pretended suitor—"Mr. Woodville"—and later to write her parents announcing her "husband's" death before the birth of her expected child. Unable alone to bear her secret, Remember goes to her mother with it.

She said little, she carressed much. She confirmed Doctor Bretherick's prescription and joined the conspiracy, administering secret comfort to the girl and to the father.

And at last Mem was standing on the back platform of a train bound for the vast Southwest, throwing kisses to her father and mother as they watched the train dwindling like a telescope drawn into itself.

They turned back to their lives as if they had closed a door upon themselves.

But Mem, as she returned to her place in the car, felt as if a portcullis had lifted. Before her was All-Outdoors.

The wheels ran with a rollicking lilt beneath the girl's body, throbbing likewise with a zest of velocity. Through her head an old tune ran:

I saw the boat go round the bend,
Good-by, my lover, good-by!
The deck was filled with traveling men.
Good-by, my lover, good-by!

She was on a train going round bend after bend, and the train was filled with traveling men. Some of them, as they zigzagged along the aisles, swept her face and her form with glances like swift, lingering hands that hated to let her go. This was a startling sensation, a new kind of nakedness for her inexperienced soul.

The eyes of the women flung along the aisle also widened and tarried as they recognized in her something she had not yet found out: that she was very, very pretty—attractive, compulsive.

She was plainly dressed and had never been adorned. Only her neatness kept her from shabbiness. But she had beauty and appeal. On the train Mem had expected to find on the journey leisure for contrition and the remodeling of her soul. But the world would not let her alone. Everything was new to her. Everything was a crowded film of novelty.

She knew the minimum of the outside sphere possible to a girl who had had no education at all. She had never been on a sleeping car before.

She had read no novels except such sweetened water as the Sunday school library afforded. She had seen no magazines at home except church publications. She had never been to a theatre or a moving picture. She had never danced even a square dance.

She had never ridden a bicycle or a horse, and had never been in any automobile except some old bone-shaker that drowned conversation in its own rattle.

She had never gambled, or been profane or even slangy or disrespectful to her parents. She had never seen a bathing suit or had one on. Girls did not swim in the river at Calverly. In fact, she had escaped all the things that moralists point to as the reasons why girls go wrong.

Yet she had, as the saying is, gone wrong—utterly, indubitably. Yet no fast, young men had led her astray, or so much as tried to lead her astray. She had never made the acquaintance of a fast young man. Her betrothed lover was slow and honorable and religious, everything a young man ought to be. But, unfortunately, there seemed to be volition in neither of them; they had just floated together with a mysterious bewilderment.

The clanking uproar of the entrance into Kansas City filled her ears. Mem had never seen a great city, and this metropolis had a tremendous majesty in her eyes.

Remember, thinking to stretch her legs on the station platform, joined the passengers who choked the straight corridor along the row of compartments. One of the doors opened and framed a tall and powerful young man with a peculiarly wistful face. His eyes brushed Mem and he lifted his hat as he asked her pardon for squeezing past her.

He knocked at another steel door and called through, "Oh, Robina, better come out for a bit of exercise."

While he waited, some of the passengers were twisting their necks to our fave-rite of all the screen stars, and—You got no photographs with you, have you?"

Tom was indomitably polite, but the conductor's call, "All aboard!" gave Robina an excuse to drag him away from the worshippers.

One of the girls, in an epilepsy of agitation, wailed: "Say, looky! That lady under the veil is Robina Teele! Gee! and we didn't recognize her!"

The train was emerging from the retreating walls of the city before Mem felt calm enough to examine her magazines.

On the cover of one of them was a huge head of Robina Teele, all eyes and curls and an incredibly luscious mouth. Remember had never heard of her or seen her pictures, because her films were great "feature specials," too expensive for the villages.

There was a long article about her, and another about Tom Holby.

This was not so amazing a coinci-

She saw the gallant was the tall youth who had crushed past her in the corridor.

watch him, and nudging and whispering to one another. When the door opened and Robina stepped out there was such a sensation and such a boorish staring that Mem turned to look.

A young woman of an almost dazzling beauty came out, smiling and bareheaded. She noted the yokelry in the corridor, and her smile died. She stepped back into her stateroom, and when she reappeared, she wore a large drooping hat and a thick black veil.

"I envy you the privilege of the veil," the young man said. Mem walked up and down the platform as if her feet were winged. She felt a longing to buy something for the sheer sport of buying, and went so far as to buy two magazines devoted to the moving pictures.

One of the magazines slipped from under her elbow and fell to the ground and as she stooped to recover it her hand touched a hand that had anticipated hers. She looked up quickly and her head knocked off the hat of the man who had tried to save her the trouble of picking up her magazine. She saw the gallant was the tall youth who had crushed past her in the corridor. His face came up again like a sun dawning across her horizon; his eyes beat upon her like long beams. There was a kind of pathos in them, but also a great brightness, which, like the sun he poured upon million alike. But Mem did not know this. She felt warmed and health, and she bloomed a trifle as a rose does when the sun gilds it. With great calm and as much of a bow as he could make without a sense of intrusion, the young man solemnly offered Mem his own hat and laid her magazines on his head.

Then both of them laughed as he corrected the automatic mistake of his muscles. He blushed hotly, for he was not used to such blunders.

Mem found an amazing magnetism in his smile and in his eyes. She did not know that that sad smile of his was making a millionaire of him. He was selling it by the foot—thousands of feet of it. His smile was broad enough to circumscribe the world and his eyes had enough sorrow for all the audiences.

He turned back to the waiting Robina. Robina was evidently not used to being kept waiting. She had had little practice. She resented the slight with such quick wrath that Mem could hear her protesting sarcasm, a rather disappointing rebuke: "Don't hurry on my account, Tom"

Two young girls assailed Tom with shameless idolatry. One of them rattled:

"Oh, Mr. Holby, we knew you the minute we laid eyes on you. You're avalanche of shame that she was neither respectable nor a widow.

But she was a fugitive now from her past and from such thoughts, and she caught up the magazines with a desperate eagerness, as if they were cups of nepenthe.

After dinner Mem found her way to the observation car and wrote a letter home. She was sealing it when she suddenly remembered Doctor Bretherick's prescription. She was to take a lover on the first day! She had mentioned nobody that she had met. Now she must describe the important man that she would never meet. He was an imaginary, and therefore, a quite perfect character. She wrote:

"Oh, I forgot! Whom do you suppose I ran into on the train? You'd never guess in a million years. You know when I went to Carthage to take care of Aunt Mabel? Well, do you remember my telling you about the awfully nice man I met at church? Mr. Woodville was his name. Remember? Well, would you believe it, he is on this train! Isn't it a small world! He has been most kind and polite. I met him in church, as you remember, and somehow I feel much safer not being alone. I'm sure you'll be glad. He's very religious, but awfully nice—I mean, so, of course, awfully nice. Good night again, you darlings!"

Being told that they recollected Mr. Woodville, her parents obligingly remembered him. Mrs. Steddon had been warned of this faction and collaborated in it.

Doctor Steddon was one of those who believe almost anything they read, especially when they hope for its truth. And there was nothing he hoped for so much as that his child should meet a good man and love him and be loved by him.

Mem spent most of the next day planning her second letter home and growing acquainted with that husband of hers. She used Tom Holby as a model.

Crossing the desert the train came to an abrupt halt. A driving bar on the engine had broken and dropped. If the train had not been puffing slowly up a steep grade it would have been derailed and some of the passengers probably mangled and killed.

It was a long while before the passengers found this out, and they reveled in the delight of averted disaster. Nobody knew how long the train would be delayed. They could not go on until a new engine was secured. A trainman had to walk to the next block signal towers, miles ahead, and telegraph back for another locomotive.

Mem wandered about, looking at the cactus and sagebrush and deliciously expecting a rattlesnake under every clump.

She saw Tom Holby set out for a brisk walk. He climbed a ragged butte with astonishing agility, winning the applause of the passengers. He had the knack of acquiring applause.

Continued Next Week.

Information on New Gasoline Law

The State Comptroller's Department is now prepared to receive reports of exemptions from the new four-cent occupation tax on the sale of gasoline, according to an announcement by State Comptroller of Public Accounts Sam Houston Terrell. Gasoline used for any other purpose than that of propelling vehicles on public roads, streets and highways of Texas is exempt from taxation. Fuel used in farm tractors, stationary engines, air craft and motor boats, therefore, is exempt.

However, the tax must be paid on ALL gasoline. Refunds will be made to those exempt. The tax is placed directly on wholesale distributors of gasoline at the rate of four cents per gallon, but the consumer eventually bears the burden of the tax. The new rate was in effect July 16th, having previously been two cents.

The new law does not make it easy for the consumer to secure refunds on exemptions. Comptroller Terrell has outlined the necessary procedure for the exempted consumer as follows:

1. The purchaser must fill out an invoice, at the time of the purchase, giving amount, price, purpose, etc. The regular price is paid for the gas. Forms will be supplied by dealers and filling stations.
2. Before the 25th of the month following the month of purchase, the buyer must report to the Comptroller the number of gallons bought and the amount of refunds expected. Claims reported later than the 25th of the following month will not be honored.
3. On receiving the report, the Comptroller's Department will mail claimant an affidavit-account form, on which will be recorded information as to the amount and use of gasoline purchased. This information must be sworn to before a notary public, and filed with the Comptroller not later than two months from the date of purchase. This document must be accompanied with a filing fee of $1.00, which must be paid each time that a claim is filed. These fees will be used to enforce the law.
4. The claim will be investigated, and if considered valid, a State warrant will be issued for the refund. This warrant must be cashed within 60 days.
5. No refund shall be made where gasoline is used later than six months from purchase. Persons believing themselves to be entitled to exemptions should write to Comptroller San Houston Terrell, Austin, Texas.

Are You Ready

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—what most physicians would tell you to do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than Baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug; Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot put away. And it's always ready for the crueler pangs of colic, or constipation, or diarrhoea; effective, too, for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.
