DIAMOND MINES ARE BECOMING EXHAUSTED

Only a Question of Years, Scientists Assert, Before Present Sources of Virgin Diamonds Pan Out.

Feb. 21—Eventually, say diamond authorities, unless new chimneys—as diamond pockets are called—are discovered, the world will be dependent upon second-hand diamonds—stones which have been sold, stolen or lost to return again upon the market.

From the time the mines of India first supplied the world's demand, diamonds have been discovered in varying quantities and qualities in Sumatra, Borneo, the Urals, Australia and parts of North and South America. For the past half century, however, the mines of South Africa have produced 90 per cent of the world's best grade of rough.

The yield of the Transvaal mines, like that of its predecessors, has steadily declined. As the shafts have sunk deeper—they are now some 3,000 feet below the surface—the cost of mining has increased. Today, a ton of diamond bearing rock yields an average of only $6.00. As only 5 per cent of the diamonds mined cut to perfect stones, over 100 tons of rock must be dug, transported to the compounds, weathered, washed, sorted and sent to Europe to produce the equivalent of a one carat stone.

It is easy, therefore, to appreciate the increasing value of diamonds and the resulting scarcity of true virgin stones. As a matter of fact, the demand for diamonds direct from the mines which have never before been owned or worn, has increased to such an extent that a Holland firm, the Virgin Diamond Syndicate has been remarkably successful in specializing in virgin diamonds exclusively, supplying a registered certificate of title with each gem.

IT'S ALIVE!

If you are not accustomed to thinking of the soil as something alive, let Dr. S. A. Waksman, microbiologist, New Jersey State Experiment Station, tell you what he finds in it. A pound of soil out of your field contains 450 grams. Just one gram of this soil contains, on the average:

- One hundred million to three billion live bacteria, of many kinds.
- Ten thousand to one million fungus spores and pieces of mycelium.
- Ten thousand to twenty million actinomyces.
- Ten thousand to one million live protozoa.
- Many thousands algae cells and diatoms.

Quite a lot of namtodes, rotifers, insect larvae, etc.

The most amazing thing, perhaps, is how that gram of soil also contrives to make room for organic matter, chemical foods, water, and air.

Rheumatism And Stomach Trouble Quickly Respond To Action Of New Medicine

MR. JAMES F. SIMPSON

"Although seventy-nine years of age I found quick relief in Konjola," said Mr. James F. Simpson, 1800 North Sixth Street, Ft. Smith, Ark. "For five years I suffered with rheumatism of the worst sort. The pains settled in my back, at times driving me nearly mad. Three years ago my stomach began troubling me and I grew steadily weaker from this ailment. Intense distress followed the simplest meals and food never tempted me.

"In desperation I turned to Konjola, for I knew many whom it had helped. Almost from the beginning of the treatment with this medicine, my health improved. The ills of rheumatism grew less and finally all pain from this ailment had ceased. My stomach yielded no less promptly and I soon began eating hearty meals without distress of any sort. My appetite improved and my general health is better than it has been in years."

Konjola is sold in Slaton at the Red Cross Pharmacy, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

On the farm there is "to make a little more of a little better, more worthy of God's

"Pointed Heels" Splendid Show; Powell as Lead

Helen Kane Sings Songs in Her Typical Baby-Voiced Style; Other Support Great

The patrons at the Palace will be pleased with the offering, "Pointed Heels" Wednesday and Thursday. And well they might, for this production had all the required ingredients of first class entertainment. There is clever acting, interesting plot and much first-rate comedy in it.

William Powell runs off with the acting honors in the production. He is the suave man-about-town and producer of artistic stage revues who forms the third side to the romance triangle of which Fay Wray and Phillips Holmes are the other components.

HELEN KANE in "Pointed Heels", A Paramount Picture

Miss Wray is the show girl who marries Phillips Holmes, the youthful song-composer. Their married happiness is almost curdled by the machinations of the urbane Powell, but at the finish the lyric admixture is cleared by a surprise twist in character on the part of Powell who turns out to be not a villain, but just a demi-villain after all.

In brief it is as simple as all that—but in the audible celluloid unwinding of it "Pointed Heels" is intensely gripping at all time, even when Helen Kane and "Skeets" Gallagher, a new movie song and dance team, are putting over their amusing mummery. One never knows just what turn the fortunes of all will take at each moment of the play—and that is the proof of good entertainment.

Helen Kane, be it known, is the little girl with the roly-poly eyes and "boop-boopa-doop" voice whose work on the radio and phonograph brought her fame almost overnight. She is every bit as much a thorough actress as she has been a thorough success as an "invisible" personality. She sings two great songs in this production.

There are some deftly worked out ballet ensembles in the stage sequences which are worth going a long way to see. They were staged by Albertina Rasch and they are a delight to the eye.

West Ward Notes

"I believe mine is taking." Don't touch my arm, my it sure is sore." Or "Ouch, you'll hurt my vaccination," or "mine is sure taking," or, and this sorrowfully, "I don't believe mine is going to take." These and other expressions similarly expressed are heard daily by the hundreds from teachers and pupils. The saddest are those whose vaccine failed to take. Teachers coming into the office in the morning to sign up no longer greet each other with "good morning," or the usual, hello, but nod to each other with, "how is your arm?" Then by the way of emphasis in replying they begin to roll up their sleeves and show you, and tell you how bad it is. Which only goes to show that teachers are human after all.

West Ward students, despite sore arms are playing ball these days. The large playground ball is used. One may walk among the eight or ten games going at noon and see the "King of Swat" in action or even Sir Arthur The Great smiting his manager, it may be on the nose, or giving him a punch in the ribs over errors in judgment in playing or in calling the game. In fact, all the Big League stars are there in miniature. If you are observant enough you may see the swagger of the Schalk, the dominant Cobb, and the confident Speaker, and the what not of temperament, pomp, and bluster that mark the stars of the Big League. Pay us a visit at noon and see 500 hundred young Americans busy at play.

Watch the Slatonite and see if your boy or girl is on the honor roll. It is a well deserved honor if his name appears. If it is there a few words of commendation might not be amiss, and if it is not there a few words of encouragement would not do any harm.

West Ward is interested in the beautification program sponsored by the local Chamber of Commerce. Our grounds are bare except for a few trees. Our class rooms are almost as bare of equipment. We need good books for inspiration and character building. We need flowers and trees to cultivate the finer sensibilities of our nature. We are in favor of both.

The report cards are due next Wednesday. Ask your children for them. Look them over. Comment on them judiciously. Show a little interest, but not too much.

West Ward needs a motion picture machine. It will cost $250, but it will be worth it. Pupils learn by all their senses. Much quicker by visual instruction. Good teaching should combine hearing and seeing. Impressions are made on the brain by seeing, hearing, smelling, and feeling, and also by tasting. A picture machine and plenty of good books is our most urgent need.

Some students are out with the small pox, or because of the quarantine. An ounce of prevention is worth pounds of cure. All school children should be vaccinated upon entering school.

Chas. W. Roberts.

RATS BECOME A WORLD PLAGUE

Rats are multiplying so rapidly that they have become a world plague and almost a menace to civilization. It is no longer an individual fight, although every home owner and farmer should never let up on the war against them, but it has become a question of a well-planned campaign covering entire cities and counties.

Rats are carriers of disease. They have caused the death of millions of humans in times past and undoubtedly are the primary cause for many deaths and much sickness in this and other countries every month and year. Rats also destroy more than $200,000,000 worth of farm and other food products each year in the United States and as much more in Europe. They live and breed in cities, in towns and in the country. No section of the country is immune and they are multiplying more rapidly than we have thus far been able to kill them.

In some sections rats have been almost driven from the country by constructing rat-proof buildings and by keeping all foods and feedstuffs out of their reach, but when thus driven away, they go to other sections where they continue their depredations. The war on rats must be continuous and it must be organized. There are many ways of poisoning them and many proved methods of killing them by gas and by other means. We suggest that farmers and citizens in cities and towns troubled by rats write the Department of Agriculture, Washington, for bulletins on the subject. We also suggest that every community organize for a systematic and effective war against the pest.

For IMMEDIATE Delivery

When a merchant is called upon to supply some commodity which he does not happen to have in stock he can usually satisfy his customer by telling him that he will have it in a few hours or in a few days at most.

The light and power company cannot do this.

It must always have a large reserve of kilowatts for immediate delivery to the new customer or to fill the increased order of the old customer. It cannot say: "We are just out of kilowatts, but we will have a new supply tomorrow, or next week, or next month."

It makes no difference whether the customer be a new manufacturing establishment, ordering kilowatts in quantity, or a householder, installing additional lights—the company must make IMMEDIATE DELIVERY.

This means a large capital investment in reserve equipment.

 Last Friday night the Slaton sextette took the undefeated Seminole girls' team to a walloping cleaning to the tune of 35 to 21. The Seminole girls hail from Gaines County and had defeated every team in their section. They arrived about five o'clock and had a short workout to get used to the floor. Needless to say they felt sure of taking home Slaton's scalp, thereby adding one more victory to their list.
 The Slaton girls were undefeated also and at 7:30 the battle began with Supt. Smith of Southland officiating. The fast scoring work of Saage and Harrison soon left the Indians trailing in the dust to a score of ten to one. Even though the Seminole girls called for time and were able to rally for a while they were unable to overcome the lead taken by the Tigeresses early in the game. The girls are still looking for their match.
 Look out for the Slaton Girls' Tournament Feb. 28 and March 1.

FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH

The Rev. Jasper Bogue, Evangelist, of Amarillo, Texas, is conducting a series of meetings at the First Christian Church, Mr. Bogue is a representative of the Texas Christian Missionary Society. In returning to Slaton for these meetings, Mr. Bogue states he was happy to again meet the people of Slaton, as back in August 1923, he spoke to the people under the arbor, where the Fairmont Creamery is now located. He sees many changes for the better in the city, and is much impressed with the growth and progress made since that time.

He states that the services being held at the Christian Church are developing into a wonderful interest by the people. The spirit is manifest and the addresses are very helpful. The Rev. Dally and Mrs. Dally have charge of the music and are adding several special numbers that are being greatly appreciated by those present. The Rev. Bogue is making use of the stereopticon each night bringing the messages in pictures and song that are very helpful.

Two special sermons, Sunday night, "Thrills," and Monday night, "Mountain Top Men." Hear these sermons if possible. Services each night, at 7:30, Sunday morning at 11:00, Bible School at 9:45 a.m. Christian Endeavor at 6:30 p. m. Come.

CHURCH OF CHRIST

Preaching both morning and night. No sensational subjects to announce. The gospel is the power of God unto Salvation. We don't know of any thing to be done on the eighth of June that should not be done on any Lord's day.

Ye observe days, months and times and years. I am afraid of you lest it have bestowed on you labor in vain. We had a splendid attendance last Lord's day. Some announcements that you should know about, try and be there. Bible Study, 9:45 a.m. Preaching 11:00 a.m. and 7:45 p.m. Young People's Meeting, 6:40 p.m. Prayer Meeting, Wednesday 7:45 p.m. Ladies Bible Class, Monday 3:30 p.m. J. E. Mullins, Minister.

On Monday afternoon, Feb. 24, at 3:00 p.m. the Auxiliary of the Presbyterian church will hold their annual "Praise and Thanksgiving Service." All the ladies of the church and their friends have a very cordial invitation to attend.

AT THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Sunday, Feb. 23, 1930
Sabbath School meets at 10 a.m.
Morning worship at 11 a.m.
Y. P. S. C. E. at 5 p.m.
Evening service at 7:30 p.m.
Last Sabbath was a good day with us, two additions to the church and good interest in the services. Plans are being made for another good service. Themes of special interest will be discussed by the pastor at both hours.
The public has a cordial welcome to worship with this church.
James Rayburn, Pastor.

FIGHTING ILLITERACY.

A plan is being promoted by the United States interior department, to be carried out by a committee of leading educators, to reduce illiteracy. It is headed by Dr. W. J. Cooper, United States commissioner of education. There is a big job ahead of the American people to teach their illiterate folks how to read and understand English. It should be pushed to the limit. If illiteracy is tolerated as it has been, it will have a bad effect on the country's political life. Many of the states have no literacy test for voting, and people who cannot read are not apt to show good judgment in the way they vote.

Also illiteracy hampers industrial progress. People who can't understand English speech and read English newspapers, find difficulty in learning how to work efficiently. It is hard to explain things to them and show them the best ways to do things. It was claimed at the time of the war that about 25 per cent of the drafted young men were practically illiterate. The census returns will not show any such percentage as that who can't read and write. But there are millions of people who would claim to a census taker that they know English, yet they have so limited a knowledge of the language that they read newspapers only with the greatest difficulty, and they cannot understand ordinary conversation.

The committee which will take up this proposition has a big job on its hands. Cities and towns and states should listen to their suggestions. It may mean spending a good deal more money here in Texas for English instruction in classes and evening schools. But great losses result from permitting so many people to grow up who do not know the language of the country.

Plainview Farmer Had Almost Given Up Hope When He Tried Orgatone Troubles Now Gone

"Honestly, I've been trying for ten years to get the relief two bottles of this Orgatone has given me," declares E. F. Felty, a well known farmer residing on Route 1, Plainview, Texas. "Yes, ten years ago," he continued, "I started having trouble with indigestion and from that time on I have certainly had my share of it. I kept taking medicine, thinking I would get over the trouble, but I just kept on suffering. My appetite was no good and I had an awful burning and pains in and about my stomach. I got to where I was disgusted with medicine because nothing helped me. I was blue and despondent, had no ambition and just getting clean down and out as far as health was concerned."
"I was so miserable I just felt like I must get some relief, somehow, and when I saw so much in the papers about Orgatone, I decided to see if it would do me any good, and upon the recommendation of the friends who had used it, I bought my first bottle. My appetite is good now, I eat hearty and sleep like a log. I may have gained some in weight, too. I don't know about that, but I do know that I feel like a new man, and Orgatone is the cause of it. If anyone will inquire I certainly will tell them what this medicine will do. I'm satisfied there's nothing to equal it."

UNMAN'S BLUFF

Edgar Wallace
COPYRIGHT BY EDGAR WALLACE

ple: a beautiful-looking girl, fashionably dressed; by her side, his face half hidden under a broad-brimmed Stetson hat, a bearded man of striking appearance. Ahead of her was walking a stout-looking man, and by his side a rather pretty girl. As she overtook them she heard the stout man say: "Take a look at that swell woman! That's Jean Gurlay—the biggest crook in London, my dear."

Those ahead of her she recognized as the Sparrow and his companion, and, not wishing to be seen by them, sat down on a garden seat, her eyes following curiously the electric brougham. She saw the machine turn at the Marble Arch and come slowly along by the side of the curb, and she watched with a detached interest the beautiful girl and the bearded man, whose head was turned toward his companion. As they passed she heard the man say:

"This is all very mysterious. What does it mean?"

In an instant she was on her feet, pale and shaking; she had recognized the voice of the bearded man. It was her husband.

In the interest of his new, strange life, Luke found it fairly easy to forget. The spirit of adventure was on him. Margaret belonged to a dim, almost unbelievable, past. She was of the substance of dreams.

He went gaily to a rendezvous with a fair-haired girl on the following afternoon, and was delighted to find how springy was his step. He had hardly taken his place in front of the Guards Memorial when he saw an electric brougham approach and, catching the girl's signal, stepped to the side of the road as the car stopped.

She was in excellent spirits. "It's a great idea to let yourself be seen in a certain kind of car," she said. "You don't know what I mean? I'll bet you don't!"

They crossed into Hyde Park, made a slow progress near the edge of the sidewalk, and he found himself enjoying the novel experience. She was very pretty, though older than he had thought.

"Do you see that fat man over there? That's the Sparrow. You want to keep away from him."

He started at the name.

"You mean Bird?" he stammered, and looked guiltily in the direction she indicated.

He saw Mr. Bird. He was walking with a very pretty girl, but the woman was at that moment seating herself on one of the park benches he did not recognize.

As the brougham turned and came back on the other side of the road, she said suddenly:

"There will be a car waiting near the Cavalry Barracks. I hope you can drive?"

"Another car?" he asked in astonishment.

She nodded.

"I want to try you out."

He laughed.

"All this is very mysterious," he said.

The car was waiting for them, a closed light car of English make. There was nobody in attendance, but without hesitation she stopped the brougham and gave the driver instructions.

"Here it is," she said. "Get in."

Luke sank into the driver's seat and put his foot on the self-starter, and she came in after him, slamming the little door behind her.

"Grafton Street," she said, in a businesslike tone. "Pull up opposite the Rean Club."

He thought she was testing his driving ability, for he had to pass through three traffic blocks before he brought the machine to a standstill at a place she indicated.

"Now you understand," she said, dropping her voice and speaking rapidly. "I'm going in to see my husband."

She looked him straight in the eyes. "If he makes a fuss I shall expect you to help me. If he doesn't make a fuss, we'll drive quietly away down Albemarle Street, make for Vauxhall Bridge and Tooting Common."

"Your husband?" he stammered.

She gave him one quick look of suspicion.

"That is what you tell the flattie if there is any fuss."

What a flattie was she did not explain, and was gone before he could ask her. He kept the engine running according to her instructions. She was gone some twenty minutes. Presently, looking out, he saw her turn the corner from Bond Street and walk with apparent unconcern toward him. As she stepped into the car, a man in his shirt-sleeves darted around the corner, flew at her, and gripped her by the arm. She tried to wrench herself free, and before Luke realized what he was doing he had struck her assailant and sent him tumbling to the pavement.

"Drive!" she snapped, and mechanically Luke Maddison sent the machine leaping forward.

They crossed Oxford Street, down St. James's Street, through the park, and were over Vauxhall Bridge before he partly realized what had happened. "Why did that fellow grab you?" he asked.

"My husband—I had a row with him," she said calmly. And then: "I knew Connor was wrong," she said, and whistled. "If I hadn't had my wits about me and started that husband story, I'd have been half-way to Holloway!"

He saw her look at every policeman they passed, out of the corner of her eye, and his heart was beating faster as they came to the edge of Tooting Common, and at her command he stopped the car.

"We'll get out here," she said. "You can go back by bus, I'll take a taxi. If Connor comes tonight, tell him I've got the stuff."

She turned to go, but he caught her by the arm.

"What stuff?" he asked sternly.

And then he saw the flat case she carried under her leather coat.

"My God!" gasped Luke Maddison. "You stole that!"

There was amusement in her fine eyes as she nodded.

"Of course I did, you poor simp!"

A taxicab was passing and she hailed it. Slowly his grip on her arm relaxed. He watched the taxi recede like a man in a dream, too stunned even to think. He could never remember that journey back to Lambeth. He had crossed Westminster Bridge when he saw a newsboy with a placard: "Daring West End Robbery." He stood dead still, gazing open-mouthed at the contents bill, and then he felt in his pocket and dropped a penny from his trembling hand into the newsboy's palm.

He dared not look inside the newspaper until he was in a quiet street. Then he read:

DARING WEST END ROBBERY
Bearded Man and Pretty Girl Rob Taffanny's of 20,000-Pound Diamond Necklace

A daring robbery was committed this afternoon at Messrs. Taffanny's jewel shop in Bond Street. At about 3:50 a well-dressed woman walked into the shop and asked to be shown some plain gold rings. Whilst the assistant's back was turned, she must have broken a glass case with a rubber-headed hammer. When he came back, he found not only the woman but a valuable diamond necklace had disappeared. He flew out into the street and overtook the woman as she was entering a motor car. He was immediately struck down by her companion, who is described as a man of great height, with a fair, well-trimmed beard, dressed in a gray tweed suit.

"That's me!" groaned Luke Maddison.

son, and almost swooned.

For a quarter of an hour he sat and watched his tea growing cold, his mind vacillating between horror and amusement. He, Luke Maddison, was a thief, a gangster, an active member of an organization which had robbed Taffanny's! He knew Taffanny's rather well; he had bought Margaret's engagement ring over the very glass counter that had been smashed. He was helpless—the idea of going to the police and betraying his associates never occurred to him. There was only one thing to be done and that was to steal away at the first opportunity. He had written for his check book to be sent to Ronda, and it was a simple matter to reach Spain. Was it, though?

With a gasp he realized that he had no passport! And without a passport it was impossible to reach Spain, of all countries, where every man and woman who passed across the frontier were closely scrutinized. If he had not dismissed his servant it would be easy to creep back to his flat one night, pack a bag, and fade away into a Continental limbo. But probably his solicitor had the key of the flat. A new hope awakened. Hulbert had an apartment in St. James's Street. He was a bachelor and accessible.

Outwitting the Corn Borer.

Monroe, Mich.—A. R. Marston, Superintendent of the Michigan Corn Borer Experimental Station, announces that the cross-breeding of Maize Amargo, a South American strain of corn, with Duncan, Golden Glow and Red Cob Ensilage strains will produce, after inbreeding, a corn which is immune to the corn borer. The strain, after three years' experimenting, has proved 100 per cent resistant when planted next to infested corn. It will be available for planting in five years.

It is pretty hard to get Mrs. Jones or even Mr. Jones to buy at home unless the goods required are available and at a reasonable price."
