Plains-Panhandle Poultry Show To Be Held December 10, 11 and 12

The first annual Texas Panhandle-Plains Poultry Show will be held in Slaton on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, December 10, 11 and 12. Detailed plans for the regional show which includes 54 counties of Northwest Texas, are proceeding satisfactorily, and enthusiasm is said to be high. The Texas Panhandle-Plains Poultry association was organized here in August of this year, and Slaton was chosen as the show's permanent home. Taylor White, of Tahoka, is the first president of the association. L. A. Wilson, of Slaton, is secretary-manager.

The show's catalog and premium list will be ready for distribution within a few days. It will carry complete details about the show and will outline of awards that will be made.

Leading feature of the show will be that production or utility which will have a definite place on the list. Not only will the types be included, but also prizes will be offered for flocks in general. A flock of females, young and old flocks will be judged. A. P. A. judge, but the judge by a separate judge is not an A. P. A. of will not compete with the show for premiums. The breed types and utility separate and distinct announcements relative to the show will be made regularly between now and the time the first show is held, it was announced by officials of the show. Breeders and producers are urged to begin getting their flocks ready for exhibition and thus help make the show the most outstanding event of its kind in the southwest, it was stated.

Slaton, Lubbock Will Meet Clubs In Inter-City Meet

The members of the Slaton Rotary club attended the luncheon meeting of the Lubbock Rotary club at noon Wednesday in the Hotel Lubbock, the program being furnished by the Slaton club. It was the first inter-city meeting Slaton Rotarians have had in more than a year. About 25 Slaton men attended.

The program consisted of a playlet concerning inter-city relations between Slaton and Lubbock. There were three blackface characters, representing "Mr. Lubbock," "Mrs. Slaton" and their child, "Opportunity." Jack King, Slaton high school boy, portrayed the part of "Mr. Lubbock," Oscar Killian, manager of Jones Dry Goods company, represented "Mrs. Slaton," and Leo Hood, also a high school pupil of Slaton, was "Opportunity."

"Mr. Lubbock" and "Mrs. Slaton" first engaged in a quarrel, accusing each other of all sorts of conduct unbecoming two members of the same family. They finally discovered that their quarreling had caused them to lose their child, "Opportunity." But the child reappeared, revivifying the pair and causing them to make peace in the family, pleading each other that they would not again engage in quarrels, but that they would live harmoniously, taking proper care of

1,526 Bales of Cotton Received By Slaton Gins

The five Slaton gins that are operating this season had received a total of 1,526 bales of this season's cotton up to last Saturday afternoon. It was shown by tabulation of figures at that time. This represented receipts totalling 310 bales for the preceding two weeks' period, it was announced. Wet weather caused the ginnings to pile up slowly, it having been unfavorable for cotton picking during most of the two weeks prior to last Saturday.

Unfavorable weather for picking cotton continued this week, with practically all farmers waiting for sunshine in order that work might be resumed.

Woodmen Circle Worker Here for Meeting Monday

The Woodmen Grove met Monday, October 20, in a call meeting when important business matters were acted up. The district worker, Mrs. Janie B. Garner, from Snyder, was presented and gave some very encouraging suggestions and promised to meet with the Grove again in the near future.

The Slaton Grove, No. 1320, gave a very liberal donation to the home for Aged Members and Orphans, located at Sherman.

Every member of the Woodmen Grove has a great pride in maintaining this home.

Fire Alarm Sounded On Monday Morning

In the peaceful, early hours of last Monday morning the fire siren wailed, disturbing the restful sleep of Slatonites. The fire was discovered at the residence owned by Mrs. Chas. W. White, located at the corner of W. Lubbock and Eleventh street, and occupied by R. L. Tate and family.

It is conjectured as to the cause of the fire. There appears to be a total loss of the building and contents, both of which were partially covered by insurance as reported by the Pembers Insurance agency, who had the coverage.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. A. Guy and Dr. Sam Dunn, wife and little daughter, Velma, of Lubbock, were callers on Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Rdoerick, Sunday evening.

"Opportunity."

The playlet, written by R. A. Baldwin, Slaton attorney, stressed the necessity for and importance of maintaining the right kind of relations between the two towns, Slaton and Lubbock. Mr. Baldwin, besides writing the skit, accompanied the characters to Lubbock Wednesday morning, assisting them in "making up" for the parts in the playlet.

After the play had been given by the trio, Lloyd A. Wilson, president of the Slaton club, made a short talk, and members of the Slaton club were then introduced.

The program was arranged by a committee composed of Jim A. Elliott, W. Everett Payne, and J. Tom Overby.

Legion Post and Auxiliary Unit To Meet at Clubhouse

Luther Powers Post, American Legion, and the Legion Auxiliary will hold regular semi-monthly meetings at the Slaton clubhouse on Friday night at 7:30 o'clock, it has been announced by Jim A. Elliott, Post Commander, and Mrs. Fred Tudor, Auxiliary president.

Members of the two organizations are urged to be present at these meetings.

Mrs. Tudor also announced that an appeal had been made from disabled veterans located at Legion hospital, near Kerrville, that they were in need of sweaters and coats. The local unit of the Auxiliary has been asked to assist in this worthy cause and anyone having any sweaters or coats, for men, which they wish to donate will please notify Mrs. J. S. Bates.

Mr. and Mrs. Kirby J. Brown were called to Amarillo the first of this week on account of the serious illness of Mrs. Brown's mother. Word has reached here that Mrs. Brown's mother was called by death.

H. H. Edmondson transacted business in Dallas the latter part of last week.

Payne Conducts Rotary Program

A question and answer test on interesting facts and principles of Rotary was conducted last Friday by Allan J. Payne at the luncheon meeting of the Slaton Rotary Club. The contest was held in the form of an old-fashioned spelling bee, Tom A. Worley, Jr., and L. T. Green choosing "sides". The contest proved unusually interesting and very helpful in developing the members of the club in a better knowledge and clearer understanding of Rotary.

There were three visitors present, two members of the Lubbock Rotary club and one other business man of Lubbock.

The Slaton club will not have a luncheon meeting here this Friday because of having held an inter-city meeting with the Lubbock club at Lubbock on Wednesday.

Slaton Tigers To Meet Spur Today

Word has finally reached Slaton that the Slaton Tigers will meet Spur this Friday. There has been some controversy as to the eligibility of some of the Spur players. The decision will be rendered next Monday. In the meantime awaiting that information the Tigers will be on hand, at Spur, for the game as originally scheduled. There remains in our memory the game of last year.

We hope the Tigers will give a good account of themselves at this game, and return winners.

We reiterate, "that we are for them, pulling mighty hard." But above all play a clean game.

POPULATION

The village of Whiteall, Owen county, Indiana, a town so small that it hasn't a newspaper, comes into the news again for the first time in ten years. Whiteall is almost the exact center of population of the United States.

The United States is getting settled. In 1790 the center of population was 32 miles east of Baltimore, in 1880 it was 18 miles west of Baltimore. In the course of the next hundred years the population center moved westward at the rate of about 4.83 miles a year.

From the center of population there are just as many people to the south, as many to the West and to the East, as many in any direction as in the opposite direction.

THE ARGONAUTS RETURN

Skipper, Charley Marriott, Pilot Mrs. Pugh Marriott, Lamp Trimmer, Pauline Marriott, and Cabin Boy Charley Marriott, returned from a cruise, going over uncharted seas of mud, taking many days to make the voyage, but glad to again be at the port of Slaton. Uncle George states "I told you so". They can get no place with their flat-bottom boat, they should have taken my boat, the trimmest boat that sails the South Plains seas."

Lorene McClintock To Be Heard Over K R L D Oct. 28th

Miss Lorene McClintock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. D. McClintock, of this city, who is attending S. M. U. at Dallas, where she is taking liberal arts work and studying music under Mrs. VanKapwyk, will be heard over radio station KRLD, Dallas, on next Tuesday afternoon, October 28, at 2:30. Miss Lorene will appear before the invisible audience in a musical program with specially arranged numbers. She also appeared in a recital last Tuesday night, in Dallas. She reports that she is more than pleased with the school and her work and the Slatonite wishes to congratulate her on the progress she is making and we know that her many friends here will welcome the opportunity to hear her when she broadcasts next Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Jonnie Newland, of Tonkawa, Oklahoma, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Charlie Marriott, and family. She accompanied the Marriott family on their return from a two weeks' vacation last Monday.

R. L. Vivial left Slaton Friday night for Dallas where he transacted business and visited the Fair.

Brownfield Held Slaton To 0-0 Tie

The Brownfield Cubs entertained Slaton Tigers Friday the 17th at Brownfield. While we have no desire to hold a post mortem, the fact remains, that the Tigers will have to get faster to pick the daisies in their garden.

We credit the Tigers with a wonderful defense in holding the Cubs for four downs on the Tigers goal line. That was the outstanding play of the game.

At no time were the Cubs in danger from the Tigers. From the side lines it appears to the fans that the Tigers were outplayed on the offensive, but still their defensive was mighty good. They have a game coming on Thanksgiving Day and there will have to be much good work done if they are in the running.

Somehow, we feel that a team built around one man is not a good proposition. Mighty easy for an injury, then out of the lineup. We are wondering if we have only one man that is fleet on foot in the Tiger lineup. We are simply out of luck if that be the case.

Thanks for not letting the Cubs cross your goal line when they had only a foot to go.

Tigers, hope you do better next time. We are still for you, pulling all the time.

Quite a crowd drove over to see the game. The Pep Squad was all there doing their level best, and they did. Fine bunch of girls. We are proud of them.

Dr. J. F. Kastner, chief surgeon of the Santa Fe, with headquarters at Topeka, Kansas, and F. W. Biddinger, also of that city and representative of the A. T. & S. F. Hospital association, were between train callers in Slaton, Thursday afternoon renewing acquaintance with the Doctors Miller, who were former residents of Topeka. They also called upon Dr. Marvin C. Overton, Jr., who recently was appointed one of the local Santa Fe surgeons.

SOME ONE SAID DUCKS

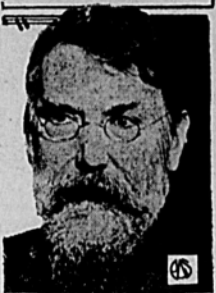

Some of the Slaton mimros are getting down the old "barker", giving it a polishing, cleaning out the barrels, playfully caressing the old safety with words of cheer and comfort, and promising that "we" will get our bag.

Well, the call of the wild sure gets into a fellow's system, and there is only one way to get it out, and that is to take to the open where they are flying. Well, we do not know, the heavy clouds and low ceiling would indicate that soon they will be on their way. Take a look in the windows and see the display and we wager your temperature will rise. Everything there for your use, the picture is complete excepting the duck, in person, is missing. You may get decoys and pictures but the real thing is found only in the open.

We say, get into the open.

Wilson Farmers Have Classes In Study of Poultry; Good Attendance

Famous Farmer Poet

George Kassell, who writes Irish poetry under the pen-name "A.E.", is visiting America to study farm conditions and talk cooperation.

Farmers near Wilson, ten miles south of Slaton, are attending a short course in poultry raising, which is being conducted by H. M. Kopecky, teacher of vocational agriculture in the Wilson school. The class held its first meeting on Tuesday night of last week, Mr. Kopecky said, with 14 farmers attending. Meetings will be held each Tuesday night for twelve weeks, he stated, the last meeting to be on December 30. Attendance is expected to increase.

The various phases of poultry raising and problems connected therewith are being considered at the meetings.

JUST A WORD

Some of the Slatonite's many friends make the statement that they cannot get their copy published. The management appreciates the copy furnished by the clubs and other organizations connected with the activities of the community and individuals, and we wish this to continue.

Many of the ones who are responsible for the reports of these bodies call on press day with the copy, after the event has been several days old, and in so many cases just too late for publication.

We will receive copy on Wednesday for publication as we go to press with the Slatonite on Thursday afternoon so that it may be in the postoffice that night for delivery Friday morning.

Just a little more thoughtfulness on the part of those supplying the copy will be appreciated.—The Publisher.

Geographies of Texas Will Be Revised Soon

Dr. Paul W. Horn, president of Texas Technological college, Lubbock, has accepted the task of bringing the Texas geographies to a standard. We, of Texas, know that there is much misleading in the books that are before the people. So much that is out of date and obsolete and very misrepresenting. The action by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, in conjunction with other regional chambers, has finally brought results.

We feel that in Dr. Horn, one of the most able educators in Texas, that the revision will be in accord with the facts and what Texas is fully entitled to.

The compilers, heretofore, have been very faulty in their surveys.

We are all pleased that Texas will receive her just dues, knowing that Dr. Horn will be untiring in his efforts to have Texas remain in the sun.

WHEAT

In every state but Georgia the August price of corn was higher than the price of wheat. Such a state of things occurs only once in a long time, wheat usually being the highest-priced grain. This year there is a big wheat surplus and a short corn crop.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture and the Federal Farm Board are advocating using the wheat surplus to feed livestock. It is figured that the food value of wheat is so much higher than that of corn, that with corn at a dollar a bushel the farmer can afford to pay $1.12-1.2 for wheat for feeding.

Many farmers have reported their experience in feeding wheat in the past, for cattle, hogs and poultry, with uniform satisfaction. Some say that it fattens hogs faster than corn does. It would be strange if wheat should become the stock farmer's mainstay as well as the backbone of human diet.

We are growing fourteen bushels of wheat per acre while Germany grows twenty-eight and England thirty-two. We are content with less than half a bale of cotton to the acre on land that requires only better cultivation to yield at least a bale.

AUTOGIRO

Before the gas engine was invented, before anybody had ever believed the airplane possible, Thomas A. Edison invented a flying machine which was to be lifted into the air by a horizontal windmill propeller, the power derived from a series of gun-cotton explosions.

The other day Mr. Edison saw Jas. Ray and James Faulkner land at Newark after a flight from Philadelphia in a machine they called an "autogiro" which, except for the engine, was just like the early Edison dream. It is entirely possible that the autogiro, which can rise vertically, land "on a dime" and fly as slow as 20 miles or as fast as 115 miles an hour will be the airplane of the future.

Brownfield and Slaton Elevens Tie Score, 0-0

The Brownfield High eleven held the Slaton High Tigers to a scoreless tie in a game played last Friday afternoon at Brownfield, it being the first time the Tigers ever failed to defeat their Brownfield opponents.

Although neither of the grid outfits was able to score in Friday's game, the Brownfield team threatened to put over a counter, lacking only a half yard of crossing the Tiger goal line. The Slaton line held in the pinch, however, and the Brownfield team lost its only chance to wallop the Tigers.

Play-by-play records of the game showed that the Tigers made five first downs to four for Brownfield.

The Tigers were not in their usual playing form during the Brownfield tilt, according to fans who accompanied them on the visit to the Terry County capital.

A game with Spur at Spur on Friday of this week was scheduled early in the season, but doubt was expressed this week as to playing this game, due to certain conditions which have not been thoroughly determined with reference to eligibility of some members of the Spur eleven, it was said.

The Way of Life

BRUCE BARTON

DULL MEN

I am getting old enough now so that some of the little acorns which I saw planted are beginning to show up as quite sizeable oaks.

For example, there was an office boy in the place where I worked after leaving college. He was not a bright office boy. We did not think that he would ever amount to very much. He did not think so himself. He had none of the Vision which we read about. He just kept on keeping on.

Well, the other day I picked up a trade paper, and there was a big photograph of our ex-office boy, and the announcement that he had just been elected president of a rather important company.

As years go on, and the business of the country expands, his company will expand with it, for he will be a careful administrator. And some day his associates will give him a dinner and hail him as a great leader, and his picture will be hung in the Board Room.

Perhaps you have read Mr. Woodward's biography of General Grant. If so, you remember that he stood low in his classes at West Point, and was later discharged from the army. When the Civil war broke out he was such a failure that his letter offering his services to his country was not even answered by the War Department.

The army was full of more brilliant men. Halleck, for instance, knew all about tactics. In any crisis he could tell just what Napoleon would have done. McClellan had a touch of genius. What did Grant have?

He had a superstition. When he started out on anything he hated to turn back. It applied even to small things. If, when he left the house in the mornings, he found he had forgotten something he never retraced his steps. Always he went forward. And when he came to command armies he did the same thing. Doggedly, ploddingly, but inexorably he pushed ahead.

When I was in college, the president said, "Henry Ward Beecher, when a student in Amherst college, stood at or near the foot of his class. Nearly a hundred years have passed, and Amherst college has produced no second Henry Ward Beecher, though many men have stood at, or near, the foot of their class."

Just being dull, or standing at the foot of the class, is no assurance of success, of course. On the other hand, it is nothing to be discouraged about—a fact of which I see more evidence almost every day.

Dirigible's Safety Is Questioned

Distaster To the R-101 Might Have Been Averted Had Helium Gas Been Used

By CALEB JOHNSON

The tragedy of the British airship "R 101," which caught fire and was destroyed with the loss of 47 lives on October 5, brings to the fore the question whether the dirigible is, after all, any safer than the airplane.

The answer of the advocates of the dirigible is that, in proportion to the number of each type of aircraft in the air, there have been fewer fatal accidents in dirigibles than in heavier-than-air flying crafts, and that the demonstrated ability of such airships as the Los Angeles, the Graf Zeppelin and the R-100 to cross oceans safely, even to travel around the world battling against storms which would certainly have wrecked any airplane, weights the balance in favor of the balloon or lighter-than-air craft.

Just what caused the accident to the R-101 may never be definitely known. All that is certain is that, in a heavy storm over northern France, the ship touched the top of a low hill and burst into flames, only seven of her personnel of 53 escaping with their lives, and some of those seriously burned. What caught fire was not the fuel of the airship's motors, for those were of the Diesel type, using heavy oil instead of gasoline. The flames which destroyed the craft were of blazing hydrogen, the gas with which the ship was filled to make it lighter than air.

It seems certain that if the R-101 had been filled with helium instead of hydrogen, the crash probably would have had no fatal results. The ship did not fall from a height, but was driven close to the ground by the weight of a heavy rain, and did not respond to her elevating rudder promptly enough to enable the pilot to avoid a small hill which loomed up in front. But the shock was sufficient, apparently, to start a leak in the hydrogen bags, escaping hydrogen came in contact with fires or a spark, and the instant intense conflagration followed.

Whether the fact that this ship was the first airship on which smoking was permitted had anything to do with the fire probably will never be known. On all other hydrogen-filled dirigibles, smoking or even the possession of matches is most strictly prohibited because of the fire danger. In the German navy during the war any member of the crew found to have matches or smoking material on board was summarily executed. On the R-101 a special smoking room had been fitted up for her passengers, which on this trip, the first attempt at a dirigible flight from England to India, included Lord Thomson, the British Minister of War, and one of his chief aides. This was believed to be perfectly safe, and it may have nothing to do with the accident. Observers on the ground who saw the dirigible fly over Beauvais, France, just before the crash, told of seeing flames shooting from the engine exhausts, and it may easily have been from that source that the leaking gas was ignited.

Aeronautical experts are substantially unanimous in the belief that such an accident could not have occurred had the ship used helium instead of hydrogen for lifting purposes. That was impossible for a British ship, however, for the only known large supply of helium gas is in the United States, and not only is its production controlled exclusively by the United States government, but its export to other countries is forbidden by law. The Los Angeles, our largest aircraft, is lifted by helium, and the same gas will be used for the two new dirigibles being built for our navy at Akron. Helium is only a trifle heavier than hydrogen, but considerably lighter than air.

The trouble with the R-101 apparently was in her design. She was too heavy for her engines, according to engineers who watched her construction. After she was built, it was decided to lengthen her, and a new mid-section 45 feet long was inserted. This was done without increasing her engine power, which did not equal that of the Los Angeles or the Graf Zep. A similar fate befell the American dirigible Shenandoah, a few years ago, after undergoing a similar operation. The Shenandoah was lengthened after being built, and she was caught in a line storm over central Ohio and destroyed with great loss of life.

Another great British dirigible, which was being built in England for the United States Navy, also crashed because of structural defects a few years ago. Indeed, the only lighter-than-air ships of large size which have shown themselves stable and reasonably immune to serious accidents are those which have been built in Germany by the Zeppelin company, or have followed the Zep lines closely. Our own Los Angeles was built by Zeppelin's, and was awarded to the United States as one of the trophies of war. Before the war there were many Zeppelin airships running on regular passenger service in northern Europe, and so great is the confidence of the traveling public in them that the news of the disaster to the R-101 did not deter a single one of the 24 passengers who had booked for week-end trip on the Graf Zeppelin, from returning to Berlin on the dirigible.

The R-101 was far from being a sister ship of the R-100, which recently flew from England to Canada and back safely. She had much more luxurious accommodations for passengers for one thing, than any previous aircraft.

The passengers could easily have imagined they were on an ocean liner instead of an airship. The upper deck was roomy, with an area of 5,500 square feet, while on each side was a promenade with railings like those of a ship. The chief difference was that, instead of being in the open air, the R-101's passengers were inside the envelope and could view the panorama below them through windows in the outer cover. Nevertheless the illusion was cleverly maintained with tea tables, flowers and easy chairs.

The comfort and luxury of the interior could not hide the fact, however, that the passengers were helplessly trapped in event of disaster. They were not in an outer gondola, with outside windows, as on the Graf Zep. They were trusting their lives to the hull built inside the gas bag and outer envelope. The only escape was to slash a way through two walls of fabric or run along the inner corridor to the nose of the ship. In this case, disaster happened too quick.

On the upper deck were two berth cabins from which the sleeping passengers were hurled to their deaths. There was also washing accommodation, with handbasins arranged in cubicles.

"Looney" Sayings

By LOONEY, "Himself"

I want to tell you this week folks, of the great lineup we have for you—Friday and Saturday this week. We have probably one of the best pictures of the year, as far as 100 per cent entertainment is concerned. That picture is "Hell's Island" with those two Buddies, Jack Holt and Ralph Graves. This is the story of two Yanks in the French Foreign Legion and a cabaret girl, the thrill of the year.

Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, Rex-Beach's "The Spoilers." No need to tell you about this one. It was a big one silent and great talking. A story of the Alaska gold rush featuring Gary Cooper and Betty Compson. You will like it.

Now, folks! Here is a bit of real news. Hallowe'en, that is a word that makes you always think of what you have done to celebrate it in the past—of how scared so and so was when! Well, this year we are giving a show that will surpass any other midnight show you ever saw. The picture is "The Return of Dr. Fu Manchu," and "Dance of the Skeletons." Alone is enough to make you shiver. But that is not all, it will be in total darkness with the exception of scenic effects. The picture is on the stage—beginning at 10 o'clock and the stroke of the old clock—all guarantee the spine and run a track that has not been seen since the date of the Hallowe'en show you don't know, is the show starts at 12.

The remains of Victor B. Davis, 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Davis, who lives eight miles south of Slaton, were shipped to Weatherford last Tuesday noon.

Young Davis succumbed to a short illness Monday night about 8:30 at a Lubbock hospital where he was carried four days previous as a result of a ruptured appendix. An operation was never performed, as pneumonia and other complications developed immediately.

Funeral services were held in Weatherford, Wednesday with burial following.

Dixon, "The Sign Man" Endorses Famous Argotane

"It Was Just the Medicine for My Case, I Feel Fine Now," Says Wichita Man

Argotane has simply taken Wichita Falls and surrounding towns by storm. Remarkable as it may seem, over 20,000 bottles have been sold in Wichita Falls during the past few months. On last Saturday alone over 200 people, by actual count, came into Allison's Drug store for Argotane and told what it had done for them.

"It is certainly wonderful what Argotane has done for me. It was just the medicine for my case, and I feel fine now," continued Mr. Dixon. I have been nearly down for about two years, and suffered terribly from indigestion and chronic colic, and cramps. I didn't rest well at night.

"My appetite had left me entirely and I got to where I couldn't relish anything. I just had to force myself to eat. In order to keep going and what little I did eat failed to agree with me and made me feel dull and sluggish. Food soured on my stomach, and gas would form and I would bloat up until I could hardly breathe. I had tried almost every kind of medicine but never got any relief.

"Argotane was recommended to me by a friend and I began taking it. I began to eat better right away, and feel fine now. I eat anything without having gas or bloating spells and my dizzy and bilious spells are gone. I don't have colic or cramping any more and my constipation is relieved. I have gained in strength and have more pep and energy than I have had for the past two years. I want to recommend Argotane to others, because it has done so much for me."

Genuine Argotane may be bought in Slaton at the Teague Drug store.

Pale and Weak

"I THINK Cardui is a wonderful medicine, for I improved greatly after taking it," says Mrs. A. W. English, of R. F. D. 4, Roanoke, Va. "When I was just a girl of 13, my mother gave this medicine to me, and it did me a great deal of good. I was weak and run-down. After I had taken Cardui awhile, I felt much better. "In 1924, my health was poor. I felt miserable, and hadn't enough strength to do my housework. It took all my willpower to keep up. I was pale and weak. "I got Cardui again and took it. My improvement was wonderful. I can recommend Cardui to others, for my health was so much better after I had taken a course of the Cardui Home Treatment."

ONE CHANGE FOR THE BETTER

There are many who believe that any change in manners and customs must be a change for the worse. There are others especially among the young folks, who eagerly welcome any change, regardless of its origin or its morals. Everybody realizes that social, economic and normal conditions have changed greatly all over the United States in the period dating from the beginning of the war. Doubtless some of the changes are improvements as certainly some of them seem to the thoughtful as recessions from older standards.

One change, however, seems to us definitely for the better. That is the change in the attitude to each other of city people and country people. Country folks no longer regard all city people as stuck-up snobs, nor do city people think of the folks who live in small towns as uncouth bumpkins. The reason for this is that city and country people today dress alike, have the same standards of schooling, eat the same sort of things, ride in the same kind of cars over the same good roads, see the same movies, hear the same things over the radio, read the same magazines and books, and so are beginning to act alike, for the first time since rivalry between rural and urban points of view began.

We believe that is a good thing. We believe that we shall never become a completely unified nation until all sectional differences and prejudices have been wiped out. And if that means modifying old standards, then let us modify them.

THE WORKER'S SHARE

Henry Ford in his new book declares that by 1950 the average wage of the skilled American worker will be $4 an hour, or $27 a day. Mr. Ford apparently does not think the five-hour day will have become general by that time. But the annual report of the president of the metal trades section of the American Federation of Labor urges that body to adopt the five-hour day and the five-day week as a part of its general program for the improvement of wage conditions.

There is no doubt that the tendency toward shorter working hours and higher hourly pay will continue to grow. Wages must always be based upon the earning power of the worker, but the old theory that there is only so much in the "wage fund" and that if some get more of it others must get less, has been disproved by the plain fact that in modern industry the output per individual worker can be increased to a point to justify paying him far more than the old economists ever dreamed of.

Of course, with increasing wages, commodity prices will tend to increase, also, but experience so far with the rising wage scale does not show that this increase is proportional. Wages in the principal industries are much higher, compared with those paid before the war, than commodity prices are by the same comparison today. The worker's dollar does not buy as much as it used to, but he gets enough more dollars to make up the difference and leave him a larger balance than he used to have.

It is difficult to understand how, in a democracy such as the United States of America is supposed to be, there can be any serious opposition to any general movement to give the wage-earners an adequate share of what they earn. Of course, to be equitable, the movement must be general. It is unfair to the workers and to the business community as a whole, to have high wages and short hours in one industry and long hours and low wages in another. So, too, it is not sound economics to have such differences in the same industry in different parts of the country, as the difference between working conditions in the textile industry in Massachusetts and North Carolina.

All economic history tends to prove that in the long run the wage-earner wins what he demands. The industries which are still working on the ten-hour day will have to fall into line sooner or later, and those which are paying low wages will have come up to the standard of other industries when business picks up again, as it is now showing decided signs of doing.

Some folks think water is an inglorious drink, but those who partake of it are usually able to get home safe.

THIS IS A GREAT COUNTRY

The canning season in the North is over; the fruits and vegetables have been put up for the winter, the cellar windows have been banked up, the green corn is in the silo and the hay in the barn or fodder stack. Apple-picking is about finished. There is still some corn-husking to be done, and then the fall plowing to be finished, but the heavy part of the farm work is over for the year.

In the South the profitable part of the farm year is just beginning. In Florida the celery growers are setting out the plants which they started in their seedbeds during the summer, while the tomato and pepper crops are just getting under way for fall and winter shipments. Strawberries will be ripe around Plant City by New Year's Day, perhaps a little earlier. And the early oranges are just getting to market.

Down in Maine the potatoes have been dug and stored in the pits against shipping time, and the farmers are overhauling their bobsleds and snow-plows. In Pasadena they are getting the rose trees into shape for the mid-winter Carnival. On both sides of Old Man River the colored cotton-pickers of Mississippi and Louisiana are at the height of their task. Along the upper reaches of the same stream the young folks in Minnesota and Wisconsin are thinking of sharpening their skates for the hockey season.

This is a great country!

HUMORETTES

A Scotchman found it necessary to notify his wife that he might be home late that evening, in which case he would phone her. This is what he told her:

"I'll ring ye' at 6 o'clock. When ye hear the bell ye'll know it's me. Dinna answer it, and I'll get ma nickel back."

"And what did your poet do when you turned him down?" "Oh, the poor dear threw himself into the waste-paper basket."

He: Ah, it certainly does seem good to be dancing.

Her: Yes, I suppose there's nothing like the feel of a good toe under your foot again.

Station Master: "The pig cannot go in the carriage with you. It must have a special compartment."

Rustic: "Thank you kindly, sir, but there is no need for all that ceremony about my old pig."

Judge: What brought you here?" Accused: "Two policemen."

Judge: "I don't mean that—drunk, I presume."

Accused: "Both of them."

"How is your husband's lawsuit getting along?"

"He thinks he will either get two months in prison or two months in Palm Beach from it."

"Be careful, Junior. See that you don't hit your fingers with the hammer."

"I shan't mother, Daddy's going to hold the nail for me!"

SILVER

With the decline in the use of silver for money, all over the world, the price of the metal is lower than at any other time in history, measured by the gold standard. The silver dollar, once cherished in the West and South above all forms of currency, has almost passed out of circulation.

Senator Oddie of Nevada, the principal silver-producing state, now proposes the coinage of a silver dollar which would have no special intrinsic value but be a "token" like the half-dollar, quarter-dollar and dime, all of which are worth less as metal than their stamped value.

One good reason for restoring the silver dollar to circulation is the fact that it costs the Government about two cents a year to replace each dollar bill with a new one as the old ones wear out.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Marriott and children, Charles, Jr., and Pauline, returned Monday from a delightful vacation spent in various points in Oklahoma and Kansas visiting relatives and friends.

Local Republicans attended the Lubbock meeting for Col. W. E. (Till)

Talbot, of Dallas, gubernatorial candidate for governor. They report a fine meeting with about 400 attending. Those going from here were: J. S. Edwards, C. C. Hoffman, Jr., J. E. Kelley and G. A. Guthrie.

Weeds that attack crops cost California $25,000,000 a year.

The people are longing for the high tide of prosperity, but when that comes a lot of speculators get in over their depth.

RUBY M. AYRES

EIGHTH INSTALLMENT

Giles Chittenham swears to avenge the death of his young half-brother Rodney, driven to suicide by the notorious Julie Farrow who had spurned his love. He will make Julie love him, then throw her aside as she threw Rodney. He meets her in Switzerland, goes with her to the hotel on the St. Bernard Pass, and succeeded in winning her love. To his amazement, he discovers that she has fallen overwhelmingly in love with her himself! And he is married, to an American girl with whom he has nothing in common. Then he discovers that this girl is not the same Julie Farrow who ruined Rodney, but her cousin of the same name. She scorns him when he confesses his love and his inability to marry her. They meet later in London, where she is going the pace that kills. Another man, Lawrence Schofield, wants to marry her, in spite of her wild life.

Through his friend Lombard, Giles Chittenham meets the "other Julie," the notorious woman who ruined Rodney's life. She tells him that she is going to die; the doctors have given her up as incurable and she is leaving England. She is worried about her cousin, the girl Chittenham loves. That Julie—his Julie—is going in fast company, among them a common little American girl named Sadie Barrow.

And Sadie Barrow is Giles Chittenham's wife. He did not know that she was in England. That night he meets her at a party at his mother's home. They pretend to be strangers.

Now Go On With the Story

"Oh, an old friend by now," Julie declared. "We've known one another quite a week, and love each other dearly. Bim doesn't approve. She says that Sadie is common and bad form, and a wrong influence for me! Did you ever hear such rubbish?"

"I should think Miss Lennox is right," Giles answered, then stopped aghast at the admission. His own wife!—"And does Miss Barrow share your views on life that you and she are such great friends?"

"As a matter of fact, she doesn't," Julie answered. "She's inclined to be morbid, and nobody can accuse me of that."

"Morbid!"

"Yes. She's got weird ideas on some subjects. For one thing, she's mad on this latest spiritualistic craze."

"Nonsense!"

"You're not very polite. Ask her yourself if you don't believe me. That's why she's in London now—to see Chryer, the new medium."

"You're not serious?"

"Of course I am! There's a seance tomorrow, and we're all going. You'd better come along too."

Her eyes challenged him. "Or are you afraid that they may read the secrets of you inmost soul?"

"There is only one secret in my soul for any one to read," Chittenham said. She laughed.

"How touching! The tragedy of your marriage, I suppose."

"No," said Chittenham. "The tragedy of my love for you." For a moment Julie seemed taken aback. Her lips quivered, and she bit them sharply, then she turned and called to Schofield:

"Lawrence, come here! Mr. Chittenham is talking to me about his soul, and I'm almost reduced to tears."

Giles had forgotten Doris until suddenly she spoke:

"I saw you talking with Julie. Was it she who made you angry?"

"Good heavens, no," Giles answered, too eagerly for absolute conviction. "She was talking about spiritualism."

"About Chryer, the new medium? That little American, Sadie Barrow, is most enthusiastic. She says that she wants to know the future, and that Chryer can tell her."

"Sadie is a little fool," Chittenham said unthinkingly. Then he flushed dully, and hastily apologized.

"I should not have said that. I beg your pardon, and hers. Let us talk about something else."

"Very well. Say—have you met the other Julie yet?"

"Yes. A night or two ago. I was agreeably surprised," he said at last.

"You know she has gone abroad?"

"I saw something about it in the paper."

"Of course everyone is saying that she has gone with some man."

Chittenham made a swift gesture of anger, but he instantly controlled himself.

"I know that is absolutely untrue," he said.

Doris flushed.

"I am only telling you what people are saying."

"People are too charitable!" Giles said with a sneer, and he thought of the woman whom he had left crouching by the fire in that lonely room.

"I suppose if I allow myself to be identified with this menagerie much longer they will credit me with a scandal of my own."

"I think they have done that already," Doris said lightly.

He turned and looked at her.

"Really! may I ask what it is?"

"I hardly know the facts myself, but I know it was something to do with Julie Farrow—this Julie Farrow—"

She watched him closely as she spoke.

Giles managed to laugh.

"How futile! I never met her in my life until that night at the Faun where I met you."

She looked at him steadily.

"That is not what Mr. Lombard insinuates."

In spite of himself Chittenham changed color.

"So Lombard is the liar?"

Mrs. Ardrion floated into the doorway. Giles rose, glad of the interruption.

He wandered through the crowded rooms until he came across Lombard.

"I want to speak to you."

Lombard looked up.

"Well—what is it?"

"Come outside—"

The two men went into the hall.

"What on earth—?" Lombard asked again apprehensively.

Chittenham told him.

"I understand that you've been talking about things that don't concern you."

"My dear old chap—"

"You know what I mean—Switzerland—"

"I assure you, Chittenham—"

Giles cut in ruthlessly.

"Don't let me hear any more about it, that's all, or I shall have something to say to you that won't be very pleasant to hear."

Chittenham turned on his heel and walked away.

"A new sensation," said Julie.

She sat up in bed, letting the letter she had been reading slip down on to the floor.

"It was a lovely morning when I came home," she said flippantly. "The first time I've ever seen the sun rise, by the way—no, not quite the first time—" she added slowly.

There was a little silence. "The first time was in Switzerland," she added defiantly. "On top of an exceeding high mountain, and the devil said unto me—"

Bim turned sharply.

"Julie, for heavens sake shut up."

"Oh, all right," Julie giggled, and leaning over the side of the bed grabbed up the fallen letter from the floor.

"Listen to this!" she commanded. "It's from Mrs. Ardrion, the mother of the one and only Giles Chittenham! She says that she is quite willing for us to hold a seance in her house tomorrow, and bring the famous Chryer. You'd better come along, Bim."

Bim came to the foot of the bed.

"Our friendship isn't what it used to be," she said rather sadly. "We don't seem to agree any longer. You like people whom I—well, just can't stand and you know it! I detest Doris and that Sadie Barrow, and Marco Essen—and that poor weak little fool, Mrs. Ardrion. No—it's impossible to detest her, she's too harmless—"

"I wish Giles Chittenham could hear you."

Julie flushed.

"Are you in love with him?" she twitted Bim sharply.

Bim flushed to the roots of her closely-cropped hair.

"No," she said. "But you are."

There was a little silence, then Julie started up, her eyes blazing, her lips quivering with rage.

"Go out of my rooms," she commanded. "How dare you say such a thing? I've had enough of you and your saintly ways. The sooner you go the better. I'm sick of being dictated to and preached at. I—"

But Bim had gone, closing the door softly behind her.

Julie lay back on the pillows. She was trembling in every limb.

"How dared she say such a thing! how dared she?" she asked herself passionately. "In love with that man! I hate him—How dare she—how dare she!"

She shut her eyes tightly, afraid of the scalding tears that suddenly seemed to rise from her heart.

Hate him! the man in whose arms she had found the meaning of love; the man whose tragic mistake had broken her, body and soul. Until now she had hardly realized how much she had suffered since that evening in Switzerland when Chittenham had told her the truth.

She was morbidly afraid lest Giles should guess how he hurt her, and so counteract that fear she sometimes deliberately sought his society, crucifying herself in order to deceive him. And it had been all in vain, for Bim knew!

With a swift little movement Julie threw aside the bedclothes and caught up a wrap.

"Bim!" she went out of the room and to Bim's door. Julie flung it open. She entered with a little rush, and, running across to her friend, dropped down on her knees beside her.

"I didn't mean it. I'm sorry. Forget I said it—I'm a beast—a mean beast, but you made me angry."

"Give it up, Julie," Bim urged gently. "Come away with me. We've had good times together before, and the country is Heaven now—"

She turned round, her arms hanging limply at her sides, her hair ruffled.

"I can't!" she said. "I've got to stay and face it out. He'll think I'm afraid—that I'm running away."

She spoke quickly and incoherently, almost as if some power inside herself was forcing the words from her.

"I'd rather die than that he should think that. I'd rather marry Lawrence Schofield."

"My dear, I don't understand in the least what happened between you," Bim said to her in cool, smooth voice. "You would never tell me when I asked you. If I only knew perhaps I could help you better—"

"He's married," she said defiantly.

Her head went down again on her outflung arms and she began to sob.

Bim sat quite still, her hand on the girl's hair till Julie was quieter, then she tried again.

"Don't be a coward, Julie. Cut it all out and come away with me."

"I should be more of a coward if I did that. He'd know I was afraid."

There was a little silence, then Bim asked:

"Julie, have you seen his wife?"

"Whose wife?"

"Mr. Chittenham's?"

"Good Lord, no. He told me they were separated, or something, but if they are, I daresay it's his fault. He must be a brute to live with."

Bim got up slowly and walked into Julie's room.

"I suppose it's true?" she submitted hesitatingly.

"That he is married?"

Julie turned around, her eyes wide, her lips parted.

"I—suppose so," she said slowly then the colour blazed suddenly in her cheeks. "Do you mean that... you think he just said it—as an excuse... to get rid of me?"

"Well..."

Julie went on with her dressing, but her hands shook badly.

"If I really thought that—" she said. "Perhaps I ought not to have suggested it," Bim said hurriedly. "But he makes love to you—asks you to marry him—"

"No, he never asked me to marry him," Julie interrupted ruthlessly. "He just said... oh, why need we go all over it again?" she asked passionately.

"I'm only trying to help you, Julie. If it is true that he is married, why did he make love to you?"

Julie laughed.

"Don't all married men make love to other women?" she asked cynically.

"I shouldn't have thought a man like Mr. Chittenham would," Bim said.

Julie made a little sound of anger.

"I suppose I shall have to tell you all the truth," she said. "It all sounds so silly—like a cheap drama. He thought I was Jewel—I never told you that, did I? He had some quixotic idea of paying me out for what he thought I had done to Rodney—they all blamed Jewel because he killed himself, you know. Well, Giles thought it would be a good idea to make me fall in love with him and then laugh at me as a punishment. Funny, isn't it?" she submitted quiveringly. "Well, I fell in love with him all right—and then after he'd found out his mistake, and that I wasn't Jewel after all, he told me the truth. But first he said that he really loved me—he said that part of it wasn't pretence at all but the real thing... I remember I was fool enough to think it must be all right then. I was quite ready to fall in his arms again and forgive him—"

Her voice was hoarse with dreary self-scorn. "And then he had to tell me the rest—that he was married!"

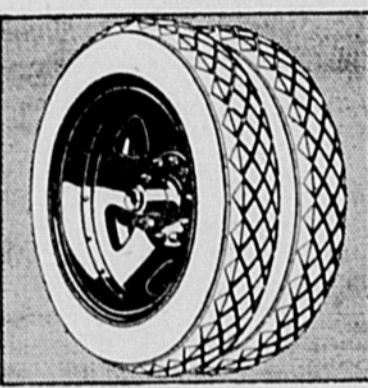

A maid tapped at the door and entered.

"Please, Miss Farrow, will you see Mr. Chittenham?"

Athlete Soon Regains Health By New Konjola

Baseball Player Suffering from Rheumatism and Other Ailments Finds Prompt Relief

MR. JACK M. LONG

"For over two years I suffered with rheumatism," said Mr. Jack M. Long, 511 Burnett street, Fort Worth. "My legs and back were affected so much that I could not carry on my work as a baseball player. Finally I was forced to remain in my home for three months. I had attacks of indigestion and my kidneys gave me no end of trouble; the pains in my back were terrible. I was forced to arise many times nightly and became very nervous.

"I tried many remedies without result when a friend recommended Konjola. After taking seven bottles, I was able to resume my work in the K. I. C. league as a ball player. The rheumatic pains have completely disappeared and my stomach is in perfect condition. My kidneys are again normal and I do not have to rise at night. The pains have left my back and my nerves are strong. Konjola restored me to perfect health."

Although many men and women state that one or two bottles brought relief, it is recommended that six or eight bottles be taken to obtain the best results.

Konjola is sold in Slaton, Texas at the Red Cross Pharmacy, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

HIGH SCHOOL P.-T. A. MET LAST TUESDAY NIGHT

The high school P.-T. A. held its first evening meeting Tuesday evening, October 21 in the high school auditorium.

The meeting was attended by a large group of fathers, mothers and teachers who are interested in the welfare of the boys and girls.

The evening sessions are held in order that the fathers may have the opportunity of attending and giving their support and cooperation to the problems concerning child welfare. It was interesting to note that so many fathers were present at the first night meeting and it is hoped that the interest will continue to grow until each parent will become a part of this group of child welfare workers.

Mrs. Wolfskill, president of the association, presided during the meeting which opened by the audience singing "America" followed by prayer by Rev. I. A. Smith.

After a short business session a very interesting program was rendered which included a voca solo, "Love's Old Sweet Song," by L. A. Wilson, with Mrs. Wilson accompanying on the piano. Mr. L. T. Green ably discussed "Standards of High Schools."

Rev. James Rayburn discussed "Investments in Education." These talks were timely and to the point.

Immediately after adjournment the group was invited into the home economics room where the P.-T. A. served delicious refreshments.

You are urged to attend the P.-T. association meetings on the first Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock and on the third Tuesday night at 7:30. Interesting programs will be rendered.

LONDON

The municipality of London is still the largest city in the world, with 7,549,000 population, compared with New York's 1930 Census figure of 6,981,927. But in the area known as "circled New York" the territory included in a radius of 19 miles from the City Hall, which takes in part of New Jersey and of three New York counties not included in the city proper, there is a population about 1,400,000 greater than in the so-called London traffic area which extends nearly thirty miles from the center of London.

Contrary to the general idea, the average height of buildings in London is higher than in New York. Many huge skyscrapers, rising from 30 to 40 stories, in New York, and counter-balanced by the tens of thousands of buildings only three or four stories high. London has only two or three buildings more than seven stories. The London County Council recently refused an application for permission to build a new hotel ten stories tall, and fixed nine stories as the limit.

FOOD

Food fads and faddists cost the American farmer millions of dollars a year, according to Henry Stude, president of the American Bakers association. Mr. Stude's organization is trying to get people to go back to the habit of eating bread—not whole wheat bread or Graham bread or any kind of "health" bread, but just ordinary white bread.

There is a good deal in the suggestion that many persons have been frightened away from bread by the idea that it is fattening.

The craze for slenderness is not confined to women; men have been taught that fat is dangerous. The real danger is not eating enough nutritive food to supply the necessary bodily energy.

"Eat what's set before you," was the rule for children, when I was a boy, stated a well known health authority. It is still a good rule. Most of us can digest anything and the wider our range of diet the more healthy we are likely to be.

CHRYSLER

A Kansas boy who had a job and $700 in the bank in Oelwein, Iowa, went to an automobile show twenty years ago in Chicago. He wanted to see what the insides of one of those new-fangled machines looked like, how it worked. He could not find out all he wanted to know, so he asked the price of one of the cars. It was $5000. "I'll buy it," he said. He telephoned back to Oelwein, to his bank to send on his $700, to several friends to endorse his note for $4,300. It was a tribute to his character and reputation that his friends did as he asked them. He bought the Winton car, drove it back to Oelwein and took his young wife for a ride, then proceeded to take the car apart. He took it down and put it together again eight times before he was satisfied that he knew all about automobiles. Then he got himself a job in an automobile factory.

His name was—and is—Walter P. Chrysler, and the tallest building in the world stands at Forty-second St., and Lexington avenue, New York, a monument to his success in designing and building automobiles.

Chrysler knew what he wanted and had the courage to go after it, and that is two-thirds of the secret of success.

SIMPLIFICATION

California announces that 112 state bureaus, commissions and departments have been consolidated into eleven. New York recently merged 180 different departments in 18. Maryland has reduced the number of state departments from 85 to 9.

One cause of high taxes is the multiplicity of government bureaus and the difficulty of fixing responsibility for the expenditures of public funds.

No nation has yet found out how to run a government efficiently and economically. We probably come nearer to it, as a whole, than any other great nation.
