Construction Scheduled For Fuel Alcohol Plant

Groundbreaking Set During Next Month

High Plains GPI Planning B-B-Que

High Plains GPI Cooperative plans a final meeting Thursday, May 1, to give a final opportunity for all interested producers to become a part of the cooperative, being formed for the production of fuel alcohol.

According to a spokesman, Doug Bales, GPI currently has more than 20,000,000 gallon plant, but would like to plan to construct a 50,000,000 plant in the area.

The final meeting of High Plains GPI is scheduled at 7 p.m., with a free barbeque in the Bailey County Exhibition Center and Coliseum. All members not signed up that night, according to Bales, will not be allowed to enter the cooperative, as it will become a closed cooperative that evening.

Bales emphasized that dryland farmers will now have an added incentive to join the cooperative as the plant will be using milo for production of the fuel alcohol. According to the local board member, Bales also said High Plains GPI will now expect joint units for membership, and urged smaller potential members to join together with their neighbors and friends and help enlarge the planned fuel alcohol plant.

He said all agri-businesses, businessmen, land owners and farmers are urged to attend the meeting and hear the plans for the fuel alcohol plant planned for this area.

Guest speaker for the meeting will be Alvin Mavis of Springfield, Ill. He is currently serving with the Department of Energy Gasohol Consumer Advisory; spent three years with the Department of Energy for the State of Illinois and has several years experience with fuel alcohol.

Sign-ups are still being accepted prior to the Thursday night meeting at the High Plains GPI Cooperative office located at 113 West Ave. D in Muleshoe.

Spring Forward!

Get ready--get set--GO! It's time to 'Spring Forward' one more time. In fact, if you did not turn you clock forward before retiring last night (Saturday) you were probably late for church today.

Also, you may just be dragging a bit as you lost an hour of sleep as Daylight Savings Time came in at 2 a.m. today.

For the next six months, the extra hour of sunlight and daytime may partially compensate for the lost hour of sleep, and getting accustomed to arising one hour earlier each day.

Next time change will be the last Sunday in October, when clocks will 'Fall Back' for the winter months.

ethyl alcohol, and 90 percent unleaded gasoline.

Charmec Group Inc. has cited Muleshoe as a strong agricultural community with an abundant supply of the necessary resources required for alcohol production. The raw materials to be used for fermentation is corn. Local elevators normally hold about 500 million pounds of corn, and the corporation said natural gas, which is to be used as fuel for heat conversion, is plentiful and relatively cheap. Charmec also said the water supply is good.

Charmec Energy Corporation will be located 4.6 miles northwest of Muleshoe, at Progress, at a location adjacent to U.S Highway 84 and the Santa Fe Railroad track. It currently has a combination grain drying and storage system situated on 25 acres of land. There is ample room for future expansion. The existing storage system has a holding capacity of 7,200,000 pounds, which is enough corn for four and one half months of production. The present storage capacity would also be sufficient for a larger alcohol plant. During harvest in the fall, McGuire said corn can be purchased directly from local farmers. After harvest, the corn can be bought and trucked in from local elevators. The grain handling facility is four years old, and in excellent condition, emphasized the new president. There is also other equipment to aerate, move, and prevent spoilage in the corn until it is used. Natural gas lines and electric power lines

'Old Time' Medicine Show To Come Here

A hundred years ago, he would come in to town in a wagon, which was also his stage, storage room, business office, and living quarters. A small boy would stare at the brightly painted sign on the side of the wagon, his eyes would widen, and off he ran down main street to spread the word: The medicine show was back in town!

On Monday, May 5, the only remaining medicine show in America will be "back in town". Instead of a wagon however, Tommy Scott's Old Time Medicine Show will be performing at the Bailey County Civic Center. The one night performance, slated to begin at 7:30 p.m., is being sponsored by the Muleshoe Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture.

Some of the acts will include magic, slapstick comedy, country music, and juggling. There will also be a search for local talent. As an added bonus, the Chamber will once again have a candy sale, with many prizes donated by our local merchants, being given away during the sale.

Many merchants are also offering free coupons which may be exchanged for a $3 admission ticket at the Chamber office. Don't miss this opportunity to see an exciting show that is part of history, and is at the same time good family entertainment.

He's no pilot

AUSTIN, Texas (Spl.) — That man in the "jump seat" of an airplane cockpit is no pilot. He's a University of Texas psychologist.

Prof. Robert Helmreich is making a study of psychological factors that affect crew performance in two areas — commercial airline cockpits and ocean-going supertankers.

Pilots' reactions to simulated emergency situations may yield data that could be important to astronauts in space flights, Dr. Helmreich says. Also, how workers on supertankers respond to such factors as boredom, social isolation and separation from family could influence astronauts on long missions in space, he adds.

Sunflower Markets Opening For Texas

New sunflower markets are opening up for Texas, Kansas, Colorado, and Oklahoma, as seen by Dr. Carl E. Claassen, President, PACIFIC OILSEEDS INCORPORATED, Woodland, California.

Many potential sunflower growers in the above areas are concerned about the price of commercial sunflower seed during the crop year 1980-81. During the past two years Mexico has become one of the best markets for sunflower produced in this area. From last year's crop, Mexican mills are trying to purchase approximately 300,000 metric tons. At least four different buyers have been buying all the sunflower seed that they can find in this area for shipment to Mexico at prices well above ten cents per pound. Last year's production in this area was far short of supplying this market.

CONTRACTING FORWARD

Mexico is a deficit vegetable oil producing country, and their imports of sunflower seed are expected to increase during the next five years. However, the Mexican mills do not buy a year ahead. Therefore, it is difficult for United States' buyers to give growers a contract at planting time for sunseed at a proper price for delivery to Mexico, September, 1980, forward.

CONSIDER STORAGE

If prices for Mexican shipments are not at least nine cents per pound at harvest time, growers might give serious consideration to putting their sunseed into storage until November - February.

During these months the ports on the Great Lakes that handle most of the sunflower seed from Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota are closed because of ice on the lakes.

Mexico normally buys any oilseed, including sunflower, as they need this for their mills. They do not have huge storage facilities at their mills. During the period from November to February, Texas, Kansas, Colorado, Oklahoma and Nebraska sunseed becomes their very best source and should demand some premium because of freight advantage to Mexico. Even if the above market did not exist the above areas are well-positioned to export through Houston to Europe and elsewhere.

necessary for plant operation are already installed and operational.

There is a ready market for alcohol in the local area. It is used to make gasohol by mixing one part alcohol with nine parts gasoline. The nearest retailer of gasohol is in Clovis, thirty miles to the northwest of Muleshoe. Another market for alcohol is for use in farm machinery. An attachment is being manufactured to inject alcohol into diesel engines. The alcohol for use in farm machinery only has to be 100 proof and it is much cheaper to produce, added Gene McGuire.

During the alcohol production process, valuable by-products are formed. The major by-product is Distillers Dried Grain (DDG). It is the remnant of the corn used to make the alcohol. The DDG is sold as a high protein feed for cattle. Two dairies and eight major feedyards, with a capacity of about 300,000 head of cattle, are located within a twenty mile radius of the proposed plant site.

Another by-product is carbon dioxide. For every gallon of alcohol produced, 6.33 pounds of carbon dioxide is formed. Large quantities of carbon dioxide are used to inject in older oil wells to increase their production. It can also be sold as a welding supply, as dry ice, or to be used in fire extinguishers.

There are several government incentives already available for alcohol producers, said McGuire. The Energy Tax Act of 1978 authorized a 10 percent additional investment tax credit for alcohol production equipment. This is in addition to the existing 10 percent tax credit. Also, gasohol is exempted from the four cent per gallon Federal Excise Tax on gasoline until 1992.

Plant operations will be under direction of Gene McGuire, as president. Charmec Energy Corporation is subsidiary of Charmec Group, Inc. with offices located in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. McGuire said Charmec Group is a publicly owned diversified company whose stock is traded over the counter (OTC) that is involved in computer data services, sheltered construction, insurance, land development, joint ventures, and investments.

He concluded that ground-breaking will be in just about a month at the location at Progress.

TIPS TO HELP YOU

Many homemakers avoid scrubbing pots very often by cooking in large quantities and storing meal-sized portions of food in the freezer in special pouches for those with better things to do than wash dishes.

Fresh-tasting fruits and vegetables, accompanied by package-crisp crackers and oven-fresh breads, can adorn your table when you have a top-of-the-line Dazey Seal-A-Meal system. Included is a handy Recipe and Instruction Book, an E-Z Cutter to cut roll material to the exact size you need, pouch storage and instant on-and-off with no warm-up. You can even seal papers and other valuables in Dazey's special cooking pouches to protect them from deterioration that comes from contact with air.

Losing 92 inches cut my weight problem down to size

"When I bought these size 18 jeans, I weighed 202 pounds," says 5'4" Sandy Camp of Dangerfield, Texas. "I managed to take off 20 or so on my own, but then I was stuck. That's when I went to Pat Walker's."

No-sweat exercise is the secret

After her introductory treatment on Pat Walker's Symmetricon passive exercise unit, Sandy knew that she'd come to the right place. She felt rested and relaxed—not sweaty and exhausted. She didn't even have to change into exercise clothes. And before many weeks went by, she could see how her figure was being toned and firmed up. Sandy eventually lost 13 inches from her waist, 12 inches from her tummy, 11 1/2 from her hips, and several inches in other areas.

Complete privacy is your privilege

If wearing a leotard embarrasses you... if you don't like revealing your figure problems to a roomful of strangers, then Pat

Walker's is your kind of place. Every aspect of your weight loss program—from counseling sessions about sensible eating habits, to Symmetricon treatments—is totally private. We think you deserve that.

Free figure analysis

Today, even Sandy Camp's husband loves to buy her new things to wear, now that she's down to 124 pounds and size 8. Sandy's success story could be yours. Make an appointment for a free, no-obligation consultation at Pat Walker's. We'll tell you how much you need to lose, how long it will take—and the total cost of your complete figure correction, based on four dollars per thirty-minute treatment.

Have a reserve before investing

COLLEGE STATION — Gold fever is spreading in the United States, but a Texas A&M University finance expert has a warning for the uninformed investor.

Dr. John Groth says nobody has any business investing in gold or other risk investments without having adequate insurance and emergency funds.

One point to remember, he warns, is rarely do good investments come knocking at the door. Be wary of telephone salesmen and deals that promise a specific rate of return or a guarantee.

Film Slated During Week At Churches

Beginning Monday, and continuing each evening this week, except Wednesday, the documentary film, "How Should We Then Live?" will be shown in Muleshoe.

"How Should We Then Live?" subtitled "The Rise and Decline of Western Thought and Culture," is the work of Dr. Francis Schaeffer. Dr. Schaeffer reveals how we came to be where we are and how we should proceed from here, explained the Bailey County Ministerial Alliance.

The Ministerial Alliance spokesman explained, "These films can make a major contribution to the lives of all who experience them."

Dr. Schaeffer has given three goals for his films:

1. That individuals may know that there are alternatives to humanism and answers for great questions in life.

2. That Christians might have a historical perspective of our culture, so that they might speak to and live more effectively in that culture.

3. To help turn this present culture around and bring on a new reformation.

The film will be shown in five episodes at the following five churches in Muleshoe: Monday at First Assembly of God; Tuesday at First Baptist; Thursday at First United Methodist; Friday at Trinity Baptist and Saturday at 16th and D Church of Christ. Film time will be 8 p.m. for the showings.

The Ministerial Alliance minister said a freewill collection will be taken each evening until the rental fee for the films is collected.

Outside Factors Causing Weaker Cattle Prices

A lot of outside factors are causing weaker cattle prices just when things were beginning to look rosy for cattlemen.

Some of these factors are increasing interest rates, shaky world conditions, continued unabated inflation, and further speculation about a business recession. The first reaction was a drop in the stock and commodity futures markets which, in turn, forced cattle prices downward.

"All these factors are enough to put a damper on anything, and that's just what's happened to the cattle market," points out Dr. Ed Uvacek, livestock marketing economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. "The cattle market is extremely volatile right now and is influenced by many such factors, far beyond the normal economics of the industry," says Uvacek.

Despite the current gloomy outlook, Uvacek urges cattlemen to look ahead to the long term. "The future of the cattle business still looks quite good. As the build-up phase continues, it will bring higher calf prices. This will be great for cow-calf operators but might create problems for stocker and feedlot operators," contends the economist.

A major reason why the cattle market is in the doldrums right now is that feedlot operators are losing well over $100 a head. Their breakeven costs are much higher than the price for Choice fed steers. For example, the breakeven cost for most cattle coming out of Great Plains feedlots in April was about $74 per hundred pounds while the market price for Choice fed steers during the first week of April was only in the low $60s.

"Facing such large losses as well as a 20 percent interest rate on new money to buy feeder cattle is causing many feedlot operators to back away and reassess the situation. That's causing the demand for feeders to drop and is, in turn, pushing feeder and calf prices down," pints out Uvacek. Over the short term, an increase in fed cattle prices will resolve the problem, believes the economist. Once fed cattle prices hit the high $60 or low $70s, cattle feeders will probably again become interested in replacement cattle. That should give a boost to the entire beef industry.

On-The-Farm Alcohol Plants Installed

New Members Are Named For Council

Alcohol-derived fuels are not new; but the ever-increasing fuel prices have sparked a renewed interest in them and caused some to believe they may be a solution.

High interest rates and the investment it takes to get into gasohol or alcohol production have caused some to see it as not economically feasible, at least for the present time. If the U.S. could get into full gasohol production, it might help fuel costs eventually, but for now provides no real relief.

In contrast to this opinion, some farmers believe that gasohol could help cut their fuel costs if they produced it for their own consumption; even better they say, it would provide a new market for some of their crop.

One way to find out if something works is to try it. In February, appearing in a previous Journal article, were the plans of Leon Wilson, Gene Paul Jarman, and Wade Wilson to build a gasohol plant. Some of those plans are becoming a reality.

"We talked to people who had been in it for a while and studied it and finally decided to do it," Mr. Wilson said.

After building a small experimental plant, to try things out on, the building of the new plant began. The electricians are finishing the wiring, and if things go as planned, the latter part of this week could be the start of the "cooking" and distilling should follow next week. Pending final commercial approval, expected within two to three weeks, the trio could be selling gasohol within approximately two months. "Our goal is to produce 190 proof and exchange with a company in Kansas for 200 proof," Wilson said.

Eventually, with the addition of their own dehydrator they hope to produce the 200 proof at their own plant. Wilson said they haven't built the grain-handling side of the plant yet and they hope to add another distilling tower by fall.

With their present facilities, when production begins, Wilson said, they should produce "25 gallons an hour, about 2,000 gallons a year, in the future we plan to produce 100 gallons an hour, about 450,000 a year."

Right now the company will be selling gasohol only. Wilson plans to run his vehicles as well as his airplanes on gasohol. He hopes however that possibly by next year someone will have come up with an internal combustion engine, running on pure alcohol for airplanes. Of course the pure alcohol would be cheaper to use because it doesn't have to be mixed with gasoline. "Until after next winter it will be gasohol, until we have engines adapted to run on 160 proof alcohol," Wilson said.

Since the alcohol will have to be mixed with gasoline, the price of gasohol will always be about two cents higher than unleaded gasoline. Wilson said, "We could make 160 proof alcohol and sell it for 80 cents a gallon, but there's no market for it, because there's no converted vehicles. With alcohol there is less pollution, and you could get rid of all those pollution-control devices and get better performance."

"I believe going toward pure alcohol is the solution. Of course I can't predict the trend because of all the politics involved. It would be a tax advantage for a farmer to use his own fuel. But first someone will have to take the initiative to modify their vehicles for alcohol." Of course there is problems in conversion that will have to be solved, Wilson concluded but "I believe farmers will have to take the initiative."

Wilson said the increasing price of oil overseas is not a national thing, but international. "The overall plan is for our gas to cost what it does in France, Italy and Great Britain. If I can sell fuel to people, I don't care what gas prices go to."

Wilson said the willingness of our government to support independent gasohol production was an important thing. In response to the fear of some, that the government or the oil companies could shut down the independent gasohol producer, Wilson said: "You have to think on short range terms. I will make enough money in four or five years, that if I have to push this thing in a hole, I won't lose. The government or the oil companies may shut it down, but some of us will already have our plants built. With labor and management situations today, no large plant could go into major production within four years. They can't build it as fast as we can. The farmer is an engineer in his own right. And I would rather the money stay in the U.S., in my pocket, and in my neighbor's pocket, than go to the OPEC nations. And a farming area could become independent of foreign imports, of course the larger cities would be a different story."

As far as the economic feasibility of the gasohol plant, Wilson says, "If you can work - you can cut the cost. The farmer is too use to having people figure things out for him. If you hire everything done that I've done myself, it would cost a lot more money."

There has been difficulties to work out in building the plant and of course, the builder's believe there will be rewards for their efforts.

"It's an entirely new field. There are no alcohol parts stores. It was difficult to find the components we needed, but we found them all. It was difficult to them all. It just takes patience and a lot of phone calls. When you go to a place to get parts then you always have to explain what you're going to see them for. There is new technology coming out every day and by the time we get our plant we may be obsolete. But for our purposes it has more return than anything I've seen for a while."

Wilson said that the plant would not be open to visitors until it is in full production. "It's not that we have any big secret, it's just that visitors can get in the way of the workers and delay us." Wilson said when the plant is finished they plan to have an open house and will announce it in the paper. "We feel like we're the guinea pigs. We know we don't have it all figured out, and are going to make mistakes, we hope others can benefit from our mistakes."

In contrast to commercial gasohol production, some have contemplated investing in a still to produce alcohol strictly for their own use. One such person who decided to go ahead and try is Dwight O'Brien of Friona.

O'Brien plans to run his still on solar energy. O'Brien will be one of the farmers who take the initiative; he plans to convert at least some of his vehicles and will run straight alcohol. He doesn't plan on producing gasohol at all. O'Brien said he wouldn't try it in his tractors now, although he might try it in a butane tractor depending on how things worked out. He plans to use wheat, carrots or sugar beets. O'Brien figures his still ("just big enough to experiment with") will produce about eight gallons an hour, at an approximate cost of about one dollar a gallon.

Although O'Brien has his solar panel and equipment ready, planting has kept him from getting started.

O'Brien doesn't really believe alcohol or gasohol will be the alternate energy source for the future. "If gasoline got high enough I guess it might. But if everyone started using alcohol, the oil companies would probably lower the price of gasoline and force the alcohol out. If something were to happen to the OPEC nations it might."

O'Brien said he decided to do it because, "I wanted to find out for myself how it would work out. I have not doubt I can produce alcohol, but how it will burn in the vehicles or whether it will be worth the investment I don't know."

Whether it means a small still, or a commercial plant, some have decided the only way to find out if gasohol or alcohol production can be a working alternative to the present fuel situation, is to try. Henry Steele Commager once said, "Physically Americans were pioneers; in the realm of social and economic institutions too, their tradition has been one of pioneering. Every effort to confine Americanism to a single pattern, to constrain it to a single formula, is disloyalty to everything that is valid in Americanism."

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor:

We would like to step forward to say we think Muleshoe is very blessed to have such a wonderful hospital and efficient staff. Dr. Jerry Gregory, Art Willey, Terry Hutto, Flo Russell, R.N., Betty Witherspoon, L.V.N., Teresa Stanford, L.V.N., and several aides were on duty Monday night when we rushed our 6 year old son into the emergency room. He was having seizures and convulsions and those on duty remained very calm and knew exactly what to do. We are very grateful to them. Each shift during his stay in the hospital, was very helpful and concerned and made his hospital stay as pleasant as possible. We would like to thank all the hospital staff for their kindness. We are thankful for our hospital. It is reassuring to know that they are there if we ever need them again.

Muleshoe, we are lucky. Grateful parents, Danny & Cynthia Noble

NEGLECT

This highway began to decay the day that it ceased to be used and repaired. Deterioration sets in with the onset of neglect. When a nation's spiritual life is neglected there is a possibility that nation will not long endure. Let us strengthen our nation and our society by attending church regularly and reaffirming our faith in God.

"And let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works. Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another; and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching."
Hebrews 10:24, 25.

CAR-SENSE Kent Kelly
New or used? When you decide it's time the old car must go, usually the first question is "Do I buy a good clean, late model, used car or a new one?" There are some factors to consider before you make this decision, such as, how many miles you are going to drive, how long you will keep the vehicle, and what it is to be used for - just to name a few. If you will be driving long, hard miles it would probably pay to buy a new car and the same if you plan to keep it over three or four years. You should also consider a new car if you use it in business or sales. The greatest consideration in favor of a new car is its guarantee and the cost to you over the first two years in repairs. Yet if you plan to use the car you buy for town driving and one trip a year it might be wise to consider a good, clean, late model used car. The big advantage in these is the first year or two depreciation has been taken by someone else. When you decide - we have what you want.
