More End Of Year Events In Coming Issues of CCN

Neugebauer to visit area

Congressman Randy Neugebauer will visit and host "Coffee with the Congressman" on Thursday, June 1. He will start the day in Denver City from 9:15 to 10:15 a.m. in the City Council Chambers at City Hall. He will then head to Seminole's City Hall where he will host a second Coffee from 10:45 to 11:45 am. Neugebauer will end his day in Brownfield from 1:45 to 2:45 pm in the Council Chambers at City Hall. During each of these events the Congressman will give an update on legislative issues being debated in Congress and talk with constituents about issues important to them. These events will be the latest in a series of "Coffees" he has held across the 19th District so he can meet face to face with constituents through the district's 27 counties.

DPS targets Memorial Day motorists

During the Memorial Day weekend, all available DPS Highway Patrol troopers will patrol Texas highways, looking for drivers who are speeding, driving while intoxicated or not using seatbelts. Drivers can expect increased patrols by DPS troopers and officers from other law enforcement agencies. "We want to make sure everyone in Texas travels safely this Memorial Day weekend, so we are looking for drivers speeding, who are driving while intoxicated or for people not properly secured," said Col. Thomas Davis Jr., director of DPS. Through a statewide campaign, Click It or Ticket, DPS and TxDOT are urging motorists to buckle up or face a fine, and especially focusing on emphasizing seatbelt usage for pickup truck occupants. Surveys indicate pickup drivers and passengers, particularly young males, have the lowest seat belt usage rates of all motorists. Seatbelt use reduces the risk of dying in a pickup rollover crash by 80 percent. Others who are less likely to buckle up are rural drivers and drivers who are on the road at night. Another nationwide effort designed to reduce fatalities is the C.A.R.E. - Combined Accident Reduction Effort - program. State police officers across the nation participate in C.A.R.E., maximizing enforcement on major interstate highways to reduce fatalities commonly associated with holiday weekends. Statistically, the deadliest time on the road during Memorial Day weekend is between 9PM and 6AM - a time frame when alcohol and fatigue are cited as strong factors.

By Gary Dyer
At Church Sunday morning the Editor was told an earlier conversation with a citizen from Denver City reported the American Cancer Society's second "Relay For Life" had been a smash hit, and, "They have counted over $60,000 in donations, and they're still counting". It was announced early-on in organizing the second Relay the main committee had set a lofty goal to collect $25,000 in cancer fighting funds. It should be remembered, the first Relay For Life in 2004 had nervously set a financial goal to collect $10,000; Organizers and donors both were ecstatic when the final tally went over $32,000. When church dismissed I hustled home and left an urgent message for Stacie Meece, Denver City's planning and organizing dynamo who pushed, pulled and pounded the first Relay into its being, and repeated her organizational skills in breathing life into the May 19 event. When she called, I asked if what I heard at church was factual. "Not exactly", she replied, "Those figures are off a bit. I feel very confident when we get all the figures tallied, we will be looking at having between $75 to $80 THOUSAND DOLLARS in donations". Stacie may have thought for a moment I had passed out, as I was completely stunned, speechless.

Consider some number crunching. According to the last official census, the county's population was 7,305 people. True, the oil boom did have a positive impact on Denver City's population, but seasoned

'guessers' still put the total count around 8,000 folks. If the final donation reaches eighty grand, that averages one thousand bucks per soul, including diaper wearers and pre-schoolers!

If this is not truly phenomenal, further consider this - ACS fund raiser events normally produce far fewer dollars in much larger towns, including the neighboring oil patch cities in our area.

I have been involved in a number of such 'do-good' ideas, none with this type of community participation, and the adrenalin was flowing

Friday afternoon as the 30 volunteer participating teams began to arrive, setting up their tents for the night, and their fund raising treasures. I was at the first Relay two years earlier, and it was apparent to me more people were on hand for this year's event. It was clearly more colorful; cancer survivors who had beaten the disease wore distinctive purple T-shirts, 70 of them, their care providers had yellow shirts (I had one of them but chose to wear the white design when I discovered the yellow sleeves ended at my armpits), and the 16 committee heads wore orange.

When MC Bill Helwig called for all cancer survivors to take their place on the track it was an impressive and dramatic moment. Seventy folks representing victims of types of cancer I was familiar with and a few I'd never heard of, most walking a good pace around the track, others helped by wheelchairs, cheered on by the hundreds of team members lining the track, busy shaking hands, hugging and applauding the winning survivors.

Throughout the long, tiring night the team tents hawked their merchandise, kids played games, luminarias purchased to raise money were lit, and walkers circled the track, most for money pledged on their treks. One walking friend told me he was rudely awakened at 3am and told to hit the track; "I think I made one full lap, then somehow veered off, asleep, and busted my nose on one of the north end goal posts".

Somehow, the night's survivors managed to herd together for the Denver City Methodist Church mens group free breakfast at 5:30. Bleary eyed, but by now aware they had scored a success.

Organizing Four Star General Stacie Meece probably summed it up best in our conversation; "We truly had some dedicated, hard working volunteers throughout this organizing process, but I still think we had an even greater source of assistance - some might call it divine providence, but I know it as just a real blessing."

CCN wishes to sincerely congratulate each and every soul who played the very smallest role in this superb success!

National Military Appreciation Month:

As a nation, it is important to observe and participate in holidays and events celebrating our national heritage. National Military Appreciation Month provides all Americans an opportunity to recognize the incredible sacrifices of our nation's armed forces and to reflect on our rich military history.

On April 30, 1999, the Senate passed a resolution designating May as National Military Appreciation month to honor the current and former members of the Armed Forces, including those who have died in pursuit of freedom and peace. The House later agreed to the measure.

May is an ideal time to honor our service men and women, as this year we celebrate Loyalty Day May 1, VE Day on May 8, Military Spouse Day May 12, Armed Forces Day May 20, and Memorial Day on May 29.

Members of the armed forces and their families truly understand the meaning of commitment and sacrifice. While many Americans have served this great nation in varying capacities, it is the men and women who served as soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines who have put their lives on the line. They have endured frequent deployments and long family separations in sometimes hostile environments to protect freedom and uphold the rule of law.

The very essence of being a member of our armed forces is defined when a recruit takes the oath to uphold the Constitution of the United States. This single act is significant because the military truly values the superiority of principle.

Military service builds character, as the words 'duty', 'honor', and 'country' have special meaning. Gen. Douglas MacArthur eloquently explained this during his legendary address to the Corps of Cadet at West Point on May 12, 1962.

I steadfastly stand behind our troops. As we remain committed we must be just as dedicated to caring for our veterans when they come home. I make a special point to see veterans have proper medical care and the hospitals and doctors they need most.

I invite all Texans to join me in honoring our nation's heroes. Our recognition is important to warriors. It further strengthens our consciousness about the virtues and values of military service

District Court crime cases Student Of The Week

Four criminal cases were heard in the May 11 session of District Court with Judge Kelly G. Moore presiding and Criminal District Attorney Richard Clark representing the state.

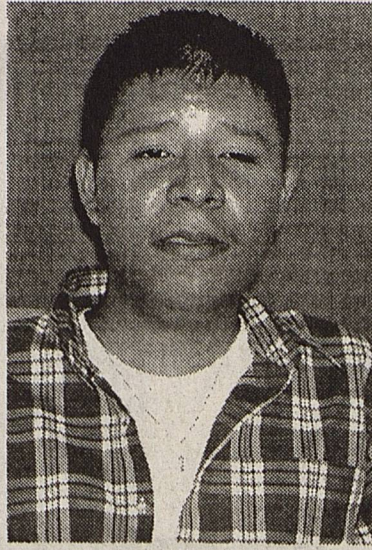

Gina Roxanne Morton pled guilty to possession of methamphetamine, a state jail felony, A two year State Jail sentence was suspended and probated three years. She was fined $1000, must pay $140 restitution to DPS, $243 court costs, $430 appointed attorney fees and $25 time payment fee. She will serve 120 hours community service, complete the drug offenders education program, and lose her license 180 days. Her attorney was Jimmy Hammons and investigatin officer was Deputy Inow Valdez.

Arturo Gonzalez Velasquez was found guilty by a jury of forgery of a financial instrument May 11. A two year state jail sentence was suspended and probated five years. He must pay $318 court costs, $1000 fine, $1091 attorney fees and $25 time payment fee. He must pay $50 monthly supervision fees and serve 120 hours service. His attorney was Trey Didway.

Cynthia Elaine Watts had supervision revoked from a prior methamphetamine conviction. She was sentenced to ten years in state prison with credit for 438 hours jail time served. Warren New served as her attorney.

Tammy Jo Kidd had supervision from a prior methamphetamine conviction modified. She must pay additional $120 court costs, must attend AA meetings twice weekly, and must attend outpatient treatment at a managed care unit weekly until successfully completed at her expense. Her attorney was Daniel Hurley.

Last student of the week is Manuel Mendoza, a senior and the son of Manuel and Lucy Mendoza. He was nominated by Mrs. O'Quinn, who said, "Sometimes students consider coming to school a chore, but for others, just getting to school is not a simple or easy task. Manuel has one of the most amazing attitudes I have seen. He has overcome a great deal of adversity to reach this time in his life. He enjoys coming to school and is here everyday, even though getting ready and getting here is not as easy as for some of you who jump in your car each morning and head out. He has successfully completed 13 years, and his dream will come true when he goes across the stage and receive his high school diploma. He has had the loving support of a wonderful family who has helped him achieve this goal. We will miss his shy smile and that outstanding attitude. Congratulations, Manuel Mendoza, you are a special member of the Plains High School Class of 2006."

CCN Adds It's Congratulations to Manuel and all the Seniors

Retiring after 30 years

Sandra Foster told CCN this week "I'm ready to retire to Lubbock, play golf, read and travel." After a 30 year education career, she is deserving of a slower pace in life.

She is a graduate of Texas Tech where she centered her education on coaching and English skills.

She started her teaching skills with two year stints at Saratoga and Aspermont schools.

She was hired by PISD in 1980, and has trod the halls of Plains Middle School the last 26 years

During her tenure here she has been involved with all girl sports programs, but has concentrated on the golf team the past few years.

Water, Water Everywhere?

By U.S. Sen. John Cornyn

American author Henry David Thoreau once said, "Water is a pioneer which the settler follows, taking advantage of its improvements." In Thoreau's time, Americans could choose their homestead wherever they found natural resources, especially water.

Today, America and Texas are settled. The land has been claimed, and we can no longer follow water. We must instead capture and transport it — to our homes, our public buildings, our crops and our power plants. And as population grows and droughts seem to last longer, we find ourselves increasingly at the mercy of the heavens to drop rain.

Though we remain largely at the mercy of the weather, there are ways we can work together to ensure Texas families, farmers and industries have the water they need to survive the blistering summer heat.

In March, I sat down in Washington with water stakeholders from Texas whose work is the stewardship of this precious resource. The meeting was part of Texas Water Day, an annual event that brings policy makers and water experts together. The goal is simple: maximizing availability of water in Texas.

Our state's professionals address matters of life and death. Their decisions must survive the briar patches of local and state politics, policies and personalities. In short, their jobs are not easy, and are further complicated by the unpredictability of Texas weather.

The federal government does its part to help Texans meet their water needs. The feds can't make it rain, but can help provide information and technical assistance to support local water conservation and management efforts.

The federal Water Resources Development Act encourages creative partnership ideas between the federal government and local and state water-planning entities. The law was last updated in 2000, and Texas water officials have told me it needs to be changed again.

This legislation helps govern water policy across the country, including flood control, navigable waterways maintenance, restoration of the environment, increased recreational use, and providing water supply.

These local-federal partnerships can help secure a dependable and safe water supply for Texas, but it's a challenging job. Our water needs are fast outstripping our rainfall and other water resource totals.

The U.S. Census Bureau projects that in coming decades, about half of our country's population increase will be in three states: Texas, California and Florida. At the same time, Texas' Drought Preparedness Council reported last month that the March 2005 to February 2006 period was the driest in Texas since 1963-64, and the fourth driest year on record. The trend is not good.

Our reservoir levels around the state are currently in decent shape. But preliminary predictions are for a hot, dry summer. Every year, we seem to have less margin for adverse weather conditions.

The state's 16 water-planning groups have prepared regional blueprints that have been folded into a statewide "Water for Texas" plan. This comprehensive document addresses future water needs for human health and welfare, economic development and environmental sustainability.

And while the plan certainly must pass muster as it is implemented locally, the federal government can help Texas now in this move.

Reliable data is critical to accurate water planning for the state. State and local governments have two excellent resources: the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, which provides technical support and analyzes water data, and the U.S. Geological Survey, which oversees stream gauges that provide a valuable water-management tool.

From our earliest days, Texans have been all too aware of both the blessings and curses that water can bring. We have enjoyed the cool, invigorating flow of river water on a 100-degree day, and a horizon teeming with healthy crops. But we've also suffered with land fractured by drought or buried by flood.

We no longer have uninhabited stretches of streaming river banks or coastline where entire new communities of settlers can live. But we do have Texans of national reputation committed to ensuring the state can rely on a water-supply infrastructure to meet our growing future demands.

We appreciate their work. Texas may be the best place in the U.S. to live, but it's also hotter and drier than most places. We need our water.

Sen. Cornyn is a member of the following Senate Committees: Armed Services, Judiciary, Budget, Small Business and Entrepreneurship, and Joint Economic. He is also the chairman of the subcommittees on Immigration, Border Security and Citizenship and Emerging Threats and Capabilities. He served previously as Texas Attorney General, Texas Supreme Court Justice and Bexar County District Judge.

Routine Commissioners Court Session

Judge Brewer and approval of the purchase of two Commissioners Lindsey, new computer printers for the Coston, Powell and Cobb sheriff office, which was also moved through 11 agenda items approved.

A memorial gift to the Plains Library in the form of books by the Pat McNabb family in memory of Fred Payne was approved.

Yoakum County Hospital administrator Clay Taylor discussed with the court the possible lease or purchase of portable building options to be used as temporary quarters. He reported a family doctor team couple are scheduled to report for duty with the hospital and clinic in Denver City in September. Robert Clark is a family practitioner, and his wife Christie is a pediatrician.

He reported a family doctor team couple are scheduled to report for duty with the hospital and clinic in Denver City in September. Robert Clark is a family practitioner, and his wife Christie is a pediatrician.

Taylor said the hospital Board is studying several type temporary buildings, to be placed near the dialysis center, and would continue to look at the best choice and return to the court for purchase or lease at a later date. Taylor also reported the new physicians will need a receptionist and nurse on their staffs.

Plesant surprise; Texas crime rate down

The major crime rate in Texas decreased 3.5 percent in 2005, according to data compiled by the Texas Department of Public Safety Uniform Crime Reporting Program.

Compared with 2004, the crime rate number of crimes per 100,000 population in Texas decreased 3.5 percent. The violent crime rate decreased two percent from 2004. The property crime rate decreased 3.7 percent in 2005.

"Citizens and law enforcement working together have helped reduce the crime rate for the third consecutive year, but there is still much work to be done," said Col. Thomas Davis Jr., Director of the DPS.

The total number of major crimes committed was down 1.9 percent compared with 2004. Of the seven index crimes, murder was up 3.4 percent, rape was down 1.2 percent. The total number of arrests in Texas decreased 1.9 percent a liquor store gave her a box. She shook, then smelled, then saw it was leaking, and ran her tongue over the moisture, and said "Oh, is this wine?" The little boy was bursting with excitement and shouted, "No, It's A Puppy!"

When you're already late to take the rag to the printer, have 11 column inches void of ink, what do you do? Why, that's easy -- you steal the first thing in sight, with Levelland's Stephen Henry my rescuer:

At the beginning of school a kindergarten teacher was pleased to receive gifts from her students. A florist's son gave her a gift. She shook it, held it over head and smelled it, saying "I bet I know what it is. Flowers." The little boy answered, "Yeah, how'd you know?" "Just a wild guess." she said.

Next came a little girl whose family owned a sweet shop. The teacher took the gift, shook it, and said, "I think I know what it is - is it candy?" The little girl and asked how she knew, and the teacher again claimed a wild guess. Next a little boy whose family owned

A few political zingers heard from time to time in Austin -

"I've heard it said that Representative Morgan's honesty and integrity have never been questioned. Hell, I've never even heard them mentioned."

Back in the glory days of former Texas Ag Chief Jim Hightower, he once said of his then political opponent Rick Perry's misstatements, "If BS was music, my opponent would be the Boston Philharmonic."

The burgeoning Texas wine industry is fast becoming a significant force in the state's economy. In addition to its ability to draw tourists, Texas wineries provide growing amounts of tax revenue and employ an ever-increasing share of the state's residents.

Years ago, wine connoisseurs didn't think of Texas when they envisioned supreme wines, but those days are over. Texas wines are important players in the global wine industry, and the 79th Texas Legislature has recognized the importance of the state's wine industry with several pieces of legislation this past session.

By the passage of Senate Bill 877, the state's wineries were given the freedom to ship wine throughout the state, even to dry counties. Senate Bill 1692 allows wineries to obtain storage outside of the county their businesses are located in.

Another important bill is Senate Bill 571, which extends the hours of operation for wineries to 10 a.m. to midnight on Sunday and 8 a.m. to midnight on any other day of the week. In hopes of facilitating continued growth of the industry, Senate bill 1370 provides for funding from revenue raised as a result of Senate Bill 877 for the advancement of enology and viticulture programs at Texas universities. Senate Bill 1137 includes a variety of provisions to improve the wine industry such as the establishment of a wine industry advisory committee and the Tourist-Oriented Directional Sign Program.

Wine enthusiasts now regularly sip Texas wine and toast its quality, and the Texas Legislature has responded favorably to the industry. With new laws and an armload of national and international medals, Texas wines have a lot to celebrate when it comes to the state's growing industry.

ALERT! FOSAMAX
A recent medical study indicates that Fosamax may be connected with the serious jawbone disease called Osteonecrosis of the Jaw (ONJ). The FDA issued a warning to health care professionals on September 24, 2004 concerning Fosamax and ONJ.
If you have used Fosamax and suffer from jaw bone loss, loose teeth, or Osteonecrosis of the Jaw (ONJ) then call for a Free Confidential Consultation to evaluate a potential product liability lawsuit.
* No attorney fees or expenses charged unless a settlement is obtained for the client. The client is responsible for all of their own medical expenses. All cases are handled on a contingent fee basis.
