State Rep. Froy Salinas Will Seek Re-Election For Seat

State Rep. Froy Salinas

State Representative Froy Salinas announced last week that he will seek re-election to the office of State Representative for District 75-B in Lubbock County. Representative Salinas stated that he plans to run on his record in the Texas Legislature and his service to the people of this District. He cited his four years of experience and a strong willingness to work as qualifications for re-election.

Salinas stated that the problems that will face the 67th Legislature in 1981 will require someone with experience. Those problems will include re-districting, having the State share in the expense of training doctors at our teaching hospital, thus relieving the taxpayer of part of that burden, and getting the necessary funding for the Texas Tech School of Nursing.

Committee 80 Black Ministers Will Hold Installation Services

Committee 80 of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce and Board of City Development held nine "town hall meetings" Tuesday evening in different public school buildings across the city.

The "town hall meetings" were scheduled for participation by all citizens of Lubbock, and in the meetings, Goals for the 80's were presented and discussed. The meetings were moderated by the executive committee members of Committee 80, of the chamber. A tabloid information sheet was distributed at the beginning of the meetings for all participants to review. The tabloid information sheet outlined the proposed goals concerning Lubbock's future direction in the decade of the 80's.

Also, at the beginning of the "town hall meetings," a slide show presentation was given which outlined the Committee 80 Goals in their respective categories.

The public school buildings, at which the meetings were held included Aluerston Junior High; Atkins Junior High; Dunbar High School; Evans Junior High; Hardwick Elementary; Hatchinson Junior High; Matthews Junior High; Thompson Junior High and Wilson Junior High. The meetings were held at 7:30 p. m., and all of the meetings were identical.

The Committee 80 members have been working on goals for Lubbock for more than a year now. They have proposed certain goals and have researched the need for each individual goal.

The floor at the meetings was opened for discussion and residents were given the opportunity to examine the goals. Also, everyone that attended the meetings was given a questionnaire which asked for a ranking of the goals that they felt were the most important.

Committee 80 will take the public's input and finalize the city's goals for the 1980's.

W. M. Pearce, coordinator of Committee 80, said the program had its beginning in the first decade when Committee 70 formed to look at what Lubbock needed to accomplish during the 1970's.

It was in the early days of Committee 70 that a massive tornado struck Lubbock and laid to waste much of the downtown area.

"This disaster had the effect of drawing Lubbock together," said Dr. Pearce. "We were able to take Committee 70 and use its plans to restore the city."

Some of the realized goals of the 1970's that came from that first Committee include the new Civic Center complex, the Lubbock International Airport, the Canyon Lakes Project, the arrival of Texas Instruments as a major new industry for the city, and other accomplishments too numerous to mention.

The goals for the 80's are divided into nine areas - agriculture, cultural affairs, economy of the city, education, government and taxation, municipal facilities and services, recreation and entertainment, spirit of Lubbock, and transportation.

For those citizens of Lubbock who did not participate in the February 5 meetings, a make-up meeting will be held at the Lubbock High School Auditorium on Thursday (tonight), February 7, at 7:30 p. m.

The Reverend David Hill, pastor of the New Hope Baptist Church of Amarillo, will be guest speaker and will install the newly elected officers. Rev. Kado Lang is president of the alliance. He advises that the public is cordially invited to attend this service. "You'll enjoy this special program and the singing of the New Hope Baptist Church of Amarillo," says Rev. Lang.

NAACP Will Meet Saturday

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), Lubbock Branch, will hold its regular monthly meeting at 7:30 p. m. Saturday, February 9. The public is invited to attend. The February meeting will be held at the Green-Fair Manor Community Center, 2812 Weber Drive. The agenda includes a presentation by Tom Witt, Personnel Director for the City of Lubbock, who will speak on recruiting for an upcoming police training program. Also included is a report by Dianna Henderson, NAACP political action chairwoman, on the all-day Voting Workshop held last Saturday, February 2, by the Conference of Organizations.

New Stamp Issued Here

On February 7, 1980, the new stamps commemorating windmills will be issued at the Texas Tech Museum.

Since this is the first time that Lubbock has ever received the honor of a first day issue, it has created lots of customer and stamp collector interest. We have been receiving requests for first day covers from all over the United States and foreign countries; in fact, the total number expected will be over 200,000. This is a special time for Lubbock, for the Executive Committee will meet earlier at 6:30 p. m.

Numerous visiting dignitaries will attend, including Senior Assistant Postmaster General Carl C. Ulsaker, Ronald C. Sharpe, Designer of Stamps; Dr. Virginia Noelke, Member of Citizens' Stamp Advisory Committee; and C. R. Bolat, District Manager for the Oklahoma District.

The 1980 National Afro-American 'Black History Month' (February)

From its founding in 1915 by the 'Father of Black History,' Dr. Carter G. Woodson, the Association Afro-American Life and History has been a bulwark organization with the strongest bent towards historical relevance and historical scholarly excellence.

The question now posed is how can ASLAH become the historical representative of the Elks, the Masons, the Links, the Alpha's and the Zetas, the elderly, and the welfare's? Who writes the history of the Black American? Who puts down on paper for posterity the contributions to the initiation and development of the United States nation.

In spite of the fact that one month will be used in Black History Appreciation Month this year, what is really needed is an ongoing program the year-around that will keep Black life, Black culture, Black inventions, Black discoveries and Black contributions before the American nation each of the 365 days a year.

This year's theme: 1980 Heritage for America (Our Roots).

For more information, contact me in care of this newspaper.

To get back on one of my old soap boxes, it is that Blacks who are in position, places or where ever they are, must remember one thing: Their first priority is their community, no matter what commission, board or committee they may serve on.

Blacks must make Blacks accountable once they get appointments or positions. If they are not accountable, Blacks must remove them even if the establishment wants them.

Blacks must make Blacks accountable once they get appointments or positions. If they are not accountable, Blacks must remove them even if the establishment wants them.

This year looks like it may be a two party system with Blacks. If Blacks are not on an ego trip, this can be good, because when you look at it, neither party has done us any special favors.

This year is starting out with a bang! Minorities have made an attempt to get it all together in 1980, and results have been positive.

rocked the boat and shook up the system here last week. This was done because it is true! This collectively togetherness can happen. No need to continue to dwell on this. Think about it! NUFF SED!!

BLACK EMERGENCY

AMERICAN LEADERSHIP AND WORLD ORDER

The initial prolonged reluctance of the United Nations Security Council to take embargo initiatives against the government of Iran for Iran's failure to comply with the Security Council's mandates has caused many Americans to doubt the effectiveness of the largely Third World international body.

The Security Council, as we know, had unanimously supported the United States in its demands that the hostages be released—and that the U.S. embassy property be held inviolate.

What some representatives of the United States government repeatedly stated was that they would have liked for the United Nations to have declared a worldwide embargo of Iran.

Furthermore, no such follow-up on its own mandates was forthcoming from the United Nations. Let's examine the situation to see if we may discern why.

One explanation is that Europe is far too dependent upon Iranian oil for any European nation to join readily in voting to impose a world trade embargo of Iran. Still, there were strong indications that most of the European nations would bow to U.S. pressure for such an embargo.

A similar line of reasoning was held that many non-aligned nations have been dependent upon a solidarity of Third World political interests which opposes United States policy.

What the American government has ignored totally, and the nation's press has noted as though only of minor significance, is at least the possibility that the United States—by its own past actions in the United Nations—may have done the most to predetermine the recent United Nations tendency toward inaction.

The United States government, in this regard, has overlooked the devastating fact that when Security Council sanctions and embargoes have been voted in the past, it has been principally United States' non-cooperation which has countermanded the force of the United Nations' sanctions.

This was the case when the United Nations sought to bring sanctions to bear against Israel for alleged illegal occupation of Arab lands. In this situation, American ties to Israel were and still are paramount; and the United States retains its non-acceptance of the world body's will and its attempt to bring about compliance with its will.

Similarly, when sanctions were urged against Rhodesia and South Africa, the United States stood squarely against—and negated—world opinion. Whether right or not in principle in terms of our own perceived self-interests, the United States' government, in each of these cases, served to undermine the effectiveness of the United Nations in backing up its mandates through trade embargoes.

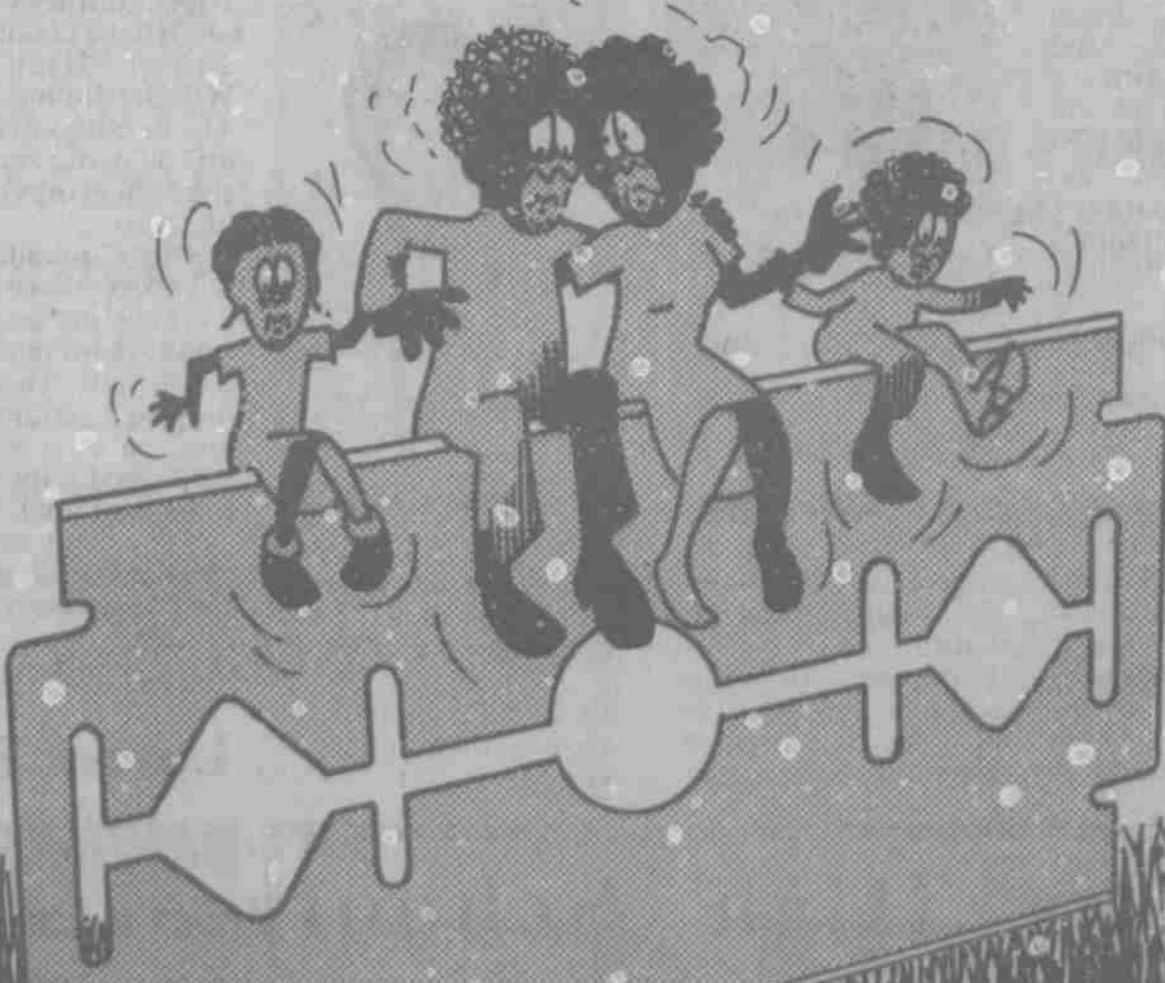

The United States, in the eyes of most of the membership of the United Nations, appeared to enter and remain in the world body more as its patron than as a participant. Much has been made of the fact—at least in the United States—that the dollar amounts which we give to the United Nations seem disproportionately large. However, in relation to our Gross National Product, we give far less than some other nations.

We still ask "why"—perhaps principally because it has not been altogether easy for Americans, who unhappily—and impolitely—call themselves publicly "the most powerful nation in the

by Jack Sheridan

This column returns in force this week of the new year, a new decade dawning, after a regrettable (for the writer, at least) absence of several weeks previous. It would seem that an unasked-for, unwanted and unbidden Christmas present came along, a marvelously ruinous case of flu, virus or whatever you might call it, that laid body and mind low for nigh on to 10 days. It is only now that admiration for my own stamina fills me; I thought there for a while that I, too, would go out with the old year! So, we're back, the column and I, and with a backlog of serious catching-up to do. As we lay a-dying (we hoped) all the movie houses in town saw fit to bring in the held-back biggies of the Christmas release trade and now all that is to be done is to run first and pick-'em up one by one for evaluation.

Advance notice across the country dictated the first choice for comment and, it turned out, rightly so. The "comeback" (for the column) picture was the one holding forth at the UA South Plains Mall Cinema, the distinguished and brilliant film, "Kramer vs. Kramer." This picture has already won prestigious awards, namely the New York award for Best Picture of the Year, Best Actor and Best Supporting Actress. And, this particular award very often presages the later and all-important Academy Awards, too. They seem to go hand-in-hand.

You've seen those announcements often in the Official Records columns of the newspaper, so and-so versus so-and-so. Usually, it is a matter of divorce. In this case, it is a matter of child custody. It is a wrenching situation at best and in the case of this exquisitely told story it is at its peak.

To give you a brief summary, "Kramer vs. Kramer" tells the events in the lives of Ted and Joanna Kramer. At the film's outset, Joanna is declaring her love for her six-year-old son, Billy, as he sleeps. We see her then pack her few belongings and prepare for a departure. Ted, her husband, and upcoming advertising executive, is totally committed to his career and is on the verge of important gains. His single-minded purpose is borne into the charged apartment and he is met with Joanna's declaration that she is leaving him. She must find herself and she is abandoning him and their son while she flees forth to do so.

To Ted then it falls in the next 18 months, through divorce (though the knowledge of this peculiarly elusive in the film) and to the climaxing point. Ted must assume the mother-father role to small Billy and this he does, to the disastrous impact upon his hard-battled career and his ultimate future. He is confused, angry, loving and desperate in his relationship with his son and tries so hard.

There is only the understanding of Margaret Phelps, who also lives in the building, a hurt divorcee, to lean on, her understanding and her morale aid. His emotional life is limited to a brief, meaningless encounter with one of the office colleagues. All is centered on Billy and the protection of the child.

Then back into their lives comes Joanna, fresh from California and analysis, knowing herself now and finding, in the process, desire for her renounced motherhood and the regaining of her son's custody.

The matter must go to the impersonal dictates of the courts and so it does. The resultant trial, the decision and the unusual resolution of this everyday problem are the core of this most admirable film's body.

What makes "Kramer vs. Kramer" probably the finest film of the 1979 parade is that it is human, warm and about real, day-to-day people. These are people we know and we would like to know. The boy Billy is the boy of all boys, all children, open, vulnerable and trusting, with that sly magical touch of intuition to adult ways that peeps out now and then. It is a film of humor and of pathos and most of all of overwhelming

Understanding on the small family canvas. What makes "Kramer vs. Kramer" a most compelling experience and a high credit to the industry which spawned it is the total meshing together of all the talents called upon to deliver the final product. Dustin Hoffman, who has skirted Oscar for years since his memorable "Midnight Cowboy" now comes into his own. He is touching, sincere, sensitive, warm, angry, concerned and his guard is never lowered. He has never been better and that statute belongs to him without question.

His confused and seeking wife, the mother, is superbly played by Meryl Streep, who makes steady, undeniable gains every time she appears. She is simply excellent.

Jane Alexander brings to her role as the neighbor supporter that expertise that has marked her work since she first broke on the scene in New York in the play "The Great White Hope."

Howard Duff, so long absent from view, returns strongly as Ted's custody suit lawyer and there is nothing but praise for the performance and the handling of Justin Henry who is the six-seven year old son. I hate child actors on sight as a

Letter To Editor

Dear Editor:

Those pagan Muslims have locked up fifty Americans in little rooms for two months. Solutions to this problem range from loud boycotts to nuking them back to the stoneage. Now, godless Russians have invaded a country on their border. Solutions to this problem seem to be to reinstate the draft and foregoing nuclear weapons limitation. Where, in this god-fearing city, is all the Christians? Things are tough now and you have all become ominously silent. Maybe you are super-patriotic first and Christians second. I suspect that is your problem.

You are not a Communist sympathizer because you speak out against war. You will not be an Ayatollah supporter when you stand up against the United States raising a massive army. What would Jesus do? That is your standard. There is nothing less.
