The Lubbock Independent School District has announced its policy for free and reduced price meals and for free milk for children unable to pay the full price of meals and milk served under the National School Lunch and Special Milk Programs.

Application forms are being sent to homes during registration or the opening day of classes in a letter to parents from Supt. Ed

Irons. Additional copies of the application forms are available at the principal's office in each school.

Applications may be submitted at any time during the year. The information provided on the application will be used only for the purpose of determining eligibility.

Supt. Irons has announced the following family size income criteria for determining eligibility:

Children from families whose income is at or below the levels shown are eligible for free or reduced priced meals and free milk. In addition, children of families not meeting these criteria may be eligible if the families have unusually high medical bills, shelter costs in excess of thirty per cent of their income, special education expenses due to the mental or physical condition of a child, or disaster or casualty losses.

In certain cases foster children are also eligible for these benefits. If a family has foster children living with them and wishes to apply for such meals and milk for them, they should contact the school.

Irons noted in his letter to parents that in the operation of the child feeding programs, no child will be discriminated against because of race, sex, color, or national origin.

Under the provisions of the policy, each school's principal will review applications and determine eligibility. If a parent is dissatisfied with the ruling of the official, he may make a request, either orally or in writing, to Bill Parker, director of pupil personnel services, 1628 19th Street, telephone 747-2641, for a hearing to appeal the decision. The school district's policy contains an outline of the hearing procedure.

Interested persons may review a copy of the complete policy which is on file in each school and in the office of the director of cafeterias, 1628 19th Street.

Hall of Fame Man Stars in Karate Movie "Good Guys Wear Black"

by Jack Sheridan

Certainly there is nothing new about famous sports figures getting up a hankering to become movie stars. Way back when Jack Dempsey tried his hand and nowadays we've been treated to the thespic talents of such luminaries of the muscle world as Jim Brown, O.J. Simpson, and even, heaven forbid, Joe Namath.

Some years ago another form of physical art came into the foreground, that of the marital arts of karate, the tricky maneuvering with kicks, slaps, grunts and cries as used to illustrate the skill of self-defense.

Probably the emergence of the late Bruce Lee in the Hong Kong-produced series of kung fu films did much to galvanize public attention and interest. Certainly, following Lee's untimely death several years ago, the worldwide market still clamored for these films of exacting and split-second clashes.

Another example of the art, not the kung fu variety, but the true art of karate itself and its purpose will be on view starting Friday at the Showplace 4 complex at 66th and University. The film which is registering nicely at the nation's box offices so far is entitled "Good Guys Wear Black". It is a PG-rated American Cinema Group entry and stars a personable, blonde native of Oklahoma, Chuck Norris.

Now if you are a karate devotee, an attendee of those aforementioned films, then you know that Norris is a Hall of Fame man for his skills as well as the World Champion title holder, too. He has straight blonde hair, medium size body, trim and his face belongs in the Clint Eastwood-Charles Bronson craggy feature school.

Chuck Norris, in town this week, proved an engaging personality, soft-spoken but solid in the convictions of his physical accomplishments as well as determined to carve a place, a melding point for that karate background with the movie career he now begins.

Norris is not a movie neophyte. He appeared in "The Return of the Dragon", a karate-themed film, and he has been seen in others.

"You see," he says very earnestly, "I don't want to be in just more kung fu pictures. No, what I want to do is to use my experience and my talents in the self-defense field to couple with good, solid stories, good acting. That's what I think you'll find in 'Good Guys Wear Black.'"

He points out that, while the film has its inception sequences in Vietnam during that tragic skirmish, those sequences only set the action for the dramatic and peaking climax of the movie. He speaks highly and most admiringly of his supporting cast which includes Anne Archer, Lloyd Haynes and veterans Jim Backus, Dana Andrews and James Franciscus.

You gather that Chuck Norris is not exactly a kid. Well, he isn't. He won his physical laurels as a younger man but, with wisdom, he knew that as he edged into his 30s younger men were nearing that could upset his crown perch.

So, Chuck Norris turned to something that he loves best of all. He is a born teacher and he admits it with modest but knowing pride. He likes to work with young people and he will continue to do so, regardless of the rise or fall of his incipient movie career.

About that latter, "it's really all up to the people, you know. I don't know if I have the charisma on the screen that people will buy, that will establish my personality. There are a lot of fine actors in Hollywood that have never made the grade, it's all hinged around that elusive charisma. Take Bronson and Eastwood, for example. They are not pin-up boys but they have that 'something' that the people recognize—they're successful in this most demanding business. It's all up to the people, you see?"

What Chuck Norris wants is a successful coupling of his past accomplishments with a place in the future on the screen. He wants to continue to train young men and women to prepare them to face the unexpected and unforewarned pitfalls of their future, to, you might say, arm them with his know-how and experience, so that they can set forth and do battle on equal terms.

Chuck Norris has been on the road around the country now for two months working morning into the nights to plug his first major film. If sincerity, a cool evaluation of self and a distinct and immovable aim in mind is the answer, moviegoers will be seeing more of Chuck Norris.

Incidentally, his next film, to begin shooting next month, is called "Force of One" and again will combine the marital arts with a solid and hopefully meaningful story line.

President Carter Adds Up His Successes, Failures

Copyright, 1978, United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

WASHINGTON—President Carter is becoming alarmed over his sagging popularity. But White House sources tell us that he believes he has done a good job. He has reduced unemployment by 2 percent and has deregulated airline fares. He has set up a new Energy Department and created a new Education Department.

However, the president is proudest of tackling the tough issues. He pushed through a Panama Canal treaty that the polls showed were opposed by most Americans. He arranged an Arab arms sale that the Jewish community opposed. He defied the Greek vote by fighting to end the arms embargo against Turkey.

Carter is also seeking an oil tax or tariff that will increase gas prices. He strongly believes these unpopular moves are necessary for the best good of the country.

The president admits privately that he has made mistakes. He over-promised during the election campaign. So his performance is measured against his promises, he feels, instead of his accomplishments. He also acknowledges that he stuck by personal friends, such as Bert Lance and Andrew Young, whom a more pragmatic president would have dropped.

But Carter also believes newsmen, in the aftermath of Watergate, are scrutinizing him more critically than they did past presidents. So he has launched a campaign to improve his image.

He has begun inviting opinion makers to the family quarters of the White House for informal dinners. He has also brought media man Jerry Rafshoon into the White House to orchestrate publicity.

The president has quietly reminded subordinates, meanwhile, that he's in a far better position to get re-elected than he was to get elected in the first place.

Nuclear Danger: The federal government has systematically suppressed disagreeable news about the danger of radiation from nuclear power plants. It appears that the federal authorities are more anxious to protect the nuclear industry than the public health.

The stakes are enormously high. Both the federal government and the nuclear industry are committed to developing nuclear power. Too many unfavorable stories could jeopardize the industry's multibillion-dollar investment in nuclear power.

Scientists who have linked low-level radiation with cancer have had their government grants withdrawn and their reputations tarnished. One of them was University of Pittsburgh Professor Thomas Mancuso.

The Energy Department didn't like his study of increased cancer among atomic workers in Richland, Wash. So the department fired him.

We reported what happened to Mancuso and the story led to hearings before the House Health subcommittee. Energy Department officials promised the congressmen a full investigation by their own inspector general.

Six months have passed and the investigation has been completed. But the congressmen are calling it a whitewash and accusing the Energy Department of a cover-up.

Now the congressmen have asked the General Accounting Office to investigate the investigators. They said the inspector general's report was "totally deficient."

Press Harassment: The Soviet Union is continuing its harassment of American newsmen. Two have already been convicted of "slander and defamation." They are Craig Whitney of The New York Times and Harold Piper of the Baltimore Sun.

The men were accused of slandering the committee that controls the Soviet media. This is the same committee that specializes in slandering the United States.

In fact, Soviet newsmen routinely engage in slandering our country. We've seen a CIA study of the subject which claims that Soviet correspondents "double as intelligence operatives" and "influence local press coverage of international developments."

The biggest Soviet propaganda drive has been directed against the neutron bomb. Soviet newsmen have portrayed the bomb as "the ultimate capitalist weapon." In various West German cities, communist front groups delivered protests to the U.S. consulates. In Bonn, two Soviet journalists were seen participating in a demonstration in front of the American embassy.

The CIA report alleges that the Soviets attended major conferences throughout the world in late 1977 and early 1978 for one purpose—to gain a forum for denouncing the bomb. The propaganda campaign was also aimed, the report alleges, "to stimulate doubts in the U.S. public about our own military establishment."

Conflicting Reports: Meanwhile, President Carter has received conflicting reports about the Soviet Union's growing military power. The Central Intelligence Agency has reported that the Soviets are spending about 6 percent of their Gross National Product on armaments. But the Defense Intelligence Agency insists the percentage is more than double the CIA figures. Some analysts believe Soviet defense expenditures exceed 20 percent.

In the summer of 1972, according to a top-secret report, Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev discussed the huge Soviet military outlay with Kremlin colleagues. He was quoted in the intelligence report as confiding: "I fear for the Soviet people to know that one out of every three rubles goes for defense."

Recent great quotes: "Today's judgement (Supreme Court decision in Bakke case) ignores the fact that for several hundred years Negroes have been discriminated against not as individuals, but rather solely because of the color of their skins. The dream of America as the great melting pot has not been realized for the Negro; because of his skin color ... he has never even made it into the pot." End of quote from minority opinion in case by Justice Thurgood Marshall.

For the first time in the United Methodist Church and perhaps in any major denomination of the United States, an acknowledged homosexual has received official sanction for service as pastor of a congregation. He is the Rev. Mr. Paul Abels of the New York Conference. See July 8 issue of The Black Courier, "From This Pew" by Willa Mae Rice.

In conversation recently with leaders in Boley, Oklahoma and some of the members of the Bellringers Club in this black metropolis of the nation, we found many of them earnestly believing that "Bubba" (L.G.) Ashley has an excellent chance to become one of Oklahoma's first black county commissioners if he can surmount primaries around August 22, 1978. Most agree too that it is going to take a lot of personal contact and doorbell ringing in Okfuskee County on the part of Mr. Ashley if he is to beat the present incumbent—Mr. Montgomery who has some influential friends in Okfuskee County. So "Bubba" hit the trail as nothing in politics beats personal contact—witness Jimmy Carter. People just feel honored when you ask them for a vote.

Visited briefly with the Lee Bros in Boley where they are going great guns with that "Smokorama" deal that cooks barbeque in just a short while and is becoming popular all over the United States and other countries as well. In another column soon, we will talk about an old time bellringer in San Angelo, Texas. She is Mrs. Maggie Starks of Starks Funeral Enterprises and one of the Southwest's outstanding black business women.

Memories: See by the papers that St. John C.M.E. Church of Hutchinson, Kansas recently sponsored a "Scholarship Invitational Rodeo" at the Kansas State Fairgrounds in Hutchinson. We remember our years as pastor of this historic church more than 30 years ago. How times change! More later. Until then, Peace.

With school days just around the corner it is time to give some special concern to clothing. These tips will be helpful as you ready the children's clothes for school. Energy-efficient clothing-care habits can increase your comfort as well as lower utility bills.

Selecting garments from fabrics that require less heat and washing or drying time is an energy-efficient first step.

The rest depends on energy-minded care habits, which include washing and drying full-machine loads when possible on appropriate machine cycles in cool-as-possible temperatures.

When machine washing, wash full loads when possible, especially if using hot water.

If the washer is not full, adjust the water level accordingly, but remember that cycle will still take the same amount of energy except for the reduction in water-heating energy.

Use the short machine cycle when appropriate—such as when items are not very soiled or when they will readily give up soil.

Cool-As-Possible Washing

When possible, wash with warm or cold water—but no colder than 80 degrees F.

While research shows that cleanability and disinfecting power increases with higher water temperature, unfortunately so does energy usage. Luckily, however, hot water is inappropriate for some fabrics.

When washing in cold water, use liquid detergent or powdered detergent designed for use in cold water to achieve the best results.

Also, always use cold water rinse. Warm water offers no advantage, and it wastes energy. In fact, a warm rinse frequently adds more wrinkles which then require ironing.

Pretreating Keeps Washing Cooler

If we must sacrifice clean, bright and white clothes in favor of energy conservation, we can still usually produce comparable results with bleaching, pre-treating and soaking.

If greying and dinginess do occur, an occasional warm-water wash may help. Also, chlorine bleach will help disinfect some items as needed.

Cool-As-Possible Drying

When drying clothes, hang them outside or indoors when possible.

If machine drying, dry full—but not packed—loads.

Dry them at the lowest possible heat setting to produce desired results in the shortest possible time.

Do not over-dry clothing—this causes wrinkles and static electricity and it wastes energy.

If clothes come out wrinkled, more energy is needed to iron or redo them.

Also, keep the dryer vent or air duct and lint-filter screen clean for maximum energy efficiency.

Clothing with Energy-Saving Comfort

Styles, Colors Add to Comfort
Garment style can increase comfort.

For warm weather, choose clothes that do not bind. Loose-fitting styles allow air circulation near the body.

For cold weather, choose closely fitting garments with openings that hold closely to the body. Styles that fit close at the neck, wrists, ankles and waist hold warm air next to the skin and keep cold air out.

For outdoors, choose light colors during summer and dark colors in winter, since light colors reflect the sun's heat and dark colors absorb it.

Ringling the Bell . . .

with Bob Tieuell

Business in the Black: People on low or fixed incomes use a higher percent of their paychecks for utility bills than middle and upper income persons. The average black family median income is almost 40 percent lower than the average white family. This means a monthly electric and gas bill of $10 for each family is actually 30-40 percent more of an expense for Black America. An increase in the nation's fuel bill will become a disproportionate increase in the cost of living for the black community.

Blacks and other poor people should benefit from low cost sources of energy for electricity. Each source of fossil fuel energy for electricity, oil, coal, natural gas and nuclear needs to be examined for its cost as well as its environmental effects. Bellringer sources report that even the already developed oil and gas fields of South Texas have been known to be high in uranium deposits. Thus the use of nationally located uranium for nuclear power plants can prevent increasing dependency on high cost imported petroleum which will result in increased utility bills for blacks and other poor people.

Dr. C. Starr, vice-chairman of the Electric Power Research Institute recently stated: "The utility industry has urged the development of the fast breeder, which uses uranium about 60 times more effectively than present nuclear plants. Only the government aided and abetted by environmentalists have evaded the development of this low-cost energy producing method," he added.

Whites Need to Know: The fact remains that black Americans know a great deal more about whites than white Americans know about blacks, believes Louis Martin, editor of The Black Defender. Most whites are unaware of the existence of black college fraternities and sororities. They know nothing of the black professional societies, doctors, dentists, lawyers, etc. He adds that many of them know nothing of black interests in fine arts, classical music and the opera.

"They need to know the full range of black life. They need to know that black fraternities and sororities are raising millions of dollars annually for black achievement and black colleges," he concludes. We once thought of naming this column: "A Primer for White Folks." We need to know each other more. Agreed?

KELLY'S HEROES

by Joe Kelly

Texas Tech football players return in three days, if they already haven't started to assemble, to being workouts for the 1978 season. The serious work starts Monday.

When workouts open, there will be little time to put the polish on this year's version of the Red Raiders. And polish will be a problem, since there is a lot of inexperience. Seldom has any Tech squad faced a bigger challenge than the one this squad faces.

Everyone knows that Tech opens against Southern Cal, a team touted as possible national champions. There's more. The Raiders have a week to regroup, then face Arizona, a newcomer to the Pacific Coast Conference and boasting one of its best squads.

After that it is frying pan to fire. Texas comes here and the Longhorns are rated as potential repeaters as league champions, followed by Texas A&M at College Station.

Those first four games could break any team if it didn't have heart, and a lot of it. The schedule, for an experienced squad, would be demanding enough. With inexperience, it could be heartbreaking.

The middle part of the season could be the easiest, except that it includes New Mexico there, Rice at Houston and Baylor, one of the top rated challengers. Even TCU is rated by many above Tech, and the Horned Frogs have always been tough for Tech.

The tag end of the campaign is about like the start. The Raiders must face SMU and Houston on successive weekends, winding up the season against league favorite Arkansas at Fayetteville.

It's a killing schedule and no one in his right mind could look on Tech's chances with any degree of optimism. In fact, Raider fans had best brace themselves for a long season as the squad gains experience, much like SMU did a year ago, as well as Rice.

If Rex Dockery can continue to smile as the season progresses, he will indeed stamp himself a man. He certainly is more to be pitied than blamed, and any success he does manager will be a tribute to him, his coaches and the Raider squad.

Let's face it. Steve Sloan & Co. did a horrible job of recruiting and he left the Raiders with little armament for a demanding season. For an illustration, check what Vanderbilt has done in the three seasons since Steve left there.

Rex will need this season to install his program. After that, and everyone will give him a year's grace in view of the circumstances, it will be "his" squad.

It could well be that Tech's role this season will be that of spoiler. For instance, the Raiders get both Baylor and Houston here. Both figure prominently in championship talk. An upset could make the difference. And, in this conference, it could happen.

Poor Billy Martin. He hasn't learned yet when to talk and when not to. All was going well. He had resigned, been rehired for 1980 and could enjoy peace and tranquility.

Not Billy. About the time the Yankees were getting their act together, Billy graciously fingers Reggie Jackson as the reason he lost his cool. Now, even a first grader knew that. So what did Billy hope to accomplish, aside from bringing the feud even more out in the open.

The sports writers of the state, even before the annual conference tour, have inked their selections for Dave Campbell's Texas Football magazine. The overwhelming choice is Arkansas.

There's good reason for it. The Razorbacks were impressive in the Orange Bowl and, despite the loss to Texas last year, could well have won the league title. The Porkers have almost everyone returning, plus quarterback Ron Calcagni.

Generally, three teams are picked for the runnerup spot—Texas, Texas A&M and Houston. All gained some support to win the championship. And Baylor has been rated an outside bet to win, if the Bears have a quarterback and escape injuries.

SMU even drew a little support, but the Mustangs aren't given a serious chance. Still, most agree that they will be much stronger and a real challenge. TCU, with many junior college players, is a puzzle, but drew enough confidence to edge past Tech for seventh place.

Only Rice has been picked to finish lower than Tech, and the Owls should be much better. Hertel gives them solid experience at quarterback and the Owls spent a learning year. They should be better.

And the future? Well, according to the "experts," Tech gained 9 of the top 90 high school prospects last spring, but none of the top 10, where Texas alone is credited with five. SMU, Baylor and A&M seem to have garnered the ones Texas missed.

After this season, Tech must have a great recruiting year, not average or good, if it is to challenge. In this league it doesn't pay to fall far behind the leaders.

Sheridan's Ride

by Jack Sheridan

You know, we have been conditioned to expect the topmost in our movie going and so, as I tried to explain in my previous column, I try each week to select the "most important," the "blockbuster" film of the week, if you will, for my comments.

But, quite often, the "coming event" when it arrives, does not cast the impressive shadow that is supposed to be the end result. A good example of that is the over-sold and vaguely lacking "The Eyes of Laura Mars," which was our subject last week. Highly exploited prior to its release, the viewing, while proving to be interesting and handled as competently as a seasoned cast, producer, director, photographer, et al could do, "Eyes" is a distinct let-down. It will reap its own harvest, not by critical evaluation but by the most damning of all critical evaluation, word of mouth. That's when your neighbor or friend or in-law has seen it and tells you not so succinctly that it's a bomb, save your $3 and forget it. And, you may not like your in-laws or your buttinsky neighbor but, I guarantee you, you will register the comment and you'll hang onto that $3. And "The Eyes" will lapse into an "also ran."
 Well, this week's movie has none of the pretensions of "Eyes of Laura Mars." It is a relatively short running film, PG rated, entertaining job that has no ideas of grandeur or possible Academy Awards or any such. It simply tells a story that is fun, lots of action, and peopled down to the last man and woman with nice easy-going, good to know 'em types that sends you out of the theater full of satisfaction.

The film, holding the little screen at the Fox 4 complex out on West 19th St. is called "Hooper." It is yet another entry that topline the indefatigable Burt Reynolds, hairy chest and belly and all. He is very much present this summer on the nation's screen in product that is good, bad and indifferent, but in "Hooper" his non-talent is used to its best advantage as he tackled the middle role of three generations of Hollywood stuntmen.

Now, you know about stuntmen. They are the ones who wreck cars, fall from buildings and cliffs, who risk life and limb to "stand in" for the valuable stars depicting the death-defying stunts that make films like "The French Connection," "Bullitt," today "Foul Play," and a history of others the thrillers they are.

In "Hooper" Reynolds is coming down to the end of a top career as the stuntman. He is living with and loves a lady whose father is a former stuntman, who relinquished his crown to Reynolds as time passed. Now there is on the horizon a young man who will, in time, take the crown from Reynolds and go on to bigger and more daring things.

The egomaniac director of the film, a dedicated man, has one climaxing stunt to put to his film and he cannot be dissuaded. It is a difficult, fatal-prone stunt, a rocket driven car hurtling across a murderous gorge after the highway bridge has been blown. Reynolds won't do it, the young man and he are to share. But Reynolds does.

That's all I'm going to tell you. The film is replete with stunts galore and there are car crashes, explosions in glorious color, mayhem and brawls to gladden the most brutal heart.

But, what makes "Hooper" a delight and total entertainment is the playing of the cast. They are all just fine. Reynolds is type cast and most handle in the title role. Sally Field from "Smokey and the Bandit" is the precious gal, veering from comedy to seriousness with a flair, Brian Keith is her old man, the ailing stuntman with all the charm and grace that he brings to every role, Jan-Michael Vincent is the hopeful young stuntman and very good he is, too, while the icy, dedicated and thoroughly louse-type director of the film couldn't be played better than it is by Robert Klein.

Only thing I capred mentally at was the unending and hypo-ed use of a vulgar four-letter word throughout. When the mind begins to register one word out of the welter of dialogue over and again, then redundancy has set in. It is in popular usage these days (I use it frequently but I hope mainly under my breath) but the overstraining of the term seems a dodge that could have been tempered a little, seems to me.

I have mixed feelings about the forthcoming production of "Man of La Mancha" by the Lubbock Theatre Centre Sept. 15 at the LTC Playhouse. It's an expansive and very sensitive musical, this story of author Cervantes and his creation Don Quixote, and a leap and a cry from the more contained "Show Boat" and "Kiss Me, Kate" of previous seasons. Physically, the production will be hampered by the brief space of the little playhouse, that's for sure, and performance wise the cast is facing a hard nut to crack.

That old standby, Harlan Reddell, will be the Don, his 'steenth lead role in LTC musicals, while the Aldonza/Dulcinea role will be handled by gifted Techsan Sarah J. Watkins. Portly Charles Addington will be the Sancho Panza.

The rest of the cast is seasoned and direction will be by Doug Cummins, James Toland musical director and John Packard choreography and principal dancer.

With all the recent furor about nude scenes for "Equus" at Texas Tech, resulting in the cancellation of that proposed show, how is Lubbock Theatre Centre going to resolve the famous and necessary rape scene involving Aldonza and the Muleteers? So far no peep from those "who would keep the theater pure!"

Oh, well. "Man of La Mancha" is set for Sept. 15-16, 18-19 and 21-23. I hope the "Impossible Dream" becomes possible and shinningly so.
