

'Around the Hub City'

You know the rain we got on last weekend was a blessing, but when you drive Globe Avenue and run into Fir Avenue (at the circle) you run into a 'pig pen' of mud. I wonder what is going to be done with this type of nuisance.

If you have drove this route, aside from the non-stop sign, you know what I'm talking about.

Something has to be done about this situation. Actually, I don't know what one must do to remove such a 'mess', but I can say, something has to be done---and soon.

Aside from this sloppy area, there is still no STOP SIGN..... You know, one day someone will be injured seriously at this intersection before a STOP SIGN is placed here. Can't help but remember the undescrivable incident which happened several years ago near Dunbar High School because of no STOP SIGNS.....

Let's hope something is done here soon.

Mrs. Lovie McCutcheon, 1801 Avenue B, took her step-mother to Coleman, Texas where she attended the funeral of her brother.

He expired last week, and Mrs. McCutcheon will return this week.

Mr. Kim Bertram, 3410 29th Street, an agent with a local insurance company, won the television set given by the Bethel A. M. E. Church last Monday evening.

His lucky ticket was sold to him by Mrs. L.M. Knowles, one of the many ladies working hard in this mammoth drive which will climax in May.

Mrs. Doris Caro went to Waco, Texas this week to visit with her father, Rev. Tate. She found him to be doing much better.

Dr. Milton V. Davis, thoracic surgeon and past president of the Texas Medical Association, was the guest speaker at the first annual meeting of the West Texas Tuberculosis Association April 15 in Lubbock.

Dr. Davis addressed the members at the annual banquet at the In Town Inn. This concluded the meeting. The afternoon session included election of officers and meetings of the West Texas Throacic Society as well as of Association lay members.

It was learned last week the members of the Booker T. Washington Post of the American Legion has a good project under way for raising funds for their building fund.

Keep the good work up fellows, your work is needed in our city.

"AROUND THE HUB CITY" had the opportunity of talking to Donald George, Dunbar's tennis coach, and he gave us some good information of the squad.

According to George, Dunbar has been successful on two attempts thus far in tennis season. He admitted that the Panthers had defeated Amarillo on two engagements, March 4; 7-1; March 11; 2-1. Aside from this, they (Panthers) wiped Midland 4-1.

There are only fifteen men, the majority of them freshmen, on the Panther squad. They will compete in the "Hub City Tournament" this week. Schools from throughout the state will participate in this contest.

Joe Phea is the coach for the ninth grade squad.

Be sure to read this column next week. There will be a special edition in regard to the many nicknames the majority of us use from day to day. I'm sure each of you will enjoy it.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sanders, Sr., 3504 Vanda Avenue, announces the engagement of their daughter, Miss Anne Elizebeth to A/1c O.C. Lewis, son of Mrs. Leila M. Lewis of Waverly, Alabama.

Miss Sanders is a 1966 graduate of Dunbar High School and is a student at the Lubbock Vocational School of Nursing.

Lewis is a graduate of Drake High School in Alabama and is presently stationed at Dyess Air Force Base in Abilene, Texas.

The wedding is set for July.

Junk Cars Receive Notice

The City of Lubbock has recently put its foot down in regard to the parking of 'junked cars' in the streets of Lubbock.

One thing is for certain people if we disobey the law then we must pay the consequences for disobeying the law.

As citizens, we have certain civil responsibilities to fulfill in order to be good clean citizens.

Last week many citations were issued to many of you in regard to Section 15-341 of the Code of Lubbock.

The code read as follows:

"This vehicle has been at the above location for a period of exceeding 30 days, and has been inoperable during this time. This constitutes a nuisance as defined by Section 15-341 of the Code of Lubbock. You are hereby given ten (10) days from date of this notice, as provided by Section 15-34.3 of the code, to either repair this vehicle so that it will operate under its own power, or to dispose of this vehicle. Failure to comply with this notice within the prescribed time constitutes a misdemeanor and is punishable by fine."

Each of these citations was signed by the City of Lubbock inspector.

You see people, it is up to you to abide by the rules and regulations of the City of Lubbock in order that it can keep good clean standards.

With Urban Renewal being nine years old this year, Lubbock is accredited with saying that this government program got its start in Lubbock. This program was proposed here in the mid-1950's and passed by a large majority of the few hundred voters who went to the polls. There was no noticeable protest.

Lubbock's urban renewal project opened the way for other cities across the state, as well as slamming the door for additional towns.

The Reverend A. W. Wilson, local minister in the pilot urban renewal area was quoted in a recent news article as saying of the local project, "firing the facelift of any town, somebody's going to be hurt and somebody's going to be helped. More have been Going on a wild goose chase is a poor way to feather your nest.

True, Lubbock streets, turned treacherous by drizzling rains shortly before midnight last Sunday, accounted for mishaps that resulted in injury of 12 of the 21 persons injured here last week.

Yet, Ruby Green, 40, of 705 East 29th Street, was admitted to Methodist Hospital for treatment of injuries she suffered when a car backed over her in front of a cafe at 19th Street and Avenue B late Saturday night.

The victim told police she had been standing at the curb talking with friends, and as they left, she started back to the cafe. Another car backed out of a parking space, knocked her down and dragged her out into the street. The driver then drove away, she said. Police were still seeking the driver of the car as late as Monday morning.

Mrs. Green was reported to be in fair condition at the hospital

Nine Ways Toward A Better Community

Surely we all realize that to have a better community we must have better people, for better people make a better community, and in order to have better acting people we must begin where people begin; that is in the family. In the family our personalities, social attitudes and living patterns are developed, here we appreciate the integrity of the human being, his uniqueness and his capacity for growth. In other words it is up to us to do the main job ourselves.

The question is, what goals should we work for to help our families strengthen themselves both physically, morally and spiritually? The following nine steps are drawn up especially for families who are trying to strengthen themselves and the community. These steps may help you gain a new insight into your family and yourself. They are not intended as a set of rigid rules but as a general guide to making and keeping your family healthy both in mind and body. They do not attempt to answer the question; "How much of any one ingredient is the proper amount?" The range is wide even among strong healthy families. After all, American families differ in many ways from one another—in culture and religious backgrounds, in education, in race; there are rural families and urban families, large families and poor. These guideposts can be applied by any single American family in the way most effective for itself. But each family must be careful to apply them reasonably, according to their own particular circumstances, needs and individual variations.

(1) For example; A strong family is able to meet its basic minimum material needs.

This means decent living accommodations, sufficient food and clothing, adequate medical care—in short, all the material opportunities for living and for growth. We can't think about any other steps unless these basic steps or needs are met. When human beings are trapped by sheer economic necessity, they can never be expected to achieve self respect and independence. Anxiety, conflict and fear aroused by severe economic pressures tend to aggravate weaknesses within a family. The father who feels unsure of his adequacy as a provider is poorly equipped emotionally to withstand economic reversals. With his morale and his self-esteem further damaged, he is likely to feel threatened and angry, and his reactions may be destructive to himself and to those around him.

But what about those families whose breadwinners are earning enough to meet their basic economic needs, and yet are head-over-heels in debt? Every family must face, and resist, one of the greatest pressures threatening the family today—materialism. Materialism is not necessarily bad, but when it becomes overemphasized to the extent that wealth and material possessions are idolized and the end is pursued at the expense of the mean, we are in trouble.

Are you trapped by the lure of credit installment buying, pinched by the cost of "easy monthly payments" that too often aren't easy? Parents very definitely have an obligation to re-examine and set limits to their materialistic desires, and to transmit positive beliefs to their children. When Johnny asks, "Why don't we have a color TV like Jimmy has?", it is more important you explain to him that some people have more money and goods than others. Too often, parents fear children will look down on them if they don't have as much as the Joneses. Happiness is not necessarily dependent on the size of Dad's pay check. Do you let your children know that because you own less than the Joneses does not mean you love them less? Or do you engage in double talk? Do you tell them money isn't very important? And then go ahead and talk about it as if it's the most important thing in the world?

(2) A strong family agrees upon values rooted in moral and ethical concepts and cultivates the mind and the spirit.

The family has the basic function of reproduction. Beyond this, it is the carrier of our heritage, cultural and spiritual values. It transmits from one generation to another the special way of life that make up any civilization. Parents are responsible for helping each child develop spiritual values, a conscience, and socially desirable traits. These are safeguards against wrong doing. "Socially desirable" is stressed because we can imagine a family that fits many of our definitions and carries out other function, but at the same time is a family of pickpockets, drunks, thieves or bigots. Now in a den of thieves stealing is an accepted mode of conduct, but it is not socially desirable conduct.

The family should inculcate in its members a respect for the law. Many of the social and emotional ailments besetting families today—and in turn, the community—are closely related to the fact that moral standards have either been abandoned or severely distorted. Lack of respect for property, for life, for the needs and rights of others has a damaging effect on us, all in the form of destructive conflict—in our neighborhoods, in our schools, nationally and internationally. We depend on churches, schools and other institutions to play an important role in maintaining moral standards, but we must not forget that the family itself has the prime responsibility.

(3) The successful family sets reasonable goals for itself and its members and plans together for the future, at the same time, it meets and appreciates each day as it comes.

Of course, goals differ from family to family, and each one must decide what is best for itself. But the family without goals, that just "grows like Topsy" and has no idea of itself or its functions, is only too apt to produce members with spiritual and mental illnesses and shortcomings. The laissez-faire attitude of many parents, parading under the cloak of "tolerance," spells indifference to their children.

(4) The strong family provides its members with the day-to-day opportunities to love and to work. It is the place where deep and enduring emotional satisfactions are achieved. Everyone needs to feel important and accepted.

People whose emotional needs are met will develop a feeling of usefulness and self-regard and of belonging. In a sound family, there is genuine give-and-take among its members. Each person is a major source of security and love for the other.

This step is the heart of the matter. Perhaps at no time do we appreciate the emotionally healthy family until we see the emotionally sick ones. Just as most of our guideposts for the strong family rotate around this element of emotional well-being so we see that factors making for the weak and oftensick family are multiple ones that cluster around its "inside" or emotional inadequacies. These inadequacies often stem from the parents' deep and longfelt hurts suffered in their own childhoods.

It is almost impossible to express a human being's constant and tremendous need for affection and acceptance. Every day we witness the tragedy of chronologically grown-up people who are still children emotionally. Children who feel useless, who don't "belong" anywhere, become immature adults, stricken with feelings of inadequacy and insecurity in their role of husband, wife, parent. Such children have been compared to the Hollywood actor who is "type cast"; they think of themselves as doomed to a role of misfortune and play this role throughout life.

ROBBERY

D.C. Manor, a resident of Tahoka, reported to the police department last Saturday morning that someone robbed him of all of his money. According to Manor, the hoodlums threatened to cut him with a knife they had if he did not give them all of his money.

He obliged their demand and the robbers took $52.00 in cash from him. He had no idea who the pair of crooks were.

VANDALISM

Earl Farley, 1535 East 19th St. told police three teenagers came into his place of business and tried to cash a check, but Farley refused to do so. After refusing to cash the check, the trio of delinquents ask to use the rest room.

Farley noticed that when they left out of the rest room all of his plumbing was torn loose. They fled in a late model car.

CAR BURGLARY

Sammie Castilow, 2710 East 3rd Street, told police that his wife had parked their car in the driveway one night last week and that all doors were locked. The next morning his wife, Mrs. Lena Mae Castilow, who was enroute to her job, noticed that the right vent window had been opened and someone had entered the car and removed a 45 rpm record player plus thirteen records.

The Castillows had no idea who could have robbed them of their $90.00 worth of musical enjoyment.

THEFT OF DOG

Who said that people would not steal your dog? Well, Mrs. Hazel Thomas, 2424 East 29th Street, doesn't believe people won't steal your pet dog.

You see, Mrs. Thomas reported to the police that someone had stolen her three month old German Shepard. According to her, his registered name is "John Von Muen Chow".... (how about that one?) The thief may have a hard time figuring what to call him.

The value of the dog is believed to be at least $75.00. By the way, he was taken during the night, and if you know or have seen this dog, why not spray a little light in Mrs. Thomas' heart and tell her about it. I'm sure she'll appreciate it.

CAR BURGLARY

Another car burglary was reported last week. H. J. Barnett, 223 Beech Avenue, told police someone had broken into his car by entering the left door vent of the car which was parked in the driveway and had removed a record player.

The value of this record player was $90.00. Also with the player was $30.00 worth of records.

THEFT

Willie C. Wilson, 3405 East 18th Street, reported unknown persons entered through the front door of his home and did take approximately $30.00 worth of clothing. It appeared as though the burglar forced his way into the house.
