Guest Speaker at Dunbar Thursday

Mr. T.J. Patterson, assistant director of Community Action Board and reporter of West Texas Times, was guest speaker at Dunbar High School last Thursday, Sept. 19. His speech was part of the assembly for the installation of class officers.

"Look for Something in Life" was the title of his speech. In his address, Mr. Patterson stated that there are five important factors which enable us to become good leaders and better citizens. "In order to become successful in life, it will take hard work and it will not come over night," explained the speaker.

The first factor is a Goal. According to Mr. Patterson, we should start now and aim high. We must

Reese Becomes "Closed Base"

Reese Air Force Base has become a "Closed Base" effective Monday, according to base security officials.

All vehicles coming onto the base must have a valid decal on the windshield, or must stop and be registered in, according to an official.

Security police will log the car, issue a visitor's pass then phone the agency being visited. These same persons will be logged out when they leave the base and the visitor's pass turned back in.

These new security precautions are to insure only authorized persons having legitimate business on the base will be able to enter.

never give up and keep that Goal in mind.

The next and most important factor is a Plan. "After setting this Goal, start planning now. Prepare yourself now, for someday your chance will come," he asserted.

Desire is another factor which will help us to become good leaders and good citizens. We should be determined to achieve our Goals.

Confidence is one that cannot be overlooked. Mr. Patterson stated, "To be a good leader and have good citizenship qualities, you must have confidence in what you do."

Without Persistence, these other four factors would be useless. Determination and drive are the essences in reaching one's goal.

Mr. Patterson's oration was inspirational and very informative to all of us.

EDITORIAL

Two candidates are seeking the position of Governor of the State of Texas come November 5th. They are Paul Eggers of Wichita Falls, Texas and Lt. Governor Preston Smith of Lubbock.

It would appear as though the public relation department of the Smith camp has made an oversight on their part.

In looking at Smith's image throughout the State of Texas, it is a very good one. From his conservative approach, without any strings attached, to the way he reacts to all issues, has enabled him to be the better candidate.

However, with all of this in his favor, the Negro community in the City of Lubbock, predominately East Lubbock, is wondering why his campaign has never been east of Avenue A. These qualified voters, who are Smith's "home folk" are wondering where he is, especially when he has been in our city for an occasional television appearance or speaking engagement.

We must realize, Mr. Smith, these several thousand voters may just turn out in large numbers — in your favor come November 5th. To be perfectly honest, we would like to see you every now and then, especially when you are here for a weekend "retreat."

No doubt about it, Mr. Smith will probably get the boost necessary to become Governor of the great state of Texas, through the efforts of the Negro voters.

With approximately forty days remaining before we — the Negro community of Lubbock — cast our vote for the next Governor, why not cross Avenue A. Let the people see you, a representative of your organization will not do.

You know, Mr. Smith, some people forget exactly how they got started, but we feel sure you are not this type of 'man'.

We'll be looking forward to seeing you before the grand finale!! Lubbock is your hometown — but as a candidate for the highest office in the state, we are sure you are concerned about the total populus in the state. Take time "Governor" and visit with us.

FACEING THE FACTS . . .

With Lester C. Means

The question before us at this time is "What is the cause of crime escalation in this country of ours?" Well, to answer this question we will have to go back to the home, realize that old time home methods are called foggie and obsolete by most so-called modern people of our day. However, all honest people are forced to agree that we did not have the crime and immorality in those days that is so prevalent in our country today. Oh, we know that some are going to read this and say, "Oh, it was alright, then it was not as open," well, this shows taht those people at least had enough self-respect to not be so bold and disrespectful of the rights of others, they at least had a sense of shame.

During those old days, mothers stayed home and cared for their own children as God intended and directed her to do, in those days you never ever heard of baby-sitters; mothers looked after their own children. Fathers worked and provided for their families, babies lived from their mother's breast and these same children were taught to obey their parents from the breast of their mother's up until they were twenty-one years of age. Back in those days those parents taught their children to respect older people and the rights of others, (regardless of what race). They taught their children to work for what they got, they did not hand them everything on a silver platter. Another thing, those old time parents, who are called old foggies today, did not fail to use the rod on their children whenever it was needed. And those old foggies, as they are called, had respect for the teaching of the Word of God regarding their children, but He does teach them to use the rod when needed. Certainly God does not teach parents to brutally beat their children, but He does teach them to use the rod when needed. One can beat his child with a rod without resorting to brutality. Listen to a few quotations from the book of God; "Without not correction from the child: for if thou beatest him with a rod, he shall not die. Thou shalt beat him with the rod, and shall deliver his soul from hell." Proverbs 23rd Chapter and Verses 13, 14. Do you believe the Bible? And again God says "Chasten thy son while there is hope, and let not thy soul spare for his crying." Read Proverbs Chapter 19, Verse 24.

You say that you love your child, but, do you really love him? For God says, "He that spareth his rod hateth his son: but he that loveth him chasteneth him betimes", Proverbs 13th Chapter, Verse 24.

You claim that you want your child to be smart, well, God says "The rod and reproof give wisdom: But a child left to himself bringeth his mother to shame," no wonder so many children are like they are!

Parents, let us follow the instructions given in the 6th verso of the 22nd Chapter of Proverbs, "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it." This simply suggest that parents live right before their children and by so doing their children will observe their respect for God's word and the rights of others and will be inspired to do the same. Use the rod when needed and this will help them to respect God and the rights of others. This is not being done today because parents are not using the rod and so many parents are not living right before their children and therefore, they are not training their children in the way they should go.

Mothers are leaving their children with baby-sitters or providing bottles with nipples out of which to feed the cow milk instead of the human milk that God provided. No wonder we have so many "bullheaded people" in the world today causing riots, destroying the property of others, killing each other, etc: they are brought up on cow milk instead of human milk. Among the first things that many parents buy today when expecting a baby is a baby bottle with a nipple. I am persuaded that the reason for this is because mothers do not have time to care for their babies. They just leave it to the baby sitter, instead of its mother. Is it no wonder there is so much crime in our land today. Our children are brought up on animal milk? Their parents do not have time for them, they do not live right before their children, thus depriving them of the proper training. The rod according to God's word is completely ignored and the child is left alone to do as he is pleased. They are becoming step-children of the courts of the land instead of looking to their parents for their daily bread, they are constantly looking to the State and County Welfare.

Truly, the most of our trouble today is in the breakdown of the home and neglect of the parents.

Our society continuously presents us a choice between authoritarianism and license, when what is needed is our control over both these human tendencies.

Traditional religion would tell us that man's task is primarily to do his duty—the more mindlessly, the better. Authority, obedience, subservience, and routine are exalted, because their significance purportedly transcends our understanding.

Equally traditional is the notion that "anything goes"—in religion, sex, music, dress, or even politics. The rule, according to the canons of antinomianism, is to have no rules and to be guided only by one's emotions or intuition.

As a result of the culturally-produced tension between the extremes of obligation and freedom, we pit the "establishment" against the "anti-establishment," "authority" against "love," "discipline" against "self-expression."

Reflecting this schism, Freudian psychology divides us into an id, the part of our personality containing our repressed desires; a superego, our conscience and inner censor; and an ego, the mediator between the id and the superego, as well as the integrative element in our personality.

Different people will emphasize either the id or the superego, in accordance with their temperaments. Seldom will the integrative ego be the dominant personality factor.

If a person, for example, leans to "law and order" (the superego), he will probably support the local political "establishment" (the superego) and not think that civil rights and sexual liberty (the id) are important values.

If "freedom" (the id) is a person's tendency, he will likely favor birth control, racial advancement, a graduated income tax, and even fluoridated water (the id), while scoffing at "flag-waving" and Bible reading (the superego).

If one thinks that the Rev. John Fry told the truth during the recent Senate subcommittee hearings, a person probably will found to love freedom (the id) and hate the "establishment" (the superego).

If he disapproves of Rev. Fry's work with Chicago gang youths, a person can be expected to have high regard for "law and order," old-fashioned patriotism, and traditional religion (the superego).

How a person stands on the Vietnam war is equally predictable. The "establishment" people (the superego) can be counted on to proclaim arguments for the war; and the "anti-establishment" people (the id) can, with equal fervor, tell you what's "immoral" about the Asian conflict.

The need for restraints on premarital sex, the advisability of students' taking over universities, and the acceptability of violence in achieving noble goals—these and other current issues carry with them a standard dichotomy between "authority" (the superego) and "freedom" (the id).

Even race relations have this Freudian character, with the black man and the civil-rights movement representing the liberating id, and the white man and his "establishment" standing for the repressive superego.

One is tempted to try to establish a compromise between the id and the superego, but this leaves one as much at the mercy of the destructive bipolar schism as if he simply capitulated to either extreme.

Psychologists would tell us, however, that we need not allow either the id or the superego to be our ruler. Even trying to mediate between them is not necessary, as it is our prerogative to control both the dictator and the libertine within us.

By strengthening our egos or intra-personal organization, we can become the masters of our ids and superegos, rather than their slaves.

That means we can take our stand on social questions, not on the basis of a servile allegiance to either liberalism (the id) or conservatism (the superego), but according to our own judgment of the issues (the ego).

We need not recite the liberal arguments against the Vietnam war (the id) or the conservative defenses of the conflict (the superego), but we are free to see the war issue through our own eyes (the ego).

And on the civil-rights front, we can be selective about the people and programs we support, rather than blindly assuming that everything associated with freedom (the id) must be good.

No tyrannical authority (the superego) can tell us what to do, think, or believe. Nor need we be

"It's Fair Time Again"

Perhaps I should say that the fair is about ready to pack up and leave for another 365 days, but we have a few days left to go out and have a good time as well as let our young enjoy themselves.

Please be careful as to what type of activity you become involved with during this highly emotionally time of the year. Be careful, especially with your personal belongings. By the way, don't bother what does not belong to you!

Stabbing

A Lubbock man told police that he was talking to his girl friend in the 700 block of Avenue D last week when the girl's mother entered into the conversation, and an argument erupted. Because of this bad line of communications — the man was stabbed.

According to the man, he admitted that the lady reached into her bag and came out with something sharp — a knife. He was cut on the arm. He was taken to Methodist Hospital where he was treated and released.

You guessed it, he didn't file charges . . . Boy, this man is in love. I wonder with who?

Car Burglary

One thing is for certain with this car burglary, the person involved was searching for some "Soul Sounds", and he found what he was looking for.

You see, Phillip Gant, of 2623 Hickory Avenue, reported to the Lubbock Police Department that someone entered his automobile and hit him for his tape recorder, which had on it the terrific sound of "Mr. Soul Man", James Brown.

According to Gant, the value of the tape and recorder came to the magic price of $75.90 . . . plus the good "Soul Sound."

It was learned that entry was gained by merely going through a vent window in the car.

House Burglary

George Wright, of 1312 16th Street, reported that someone unknown had entered his residence and took two class rings.

He is wondering at this time, why would someone want his class rings. According to Wright, they were valued at $60.00.

Entrance to the house was gained through the front door. You know it was rare for a person to commit such an act unless he was looking for a much better class ring.

Burglary

Arthur Simmons, of 2101 East Broadway, reported to the Lubbock Police Department that someone unknown did break into his service station.

According to Simmons, entry was gained by breaking a window. Once inside, the thief hit the cigarette machine and took an undetermined amount of money and cigarettes.

This was not good enough for who ever was involved, the yegg looked into the cash register and lifted $2.00 worth of pennies.

The damage to the window was valued at approximately $10.00.

THEFT OF BATTERY

Eddie Davis, 1905 East Baylor Avenue, reported that someone had cut the cables—battery—and removed the battery from the vehicle which he was responsible for. The vehicle belongs to the American Steel Company, 2002 Weber Drive.

THEFT

Harry Simms, 912 Avenue B, has a story to tell. You see, Mr. Simms was minding his own business. He was sleeping on the couch in Apartment Number 60, (This number is unlucky to him today), when some of his friends lifted him of $16.00.

He told police that when he went to sleep the money was in his own pocket and minding its own business, but when he awoke it was gone. By the way, the money was in a billfold, the billfold was not taken.

I'll admit Mr. Simms, it's hard to call anyone a friend these days and times. Don't you think so?

Sorry that I missed you last week, but here we are again this week checking the old scratch pad to see what has been jotted down. Well, the Tri-State Fair seems to have been quite a success this year.

We went out on Friday night, it was cold but nice in spite of the rain that came up that evening.

Well, once again it is football season and from all indications this will be one year that will not soon be forgotten. I am sure that once the world series is over, we can settle down and really enjoy some football. I predict that the Red Birds will win in a big way, anyone feel differently?

"FLOORED" BY PANELS?

New York-NAPS-most homemakers have often wished that they - or their husbands - possessed the magical ability to wave a wand and presto! - change the color, decor, and personality of a room.

You can work decorating magic - if not with "prestos," then with wood panels! They go with everything - from the brilliant accents of Modern or Early American to the subdued hues of traditional and Mediterranean decor.

Panels needn't push you into a corner. In spite of the big change they make in a room, they can be put up with little trouble. Here, from experts, are some tips that will take the toil out of paneling:

1. Use factory-finished panels from the start.

They will save you tedious finishing work and cleaning up later. Highly resistant panels, such as those made by Weyerhaeuser, shrug away scuffs and scratches, and drive off the household demons of dirt, grease, ink and alcohol. A damp cloth is all you need for cleaning.

2. Watch out for the frame-up! When paneling is applied to new walls, kiln-dried lumber is best for the wall framing. Kiln-dried lumber has had excess moisture removed at the mill, and keeps new walls straight by not shrinking and twisting after installation.

3. Get your panels in the "line-up". By observing the grain, you will get the best effect. Prop the panels against the wall, and arrange them so that the grain and shade appear continuous and blending.

4. Give panels "elbow room". When you fasten panels to the wall, remember to start in the corner first, and leave at least 1/4 inch at the top and bottom to be covered with molding strips later.

5. Grooves make the going easy! All paneling manufactured by Weyerhaeuser comes with V-grooves running down the panel faces, giving the rugged look of random-spaced planks. These grooves are spaced so that one falls every 16 inches for concealed nailing when you nail the panels into studs. Panel edges are beveled to form a full V-groove when the panels are joined.

Moldings are made for all kinds of joints - inside and outside corners, doors and windows, and the tops and bottoms of panels.

A brochure on "How to Panel" has been prepared by the Weyerhaeuser Company, and contains information on the tools needed, how to select, cut, shape, and fit panels, and how to handle the pesky problems presented by electrical outlets and light switches. Your can get the brochure by

JSC Practice In Progress

Jackson State College's football team is now in the first stage of what promises to be a grueling season. The first game is September 21, only two and a half weeks away, with the tough and rough Prairie View Panthers at Memorial Stadium.

Promptness was the word, as 83 players reported on time and in good physical condition, this could well mean the difference.

Coach Paige feels that the ball club is young, lacks ability and talent of last year's team but this group will show a balanced attack.

Injuries have been minor because up until now the gridsters have been working out without togs. Sprained ankles and sore muscles are about the only injuries at this stage.

Although the team is primarily composed of youngsters, Paige expects an all-out effort for every game. The Tigs this year will be more dedicated than before.

The quarterback position is still uncertain, with four players competing for the number one choice.

Because of the lack of talent, the '68 Tiger squad is working harder than before. With two practices a day, 9:30-11:30 a.m., and 2:30-4:30 p.m., the Tigers are getting ready.

The first real look at the squad will come on Monday, September 9, 11:00 a.m. The Sports Information Office will hold the annual "Tiger Press Day."
