"Blacks Need To Own Something," Says Leland

LPD Taking Applications To Fill Nine Positions

The Lubbock Police Department is taking applications to fill nine vacancies.

Applicants must meet a variety of requirements including citizenship and vision requirements. An applicant must have a valid driver's license not in jeopardy of suspension, have no felony convictions or be convicted of driving under the influence of drugs or alcohol. He or she must have a high school diploma or its equivalent and must be between the ages of 21 and 35.

Before admission to the Police Academy, applicants must pass a written examination and a physical ability test. Lt. David White said anyone in "reasonable shape" could pass the physical test, which includes running and obstacle course, stairway and quarter mile.

The department does not have to fulfill a minority quota, Tom Witt, city director of personnel, said. Applicants are judged solely on their scores on the tests.

Witt said more women were applying since the department dropped the height and weight qualifications and substituted an agility test.

Those admitted to the academy go through a 14 week training program, including training in first aid, boxing, judo and karate. There is also training in government structure, basic law and police procedure. Firearm proficiency is also stressed.

The starting salary for a Lubbock police officer is $901.33 per month. After the first six months—the "rookie" phase—salary is increased to $1022.67 per month.

Officers are provided medical and life insurance, have nine paid holidays, and get 15 days paid vacation per year. There is also a retirement program besides Social Security.

Application forms may be picked up at the City of Lubbock Personnel Department, room 103 at 916 Texas Ave., by July 8. All mailed applications must be postmarked no later than July 8.

Food Stamp Benefits

Households which were receiving rent or mortgage supplements from the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) between August 5, 1974 and October 8, 1975 may be entitled to increased food stamp benefits.

The State Department of Public Welfare announced today that the housing supplements paid under provisions of the Housing Act of 1937 should not have been considered as income to food stamp households during this period of time.

All households which were denied, or received a reduced level of benefits because of the application of this policy may be entitled to retroactive benefits or refunds.

Further details on this matter may be obtained from any food stamp certification office.

Speaking before more than 200 Lubbockites last Friday evening at the fourth annual Freedom Fund Banquet in the University Ballroom at Texas Tech University, State Representative George "Mickey" Leland of Houston told black people they need to own something.

"We think we own something, but we don't control nothing; we just don't own nothing," he shouted. A man with a reputation of never biting his tongue, he urged blacks to get off their sitdowns and start doing some things which will help them in life.

"We've got problems in the world, but if you (blacks) start voting, you'll make somethings happen," he said. In his remarks, he talked about how apathetic blacks are voting. "You gotta' get it together," he said. "You gotta keep on marching, keep on struggling, keep on pushing," he said.

"We've got to have some black representation at the local level," he warned. "The press all over the country is playing up the fact that we have the Andrew Young and Barbara Jordan, but we got to have some people in our community in the political arena fighting for us," he said.

Prior to his speech, the crowning of the 1977 "Miss Black Teenage Lubbock" was done by Avis Patterson, 1976 queen. She crowned her sister, Shelia Renee, who played the piano and sang "If" for her talent. Avis sang "Feelings" for the audience before the crowning.

Shelia, 14, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T.J. Patterson. She is a ninth grader at O.L. Slaton Junior High School. She was voted the "Most Outstanding Student" at E.C. Struggs last year.

Other finalist in the annual affair were Tracy Gatewood, first runner-up; Toni Johnson, second runner-up; and Karen Richardson, third runner-up.

Patterson was sponsored by the Lucky Twelve Club; Johnson sponsored by Bobby Williams

Agency; Gatewood by the Young Black Business Women Association; and Richardson by Curry's Botique.

Other participants were Ione Johnson, Miss Jamison Funeral Home; Lue Jeanne Houston, Miss American Legion; Senia Jasper, Miss YWA, Lyons Chapel Baptist Church; and Cheryl Gentry.

Remarks were given by Gene Gaines, president. He urged all blacks to get involved in the voting process. Gaines termed this fourth annual Freedom Fund Banquet a "success."

"We worked real hard for this affair," said Ms. Kate Noble, chairperson for the annual affair. "We'll have a greater one next year," she continued. "We would like to thank all the parents and patrons for allowing us this opportunity, she concluded.

State Rep. Leland was introduced by State Rep. Froy Salinas of Lubbock.

Mrs. Willie Myrtle Washington served as mistress of ceremonies of the pageant. Dr. Floyd Perry, Jr. emceed the banquet presentation.

Mrs. Edna Walker and Ms. Majorie Robinson played dinner music for the audience. Invocation was given by Rev. R.S. Stanley, pastor of the St. Matthew Baptist Church; and Rev. Roy Jones, associate pastor, Mount Gilead Baptist Church, gave the benediction.

The audience sang the well known "Lift Every Voice & Sing."

The staff of this year's pageant were Ms. Joan Y. Ervin and Ms. Billie Russell, co-chairperson; Ms. Lillian Jones, Ms. Kathy Richardson and Ms. Cassie Williams.

The choreography attie was made by Angelia Richardson, 11 daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eddie P. Richardson.

Azie T. Morton Should Be Confirmed by U.S. Senate

Mrs. Azie T. Morton, as President Jimmy Carter's appointee, would be the Nation's second black treasurer for the United States. She would, however become the first black woman to serve as director of the U.S. Mint if Treasury Secretary W. Micheal Blumentahl carries out his indicated intention of combining the two posts.

A 41 year old native of Dale, Texas and graduate of Huston-Tillotston College in Austin, we have found her to have the necessary characteristics to hold such position for our country. While in Wichita, Kansas, she was competent, well educated and respected when she was involved in the organization of the Model Cities demonstration program in 1969 and the early 1970's.

If confirmed by the U.S. Senate as director of the Mint and U.S. Treasurer, she would not be the first black to have her name on American currency. The honor goes to former Mississippi Senator B.K. Bruce, who was named Register of the U.S. Treasurer in 1881 by President James Garfield.

Anyway, regardless of who is first or second, we know sister Azie T. Morton should be confirmed by the U.S. Senate as the next director of the Mint and U.S. Treasurer. Her records speaks for itself and would be a very positive confirmation.

We are glad to be able to speak loud and clear about citizens of the black community who have made outstanding contributions to America and will continue to do so if given the opportunity. Another image builder in the black community...Azie T. Morton...

As I See It . . .

by t.j. patterson

For the first time ever, this writer saw a different side of Dr. F.L. Lovings last Saturday afternoon as he addressed the Texas Tech Project for Older Texans. Showing experience and wisdom, Dr. Lovings encouraged all senior citizens to keep on making positive contributions to our city.

In hearing him talk about the past years in Lubbock when he was recruited here by the late Dr. J.A. Chatman, it made you appreciate what had been done by blacks older than this writer. As Dr. Lovings said: "It was no easy task in talking to whites about the problems of blacks in those days," said Dr. Lovings.

The occasion last Saturday was an annual Juneteenth Celebration at the Lubbock Housing Authority Center for Senior Citizens. The impression made by Dr. Lovings will never be forgotten by those senior citizens who know him.

This writer appreciates what this man of wisdom articulated to several hundred Lubbock Citizens last Saturday. The side this writer saw of Dr. Lovings is one in which we all should see in this man who has made many contributions to our community.

It would be nice if black people in Lubbock would start owning some of the rock. As State Rep. Mickey Leland said, "We're just consumers, and don't own nothing."

With a lot of hard work, something could possibly be done in this area. Of course, nobody is going to give us anything. With a goal and plan, it could be possible to get the proper resources to make a lot of things happen in the economic area.

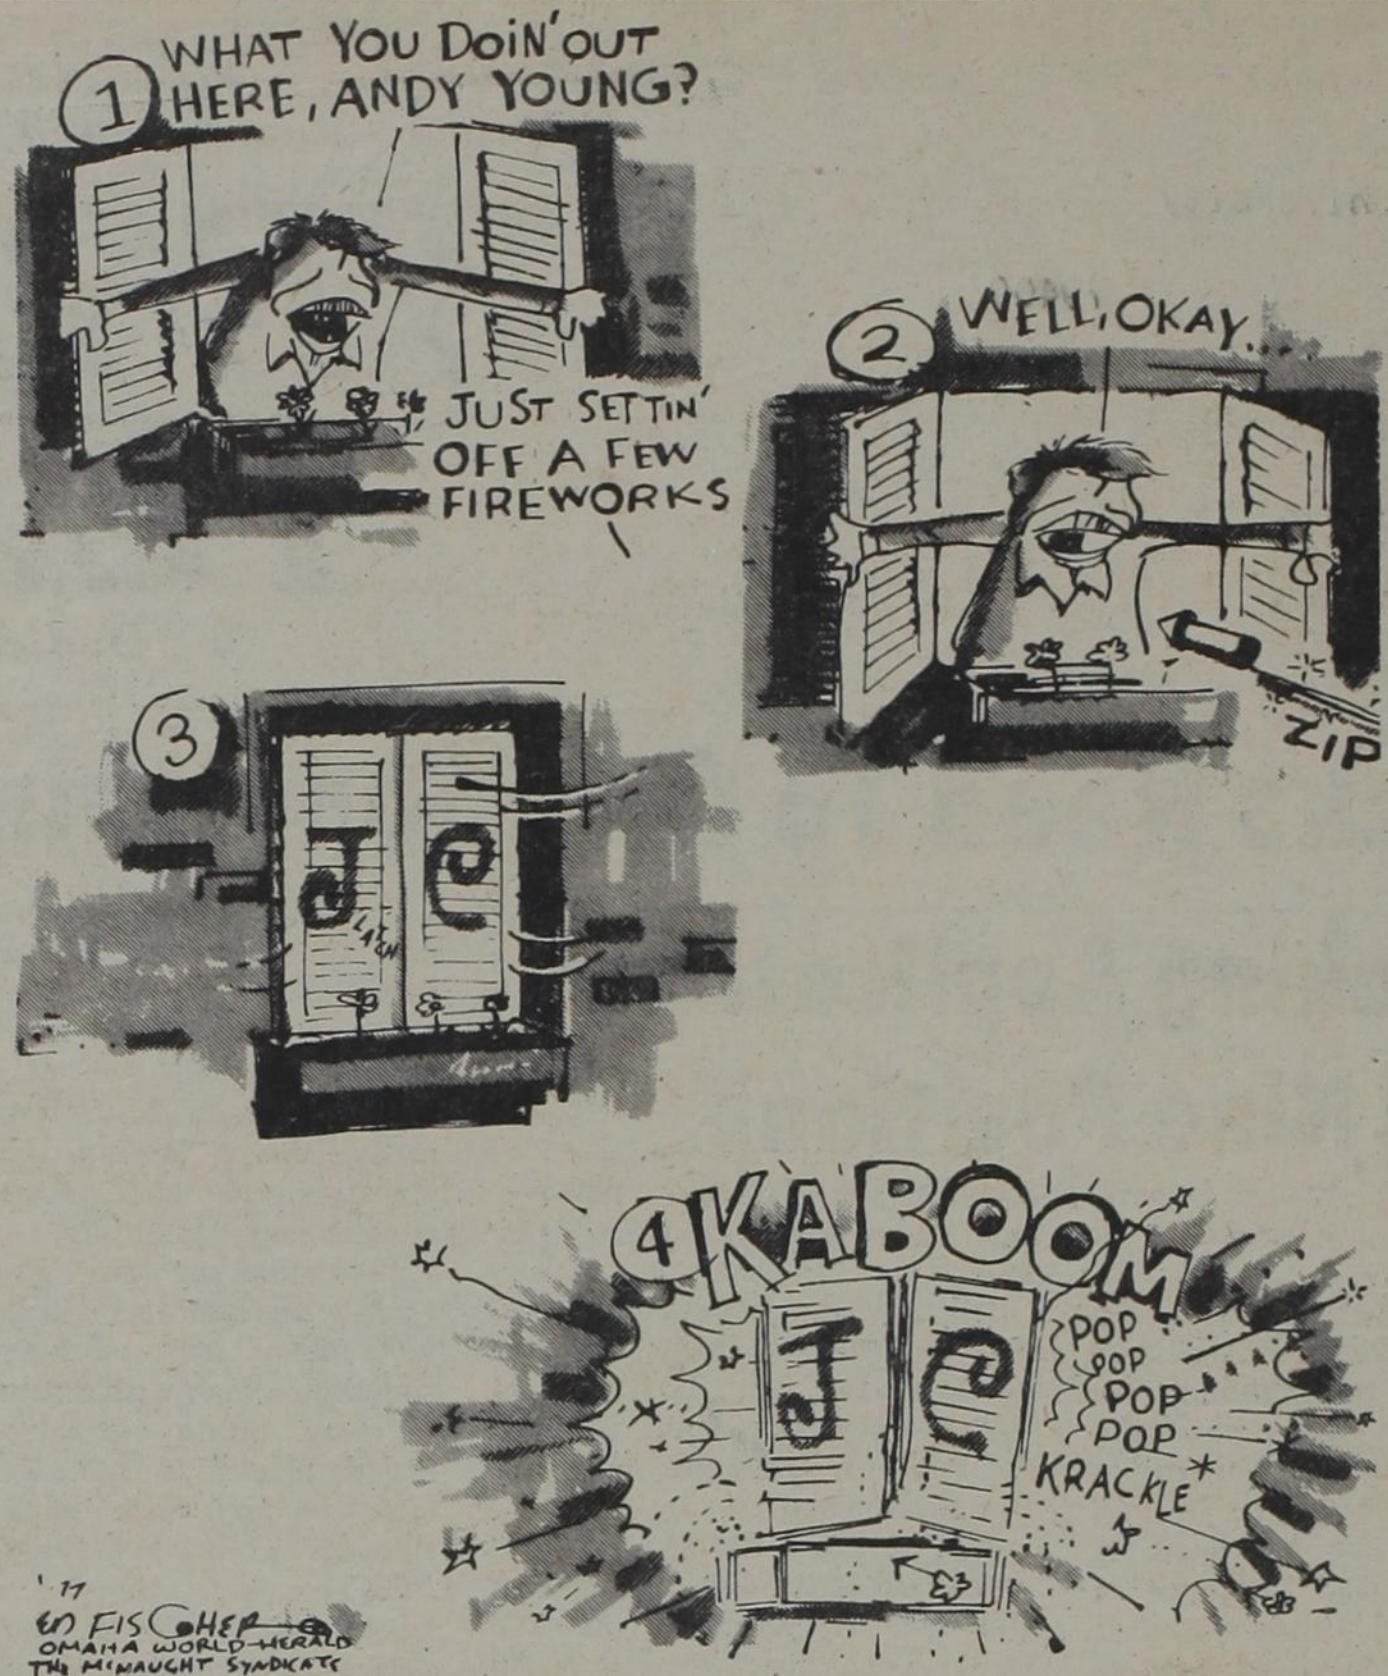

This writer still believes in the eastern part of Lubbock. It is possible to get something started in this part of the city. Enough has been said about the conditions in this area, but not enough has been said about the possibilities.

Think positive, and let's come up with a game plan which will enrich ourselves, our families and our community...it can be done.

This writer would hope that parents would pay more attention to some of the activities which our young people were in disagreement about each other. As a result, one of the members of a group was beaten by a group of young fellows after an Eastern Little League game.

Now, this is the last thing we need in our community. We don't need young people organizing themselves in gangs and fighting each other because they don't belong to the same gang. If these gangs are to continue to organize in our community, it will lead to young people hurting each other.

Any parent should know that this kind of activity can only prove to be dangerous for our young fellows. It would be wise to insist that your young people not participate in such activity.

On the other hand, if a group of young people wanted to organize and make positive contributions to our community, this would be good. But, to just meet at the ball park every week and have a down to earth fist fight, knife fight or the like, is really not worth it.

As a result of the incident at Mae Simmons Park last week, a young black brother stands the possibility of being lame the rest of his life. All of this is because he didn't belong to the gang that was in the majority that evening.

Come on parents, check out what your boy or girl is doing today. If you look real hard, you may see somethings which you know is not right. Let's help these young people...

BY KATHRYN WATERS GEST
CONGRESSIONAL QUARTERLY

WASHINGTON—The regional rift between the Sunbelt and the Snowbelt will be at issue as Congress decides between competing plans to provide healthy injections of urban aid to the nation's sick cities, most of them in the East and industrial Midwest.

Debate on the issue has prompted harsh words in both the House and the Senate from some western and southern congressmen who say their constituents are being taxed to support the revitalization of cities such as Newark and Detroit.

All of the talk, says Sen. Lloyd Bentsen (D-Texas), has produced "an alarming tendency toward aggressive regionalism" in which "one area attempts to solve its problems at the expense of another."

The problem—which has been dumped in the lap of a House-Senate conference committee—involves the formulae in House- and Senate-passed bills to dole out funds for the community development block grant program, the government's major anti-blight effort. The money can be used for an array of projects, including historic preservation, housing code enforcement and slum clearance.

Peg to Older Housing

The current program, enacted in 1974, apportions aid based on population, poverty and housing overcrowding-factors that tend to favor growing cities.

This year the House and Senate added an alternated way of figuring aid using population decline, poverty and amount of pre-1940 housing—factors more likely to reflect sick-city problems such as deteriorating housing and a declining tax base. Cities would be able to use whichever method gives them the most money.

But the Senate bill also contains a third scheme that would give more aid to cities with a higher-than-average concentration of older housing—a plan supporters say would attack the most advanced cases of urban decay.

Both bills authorize $4-billion for the program next year, compared with a funding level of $3.25-billion this year, and would increase authorizations slightly through 1980. No city would lose money under either bill if the plan were fully funded. But cities with above-average concentrations of old houses would do considerably better under the Senate plan.

HUD Opposition

The Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) opposes the Senate version because it would curb HUD's discretion in doling out funds.

The Senate plan also is not expected to go over very well

It will be interesting to see how many of the new five employees at the Lubbock County Jail will be black or brown. With the high population of blacks and browns in the jail, there should be at least three blacks and browns hired.

This writer knows there are people in Lubbock county from the black and brown communities who would be willing to work in this capacity. If they are not here, this writer would advise the County Commissioner's Court to advise Sheriff C.H. "Choc" Blanchard to travel anywhere in the state to find persons interested in such positions.

As a start, Lubbock County could advertise in this newspaper and would get a positive result from the need of the black and brown jail employees!

This writer will sit back and wait and see the outcome of who will be hired by Lubbock County. Now, don't get me wrong, this writer is not talking about playing the quota game...There is qualified blacks and browns who could make an outstanding contributions.

with House members of the committee charged with arriving at a compromise version.

The House bill weathered a lengthy and divisive floor flight in which Sunbelt congressmen tried to eliminate the alternate formula. They lost. But an aide predicted that the Senate version would be "too much for the House to stomach."

Proponents of the Senate's approach are staunch in their belief that extra aid to aging cities is not favoritism but rather an overdue recognition of the historical factors that caused their growth and subsequent decay.

"I make no bones about the fact that we are attempting to change this formula from the Sunbelt areas of new populations and new cities and turn around where it should be going now, back to areas that were the first parts of the country," said Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre (D.N.H.).

'Catch-22' Formula

Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum (D-Ohio) noted that the current formula, with its emphasis on population, has actually penalized areas where growth has slowed.

"When our cities get old and poor," he said, "a 'Catch-22' formula for federal money was inflicted on them. Just when they most needed aid, the federal government turned them away."

Sen. William Proxmire (D-Wis.), chairman of the committee that handled the bill, asserted that "anybody with eyes to see and a heart to feel, who has traveled in our cities in this country, recognizes the tremendous resurgence in the economy of the South and the West.

The law creating the block grant program said that money should be spent on programs that give the most benefit to low- and moderate-income persons. Opponents of the new approach argued that because poor people live throughout the country, increasing funds for older cities would be unfair.

'Unacceptable Inequity'

Rep. Mark W. Hannaford (D Calif.), cosponsor of the House amendment to retain the old allocation system, said the allotment of block grant funds is now about $17 per person in Los Angeles compared with $20 in Detroit. Under the new approach in the House bill, those allotments would rise next year to $19 in Los Angeles and to $42.49 in Detroit, which Hannaford described as an "absolutely unacceptable inequity."

Proponents of the new approach say Hannaford's arguments are irrelevant because the program is not intended to provide welfare or revenue sharing type aid.

Fifty-one communities in South West would gain funds under the House bill, according to HUD figures. In the Northeast and north Central states, 189 communities would do better.

Lubbock Man Proud to Be Farmer Girl Scout Camp Rio Blanco

by Frank Coats

Theodore Howard is proud of his farm—and he should be.

Howard is a Lubbock County cotton farmer, and has a farm near Slaton. He owns 24 acres and leases another 70—all growing cotton.

Howard chose cotton because it's the biggest cash crop. "Cotton is something you ain't going to hardly lose," he said. "Grain'll go down . . ."

Howard expects to get about a bale an acre from his farm, a good crop according to Horace Drisdale of the Soil and Conservation Service.

Howard, who owns Howard Body Works in Lubbock, started farming here about 5 years ago. "I kinda like farming," he said. "I always have. I wanted to see what I could raise on my own. I always raised it for somebody else—wanted to see what I could do for myself."

In the five years he's been farming, Howard said he's never had a crop he was satisfied with. "Sometimes the water will come too early, and last year, I was hailed out and had to replant."

"But I ain't gonna give up yet. This looks like a good year."

On the 70 acres of leased land, Howard is "dry landing," not using irrigation. The plants are in rows two in, one out, that is, one row not planted to preserve moisture in the soil. He will be building parallel terraces on the farm, to conserve water along the plans of the Great Plains Conservation Program.

He irrigates 18 acres of his own farm with three wells and underground pipes. He plants on each row here, because he has enough water.

Since cotton is one of the most soil-depleting crops, Howard takes steps to build the soil back up. He used barnyard manure from feed lots and cotton burrs, the remnants of the cotton left over from the gin. Both these steps will help build up organic material in the soil.

Out of three black farmers in Lubbock County, Howard is the largest operator. He's proud of his farm—and he should be.

Girl Scout Camp Rio Blanco

Rio Blanco, the Spanish name for White River—the Caprock Girl Scout Council camp for girls, is located in Yellowhouse Canyon, four miles east of Crosbyton.

Open each summer as a resident camp for girls from fourth grade through high school, Rio Blanco program provides swimming, snorkeling, hiking, backpacking in New Mexico, archery, nature crafts, bird study and a host of other leisurely activities designed for school holiday months.

Beginning June 12 and ending July 31, one and two week summer sessions are open, accommodating 100 campers each period. Cabins, tents, and covered wagons provide comfortable sleeping arrangements for 25 staff members and girls from the 18-county area.

Administrators are Sharon Washburn, director; Lavica Strother, assistant director; and Sid Sealy, RN, assisted by unit counselors. A Red Cross Certified Waterfront staff gives instruction in a full range of water safety programs. Cooks and caretaker complete the staff.

The camp is on 119 acres of land donated by the late J.R. Bridwell and his daughter, near the site on which the early day Camp Roberts was located. Cottonwood, elm, and mesquite trees shade much of the acreage. Big Sandy creek and the White River transverse the site.

Begin in 1957, the camp has been improved yearly from proceeds of the annual Caprock Council cookie sale. It includes a main lodge, modern kitchen, and dining facilities, infirmary, and craft house, in addition to special housing for kitchen personnel, camper-staff sleeping quarters and cookout shelters. Future plans include additional winterized troop camping facilities. Troops reserve the site on weekends, at no charge, throughout the winter months. Approximately 1,000 girls and leaders camp on the site each year.

Camp Rio Blanco is open to all girls regardless of race, color or national origin, is accredited by the American Camping Association and governed by Texas Law on organized camps as administered by local health departments.

Additional information may be secured from the Girl Scout Service Center, 745-2855. Dr. J.W. Kitchen is chairman of the camp committee, Caprock Girl Scout Council.

Ringling The Bell . . .

With Bob Tieuel

From a Black Point of View: Clay Smothers who does a column for the Oak Cliff Tribune called "Conscience of a Black Conservative-Clay Smothers was most active in the Wallace for president campaign for several years and was an active anti-busing speaker in New Mexico, Boston and other parts of the county where he gained popularity as the voice of the anti-busing block of boters and was nominated as vice-presidential candidate for the demo convention of 1972. He recently won a seat in the Texas state legislature after a close and heated fight and several contested court suits.

After a close and heated fight and several contested court suits. Recently he wrote: "In early January of 1977, 150 or so of black leaders decided they would pursue the idea of a Black Goals for Dallas.

These leaders decided to go including this writer, to assimilate black ideas to be put into action. Nothing positive has happened as a result of the retreat.

"In the first place, there is no place for black idea, black goals, or black approaches in 1977. This complex society demands that we purge ourselves of such provincial thinking. We have traditionally met with failure trying to segregate our ambitions...During the two days that we spent at Lake Texoma, as a gift of the government, we met, dined, danced, drank, took yacht rides and played for two days.

"A few of the black leaders almost engaged in fist fights at the beginning of the meeting. There were serious threats. We demonstrated just how divided we are by displaying traditional black behavior.

Black leaders were jockeying for positions, for recognition, for starring roles. We talked about police brutality, racism, civil rights and finally we talked about each other...All this while we should have been constructively critical of the total black movement in the City of Dallas". End of quote.

A letter from U.S. Department of the Interior, Office of the Secretary Washington, D.C.:

"Dear Bob: It is my pleasure to advise you that the community of Boley, Oklahoma already has been recognized for its contributions to black culture in the United States through its selection as a National Historic District by the National Park Service. This is the same recognition, for example, accorded the historic Vieux Carre in the New Orleans.

The honor given to Boley directly attributable to the dedicated work of the Afro-American Bicentennial Corporation and Mr. Robert DeForrest, 1420 N. Street, N.W. Washington, D.C. 20005.

Please accept my thanks for your interest in Boley and in the National Historic Landmark program. I am taking the liberty of sending a copy of this correspondence to Mr. DeForrest for any further questions you may have about Boley and its place in American history." Sincerely, Christ Carlsson, Assistant to the Secretary and Director of Public Affairs. cc: Robert DeForrest.

Another Bellringer Writes: "Dear Bob-Thank you for your recent correspondence relating to the development of a National Afro-American Park in Boley, Oklahoma.

"The National Park Service is a decentralized organization with our regional offices overseeing the administration and development of field areas. Since this is the case, therefore, I recommend that you begin your discussions on the development of your proposed park with Mr. John Cook, who is the regional director of our southwest Regional Office.

"To facilitate your initial contact with Mr. Cook, I am sending him a copy of your letter and this response.

Thank you for this opportunity to be of assistance". Sincerely yours, Frank C. Goodell, Acting Chief, Federal and State Liaison—U.S. Dept. of Interior, National Park Service, Washington, D.C. 20240.

See you from Boley Next Week!

Webworms Causing Damage

Don't let their name mislead you. Fall webworms are already invading those poplar, mulberry and willow trees around the South Plains in their annual foray. Lubbock County Extension Agent Ken Cook says control measures applied now may prevent damage and eliminate extensive control efforts later in the season.

If your trees had problems last year, you can bet you are in for more of the same this year.

Homeowners should start now, checking the foliage of trees for signs of fall webworm feeding. Particular attention should be given to the foliage of poplar, mulberry and willow trees since these are preferred by first generation webworms.

He says fall webworms overwinter in the pupal stage, and white adult moths emerge in late April or early May to lay as many as 75 eggs in a cluster on the backside of the leaves. Eggs begin hatching in about 10 days and the young worms begin feeding on the leaf surface, skeletonizing the leaves. Soon they start to spin a web around the foliage that they attack.

Since fall webworms feed together in groups, control is fairly easy. But if fall webworms are not controlled when they are small, they are very difficult to kill with insecticides in their later stages of development.

A second generation of fall webworms emerge in early fall, Cook adds. This generation produces more webworm numbers and therefore can cause complete defoliation of your favorite trees.

Easiest control on small trees is to spot young caterpillars and their associated feeding damage and webs and prune out the infested areas, he wages.

Fall webworms can also be controlled now, when they are small, with insecticides applied to the point of run-off to foliage surrounding the infested area. Recommended chemicals include chlordane, diazinon, lead arse-

Nursing Director Enjoys Work

by Janice Jarvis

There have been a few detours along the way, but once Verdie Cornelius started her career in nursing, there has been no stopping her.

"I didn't always want to be a nurse, originally I wanted to be an elementary school teacher," explained Mrs. Cornelius. When that didn't work out she tried being a beautician for a while. Then in 1965 she went to school and became an LVN.

In 1972 she completed her nursing training at Methodist Hospital and worked at a local hospital.

"My ambition then was to go into maternity, perhaps become a midwife," she explained. But when she became a staff nurse at the Lubbock State School, she realized that working with the mentally retarded was what she really wanted to do.

Within a short time she was promoted to supervisor then a unit director and finally Director of Nursing Service.

As the only black woman in Lubbock to serve as a nursing director, Mrs. Cornelius explained the job is difficult but enjoyable.

She has a staff of 175 employees working under her and she spends much of her day making schedules, planning inservice classes and checking sick children at the school. "Making rounds and visiting the nonambulatory departments is an important part of my job," she said.

Although progress is very slow when working with mentally

Outreach Breakfast Club Meets Here

The Outreach Breakfast Club met last Saturday morning in the home of Mrs. Clara Etta Brown 3616 East 15th Street. Mrs. Dorothy Hood brought the devotion from 1 Cor. 13th chapter. The devotion was spiritual and inspiring. After the devotion a delicious breakfast was served. Special guests were Ms. Odessa Mitchell, Ms. Louise Perry and Amy Perry. The next meeting will be in the home of Ms. Celia Brown 1614 Zenith Street at 9:00 a.m. Any one wishing information, call 763-2966. Mrs. Mary Ward, Chairperson.

retarded children, Mrs. Cornelius said the rewards are greater and nurses get to know the patients more intimately. "When I first started, there were patients that were semi-comatose and I've seen some of the children become ambulatory," she noted. But it has taken lots of patience, she added.

Although the work is demanding, Mrs. Cornelius finds very few disappointments with nursing. "As far as I'm concerned there's no dirty work in a job that maintains people's lives."

Perhaps the most difficult part of the job involves getting too involved. "I always work with patients empathetically, not sympathetically because you can't afford to get too involved, said Mrs. Cornelius.

In addition to managing a nursing staff she also has a fulltime career at home. "Being married and having three kids makes things a little harder," she said. "But with anything I undertake to do, I can't be satisfied to be second best," she said. That goes for being a mother as well as a nurse.

Although she said she would like to spend more time with her children, "working fills the days with satisfying adventures", something she said she needs as her children grow up.

As for her advice to anyone considering the nursing profession, Mrs. Cornelius said, "You have to make up your mind you want to do it and be aggressive to stay with it."

KELLY'S HEROES

by Joe Kelly

Reggie Jackson had the reputation for being hard to handle when he was with Oakland and then Baltimore. A change to the Yankees doesn't seem to have changed the situation.

Saturday, right there in view of the world, Jackson displayed temperament. He did what he has a reputation for doing, loafing at times. Some might call it conserving energy, but baseball players and managers don't look on it that way.

Certainly Billy Martin doesn't, and didn't. He wasted no time in sending Jackson to the bliss of an early shower and then obviously exchanged strong words. Billy may not be big, but he won't back off from anyone and he didn't with Jackson.

Cooler heads prevailed, although the sting is bound to remain. Had Elston Howard and Yogi Berra not stepped in, the world might have been treated to a better fight than is usually on tv.

The question now, of course, is what will be the next move? Rumors of dissension on the New York club have been common and this incident only points up more sharply the situation.

Jackson is supposed to have no use for Thurman Munson, the Yankee captain. And who knows how much else is going off? Martin said afterwards that he would have a talk with Jackson last year.

In Martin's mind, then, is the seed of a trade, to rid the Yankees of the big slugger and maybe bring peace to the club. Heaven knows that, with the situation as it is, the chances to the New York Club winning are remote.

Whether getting rid of Jackson would solve the problem is something else. Sometimes when you cut out a cancer you do solve the problem. With Jackson, it might not be true. It will be interesting to see what happens.

If Tom Seaver was upset about leaving the Mets, he didn't show it in his first start. He not only tossed a shutout, he also had two hits and drove in two runs.

It's entirely possible that the biggest trade in a long while could mean a pennant for Cincinnati, and in a breeze. The Reds obviously have everything it takes to be a repeat champion, not only of the National League, but also of the world.

Frankly, if I was a Met fan, my loyalty would be strained to the breaking point by J. Donald Grant, or whatever his name, chairman of the board. One wonders if the board backed Mr. Grant, or if they took the action of trading Seaver on his own.

There are, of course two sides to the matter. Tom Terrific apparently was pleased with his contract when he signed it. It wasn't until later, when other and bigger contracts were doled out then he became unhappy. That's when he demanded renegotiation.

Now, the time to renegotiate is not, literally, in the middle of the stream. You ought to wait until the season is over, or the contract comes up for renewal.

In this case Seaver didn't wait. He moaned so long and so loud that Grant finally traded him, thus creating no lack of anguish on the part of the Mets fans. And wouldn't it be funny if the Reds refused to offer Seaver a better contract?

Grant isn't through with problems. The mets aren't in first place and hardly before the dust had settled on Seaver, Grant had dealt away Dave Kingman, who hadn't signed his contract and also was unhappy. Kingman was the senior circuit's home run King.

Thus, Grant, removed the top pitcher and top long ball artist from a team that might yet make a challenge. The chances of doing that are remote now, but anything can happen in baseball.

Seattle Slew ran off with the Belmont and the Triple Crown of racing, thus putting to rest the diehards who said that Slew really wasn't much of a horse, just lucky.

Maybe, so but show me anyone who is good and I'll show you somebody who also has luck—most of the luck coming from the successful man's efforts. Slew met every challenge and remained unbeaten. He has to be a super horse anyway you look at it.

Arkansas generally is considered the odds-on pick to repeat as Southwest Conference basketball champion, but Johnny Swaim and TCU think that they might have something to say about it.

The Horned Frogs have signed eight prospects and only three are Texans. The out-of-staters come from Illinois, Ohio, Missouri and Florida. The players are four guards, two centers and two forwards. The guard stand 6-2, 6-2, 6-2, 6-1, the centers are 6-9, 6-8, and the forwards are 6-6 and 6-4.

The top three prospects, in Swaim's opinion, are 6-2 guard Jim Hund from Mascotah, Ill, 6-9 center Larry Frevent from Raytown, Mo., and 6-6 forward Steve Scales from Minteral Area Junior College Mo.

The Frogs had dissension on their club last year and not returning will be Daryl Braden, Arnold McDowell and Mike Wysong. From what Swaim says, they won't be missed.

Public Tours on Saturdays Lubbock Lake Site Excavation Continues

The prehistoric West Texas range, where the mammoth, the bison and the saber-tooth tiger roamed, was home to culture after culture—from the stone age Clovis and Folsom man to the Apache, then the Comanche Indians and finally to man of the tin can age.

It is this span of cultures that archeologists at the Lubbock Lake Site are exploring in the summer of 1977. Four different sites within the lake site area are being painstakingly excavated to provide scientific explorations at opposite ends of the time scale.

The site is recognized nationally for its unusual continuity of cultures.

Thirty-five people, 20 of them students from 10 states and one foreign country, are engaged in the research sponsored by private and public funding. They use trowels to scrape through the ages and then dental picks to lift bones and artifacts, which are the telltale signs of early life at the site.

Soil removed from the site is sifted and washed and studied for evidence of pollen, insect remains and small animal bones to help determine changes in climate and biological environment.

Principal investigator is Dr. Eileen Johnson, zooarcheologist, who has said that the Lubbock Lake Site exploration, begun accidentally in 1939, should probably continue another five or six years to give researchers a clear picture of its evolution from stone to pop bottle age.

At the four areas open at the site this year, the archeologists have found evidence of the Clovis period about 12,000 years ago, a Folsom butchering area about 10,500 years ago, a Plainview butchering site 9,800 to 10,000 years old, a late paleoindian camp probably 9,000 years old, Apache, Comanche and early pioneer life.

An early prize this year was discovery of a metacarpal from the forefoot of the extinct bear, Arctodus, to add to the early tools and bones from the saber-toothed cat, prehistoric elephant and horse, bison and mammoth.

Historians located within about 50 yards of one of the digs, the pioneer George W. Singer store, which became a landmark and focal point for settlers before 1886.

"We would like to make a determined effort as soon as possible," Johnson said, "to determine the exact location of this early store. It burned in 1886 and was rebuilt, and the evidence of its location should be available."

Indicative of the site's importance is this summer's guest list: visiting archeologists from Australia, Michigan and Colorado as well as representatives of the Texas Archaeological Society and the Smithsonian Institution.

The work is supported by the Texas Historical Commission, the National Science Foundation, the Center for Field Research of Educational Expeditions International Earthwatch and the city and county of Lubbock.

The site is open to public tours on Saturdays from 9 to 11 a.m. The only exception is the Fourth of July weekend.

Gilbert and Sullivan Return to Texas Tech Summer Theater

The delightfully zany wit of Gilbert and Sullivan is returning to the Texas Tech University campus June 29 and 30 and July 1 in the annual summer dinner theater production of "Patience" by the Department of Music.

The opera is a spoof on the aesthetic movement of the late 19th century in England during the time of Oscar Wilde and James Whistler. Gilbert's libretto pokes fun at those who attach themselves to the artist's movement without understanding the art.

Tickets for dinner and the theater are $6, and those for the show only are $2.50. They are available by calling the University Center ticket booth, 742-3610, or at Hemphill Wells, Jent's House of Music and the Harrod Music Company.

Prof. John Gillas is director of the Tech Music Theater. Prof. Kyung Wook Shin is musical director, and choreography is by Prof. Peggy Willis of the university's dance faculty.

Dinner will take place at 6:30 p.m. in the University Center ballroom. Curtain time, in the University Center Theater, is 7:45 p.m. Tickets for the theater performance only are also available.

Jana King, a graduate student in music, plays the role of the milk maid, Patience, and Tim King, also a graduate student, is cast as the poet, Grosvenor. The only other graduate student in the cast is Mark Rogers, who plays the dragoon colonel, Calverley.

Jim Toland plays the pseudo-poet, Bunthorne. Jim Green is Bunthorne's solicitor. Sara Watkins is the elderly Lady Jane. All are seniors.

Let us pray for and visit our sick and shut in members. Sisters Laura Jamison and Roxie Reed are ill in their homes. Sister Clarice Burrell recuperates in her home. Sisters Dolly Howard and Ellen Tillman are shut in in their homes.

The message for the morning services were delivered by the Pastor Rev. Joines. He spoke on "To Whom The Steward Must Give An Account." Scripture reading Roman 14:7-12. Music for the morning services was provided by the Senior Choir with Sister Anniece Hawkins at the piano. The message and music was most inspiring.

Other maidens are Kathy Heath as Lady Saphir, Candy McComb as Lady Angela and Jan Sisson as Lady Ellis.

Sheridan's Ride

By Jack Sheridan

This past Sunday came and went in a welter of heat and I am so sorry. You see, Sunday, at 3, was Gertrude Lasley's recital at the Great St. Luke's Baptist Church.

I so wanted to go. But I lacked a way to get there and by the time I could, it was too late.

You see, I have a vested interest, you might say in both Mrs. Lasley and the church, for it is from that podium, by invitation of Rev. Davis, that I spoke at ne time to you all at a regular service, by invitation to come forward, bless his dear heart, and each year I have tried to sit quietly in the back to listen to the wonderful annual "congregation of churches" concert.

But, Mrs. Lasley was something else, you see. Away back when (can it have been so long?) Gertrude Lasley was singing her heart out in town here and I was fine arts editor for the local daily paper and a member of the board of directors of the Lubbock Symphony Orchestra.

I don't remember how it started or where I first heard Gertrude Lasley sing. Probably at Greater St. Luke's Baptist Church. But, I was determined that the rest of Lubbock would hear this glorious gift from God and I went to work. I contacted the founder-conductor William A. Harrod and somehow Gertrude became my own project and, behold, she did step on that stage in the Municipal Auditorium that night before 3,000 people and she sang until my heart burst with pride.

Thanks to her talent, my doggedness, Mr. Harrod's instant recognition of a great gospel talent, the audience's overwhelming okay on my belief, Gertrude Lasley became the first person of her black background to sing with the Lubbock Symphony and receive (that which brought tears to my eyes that night) an ovation.

It all sounds a little silly now, when acceptance is more or less a way of life, growing steadily. But then...remember the great Marian Anderson was turned down by this town because of Race...Gertrude Lasley and her good husband have been guests in my apartment—not "guests", but friends! And I so wanted to be there Sunday. She may have forgotten me. But I have a taped concert by her in my jealous possession and, if I missed her by circumstance Sunday, I have only to put on my tape and Gertrude Lasley, Mrs. Lasley, Sister Lasley, has never left my living room.

My pride in her is boundless and, if she has gone away back to California, will you please clip this wordy column and send it to her? I'd like her to know my gratitude and my affection for a God-given talent and memories that are as gold as anything you could mine on earth: You see, the mine of the heart has no entrance. No shaft. Just gold intact. God bless the Gertrude Lasleys and Ethel Waters of this puny planet—they come too few and far between.

May I say, in ending these remarks, that what I have to say has nothing to do with, as my daily bus driver, a hardbitten black lady never lets me forget, what I say has nothing to do with blacks, Negroes, whites, Honkeys (as she calls me affectionately)—it's just that when God, who, regardless of color, rules our lives, He bestows his gifts to all of us. Either we have it: (as does Mrs. Lasley) or we are privileged by medium of eyes or ears to see and hear. And therein is done Our Precious Lord's work for all. Black or white, yellow or striped, if you will.

God bless Mrs. Lasley and all that she stands for. I missed her by circumstance and lack of transportation. But I was there in heart and she lives in my living room on that tape. There will be another time, another place. But the world is wide and paths cross and the next time around maybe I can tell her how very much I love her, how much she means to me-and you-and pay my proper respect. Until then, God bless her and keep her singing and God bless you, too, and keep our ears open to hear his blessing.

I had meant to review the big picture (three hours long) about circumstances during World War II which were a very close part of my life, "A Bride Too Far," the all-star long, long picture at the South Plains Mall Cinema. This is the story of the misguided Allied mess over the bridges and particularly Arnhem, in September of 1944, wherein we took a tragic 17,000 life loss. It is an all-star cast and I have no time left today to touch on it behind it is Sensurround's "Rollercoaster." "The Exorcist Part II: The Heretic," the fabulous success "Star Wars" which has already captured the public and surpassed the unsurpassable "Jaws" at the box office, "The Deep" and all the rest.

But, you see, Gertrude Lasley came first and the rest can trail away. For those of you who see the Friday edition of the West Texas Times I'll have a lot to say about "A Bridge Too Far" and "Rollercoaster," too.

And, remember, if you should see, write to, or know where she is, give Gertrude Lasley and her husband, Mr. Lasley, proof of my abiding faith and love.
