

Nixon Back for Four More Years GOP Misses Governor's Mansion

Many had predicted it, and some doubted it, but, just the same, President Richard M. Nixon defeated Sen. George McGovern by a landslide in Tuesday's election. Nixon, who had waged a low key campaign, gave McGovern the second worst defeat in political history by receiving 521 electoral votes to only 17 for McGovern.

Nixon, who only made two trips to Texas, captured the Lubbock County votes, by a better than two to one margin, keeping in the national trend.

Lubbock County voters showed their confidence in President Nixon by voting (in still incomplete returns) for him 40,434 to McGovern's 13,539.

Two other Republicans, Senator John Tower and State Senator Henry Grover of Houston, both made gains, with Tower retaining his U.S. Senate seat on the national level, and Grover almost taking the Governor's mansion away from the Democrats on the state level.

Barefoot Sanders, who ran a very good race against Tower for the Senatorial seat, received 19,550 Lubbock County votes while Tower came through in early and incomplete returns with 32,034.

Briscoe, who was expected by many to win the Governor's race easily, was still clinging to a slim lead at press time, and claiming victory, although by 8:00 a.m. Wednesday, the race was still undetermined. There was still a slim possibility at press time that for the first time since re-construction, the keys to the Governor's mansion in Austin would go to a GOP member.

The governor's race was close, primarily because of a third party candidate, Ramsey Muniz, of LaRaza Unida party, who polled better than 5% of the total vote statewide.

In the only local race, County Commissioner, Place One, incumbent Arch Lamb defeated Republican challenger Charles Townsend by a very narrow margin, and reports at press time had it that a recount might be called for.

Maurice Angley, Republican candidate for State Treasurer against incumbent Jessie James, won handily in Lubbock County, but failed in his bid statewide.

All but three of the amendments to the State Constitution carried

Three Officials Dismissed in Detroit Federal Housing Scandal

Detroit-(NBNS)-The nation's largest Federal housing scandal came to light last week with the announcement of plans to dismiss three employees of the U.S. Housing and Urban Development department here.

The announcement climaxed a three-month probe of widespread allegations of wrongdoing involving the HUD employees, 25 housing repair firms, and five management brokers.

Materials gathered by HUD investigators and Federal auditors were handed over to the U.S. Attorney for possible criminal indictments, said Detroit Area HUD Director William Whitbeck at a news conference.

Since late 1969, the Federal government has acquired thousands of Federal Housing Administration homes in foreclosures and lost millions of dollars in the process. HUD currently holds between 8,000-9,000 houses in foreclosure and another 10,000 in the process of foreclosure.

More than 20 per cent of FHA-foreclosed houses in the nation are in the Detroit area and the city has the greatest number of foreclosures in both dollar and home loss, said Whitbeck.

When the Federal program was begun, it was welcomed with great enthusiasm. However, a number of participants were unemployed and otherwise unable to pay for repairs to their homes.

These facts account for the disproportionate number of houses acquired by HUD, through foreclosures in Detroit, according to Earnest Gross of HUD's Public Affairs Office.

Gross revealed in Washington that similar cases of wrongdoing had been uncovered in Philadelphia, St. Louis and elsewhere, but "nothing of the magnitude" of the Detroit scandal has occurred.

"Procedures have been tightened considerably," said Gross indicating measures

Garland Food, Inc. Awarded Government Contract at White House Ceremony Recently

Washington—A special signing at the White House highlighted the U.S. Small Business Administration's authorization of a $2.2 million contract to Garland Food, Inc., a Black-owned firm in Dallas, Texas.

Shown here attending the signing are Robert Brown, Special Assistant to the President; Mindren Montgomery, president of the firm; and Marshall Parker, SBA's Associate Administrator for Procurement and Management Assistance.

Washington, D.C.—A special signing at the White House highlighted the U.S. Small Business Administration's authorization of a $2.2 million contract to Garland Food, Inc., a Black-owned firm in Dallas, Texas.

The contract, awarded under President Nixon's program to stimulate minority business development, was issued by the Department of Defense for canned hams. A $2.8 million contract was also announced for bacon and smoked ham.

Attending the signing were Robert Brown, Special Assistant to the President; Mindren Montgomery, president of the firm; Marshall Parker, SBA's Associate Administrator for Procurement and Management Assistance; Don Dunlap, Director of SBS's Office of Business Development; Howard Powell, Director of Small Business and Economic Utilization, Department of Defense; and Capt. Howard McPike, Deputy of DPSC.

The 8A program, so named for the section of the Small Business Act authorizing the activity, allows SBA to serve as prime contractor for federal goods and services and subcontract orders to socially or economically disadvantaged firms to give them entry into the commercial marketplace.

The program is a vehicle designed to create and upgrade minority firms so that they will graduate from 8A as successful competitors for the nation's purchasing dollars in both the private and public sectors.

At the conclusion of 1972 fiscal year, government contracts awarded to minority firms under SBA's procurement program had exceeded the target goal by 51%. During the year SBA awarded 1,706 contracts for a total of $151.6 million which more than doubled the number of contracts and contract dollars awarded in FY 1971. This brings total awards under President Nixon's Administration to more than $237 million.

Ford Foundation Earmarks $50,000,000 For 25 Black Colleges Across the Nation

New York-(NBNS)-Twenty-five black colleges have been selected by the Ford Foundation to receive approximately $50 million in scholarships and fellowships will be awarded to Black Americans, Mexican Americans, Puerto Ricans and American Indian students and faculty members during the same period.

The grants represent another change in the Foundation's attitude toward black colleges.

A year ago Ford announced the establishment of a $100 million program to be concentrated on 10 traditionally black colleges that were judged to show the most promise for future development.

Prior to last year, Ford monies had been spread over many minority institutions. Under last year's new policy of providing grants for fewer schools, Ford reasoned that the money would have more impact if it were given to fewer institutions in larger amounts.

That decision was strongly criticized by many of the nation's 51 black colleges. This criticism apparently prompted Ford to study the colleges and their potential needs more thoroughly.

"They (the Ford researchers) found more strength and more potential than our preliminary suggested, so much so that we have enlarged somewhat the number of institutions we have tentatively planned to assist," said McGeorge Bundy, president of the Foundation, in announcing the grants to 25 rather than 10 colleges.

McBundy said that the financial needs of all black colleges are "quite as serious as they were a year ago" and that other foundations are being asked to help meet these needs.

He said the Fairchild Foundation of New York has agreed to provide $2 million over five years of Virginia Virginia Union University, with Ford Foundation staff monitoring the grant.

The Ford Foundations opening grants to black colleges and universities are in three categories:

* Start-up grants were given to eight institutions to help the schools determine how they can best use the funds to improve services for their undergraduate students. These "start-up" funds range from $4 million to $8 million and went to Benedict College, Columbia, S.C.; Bishop College,

Dallas, Tex.; Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn.; Hampton Institute, Hampton, Va.; St. Augustine's College, Raleigh, N.C.; Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Ala.; Virginia Union University, Richmond, Va., and Wilberforce University, Wilberforce, Ohio.

* Atlanta University Center, a group of six institutions, was given an initial sum of $3.5 million, with the possibility of the five-year total ranging between $15 and $20 million. These funds are designed to strengthen not only the individual schools, but also the cooperative activities that are managed by the Atlanta University Center Corporation. Schools participating in the grant are Clark College, Morehouse College, Spelman College, Atlanta University and the Interdenominational Theological Center. (Morris Brown College, which also is a member of the cluster, did not participate in the grant request to the Ford Foundation.)

Twelve additional colleges and universities were given one-time grants ranging from $100,000 to $250,000 to be used as they see fit to strengthen and develop programs for undergraduate students. These schools are Bethune-Cookman College, Daytona Beach, Fla.; Bennett College, Greensboro, N.C.; Dillard University, New Orleans, La.; Huston-Tillotson College, Austin, Texas, Tex.; Johnson C. Smith University, Charlotte, N.C.; LeMoyne-College, Memphis, Tenn.; Lincoln University, Pa.; Miles College, Birmingham, Ala.; Rust College, Holly Springs, Ala.; Talladega College, Talladega, Ala.; Tougaloo College, Tougaloo, Miss., and Xavier University, New Orleans.

According to Dr. Benjamin F. Paton, officer-in-charge of minority programs in the Ford Foundation's Office of Higher Education and Research, all private black colleges were considered for inclusion in the program.

The criteria for selection, he said, included the quality of existing education programs, current and prospective enrollment, the strength of administrative leadership, responsiveness to the needs of black students, evidence of ideas for use of funds beyond "business as usual," and the capacity for attracting resources in

Blacks Spend $500 Million On Beauty Aids Annually

With the spending of $500 million a year on beauty aids with the F.W. Woolworth Co. it would appear as though more consideration should be given to advertising of the local woolworth Company facility in this media.

This figure, $500 million, was revealed in a study by the Woolworth Company. The study showed that Black people spend more than $500 million annually on personal care products, with approximately 60 to 70 per cent of these expenditures going for hair care items.

The study went on to reveal that Blacks spend three per cent of their total income on such personal care and beauty items, expenditures that are 36 per cent higher than those of whites for similar items.

These findings are most significant to Woolworth. As one of the nation's leading supporters of Black-owned manufacturing and supply firms throughout the country, this retailing chain for many years has been a major customer of Black companies involved in the cosmetic and hair care business such as Johnson Products, Supreme Beauty Products, Magnificent Natural, Soft Sheen Products and Summit Lab.

This is only one company in this country who has been quite successful in maintaining market in the Black community which has been quite beneficial.

On the local level, these products are sold by family members of the Woolworth and is contributing some of the revenues to the parent firm.

It's quite interesting to note that Blacks are playing an important role in contributing to the success of the Woolworth Company. On the other hand, its worth mention that advertisement is nil in this regard.

Not only this company, but there are many others who make a great sum of monies off the Black community and do not advertise in this media. It's time that members of the Black community realize that their buying power in the community contributes a great deal to the profits of any company. This has been shown by the Woolworth Company.

We contribute a great amount to any company and should suggest that the same type of consideration be given for our benefit. We should make it known that we are concerned about advertisement in our local media.

Not only do we buy a great quantity of cosmetics and the like, but we are consumers of foods, clothing, automobiles and many other items that are sold by retail stores in our community.

It's quite interesting to hear local business establishments tell us that they do not have the budget to advertise in the West Texas Times, yet we contribute a great deal to the profits of these companies.

We don't explain to these merchants that we want to sell them space in this weekly media, which is read more now than it was in the past, but we want to help them sell their products. The answer is no, in many cases.

Anyway, it's worth knowing that you as Black people of this community contribute a great deal to the welfare of many business establishments. Why not ask merchants who are not in this newspaper as advertisers why they don't advertise?

LETTERS AND NEWSPAPERS

Most people like to "get things off their chest," and under freedom they can do it.

That's what free speech and free press are all about. One of the best ways to get things off yours chest is to write a letter to the editor.

This time-honored way of giving one's views and ideas is an important part of our free society and free press.

All letters written to editors cannot be printed. Oftentimes space is lacking. Sometimes the words and ideas may be spiteful, abusive or even libelous. But most readers and writers have the opportunity to say what they think.

It is important that people read newspapers with understanding, think for themselves, and take responsible action when they believe it necessary, if only to get it off their chest with a letter to the editor.

SECRET SERVICE CONFETTI

By Jack Anderson

1972 Pulitzer Prize Winner for National Reporting (Copyright, 1972, by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.) Washington-Tons of confetti hit the fan when President Nixon paraded majestically through downtown Atlanta last month.

The litter poured out of office windows as the President passed by. The President was delighted, but at least one Southerner, 19-year-old bank clerk Marian Landis, was appalled.

Once the downpour had begun, Mrs. Landis tried to put a stop to a confetti operation in a building near where she works. She trooped up to the tenth floor of the William Oliver Building where she expected to find employees throwing paper snow.

Instead, she found an office suite filled with a half-dozen or more men in shirt sleeves hauling bags of confetti in front of a huge fan. The man who greeted her at the door was armed with a pistol in a shoulder holster.

"I was surprised," Mrs. Landis told us, but she was still angry enough to deliver a stinging anti-litter speech.

"When I asked him to quit, he refused," she said. "When I asked him who he was, he said he was a Secret Service agent. I could tell they weren't volunteers."

The Secret Service denies that any of its agents were in the room, but it admits that it frequently uses local law officials to monitor confetti operations along parade routes for security reasons.

But the only apparent security involved here was making sure the President was well received.

—Tragic Delays—

Disabled citizens who have been turned down for Social Security benefits are encountering huge delays in appealing their cases before government hearing examiners.

A serious shortage of hearing examiners, we have learned, has caused delays of six months to a year for thousands of citizens across the country.

Right now, there are 33,000 disabled citizens awaiting hearings and only 336 judges authorized to listen to them. That adds up to a backlog of about 100 cases for every hearing examiner. And every day, the backlog gets worse. In Cleveland alone, hearing examiners are falling behind at a rate of 35 cases a month.

In human terms, the delays can be tragic. Paula Hanley

As I See It

by T.J. Patterson

After more than a year after the slaying of a young Black high school student at Dunbar, a sixteen year old youth (who was fifteen at the time) was found guilty with murder two or murder without malice by a jury in 99th District Court. The youth received the maximum penalty of five years.

Never-the-less, the verdict and punishment is past history, but I would like to comment on the way I saw the situation.

It would appear to me as though there should have been some representation on the jury in regard to Blacks having an opportunity to play an important role—there wasn't. There was an all-white jury.

This writer learned, after a careful investigation, that in selecting a jury several steps are taken. For one, names are drawn from a jury wheel, letters mailed out to prospective jurors and they are instructed to report to the court house on a given date. These names, however, are of those persons who are qualified voters in Lubbock County, Texas.

After potential jurors arrived on Monday morning, each filled out a form and their names were shuffled and then pulled to see what names would be sent to the upcoming courts during the week. In the case of reference, the murder trial, sixty names (of whites and browns) were pulled and sent to the District Court, where only twelve were selected, with the assistance of the prosecuting attorney (in this case the District Attorney) and the defendant's attorneys.

It was quite interesting to note that approximately four Blacks were summoned to serve as potential jurors the week of the murder trial.

There has to be some way to see that each defendant, in any given case—criminal or civil—has a representative of his peer group on a jury or at least given an opportunity to serve as a potential juror. In this case, however, the defendant was a member of the majority community. On the other hand, there was no representation on the part of the youth who was killed last year.

Of course, the jury system is the only one we have to work with, but it appears as though we (citizens) should understand that it's of utmost importance to have representation of all groups when we try persons involved or victims of crimes in our community.

The jury was charged with deciding on what charge that should have been given to the person on trial. They were:

of Akron, Ohio, for example, has suffered from multiple sclerosis since 1970. She has been bedridden for at least 12 months of the last two year. A mother of two, she and her husband can't pay the mounting medical bills. She has waited six months for a hearing date and still none has been set.

In another documented case, a 35-year-old father of three became so upset over his poor health and failure to get a response from Social Security that last month he simply dropped out of sight. The man had been out of work since last January when he was forced to quit his job because he had emphysema—a chronic lung condition. His family is now almost penniless.

The Bureau of Hearings and Appeals has requested money for twice as many examiners to handle the backlog of cases. But we have learned the request has been denied.

—A Yippie Revolt—

Young radicals, dejected by their failure to whip up anti-establishment sentiment this election year, apparently have turned against three elders of the Yippie movement—Abbie Hoffman, Jerry Rubin and Ed Sanders.

Four years ago, the three Yippies led the youth demonstrations in Chicago against the system. But this year they are urging followers to work within the system and vote against Richard Nixon.

Their views are spelled out in a new book, "Vote," which they co-authored after covering the political conventions in Miami Beach last summer.

Since their return from Miami Beach last August, all three have been victims of harrassment by former followers. Here are some examples which we have carefully varified:

+Jerry Rubin's car has been vandalized—or "trashed," as the radicals put it—on two different occasions. The last time, damage was so extensive he junked it. Three days later, someone threw a rock through Rubin's front window in the middle of the night.

+Ed Sanders has had similar car trouble. His car windows were smashed, the tires were slashed and a foreign substance was poured in the gas tank. Sanders, furthermore, has been threatened with physical harm.

+Abbie Hoffman went on tour to promote the book and everywhere he went letters mysteriously preceded him. The letters, written on Yippie stationery, denounced the three co-authors as over-the-hill hippies who are trying to exploit the "movement."

There publisher, furthermore, has been inundated with hate mail. One envelope contained human waste.

The zany trio refuses to discuss who is after them. But the word is out that the "crazies"—as the young anarchists are called—now regard Abbie Hoffman, Jerry Rubin and Ed Sanders, of all people, as establishment capitalists.

Murder with Malice, Murder Without Malice and Self-Defense. The jury chose Murder without Malice.

One can't help but question the jury's decision on placing the verdict of guilty and making the charge Murder without Malice after hearing the week-long testimony of the witnesses. It would appear that it was quite evident that the subject on trial did prescribe to the fact that he went home to get a weapon (gun) to come back and kill a youth who had alledgedly cut him several hours earlier.

This writer, who has had experience as a juror, realizes that the scales of justice must be tipped in the area of greatest proof to weight any given situation. In this case, it appears as though the jury failed to realize the scale of justice did tip to show that there was malice in the mind of the young man who took the life of another. Maybe with representation of all peer groups concerned, this could not have happened.

One year and two months to date, a trial has been held and the defendant has been found guilty and the youth slain is no longer with us. This young man will no longer be with us, but let's hope that this trial will serve as a lesson for the citizens of Lubbock, as well as West Texas. It is a must that justice prevails for all, regardless of what community they reside in.

As I See It, the only way to overcome this type of situation is to have representation in Lubbock County or any given political sub-division. We've got to find a way to continue to work within the system, and, at the same time, see that everyone concerned be given an opportunity to participate in the situation.

More Blacks are becoming registered voters. This should, without any doubt, have a bearing on why there should be representation on the part of any peer group. If there is to be justice, all people must be represented.

Thought of the Week: "He who decides a case without hearing the other side, though he decide justly, cannot be considered just."

Times are changing and it is quite worth noting that the defendant's attorneys used the phrase "Colored Boy" during last week's murder trial in 99th District Court. It is quite important to refer to young people as Black and not Colored. In some cases, some will prefer to be referred to as Negro. But Colored is out of style. Anyway, we are all Colored people, for we all have various pigmentations or colors.

Sports of The Times

by Joe Kelly

One more hurdle is past, three more hurdles are left before the Texas Tech football team is over the hump. Back in 1953, Wade Walker kept telling the Raiders that they weren't over the hump yet. It's as true this year as it was then.

Rice, after the humiliation by Texas, didn't appear to pose a threat. The Owls should have been crushed by that loss. Instead, they bounced back to battle the Raiders to the final gun.

At his press conference Monday, Coach Jim Carlen alluded to the Texas victory. All too often, he declared, a team that has taken that kind of beating bounces back the next week with a super effort.

Rice did just that, which led Carlen to say that "I'm worried more about the TCU game than any we've played this year." He didn't add that TCU had just been humiliated, like Rice, but by Baylor. The situation is the same.

Carlen did say that TCU had a big, physical team, paced by a front four that just might be the best Tech had faced, including Texas.

"Davis is big, strong and quick at one tackle," Jim stated. "Steele isn't as quick, but he's strong. He just plants himself and is hard to move. Their linebackers are strong. Turveen no longer is a sophomore. He's matured. Their ends and outside men are a lot like ours."

If the Tech coach doesn't have you scared yet, wait until he talks about the backfield.

"Their offensive line is the most mature we've faced outside of Texas," he said. "Luttrell will be at one halfback. Not only is he a good runner, he also throws the running pass. Nobody else we've faced has been able to do this.

"They have three or four other backs with good speed. Only the quarterback slot is weak."

Jim then went on to think out loud. He expects TCU to go back to basic football, to return to the pure wishbone attack, to try and just muscle Tech out of the way.

"From an offensive and defensive standpoint, they will be as good as anyone we've played," he asserted sadly.

Compounding Tech's problems is the fact that the Raiders are bruised and battered. Tom Ryan may be available, but Carlen says that he does not want to play him.

Joe Barnes is beat up. "He's taken some hard, hard licks this season." Carlen also says that the squad is slowed both physically and mentally by the tough schedule without a rest.

As for the Rice game, Carlen said that injuries to Barnes and Smith hurt, because Tech had to protect Barnes. As a result, the Raiders virtually called off the attack.

"McCutchen had a super game," Carlen exclaimed. "We had to go back to just grinding it out after Barnes and Smith got hurt. Danny Willis had two key plays. One when he knocked down a pass on third and short and the other on his interception.

"Next, I'd say Quintin Robinson had a good game. And Greg Waters had that Big interception. I would say that it was neither a good game, nor a bad game," Carlen summarized. "Injuries hurt us."

Somebody asked Carlen about bowls (can't wait, can we, fellows?). "We play TCU Saturday. That's the only game I'm interested in right now," Carlen replied.

Asked about Baylor's victory over TCU, Carlen replied that TCU might have been looking ahead to Tech. Besides, he said, Baylor jumped out in front and TCU had to play catchup. Things change when that happens, he declared.

"I know this," Carlen said emphatically, "TCU played us tougher last year than any team we faced."

This has been, and is, a remarkable Tech team. Last year gave no indication of what has followed. The Raiders don't have the muscle to post a 7-1 record, and yet they have done it.

They have done outstandingly because it has been a team effort, because someone came along to pick up the tempo if any other player faltered.

Pass defense isn't what it was a year ago, but the record shows that Tech has given up only four TDs by passing—and Texas didn't score through the air, so those TDs didn't hurt.

The rushing defense has given up six touchdowns—and blanked the last two opponents. So the defense is doing something right, too.

To change the subject, fishermen might do well to consider Rita Blanca Lake about a mile south of Dalhart. The lake, which has an eight-mile shoreline, is being stocked with large mouth bass.

Last summer, 35,000 fingerline channel and blue cat were stocked in the lake by the state, while a couple of weeks ago another 5,000 channel cat were fed into the lake after purchase from a private Arkansas hatchery. Sounds worthwhile looking into.

with Bob Tieuel

To the Editor, Odessa American—Having lived, worked and now visiting in Odessa for a number of years, it came as a mild shock to me that there has arisen in Odessa divisive forces among the black and brown youth in the area of sports in some of the schools. This is most unfortunate and those guilty of sowing the seeds of division and hate among minority youth ought to be held accountable for their misdeeds.

It looks like a pattern in many sections of the Southwest in which I am privileged to travel quite often and to know what is happening in the field of race relations especially as it affects our schools.

It seems to me as one who has known of the fine relations between black and brown youth in Odessa that "outside forces" are mostly responsible for these uprisings of late, like the one at Ector. Our friends are suggesting an FBI investigation of these "militant" groups, right or left who could be instigating these corruptive influences.

Again, these same friends say that if people would leave the running of the schools to those entrusted to do so, rather than to those radicals, whether they be to the far right or to the far left, in political views, everything would move along ok for the most part with black, white and brown youth.

These same friends say that the Justice Department should stay within the range of its constituted duties and keep its nose out of the business of education. The local school boards and teachers, as well as administrators, must get sorely tired of every nit-wit who thinks he knows how the schools should run always dipping in the affairs of education.

Making bussing or how the schools should be operated a political or racial issue undercuts the authority of the courts, and, ultimately the whole governmental process.

As Vernon E. Jordan, Jr. of the National Urban League says, "The prospect is excellent that the present onslaught against bussing by Nixon and others of his philosophy, will be followed with attempts to suspend other constitutional rights of blacks, browns and other minorities.

If the right to equal educational opportunity is successfully attacked, how long will it be before the right to vote becomes a target? Rights related to housing, jobs, and access to public places will then be ripe for rollback and the country could well find itself in a system of institutional rights should be argued. The issue is one for the courts and the running of the schools to those entrusted to administer therein. It seems to us The Odessa American should make this clear to the people.

Signed, Bob Tieuel, Jr.

Bob's Note: The above letter received wide comment pro and con recently in the Midland-Odessa area. This correspondent believes that this "interference and political hay-making from outsiders is not confined to the Midland-Odessa area, but is typical in many school situations throughout the country. At the request of many bellringers from over the Southwest, we are reprinting the letter here. Would like to have further comments on same whether they be pro or con.

Editorial Quotes: "All Americans are justified in wanting law and order to prevail. . . as well as justice to prevail. The concepts are inseparable in a democratic society. Blacks are not against capital punishment per se, nor are we adverse to law and order. . . but the bug under the chip is that law and order must be maintained at all levels for all people in all places in our society and justice must go hand in hand with law and order. Warden Lewis E. Laws in his book: Twenty Thousand Years in Sing Sing, stated, 'Of the 150 men and one woman I've seen die in the electric chair. . . all of them were poor and most fiendless.' He could have added 'and black,' '80 per cent in New York (his native state) and the same pattern has existed in the past from Florida to California.'" End of quote from Black Dispatch newspaper.

"Black culture cannot survive without the black press," believes D.J. Travis, president of United Mortgage Bankers of America, Inc., speaking at a Black Press Survival Week. He said: "The black press is to journalism what jazz is to music in that they both bare the souls of black folk. In the absence of a black owned media, the black news will be like the black blues—the white man will control the black communication faucet and he will decide when it should be turned off and on."

Travis concluded: "If the black press intends to be relevant both to its readers and its advertisers, it is going to have to become known as the only vehicle that prints all the black news that is fit to print. . . Economic survival and viability of the black press is very much linked with the economic survival and viability of the black community," End of quote!

Some questions on the survey include, "Have any members of your family ever been hurt or injured while playing at Chatman Park?" "How seriously were they hurt?" "How long ago was this injury?"

A spokesman for the group, Julie Sutherland, explained, "We want to do what we can with the help of citizens of the East Lubbock community . . ."

The interest of the group came about after a tour through East Lubbock with members of the Soul Patrol.

have been taken to preclude the possibility of another such scandal.

The allegations of wrongdoing involved either double payments for repair work to FHA homes, or payment for work not done.

The HUD employees in question are expected to be dismissed under regular civil service proceedings.

The five broker firms and 25 contractors, all from Detroit, have been suspended and "prohibited from doing business with any HUD office in the United States," Whitbeck said.

in addition to Ford Foundation money.

Foundation officials were careful to point out that they do not view such financial assistance to these traditionally black colleges and universities as aiding segregation or separatism.

"America is struggling to create a pluralistic society. The program, which these 25 schools are participating in, is designed not to further segregation but to encourage a genuinely pluralistic system of higher education in which minority groups share leadership with whites," said Harold Howe II, the Foundation's vice president for education and research.

Howe recalled that last year the Ford Foundation committed itself to set aside as much as 80 per cent of its higher education funds to help minorities.

Black colleges and universities will attract about half of these funds, he said.

Mexican Americans, Indian Americans and Puerto Rican Americans will share the remainder of the funds set aside for assistance to improve higher education for minority groups.

A. Philip Randolph
In Union—Strength

A. Philip Randolph is the elder statesman of Negro labor leaders. For almost forty years he has been in the thick of the fight for improved working conditions and higher wages for all laborers. He has been particularly vigorous in his opposition to racial discrimination within the labor movement.

In 1925 Randolph organized the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, the strongest labor group among Negroes. With the Pullman car porters as a foundation, A. Philip Randolph rose to the topmost hierarchy of the labor movement to become the only Negro vice-president of the AFL-CIO. He is the founder and organizer of the Negro American Labor Council. During World War II he was the prime mover in the celebrated "March on Washington" movement which prodded the United States government into banning discrimination in the industries having government contracts. He was one of the most effective lobbyists for the establishment of a permanent fair employment practices committee.

The basic character of the man may be seen in the bitter struggle to organize porters and maids working on trains during the late twenties and early thirties. Railroad management fought Randolph and his union every step of the way. Nonetheless Randolph never compromised his principles or the goals of the Brotherhood. The union survived every onslaught of management and became a potent force in American labor generally.

A native of Crescent City, Florida, A. Philip Randolph had no specific desire to develop into a spokesman for labor and the Negro. He fancied himself a writer and, with Chandler Owens, edited the Messenger, a rather outspoken magazine of comment and opinion. He also wrote for Opportunity magazine, the Journal of the Urban League.

In addition to his writing, Randolph has gained wide acclaim with his oratory. His speeches reflect the influence of frequent reading of Shakespeare and other prose masters. Because of his vocal opposition to World War I he was imprisoned. But upon his release, he threw himself into the fight for the underdog. Still the president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, Randolph often shakes the entire house of labor with his unflinching demands that Negroes be allowed a full share of the fruits of labor and of the American economy. For many years Randolph's influence has been felt far beyond the ranks of organized labor. At the age of seventy-four, he was one of the organizers and leaders of the famous 1963 March on Washington.
