Stella Jones, Johnnie Paris, Charles Mathis and Richard White are the first black students to be enrolled at the new Texas Tech University School of Medicine. All four are freshmen and Stella and Johnnie are among the ten women admitted by the school this year.

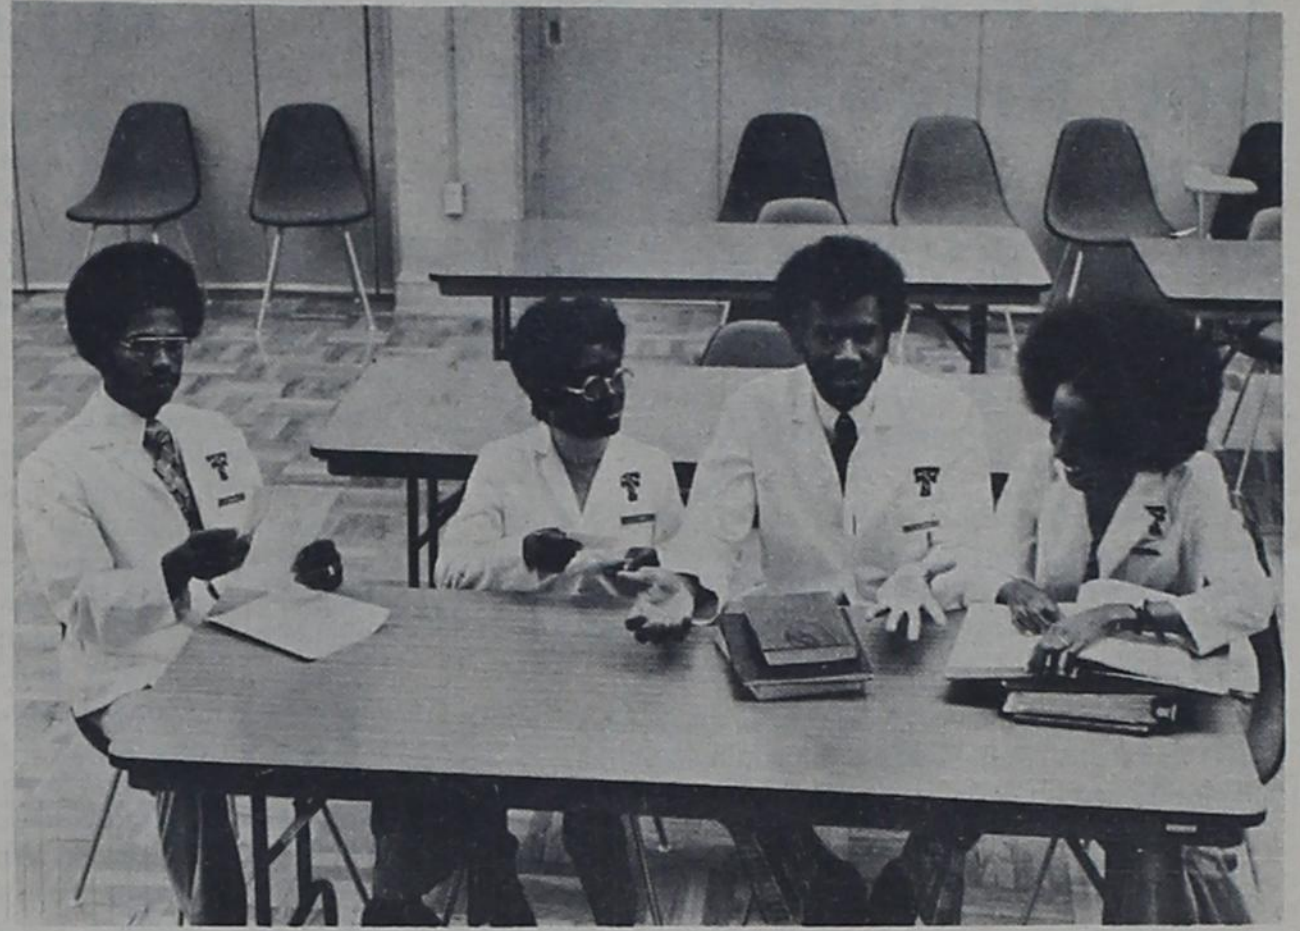

The four new students bring a variety of backgrounds and interests to their study of medicine.

Stella Jones is from Houston. She is 29, married and has two children. She has a B.S. in pharmacy from Texas Southern University and a master's degree in public health from the University of Texas School of Public Health in Houston. Prior to entering medical school she worked as a registered pharmacist for seven years.

Johnnie Paris, 20, is the youngest student in the freshman class. She is from Palestine and has a B.S. in biology from Texas Southern University.

Charles Mathis, 23, is from Tyler and earned a B.S. and M.S. in microbiology from Texas Tech. Previous to beginning medical school he worked as a microbiology research assistant at Tech and in the School of Medicine's physiology department laboratory.

Richard White, 31, is from Houston and earned his B.S. in pharmacy from Texas Southern University. Prior to entering medical school he worked for seven years as

In an exclusive interview for the West Texas Times, the four new medical students discussed their motivations for a career in medicine and their thoughts on medicine and medical practice.

Floridian Found Guilty of Slavery

Miami, Fla. (NBNS)—Joe L. Brown, a farm labor contractor, has been convicted in U.S. District Court here on two of 16 counts of peonage and involuntary servitude.

Brown was charged in March with forcing laborers to work for him for a few dollars a week and in some cases were beaten if they tried to leave, according to police testimony at the trial.

Black Bicentennial Exhibit

Washington, D.C. (NBNS)—U.S. Rep. Yvonne Brathwaite Burke of California has announced success in efforts to celebrate the nation's 200th anniversary with a Bicentennial black achievement exhibit in 1976.

Rehnquist Refuses To Stop School Integration

Washington, D.C. (NBNS)—The most conservative member of the United States Supreme Court, William H. Rehnquist, has denied a plea by the Indianapolis Board of School Commissioners to prohibit its professional planning staff from being placed at the disposal of court appointed commissioners and made to apply for all available federal school funds. On Sept. 14, Mr. Rehnquist refused to block part of a Federal District Court desegregation order that directed the school commissioners to begin making pupil transfers to achieve racial balance.

Rothschild Named New Urban Coalition Head

New York, N.Y. (NBNS)—Walter N. Rothschild Jr., a retired businessman who served on the McKay Commission which investigated the Attica New York prison rebellion, has been named the new chairman of the National Urban Coalition.

Rothschild, a former president of Abraham and Straus who left the corporation to become involved in social issues, replaces Sol M. Linowitz, who is rumored to be in line for appointment as chairman of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights.

The 53-year-old Rothschild has been chairman of the New York Urban Coalition for the past three years. He is the coalition of business, labor and minority groups third chairman, succeeding Linowitz and John W. Garener, a former Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare and now chairman of Common Cause, a citizen's lobbying organization.

NAACP Meeting Ends On Warning From Percy Sutton

Congressional Black Caucus Fights End to Democratic Quota System of Selection

Washington — (NBNS) — The Congressional Black Caucus has come out squarely in favor of the so-called "quota" system for selecting delegates to national conventions and challenged party chairman Robert Strauss who wants to get rid of them.

Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, chairman of the 16 Democratic group of members of the House of Representatives, said it was "imperative that black people not relinquish gains" that were made under party reforms put into effect in 1972.

"We could not afford as minority citizens to revert back to the guidelines of 1968," he said.

The statement to the party's reform commission made clear the lines of battle, as party liberals and the National Women's Political Caucus joined the Caucus in lining up against a change.

Strauss, however, representing the divisive factions that elected him chairman, made it clear he was firmly opposed to a quota system. He said the rules "should not seek to pre-determine the percentages of this participation."

Under the party's convention guidelines, states were required to take "affirmative steps" in making sure that racial minorities, women and young people were represented in "reasonable relation" to their number in the state population. The interpretation of that guideline became the quota system.

At the same time, the non-partisan Joint Center for Political Studies disclosed that a poll of black delegates to the '72 Democratic convention, considered by most as the most representative convention in the nation's history, by "a commanding majority" opposed changing the guidelines "which opened up that convention to minority members in unprecedented numbers."

The reform commission chairperson, Ms. Barbara Mikulski, a Baltimore councilwoman, has taken no position on the revision of the guidelines but she said the other day that a "myth is being created that the reforms in the party rules penalized regulars and aided insurgents."

"The real problem is that the people who were used to controlling the convention found they could not control it. So they made Sen. George McGovern the scapegoat," she added.

McGovern himself has suggested changes be made in the guideline relating to minorities, women and youth. He said that guideline was incorrectly interpreted to mean quotas were required, and he maintained that the language should be changed to make it clear this was not the intent.

Senators Hubert Humphrey and Henry Jackson are also demanding similar changes in the guidelines. Jackson is expected to be a strong contender for the 1976 Presidential nomination.

EEOC Undercut in Job Discrimination Field

Washington, D.C. (NBNS)—Major government departments are undercutting the Federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission's efforts to end job discrimination in private industry.

Three large corporations cited by EEOC for discriminatory employment practices have been given clean bills of health on their job policies by the Department of Labor and the Department of Defense.

Labor and Defense have enormous clout in the fight against discrimination because Labor under the law polices government contracts and Defense is, of course, the largest dispenser of government contracts.

EEOC recently notified the General Electric Company, General Motors and the Ford Motor Company that they were being investigated on charges of job discrimination. All three companies, however, have been found by the Defense Department to have acceptable "affirmative action plans" to assure equality of opportunity for minorities and women.

The Labor Department, through its Office of Contract Compliance, has reviewed the Defense Department reports and accepted its contention that the three corporations are working to assure minorities and women equal opportunity and equal pay with white male workers.

In only one major instance has the government moved against a giant of American industry on job discrimination. In that case, the government won a big settlement in back wages for blacks and women who had been forced by American Telephone and Telegraph Company to work for lower pay than white men.

However, acknowledged a Labor Department official, the government would not have moved "if the NAACP and women's groups had not threatened lawsuits."

The estimated 250 delegates attending the 37th annual session of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People's (NAACP) last week at the Red Raider Inn in Lubbock heard Percy Sutton, president of the Borough of Manhattan in New York City, warn that the NAACP must change its tactics.

"We are all going to have to develop tactics if we are going to survive. We have to deal with the issues at hand," he said.

A native of San Antonio, Texas, he told the group attending the Walter White Memorial Luncheon—in honor of White who was one of the original founders of the NAACP—"politics is very important to all of you. I learned this as a small boy in San Antonio when a bear could swim in the park there and we (blacks) couldn't even go see the bear swim. We could, however, go see the bear on June 19th. This made me think about politics and how it affects our lives."

"Don't Be Fooled"

Sutton, who has defended Malcolm X, SCLC, CORE and other minority organizations, said "Let us not be fooled that we are doing well, for only a few of us (blacks) are swimming in the main stream of life. The problem is when we forget where the bank of that river is."

Other speakers appearing at the session were Dr. G.D. Flemmings, a national board member of directors of the NAACP and president of the Tarrant County unit; and Gloster B. Current, director of branches and field administrator of the national organization. Several Texas Tech professors, Dr. Hazel Taylor and Prof. Emory Davis, appeared on several panels.

Flemmings, who has been involved in efforts of the NAACP for 37 years, has been a leader in the lengthy court battle to insure integration of Fort Worth public schools. "All grades except first are currently integrated in Fort Worth this year for the first time," says Flemmings.

In his speech on Saturday evening, Flemmings admonished delegates not to become complacent because of past successes. "Negroes don't win. You go to sleep and wake up, and it's another battle all over," he told the group.

This was the first time an annual session had been held in West Texas. Dr. F.L. Lovings, local president, expressed his appreciation for those who helped make this annual session a success. On the other hand, Prof. Emory Davis of Texas Tech said: "More residents of Lubbock should have taken advantage of the nationally known speakers which were in the city for the convention."

Is Complacency Our Biggest Killer?

Mayor Morris "Moe" Turner took an opportune time to let black people of Texas, who were in attendance at the 37th annual session of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) last week in Lubbock, know complacency is "our (blacks) biggest killer."

The mayor said, and he was right, "I think we ought to have an expansion of the city council of Lubbock. I blame you (blacks) for not getting involved to see that this becomes a reality."

He went on to encourage all blacks of Lubbock as well as those who were from other parts of the state to "examine yourself and see if you are complacent." We must agree with what the mayor was trying to do. We must look at ourselves and see if we are really complacent.

This is the second time, in less than six months, the mayor of Lubbock has challenged black people of Lubbock to get involved in the political arena of this community and quit being "satisfied with the way things are." The last time he challenged the black community was this summer at a Baptist meeting at New Hope Baptist Church. At that time, as well as last week, he cut hard with a sharp razor.

It's true, no one from the black community—with exception to editorials written on the expansion of the city council in the West Texas Times—has come forward to get this thing moving. A Charter Commission recommended this become a reality last year. Candidates even campaigned on the issue of expanding the city council. Aside from the mayor, no other member of the city council has commented or worked in this regard.

Of course, Mayor Turner is a young politician who is looking for higher ground in the political arena. We must consider this, too, but he told it like it really was. As black people in Lubbock we are going to have to get our thing together and erase this complacency from our minds. We are going to have to re-program ourselves so we can deal with the present situation with new tactics.

You know, Percy Sutton said something very true last Saturday afternoon when he said "politics effect us daily". This is true. When we were born, our birth certificate was signed by someone appointed to office by a politician. When we die, our death certificate will be signed by someone appointed by a politician. We are going to have to realize we must involve ourselves with the political aspects of our community.

Since no one has come forward from the black community as the mayor has stated, why don't some concerned group approach the City Council and start some proceedings on making this thing a reality. If enough involvement is seen from the black community, plus the support of the Mexican-American community and those poor whites who are left out of the main stream of life in Lubbock, perhaps the expansion question could be placed on the ballot this spring.

We're just going to have to quit being complacent. We're going to have to believe in one another more. Those old tactics we've used in the past will have to be replaced as soon as possible.

Many of us, however, are tired of meeting long hours and ending up with nothing. There has to be a way in which we can go to City Hall in large numbers and turn the tables on this expansion issue. If our ministers and pastors would get involved from the pulpit and push this needed effort, it would enhance our chances of getting something done. If our ministers and pastors would put as much energy on our lack of representation as they spend on anniversaries something would be done. Not only the minister or pastor, but members of the various churches who see that their pastor of minister receive their goal in raising money for their benefit.

Is "Complacency our biggest killer" in the black community in Lubbock? We would say yes and this killer needs to be arrested as soon as possible. All of this can be done if we throw away our old hang-ups and work together for the betterment of Lubbock.

JACK ANDERSON'S WEEKLY SPECIAL

MORE TROUBLE FOR COP

by Jack Anderson

(Copyright, 1973, by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

Washington—A secret political survey has brought more bad news for the embattled Republicans. The survey, conducted for the Republican National Committee, shows that the Republicans are in serious trouble with the voters more over pocketbook issues than the Watergate scandal. The voters, according to the secret survey, blame the Republicans for the cost-price squeeze.

The consumers hold President Nixon chiefly responsible for soaring prices. The workers accuse him of favoring bankers and businessmen over the common wage earners. Not even the farmers are pleased with the President's management of the economy, although farm prices have been shooting up and most farmers are again prospering.

The survey shows that the farmers believe their price rise was late in coming and merely made up for earlier price discrimination against farm products. They are also critical of his handling of the Soviet wheat deal, which they believe benefited the big grain dealers rather than the farmers.

What the survey shows, in short, is that almost all segments of society are disgruntled over the erratic economy. President Nixon has called upon the nation to stop wallowing in Watergate and to concentrate on more important problems. Judging by the results of the secret survey, the President may be better off letting the public wallow in Watergate.

Giving Russians the Boot: The Russians may be kicked out of another Arab country. Intelligence reports suggest that Syria may follow the example of Egypt and order all Soviet military advisers to leave the country.

The Syrians are annoyed because the Soviet technicians won't man air defense missiles against Israeli planes. This has forced the Syrians to go all the way to Hanoi to seek qualified people to operate the sophisticated Soviet equipment.

The Syrians were also dismayed when the Israelis engaged their Soviet-built jets over the Mediterranean and shot down 13 of them. The Syrians blamed the loss on inferior Soviet equipment.

These problems led to a nasty argument, according to the intelligence reports, between Syrian Foreign Minister Abdel Khaddam and Soviet Ambassador Nouredine Mohiedinov. The angry Foreign responded by slapping strict travel restrictions on all Soviet personnel inside Syria.

Meanwhile, intelligence reports claim that Arab

The 37th Annual Session of the State Convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) is over. The Lubbock unit hosted this annual affair. Some good things were said by speakers appearing on the various programs.

One of the nationally known speakers appearing on the program, Percy Sutton, said some good things which the members of the local unit and black people of West Texas should take note. He advised all NAACP'ers to change their action in overcoming the many problems which are confronting us as a minority group. He said, "We've got to learn to deal with our people different today. Many of us think we're making it, but we're not".

I can appreciate his concern about the black man being involved in politics in our community. The president of Burrough in Manhattan, New York—who is up for reelection this fall—said "politics is very important to all of us. I learned this in San Antonio, Texas when I was a youth. A bear could swim in the river in the park and blacks were not allowed to go to the park. We could, however, go to the park on June 19th and see the bear. Since that time, I decided to get involved in politics", he continued.

It's true, Percy Sutton is a giant of a man. He added something to the annual convention which should help those attending the convention. Although some of those attending the convention in the Hub City will forget what he said, it's a must that we keep the political issue at hand and not be frightened off a course which determines so much for all of us.

There should have been more blacks from the Lubbock community attending this convention, but there wasn't. It's also a pity that the ministers and pastors of our community didn't encourage their congregations to get involved in this type of an effort. Regardless of the reasons why we didn't attend, we should do something different in the future to overcome this type of attitude toward programs which are geared to help all of us.

This writer didn't attend all of the sessions, but the ones I attended, I didn't observe many of our pastors and ministers of the Lubbock community being present. Since some of you were not there, I would like to share something with you which Brother Sutton passed on to me. "Let the hurt come and hear, but don't let it show." If you disagree with what is happening, find a way to make things better. In Lubbock and West Texas, this is needed. We have all got to get on the same track and work together and make something happen.

As I See It, more of us could attend the home football games of Dunbar and Estacado High Schools. We should show our young people that we are behing them 100%. To communist leaders, loyal to Moscow, have been holding secret meetings on the Syrian crisis. They fully expect Syria to throw out their Russian friends.

From Nixon With Love: We have been investigating the strange business dealings of President Nixon's brother, Donald.

One bizarre case involves Donald's visit to the Dominican Republic in October, 1969. He and Dominican President Joaquin Balaguer talked about what Donald could do for the Dominican Republic and what the Dominicans could do for Donald.

The irrepressible Donald and his party were given the red carpet treatment. They took over an entire floor of a Santo Domingo hotel, and Balaguer posted 30 armed guards in the hotel to protect them.

Then there was a sit-down dinner at the presidential palace for 600, including the diplomatic corps and the military brass, with all the guests standing in line to shake hands with Donald.

The high social point of the visit, however, came in Balaguer's office. Businessman John Meier brought a fancy wrapped gift for Balaguer. When Donald saw it, he insisted he present it.

"This is from my brother and myself," said Donald Nixon. Then Balaguer opened the box. Inside was a bust of President John F. Kennedy.

Balaguer was delighted, but Donald wasn't.

High Cost of Justice: Our legal system is based on the premise that all defendants are presumed innocent until convicted in court. They also are entitled to the best possible defense in court.

Today's economics, however, are making this an impossibility for many Americans. The rich can hire expensive lawyers, and the poor have court-appointed attorneys. But most Americans simply can't afford the high cost of fighting the government in court.

There is no lid on the amount of money the government can spend when it sets out to prosecute. But defendants, who may be entirely innocent, have a hard time scraping together cash needed to keep out of jail. The Berrigan Brothers and Daniel Ellsberg, for instance, couldn't have fought the charges against them without nationwide fund-raising.

Columnist William Buckley, an old friend of Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt, is behind a defense fund to pay Hunt's lawyers what the secret Watergate slush fund didn't cover.

Now Vice President Agnew is having to go to the public to raise enough money to defend himself. Otherwise, his legal fees, according to some estimates, could bankrupt him.

These are the arguments some congressmen will be making when they begin fighting for a national legal insurance program to assure every citizen adequate legal protection against government accusations.

Court actions were never intended to drive citizens to financial ruin.

do this, however, we must be in the stands rooting for our favorite team. At least we can show our concern and do something for the young people.

The Booker T. Washington, Post 808, American Legion and the Ladies Auxiliary did something good last week when they advertised the game between Dunbar and Colorado City. Not only this organization, but there are ten businesses in our community who have been advertising for the past several weeks in this newspaper to support Estacado and Dunbar.

I hope that there are other organizations and businesses who would like to do the same thing in helping our young people. They need our support and our encouragement. If we'll do this, we'll be surprised at the pleasant conditions we'll create for our young people. Why not go out to the next home game of Dunbar and Estacado. Let them see you there. They need our support. If we'll help them at the game, I'm sure we'll be helping them in their scholastical matter and they'll become stronger young people.

Go out this week and help our young people.

It finally happened and I am sure we all appreciated what happened last week. The City of Lubbock finally cut the weeds on our overpass. This is good and we hope they will stay cut. Doesn't the overpass look better with those six feet weeds gone? Hats off to the city of Lubbock.

I learned last week that the Dallas office of the Department of Housing and Urban Development has given the Lubbock Housing Authority Board 30 days to furnish them with a reply indicating actions taken or proposed with respect to each of HUD's suggestions or recommendations made concerning the inspection last month.

This inspection was made by four men of the Dallas office. The report was complex and should help our local situation in public housing. It also indicates that more money will be needed to deal with the many problems in Lubbock.

I hope the Lubbock Housing Authority chairman, Jimmy Sexton, understood the report. I hope he also understood that the report didn't refer to any of the tenants as not being normal as he did in a recent story in the other newspaper.

The fifteen page report says some of the same things the West Texas Times has been saying for years. As I See It, it's time for something to be done about it.

I might mention here that the president of the Dunbar Alumni Association, Charles E. Brown, has asked me to inform all Association members, and other graduates of Dunbar that a meeting will be held at E.C. Struggs Junior High School Friday, tomorrow, October 12th.

Purpose of the meeting will be to confirm plans for the homecoming activities which are scheduled at Dunbar this year on October 19th—next week. Be on time and bring someone along to join the association.

The Thick Of Things

"The mills of the gods grind slowly, but they grind exceeding fine."

So goes the saying. The mills of the more "god-like" decision-makers of earth, courts and congresses, emulate that slowness, but that's as far as it goes. They are human institutions and imperfect, as we are often reminded by events.

Meanwhile there is nothing god-like about a newspaper.

Its presses don't grind at all—they whirr exceedingly fast.

As an imperfect human institution that is also always in a hurry, we are imperfect indeed.

Wisely, the function we serve does not require perfection. It requires only that there be an open marketplace for ideas and claims, so that the truth can "emerge triumphant" eventually.

Ours is a helter-skelter kind of service that is unique. The newspaper is the supermarket of the mass media. You can browse among the departments of your choice, examine the labels we call headlines, and select for yourself the items you care about.

The reporting style we use offers you still another choice. You can have as much of our food-for-thought as you want. You not only can stop with the headlines, you can quit after the lead facts or delve deeper if it suits you.

No other technique for gathering and laying out news and comment gives you this range of freedom of choice and a system of "labels" to make your choice most effective whenever you choose to exercise it.

In spite of the fact that we are always dealing with events that are bird-on-the-wing and can't "stop time" to do our thing as the courts, congress, researchers, and academicians so often do, the record shows that American newspapers are scarcely more error-prone in the long run than those other human institutions.

Yet our greatest virtue is that we do not pretend to be carving tablets of stone as they often do.

The daily newspaper, thus, with all its sins is a unique and invaluable institution and we are proud of the business we are in.

National Newspaper Week is a fitting tribute to the press, but the newspaper comes out every day, and in this on-going service every day is newspaper day in a practical way.

Our free and varied press may not give society "final solutions" to its problems, but it will always keep readers in the thick of things and able to cope.

We shall strive to keep meeting that basic obligation.

Burglary Have Field Day In East Lubbock

Last week, burglars apparently had a field day as they ran rampant in several homes in East Lubbock. This column would like to advise you to be very careful with securing your home before going to and from your destination. Don't make things too easy for those persons who will take advantage of your properties while you are away. Here are a few of the house burglaries in our community this week.

House Burglary

Someone unknown broke into the home of Ruben Loggins, 2308 Globe Avenue, one day last week while he was gone. His mother, who lives across the alley from him, reported that she saw a man hiding behind a bedroom curtain.

She told police that she yelled at the man and he ducked back behind the curtain. By the time police came, he had gotten away.

An officer found the front door open. There were no pry marks on the front door. Entry was apparently gained through a window. The bedroom was completely ransacked.

Approximately $5 worth of damage was done to the window.

House Burglary

Faye Walton, 1506 East 15th Street, reported to Lubbock police that persons unknown did break into her house by going through a bedroom window while she was away.

There was approximately $20 worth of damage done to her bedroom window.

Taken from the house was a television set and 8 track player. They were valued at approximately $289. There were no suspects to the burglary.

House Burglary

George B. Coleman, 151 East Amherst Avenue, reported to Lubbock police that someone broke into his house and took a portable television set and watch while he was away one day last week. The items were valued at $71.00.

At this report, entry is unknown. After a careful check on the residence, it was learned that all the windows were closed and locked.

House Burglary

In another house burglary, Helen Hill, 2005 East 29th Street, reported to the Lubbock Police that someone unknown broke into her house and took her AM/FM radio, tape player and a watch. These items were valued at $349. Entry was gained by removing a screen and prying open a window.

Vandalism

Wilma Berry, 406 Hub Homes, reported to Lubbock police that someone unknown threw a rock through her bedroom window one night last week.

Texas Tech Boasts . . .

Johnnie: I wanted to get into a field where I can be involved with people and help them. Also, having seen a lot of sickness in my family and relatives, I've always had, since junior high, an interest in science. Medicine is the best way I can help people.

Charles: My sister died of leukemia and, as a result of that, I became interested in science. Also, I was motivated by several good science teachers as well as my father. I had been considering medicine as a career for a long time; ever since about elementary school.

Stella: I've always wanted to be a doctor. I wouldn't have minded staying a pharmacist but I wanted patient contact and I worked at public hospitals where you just don't get that. I think, more than anything, though, in later years my motivation has come from working with black youth. I think black youth needs another image to look up to and I think that, in order for blacks to be heard, we're going to have to have people in positions of responsibility. That's a real good reason.

Richard: My interest in medicine as a career grew out of what I saw in my work as a pharmacist. As a pharmacist, people would come from the doctor's office and asked me what they were supposed to do. I often had to call doctors on the phone to ask questions for these people. I became interested in medicine as a way of helping these people get better care.

Q: Now, a question for the ladies. Do you feel there is any discrimination against women, especially black women, in medicine?

Stella: Even when I finished college in 1965 the attitude was more against black women in medicine than it is now. And, then, there were other things I wanted to do. I feel I'm more mature now and can do a better job. The situation now is better for women in medicine generally, not just black women.

It seems as if the Government consists of three unequal branches: the executive, the judicial and the investigative.
-Post-Dispatch, St. Louis-

Johnnie: I don't think there will be any problems in practicing medicine, because I'll still be dealing with people that I've dealt with all my life.

Q: Are you interested in a career in any particular field of medicine?

Stella: If I don't change my mind it will be either family practice or, with my master's in public health, there might be a possibility that I would go into community medicine.

Charles: Since my initial motivation I've been interested in various diseases of the blood and cancer, so possibly I might go into some sort of cancer chemotherapy. I would like to do some general practice but I would also like to do research.

Richard: Right now I don't know what I'm going to be good at or what I'm going to like but at the present time I want to be a family practitioner.

Johnnie: I want to maybe do a little general practice and then I might specialize in a particular field. I also want to teach. I'd like to be able to teach and practice at the same time.

Q: As a practicing physician, would you prefer to concentrate on treating black patients and do you think that black doctors need to treat black patients to insure they get proper health care?

Johnnie: I've thought about it but I don't have a preference for any type of people to treat. I would be willing to treat anybody. But I do think doctors need to change their image. Some doctors I've gone to see, you're in and out of the office and the nurse hands you a prescription and you don't really know what happened to you or what you're supposed to do. There is the other kind of doctor, too, who explains everything perfectly. That's the kind of doctor I want to be. I want to make my patients understand because I know how it feels leaving the office knowing nothing.

Charles: I wouldn't discriminate in my practice as far as treating blacks or whites or any other group. Still, I think it's probably true that black doctors can relate to black patients, and maybe even to some other ethnic groups, better than most white doctors.

Stella: I don't have any preference as to where I would practice as a family physician. When I was being interviewed as an applicant here, the interviewer asked if I would be willing to practice in a white community. I think the answer to that is just the reverse of what he asked me. That is, would that white community accept me? I wouldn't mind. But right now I would rather go where black doctors are needed. The black community. The idea that black doctors are the only source of black people getting adequate medical care is not necessarily so. I feel there are white doctors who are out there to do a good job, too. But I think because of the social makeup of America in general they are not able to relate as adequately as, say, a black to a black.

Richard: There is a problem in health care for blacks in the environment of the ghetto because there are too few doctors practicing in the ghetto. Most doctors who come out of school would not consider working in the ghetto. When you narrow it down, maybe only five or ten per cent of those who finish school will even consider going down there with the people, on the ground. And half of them aren't down there for the right reasons. So you've got a lot of sick people and nobody to help them. I've worked in a large city where they have ghettos. You've got to relate to people. You've got to talk to them personally. That's where I would like to practice, right down on the ground.

Q: Why did you come to Texas Tech for your medical education?

Johnnie: The school is new and I liked a lot of the people I met when I came here to interview. They were so friendly. It was the most congenial atmosphere I had been in.

Richard: Well, actually, Tech chose me but if I had been making a choice I don't think I could have picked a better school.

Charles: I had worked with the physiology department and one thing I noticed was the tremendous amount of enthusiasm on the faculty here that was being channeled in to the students. That is the type of atmosphere I like to work in. There is an extreme amount of motivation here and I felt this was the place for me.

Stella: I felt the atmosphere of the school was such that I could study here. Tuition was another factor because I have a family. And Texas Tech is not the run of the mill white collar school. You know, the professors in their stiff white shirts on one side of the table and the students on the other. You're sort of able to relate to the professors here. I like the way the school is set up with the tutorial program and the small classes.

Q: What's it like being a freshman medical student? Is it tough?

Stella: Being a freshman medical student is trying. Any little thing at the end of a day's study is fun. When you get to be a medical student you really realize what fun is. It doesn't have to be some big thing, just any little thing can become fun. You learn to be human again.

NROTC Scholarships Need Black Applicants

Washington, D.C.—Black High School graduates who want to further their education with a scholarship leading toward a career in the U.S. Navy or Marine Corps still have a chance.

Between now and November 1, 1973, applications for the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps (NROTC) Navy-Marine Scholarship program are still being accepted.

Students who score well on the college board examination and are selected for the program will receive benefits which include a U.S. Navy-paid tuition, educational fees, textbooks, uniforms to wear, and a $100 monthly living allowance for a maximum of 40 months during college years.

Selected applicants are enlisted in the U.S. Naval Reserve and appointed midshipmen upon enrollment in college. During the summers between college sessions, these students participate in shipboard, aviation, and amphibious training periods to gain experience in naval and marine operations.

Upon graduation, students may elect to be commissioned as ensigns in the U.S. Navy or as second lieutenants in the U.S.

Marine Corps. This program is one of many Navy-wide efforts to increase the number of Black and other minority group officers in the U.S. Navy. As of July, 1973, some 805 Black officers were on duty, serving in ranks from warrant officer to rear admiral. The U.S. Navy wants to increase this number.

Interested applicants will have to take the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) of the College Entrance Examination Board, Princeton, N.J., or the American College Test (ACT) of the American College Testing Program at Iowa City, Iowa. Applicants must apply for and take either test at their own expense.

After taking the test, arrangements must be made to have the testing agency submit the scores to the NROTC Navy-Marine Scholarship Program, Iowa City, Iowa.

Interested persons may apply for the NROTC Navy-Marine Scholarships between now and November 1, 1973.

For detailed information regarding all aspects of the program, applicants should contact the nearest Navy or Marine Corps Recruiting station and obtain application blanks and data, or simply write to: Navy Recruiting Command, Code 314, 4015 Wilson Boulevard, Arlington, Virginia 22203.

Raiders Impressive Over OSU Cowboys

If Texas Tech was impressed by Oklahoma State's high national ranking and Coach Jim Carlen's lavish estimation of the Cowboys, the Red Raiders didn't show it as they trounced the favored Cowboys, 20-7.

And the Raiders did it with Joe Barnes sidelined by a pulled hamstring muscle and sub Jimmy Carmichael at the helm. Barnes went out early in the second quarter after a 15-yard run to the OSU six.

It took Carmichael only three plays to put Tech on the board with his first of two short bursts at the massive Cowboy line. Don Grimes, picking up where he had been stopped at Texas, got the first of his two extra points.

Then, after State had ripped the Raider line on a 78-yard touchdown march to tie the score, Tech struck again. And after the Raiders went ahead 14-7, Oklahoma State was out of it.

Tech's kicking game proved to be the difference. Twice Cowboy punt returners fumbled the ball deep in their own territory and twice Tech recovered. Both recoveries led to touchdowns.

Grimes iced down the victory with field goals in both the third and fourth quarters as the Raiders celebrated one of their biggest victories. They ran their record to 3-1 for the season, but face a third major team of goliath proportions this week when they play Texas A&M.

Texas A&M in Jones Stadium Saturday night will be the third team to outweigh the Raiders by generous margins, both offensively and defensively. The Aggies, rebuilding with young players, whipped Clemson Saturday night to even their record at 2-2. The losses were to perennial power LSU and to Eastern standout

Boston College.

It promises to be a hard hitting game, probably as exciting as all the Tech-Aggie games have been the past few years. A capacity crowd of over 51,000 is expected, with the Aggies bringing a large contingent, including the famed Aggie band.

"They're the best Aggie team we've played in the four years I've been at Tech," Coach Carlen said Monday. And he's remembering that Tech only won last year, 17-14, after scoring 21-7 and 28-7 victories his first two years.

The Black Experience: "Save the Black Colleges!" We're redirecting a flow of money and consciousness to Black Colleges. We're going to make Black businesses commit themselves to contributing annually to at least one Black college—the college of their choice. We're going to challenge the image, dealing with Black accountability and white responsibility. We're going to make white companies contribute to the Black school of their choice. In other words, we got to feed the flower we rob.

PUSH is working to save Black colleges because its research indicates that many of the institutions are in jeopardy, for financial and other reasons. Every myth that white society has set up, the Black college stands to say that it's a lie. The Black college stands to say to all of America that her myths about Black folks are all lies.

"It is important to remember that Black colleges came into existence as holding patterns to train people to pick cotton, but they ended up picking leaders, doctors, lawyers and inventors. So, in one sense, you name a major Black leader, and I'll show you a school that was supposed to grow cotton, but grew leaders instead.

"The fact is, the genius of the Black college is that we took little and did much with it. They (whites) never expected to get a Martin Luther King out of Morehouse or a Vernon Jordan out of the Howard University Law School because these schools were supposedly inferior. Yet these schools became the nest eggs for change and revolution in the country.

If the Jews can have Brandeis and Yeshiva, which are fundamentally for Jews, even though others may attend; and the WASPS (White Anglo-Saxon Protestants) can have Harvard and Yale, which are fundamentally WASP, even though others may attend, and the Catholics can have Holy Cross and Notre Dame, then Blacks certainly can have Howard and A&T and Florida A&M and Southern, which are fundamentally for Blacks, even though others may attend.

"In a pluralistic society, these colleges seem to represent options of freedom and they do not represent contradictions to an open society. An open society means that you cannot by law be locked out of participation in anything, based on sex or race. But you also in an open society have the option to go to places based on your cultural interests or your religious interests or some other private interest.

Some people say these colleges are inferior. They may have inferior budgets, but for some reason they're ended up with superior products. 30 million people deserve the right to have colleges of their own as options just as any other ethnic group. These schools like the civil rights movement, must be supported by their beneficiaries.

In addition to a series of workshops on the Black colleges to be held this month at Chicago Expo, groups of politicians, college presidents, alumni, student associations and other interested persons will form the base of a new organization, the National Coalition to Save Black Colleges. End of quote from Rev. Jessie Jackson, National Director of PUSH (People United to Save Humanity).

Monroe, La.—They call him "The Prince" of Black pastors and oddly enough his name is Prince Cornelius Keal and has pastored Tabernacle Baptist Church here for forty years, a kind of record for any pastor we think. When we asked his secret he replied: "Love and Service. And in Bastrop with the people again, Blacks have been elected to the police, jury, school board and there are two black councilmen in this town of some 20,000 souls, which has about forty percent of brothers and sisters. A number of black sales persons are employed in stores in black and semi-black areas, however, there are some that are still holding out. School integration has brought on a large number of dropouts and leaders are working on these problems too. More later as we head for West Texas and New Mexico and home. Until later, remember bellringers are good neighbors. Be a good one.

East Lubbock Scouting On The Move

Scouting for the youth of East Lubbock seems to be taking on new enthusiasm. During the past month, cub packs for 8, 9, and 10 year olds have begun to regroup and lay plans for an exciting year. Scouting for 11, 12, and 13 year old youngsters is also off and running in our community.

At the present time there are cub packs meeting at Ella Illes, Mary & Mac and Wheatly Schools, and scout troops meeting at Ella Illes and the Lions Boys Club.

Scout Troop #102 spent an exciting week at Camp Tres Ritos in the beautiful mountains of New Mexico this past summer. For many of these scouts, it was their first Scout Summer Camp experience.

On Sunday, September 30th, a group of prominent East Lubbock citizens met at Dunbar High to discuss ways of extending the scouting program to more of our youth. Those present were: Mr. Roy Roberts, Pastor Ralph Nathan, Dr. Heenan Johnson, Mr. Jeff Joiner, Mr. Ted Rhea, Mr. H.M. Adams and Mr. Willie Lusk.

Representatives from the South Plains Council, BSA present were: Doug Palmer, District Executive; Dave Parkhill, Field Director; Herb Allman, Scout Leader Trainer; Duane Parker, District Commissioner and Leon Nix, Unit Commissioner.

An East Lubbock Scouting Advisory Board was formed from those black leaders present, their mission is to support and extend Scouting to all our young people.

Many more of our Brothers and Sisters are needed in leadership positions. If you have or can make one hour a week available to serve children then we need you.

All youngsters between the ages of 8 to 13 are urged to contact their school principal or any of the following leaders for more information on joining the cub or scouts: Mr. Roy Roberts, Scout Troop 102, Boys Club. Mr. Charles Brown, 763-7436, Wheatly Pack 132. Mr. Julius Graves, 744-4057, Mary & Mac School. Mr. Jeff Joiner, 765-2631.

Any church, civic club or other group of citizens can organize their own Scouting program, and get involved for youth. Call the Scout Service Center, 747-2631.

Sports of The Times

by Joe Kelly

The only trouble with big victories in football is that you get to enjoy them for such a short time. And, after a loss, it seems as though the time lasts forever.

Really, Texas Tech's victory over Oklahoma State was magnificent and should be savored by Raider fans, but there isn't time. The Texas Aggies, who have matured in a hurry from a Kiddie Korps to a Krunchin' Korps, hurry in for a game here Saturday night.

Still, you have to look back with pleasure on that 20-7 licking of the No. 11 ranked team in the nation. OSU Coach Jim Stanley had said that "the picnic's over", before the Tech game and, meaning no disrespect, I'd say that the ants spoiled the picnic.

The Raiders obviously carried the fight to the Cowboys. Aside from the only sustained OSU drive, the defense shut off the potent offense. And Tech took advantage of the breaks.

For some reason, the Cowboys had trouble holding onto Tech's first two punts. Both were fumbled, both were recovered by the Raiders. Both led to touchdowns. The Cowboys got so punt-shy that they stopped trying to catch David Kuykendall's high boomers.

Almost every time you looked up, State was on the defensive, trying to stop Tech. The Raiders simply kept the pressure on and never let up.

It was obviously a physical battle, the second in as many weeks, with another coming up Saturday. The Aggies are about as big as OSU and Texas. Tech will face another severe test.

In addition, the Aggies have a greater passing threat to throw at the Raiders, along with a running quarterback, who executes well, and a fullback possibly only a shade under Roosevelt Leaks. It's another major challenge to the bruised young Raiders.

I asked Coach Jim Carlen about David Mellott, who had about as sensational first home game that a freshman could have—on a freshman team, that is.

Mellott is the "walk on" freshman kicker, who booted five field goals against Arkansas the other night. He also added the extra points to wrap up the impressive Picador victory.

Mellott—with a name like that he should be a baseball player—came to Tech because two buddies had been recruited. Like varsity kicker Don Grimes, he is without scholarship.

Carlen says that the San Antonio freshman may never be the accurate kicker Grimes is, but he's taking a close look at him as a kickoff man. He has a powerful leg and his kicks weren't close. They sailed plenty long enough, long enough to knock a window out of the athletic offices! He could be a real sleeper.

Along with thousands of others, I enjoyed the football-baseball double header Sunday, including the College Highlight film on ABC, which had Tech looking good.

But one thing I could do without and that is that #&%†# electronic trumpet at Cincinnati that plays "Charge" for almost every Cincinnati batter. Once in a while is fine, but the continuous blaring gets on your nerves. Made me happy the Reds lost.

The Oakland A's went home, 1-1, and have the edge going into the finals. I'd have to say that they have the best chance to make it into the World Series, with the Mets, after winning Monday, a solid favorite. The underdog Mets have had three great pitching gems.

So, as this is being written, it looks as though it would be the A's vs the Mets, California vs New York. It should be a great World Series, possibly the most popular in recent years. It's bound to be a bitter fight, Mets pitching against A's hitting.

Jesse Owens is still a champion, probably greater in stature today than he was, even, as an Olympic champion. The track great, who set the world on its ear in the 1932 Olympics, still is doing it.

But now it's through his speeches. He's gained a masterful style of speaking, and he doesn't back away from questions. He tells it like it is and makes no apologies for his opinions. The funny thing is, people accept it from him and respect him for it. Lubbock was fortunate to have him speak for the United Fund kickoff dinner.

Tech basketballers open formal workouts next Monday and Coach Gerald Myers, who is all smiles now, probably won't let a hint of a smile crease his face until March 15.

Gerald's biggest worry is replacing Ron Richardson at forward, a position he says he'll have to strengthen in recruiting. For this year he'll have William Johnson at one forward, with six weeks in which to find a mate as the Raiders prepare to defend their conference title. Somehow or other, I imagine Gerald and George Davidson will come up with a strong replacement.

Tech Freshmen Score Win Over Arkansas

A "walk on" walked off with most of the honors last Thursday night as the Texas Tech Picadors ran their season's record to 3-0 with a 42-7 romp over the University of Arkansas Shoats.

The Picadors were paced to their eighth consecutive victory over two years by David Mellott, a freshman who is not carried in the printed roster.

All the 6-1, 190-pounder from San Antonio Roosevelt did was kick field goals of 32 yards (twice), 37 yards (twice) and one of 42 yards. He also added all the extra points as the Picadors dominated action.

Mellott came to Tech because two high school buddies received scholarships. Today he holds the freshman record for field goals in a game, breaking the former mark of four held by Don Grimes, also a non-scholarship kicker as a freshman.

The Picadors blocked the first Arkansas punt attempt, recovered it for a touchdown and shot easily in front. Meanwhile, Jimmy Williams was running for over 100 yards for the third time this season and the Pics were shutting down the Shoat attack regularly, except for the lone thrust at the goal.

The Arkansas touchdown, coming with 8:49 to play in the second quarter, marked the first points against the Picadors this season.

Tech takes on the Houston Kittens in Houston tonight in their next to last 1973 game. A week from tonight they entertain Baylor here to wind up the season.

Blue Bird Doll Parade At South Plains Mall

The 14th annual Blue Bird Doll Parade of the Camp Fire Girls will be held in the South Plains Mall at 10:00 a.m., Saturday, October 13, 1973. Mrs. Michael Hensley is chairman of the parade and

Angelic Choir To Present Concert

This group of young people are members of the Angelic Choir of Mount Gilead Baptist Church. They will present their annual concert Sunday, October 14, at 7:30 p.m. in the church auditorium, 2512 Fir Avenue.

The group is devoted to singing and are faithful workers in their church. In the past, the group has added more than one thousand dollars ($1,000) a year to the church fund through their efforts in the concert and singing programs.

The choir, under the capable leadership of Garnett Lee who is

The theme this year is "Rainbow in the Sky." This program will show how this group of young people are reaching out for the master. Their decor and uniforms will be the colors of the rainbow, and they will sing patriotic, contemporary, gospel and hymns.

Their guest artist will be the choir of Ford Memorial Church of God in Christ. Rev. J.E. Alexander, minister. The public is invited to attend this evening of fine listening. A reception will follow immediately after the program.

Mount Vernon United Methodist Church

The church "Where Things Are Happening" warmly welcomes you to share in our Sunday School hour 9:30 to 10:30, in reading the word of God, one will find strength for all needs, and there will be the opportunity to exchange current opinions as to how the bible speaks to us in these days. If there are high school children in your family, they will find input for the needs of questing minds. Then there is the eleven o'clock service where we listen, wait and speak to God. Often pausing to utter a thanks.

The spoken word and the music, the fellowship and the reaching out, seemingly bring in the power of the Holy Spirit, to bind and to fit us for the next weeks task. A glad hand for all hands. You will be glad you attended our morning service.

Last Sunday we heard music splendid thru the blended voices of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Furry of Dallas, Texas. They did a superlative job. The musicale was sponsored by Mrs. Darlyene Chatman, Mrs. Roberta Price and Mrs. Vernona Kelly. Our hats go off to these fine young ladies of Mt. Vernon.

This Sunday will be Laity Sunday at Mt. Vernon, the Laypeople will express their views on the following subjects, "As a layman how do you visualize Mt. "What do you think is the ethos of Mt. Vernon, as it is now" discussed by Mrs. Roberta Price and Mr. Roy Roberts. These speakers will add much to the input of need for all Christians as they reach out to lift mankind and to share blessings with their neighbors.

Mrs. Robbyne Fuller has called the gathering of the council on ministries next Sunday evening at the church, each member please bring your discipline.
