Defense Dept. Wages Bitter Battle Vs. Servicemen's Drug Addiction

Copyright, 1978, United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

WASHINGTON—There were more American casualties from heroin than from gunfire in Vietnam. The deadly white powder was both cheap and available and thousands of GIs, seeking to escape the horrors of the war, became hooked on heroin.

The Pentagon brass thought the problem would diminish after the Vietnam War. But drug abuse has remained at the Vietnam level in the armed services. Only desperate, anti-drug efforts by the Defense Department have kept addiction from reaching epidemic proportions.

American troops in Europe have a ready supply of heroin, cocaine and marijuana, which are smuggled into U.S. military bases from Asia and the Middle East. NATO commander, Gen. Alexander Haig, is so worried that he has met privately with White House drug experts to discuss this alarming upsurge of heroin trafficking in the armed forces. President Carter's drug adviser Dr. Peter Bourne has written an urgent, private letter to Defense Secretary Harold Brown about the problem.

Military experts fear that the drug epidemic may hurt the Army's military preparedness. They are haunted by the spectre of our radar screens and weapons systems manned by soldiers spaced-out on drugs.

The Navy has also been weakened by drug usage. The men aboard the carrier Midway were recently tested and an alarming 20 percent were found to have used opiates.

Dr. Bourne wants Congress to authorize random medical checks of military personnel for traces of drugs. He believes this would be the most effective way of combatting drug addiction in the armed forces.

Prison Conditions: The Constitution guarantees that Americans cannot be subjected to "cruel and unusual punishments." Yet conditions inside many of our prisons violate the constitutional rights of the inmates.

We have received chilling tales from inside the U.S. penal system and the worst are the state prisons. Inmates at the Clinton Correctional Facility in rural New York have complained that they have been beaten, hosed down, harassed and subjected to degrading treatment. Within the prison's massive gray walls, more than 2,000 inmates are crowded in dank, musty cellblocks. They sleep with roaches in their bedsprings, bed bugs in their mattresses and an open toilet two feet from their heads.

Conditions in Attica, another notorious New York prison, are even worse. Inmates rebelled there in 1971, and 39 were killed. It is an illustration of the utter hopelessness inside the prison that 10 bodies were never claimed. There was no one on the outside who cared.

There is a graveyard inside the prison wall that contains the graves of 200 inmates whose bodies have never been claimed. In each case, a bulldozer dug a trench, the body was dumped in it, and a small marker was placed over the grave. The markers give only the inmates' prison numbers.

Conditions are better in federal prisons, but these, too, have become overcrowded. Attorney General Griffin Bell has warned the White House that there are now 6,000 more federal prisoners than the prisons can hold.

The worst of the federal installations is the Atlanta penitentiary. Its officials are unusually severe. We once reported that an inmate had secretly married his girlfriend in the prison waiting room. It was a harmless, romantic episode, but the authorities stripped him of his "good time" credit and canceled his new wife's visiting rights.

But there's a much more serious problem at the Atlanta facility. There have been nine murders there in the past 17 months.

Georgia Rep. Wyche Fowler has called for an investigation of the controversial prison. Federal Prisons chief Norman Carlson will soon have a preliminary report from his investigations. But our sources inside the penitentiary warn that the investigation will be a whitewash. It will take an independent investigation to get the facts.

They claim that assaults are routine inside the prison. These allegedly become fatalities because of careless medical attention. Several fights have also turned into murders because of the loose security. One informant was mistakenly placed with other inmates. He did not come out alive.

Battle of the Sexes: The hottest war going on in the Pentagon is a battle of the sexes. A recent Army study recommended that the number of women recruits be limited. The study contended that women are absent from duty three times more often than men.

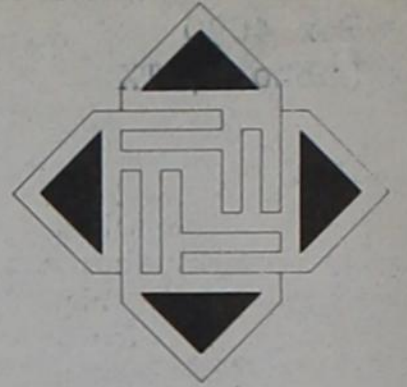

But the Army brass doesn't want to stir up the Women's Liberation movement. Army Secretary Clifford Alexander told us he hasn't received or reviewed the study. But he said the recommendations "run counter to good sense."

Both the Navy and Air Force hastily added that they have found no difference in absentee rates. In fact, the Air Force said it plans to double the number of women in the next five years.

Federal Fraud: Congressional investigators recently estimated that fraud in federal aid may exceed $12 billion annually. The fraud is said to occur primarily in programs designed to provide services, training and aid to the disadvantaged. These programs include food stamps, health care, job training and housing aid.

The experts say much of the fraud is committed not by the poor persons receiving the benefits, but by well-to-do doctors and businessmen who have contracts with the government.

President Carter has bluntly warned his Cabinet members that he will hold them personally responsible for fraud in their individual agencies. Carter said it is their responsibility to find the fraud and put an end to it.

AUSTIN—Texas has one of its hottest statewide elections in years coming up Saturday, but interest is lagging.

Secretary of State Steve Oaks, who has been monitoring registration and absentee voting, predicts the turnout may drop below the modest 29 percent for 1974 primaries.

Oaks said only a remarkable near-deadline upsurge in absentee voting would give reason for reassessment of low-participation calculations.

According to Oaks' prediction, the Democratic primary turnout will be in the 1 million to 1.2 million range. About 1.5 million voted in 1974. Oaks' office previously had indicated as many as 2 million (still an unspectacular turnout) would vote Saturday.

None can predict accurately the Republican primary turnout. Oaks is sticking with a 100,000 to 150,000 projection, but some Republicans think the primary may attract fewer than 100,000. Only 69,000 voted in 1974 when there were no spotlight contests on the GOP ballot.

Voting in both parties shot upward in 1976, of course, due to the first Texas presidential preference primary.

There are now about 5.5 million registered voters, according to Oaks' staff estimate. Deadline for registering to vote in the May 6 primary was April 6.

Absentee voting continued through Tuesday of this week. It was reported about average in Dallas, but below average in many other counties.

Bases Closing?

The Carter administration has proposed closing Goodfellow Air Force Base in San Angelo and trimming personnel at Fort Bliss near El Paso by 608 military and 41 civilian jobs.

The plan will be under study by the Pentagon for about 10 months, and could be blocked by Congress.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe has urged top federal officials to reconsider the plan.

Alcohol Education Project

The problem is young people who drink. The solution is, as usual, education—but education of a particular and unique kind.

During the last five years, the National PTA has taken an intensive look at the problem of adolescent alcohol use and abuse through its Alcohol Education Project, and the results of its study and testing of alcohol awareness educational strategies are now available to the public.

A wealth of "how-to" materials for use by parents, teachers, students, health officials, and community groups has been produced by the project, which was funded by the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism. There is great diversity in the materials because they were created by individual PTAs to meet their own specific needs, and to help them solve their own particular problems.

The eight model programs and the materials generated by them include efforts by six state PTAs, and two designed by National PTA staff. They are:

Project Promise—Produced by the Nevada PTA, this training manual is to be used in conducting workshops for parents of troubled children, who have been referred to school authorities for substance abuse-related problems.

Cost is $14.95 for the manual.

People to People—The California PTA's contribution is a step-by-step instruction manual in the development of group leadership skills, which can then be applied to the creation and implementation of a school/community alcohol education project. Cost is $10.95 for the manual.

The Community Action Plan: A Community Response to the Misuse of Alcohol—Developed by the Missouri PTA, this effort consists of a manual to be used by professionals from community mental health centers or alcohol programs who wish to mount a community-based alcohol education project. Cost of the manual is $8.95.

"How to Talk with Children About Drinking" (A Parenting Guide to Alcohol Education)—Created by the Massachusetts PTSA, this program provides parents with effective ways to communicate with their youngsters about alcohol use—an extremely sensitive subject for most families. Cost of the manual is $7.95.

Alcohol Alley—A truly innovative approach by the Michigan PTSA, this curriculum unit on alcohol for grades four-through-six consists of a game that teaches decision-making, a coloring book illustrated with student drawings, a cassette-filmstrip to trigger discussions, and a teachers' guide suggesting other activities to expand the unit. Cost of the unit is $29.95.

Alcohol Education: An Introduction to Community Planning—A project of the Utah PTA, this booklet, designed with the PTA leader in mind, offers a general explanation of the issues involved in alcohol misuse, and the organizational steps necessary to plan and implement an alcohol education project. Cost of the booklet is $2.00.

Boozimetrograph—Developed by National PTA staff, this is a data collection manual which contains all materials necessary for assessing the informational needs of the community on alcohol use and abuse by adolescents. Cost of the manual is $3.95.

Public Relations Model—Also staff-created, this media kit consists of:

1) A record containing six, 60-second public service messages under the collective title, "The First to Do It," which can be offered to local radio stations, to schools for their public address systems, and used as a catalyst for discussion at group meetings. Cost is $3.50 per record.

2) A poster series focusing on youth and typical alcohol-related settings, in the form of eight reproducible advertisements suitable for use in local newspapers, magazines, school papers, club bulletins, and any other print media. Posters are available in two sizes: 14" x 18" poster size at $4.00 per set, or in 8 1/2" x 11" print ad size at $3.50 per set.

All model programs are now available, at the prices indicated, from the National PTA, 700 N. Rush Street, Chicago, Illinois 60611; telephone (312) 787-0977.

Since the project's inception in 1974, a total of 46 NIAAA grants have been awarded by the National PTA to state PTAs/PTSAs for the conducting of community-based educational programs promoting alcohol awareness. This figure includes the six final pilot state projects described here.

Briscoe argued a strong case can be made against the reductions, and said "cost effectiveness of these bases is such that they actually merit expansion, not reduction."

The Goodfellow security training center would lose 375 military and 225 civilian jobs. Fort Bliss is a 35,000-military personnel installation.

Nationwide, the cutback plans would affect 14,600 military personnel and 8,600 civilians.

Program Cleared

A $20.9 million program for 387.7 miles of Farm and Ranch to Market roads has been approved by the State Highway and Public Transportation Commission.

The 1978 program includes 80.1 miles of new construction and funds for completion and further development of the remaining miles. A total of 127 projects are included. The all-paved Texas system of farm to market roads now extends more than 41,000 miles.

At the same time, the commission also approved a $5.8 million 1978 railroad signal program for the federal highway system, subject to Federal Highway Administration approval. It includes 94 projects in all sections of the state.

Most of the projects involve railroad crossings on federal-aid urban system streets. Others are on federal-aid primary and secondary highways. The projects will be funded 90 percent by federal money and 10 percent from the state highway fund.

Courts Speak

The Texas Supreme Court has directed district judges to leave child custody controversies in hands of original divorce courts.

In other action, the high court:

—Set review of a case involving the issue of whether a tire test driver, killed when a tire blew out, is a consumer under the products liability law.

—Held a waitress killed in an auto accident on her way home from work at 2 a.m. was not entitled to workers' compensation benefits.

KELLY'S HEROES

by Joe Kelly

I've been trying to decide, ever since Thursday night, which was more atrocious, the coaching or the sports writing. Okay, Rex, you won the first round!

Coaching and writing aside, Texas Tech wound up its spring training with the annual game and it wasn't, all things considered a bad game. There were some bright spots and some dull ones. As spring games go, however, it was an entertaining evening.

As usual, there weren't many fans present. What the ones who were there saw was a hard hitting affair with some brilliant individual play. After all, with no more time to work as a unit, you wouldn't expect to see much team play.

Still, a number of players stood out, among them Tres Adami and Mark Johnson. The edge went to Tres, who did a good job and may well have earned the starting nod next fall.

Michael Morris, a walk on, probably was the most noticeable player. The 5-11, 173-pounder from Dallas caught almost everything thrown his way, including one or two spectacular grabs.

Other receivers did well, but they weren't quite as apparent as was Morris.

Steve Hollifield's punting was encouraging and John Greve booted a field goal to show that he has potential.

With running backs a question, it was pleasing to see Mark Olbert come to the front. He looked good, as did reserve Eddie Monaco. Sam Bailey appeared ready to step in as a starter, running hard and well, while Tim Orr, at times, looked capable.

The line play was hard nosed and the linebacking much of the time looked pretty good, especially Don Kelly, Jeff Copeland and Jeff McKinney.

Overall, it was an interesting game and, as has been said every spring, when you put the squad together and it was time to work in units, the picture should be much better.

It's a young squad. After all, when you lose as much experience as Tech did, there's no way it can be as strong. The only hope is that the youth matures and it could do that over summer. If it does, the Raiders should field a representative team next fall.

They're honoring Wilbur Evans again, this time at the Sheraton Hotel in Dallas this Thursday. Who the group is I don't know, but Bob Halford is the chairman.

Wish it were possible to be there, because Wilbur has given long and unselfishly of himself to the conference and to the Cotton Bowl. As the letter said, "His kindness, his generosity, his constant good humor and his devotion to excellence has touched all our lives."

Hey, don't look now, but what team is that that's in first place in the American League West? Yep, that's right, Oakland. That's incredible.

The A's were supposed to be dead after they traded away almost everyone who had fought and scrapped to pennants. Still, it's an indication of what people have known for a longtime—the highpaid stars are not always the best players. When given a chance, all too often the unknown kids come through.

You can't buy experience, of course, and that's against the kids who are playing so well right now. It's a long, tiring grind to the end of the season. The veterans know how to pace themselves. Also, they have the savvy that comes only with time and experience.

Look at the Yankees, for example. They're barely staying at the .500 mark. But you know that they have the experience and savvy. As the season wears on, they should come to the front.

*****

Well, sir, Arkansas couldn't grab a baseball title to go with football and basketball, thanks to the Aggies. But you have to hand it to Arkansas for being consistent. The Hogs were in real contention for championships in three major sports.

That's what Tech must do if it is to be considered major in all respects. As has been the case for years, once football and basketball are over, you can forget Raider teams. It's too bad.

*****

At long last I had a letter from Jim Whitelaw up in the wilds of Northern New York. We may be dry and arid here, but I don't envy the winter they've had.

Jim writes that from mid-November until April 4 they only had two days when the temperature was above freezing. Also, he says that the snow came more often and they had more of it this year than he can remember.

His letter wad dated April 16 and he says that, at that time, they still had 12 to 18 inches of snow in the woods. It finally has melted enough, he writes, for me to dig turnips out of my garden.

The ice still is 20 inches thick in the Lower Lake and "it means a shorter boating season. It probably won't break up until May."

Jim says his wife and son aren't winter campers, so he hadn't even gotten up to his camp and hadn't been on his snowmobile once this winter.

Cold weather didn't stop him, though. He ice fished all winter and had one of his better successes, 944 perch and 259 smelt. He fished one day for lake trout or salmon and had no luck.

Jim's brother Ray "had a very large fish take his whole rig after he snapped the 8-pound line like it was a cobweb. I use 20-pound for ice fishing myself because you never know what you might get."

Jim must have been afraid that oil wouldn't get from Texas up to him, so he changed his heating system over to wood. "We got through winter with about five full cords of wood and no oil at all since November."

It must be remembered that wood grows all around him and he doesn't have to pay $90 to $100 a cord. Otherwise, it would be little saving.

A State Income Tax. A Hangman's Noose For Texas.

If you think taxes are choking you now, consider the possibility of a State income tax. It would be a noose around your neck. Around the neck of every Texan. And around the future of Texas.

A vote for John Hill is a vote for:

- bigger government.
- more government spending.
- more inflation.

AND FOR A STATE INCOME TAX.

A vote for Dolph Briscoe is a vote for:

- fiscal responsibility
- less — not more — government.
- continued economic growth.

AND FOR NO NEW TAXES.

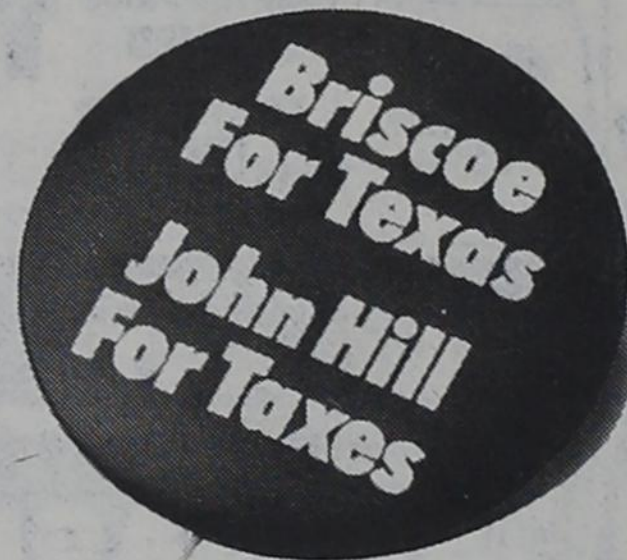

- We don't need New York-style government in Texas.
- We don't need Washington-style bureaucracy in Texas.
- And we don't need a big spending liberal activist as Governor of Texas.

LET'S KEEP DOLPH BRISCOE AS OUR GOVERNOR.

"We are already footing the bill for run-away government in Washington. As Texans we should not have to foot the bill for run-away government in Austin.

"I don't think Texas should spend itself into a state income tax. That is exactly what will happen if Mr. Hill fulfills only some of his political promises."

Energy Problems: From a Black Point of View—"Blacks should support a national strategy to increase domestic production of oil and gas reserves over the short term and this approach would provide time for the development of alternate resources," believes Jimmy Stewart, a retired Oklahoma Natural Gas Co. official and member of the National Board of the NAACP and active in Oklahoma City religious and civic circles.

The national resolution passed by the NAACP recently states in part: "For the great majority of people the NAACP represents, the cost of energy today is sufficiently high to discourage any unnecessary use. Blacks are born conservationists, with year around natural wind-conditioned housing, obsolete fuel guzzling cars and "the system" continuing to move what few job opportunities we have further and further from traditional Black communities, we don't need to be told to conserve.

"Our fight is for survival, and dead end jobs, welfare or tax rebates are not the solutions. Only productive jobs in business and industry will restore the nation's economic health.

"We still have tremendous unmet social and economic needs. The unemployment rate in the Black community is still twice the national rate. Unemployment among Black teenagers ranges up to 50 percent. Over the next 15 years we must undertake to rebuild and revitalize our cities and urban areas where a very high percentage of Black people live. We need to revamp urban and interurban transportation systems to facilitate urban dweller's access to places of employment. An abundant energy supply will be necessary if we are to have any chancer to meet these challenges.

"We cannot however accept the notion that our people are best served by a policy based upon the inevitability of energy shortages and the need for government to allocate an ever diminishing supply among competing interests. A plan which would perpetuate price controls on newly discovered gas and oil and extend those controls to new areas appear to us to be incompatible with the need for new supply development." End of quote from Nationally Approved NAACP Resolution. (Bob's note: Few documents within the past decade has caused more discussion and more national news coverage than this hotly contested resolution that carried by a small margin in the voting progress. More later)

Editorial Quotes: "There was a time in American history when the minister was one of the few scholars in his community, and the church recognized him as such. However, in contemporary society, this is not the case. Today's church is looking for a pastor who has a sound biblical knowledge, but who is also able to function as a preacher, counselor, shepherd, businessman, PR director, teacher, and who is able to perform a myriad of other duties associated with the pastoral ministry". ### Alcohol Education . . .

Because there have been no really adequate materials dealing with alcohol education—for use in the classroom—the National PTA believed that it could meet this need by actively involving its members in the development of prevention education programs. Such programs are geared to youngsters who have had little or no experience with alcohol; as well as young people and adults who have made personal decisions about the use or non-use of alcohol, but are not comfortable with these decisions. Since parents' drinking behavior often influences the way in which youngsters handle alcohol use, the PTA felt it important to include adults in the target group, as well as in the development of community education programs.

Although the participating PTAs—with the assistance of professionals in education and community health—created materials designed to answer their own community's needs, the materials are also generally applicable to all PTAs and other groups that want to use them.

They are models, Spoonster pointed out, that were designed by real people rather than "experts" removed from a setting of immediate need. And, they can only be used with input from a local community and its people; they are practical rather than theoretical exercises in alcohol abuse prevention.

Sheridan's Ride

by Jack Sheridan

It was kinda like old times. I hied myself off Sunday afternoon to the special opening of an enchanting art exhibition at the Baker Gallery of Fine Art at 13th and L and had a most pleasant time. The Gallery walls abound with excellent works on display, ranging from prints of meticulous design and execution to oils, watercolors and bronze sculptures.

You know, these Baker shows have been an institution in Lubbock for years now and while the Sunday afternoon "previews" are fun and a gathering place for friends and art lovers, some do not realize that the respective exhibitions remain on view, without charge, during regular Baker store hours daily through an extended period. The current show, featuring the works of no less than 28 artists, will be on view to you through June 1. Go see. Even if your appreciations of art are limited, so you think, you'll be enthralled and fascinated and emerge from the time you spend most agreeably pleased and impressed.

I had missed a few of the shows recently, so Sunday's visit was a kind of homecoming for me. I met lots of longtime Lubbock friends and some close and dear people too, such as James Baker and his delightful wife Betty, brother Lennis and his lady and such artists as Lonnie Mason (who looks like a 16-year-old and he can't be because I've known him about that long), Mondel Rogers, who had just sold two of his Western paintings, superbly done, to an Amarillo bank, Glenna Goodacres, defector from Lubbock to Colorado, who does incredibly fine things in her bronze sculptures.

You'll find virtually everything in subject matter on those Baker walls. There are new works by Peter Hurd and his lady, Henriette Wyeth Hurd, John Pellew, amazing versatility by Ray Knaub, and representative works by such luminaries in the Southwestern and national art scene as Frank Gervasi, Doris Steider, Ramon Kelly, Henry Gasser, Voris Hope, Mike Atkinson, Cal Dunn, bronzes by Jack Stevens and a host more.

A lot of people shy off from such exhibitions, claiming "I don't know anything about paintings." I say "bosh and twiddle." You simply view the hangings and you say "I wouldn't want to live with that at home" or you covet one and say "I sure would like to have that one." It's all that simple. One man's meat is another man's you-know-what.

So, do drop in at Baker and Company when you have a few minutes from now 'til June 1. I think you'll find it most rewarding and your life will be just that little bit better for a touch of beauty and skill.

Have you noticed the line-up for the 1978-79 season of Lubbock Theatre Centre. Well, the ambiguous program will get off in September with the annual musical and the upcoming one this time is a killer. It's "Man of La Mancha," that Don Quixote musical that is smashing house records in Los Angeles right now in a revival with the original star, Richard Kiley. I have qualms about seeing LTC tackle this one, but I can be surprised—I hope. It is a favorite show and I have seen it with David Atkinson in the top role both in its touring date here in Lubbock some years back and on Broadway, too. It's a grand show and a winner all the way. Best of luck, LTC.

They'll be doing the venerable (now) Neil Simon comedy, "The Odd Couple," another comedy, "Never Too Late," the thriller "Night Must Fall" (remember the movie with Dame May Whitty and Robert Montgomery?) and that's the slate. If you haven't held an LTC season membership before now, then join the band. You'll be amply entertained and find the investment a delightful and thrifty bargain.

You have seen comedienne Joan Rivers on the Johnny Carson show many times as well as her many guest appearances on other television spots. You may have even caught her night club act in Las Vegas or other tops rooms around the country.

Well, Joan has expanded into the movie business now, as a director, and her initial effort is a thin, lightweight comedy called "The Rabbit Test," which is currently on the screen at the Fox 4 complex. It's a trifle about a man who becomes pregnant and is, of course, suggestive all the way, but now and then funnily so. It's no great shakes as a film but it has its moments here and there. Rated PG, in case you wonder.

In that same theater bouquet is a "woman's picture." There was a time, awhile back, that Hollywood made "women's" pictures, that is, one that was aimed primarily at the handkerchief set in the audience. Then the male macho took over for years. Well, the women are back in force and it has never been more demonstrated than in "An Unmarried Woman," which is enjoying success around the country. It is the story of a woman's breaking marriage and her efforts to stabilize and re-order her life. It is far too long in running time, some two hours and four minutes, but it is a cass try and I think you'll like it. Jill Clayburgh comes into her own as a star on this one. You may remember her as the Carole Lombard in the sadly-done "Gable and Lombard" disaster a season or so ago but she has, with "An Unmarried Woman" somewhat expunged that bitter memory.

Opposite her is a man from Britain who must be the successor to Lord Laurence Olivier as one of the finest actors in the English-speaking theater, Alan ("Butley") Bates. He is relegated to a somewhat secondary part here, but true talent cannot be buried and he shines. Paul Mazursky, seen in the bit role as Hal in the film, directed this R-rated, Twentieth-Century release.
