

"I Want to Be Somebody", Acclaims Model

It's been said many times and by many people that there is a great deal of talent in the black community on the South Plains. It's also been said that there needs to be more visible talent of black sisters and brothers doing things in West Texas. This is what Lurwandah Brown, a recent graduate of the Robert Spence Modeling School, is doing these days. "I want to be somebody; and I chose modeling," she acclaims.

The director and owner of the Robert Spence Modeling School at 1613 Avenue M, Mrs. Virginia Allison, says: "Lurwandah was a very good student, and we were pleased to have her."

A 5 ft. 4 inch, 123 pound attractive black sister, she is a resident of a small community about 8 miles north of Slaton, Texas. She graduated from Roosevelt High School in May, 1974, and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Freddie Lee Brown, who have four other children. She is a clerical worker at Traveler's Insurance Company.

"One of my goals, at the present time, is to go to market," says the 20 year old model. "I would welcome an opportunity to visit the Dallas market and get some experience," she continues. She went on to comment, "I realize I will have to crawl before I can walk in the modeling profession." In talking with the eager young lady, one gets the impression that she is quite determined about her future as a model.

In talking about the opportunities for models in Lubbock, she admits that the opportunities are quite limited, but she welcomes any opportunity to model for any company. "I know I can do a good job." She made it perfectly clear that a person can be anything he or she wants to be if the person wants to bad enough, and I want to bad enough", she smiles.

Lurwandah, who is quite sensitive about the latest fashions, would like an opportunity to model for advertising agencies in Lubbock as they present the latest fashions to the community. "I know I have the ability to turn people on to purchase what I am modeling," she said.

When asked how she felt being a black and one of two blacks in West Texas who are models, she said: "It doesn't bother me, because I know

Quirino Speaks To ELBA Monthly Meeting

Carlos Quirino, a candidate for State Representative under Raza Unida Party for Lubbock, spoke last week to the East Lubbock Business Association (ELBA) at their monthly meeting. He said: "Minority groups in Lubbock have never been represented at any governmental level and the reason for that being the Democratic Party, under the pose of representing poor people, have actually only represented big business and special interest groups."

He continued: "This year blacks and Chicanos in Lubbock have the opportunity to prove that from now on our vote is one to be contended with."

Quirino also addressed himself to the issue of inequality of education in Texas. He said: "The state of Texas should make sure that everyone received an equal and adequate education, regardless of their socio-economic level or background."

On the issue of more representation of minorities in state offices, he said that single member legislative districts should be implemented as this would guarantee more representation in the Texas Legislature for all people.

Quirino is opposed by Elmer Tarbox, a Democrat; and David Sullivan, a Republican, in the November 5 general election.

The Black Middle Class Myth

by Richard Lewis

The struggle of black people in America is the epitome of human change and drama. Black people have had to weather the tide of criticism and the tenacles of a superficially free society to attain rights which are merely basic to every white citizen. Throughout this struggle, blacks have always been characterized by ethnic stereotypes such as the "carefree jambo", "shiftless jigger", or the "petty criminal."

Many think that black stereotypes have vanished. Unfortunately, this is not so. The mass media has recently fed a new black stereotype to the American public. The rising black middle class has been projected to the public as the new black image. Blacks on yachts, tenderly sipping martinis and living in fine, fashionable homes have been imprinted on the minds of many Americans. It is very true that blacks are steadily moving forward, but our progress in a society dominated by whites is grossly exaggerated. The black middle class only represents about 28 percent of the entire black population in America. This news build up concerning this great rise of the so called black middle class only creates a chain reaction of opinion in white inner circles to end or unfairly curtail welfare programs, minority training programs, and other government programs aimed at aiding the black citizen that have been mistreated through years of unjust separation.

This overexposure has made many people question the slow progress that has been gained by blacks in a very reactionary time in this nation. Although many people believe that blacks are better off today, the income gap between white and black families continues to increase. As of 1973, the average black family of four earned $7269 per year as compared to $11,549 for their white counterpart. Not only this, but the decade of the 1970's has also seen a marked slowing the improvements of poor working black who earn less than $3,000 per year. Nearly 33 percent of the black population in the United States earns less than $3,000 annually. Well over half of the white families in America earn more than $10,000 per year.

What is middle class, anyway? By definition middle class is a heterogeneous socioeconomic grouping composed mostly of business and professional people, bureaucrats, and highly skilled workers sharing common social values. Dealing purely with reality, very few black individuals fall into a purely middle class mold. What has actually been done by the mass media is to take black people who must work very hard for a living, such as semi-skilled laborers, civil service workers, and manual laborers who make fairly decent wages, and lump them in a group earning more than other blacks and called them middle class. If, for instance, these individuals were white, they would fall into the working class bracket. The so called black middle class family is not as well off or as financially stable as its white counterpart.

This myth of the black middle class only serves the purpose of destroying through disunity the entire concept of the black revolution. Sure, we as a people have made great strides, but gross exaggerations through myths can only hurt the entire cause. These myths only convey the message that blacks are on equal footing with whites. Basically this would end many advantages that blacks now are gaining in some job fields. The governmental pressure on many institutions to hire blacks would virtually end because people would begin to believe that blacks are receiving equality in all areas.

Thanks to the ignorance and exaggeration, we must go through the same game, again, the only difference is a new name.

As I See It

by T.J. Patterson

It is always interesting to me how black people are left out of the administration aspect of the Lubbock Public Schools. For example, this week, a group of Japan educators will be visiting 18 of our elementary schools in Lubbock. The 29 Japanese public educators are here to concentrate on teaching techniques, school facilities, salaries and working conditions for teachers, and school administration. Aside from visiting the elementary schools, these educators will be briefed at the Central Office.

As I've said many times and to many people, the black community does not have any input to the Lubbock Public School System. Although these Japanese educators are looking to see how we do our thing in the public school system in Lubbock, they will not get an opportunity to visit a school that has a black principal.

It is rather strange for the educators from Japan, who are traveling on a tour sponsored by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, and not be able to see a black principal performing his duty. Several of the schools being visited this week are in East Lubbock (Iles, and Martin). Why couldn't Bozeman or Posey Elementary Schools be among those schools to be visited in East Lubbock since they have black principals.

I am sure the Japanese educators asked about the black administrators when they visited the Central Office where there are no black administrators. As I See It, there has to be some changes made in this public school system. We can't keep on being taxpayers and not be represented as we should in our community.

I think its time for Judge Howard Woodard to look back into the integration thing in Lubbock and make some adjustments to what is happening. It has been several years since he's made a decision as to how the schools should be run. It's time for the good judge to look at this thing again.

It's also time for you black parents (who happen to be taxpayers) to realize what is going on in the public school system. If you don't vote as you should, we'll forever be left out of representation at the Central Office and being left out of programs which involve people from foreign countries seeing how we run our educational system.

We'd better wake up before it's too late. Hear me real loud and clear. You don't have to go anywhere and beg for someone to hear your problems. We have begged too darn long, now it's time for us to start looking at our problems and doing something about them.

I hope those Japanese educators don't go back to Japan and say, "We saw no black principals or administrators in Lubbock, Texas." Don't you?

Speaking of being left out of functions for the welfare of the total community, the giant pep rally at the Municipal Coliseum last Thursday morning was another one. The pep rally was a good program and the ripple effect will help the Texas Tech Red Raiders and all the five high school football teams in Lubbock. This is the way it should be, the business community helping our young people.

As I See It, however, the planning stages of the pep rally last week left out the East Lubbock representation. The attendance of "Miss Black Texas International and Miss Black Lubbock" should have been present at this event. At this time, also, East Lubbock has a "Miss Black Teenager," "Miss Lubbock" and the "Maid of Cotton" were both invited to this mammoth event at the coliseum.

It always disturbs me when representation from the black community is always left out of the planning of programs which affect the entire community. It shouldn't be necessary for this writer to express an opinion for things like this. Of course, there are other areas where East Lubbock has been left out.

Again, it's time for residents of East Lubbock as well as Lubbock, to realize what is going on in our community. It will take some changing of attitudes to get a lot of things accomplished. It will take a lot of effort on the part of all of us.

The price of everything is going up these days. I was reading last week's Members' Service Bulletin, published by the Texas Press Association (TPA), that prices of newspapers are going up.

The bulletin stated that a Chicago news executive commented while speaking in Wisconsin recently that there was probably never a better time to raise newspaper circulation rates. This executive noted that many papers are already charging 20 cents for over the counter sales. He also predicted that nearly 100 daily newspapers will raise rates to 20 cents per copy and up to 50 or 75 cents per daily Sunday edition within the next six months to a year.

The West Texas Times has not changed its price in several years. We have remained the same cost, including subscriptions, but our quality has increased. Some of those newspapers who have raised their prices have not grown in quality.

JACK ANDERSON'S WEEKLY SPECIAL

KREMLIN DOWNPLAYS DISPUTE WITH FORD

by Jack Anderson

(From United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

Washington—Soviet leaders have sent secret signals to President Ford that they are eager to get along with him. They have deliberately down played their dispute with him over Soviet bases in the Indian Ocean.

Ford had scarcely moved into the White House before he told a press conference that the Soviet Union was "operating three naval bases in the Indian Ocean." This brought a quick denial from the official Soviet news agency, Tass, which called it a "regrettable inaccuracy."

The President was speaking of Um Qasr, an Iraq port at the head of the Persian Gulf; Adean on the South Yemen coast, guarding the entrance to the Red Sea; and Berbera across the Aden Gulf on the African coast of Somalia.

Technically, Ford was wrong, and the Kremlin was right. There are no actual Soviet bases at these three strategic ports. But Soviet war ships have been granted special privileges and priorities at all three ports. The Soviets use the ports, therefore, to refit and resupply their naval ships.

The Kremlin leaders have let Ford know, meanwhile, that they don't want this dispute to interfere with the Soviet-American detente. As an added gesture, they have assured Ford that the harassment of Soviet Jews will stop and that 50,000 Soviet Jews will be permitted to emigrate next year.

Nuclear Setbacks: The world's statesmen are losing their struggle to keep nuclear weapons under control and, thereby, to reduce the risks of a nuclear war. Here are the latest grim developments:

President Ford has decided not to send the nuclear test ban treaty, which was negotiated in Moscow last July, to the Senate for ratification. Instead, he will go back to the negotiating table for more talks. Our sources don't expect these to accomplish anything.

The Soviets have admitted setting off fourteen nuclear blasts in the past for peaceful purposes. U.S. intelligence, however, has detected 32 explosions. The Soviets, apparently, are attempting to divert rivers into the barren areas of Siberia.

The Chinese communists have flatly rejected all attempts to gain their cooperation in controlling nuclear weapons.

Contrary to India's assurance that its nuclear test last May was intended strictly for non-military purposes, intelligence reports claim that the nuclear developments began in 1971 as a military project. This has already started a scramble for nuclear weapons by other small powers.

Our sources expect a dozen nations to process nuclear arms by the end of the decade. This will ominously increase the risks that these doomsday weapons may fall into the hands of irresponsible leaders and terrorists.

The Family Home: The single family home will become a thing of the past—unless something drastic is done to revive the depressed housing industry.

That's the message on President Ford's desk right now. It is contained in a confidential memo from Housing Secretary James Lynn.

The memo warns that few single family dwellings are now being built. Most of the construction is centered around the booming condominium craze. Tenants all over the nation are being squeezed out as apartment buildings are converted to condominiums.

This has driven up the price of single family homes. Many houses also require a 25 percent down payment. With interest rates at eleven percent, only the rich can now afford to buy their own homes.

Those close to President Ford say he is gravely concerned about these developments. He holds the belief that the single family home is an important element in the social fabric. Like many sociologists, he thinks that crowded, low income housing projects strain the basic family unit.

The President, therefore, may pump federal money into the housing industry to save the traditional American single family home.

Nixon's Pardon: We have been bombarded with questions about the pardoning of ex-President Nixon. We have carefully investigated the story behind the pardoning and have spoken to sources who are in a position to know what happened.

Did Nixon make a deal for a pardon before he brought Ford into the White House? We have found absolutely no evidence of any advance understanding about a pardon. On the contrary, President Ford specifically instructed his representative, Benton Becker, not to promise a pardon during the preliminary discussions at San Clemente.

Why did Ford grant the pardon? He acted strictly out of compassion. He had received reports that Nixon was terribly depressed and despondent, that his nerves were strung like a harp, that he was deteriorating daily. Ford thought the humane thing to do was to pardon his predecessor.

Why didn't the President wait until the courts had determined Nixon's guilt? Ford was told that a Nixon indictment was imminent. He felt the indictment might crack Nixon's emotional stability. Since Ford had already decided upon mercy, he thought it would be more compassionate to act immediately.

Didn't Ford realize that a Nixon pardon would be unequal justice and might upset the whole Watergate prosecution? His lawyers told him that the power to pardon had been used in the past as the President's personal prerogative, without regard for equal justice. But the whole truth is that Ford simply didn't consider all the implications.

Washington Whirl: By pardoning Richard Nixon, the President has revived the Watergate controversy after almost putting it to rest. This will increase the risks that the GOP will become identified in the public mind as the Watergate party. The voters won't be able to vote against either Nixon or Ford on November 5th. Therefore, many voters will register their protests by voting against the Nixon-Ford party. Except in the South, Republican candidates will be hurt by Ford's action. At the end of the Arab oil embargo, all companies rushed to replenish their stock. This has now resulted in a surplus of gasoline which will force gas stations to lower their prices—slightly. In a few cities, gas wars will probably result as the stations compete to get rid of their surplus gas. But, the oil producers will hold back production in order to keep prices high in the future. President Ford is convinced that Watergate was caused by a campaign committee that was permitted to run wild. Therefore, he will keep a tight rein on the Republican National Committee. He will ask White House aide, Dean Burch, to keep a sharp eye on the committee and to report back to him the slightest excess.

Open Eye

O open my eyes for unseen things. O something is close to me, its strength to my stumbling feet as the battle continues. So as the rush come to many strange faces. Recognize not just a stranger unrecognized and unknown, but a friend with a heart that is so in need. Give me perception to make me aware, that scattered profusely life as we look out into a disturbed world, guide me all the way.

that I can do a good job. All I need is an opportunity to let people see my talent."

A cousin of hers, Della Brown, is also in the same profession. She, too, is a graduate of the Robert Spence Modeling School.

"I have often been to the corner grocery store in my neighborhood and saw young girls who have pretty faces, and I've enjoyed talking with them about the opportunity they would have some day in modeling," she says. As a newly graduate in the modeling profession, Lurwandah makes it clear that she will never be too busy to help some young girls find themselves. "I will welcome the opportunity to speak to junior and high school classes as well as civic and social clubs in order to help someone", she says.

Lurwandah made application for the national "Model of the Year" contest to be held in New York City sometime this year. If she is accepted for the contest, she will travel all expenses paid to the contest. "This would be wonderful if I am accepted to participate in this contest", she said.

Like many blacks in West Texas, Lurwandah knows that there is a brighter side somewhere. A very religious young lady, she realizes that God is always in the plan. "I shall never forget where I've come from, nor will I turn my back on a brother or sister," she echoes.

Yes, Lurwandah, you have come a long way. The image she projects will certainly help some other young black sister find the right direction. Lurwandah's theme is "I want to be somebody", will be heard by many black sisters and brothers in West Texas.

Home After Two Months

Mrs. Nancy P. Scott and son Raphael, are happy to be home after a wonderful summer on the west coast.

They arrived in Los Angeles July 3rd via Continental Airlines. On July 4th a dinner was given for all friends and relatives of Mrs. Scott. She had the pleasure of watching her grandson, Eric Sean Cole, get his beginners swimming badge, and her son, Raphael, get his intermediate swimming certificate.

They visited Long Beach, La Palmer, and other area towns. They went up to Sacramento to visit her sister, Mrs. Venezuela Sheppard and family, and Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Molden. Leroy is a former Lubbock resident.

Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Molden had a get together for the Lubbockites and relatives, and there are quite a few. While in Sacramento they had a tour of the state capital and grounds which were very beautiful.

We had a chance to see Mr. Molden in action. He officiates at the local baseball teams, also at the local high school football and basketball games. Leroy is a 1951 graduate of Dunbar and a 1956 graduate of Huston Tilliston College of Austin, Texas.

While in Los Angeles, Mrs. Scott visited in the homes of her daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Conelious Cole, the former Reeve Jean Scott; and Mrs. Theresa Bagley, the former Theresa Marie Scott. On the return trip to Lubbock they traveled via automobile. They stopped and spent some time with Mrs. Bagley who has lately moved to Flagstaff, Arizona.

Mr. and Mrs. Cole motored to Ft. Worth, Texas to visit Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Phillips, formerly Miss Betty E. Scott. Mrs. Phillips is a sister to Mrs. Cole. They traveled on to Carthage, Texas and Shreveport, La., to visit Mr. Cole's brothers, aunts and uncles. On their return to Lubbock they spent a couple of days with her mother and then on to L.A. so Eric could start to school. Eric Sean is a student in Hawthorne Christian School of Los Angeles.

Leroy Molden, who is a former player on the Black Hubber Baseball team in hub city, sends a special hello to James Roy Lewis who was manager of the Black Hubbers when Leroy played.
