Illinois Bell telephone lineman Jack Atterberry compares a half-inch lightguide cable under evaluation in Chicago with a type of cable frequently used to interconnect telephone switching offices. Lightguide cable is used in a new system designed by Bell Laboratories to carry voice, data and video signals. Telephone experts think the system holds the future of telecommunications because of its size, potential low cost of materials and the fact it could open up Picturephone service.

Winners Never Give Up

Gayla Vaughn, three of her fellow teammates and their track coach were returning to the "hub city" from the Regional Track Meet in Odessa, Tx., only seven weeks ago, when a fast moving pick-up truck crash sent her to the hospital.

Her other teammates were treated and sent home, but her track coach spent a week in Odessa Medical Center Hospital.

For Ms. Vaughn, the emergency surgery after the accident was only a start toward her recovery. The 15 year old girl had extreme facial injuries, and she also lost a large amount of blood.

It was several tense hours the Doctors spent trying to revive her, with the fear that if life continued to flow through her veins, she might be paralyzed for life or have brain damage beyond repair.

It was very evident that Gayla had the will power to carry on.

The Doctors staff in the emergency room really didn't see how the young girl would make it, but her great will to live made it possible for her to do so.

Gayla, has already had operations to rebuild her facial features such as her: jawbone, upper lip, and tongue and possibly to remove any unwanted scars.

The young Estacado student was merely a victim of circumstance; therefore she has 15 more plastic operations to overcome.

Because of her missing palate, that she lost in the car mishape, Doctors will have to remake one so that she will be able to talk just as she did before the misfortune took place.

Gayla is still not capable of communicating, but with her right hand she can still write some simple messages.

In the track meet for outstanding participation she won the 440 yard relay and the 220 yard dash.

By the help of God she is able to walk through the halls of her hospital ward for daily exercise.

With all of our prayers and Gayla's will to pull through she'll make it, because winners never give up.

Old Idea is Tomorrow's News

Bell Laboratories Explore Lightwave Communications

In an age when the latest scientific discovery is often yesterday's news, Bell Laboratories scientists think they have an old idea that could be tomorrow's news.

According to Bob Dunbar, division manager for Southwestern Bell in Lubbock, "The re-discovery is light, particularly light to carry sound. In the not too distant future, controlled light may be carrying millions of phone calls in Lubbock and other cities throughout the United States."

The major advantages of using light to carry calls, versus conventional copper cable, Dunbar said, are:

- Greater capacity in a small cable, thus relieving underground congestion already prevalent in many cities.
- Greater availability and lower cost of materials that would go into a lightwave system.
- The possibility that the system would make Picturephone service economically feasible for residential customers.

The division manager said the idea of using light to carry telephone conversations came from Alexander Graham Bell more than a century ago. At the time, however, the inventor of the telephone found that, because lightwaves are easily interrupted, sound would not carry for great distances.

"Today, Bell Labs scientists are taking the original theories and putting them into a practical application," Dunbar said.

According to Dunbar, the world's first lightwave system was installed in Chicago's downtown business district a year ago. The system is carrying voice, data and video signals for about one and one-half miles.

"This pilot system has exceeded objectives," Dunbar said. "After a year of steady operation, the system has provided dependable service with virtually no 'downtime.' Not a single customer phone call has been interrupted by the lightwave components. And transmission errors total less than one second per day.

"The initial breakthrough in lightwave communications came with development of the laser at Bell Labs in 1960," Dunbar said. "During 20 years of research, Bell Labs technicians developed glass fiber lightguides to carry signals through cables installed in standard telephone manholes and ducts. These hair-thin fibers, which look like nylon fishing line are produced by Western Electric, the manufacturing arm of the Bell System."

Explaining lightwave communications, Dunbar said that sound waves are converted into electrical signals as they enter a telephone transmitter. The signals are then converted into electrical pulses, which switch a light source on and off. These pulses interrupt a light beam that travels through a glass fiber, so the light travels in a series of pulses, much like Morse code.

"The light pulses are picked up by a photodetector, which converts them back into electrical pulses, like those used in a conventional telephone system," Dunbar said.

The division manager added that lightguide cables offer two major advantages over copper cables—smaller size and greater call-carrying capacity.

"A lightguide cable less than one-half inch in diameter can transmit 50,000 telephone calls at once—the equivalent of six 3-inch copper cables," Dunbar said. "A single glass fiber can carry up to 672 simultaneous conversations."

In addition, Dunbar said, the basic material of lightguides is silica, which comes from one of earth's most abundant resources—sand.

"And, although we may someday run out of copper, it is doubtful we will ever run out of sand," Dunbar said. "That doesn't even take in the difference in cost."

Dunbar said the most exciting aspect of lightwave communications could be its impact on Picturephone service.

"At present, the majority of telephone users cannot afford the service," Dunbar said. "But we are hoping lightwave systems eventually will make the service affordable. Experiments with Picturephone service in Chicago also have surpassed expectations."

Based on the Chicago experiments, the Bell System has committed itself to having the first lightwave communications link in regular service by the end of 1980.

JACK ANDERSON WITH JOE SPEAR WEEKLY SPECIAL

First Marston, Then Rust: Dems Enforce Justice

Copyright, 1978, United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

WASHINGTON—President Carter caused an uproar when he fired David Marston as the U.S. attorney in Philadelphia. The president had promised to be guided by merit, not politics, in selecting U.S. attorneys. Yet the only real complaint against Marston was that he was a Republican.

Now, we have discovered a similar case in southern Florida. This is becoming the drug smuggling capital of the United States, and U.S. Attorney Robert Rust had been effective in cracking down on drug smugglers. He had an amazing 95 percent conviction rate during his eight years in office.

But he had the same shortcoming as Marston. Rust was also a Republican. He wasn't fired outright. At first, he merely was not allowed to replace staff members who left. This reduced the size of his office by 25 percent in seven months.

Next, a top Justice Department official, William Tyson, called on Rust. Tyson told him it would be better if he would resign quietly. By this time, Rust was despondent over what had happened to his office. So he handed in his resignation last year.

"They did not have the heart to fire me," Rust recently told us. "They just wished upon me the death of a thousand cuts."

A merit commission attempted to find a replacement. The man they decided had the most merit, not surprisingly, turned out to be a Democrat. But law enforcement officials say privately that the new U.S. attorney has been a disaster.

He is Jack Eskanazi, a cautious, methodical former FBI agent and magistrate judge. His credentials look good on paper. But associates say his methods are "stifling." They complain that he is overcautious, that he goes ahead with only the sure cases.

The rate of indictments, as a result, has dropped by 30 percent. The joint federal-state narcotics intelligence force has been abandoned. This has resulted, according to officials, in poorer narcotics enforcement.

Tyson told our reporter Josh Levin that he does not recall asking Rust to quit. He also said there was nothing unusual about prohibiting U.S. attorneys from hiring replacements at the beginning of a new administration.

Eskanazi told us that his methods are different from his predecessors. He said he is now proceeding on a case-by-case basis.

But Carter has accomplished one thing. The Democrats are now enforcing federal laws in southern Florida.

Thai Tussle: The strategic jungle kingdom of Thailand is the last surviving pro-American bastion in Southeast Asia. Now its leading journalists have complained that they were pushed around last month by Vice President Walter Mondale's Secret Service escorts.

We have learned that 50 members of Thailand's press corps boycotted the windup of the Vice President's stay. They refused to write any more about Mondale's visit because of alleged Secret Service harassment.

We have also learned that the Thai journalists filed a formal letter of protest with Mondale's office. The letter has been given the tacit endorsement of Thailand's prime minister and foreign minister.

The language is blistering. It alleges that "high-handed...rude, vulgar and insulting" treatment was accorded the journalists.

Specifically, the journalists charged that Secret Service agents subjected them to body searches before admitting them to a press conference. Yet American newsmen were not searched.

A woman reporter accompanying Mondale charged that she was forcibly dragged off by an American agent. Another complaint that the Secret Service behaved as if Thailand were a colony of the United States.

American officials deny that Secret Service men were involved in the body searching. The searches were conducted, said the officials, by Thai, not American, agents. In fact, American ambassador Charles Whitehouse asked the Thais to stop the body searches.

American officials also blame the other incidents on the Thais. But this hasn't cooled the crisis.

Nuisance Calls: Every day, Americans receive phone calls from people selling everything from cemetery plots to magazine subscriptions. Such a protest has been raised over these nuisance calls that the Federal Communications Commission is considering a ban.

But now the companies have stirred up a backlash. Some claim the calls are vital to their business. Others warn that the right to use the telephone should not be infringed.

Even the American Newspaper Publishers Association has entered the controversy. It warns that a broad definition of unsolicited calls could be dangerous. This might inhibit newsgathering phone calls.

So far, the voices against banning the unsolicited calls seems to be the loudest.

Headlines and Footnotes: State Department sources say that about 6,000 refugees are escaping from Vietnam each month—20 times the rate of a year ago. About 160,000 Indochinese refugees are now in the United States and more are soon to come . . . Gulf Oil was recently fined $40,000 after pleading "no contest" to charges of price-fixing on the uranium market. But the firm made $27 million in pure profit on uranium sales last year alone . . . Alcoholism and drug abuse have become major problems in the Soviet Union, according to intelligence sources.

making new plants unnecessary. One system would turn off appliances for a few minutes, at different times for different areas of a city.

PUC is examining proposals to conserve energy and lower cost of electricity. A series of hearings is under way.

Courts Speak

The Court of Civil Appeals heard oral arguments in a far-reaching case involving the authority of the attorney general to contest actions by state agencies which he believes are not in the public interest.

The Court of Criminal Appeals upheld the death penalty conviction of a Harris County man accused of beating an 81-year-old widow to death. Texas Supreme Court overturned an intermediate court and concluded the state cannot appeal a judgment in a juvenile proceeding which is civil, not criminal, in nature.

A Houston man won a reversal of a life sentence for aggravated robbery due to improper jury instructions.

The Court of Criminal Appeals upheld a sexual abuse conviction of a Cass County man.

The Supreme Court held two Garland men are entitled to trial of their suit challenging city of Garland contributions of the Chamber of Commerce.

AG Opinions

A drainage project to be constructed by an entity other than the Harris County Flood Control District is not exempted from a requirement that Texas Water Commission approve its plans though they already have district approval, Attorney General John Hill concluded.

In other recent opinions, Hill determined: Home rule cities shall follow their own charter provisions on construction bonds in event they conflict with state statutes.

A county tax assessor-collector is required to deposit tax funds in his possession in the county depository pending transfer of the money to the county treasurer.

A justice of the peace cannot maintain his office in an adjoining precinct to his own.

Harris County must require a performance bond on all public works contracts incident to construction of roads, bridges or drainage facilities where amounts exceed $1,000.

Short Snorts

Texas insurance industry nearly tripled during the 1966-76 decade, growing from a $2.6 billion premium volume to $7.3 billion, according to the Bureau of Business Research.

President Carter will visit Fort Worth, Houston, Beaumont and Fort Hood June 23-24.

The comptroller's office set up roadblocks on major highways south of a line from San Antonio to Victoria to insure compliance with state motor fuel tax laws and other permit requirements. Agents will also be checking for violations of state sales and cigarette tax laws.

Texas Board of Education adopted policies making bilingual education mandatory through fifth grade for children who speak little English. Additional English training will be provided through grade 12.

The head of Texans for Equitable Taxation says no Texas tax revolt is likely because the state's per capita property taxes will remain in the median range for awhile.

Texas Research League says Texas school districts on a statewide basis raised local taxes by $148 million instead of following a legislative suggestion to use $130 million in new state aid for purposes of a reduction.

The Texas legislature will face several versions of a tax limitation proposal and a suggested constitutional amendment to extend to voters the right to initiate legislation by election.

Texas Democratic liberals are fuming over adoption of new national party rules for picking of presidential nomination delegates. They claimed the changes were designed to assure re-nomination of President Carter and to discourage opposition to him.

Letter to The Editor

Dear Editor:

It is my desire to come to your city about the last of June. I am a Christian lady, in fact a minister, singer, lecturer, writer, T.V. personality, radio show, college graduate, two Dr's degrees.

I would like to stay with a family instead of a motel or hotel. I'm willing to pay whatever it is they wish for lodging. I just wish to come and see the city, sing in some of the churches, or lecture to some youth groups as this too is a vital part of my life. Thank you.

Energy-Efficient Apartments Part 3

Apartment hunters or dwellers can test an apartment for energy-saving features by using a simple "checklist." This is the third in a series of four articles on energy-efficient apartments. Too many "no's" on this list mean an apartment is an expensive energy-waster! Here is a checklist for sizing up your apartment:

- To each question answer "yes" or "no":
- 1) Largest exterior wall faces south
 - 2) Apartment is between others rather than on end of them
 - 3) Apartment is located on lower level
 - 4) Largest windows and glass areas face south
 - 5) Glass areas are protected from summer sun
 - 6) Exterior walls are protected by trees or roof overhang
 - 7) Exterior walls are light in color
 - 8) Roof is light in color
 - 9) Windows can be used for cross ventilation
 - 10) Screens are on doors and windows
 - 11) Doors and windows are weatherstripped and caulked
 - 12) Heating/cooling equipment is well maintained, and filters are changed on regular basis
 - 13) Water heater is located close to kitchen and bathrooms
 - 14) Windows have roller shades or white-lined drapes
 - 15) Manager and other occupants in the complex report reasonable utility bills

Road Checks

The Texas Department of Public Safety Region 5, covering 60 counties in the Northwest part of the State, plans to conduct a series of extensive road checks in certain selected areas. The primary purpose of these road checks is to enhance enforcement of laws relating to speed and overweight violations.

Summer vacation periods bring added traffic to the Texas highways. It is the purpose of the Department to regulate vehicle traffic during these summer months to save lives and reduce road damage.

This extensive traffic enforcement will begin early next week and continue through the summer months as long as the program proves to be effective.

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams

TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN—Democratic gubernatorial nominee John Hill called major state agency heads together to urge them to slash spending wherever possible and to hold a firm line on new budgets.

Hill's action, as a nominee still facing November opposition, was admittedly unprecedented. And it brought a prompt reprimand from his Republican opponent, Bill Clements, who chided Hill for trying to take over as governor before his election.

But both Hill and Clements shared the view that the spiral of appropriations increases must cease.

"Never before has a Texas legislature faced a stronger demand for stopping government growth," said Hill, noting a California vote to cut property taxes.

"You and I have a choice of fighting those demands and resisting budget cutbacks or accepting our responsibilities and cutting our budgets ourselves," Hill told the agency heads. "It's time for us to take our medicine."

Hill said governmental agencies must get accustomed to the idea of operating with less than they have been used to having. He said he wants Texas to become a model for the nation in innovation and courage in the area of governmental economies.

He made clear, however, he stands by his commitments to a billion dollars worth of increased aid to education, including higher teacher salaries, property tax reform, elimination of the sales tax on utility bills and property tax relief for the elderly, farmers and ranchers.

Cutoff Studied

Don't be surprised if an unseen hand—or device—cuts off your air conditioner one of these days.

At least two Texas utility companies told Public Utility Commission examiners they are looking into possibility of remote control equipment to allow them to switch off electrical appliances during peak use periods.

Use of the load management equipment is still far down the road, but various devices are being evaluated.

Purpose of the equipment (still too costly for practicality) is to reduce consumption during peak hours and, thus, to help stabilize rates by

by Bob Tieucl

For nearly 40 years, we have conducted this column in some form in various newspapers and periodicals throughout the United States. The column has sustained several name changes but form and content has remained essentially the same. The "bellringer" title has been with us for about the past ten years.

And for almost the same number of years, we have sought to tell the world by way of radio, television and the preached word, that "Jesus Loves You" regardless of our station in life and whether we be priest, butcher, baker or candlestick maker. God loves black men, white men, red men, yellow men. Men period. Ours has been indeed a minister-journalism approach and we have loved every minute of it.

This is why we are delighted indeed to report that four of our bellringers (readers of this column thru the years) who have given us much encouragement along the way, have recently been elevated to high office in the General Conference of the C.M.E. Church, held recently in Birmingham, Alabama.

They are Nathaniel L. Linsey of Atlanta, Ga.; James L. Cummings of St. Louis, Mo.; Lynell Carter of Lufkin, Texas, secretary of missions and N. Charles Thomas of Memphis, gen. secretary of the department of personnel.

To Bishop Bertram Doyle (retired) "thanks for your kind remarks. Keep hanging in there as a bellringer and send us a guest column on "My Reflections on the General Conference in Birmingham." Thanks again.

One of the greatest problems facing the C.M.E. denomination reported by leaders, is the problem of support for mission churches and their preachers. Reports are that Rev. Lymell Carter, newly elected secretary of missions will give much study to the problem. At least seventy five percent of the denomination's churches are missions with a great number in small towns and rural areas.

An Educational Experience: Some 10,000 National Education Association are expected to attend the Association's 116 annual meeting in Dallas July 1-6, and for those who led the fight to strengthen NEA support for human and civic rights in the 1960's, it will be a return to the scene of a great victory. It is the 10th anniversary of the 1968 NEA Representative Assembly in Dallas, at which teachers received the presidential report of the NEA Task Force on Human Rights and, on its recommendation, established both the NEA Council and Center for Human Rights, voted $1 million dollars to help displaced Black teachers and principals, and installed in office NEA's first Black president, Elizabeth Koontz.

Among the issues expected to be debated and discussed by delegates are: tuition tax credits, which NEA believes threaten the financial base of the public schools; President Carter's plans for a cabinet-level Department of Education, teacher supply and demand; hazards of teaching in a violent society; Equal Rights Amendment; affirmative action and desegregation; collective bargaining for public employees and NEA's procedures for political endorsements as well as others facing the nation today. It is anticipated that the convention will draw some 100 media representatives and as many as 400 writers and editors from NEA affiliates. We covered the historical 1968 meet and plans are to be in Dallas for the 116th Confab.

Great Quotes: "Is it possible to be able to read, write, and count but not think, reason, communicate, understand, appreciate, relate or infer? I believe the latter are the competencies on which education should be based, the crucial criteria of reference." U.S. Congresswoman Barbara Jordan, who is retiring to go into the classroom.

Dear Bob: Believe it or not, but basically "greed and selfishness" are the basic causes of inflation whether by individuals or corporations. It operates by the theory of "getting mine while the getting is good." One of these days the old economic balloon will have its full of air (inflated prices) and then the inevitable "burst". Then we can all start over again. Signed T.B.

Plainly put we say.

Cook Class Applications Accepted

Applications are now being accepted for a hotel and restaurant cook class sponsored by CETA (Comprehensive Employment Training Act) and taught by the Lubbock Public Schools. The program got underway June 5 and will extend until December 1.

The classes are designed for adults in low income brackets. Applicants need not have high school diplomas to qualify. Trainees also receive basic education instruction. The trainees participate in the program for 40 hours per week and receive a stipend of $1.90 per hour.

Interested persons should visit the CETA Intake Center at 1906 4th Street or may call 763-6477.

Stenographers, Typists Needed

Shaping a peaceful world is one of the most important enterprises of mankind. The U.S. Department of State has a crucial role in this mission and, because of the vital nature of the job, the Department requires special kinds of persons for the conduct of this work. Right now, the Department needs support staff personnel to work in Washington, D.C. We are looking for stenographers and typists, male and female.

In performing their duties stenographers and typists join the team which carries out U.S. Foreign Policy objectives. These employees are called upon to perform a variety of office duties which range from the accurate use of their technical skills to greeting visiting Foreign Ambassadors and other dignitaries. Occasionally, secretaries are scheduled to assist at international conferences in foreign capitals and at the U.S. Mission to the United Nations in New York. Becoming a part of the world of diplomacy can be exciting and rewarding to all who participate.

Headquarters for the Department is in Washington, D.C., a beautiful and cosmopolitan area in which to live and work. There are educational, cultural and recreational opportunities which may be shared with the many persons who are attracted from all over the country to work for the federal government or for private industry in Washington. The new subway system offers increased opportunity to live in any part of Washington as well as the suburbs of Maryland and Virginia, and to commute easily to work to the Department's offices, most of which are located near the White House.

Salaries range from $7,035 to $9,959 per year, depending upon education, experience and Civil Service Commission test scores. Applicants must be American citizens at least 18 years old with a high school diploma or equivalent. A background investigation is required. If accepted for employment, the Department of State will pay transportation costs from home to Washington, D.C.

If you think you can fill one of these jobs in the nation's capital, write to the: Recruitment Branch, Employment Division, U.S. Department of State, Washington, D.C. 20520.

KELLY'S HEROES

by Joe Kelly

Talk about bombshells. Frank Broyles really dropped one on the Southwest Conference, although there were indications that Frank, if not the University of Arkansas, was dissatisfied.

Drawing the wrath of the former coach and athletic director was, primarily, the new conference radio network. Arkansas had its own network and it was lucrative. It had to be broken up to comply with the new agreement with the Mutual network.

There have been signs in the past two or three years that Broyles, in particular, didn't much like abiding by the rules and regulations of the SWC. He apparently thought, or thinks, that Arkansas is bigger—and maybe better—than the league.

Such thinking was fueled by success in football, basketball and baseball. The Razorbacks have enjoyed success of late in all three, although, as pointed out earlier, it's had a hollowing. Also, maybe the level of competition isn't what the Hogs want.

There's no question but what the lack of support at TCU, SMU and Rice means less financial success. Still, you don't see Texas, Houston, A&M or Tech trying to break up the league as a result. All four may be unhappy, but they remain constant.

If Arkansas was to withdraw, and there's no assurance that this will happen, the Razorbacks cannot be assured of any more success, or national recognition, than they get in the SWC.

The talk is that the Razorbacks would go into the Big 8, presuming that Kansas State decides that it no longer wants to compete. K State has been having troubles, particularly in football.

Even with penalties and inability to compete in football, Kansas State really has no other place to go, and other Wildcat programs are in better shape. It doesn't seem likely that the Manhattan school would decide to give it all up.

Arkansas would find no real bed of roses in the Big 8, if it applied and was accepted. Nebraska and Oklahoma will be powers every year, in all probability, while Kansas has its ups and downs, Oklahoma State is a potential usually and Iowa State is strong at times.

Despite its success in basketball last season, could Arkansas compete as well with the Big 8 cage powers? Conference membership might help, of course.

It doesn't seem, on the surface, to be a smart move, but time will tell.

Now, if Arkansas should pull out, what would the SWC do? Why, probably nothing immediately. It would continue the round robin schedule and it would make an additional non-conference grid game available.

In time, the conference could add North Texas, if it so desired, not as a replacement, but because the Eagles were considered worthy. There is some sentiment for that move anyway.

The one big objection to North Texas is that it sits in the Metroplex complex, Dallas-Fort Worth. Both SMU and TCU are having their troubles and much of that is the pro competition. All are competing for the entertainment dollar, which is spread thin.

Adding North Texas, at nearby Denton, would only compound the competition. The main concern of the SWC now is to strengthen the weak schools and not let a few dominate to the point that they destroy the conference.

It will be interesting to see what happens at Oklahoma State now. The Cowboys were caught with their hands in the cookie jar, again, and there probably will be severe penalties imposed.

Unfortunately, Oklahoma State wasn't doing anything that many other schools have done. Like Richard Nixon, their biggest mistake was in being caught. It will hurt the Stillwater program, of course, and might well drop the Ponies well down in football.

The other morning I was listening to KFYO and Jack Dale was talking with Ben Brown. Ben not only is a bowling enthusiast, he also is a strong supporter of Texas Tech.

Ben was bemoaning the fact that there was little talk in the coffeshops, and other places, about Tech athletics. He had a good point in that Tech deserved support, win, lose or draw. Unfortunately, winning generally draws more support.

The report card on Tech still isn't in, won't be until after the approaching football season. So, let's be honest. There isn't much confidence in the immediate future and most people are taking a wait-and-see attitude.

While wishing Tech well, they don't know what the new football staff will do with what material it has. They, the fans, don't think that Tech will win this fall. They don't like what they have heard and read.

In a nearby South Plains town last week I talked with a former Raider. In some ways he exemplified a lot of the reaction.

"When I got my Red Raider Club renewal notice," he opened, "I did this — rip. Oh, they probably won't miss my $150 very much, but there are a few here who didn't send in their customary $1,000. Maybe they'll get the message."

The man may not be typical, of course, because there will always be discontent. Still, it is an attitude that does cause uneasiness, especially if enough feel as he does.

No, I have to agree with Ben. In going over the South Plains I have heard no talk about Tech athletics. And, in my work, I call on a lot of people who are Tech exes, many who belong to the Red Raider Club, still more interested in football.

Generally, by this time, people have analyzed Tech and its chances, as well as the SWC race. This spring and summer I have heard no such talk. There's an ominous sort of silence.

It's enough to make that proverbial long-tailed cat nervous.

Johnny Rodriquez, Linda Hargrove To Appear at South Plains Fair

Country music star Johnny Rodriquez has been booked as one of six shows scheduled during the 61st annual Panhandle South Plains Fair here Sept. 23-30, according to Steve L. Lewis, general manager.

Singer-songwriter Linda Hargrove will be appearing with Rodriquez for one performance at 8 p.m. on Sept. 26.

The other five shows tabbed for Fair Park Coliseum will be announced later, Lewis noted.

Rodriquez, a Texan, has enjoyed a string of 15 consecutive top 10 records, starting with his first single for Mercury in 1972.

His first eight albums also made the top 10 and several climbed all the way to the top spot. His latest is "Practice Makes Perfect."

Rodriquez got his start at Alamo Village, a Texas tourist attraction. While there, he drove stagecoaches, cleaned restrooms, sang a bit and met Tom T. Hall. Hall offered him a job in his band and Rodriquez later accepted.

From there he signed a contract with Mercury Records and made his debut single, "Pass Me By (If You Are Only Passing Through)". Some of his singles since then have become almost classic, such as "Riding My Thumb to Mexico", "That's the Way Love Goes", "Just Get Up and Close the Door", and "Hillbilly Heart".

The new Rodriquez album, "Practice Makes Perfect", contains the usual mix of original songs by Rodriquez and his unique interpretations of other artists' tunes.

Miss Hargrove's songs have been recorded by a host of country stars, including "Just Get Up and Close the Door," which Rodriquez recorded. It also jumped into the Top 10. Lynn Anderson also parlayed another Hargrove song—"I've Never Loved Anyone More"—into the top 10.

Miss Hargrove recently recorded her first album as a singer, "Love, You're the Teacher."

Born and raised in Florida, she has been playing the guitar since she was 10. She moved to Nashville in 1970 and had her first song recorded by Sandy Posey a short time later.

All seats for all six shows are reserved. Tickets are $4, $5 and $6 for all shows, Lewis said.

SAFETY SENSE

Mower No Push Over

Making your lawn beautiful is easy with a power mower. But before you get behind one there are some basic tips you should know, say the experts at the Outdoor Power Equipment Institute, for peak efficiency and safety.

1. If the grass is wet, wait until later in the day or until the next day. Wet lawns can cause you to slip and can make the blades and discharge chute clog.

ALWAYS STEER THE MOWER across slopes—never up and down.

2. With walk-behind mowers always mow across slopes—never up and down.

3. Know how to stop in an emergency—that's one advantage of rereading the owner's manual carefully at the beginning of the mowing season.

4. Banish kids and pets from the lawn while you're working. Playing near the lawn mower can be dangerous for them—and you.

5. Never wear sandals or go barefoot when mowing. Wear as sturdy a shoe as you can find.

6. When using an electric mower, follow proper mowing patterns to avoid cutting the power cord.

7. Avoid contact with the rotating blade. Stop the engine before cleaning the discharge chute or removing the grass catcher bag.

Sheridan's Ride

by Jack Sheridan

While Rodgers and Hammerstein never came near to the program, yet the Lubbock Symphony Orchestra's Summer Pops Nite Concert held in the Memorial Civic Center Exhibit Hall Friday night could not quite shake them off. For, you see, their contribution was and is the song "It's a Grand Night for Singing" ("State Fair"), and certainly Friday night was a "Grand Night for Listening."

If the first annual Summer Pops Nite was a roaring success, dinner, music, beverages and all, then this year's entry was the frosting on the cake. The house was jam-packed, the audience was loving and lovely and seldom, if ever, has a musical evening been both as distinguished and as entertaining as this June lovely was.

I don't know exactly what engendered the spirit or the end result, I just don't know. I do know, as I sat at Table 13, surrounded by old friends, with other checkering my entire living life in Lubbock for the past 24 years peppering the tables nearby, that I was fully and totally aware of the warmth, the heart and the inner light of the evening. What I am saying is the inner personal feeling.

When the lights went down and marvelous William A. Harrod strode to his podium to lead the orchestra into their galaxy opening, the themes from "2001: A Space Odyssey", "Star Wars", "Star Trek", and "Close Encounters of the Third Kind." Wrapping up this outer space group with Sidney Torch's "Shooting Star."

Then Harrod and company delivered a mean and personal, moistened eye, telling blow, direct from stage center to Table 13. The group was called "Do You Remember This One?" What it amounted to was a community sing and what I, and those about me, sang were "I Want a Girl," "You Tell Me Your Dream," "Carolina in the Morning", "Let the Rest of the World Go By," "Bye, Bye, Blackbird and Put on Your Old Grey Bonnet." Others read the words printed in the program. An old geezer like me had no need for words printed. He (I) looked up at the solid rows in the balcony, sang easily from long ago memory and tried to keep the others at the table from seeing the glint of moisture that remembered days long gone.

There was another throat-clutching moment. It was the end of part one of the show. Sure, the Carmen Dragon "Memories of America" is a surefire audience-getter, a standing ovation certainty, with songs like "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," "God Bless America," "America" — who can lose?

But, when the giant American flag at the close of the number slowly unfurled, we stood and I blinked. So did the others closest to me. Thank God, we still have that!

Of course, the second half of the program, brought on the rambunctious, gifted pianist, conductor, arranger, composer Peter Nero, the evening's stellar guest.

In the first half, Harrod retired, Nero both conducted and then sat down and played, to the orchestras accompaniment, the wonderful music with which the star is identified. There was Gershwin and there was a summertime bouquet of old, familiar melodies that brought cheers and applause from the audience. Watching Nero lead the orchestra into each segment of the first half of the second part, I knew (and I wondered how many in the sell-out audience knew) that all that preparation and expertise that the ensemble players showed all through this portion of the program was indelibly traced and marked to the physically-absent, step-down man, our own William A. Harrod. Somebody, if there is any justice left in this Metro area, any solid appreciation still to be shown for any one individual who has given of himself and his gifts over the some 30 or more years to all of us, there should be a surge of power to erect a statue of him, a bust, in a prominent place, probably at the Civic Center, where he reigns supreme, in appreciation—and while he is still around to see it, too. Not "in memoriam," no—now, today, in appreciation.

Nero was superb. He and his trio took over the second portion of the program and concluded the evening to rousing acclaim.

As one walked out of the Civic Center into the lush, warm, still evening, one had peace and gratitude for all concerned. It was a night to remember. What did I say? Yes, it was a "Grand Night for Listening."

Next week something about "Jaws 2", "Damien: The Omen, Part II," and the upcoming opening show at the added South Plains Cinemas, Neil Simon's "The Cheap Detective."

Committee Members to Meet

Representative Charles Evans of Hurst-Euleless-Bedford announced a meeting of the Joint Committee on Judicial Redistricting to be held in Lubbock on Thursday, June 22, 1978. A formal meeting of committee members will begin at 10 a.m. and testimony will be heard at the public hearing that begins at 2 p.m. The meetings will be held at the Commissioner's Courtroom on the first floor of the Courthouse at 904 Broadway. Representative Evans, Chairman of the Committee on Judicial Affairs, invites all interested parties who wish to testify to arrive early. The committee is gathering information for its upcoming report to the 66th Legislature.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

RE: Capital Assistance Grant FY 1978

Notice is hereby given that a public hearing will be held by the City of Lubbock in the City Council Chambers on July 13, 1978 at 10:00 a.m. for the purpose of considering a project for which Federal Capital Assistance under sections 3 and 5 of the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964, as amended, is being sought, generally described as follows:

ODDITIES-HELPFUL TIPS

By Joy Miller

A well-loved game is tennis and though it came to us from England in 1873, America now boasts well over 10 million active players and more than 150,000 courts.

The greatest crowd at a regular tennis match was 25,578 at the first day of the Davis Cup Challenge Round between Australia and the United States at Sydney, Australia, in 1954. The favorite drink among tennis players this year is the Wimbledon Whistle, made with Seagram's Gin and Schwepp's Bitter Lemon with a slice of orange.

A deuce of a tip for your backhand is to hold your wrist stiff during the swing. The racket should be almost level when the ball is hit. In the follow-through, the racket is well out from the body and brought beyond the right shoulder.

Could you pass this Red Cross swimming test?

SWIM:

1. Breaststroke — 100 Yds.
2. Sidestroke — 100 Yds.
3. Crawl stroke — 100 Yds.
4. Back crawl — 50 Yds.
5. On back (legs only) — 50 Yds.
6. Turns (on front, back, side).
7. Surface dive — underwater swim — 20 Ft.
8. Disrobe — float with clothes — 5 mins.
9. Long shallow dive.
10. Running front dive.
11. 10-minute swim.

Anybody who's taken a Red Cross swim course knows how tough it can be. There's a good reason.

We believe drowning is a serious business.

Last year alone, we taught 2,589,203 Americans not to drown—in the seven different swim courses we offer all across the country. (Incidentally, most of the teaching—as with almost everything American Red Cross does—is done by dedicated volunteers.)

A good many of the youngsters not only are learning to keep themselves safe. Thousands upon thousands of them are learning to become lifesavers.

And the life they save—may be your own.

Fit to be TIDE

OR how WE kept our head
1812.

Freedom of the seas. That's what the War of 1812 was all about.

But it would have been sink or swim for our Navy had Americans not bought $11,000,000 worth of government securities to keep our flag upon the waves.

Back then, folks took stock in America by putting their money where their country was. To save the good old Navy.

Today, over 9½ million modern Americans still take stock in America by buying U.S. Savings Bonds.

When you join the Payroll Savings Plan, you help yourself to safe, automatic savings. And you help your country, too.

So buy U.S. Savings Bonds.

They'll keep your savings on an even keel.

Now E Bonds pay 6% interest when held to maturity of 5 years (4½% the first year). Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.

Take stock in America.
