The U.S. Department of Labor today noted that American workers currently guaranteed a $2.20 an hour federal minimum wage will be entitled to $2.30 beginning Jan. 1, 1977. Farm workers eligible for the current $2.00 minimum must receive $2.20 beginning New Year's Day.

At the same time, employees in all branch outlets of chain store operations grossing $250,000 annually will be guaranteed a minimum wage (at the $2.30 rate) for the first time. Until Jan. 1, individual branch stores grossing less than $200,000 annually are exempt from paying the federal minimum wage.

Most workers covered by the federal minimum wage law are already entitled to the $2.30 rate. Employment categories subject to the catch-up increase from $2.20 to $2.30 include:

- household domestic workers,
- laundry and dry cleaning establishments,
- private hospitals, nursing homes, preschools, schools and colleges,
- construction enterprises with gross annual business volumes of less than $350,000. Larger construction firms are already required to pay the $2.30 minimum;
- hotels, motels, restaurants and certain other enterprises with an annual gross sales volume of at least $250,000.

The increases and extended applications of the minimum wage were scheduled in amendments to the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) enacted in 1974.

Coach Hill Recalls Bygone Era

by Mary Alice Robbins

Although his coaching days are long since over, Damon Hill remains a staunch armchair football fan—following closely the gridiron maneuvers of college and pro teams as they flash across his television screen.

On the walls of his den hang team pictures of many of the youngsters—now grown to manhood—that he coached during his long tenure at Dunbar High School. Hill served as football coach at the East Lubbock school from 1937-51.

Football has played an important role in Hill's life, and he, in turn, played a major role in the development of the pigskin sport at Dunbar.

Football was in its infancy at Dunbar when Hill joined the faculty in 1937. Hill came to Dunbar straight out of Prairie View A&M College, replacing a coach who had been at the local school only one semester.

"We really didn't have many kids out for football then," Hill recalled, explaining that many high school students had to spend their time outside of school in the fields picking cotton.

And there were other problems facing Hill and his players in those days. The school lacked equipment, uniforms and a proper playing field.

One of those who helped give the Dunbar team a chance to prove itself was Pete Cawthon, then football coach at Texas Tech. Hill's memories of Cawthon and his assistance to the black football team are included in Lubbock

Dr. Vivian Davis Says

"Don't Vote for Gaines"

In a letter to the editor this week, Dr. Vivian Davis explains why people shouldn't vote for A. Gene Gaines, local attorney, for president of the Lubbock Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP).

Christmas Clearance Bureau Begins '76 Season

There was a time when Lubbock families wishing to participate in the spirit of giving that prevails during the Christmas season gathered up food, gifts and toys and looked around for a family in need.

Perhaps they found a family that really needed help, perhaps they didn't. To compound the problem, a dozen other groups also may have provided for that same family—while another, equally in need of help, may have gone forgotten.

The period when this sort of misdirected Christmas aid occurred has been over 22 years ago. In 1954, Lubbock's United Way originated the Christmas Clearance Bureau in Lubbock to clear families and children in actual need, to avoid duplication and to insure that the free giving spirit of Christmas reached founded needs.

The Christmas Clearance Bureau is currently well into its program of clearing, coordinating and publicizing its program.

The Bureau annually obtains private sponsorship for families in need and coordinates the efforts of other Christmas group activities including Salvation Army's Christmas Cheer program and the Marine Corps Reserve Toys for Tots project.

Families, organizations or individuals wishing to participate in the spirit of Christmas giving may do so in these ways, according to Christmas Clearance Bureau officials:

- Sponsor a family. Get the description of a family from the Christmas Clearance Bureau files, references that have been made by schools, churches, public and private agencies. The family has been investigated and found unable to provide Christmas for themselves.

•Give new toys to the Toys for Tots collection handled by the Marine Corps Reserve. New toys are being solicited because children's eyes are sharp and Santa Claus has a reputation to uphold.

•Remember that the elderly, handicapped and shut-ins are frequently forgotten and lonely. They need Christmas sponsorship as well as family groups.

•For a special Christmas project such as party or special endeavor for children or elderly, call the Christmas Clearance Bureau for aid and suggestions.

Many Lubbockites have a record of consistently helping the same families each year and the Christmas Clearance Bureau requests that these names be registered to avoid duplicating plans others may have for helping the same families.

Files at the Bureau include the sex and ages of children, whether the family needs food, clothing or toys and special entries which note a handicapped child or an elderly person in the family.

Letters have been mailed to schools, churches and other organizations wishing to sponsor families. Last year, 930 families in Lubbock were aided by the activities of the Christmas Clearance Bureau, Salvation Army and Marine Corps Reserve. Families not sponsored through the Bureau are provided Christmas food from the Salvation Army's Christmas Cheer program. Last year, 5,435 toys were distributed to parents of children 12 years of age and under.

Blacks Decisive For Carter

The Atlanta-based Voter Education Project (VEP), which sought to encourage blacks to register and vote in the recent presidential election, reports that 2.4 million blacks voted November 2nd.

Of that number, 92 per cent voted for Jimmy Carter. Thus Carter received more than 2.2 million black votes in winning the White House. Those 2.2 million votes were decisive, for Carter's final victory margin was less than 2 million.

Particularly in the South, where Carter's percentage victory was a close 53 per cent of the vote (although he won practically every state) the black vote margin was even higher. VEP estimates it at more than 95 per cent!

Those figures reflect an historical and even ironic change in the political complexion of Dixie, once the conservative stronghold of the nation. They reflect growing black voting power and also a bloc-voting pattern.

Since the data has been analyzed by both parties, the Republican Party feels as though they didn't seek out the black vote as they should have done. Even unsuccessful vice-presidential candidate, Robert Dole, made it clear last Sunday that he hopes his party will start now finding a way to appeal the black voters in the next presidential election as well as other elections.

Blacks all over America will be waiting to see how much attention President-elect Jimmy Carter will pay to the one-sided pattern of voting by the black community. Many will be looking to see what kinds of opportunities will be made available to citizens of the black community.

If there are no positive opportunities given to the black community in America, this pattern may change, probably will, and some justification of it can be found in the history of the South.

Anyway, the black vote was rather decisive for Jimmy Carter, and only time will tell what will happen.

As I See It . . .

by T.J. Patterson

As I See It, if judges in the District Court here keep on reducing bonds on persons indicted for theft and burglary in our community, we will still have persons properties stolen here.

Just last week, a young Lubbockite's bond was reduced from $50,000 to $2,500 for an apparent theft of property of more than $10,000.

When persons allegedly responsible for committing theft or burglary against other people are let back on the streets, these individuals are in position to commit the same act again.

In this writer's opinion, it appears that residents of east Lubbock are tired of the house burglaries and theft against them. If the authorities don't do anything to keep these individuals behind bars, some of them will apparently have a confrontation with citizens who are tired of this kind of a thing.

This writer would hope that the judges of the District Courts here would do something to keep an eye on those persons who apparently are responsible for these kinds of acts without letting them free to commit the same acts against Lubbock citizens.

It appears as though the upcoming election for president of the Lubbock Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) will be an interesting one. After reading this week's "Letter to the Editor" from Dr. Vivian Davis, a great deal of politics have begun and will continue through election time, Sunday, Dec. 12.

Dr. F.L. Lovings, president, is seeking a third term to this post, and is being challenged by A. Gene Gaines and David Sowell.

Dr. Davis, to this writer's knowledge, is the first member to take a public stand in the upcoming election. Her letter this week should add a lot of fireworks to this important election.

Food for thought: "Our society is one that repairs autos but junks men," H.L. Mencken.

Data filed for 1975 with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission from private employes with 100 or more workers, showed that while blacks were 10 per cent of the civilian labor force, they (blacks) were 13.1 per cent of officials and managers, 4.7 per cent of professionals and technicians and 7.1 per cent of craft workers. Statistics for women and Hispanics showed much the same pattern.

It would be nice if the City of Lubbock used the same pattern for the employment of blacks and browns on the Lubbock Fire Department. Those figures revealed reflected the pattern in the private sector, too.

It appears as though there will be another bond election for the Lubbock Public Schools in the near future. This writer hopes there will be some consideration given to the young people of E.C. Struggs Junior High School for additional gymnasium facilities for girls.

Since young ladies have opportunities now to participate in sports, they need some place to practice for their effort.

Additional gym facilities for girls was mentioned during the last bond election, but apparently there were no funds for such improvements at Struggs Junior High School. This writer hopes there will be some consideration given to these young ladies if the bond elections passes.

Letters To The Editor . .

Dear Editor:

Recently on a TV program in which he was reported to have filed bankruptcy, I heard Gene Gaines say that he wanted to be president of NAACP in Lubbock. Mr. Gaines had already announced his intentions at the October Branch meeting. It is certainly the right of Gene Gaines or any other bone fide member of the branch to run for any office he chooses in the organization. Whether he should be elected to that office is another matter. I have watched Mr. Gaines' campaign very closely, and several questions come to my mind.

1. Why has Gaines been able to recruit more than 100 members for the local NAACP this year just in time for the new members to be able to vote for him? Every year the local branch has a membership campaign, but Gaines has never been such a hot shot recruiter before. I wonder too, why, since he has been able to get so many new members, less than ten of them have showed up at any of the regular branch meetings. They are held monthly and publicized in the paper. In a recent confrontation I had with him, Mr. Gaines told me, "It's all politics; pay your four dollars and vote." Well, the NAACP of which he wants to be president has always been nonpolitical and nonpartisan. He hardly has the spirit to lead a nonpartisan civil rights organization.

2. Why is Mr. Gaines suddenly interested in leading the local branch when he has never before been concerned with doing anything to help it? When he was appointed chairman of a branch committee, Gaines was never able to serve. He told me he could remember no such appointment. That may be why he so rarely ever attended meetings, and why he didn't bother to pay his membership a couple of years ago. But you would think if you wanted to be the leader of a group you would involve yourself in what the group was trying to do.

3. What record does Mr. Gaines expect to run on? I cannot think of one thing he has done successfully for the benefit of minority people in Lubbock. When he ran for political office, he quit the race before the voting. He explained to me that it was not possible for him to raise funds to continue his candidacy. You would think anyone who tried to run for public office would count the cost first. Maybe he intends to run on having filed suit to do away with the present inequitable system of electing City Council members in Lubbock. I certainly do agree that the system is unjust—that Lubbock citizens do not get equal representation in our city government. But you would think that Mr. Gaines would want to stay uncommitted until the suit is heard. Surely he would not want any conflict of interest to stand in the way of successfully completing that important task.

4. Is he running because he is young and because the community needs vigorous leadership? Well, in years he is not an old man, but he uses the same old timey tactics. Niggahs always did plot, connive, and backstab for a few crumbs while Charlie ate the whole pie.

I know, Gaines is running because he has a right to. What I don't know is why in the world I should vote for him.

Sincerely, Vivian I. Davis, 3711 46th St.

Future College Trends

Some twenty years ago and less, the college scene was shaken by mutterings about the possible extension of two-year community or junior colleges. These colleges—open generally to all adults—were to offer vocational as well as academic courses. "Horrors!" "Ye Gods!" "Heaven save us!" Such were the cries—and pious pleadings—raised by the forces of "purity in college life."

Now, not a few of these colleges and universities opposing the supposed dilution of standards in collegiate life were major state institutions possessed, of course, with exceptionally short memories. The newly projected junior or community colleges were to do less disturbance to academia than the Land Grant Act of the 1860's which created most of our major state university systems.

The Land Grant "colleges" were, of all things, to add to the collegiate curriculum, preserved in its purity from the late Middle Ages, such "courses" as agronomy (or agriculture, that is, farming), animal husbandry (or how to take care of horses, mules, cows, dogs and other household animals) and even surveying and the care and development of fruit and flower seeds. Indeed, it was out of this spirit that the late Dr. George Washington Carver was able to be trained as an agronomist in a mid-western Land Grant college and then move on to make a Tuskegee one of the world's marvels in his laboratory for the study of foods and fibers at Tuskegee.

When the junior or community college movement was being promoted several decades ago, not a few voices urged that black Americans move to the helm and help create a rational semi-conventional community college enterprise both as a worthy and far more dignity-affording substitute to public-school sponsored "basic adult education" and as middle ground between no post-high school education at all and the traditional four-year college.

Fortunately, Congress was in the mood to make room for the post-World War II baby boom and to catch up with the Russian Sputnik. Hence millions of federal dollars began flowing for the creation of community-based two-year colleges with "lower" or different entrance requirements, offering some much-needed remedial courses and a smorgasbord of non-credit and credit, and transferable and non-transferable academic and vocational courses.

Today, the junior or community college is not only an accepted and highly respected aspect of American academic life. It is here to stay and many traditional four-year institutions are rushing to copy the junior college format but dignifying it not with a two-year Associate degree but rather with a four-year Bachelor's or Baccalaureate degree!

While a large number of these junior or community colleges are located in urban areas, the major trend has been to set up these new schools in semi-rural or suburban areas, far removed from the black remedial and vocational education-needing inner cities, but often with urban centers or branches to accommodate some central city needs.

We, as blacks, far too traditional in our orientation, simply missed the boat. Many or perhaps most of our black four year colleges could have used their facilities in early and late evening hours for community college purposes. In black education we have not learned well the generally unlearned racial lesson that we are not parties to the traditional upper, middle and lower class social and economic structure. We are in that structure's basement, and there is no room for traditional elitism in anybody's basement.

Now what is said here is not meant essentially to criticize but rather to describe the often ludicrous and self-defeating binds into which we have fallen in the past so as to avoid them in the future.

Today, as twenty years ago, efforts are under way to discover new ways to end welfare, put a halt to illiteracy and halt the desperation-born crime in many of our cities' streets. Our black colleges have, then, once more a strategic opportunity.

There is no need whatever for newcomer social scientists to "study our case." Nor is there a need for competitive grantsmanship for experimental monies to find out how to educate uneducated and disillusioned blacks.

There has been more than enough research to suggest that the secure hope of a job coupled with the immediacy of rewards is more than enough to inspire the vast majority of the uninspired. Where Associate's degrees have been offered in the past, these may be continued in the future. Where two-credit courses have found a place that is workable, the one-credit course (affording a sense of ready accomplishment) may also find a place. Further, a Certificate of Study, possibly transferable when feasible, could supplement the Associates' degree.

The possibilities are infinite. The need is urgent. Resources are at hand. Imagination and determination on our part are the ingredients chiefly needed.

Return from Honolulu, Hawaii Visit

Ms. Louise West, Juanita Patton and Reble Coleman arrived home Monday, Nov. 22, from Hawaii, where they spent four days touring the beautiful island.

They departed from Lubbock November 16 by car to El Paso, Texas, where they boarded American Airline to Los Angeles. From there, via Western Airline to Hawaii, where they were greeted at the Honolulu airport with a warm "Aloha" and a beautiful rope of flowers were placed around their neck. Then they were escorted to their room at the Queen Kapiolani Hotel overlooking the Waikiki Beach.

While there, these ladies took advantage of seeing as much of Honolulu as possible. When they weren't on escorted tours, they took the city bus to various shopping centers and gift shops, including the International Market Place.

On Friday, Nov. 19, they were escorted on a sightseeing trip around the city, including a tour of the Punch Bowl. The Punch Bowl is a flat topped hill at the foot of the higher mountains that is only a short distance from downtown Honolulu. It is a volcano crater. At the floor of the crater more than 16,000 war casualties are buried. It is known as the "National Memorial of the Pacific."

Their next excursion was at the Hala Hut where they enjoyed the best in exotic food and entertainment, including the Hula dance. From there to the Oceania. This is a night club on a ship that set out in the ocean. There they saw the Dick Jensen show and Hula dancers.

Saturday they took a cruise on the Leilani to Pearl Harbor. Mrs. Coleman stated, "As we sailed the clear blue waters," we listened to a beautiful narration of how the Japanese converged on Pearl Harbor Dec. 7, 1941.

At 5:45 p.m. they were transferred by a tourist bus to the Aloha Stadium where UTEP of El Paso was defeated by the University of Hawaii.

Sunday Ms. West, Patton and Coleman shopped for souvenirs, with great anticipation for departing for the main land and home.

The ladies stated, "Our trip to Hawaii was just fantastic!" A beautiful experience and sight to see.

by Joe Kelly

Baylor, and only Baylor, stands between Texas Tech and one of the best seasons in its history. If the Raiders are able to trim the Bears, it will be their best season ever, because they will have tied for a co-championship of the conference.

A co-championship would be an amazing accomplishment, for the Raiders were not picked in the top four in the league before the season started. And they richly deserve it.

The 1976 Raiders are cast in the same mold as a lot of Alabama and Arkansas teams of the past. They are not physically powerful, but they have quickness and speed. They also have great determination, a never-say-die attitude.

They have taken a defensive team that was suspect before the season started and combined it with an offensive team that has come along in each game. They have earned their record.

Arkansas, even with a sub quarterback, was a real test. The Razorbacks still had a strong offensive line and they always are tough defensively. Despite that, the Raiders shut them down and stayed on the attack all afternoon.

And any question about the character of this squad was answered. The Raiders shook off that ego-crushing loss to Houston. They proved that they are one of the nation's top teams.

Something has been written elsewhere and something has been said about the perfidy of Tech fans, who desert a losing team much as rats desert a sinking ship. Every school has that type of fan.

There are fans who stay with a team, win or lose. They are the ones who never think a game is lost, no matter the score. They are the ones who put their money behind a team and then stay with it. Who cares about the fair weather "friends" who leave when adversity strikes.

Baylor, of course, is the final test in the regular season. A victory would give the Raiders a 10-1 record and how many other teams in the entire You Ess of A have the same mark? Who else has tied for a conference title?

The Bears present a problem. They have been shunned for a bowl, they have a winning record, they are explosive. Winning Saturday will be no easy task, but it can be accomplished.

A Raider letdown at this point would be almost unbelievable. A co-championship is better than none at all and would be something no other team has accomplished in 16 years. It isn't the whole loaf of bread, but half is better than none.

This ought to be the Saturday of "All I See Is Red" because Baylor is green and the contrast would show more. Besides, Tech needs the support of everyone in a tough game.

And so the season is almost over, with more than its share of surprises. Arkansas and Texas couldn't come up with a capable quarterback and the Wishbone T fell apart. A&M was upset twice in the early going, came back strong, but too late.

Tech and Houston, a pair of upstarts, managed to circumnavigate the dangerous pitfalls and come out on top. Baylor disappointed its backers after being picked fairly high. SMU surprised and TCU and Rice did about as expected.

I doubt that Frnak Broyles and Darrell Royal are in serious trouble, but there will be loud mumblings. And another season like this could do either or both in after great records.

Jim Shofner has already departed TCU, but both Rice and SMU were operating with first year coaches. Grant Teaff hardly is due for the axe at Baylor, where he brought the Bears out of hibernation after 50 years. There will be no change at A&M.

So, after Saturday, the Raiders will be turning their sights to Houston and the Bluebonnet Bowl, Nebraska in particular. The Cornhuskers will be a formidable foe, but not unbeatable.

In fact, Tech has handled Big 8 teams pretty well—Kansas, Oklahoma State, Iowa State, Colorado. They haven't played the others in recent years, but that means little. Tech is, along with Houston, the best in the SWC and that means a lot.

Sorry that I can't bring you a report on Tech's opening basketball game, but this is being written, of necessity, on Sunday. I rather imagine that Tech won and looked better than expected.

Gerald Myers was singing the blues, which is what he should do after losing Rick Bullock. He exuded, in varying degrees, pessimism about this season. He has the basis for such an outlook. Losing Bullock, the backbone of Raider teams, is serious.

But the Raiders still have the nucleus for a good, if not outstanding team. It will be different. They won't rely on the big man as much. They should run more. They will have to have improved outside shooting. The potential is there.

It should be an interesting team to watch and the guards will be the key. And Saturday night will be the real test when they take on South Carolina. After that game we'll know much more about this edition of the Raiders.

News From Home Folks

The Texarkana, Texas, Courier tells of the resignation of a local YMCA leader who has served his community especially well:

Willie L. Boyd, part-time director of the Texarkana YMCA has submitted his resignation which became effective September 1, 1976.

Boyd has worked as part-time YMCA Director for 4½ years, and has been a "Y" club sponsor for 13 years.

During his tenure as part-time Director, more than 1,000 boys and girls have participated in the summer recreational program and the youth and government clubs.

The summer recreation program consisted of Little League baseball, Babe Ruth, Senior League and girl's softball.

He has provided training for youth in political leadership in the American Democratic Process through guidance, planning and experience in the theory and practice of determining public policy.

Each year a selected group of members of the Coed Hi-Y club attends a district convention and a state conference held in Austin, Texas. Many young people are influenced by this program, to become leaders in their communities and in the state and nation.

He is currently serving on the board of management for the Texas YMCA Youth and Government Program. This board consists of staff and lay representatives appointed by each of the nine district conferences and members at large. The board of management determines policy and oversees the program.

Alex Habersham publisher of the Macon, Georgia, Courier, has called for a local Minority Leadership Council, an idea probably needed in all of our communities across the nation. He writes:

Recently there have been several issues that have come up that are going to affect the lives and livelihood of all of Macon's citizens.

Although all of these issues affect every citizen I think they should be considered differently by the black community. Members of the black community are often confused about what is best for them. Consequently they look to minority leadership to guide them in the direction that would be most beneficial for them. Realizing that blacks are victims of 200 years of oppression, it stands to reason that blacks would try to support these issues that would be steps toward eliminating oppression.

This is also justified because unity in the black community on political issues would practically guarantee the outcome that would be most beneficial to blacks.

If black leaders in this community would forget their personal differences, egos, and funny ways and put the community first, they could correct the majority of injustices that have gone on in this community. It seems that with the undisputed power and a Minority Leadership Council would have, it would already be a reality. Moreover all the division that now exists on current issues would not exist. This is true because the council would vote on issues as they come up and make one recommendation to the citizens of this community who look to it for leadership.

The Portland, Oregon, Observer reports an eminent A.M.E. bishop's demands for black liberation movement. The Observer reports:

H. Hartford Brookins, new Bishop of the Fifth Episcopal District of the African Methodist Church, called upon Black Americans, led by the Black Church, to demand Black liberation at home and abroad.

"Black and white America stands on the Threshold of a third century and some of us have taken it lightly, but God has called us to this hour for such a time as this. And if we serve well at this point in our lives—Black and white and brown and yellow, left and right, Republican and Democratic, shall rise up one day and call us 'blessed'—but if we fall in this hour, they shall rise up and haunt our future and call us 'cursed'."

"We must rise up and seize the moment and save the hour for generations yet to come."

Earlier in the day, Brookins, who for the last four years has led the district in Central Africa, expressed his concerns on current conflict on that continent and on racial oppression in the United States.

Brookins explained that although the historic backgrounds of Rhodesia and South Africa differ, their social, cultural and apartheid governments are the same so you cannot discuss one without discussing the other. They are really one and the same in principal. The best possible forecast from those who are in charge of the liberation movement in Rhodesia is that they predict that within a minimum of a year and maximum of three years, that they will have no recourse but to demand majority rule, however that rule comes. "Now you, of course, know that at this point it is headed for bloodshed. I believe that unless the super powers move with all haste to bring the kind of diplomatic and economic factors to bear...to topple the Smith regime—in South Africa it will be an outright blood bath. My prediction is that we will see something worse than Vietnam and I predict that this will then lead through Nibimibia, which is the buffer zone going into South Africa, which then means that those same forces determined to get freedom and justice and having no recourse but to fight, we can see that the Blacks will ultimately take over the total of South Africa in the very near future."

Brookins predicted that South Africa will be more difficult to defeat because of foreign investments there, "because of the under-the-table attempt on the part of our government and other governments like it to insure that the white dominated regime of South Africa hold out a little longer until certain investments can be protected."

Brookins believes the multi-national corporations that are the economic support for the Rhodesian and South African governments should be used to force submission to majority rule. The question is usually posed whether withdrawal of the corporations would hurt Blacks more than it would help. "There is the question of whether a man wants to die suddenly or to die a little bit every day. They have decided that, since they are dying rapidly every day, they have no recourse but to demand full majority rule now."

Carol of Lights Observance Scheduled at Texas Tech

The bells will ring in Christmastide at Texas Tech University as hundreds lift their voices in celebration Friday at the annual Carol of Lights at Texas Tech University.

The ceremony, which precedes the lighting of thousands of colored bulbs outlining the Spanish arches at Tech, will begin about dusk. Recorded music will start at 6:30 p.m. as crowds gather. At 6:55 p.m., the Saddle Tramps torchlight processional will signal the beginning of the program in the Science Quadrangle on campus.

Theme for the program this year is, "The Bells were heard upon the lighting of the world." The theme will be expressed in music—a bell choir, the Texas Tech choir, group singing, a brass ensemble, a group called "Black Voices," and a concert on the university's new 36-bell Baird and Larabee Carillon.

The program is arranged by the Residence Hall Association with the Women's Service Organization and Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity. Chi Rho, a religious service organization, is in charge of the luminarios which outline central campus streets. Mark Wells, a sophomore business administration major from Dallas, is chairman for the event.

The Tech Brass Ensemble, directed by Prof. Robert Deahl, will introduce the program with a fanfare. Red Raider football Coach Steve Sloan will give the invocation, and RHA President Ruth Foreman will give the welcome.

Joe W. Jones will direct the Oakwood Baptist Church Bell Choir. Joe Williams will direct "Black Voices," a group sponsored by the Student Organization for Black Unity. The Tech Choir will be conducted by Prof. Gene Kenney.

Prof. Kyung Wook Shin will direct all visitors and program participants in singing "O Come, All Ye Faithful" and "It Came Upon a Midnight Clear."

Wells will have brief comments, and then a short fanfare from the Brass Ensemble will herald the turning on of the lights at 7:30 p.m.

Group singing will conclude the program. The final Christmas carols will include "Joy to the World," "Deck the Halls" and "Jingle Bells." The carillon concert by Prof. Judson Maynard will begin as soon as the group singing ends.

Coach Hill . . .

author Etta Lynch's recently published book, "Tender Tyrant," the story of the Tech coach's life.

"At that time," Hill recalled in the book, "segregation was strictly enforced. In spite of this, Pete and I became close friends, and I felt easy and comfortable with him. Not only that, but our school never could have fielded a team without him. We didn't even have uniforms till Pete came."

According to Hill, Cawthon went through the Tech athletic department, culling out everything that was worn. He gave the used uniforms and equipment to Hill for his team.

"It wasn't junk, though," Hill noted in the book. "It was good equipment—big for my boys, of course, but we were sure glad to get it."

Cawthon also let the Dunbar team use the Tech football field and sent his Tech boys to practice elsewhere, Hill said. The high school didn't have enough money back then to afford the lights on the field, so the team played during daylight hours.

"He was one of the finest men I've ever known," Hill commented. "He always knew that Negroes knew something about football. Some people used to think blacks played a different brand of football—but that wasn't so."

In 1945, Hill's team was using the "T" formation. His first "T"

Boley High School band in practice drill section. Boley has had championship teams the past three years.

formation quarterback, according to the longtime coach, was Charles Brown, now principal at Struggs Junior High School.

Other members of that 1945 team included Clarence Priestley, Charles Waters, Nathaniel Sampson, "Bacon" Walker, Curtis Gibson, Theodore Sneed, Charlie Payne, Nathaniel Williams, Arthur Jones, R.J. Gibbons, Joe Snell, "Black Joe" Oliver, Wyatt Ward, David Lewis, J.C. Wiley, Fred Wright, Lawrence Robinson, Tommie Isaac, Dennis Sanders, O.C. Horton, Jessie Jackson, Oliver Walker and Eddie Bullock.

Some of Hill's former football players are still active in the sport, he said. Jackie Graves, a member of the 1940 team, is a scout for the Philadelphia Eagles. Prentis Williams, who formerly coached at Dunbar and Coronado High Schools, became the first black coach at the University of Texas.

Hill still keeps up with Dunbar's football teams. "I don't go meddling with the program—I just go to the games," he said.

His own coaching career came to an end in 1951 following a bus accident. Hill remained on the Dunbar faculty until 1974, serving chiefly as a shop teacher.

Now, he spends a lot of his time at his home, located to the northeast of the Dunbar campus. Hobbies keep him busy part of the time, and he has mastered macrame and ceramic art.

But that old interest in football still remains. You can bet that when two teams suit up and face one another during the weekend televised games, Damon Hill is in his armchair cheering them on.

A good friend is one who doesn't care how much money you have.

The 24 coaches feature complete heating and cooling facilities and seating room for 21. Painted bright orange and white, the new modern buses are accented with black and gold, with 60-inch double doors.

New lower fares make riding Citibus very economical. The adult fare is 40 cents, with a new youth fare of 20 cents for those 17 and under. Elderly and handicapped persons also ride for 20 cents. Children 6 and under ride free, and transfers are free.

With new expanded route service, Citibus provides access to major health facilities, shopping centers and many new residential areas. The new routes also provide new connections on 4th, 34th and 50th Streets, for getting across town faster and easier, without downtown transfers.

West Texas is Home Away From Home for Student from Niger

For Jada Gonda, a student from Niger, West Texas is home away from home—especially the land and the climate.

Gonda is a graduate student of plant and soil sciences at Texas Tech University. He chose this West Texas institution because of the similarity in the soil and the climate between the Lubbock area and Niger.

"That way he can readily apply the knowledge he gains at Texas Tech when he returns to his home country," said Dr. William F. Bennett, associate dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences at Texas Tech.

Gonda is working with Dr. Daniel R. Krieg in the Plant and Soil Sciences Department on sorghum and millet research. They are two important crops in Niger. Niger is a landlocked country in West Africa and is mostly desert land. The capital city is Niamey.

The first African students came to Texas Tech for agricultural science education about four years ago. They were from Lesotho.

"Their performance in our agricultural sciences program was above average and we have encouraged more students from that country and other African nations since then," said Dr. Harold E. Dregne, director of the International Center for Arid and Semi-Arid Land Studies (ICASALS) at Texas Tech.

This semester there are more than 20 international students in agricultural sciences programs at Texas Tech. Their majors include agronomy, plant and soil sciences, agricultural engineering and animal science.

Longtime Resident Succumbs Here

Friends here were saddened with the death of Mrs. Hunter Williams, 2320 Birch Avenue, a longtime resident of Lubbock.

Mrs. Williams passed away Saturday evening at nine at St. Mary's Hospital after several weeks of illness. She had undergone surgery earlier this summer.

Arrangements are pending at South Plains Funeral Home. Included in the survivors are a sister, Mrs. Katie Tanner; nephews, nieces, grandchildren, foster daughter, and many other relatives and friends.

Mrs. Williams was a member of the Mount Gilead Baptist Church.

"Extension Update"

Short-Term Freezing

One week is long enough to store frozen food in the ice cube compartment of the ordinary one-door refrigerator. These compartments were not designed to store frozen food.

Frozen foods should be held at 0 degrees F, but when the freezing compartment is held at 15 degrees F or lower, other food items in the refrigerator will freeze.

An ice cube compartment will keep ice cubes well frozen at any temperature below 20 degrees F, but bacteria start growing at 10 degrees F.

The temperature in a compartment may well read as high as 15-20 degrees F. Frozen foods begin to thaw in this temperature range, even though the packages may feel hard. One day at 20-25 degrees F does more damage to foods than a full year in the freezer at 0 degrees F.

If frozen food must be stored in the ice cube compartment, plan to use it within a period of one week. Keep the temperature control at a setting just above freezing in the general storage area.

Buy frozen food just before checking out of the grocery store. Ask the grocery sacker to put frozen foods in an insulated bag or a double paper bag, then put them in the ice cube compartment as quickly as possible upon arrival at home. Place the frozen food in contact with the floor of the ice cube compartment or ice tray shelf.

Housing Authority Board of Directors To Consider HUD Report Response

The Housing Authority board of directors may meet before its Dec. 9 session, to consider a response to a report from the Housing and Urban Development (HUD) office in Dallas.

Authority Executive Director David C. Fair said that he is drafting the response and hopes to have it ready before the regular session.

The HUD report followed an inspection by Housing and Urban Development officials, and pointed out some areas in which the local authority was not up to HUD standards.

Fair commented on the report at the board's November meeting, and noted that many of the problems were either being corrected or could not be corrected because of lack of funds.

Fair said that he has met with City Manager Larry Cunningham to solicit the city's aid in some projects. "I couldn't ask for any better response," Fair said.

The executive director said that city crews have removed debris in the Green Fair and Hub

Homes projects, and have filled chuckholes in driveways. He added that Cunningham has indicated initial agreement on plans to increase lighting in the projects, but details have yet to be worked out.

Fair, appointed to the post last summer, said that some of his plans have been hampered by the illness of his assistant Evelyn Joplin, who underwent major surgery recently.

Sheridan's Ride

by Jack Sheridan

The off-again, on-again history of the little movie house on Broadway between Aves. R and S picked up again this past week when the house reopened as a "repertory theater" under the management of Don Bollinger, a very young operator with a company that has similar houses in Dallas and Albuquerque, N.M.

What the schedule will call for are selected revivals, some out of the great era of Hollywood's 1930s and other of more recent vintage, all of them highly regarded for their quality and content.

There will be distinguished foreign films as well as British and American, none of the bills penned in for more than three days playing time. Among the upcoming films are Ingmar Bergman's version of "The Magic Flute," opera by Mozart, which will end its brief run tonight.

In its way will come such outstanding films as "Platinum Blonde" with Jean Harlow, "Cover Girl" with Rita Hayworth, "My Little Chickadee" with Mae West and W.C. Fields, and Fields' "Never Give a Sucker an Even Break" with Fields (on the same bill), not one but four Marx Brothers early films on one bill, "Money Business," "Horse Feathers," "Coconuts" and "Duck Soup," and a double bill of "Midnight Cowboy" and "The Last Tango in Paris," to name only a few. It is a rare opportunity to see these fine films again and to catch them for the first time.

Lubbock has needed such a house and it is only to be seen and hoped for that the Bijou sustains the necessary support from the public. We wish them well, Bollinger and his little theater.

Though these few remarks are tardy, since the play concluded its run last week, but they are no less enthusiastic for the beautifully-mounted, very well played, superbly directed production of Peter Shaffer's study of the search for values both material and spiritual in old Peru, "The Royal Hunt of the Sun" at the University Theatre at Texas Tech.

This production is important in more ways than one, for it is the Tech entry in the American College Festival of plays, which opens today at the University Theatre and continues through Saturday night. Tech is hosting the annual gathering and the play line-up is impressive, indeed. You should try to catch some of the entries which will be announced in the daily press.

The Tech production of Pizarro's expedition and his confrontation with the Atahualpa, Soverieng Inca of Peru was a thought-provoking challenge to the audience and was received with acclaim. In the two leads were Brad Williams and Bob Starr doing noble jobs, and the long cast most ably supported them. The narrator, playing both the young Page to Pizarro and the older narrator, was lucidly done by William Carter.

The direction was handled with his usual delicacy, power and immaculate staging by Ronald Schulz. The choreography was by Rick Brame and the handsome production was designed by Forrest A. Newlin.

A film that is recommended for the entire family is the G-rated "Joe Panther," at the Cinema West out on 19th St.

This is the story of a young Seminole Indian who must achieve his manhood by fighting alligators in the Florida swamps. Ray Tracey, a newcomer, plays the title role and he plays extremely well. His buddy is handled nicely by A. Martinez. Two well-regarded oldtimers appear in this one, though their roles are nothing to shout about. They play with their usual professionalism, Brian Keith and Ricardo Montalban.

This little film has much to recommend and provides a simple and direct little tale that will please most folks.

There is a very interesting, absorbing book in the Lubbock Public Library that many of you might like to have directed to your attention. It is called "The Day the Laughter Stopped" and it recalls very vividly and tragically the sex scandal that set the pattern for film-making on subject and cuts from then on.

It was Labor Day, 1921 in San Francisco. There was a party in progress in the St. Francis Hotel suite of the top-ranking comic star of those silent picture days, Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle.

One of the young ladies present, Virginia Rapp, a would-be actress, became ill and died. It was rumored that she had been attacked but this book cites trial records, investigation and all the politically ambitious men in the Golden Gate city who drove this persecution through three trials, ultimately vindicating the tragic Arbuckle.

But, the die had been cast. Arbuckle's career was finished and the panic-stricken Hollywood figures, some of the most famous producers and studio heads frantically set about to govern sex, drug and other moral activities of their stars. This is when the famous Will Hays came to the fore as the "censoring body" and the Hays Office for many years thereafter set the rules and regulations for stars' personal lives as well as limited the frankness on the screen in almost sophomoric manner.

Arbuckle directed films for some years, until his death, but under an assumed name. He had become the "victim," in the worst sense, of prejudice, false rumor and the onslaughts of national women's and civic groups, hysterically righteous in their militancy, even though Arbuckle had been officially cleared of wrongdoing.

It is a fascinating book by David Yallop of one of the most celebrated of all Hollywood scandals and is well worth the reading for all film buffs.

Incidentally, the title "The Day the Laughter Stopped" came from the late comedian and colleague of "Fatty" Arbuckle, the frozen-faced Buster Keaton.

Bullock Announces Tax Collections

Comptroller Bob Bullock announced Friday that his Lubbock Enforcement Office collected $168,716 in taxes during the first two months of the current fiscal year (September and October). Audits by the office yielded $102,433 in additional taxes owed the state.

Bullock said the office conducted 41 audits in September and October, yielding an average $113 in additional taxes owed the state per audit hour.

"I'd say that that's a pretty good return on our investment," said Bullock. "These audits produce money that otherwise would have gone uncollected if we hadn't dug it out."

Bullock emphasized that the collections by his Lubbock office are in addition to the state taxes routinely paid directly to Austin by Lubbock-area taxpayers.

The Comptroller's 36 district offices collected a total of $9,777,919 in taxes for the two months and uncovered through audits $5,112,000 in additional taxes owed the state.

The Lubbock office, headed by Donald F. Paxton, is located in Suite 400, 4902 34th Street, in the Terrace Shopping Center, and is open from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. The telephone number is 795-0691.

The Lubbock office serves Lubbock, Bailey, Borden, Cochran, Cottle, Crosby, Dawson, Dickens, Floyd, Gaines, Garza, Hale, Hockley, Kent, King, Lamb, Lynn, Motley, Terry and Yoakum Counties.

Ringling The Bell . . .

with Bob Tieucl

Black Perspectives: After the election day shouting is over, we need to soberly consider what the shouting was really all about, believes Congressman A.F. Hawkins of Washington, D.C. Both presidential candidates stressed their belief that they cared about the fortunes and misfortunes of Americans. By actions enhancing and perpetuating the best that America can offer its sons and daughters, a President who cares makes his concerns quite apparent, through his insistence that government act positively and quickly when action is needed.

A significant criticism of past presidents of both major parties has been that once elected, some presidents forget how they came into office. Rightfully so, people resent a style of life that some forgetful presidents adopt, which propels them into dealing only with the rich and the powerful. This whole period, had demonstrated that Americans want honest elected officials, who care about people and who can be trusted to govern wisely, fairly and effectively. After shouting, that's what this election was all about, believes bellringer Hawkins.

We are reminded too of Vernon E. Jordan (Urban League) statement that "One thing we should hope for from the next administration is that our domestic problems become the target of a co-ordinated attack. Piecemeal policies never really work." Welfare reform, for example, should be tied to reform of the tax system so grants become uniform, loopholes eliminated, and one tax system can dispense income maintenance funds while collecting revenue from earners.

Black correspondent Tom Woods writes from Africa: "This country supplies a fifth of the world's copper, three-fourths of its cobalt, a fifth of its manganese, a third of its chrome, and a fifth of its vanadium. South Africa's Transvaal area, bordering Rhodesia is said to have the world's richest mineral deposits, including gold, iron ore, and coal. The economic stakes here are huge." End of quote.

Benjamin L. Hooks, a member of the Federal Communications Commission has been unanimously elected executive director of the NAACP, to succeed Roy Wilkins when he retires July 31, 1977. Wilkins is 75—Hooks 51.

From a Black Educator's Point of View: Sponsored by the Ladies Home Journal, the Encyclopedia Britannica, and the Council of Chief State School officers, "National Teacher of the Year" awards are given to classroom teachers chosen from the 50 or more state and territorial winners by a panel of judges representing a dozen educational organizations. 1976's award went to Ms. Ruby Murchinson, a seventh grade teacher of language arts and social studies in Fayetteville, North Carolina. In her article in the November-December issue of "Today's Education." She teaches at Washington Drive Junior High School in the same city.

She writes: "My job was to facilitate their growth in basic communication skills, improve their health habits, spur their curiosity, and help them to develop a capacity for moral judgement and a sense of responsibility appropriate for their maturation level. In addition, I was to help them develop into responsible, participating members of our society...I wanted to create a learning environment in which children could perceive themselves as belonging and having a stake in the action.

"I learned early, the necessity of clearly defining what I expected students to learn and at what level. I also learned that I had to help them individually and that I had to proceed at a pace commensurate with their abilities, needs, interests, and learning styles. Perhaps it was at that time that I became convinced that what goes on in the classroom must focus first on students, then on the subjects to be taught.

"In all my years of teaching, I have always wanted students to feel good about themselves. I believe that it is important for them to experience success and to discover their special talents. Therefore, getting to know all my students early in the school year is a priority with me....As Dr. Ginott has noted, a teacher possesses the power to fill a child's life with misery or joy. A teacher can be a tool of torture or an instrument of inspiration. He or she can humiliate or humor, hurt or heal." End of quote.

Mount Gilead Baptist Church

"The Mount Gilead Baptist Church, the friendly church where the soul and spirit meet. The church where everybody is somebody. The church extends to members and public a cordial and clarion call to worship with us each week."

The combined ushers will present the play, "But, For the Love of Harold," Sunday afternoon, Dec. 5, at three. It is an unusual spiritual program, which we feel will be enjoyed by young and old alike. We invite the public to make preparations to be on hand to enjoy this program with us.

The youth department's Christmas program will be titled "A Christmas Story." This program will be presented Sunday evening, Dec. 19, at seven. Any member wishing to donate two yards of white cloth material for a robe for one of the children is asked to call Mrs. Lillian Jones at 744-8338.

The W.M.U. had its monthly General Mission last Monday evening. A wonderful meeting was held.

Let us continue to pray for and visit our sick and shut-in members.

The Monthly Area Fellowship moves to the congregation in Slaton Sunday, Dec. 5. Fellowship will be at 2:30. Lunch will be served.

Food for Thought: "If we are living close to Jesus it will not really matter if the careless do refer to us as mere do-gooders."
