Secret Coal Plant Deal Blasted

Secret negotiations between two members of the Lubbock city council and Southwestern Public Service Co. to bring a coal-fired electric plant to Lubbock County may threaten the future of city-owned Lubbock Power and Light, Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan told reporters Tuesday.

Jordan, who had been expected to make an announcement of her political plans, dropped a bombshell when she disclosed the council had discussed the coal plant behind closed doors at last Thursday's session.

"With no advanced preparation, we were asked to consider a complicated, far-reaching deal and give direction for further negotiations," Jordan said.

"Decisions of this magnitude should not be made hastily and certainly should not be made without close public scrutiny."

Jordan said the coal plant would eventually eliminate the city-owned LP&L, which has been harshly criticized since the Aug. 16 fire at a Holley Avenue Station generator blacked out portions of the city.

"You don't put that (the plant) in Lubbock County and watch half your potential customers (LP&L's) sit by the boards."

Jordan said the negotiations were pursued by Mayor Roy Bass and Councilman Bill McAlister. McAlister has strongly indicated his desire to sell the city electric company.

But McAlister insisted that the negotiations to bring the $500 million plant to Lubbock County had nothing to do with Lubbock Power and Light.

"The plant is going to be built anyway. It made as much sense to me to have it built in Lubbock County as in Lamb County."

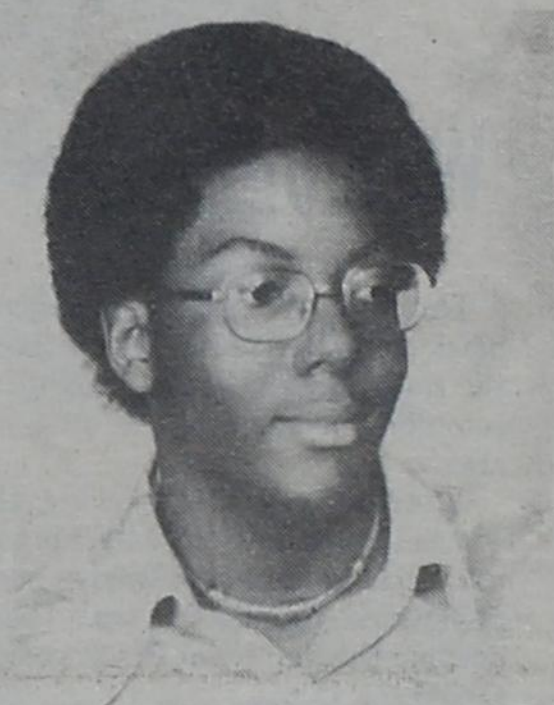

The city councilman said that Southwestern originally envisioned the plant in Earth, Texas, but during a press and VIP tour of a similar Southwestern plant in Amarillo, McAlister approached company officials about building the plant in Lubbock.

McAlister said he was "excited" about the possibility of using Lubbock waste water to fire the plants, which would free an abundant supply of fresh water for possible use in Lubbock. Jordan said that a long term commitment of the potentially-valuable effluent should be a public discussion.

But McAlister said that Jordan's disclosure of the negotiations—which, he said, were kept secret because the announcement of a site before Southwestern bought the land

DHS Senior Named Merit Semifinalist

Joey Roberts, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Roberts, 1827 Manhattan Drive, has been named a semi-finalist in the twenty-third annual National Merit Scholarship Program.

Joey, a senior at Dunbar High School, holds a four point GPA and is ranked highest in his class.

Semifinalists are named from over 1 million students enrolled in 17,500 high schools who entered the 1978 Merit Program by taking the 1976 Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test.

Semifinalists are the highest scoring students in each state; and represent the top half of one percent of the nation's academically talented young people.

An accomplished pianist and alto saxophonist, Joey toured nine countries this summer as a member of the Gulf Coast Band.

In addition to being a member of the Gulf Coast Band, Joey has been a member of the all region band for two years, and has received several medals for solos and ensembles.

Joey is also a member of the Dunbar High School Combo and Stage Band.

Joey is a very busy young man in and out of school. Joey attended Boys State this summer. He is Rotarian of the month, president of the student body, a member of the National Honor Society, vice president of the Spanish Club and a member of the Science Club.

Of future plans Joey says he hopes to attend Baylor University and major in pre-med and minor in music.

Ordinance Eyed to Reform Restaurant-Bars

The City Council Thursday delayed action on a zoning ordinance regulating the sale of alcoholic beverages until the ordinance is reviewed by the Planning and Zoning Commission. The P&Z will not hear the ordinance until Oct. 6th, and the matter will not again come before the Council until Oct. 27th.

The new ordinances main difference, according to Leon Bean in the City Attorney's office, is that it dispenses with the audits restaurant were required to present quarterly, showing they maintained the required 60/40 ratio between food and alcoholic beverage sales. Restaurants in the C2, C2a, and C3 zoning districts must maintain this ratio to serve liquor.

Bean said that because many of the reports received were falsified, they were not worth the expense and the manpower for compilation. The new ordinance would also make it tougher to get a beverage permit.

The council decided not to protect the mural in the Azatlan area of the Canyon Lakes. The city staff reported the peeling mural could not be repaired or maintained because of the improper curing of its cement wall surface.

Hance, Jones Toss Hats Into Political Arena

The Lubbock political arena became more crowded Monday as State Sen. Kent Hance announced he'll be a candidate to succeed retiring U.S. Rep. George Mahon and former State Rep. Delwin Jones put his name in to run for Hance's seat.

Hance, the 34-year-old state senator just completing his first term, was flanked by Lubbock Mayor Roy Bass as he complimented Mahon's long career. "West Texas owes George Mahon more than we can ever comprehend," he said.

Hance said the main issue in the race is who will be most effective representative of the 19th

District. The senator already has one opponent in the primary, former State Rep. Jesse George of Brownfield, and several other political names—including Trinity Church pastor Morris Sheats—are expected to make the race. Midland Oilman George Bush Jr. is the only announced candidate in the Republican side.

Jones made his announcement as soon as he learned Hance was in the race for Congress. The veteran legislator, defeated in a comeback bid last year by State Rep. Froy Salinas, had earlier considered the congressional race, but said he decided he would be more effective in a state office.

Eating Out

Experts say about one third of all meals consumed in America today are restaurant or fast-food shop prepared. In a few years the figure will reach fifty per cent, it's claimed.

Hamburger, roast beef sandwich, and other chain fast-food stores continue to mushroom all over the country. The latest trend is to open these establishments in residential neighborhoods, or nearby, and not always on crowded highways.

Thus, eating out is fast becoming the great American pastime (though one should note those enjoying family meals together are still fortunate). That being true, a look at pricing practices in general is very much in order.

While the new trend is convenience for the working housewife, husband and others, if one isn't careful, costs can be unreasonable. The largest hamburger chain keeps it prices at reasonable levels, as do most others. But some, especially fried chicken establishments, charge relatively high prices.

Fast-food restaurants earn their profits and existence with reasonable prices. They don't offer the service or accommodations to justify charging, example, about half a dollar for a piece of chicken—when the cost of a whole bird is probably no more.

Welcome

The West Texas Times welcomes another voice to the black community. It is called the Lubbock Digest, and once the publishing schedule stabilizes, the newspaper should complement some of the other, established media in this area.

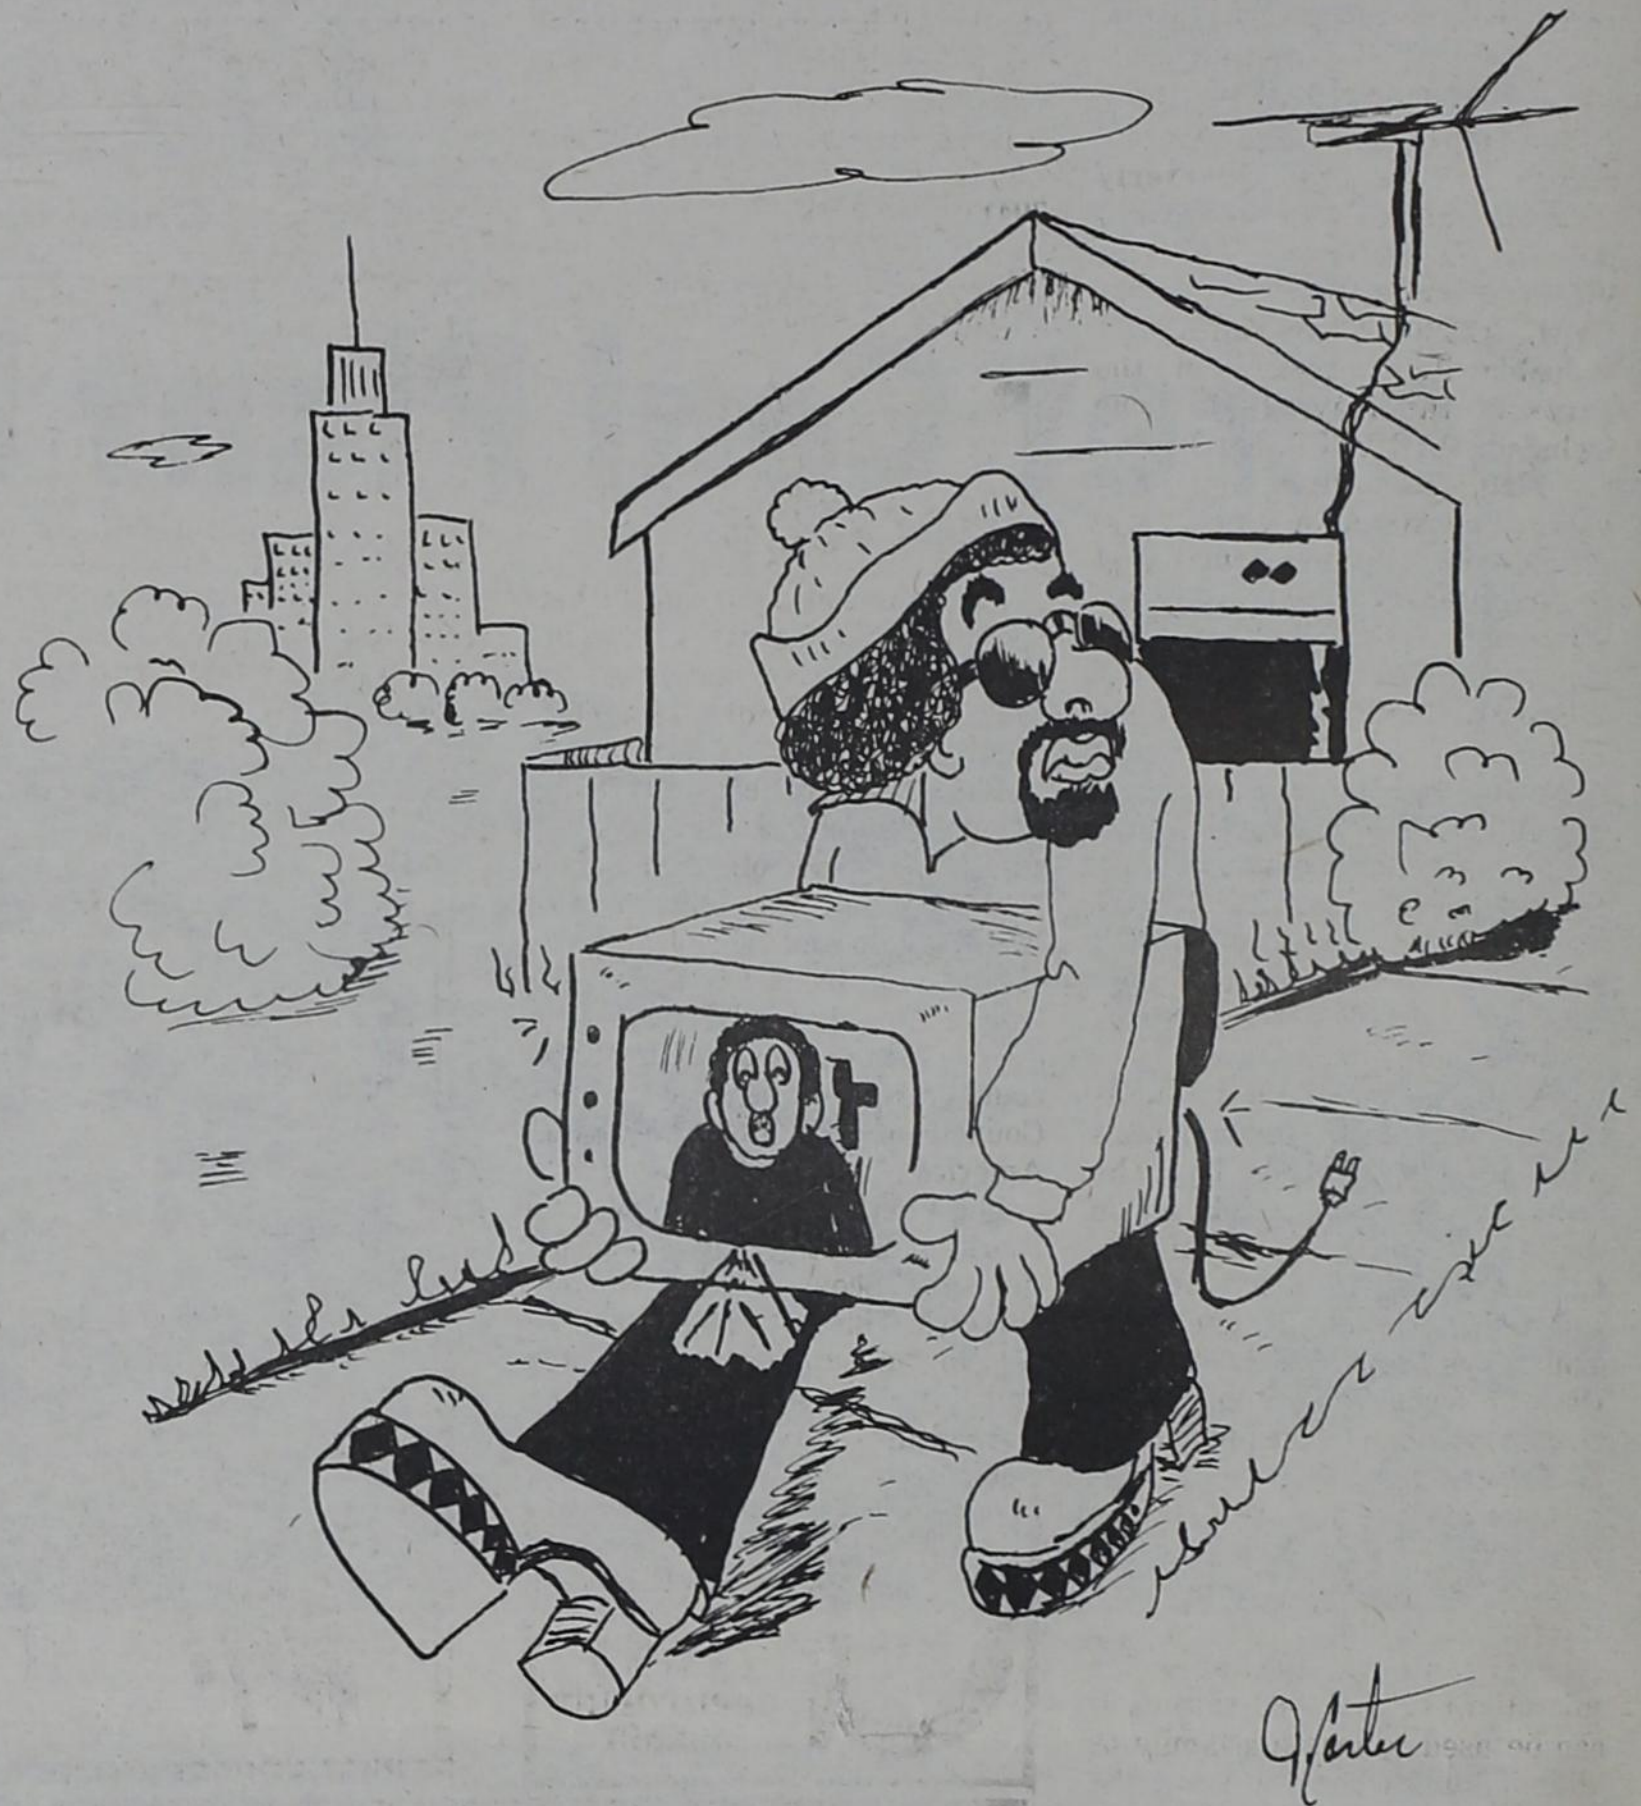

After 16 years of serving the Black community, the Times knows how difficult it is to establish a beachhead for the black community, and we hope the new newspaper will be spared the agony that the Times went through to become the dominant Black voice between Fort Worth and the West Coast.

But after nearly two decades, the Times has learned those lessons well and one lesson the newcomer will learn is that no one person makes a newspaper. It is a mixture of all the people who put the newspaper out and a blend of the most important people in the newspaper business—the newspaper readers.

Fortunately, the people who are writing for the Digest are former employes of the Times, and perhaps these lessons have already been learned. But newspaper ownership is a different matter, and the lessons there are not learned overnight.

We hope the lessons are as painless as possible and that old friends succeed in their own area.

JACK ANDERSON'S WEEKLY SPECIAL

CARTER'S BUREAUCRACY WOES ARE PEANUTS COMPARED TO BREZHNEV'S

By Jack Anderson with Joe Spear

WASHINGTON—President Carter is now grappling with the federal bureaucracy. As the late President John F. Kennedy described the experience, it's "like wrestling with a whale."

But for whatever consolation it might be, the president's adversary in the Kremlin is struggling with a worse whale. It is almost impossible, according to U.S. analysts, for Leonid Brezhnev to get a firm hold on the blubber.

Carter has only a dozen cabinet secretaries to control. Brezhnev must cope with 81 who have ministerial rank. There is a minister for ferrous metallurgy, another for non-ferrous metallurgy; a minister for machine building, another for general machine building, and yet another for tractor and agriculture machine building.

There is a minister for power and electrification, another for the electrical equipment industry and another for the electronics industry. There is a minister for forestry, a minister for food and even a minister for fish.

At the White House, President Carter coordinates the activities of the federal departments and agencies. But in the Kremlin, there is little coordination.

The minister of non-ferrous metallurgy, for example, might construct a factory in the hinterlands. But the workers would have no housing, schools or transportation because these are the responsibilities of other ministries.

Here in Washington, President Carter is caught up in the petty rivalries and ancient animosities of the federal agencies. But it's worse in Moscow. Soviet rivals engage in bloody bureaucratic battles.

Now the losers are retired on pensions. But in an earlier day, the losers were either liquidated or dispatched to Siberia. The last major leader to be knocked off was the ruthless secret police chief, Lavrenti Beria. He was shot in 1953.

The last leader to be exiled was Georgi Malenkov, who lost to Nikita Khrushchev in the power struggle. Malenkov was put in charge of a Siberian power plant in 1957. As far as our sources know, he is still producing kilowatts for the Siberians.

Bump Burns?—President Carter must soon decide whether to re-appoint Arthur Burns as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

This relatively small and obscure agency helps to determine whether prices will rise or fall, whether interest rates go up or down. Thus the decisions Burns makes affect the pocketbooks of every American.

Burns is the darling of the business community, and the president is anxious to gain the confidence of business leaders. But our sources have told us that House leaders will oppose Burns' re-appointment.

They are unhappy with the chairman's economic policies and have already let the president know privately how they fell about Burns.

Protecting Prisoners—Forty-seven inmates have been killed over the past few months at prisons around the country, and hundreds more have been hospitalized. Now, federal officials are taking extra precautions to prevent similar tragedies.

The government has ordered the installation of smoke detectors and sprinklers at federal prisons. Within the next year, the administration will spend $600,000 putting smoke detectors in 38 different federal prisons.

Although prison officials are worried that inmates will set off the smoke detectors just for spite, they still plan to install them.

Rare Illness—If you like your meat rare, you could come down with a serious illness. The federal Center for Disease Control has linked food poisoning to undercooked meat.

This has brought a swift reaction from the Agriculture Dept. A new regulation has just gone out, requiring pre-cooked roast beef to be heated to 145 degrees Fahrenheit.

But the regulations cover only meat that is already cooked. No warning label is required on the raw meat purchased at the supermarket. What's more, the Agriculture Dept. says it won't tell people how to cook their meat.

The government will leave it up to you to find out for yourself that rare meat may be dangerous to your health and that it should be heated to at least 145 degrees.

Mileage Mix-up—Few drivers get the gas mileage that the manufacturers claim for their automobiles. Now we've found out why.

The car-makers base their mileage claims on tests conducted by the Environmental Protection Agency. But the cars are tested at a simulated speed of 48 miles an hour. Most drivers exceed that speed on the open road, and this reduces the gas mileage.

Rootsearching

By Marleta Childs, C. G.

Good news! "Rootsearching" is also appearing in the Fort Worth Como Monitor." Now people in both cities can read your queries.

Persons interested in the PARROTT / PARRIOTT / PEROTT / PEROT / PARRETE / PARRET / PARRATT / PERIOT / PARROT / PARIT / PERRAULT family will want to subscribe to the Quarterly "Parrott Talk." Order from Mrs. Roberta L. Robinson, 292 San Vincente Circle, Newbury Park, Calif. 91320, $7.50 annually. Valuable items tucked in the pages of the May, 1977, issue included PARROTT families in the 1880 Wisconsin Soundex and various censuses of New York, Wisconsin, Connecticut, and Pennsylvania; tombstone inscription from Kansas and Colorado; data on various Wisconsin families, the William PERRIETT (1621-1682) and Edith PAYNE family of England, descendants of Frederick PARROTT of Shenandoah County, Va., and the WALLER-PARROT lineage (the same WALLER family who owned Alex Haley's ancestor Kunta KINTE); book reviews; and queries.

A four-session course in family history research fundamentals will be presented by the Lubbock City-County Library in the Community Room of the Library, 1306 9th Street, Lubbock. It will be held on Thursdays (Sept. 15, 22, 29, and Oct. 6) from 7 to 9 p.m. The classes are open to the public, free of charge.

Some beginning researchers who have gotten their line back to the 1870's and 1880's may be interested in the Soundex (a partial index, available on microfilm) to the 1880 census. It can be used to locate a family or an individual when you know the state in which they resided, but not the county. The names of the heads of households are arranged phonetically so that all spellings of a surname are listed together. Since it was originally prepared to determine eligibility for social security, it indexed only households containing children ten years of age or younger. The Soundex does not show all the facts contained on the original census schedules, but does list the name of the head of family and his color, sex, age, birthplace, and county of residence. Reference to the original census is also given. To achieve maximum benefit, you should look up families found on the Soundex on the original census schedules.

The 1870 federal census contains basically the same categories as the 1880 schedule. It is a good idea to follow the same family or individual through as many censuses as possible in order to obtain a more complete picture. One census may give additional (or even different) information not found on the others. For example, the 1870 census may show your ancestor as "John doe," while the 1880 one may list him as "John B. Doe." This initial alone may be helpful in distinguishing you John from other John Does in the same area. The names of children who died in infancy may appear on one; this may be the source of information about them.

Genealogists are somewhat restricted by the lack of information in earlier census records. For the 1850 and 1860 censuses in the South, slaves were listed on separate "slave schedules." These listed only the slaveowner by name; under each owner they give age, sex, and color (whether black or mulatto) of each slave, whether they were fugitive from the state, had been manumitted (set free), or were deaf and dumb, blind, insane, or idiotic. All free persons appear on the regular federal census schedule.

Send your queries to Marleta Childs, 2308 21st St., Lubbock 79411.

KELLY'S HEROES

by Joe Kelly

We're off and running. The 1977 football season, college variety, is in full swing and Texas Tech is, or should be, right up among the leaders. The Red Raiders performed well.

Without any slur at the radio announcers for the Tech-Baylor game, and they did a good job, it wasn't the same as seeing it in person. Not even Jack Dale, the best of the lot, can do that. Thus, the pictures Sunday presented a different aspect of the game.

The Raider defense looked tremendous. They literally attacked the ball carrier. Much of the time the defensive line simply blew the offensive line off the ball. It was impressive.

The pursuit was strong, lateral movement along the line was outstanding and overall, the defense was better than anything seen at Tech in a long time. Outside of one breakdown, Baylor didn't do much of anything when it counted.

The offense, however, showed the lack of consistency that it showed two weeks before the opening game. Only once did it move the ball with a sustained drive.

The encouraging thing is that the offensive potential is there. And much of the consistency lack could be blamed on the number of substitutes that Tech had to play, along with the half-speed strength of experienced players—plus Baylor's own strength.

Make no mistake—it was a tough way to open the season. No one likes a conference game in the opener, especially when there are injuries and players who need experience.

Fortunately, Tech had a little more experience, a little more offense. The Bears have a good team and they are going to win their share of games. Unfortunately, from their standpoint, they ran into one of the conference's, and nation's, better teams.

It was encouraging to Tech partisans to see Tres Adami come in and do a good job. The Freer junior did more than an adequate job when Rodney Allison went down in pain.

Adami has come a long way since spring training, 1976. He spelled Allison against Rice last fall and looked good. He made progress in the spring. Now he appears ready to play with confidence, if necessary. I think he's capable of getting the job done.

This week New Mexico moves in and the Lobos have been tough in recent years. After a 20-year hiatus, the Lobos handed the Raiders a 13-10 loss, in Lubbock, of all places.

The Raiders have won four of the last five meetings between the schools, two victories each surrounding a tie. The tie came three years ago. But the victories have not been convincing, 24-17 and 20-16, the last two meetings.

As for the rest of the conference, every team got off on the right foot (and this is being written before the Houston-UCLA game). SMU put a lot of points on the board in beating TCU and tying the Raiders for the early SWC lead.

Non-conference foes didn't fare so well. New Mexico beat Hawaii, 32-26, but Arizona fell to Auburn and Kentucky trimmed North Carolina. Neither of them were surprises.

Texas A&M was impressive in beating Kansas, while the margin of the Texas victory over Boston College was impressive, as well as surprising.

Arkansas won about as expected over New Mexico State, hardly a SWC caliber team, and Rice showed maybe a little more than anticipated in wearing out Idaho, not much of a club. All in all, it was an outstanding week to start the season.

As I said last week, the suspense was unbearable, waiting for the opening kickoff. Here was Tech, highly rated, opening on the road. Nothing to do except wait. It was interminable.

I looked at my watch. It was 3 p.m., the Red Sox were behind and Pitt was beating Notre Dame. Only 60 minutes or less to the Raider kickoff. Oh, well, keep the sound down on one tube and watch the action on both, while listening to the other.

Okay, the Red Sox went down in order, the Yankees, they told us, were being beaten, 6-2, and Pitt had a lead on the Irish. It must be about kickoff time in Waco, right? Wrong, it was only 3:05.

Okay, I won't look at my watch. The time will go faster. I got interested, falsely, in the two games on the tube. The Red Sox rallied, went ahead, 4-1. Pitt increased its lead, 9-0. About kickoff time, right? Huh! It was 3:15.

I turned on KFYO. Why, shucks, they didn't even have Coach's Corner on. I got up and went into the kitchen to check the electric clock. My watch had to be wrong! Nope, it was just 3:30.

And so it went. I've got a turtle in the backyard that goes quicker than the hands on my watch. It was 3:30, then 3:33, 3:42. By this time my fingernails were starting to hurt. Not that I had any left. They were gone. Were they going to play in Waco?

Would you believe it, the kickoff finally came. The Bearbecue fire could wait until the half. Hell, the whole damn world could wait as the Raiders finally got their sputtering offense working and went on to beat the Bears.

Man! What a glorious way to spend the weekend. What a beautiful world this is! Boy! Bring on them Aggies!

Change in Lunch Program

Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland has proposed that changes be made in the National School Lunch Program. The program has been in operation since 1946.

Bergland says the purpose of the proposed regulations would be to help schools more adequately meet the nutritional needs of children and to reduce waste.

The proposed lunch patterns would reduce the amounts of food served to younger children, and at the same time, offer more food to older students.

"We want to offer our students meals that are the most appealing and the most acceptable to them within a sound nutritional framework, and we intend to operate the school lunch program as efficiently as possible," Bergland said.

Under the new lunch patterns, lunch would be served to 1-to-5 year old children at two sittings which together meet lunch pattern requirements. Department officials expect this would be a better method to meet the food consumption habits of young children.

Schools would also be required to involve students in their school food service program through activities such as menu planning, enhancement of the eating environment, program promotion and related activities.

The USDA welcomes comments on the proposed regulations. Following the initial comment period, interim regulations will be issued. These regulations are planned to be in effect on a pilot test basis, from January 1978 through April 1978. Under the new interim regulations, schools will be permitted to field test the new lunch patterns.

Comments should be sent to William G. Boling, Manager, Child Nutrition Programs, Food and Nutrition Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Teddy Duane Sims, a first grade student at Wheatley Elementary, celebrated his sixth birthday Saturday, July 16, with a host of relatives and friends. Teddy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sims.

would drive prices up—"certainly hadn't helped" the possibility of bringing the coal plant to Lubbock.

Southwestern Public Service district manager Carroll McDonald told the Times that "Wherever the coal plant is located, it wouldn't have any effect on LP&L because power plants feed everywhere." The plant would cost between $400 million and $500 million and would pay "millions" in taxes, McDonald pointed out.

Jordan, a staunch defender of Lubbock's competitive utility system, said that in spite of the flood of publicity following the outage, "I don't think anyone's even got down to the basics to see if LP&L has outlived its usefulness."

Jordan said she would ask for discussion of the question of automatic pass-through costs which raise the price of electricity as the cost of gas to produce the electricity rises.

"In my opinion, we need not only re-examine the automatic pass-throughs—we need to stop them," she said, indicating that the elimination of pass-throughs would make LP&L more competitive.

"The city is sitting like a ripe plum—ready to be picked," Jordan said, alluding to LP&L's arch enemy, Southwestern, "And it will be—if we don't get back to the business of insuring that LP&L stays strong and competitive."

Sheridan's Ride

by Jack Sheridan

Since I went on a rampage in the public prints about the recent change-over in schedules and timing of the illustrious Citibus system a couple of weeks ago, let me add to what has been a somewhat ludicrous mess off and on to date.

It was bad enough that we patrons daily were deprived of advance notice on curtailed or changed routings and consolidations to the majestic confusion of all who depend on this vital and necessary convenience of wheels, but when the drivers themselves were as much up in the air as we during that first, then second week, then we really had it!

For example. I take the bus from my corner to downtown, change and proceed to my place of employment (Curron, Inc., exploratory tools and drills, machine shop, North Ave. U and Baylor Drive). The old bus, it was the Arnett-Benson bus, deposited me neatly on the Baylor corner across from the building in the early morning and stopped en route downtown for that change on the same corner later in the afternoon.

With the route change-our the Arnett-Benson bus resumed its old route and the Hub Homes bus becomes my key. This time both the outbound and the inbound buses stop on that same corner but the route varies.

That first day or so I stood on the corner and waited at the appointed time. The Hub Homes bus was to come west on Baylor, scoop me up and then head down Ave. U to 4th and to Q and thus downtown.

I stood with my back to Ave. U, watching down Baylor. The day was hot, the bus was late and I was, understandably agitated. It was then I heard a plaintive beep behind me and turned. There was my bus. The driver, bless him, had spotted me and stopped. Seems, as he ruefully admitted, that he got lost and came down Avenue U and not Baylor. Only the fact that the genial man saw and honked for me saved me from a long, long walk across town to home.

Well, the maps came out, the schedules were announced. Some old, depended-upon bus routes would not operate on Saturdays at all, others do. Turns out that the maps and times were and are grossly inaccurate. "Misprint" is the explanation. Bosh!

That first week the early morning Melonie Park bus on 19th Street never did show up at all that cost me a cab fare across town to get to work. The next day the connection missed downtown and that meant another cab fare. Working was rapidly becoming a luxury I could not and cannot afford.

His eye may be on the sparrow but it is certainly not on the Citibus system.

Oh, well, I need 'em. They need us. Maybe the twain shall meet. It is a situation devoutly to be hoped for. Did I tell you about the Hub Homes driver, new, that week, who drove the bus reading aloud from a printed sheet that told her which right and left to turn to make the route? It's a mad, mad, mad world.

If you've seen the black comedian Richard Pryor (he saved "Silver Streak," that more or less dismal comedy attempt) then you owe it to yourself to hie off to Showplace 4 and catch his first solo starring film. It's a minor effort but Pryor makes "Greased Lightning" and it is a pleasant comedy made palatable by this outstanding talent. Incidentally, Pryor will be heading his own television series starting this week.

Others in the cast include Beau Bridges and the lovely Pam Grier, a rising black star in her own right, and Cleavon Little. But it is Pryor who emerges triumphant and carries the film on his own.

You'll remember Marty Feldman if you've ever caught a Mel Brooks film. He was "Eye-Gore" in the "Young Frankenstein" success and now this bubble-eyed British comic has stepped out on his own directing, writing and starring in "The Last Remake of Beau Geste," winding its run at the Fox 4 complex out on 19th Street.

I am sorry to report that, while the idea was good, the film results in a light clinker. There is something about those pop-eyes that is amusing in a supporting role but not strong enough to maintain a lead. What emerges is a "poor man's Mel Brooks" effort, loosely based on the Percival Wren Foreign Legion classic, "Beau Geste," so memorable in its original version and later remade with Brian Donlevy. You'll catch a glimpse of a clip from the Gary Cooper version in this current effort, just a glimpse.

A lot of talented and known performers get into this act. There's Ann-Margaret, Peter Ustinov, James Earl Jones, Trevor Howard, Henry Gibson, Terry-Thomas, Roy Kinnear, Irene Handl and even Ed McMahon (honest!) as an Arab horseman (sic!). But most of them labor fruitlessly in this vineyard and come a-cropping.

The less said about the short-lived, too long Fellini "epic", "Casanova" at Cinema West, the better.

Donald Sutherland starred as the endowed lover and the whole 166 minutes was a buiding bore that became exruciating in its second half. It's Lubbock stay was, to put it mildly, brief and that's good. Same thing goes for the ill-fated Charles Bronson film, "The White Buffalo" at the same theater. Best left in limbo.

It is mid-September and the Lubbock Theatre Center gets the ball rolling with its opening night of the Cole Porter musical "Kiss Me, Kate" Friday at the LTC Playhouse, 25th and Ave. P. This is a goodie and comes into town with the highest expectations. More on this later on.

The fall days bring back the popular free art exhibitions at the Baker Gallery of Fine Arts, 13th and Ave. L, where this Sunday from 1-5 p.m. the works of Charles Allen and William Whiteside will be shown. The show goes through Oct. 12.

Judith Crist, that acid tongued movie critic late of the "Today" show, leads off the Texas Tech University Speakers Series at 8:15 p.m. Thursday at the Center Theater, open to the public at $3 per head.

Coming up on Friday, Sept. 23, at the Civic Center Hall will be a time for oldtimers, "A Tribute to the Fabulous Forties" featuring dinner and the famous Glenn Miller Orchestra, a Civic Lubbock Inc., presentation.

A look at the Black Experience: Congresswoman Barbara Jordan's charisma cannot be disputed. Ms. Jordan herself has been quoted as saying "Now everybody knows that I have some God given traits which bring me to the attention of the public, but if I have anything special that makes me influential, I simply don't know how to define it." Is charisma the only measure of a politician? How do we measure Barbara Jordan?

She has been described as a very ambitious person, who uses her eloquence not only on behalf of high principle, but also to get ahead. At 41, she is one of the most powerful women in America today.

In 1976, after election to her third term in the U.S. Congress, Ms. Jordan said, "I'm neither a Black politician, nor a woman politician. Just a politician. Writes Ms. Gant in Essence recently, "If Barbara Jordan now says she's just a politician, then we'd better scrutinize her as we would any other political figure. It is no longer in the best interests of Black people to simply applaud political success without analyzing the motives and machinations behind it."

When questioned about her criticism of the Black Caucus in Washington, Ms. Jordan's answer was, "I have told my Black Caucus colleagues that we cannot try to be the Urban Coalition, the Afro-Americans for Black Unity, all rolled into one. We are legislators, and we ought to remember that is our role."

Ms. Jordan claims, "My faith in the Constitution is whole, it is complete, it is total. I felt many years that somehow George Washington and Alexander Hamilton just left me out by mistake. But through the process of amendment, interpretation and court decision, I have finally been included in "We the People."

And yet it seems to this correspondent that it is up to "We the Black people" to start assessing our Black politicians and leaders more realistically than we have in the past.

Bellringer sources indicate that James Farmer, founder of the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) has been named executive director of the 4 million members of Coalition of American Public Employees. A native of Texas who was graduated from college at age 18, Farmer has spent a lifetime as an activist for civil rights and social reform. The Coalition was formed in 1972 by leaders of public employees organizations in an effort to coordinate programs of political, legal and legislative action and public education at the national and state level.

Bellringers will recall that in 1969, Farmer was appointed Assistant Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, by then President Nixon, who had chosen "Black Capitalism" as the nation's way out on the economic plight of Blacks. Farmer resigned in frustration in 1971. Later, he founded Soul City in the Carolinas, after securing millions of government dollars for its development from the Nixon administration. Word received since is that the project has folded.

A. Phillip Randolph, chairman of Black Americans to Support Israel Committee has announced the first recipient of the Bayard Rustin Scholarship, which will enable a black student from the United States to participate in a one year study program at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem.

Ponchitta Ann Pierce, a journalist and broadcaster, has been named a Roving Editor of the Reader's Digest, Ms. Pierce has been a Digest staff writer since 1976. She is listed in Who's Who in America, Who's Who in American Women and a Pictorial History of the Negro in America. A project for the development and promotion of a nationwide apprenticeship program to train 5,000 automobile mechanics, body repairers, and painters has been launched by the U.S. Department of Labor and the Automotive Service Councils, Inc.

In order to better serve our churches and their pastors who are readers and supporters of the West Texas Times, we are urging all our church reporters and correspondents to send us the dates and places of your important church confabs, conferences, board meets, etc. The same will be carried regularly in our church "What's Happening" column. We believe this will be a feature that will be most beneficial to our churches in Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma. Thanks in advance for your cooperation in this matter.

And until later, be a good neighbor. They come in all colors.
