A group of East Lubbock citizens who want a park dedicated to the history of Blacks in the city will try to get the blessing of the Parks and Recreation Board next week.

The park runs along Lake No. 6 of the Canyon Lakes project and would be called "Roots Park", conjuring images of the Alex Haley bestseller-turned-television superhit.

"Roots is just another word for history," Eric Strong, an organizer of the project, said, "It's not a matter of jumping on a bandwagon. It's just a natural name for a natural park."

Strong said he conceived the idea of a Roots Park after the success of the Mexican-American community's Aztlan Park, which boasts a mural depicting the major events in local Chicano history.

"The entire Canyon Lakes project tells the story of all the people who played a vital role in building this area," Strong said.

At one end, the Lubbock Lake Site Archaeological Dig studies prehistoric Indians, Strong noted, while Aztlan Park is dedicated to Mexican-Americans. Along the 11-mile Bicentennial Trail which touches historic sites on the lakes project, there is the Texas Tech Ranching Heritage Center, which commemorates contributions of ranchers.

"I think Roots Park would be a beautiful addition," Strong said, "I'm just saying let's complete the picture."

Strong also points to the positive effects of a park dedicated to the contributions of Blacks in Lubbock. The park, he argues would, generate pride in the community and cement the foundation of Black Lubbock.

The major attraction of the park would be a broad mural, as in Aztlan Park, that would "pay tribute to all individuals who helped to establish our 'Roots' here," according to literature Strong is distributing.

Strong points out that a mural can tie together other parks in the area (the park is across from Mae Simmons Park and Community Center) and "help raise the level of consciousness in the community."

However, Strong is quick to point out that when he and others appear before the parks board next week, they will not be asking for money—just a green light to continue working on the project.

"We want to proceed with their blessing," Strong said, "We want to work with the city."

The appearance before the parks board will end one phase of the organizing and begin another. Strong and many others have been organizing a "Roots Committee," and he hopes that the committee will grow to 300 before next week's meeting.

Petitions have been circulated, and Strong has been keeping an extensive file of documents that he hopes will help persuade the parks board to support the project. He has collected a list of prominent citizens who endorse the Roots Park.

The organizers have established a headquarters at Parkway Mall. Strong said that free T-shirts bearing "Roots" graphics will be given away, or the graphics will be places on T-shirts people bring in.

Strong said that persons who have artifacts or pictures that can be patterns for the mural should contact the Roots Committee, and that the artifacts will be stored at Texas Tech's Southwest Collection.

"We plan to go to the Early Lubbock Settler's Roundup Thursday to pay tribute to the senior citizens" Strong said. He added that the committee is "pleading" with the early settlers to bring photographs, artifacts, diaries or letters—"Whatever information they might have that pertains to early Lubbock."

'DID YOU HEAR THE ONE...'—City Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan and Fulton Berry trade laughs at the UNCF Mini-Telethon Saturday night. The Mini-Telethon, broadcast over a local television station, raised about $15,000 toward a goal of $25,000 for six predominately black colleges in Texas.

New Motor Oil

What is claimed to be a major breakthrough in the lubricating of motors is a new oil for automobiles offered the public for the first time this month. The claim is that this oil, using graphite, lengthens engine life by as much as forty-five per cent.

All three of the major U.S. auto makers have expressed an interest in the new oil, and one is reported planning to equip its 1978 models with it at the factory.

The new oil sells for about $1.50 a quart and could mean greatly reduced maintenance costs in the form of repair bills for millions. Slightly better mileage is another benefit of the new oil (about five per cent). The emergence of graphite in oil to lessen friction and wear of moving parts and thus make for smoother-running engines and much longer engine life is a good-news motoring development amid so many higher-cost developments of recent years!

As I See It . . .

By T.J. Patterson

This writer saw something happen in our community that hadn't been seen before. There were hundreds of blacks working together for a cause to help young people attend one of the six predominately black colleges in Texas. Of course, there were whites and browns who pitched in to see that this United Negro College Fund (UNCF) Mini-Telethon was a success.

At this report, over $15,000 has been raised by the local committee. It appears as though the goal of $25,000 will become a reality by December 31.

A lot of hard work and dedication were the key ingredients on last Saturday. Committee chairpersons, committee members, citizens and friends of young people got in there and did something which was positive.

It would be good to see this kind of a thing take place in our community more in the future. As citizens we should continue to help each other and show love for one another.

The UNCF Mini-Telethon is history, but this writer saw a better picture of that little piece of thread which is here in our community. With a lot more of hard work and dedication, a rope will be woven for the betterment of the entire community. As I've always said, what's good for the black community is good for Lubbock.

As I See It, we need more good things like we had last Saturday evening in Lubbock.

Speaking of the local level, it would appear as if more opportunities should be made available for minorities in the various Small Business Administration programs. With more assistance from this agency, there would be more blacks and browns in business for themselves. That's the name of THE GAME...More Americans in the black and brown communities must be afforded this opportunity in the free enterprise system.

The Lubbock is growing, there are many opportunities for blacks and browns to develop some business opportunities. While these persons are getting ready to enter the business community, as citizens we must encourage them and support their effort.

This writer would hope that the local SBA office would inform and advise residents of the black and brown communities of the many opportunities available for them. As residents of the black and brown communities, we just can't sit back and expect anyone to give us anything. We must let them know, however, that we are interested in the various programs and willing to become a successful business person.

Eric Strong, noted poet in our community, is busy these days talking about a "Roots Park" and a mural project in east Lubbock. On a memographed sheet of paper, he has listed six reasons why this park should become a reality.

The reason which caught this writer's eye was: "Quirt Avenue is one of the most undeveloped of Lubbock north-south thoroughfares (Slide, Quaker, Indiana, University, & Ave. Q). It is frequently traveled. Its use is rapidly increasing due to the accessibility it provides to Lubbock's new Regional (International) Airport. Roots Park and its mural would be a beautiful addition to this frequently traveled thoroughfare."

JACK ANDERSON'S WEEKLY SPECIAL

Natural Gas Firms May Hold Back Gas Again This Winter

By Jack Anderson With Joe Spear

(Copyright 1977, United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON—It's much too hot to worry about next winter's weather. But we'd better start worrying about it, or we may wind up shivering when cold weather hits.

The oil and gas tycoons are sore over the recent refusal of the House of Representatives to deregulate natural gas. There has been talk in the backrooms about punishing the nation by holding back natural gas supplies next winter.

We accused the gas companies of holding back gas last winter. The charge was denied and we were denounced. The chairman of Gulf, Jerry McAfee, appeared on a nationwide television show to challenge us.

But afterward, the truth came out at congressional hearings. Several big companies, including Gulf, had held back and diverted gas supplies.

Another of the giants, Tenneco, finally admitted it may have diverted vital natural gas to one of its subsidiaries in Texas. This is because gas sold within the same state is free from price controls, while gas shipped across state lines is regulated. Apparently, Tenneco was trying for the higher prices.

Now we have obtained a recent memorandum written by the president of Tenneco's oil company, C.W. Rackley. The memo was sent to various Tenneco department heads, encouraging them to ask their employees to lobby for higher natural gas prices.

"It is requested that you meet with all the employees in your department," the memo states, "to request their help in winning congressional support for higher prices for natural gas."

The memo urged the employees to contact any congressmen they knew personally, and it included a list of those who were undecided on the issue. These legislators, the memo suggested, should be lobbied the hardest.

The lobbying effort failed. The House voted to continue price controls on natural gas. And the big oil and gas tycoons are burning.

Footnote: A Tenneco spokesman told us that his company had not intended to pressure congressmen, merely to inform them.

Airplane Diplomacy: President Carter has quietly ended another abuse of the Nixon era. We called it "airplane diplomacy."

This was the practice of dispatching government planes to pick up favored dignitaries. Those who were out of favor, however, might wind up on an Eastern Airlines shuttle.

Indeed, this happened to the late Archbishop Makarios while he was president of Cyprus. He was not popular with Richard Nixon and Henry Kissinger, who referred to him privately as "the Castro of the Mediterranean."

In 1974, Makarios was almost killed in an attempted coup. He fled to New York and wanted to go to Washington. For security reasons, the FBI suggested that a government plane pick him up. But the Nixon White House refused. And the Cypriot leader was obliged to fly to Washington in a crowded, Eastern Airlines shuttle.

Two years ago, Kurdish leader Gen. Mustafa Barzani, led an insurrection against Iraq at the behest of the CIA and the shah of Iran. Then the United States and the shah decided to abandon Barzani, and he had to flee for his life. Eventually, he decided to emigrate to the United States, but no official transportation was sent for him. He had to fly in from the Middle East on a commercial airliner.

All this has changed under President Carter. Now foreign leaders, regardless of their standing with the State Department, are expected to pay their own way to the United States. Once they are here, the U.S. government will provide them with transportation.

The Carter administration even refused to relax the rules for Nicaragua's President Anastasio Somoza when he was rushed to Miami for emergency medical treatment. An American medical evacuation plane flew to Nicaragua last month to pick him up. But Somoza will be billed for the flight.

The Brass Vs. The Blind: Forty-one years ago, at the height of the New Deal, Congress passed a law designed to put blind businessmen to work. Sponsored by state agencies, blind vendors began selling sundries in government buildings.

But some high pressure operators started cutting in on their business. So, in 1974, Congress strengthened the law to give blind vendors priority over their competitors.

Now we have learned that the Defense Department has drafted a set of guidelines to implement the law. The Pentagon's rules could put hundreds of blind businessmen out of business.

Under the military's guidelines, local commanders are given the authority to decide whether their buildings will use blind vendors or vending machines. Much of the profits from the lucrative vending machine business goes to the local base recreation fund. The money is used to sponsor outings, picnics and parties.

If a local commander decides he would rather have vending profits than help the blind, he can bar the blind businessmen on any number of grounds.

Blind vendors can be thrown off the base, for example, if it is decided their presence might reduce morale. They can also be excluded from military installations if they're thought to be a threat to the national security.

Film Being Made About Martin Luther King

We are pleased that a film about Dr. King is being developed which, properly and accurately written and produced, can provide increased understanding and appreciation for the most significant non-violent movement in American history. It can introduce to millions of youth in visual and impactful manner the warm, strong, and effective leadership of our founding president, the late Martin Luther King, Jr. It can revive for millions of others the excitement, joy and pain of those years when King and SCLC led the nation through a cleansing of the soul; when the non-violent philosophy of revolution unfolded into living reality; when millions of black people found a new sense of personal worth; when the ugliness of racial oppression and segregation was weighed on the scales of human decency and found wanting. In that sense and toward such an objective, we commend and support such a project.

We do, however, on the basis of what we have seen and read thus far about the film in process, have growing concerns that the history we hold sacred may not be interpreted with the accuracy and with the sensitivity needed when relating to the historicity of the black movement and the black experience. SCLC, therefore, is morally bound to emphatically urge those who are responsible for this film to take immediate steps to engage the assistance of black writers, producers, and directors; and to establish a panel of advisers who are thoroughly knowledgeable about the movement. These steps would assure sensitivity and insure authenticity.

We are entirely aware that the film is not yet a finished product and therefore cannot be finally judged—yet this is the very fact that makes possible the amendments we suggest. Such amendments would allay the fears engendered by what we have seen and read thus far—and facilitate—yea hasten the completion of what we want to be a great film—sensitive and authentic.

The trouble with vacations is that most of them end too soon.

The person who always says what he thinks is honest but unpopular.

Prominent Citizens Endorse Concept of 'Roots Park'

Bidal Aguero, Newspaper Editor: Lavos Newspaper:

The City of Lubbock has long overlooked the culture, contributions, and beliefs of the minority people. Parks, buildings, schools, all in the Barrio and Ghettos, have continually been named for prominent Lubbock citizens, unfortunately not enough Blacks or Chicanos. Aztlan Park and the Aztlan Mural are vehicles that are being used to show all our people that we are part of the history of Lubbock. Roots Park and the proposed Roots Mural will be the vehicle for the Black citizens of Lubbock. Together both parks will reflect the culture of two vital groups who have played a tremendous part in the building of West Texas and Lubbock.

Alwyn Barr, Black History Professor: Texas Tech University:

The "Roots" park and mural project is an excellent idea which I fully support.

Fulton Berry, former policeman: Member of the renowned "Soul Patrol":

I support this project 100 percent. After being a city employee eight years, I know that community involvement is the utmost importance.

Harry Bunton, Commander: American Legion Post 808:

Yes, this is a great idea! I support it!

Leon Bunton, Assistant Chief: Probation Department:

I think the idea of a Roots Park will spark new interest in the Black Community. It is an idea that can corral young Black energy in a positive and fresh, new and rewarding way.

J.P. Burrell, Wishful Master: Pride of Lubbock Masons:

I think it is one of the greatest things that could happen here. It will let young people know how things were when we first came to West Texas.

Jerris Carter, Artist: Cartoonist, Ebony Magazine:

It's really something that will help brothers and sisters, see that it is something that we can do together to grow together.

E. Chatman, Concerned Citizen: Wife of the late Dr. J.A. Chatman:

It is very good. Recreation is a good thing, for the body and the mind.

Harold Chatman, Member: Chamber of Commerce, NAACP, and National Business League:

In our area of Texas, there is nothing to explain or show the contributions made by Blacks. It is a well known fact that some of the first people in this sector were Black explorers, and that MacKenzie Park was named for a famous colonel of the calvary, some of his troopers were Black, called the Buffalo soldiers. I am for this project 100 percent, and will lend support in any way I am called on to do so!

Billy (Chilly) Childers, President: Student Organization for Black Unity "SOBU", member of Texas Tech Council of Cultural Events:

I feel that the mural is a very positive idea. I feel the Blacks in Lubbock need a landmark (tourist attraction) for people to see our story. Most important; we need something we all can identify with. I feel a project of this caliber and magnitude is long overdue in this area.

Rose Davidson, President: People for Progress:

I feel that mural honoring some of the first Black Citizens of Lubbock would be an excellent tribute, as well as a beautiful addition to our community.

Rev. A.L. Davis, Minister: St. Luke Baptist Church, Concerned Citizen:

I feel that this is a step in the right path, and I support it 100 percent.

Mary Davis, President: Young Black Business Women's Association:

As President of the YBBWA, a project like this will be of great value to our community. Our goals are for betterment of the community and to promote more interest in ourselves if this project will not get our interest in our community, then what will? What can we say? Yes! I for myself, speaking on behalf of the whole association, we are for it, it is a very fine project.

Vivian David Ph.D., Professor: Black Literature:

The Mural on Roots is a good proposal. It is important that we leave landmarks to verify our history. I support the proposal.

Eddie Dixon, Artist: Prominent Sculpture:

I feel this project should be pursued with effrontery and ebullience. This could be appropriate for the Lubbock area being Vanguard of the West Texas area in establishing roots.

Joan Evin, Member: School Board:

Great idea—my support 199 percent. Too long over due—Let's get with it now!

Gene Gaines, Attorney. President: NAACP:

For too long American history and especially West Texas history has failed and refused to adequately recognize minority groups for the contributions they have made in making this the greatest nation on Earth and Texas the greatest State in these United States. Efforts to preserve Black heritage and Black culture have been at most minimal. Exhibitions depicting the struggle of the Black man for freedom and equality are non-existent. The establishment of a "Roots" park and the erection of a mural will do much to correct the aforementioned social injustices of the past. I support the "Roots" Park Project.

R.J. Givens, Concerned Citizen: Businessman:

I am very much in favor of this project and hope we can be of some help to support this project.

Dianna Henderson, Executive Director: LOIC:

The mural is an excellent idea. Beautiful! I support the proposal.

Gilbert Herrera, President: Brown Berets, Director of the Auxilio Center:

I as President of the Brown Berets feel, and the members of my organization feel that we all deserve as much as we can get because our heritage is our own and always will be. We fully support "Roots" and would be glad to help in any way we can.

David Larry, President: Estacado Student Council:

I feel we should have a project like this. It will let us young people see where our roots are, and where we must go from here.

James Leonard, President: Business Ventures:

This project can really help East Lubbock business because according to a recent survey by U.S. Council of Mayors art aides area businesses in a community. We support it 100 percent!

M/Sgt. Arnold Mathews, President: Reese Air Force Base Black Culture Club:

The contributions of Black Americans has been long overlooked by historians. In cities all over the country are renaming streets, parks, and buildings more relevant names. A mural in East Lubbock will not only add beauty to our city, but it would contribute greatly to the pride and cultural enlightenment for the entire city.

Malik Mathews, Concerned Citizen: 7 year old student, Parkway Elementary:

I thought they already had it. If they don't, they need to!

James McCormick, Artist: Poet-playwright:

All things come from seeds, even Roots! This proposal is a beautiful seed that can blossom into something wonderful, our family tree, with beautiful fruits of all kinds for all involved.

Shakir Muhyee, Emam: Local Muslim Religious Leader:

I think it's a very good idea. The Bilalians (blacks) need anything that will give them pride and dignity in themselves.

Kathy Newburn, Section Leader: Texas Tech Program for Older Texans:

We think this is a very worthwhile project and would like to assist in any way possible.

Floyd Perry Ph.D., Vice-president: NAACP, Minister:

Such a project would enhance black culture.

Fernando Penaloza, Artist: Prominent Muralist (Aztlan Mural):

Art in any form manifest the consciousness of the people who create it. It can only express the achievement of our society. To support such an enterprise as a mural, is as natural as asking for food. Art is our spiritual food that nourishes our humanness.

Joey Roberts, President: Dunbar Student Council and Student Body:

I feel that his proposal is a very worthwhile project, and it would add a lot to the Canyon lakes project. It's a Big project that has to have all our support to be a success.

Clara Scott, President: East Lubbock Senior Citizens:

I think this should be a great incentive to our people to encourage them to greater efforts to make a better community.

George Scott, Dean: Freshman Admission, Texas Tech University:

I see nothing negative about it. Nothing! This project should be pursued with great vitality!

Hazel Taylor Ph.D., Chairman: United Negro College Fund, Higher Education Committee:

This project should be an inspiration for the entire community. You have my total support.

George Woods, Pioneer: Concerned Citizen, Urban Renewal:

I think it's a good idea! Very Good!

Preparation for Class of 1982 Begins at U.S. Air Force Academy

Now that the Air Force Academy freshman Class of 1981 is undergoing basic cadet training, admissions officials are starting to prepare for the selection of the members of the Class of 1982.

Young men and women interested in entering the academy with the Class of '82 are advised by officials to begin the process of securing an appointment now.

Basic requirements are that cadets be U.S. citizens, unmarried and at least 17 and not more than 21 on July 21 of the year to be admitted.

There is still time for high school seniors and college students to complete the necessary paperwork required for entry next summer. They should contact their high school counselors now or write to Admissions Liaison, U.S. Air Force Academy, CO 80840.

Students in lower high school grades who want to enter the academy should start preparing in their junior year. In the second semester of the junior year, high school students should also request precandidate questionnaires from the academy.

A precandidate questionnaire allows admissions officials to evaluate an applicant's chances of receiving an appointment. The evaluation results are given to members of Congress who nominate young men and women for appointments.

For more information on application procedures, students may write to Admissions Liaison, or contact their U.S. representatives or senators. There are also academy liaison officers throughout the country who can provide counseling and assistance to all prospective cadets.

Outreach Breakfast Club Meets Here

Members of the Outreach Breakfast Club met last Sunday morning at 9 a.m. in the home of Mrs. J. Sowell, 2404 East 9th Street.

Devotions were led by Mrs. Dorothy Hood. Text of the inspirational moment was found in Isaiah 53:5. "Oh what a glorious time we had in the Lord, hearing different testimonies coming from different ones telling how wonderful God had been to them," she said. "He's good if you only trust Him."

One special guest present was Mrs. Ollie Coleman. We appreciated having her.

Our next meeting will be in the home of Mrs. Irma Cook, 2402 East 9th Street. For information about this meeting Saturday morning, call 765-5624.

As always, we had a tasteful breakfast at our last meeting. Mrs. Mary Ward is chairperson; Mrs. C.E. Fair, vice chairperson; and Mrs. Rosemary Colbert is reporter.

KELLY'S HEROES

By Joe Kelly

Every now and then the U.S. Postal Service, and I hesitate to be too critical, what with a neighbor one of the big moguls of the organization, delivers something worthy of reading.

Such was the case last week when, in the same post, believe it or not, there arrived, not necessarily in this order, 1. the Southwest Conference Press Guide; and 2. the Texas Tech Press Guide.

Like the little boy who can't decide between apple pie a la mode and a strawberry shortcake, which one do you read first? Oh, well, flip one of those worth-a-penny dimes and have at it.

Okay, it came up heads and that meant the SWC book first. It's quite a publication, 246 pages worth, complete with schedules for all nine teams, records, rosters and what-have-you. It lists conference standings over the years, individual records and much, much more.

One section is a history of the conference. Another has the teams, with rosters, future schedules, coaches' records and a lot of other information.

Another section has the records by schools over the years, trophy winners, consensus all-conference players and All-Americans and national rankings. Another section has the record of coaches over the years and the champions in all sports.

There's more, of course, individual records and teams records, winding up with a composite week by week schedule.

The record book isn't dedicated, in fact, to Darrell Royal and Frank Broyles, but they are the only ones pictured. And who else deserves better the honor this year after their contributions?

Yes, and included is a chance to buy a SWC T-Shirt of your choice in your favorite school's colors and name—for only $5, plus $1 for handling.

It's a must for every authentic sports library, to say nothing of the real sports fan. You aren't ready for the season without it—and it will save a lot of calls to paper and electronic offices to answer arguments. The facts are all there.

You can get your copy by sending $3.50 to: Southwest Athletic Conference, P.O. Box 7185, Dallas, TX. 75209. The real football fan will find this a good bargain.

Now, Ralph Carpenter's Football Media Guide also is a labor of love and devotion. It's topnotch, with 120 solid pages, plus a double front cover and ditto in the back. Unlike the SWC effort, Ralph's is splashed with color, a particularly appealing color, too. It is Red, primarily, and helps dress up the booklet considerably.

The Tech media guide has everything that a Raider fan ought to have and which a media reporter must have. It has a complete breakdown on the squad, plus interesting details. It's another fine effort.

Meanwhile, the conference information office has started cracking out efforts with the season only a few short days off. The latest effort puts the kiss of death on Tech's chances.

It wasn't done with malice. Instead, it's a rating of the teams based on experienced returning personnel. Tech wins by scoring 51 points, based on one point for each returning letterman, one point for each returning starter, a third point for a senior returning.

One point is lost for each starter and letterman lost. Following Tech in the point battle is TCU with 48, while SMU had 42, Arkansas 36, Houston 33, and then, closely bunched, Baylor, Texas, A&M and Rice. The latter scored only two points.

Only once in the last seven years of this rating has the pre-season winner gone on to win the championship (A&M in 1975). Texas, in 1969, won this rating, the league title and a national championship.

Pre-season ratings, this one included, mean little. For example, Arkansas returns the largest number of lettermen, 43, while A&M lost the most lettermen, 12, to top that department.

A total of 119 of 198 starters return for this season, with Houston clamoring 32 returnees. Taking the biggest fall in the ratings were the Owls, who dropped 50 points from 1976, and Texas, which lost 30 points.

It's interesting to note that Tech gained this particular "championship" by gaining only six points over 1976, the least gained or lost by any team.

This year conference rosters will have a lot of out of staters, with Arkansas claiming 23 of the 133 (18 or them signed with the Hogs, from Texas, and five Arkansas schoolboys are on other SWC rosters.

California sends the most players, 18, while there are 15 from Oklahoma, 10 from Louisiana, and Missouri and New Mexico, nine each. Baylor has the only real foreigner—Omar Abu Rahma, a walk-on kicking specialist from Israel.

And so it goes. The Raiders will trot onto the field next Thursday to be greeted by Steve Sloan & Co. It will be the start of a season which every loyal Tech fan hopes will be the best in Raider history. If everything meshes as hoped, it could well be the greatest football season in history. Certainly, though, it is one that no football fan will want to miss.

MDA Labor Day Telethon

Tens of millions of pennies will be dropped into containers in the next three weeks for the Muscular Dystrophy Association's 1977 Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon.

That's when 7-Eleven Store employees in Lubbock and across the nation will be "putting their two cents worth" into store counter buckets.

With each purchase of $1 or more, excluding gasoline, customers will see the 7-Eleven employee take two pennies and toss them in the bucket for Jerry Lewis' MDA drive this year.

The Southland Corporation through its 7-Eleven Stores is striving to collect 400 million pennies—$4 million—for the MDA Cure Penny campaign which began on June 1.

More than three million "penny packs" have been made available for distribution through 7-Eleven Stores. Each "pack" can be used to collect one pound of pennies or about $1.50. Each individual returning a filled pack to the store will receive an official Jerry Lewis patch.

"We are asking employees and the nearly five million customers who shop at our 6,200 stores daily to collect pennies for Jerry Lewis and the kids afflicted with muscular dystrophy.

Last year Southland raised $3.1 million for MDA. The results of the Cure Penny campaign will be announced on the Labor Day Telethon, which will be seen Septmeber 4-5 over a 200-station television network.

Night Classes Set at LCC

Lubbock Christian College will offer 16 night classes for the 1977 fall semester beginning August 29. All classes may be taken for college credit.

Registration for these courses will be Monday and Tuesday, August 29 and 30 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Registrar's Office on the LCC campus.

Ringling The Bell . . .

By Bob Tieuel

Anglo Newsmen Review Black Situation: "As a candidate for President last year, Jimmy Carter had a special relationship with black voters that was based—in large measure, at least—on the personal chemistry between him and black leaders. In some way that was never explained to whites, Carter built a level of confidence among blacks that gave him perhaps 90 percent of their vote. And that made the difference across the South and in several critical industrial states in the North.

"But the criticism now directed at Carter by Vernon Jordan, the determinedly rational and restrained executive director of the National Urban League suggests that the time has passed when the President can get by on chemistry. It is time as Jordan puts it, for Carter to obey the first commandment of politics: 'Help those who help you.' It is likely to prove a lot more difficult, however, than it sounds.

What the black leaders want, if Vernon Jordan is an accurate reflection of their thinking, is sharply increased federal spending where it will do them the most good—that is, on creating new jobs, on welfare reforms, on food stamps, on revitalization of the cities, among other things. But if Jimmy Carter has made one thing perfectly clear in his first six months in the White House, it is his conviction that the road to progress for the disadvantaged in our society lies in rebuilding the economy as a whole. And that in turn, means that Carter's first priority domestically is indeed balancing the federal budget. And to go the final step, a balanced budget isn't possible if those demands are met as promptly as Vernon Jordan would have it.

"Carter has taken some concrete steps to meet black demands. As some of his advisors point out in aggrieved tones, he has appointed more blacks to the highest level and to significant sub-cabinet jobs than any of his predecessors. But he has stopped short of the end of identification with their concerns that they are demanding.

"If you are a black leader speaking for the nation's most disadvantaged constituency, the pressure that Jimmy Carter is exerting on the Soviet Union or even on white leaders in southern Africa is monumentally irrelevant." Germond & Witcover in Dallas Times Herald.

Sheridan's Ride

By Jack Sheridan

In a column earmarked for last Friday but inadvertently switched to the past Wednesday for publication, I made a few remarks that I want to re-phrase to share with the total of my readership through the West Texas Times dual editions.

You know, it has occurred to me that as one gets older as, Heaven forbid, we all do, for better or for worse, the play of memories of things past sometimes is akin to those moments when the pianist lets his hands play idly on the keyboard in lazy reflection. Usually, it is a person or event and sometimes both that brings about this play and the only decent thing I can say about approaching flabbiness and the gray in the hair is that to be able to improvise on that keyboard mentally is that one must have had to have been there in order to appreciation and enjoy in retrospect.

I am referring in this instance to the recent death in Chicago of cancer of one of the outstanding greats of the American Theatre, Alfred Lunt, who with his surviving wife, Lynn Fontanne, provided the English-speaking world with the most electric husband-and-wife acting team the theatre has known in this century.

Each was a star in his own right before they became the union of perfection in the performing arts that they were and shall remain in fond and loving memory. Each had perfected his art as a solo actor and actress, Miss Fontanne from Britain, Lunt the American prototype. Their marriage was that magic joining of two talents into a single identity that intensified and magnified over the years their complete performing compatibility in all phases, diction, percision, timing and elegance of style, wit and glamour that sets a stage afire even when their vehicle is one that lesser stellar personalities would be unable to carry.

Not that the Lunts suffered from lack of vehicles of stature or quality. Many of their pronounced successes were designed and written especially for them, even some of the less electric entries. It was, however, the sheer magnetic power of these two people on a stage that empowered a shallow piece with strength and brought their worshipping fans from coast to coast before the altar of their perfection in their craft.

I came along a little late for their earlier joint appearances. But, as I grew up in San Francisco, I sat in that 50-cent gallery seat at San Francisco's still existant Curran Theatre, to drink at the fountain of such theatrical delights as "The Taming of the Shrew," (in which cast there were such names to become known more generally through motion pictures as Sydney Greenstreet and Richard Whorf), "Idiot's Delight" lesser played on screen by Norma Shearer and Clark Gable, "Amphitryon '38," a spoof of the love life of god and mortal, with the opening curtain disclosing a voyeur Lunt, bare-assed, eyeing his mortal conquest from a cloud, the wartime "There Shall Be No Night," the inconsequential "The Great Sebastians," that LTC recent play about the mentalists, the British success, "O Mistress Mine" and their only film, an early "talkie" from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Molnar's "The Guardsman," a film ahead of its time that cries for revival now on the art circuits.

But, of all these, I shall remember their last appearance in New York and coast-to-coast with a brief return to Manhattan by demand, their final stage appearance together before semi-retirement, Frederic Durrenmatt's "The Visit." This harrowing tale (brought to the screen in a pallid version with Ingrid Bergman and Anthony Quinn) was in a way the peak of their brilliant and unforgettable career together. It was the story of a woman from a small village who has gone out into the world and through sex and machination has gained a fortune. She returns to her home town with only one thought in mind, vengeance. Through her millions she can rehabilitate a dying town, bring industry to the area and its desperate citizens. She is prepared to do all this, but she has a price. That price is the death of the mayor whom the townspeople must kill to avenge her seduction as a girl by him. She still loves him but he must die. This is her blunt proposition and the citizens, anxious for prosperity, waive their affection for this man and accede to her wishes and put to death their leader for their supposed gain.

What the Lunts did for this show is indescribable and must have been seen to know and understand. There was horror, chill and thrill, all embodied in the valedictory performance that crowned their notable career together, their total life commitment to the theatre through their entire lifetimes. To have shared that lifetime with them, with only a footlight barrier between, is something I can never be verbal enough to express. I can only know and appreciate and say "thank you" for having me around at the same time that the Lunts were sharing this world.

Mr. Lunt was 84 when he died. Miss Fontanne, his senior, remains behind, at 90, secluded at their Wisconsin farm home at Genesee Depot. I regret that I never had the good fortune to meet either of the Lunts during our lives together, but I, in a way, did know them. They provided me not only with indelible moments of crystalline beauty of perfection in the theatre but also with an observer's course in the high art of acting principles.

I went off last weekend with burning, bruised and cut hands and weary feet (I am now trying to operate as a machine trainee for an exploratory tool company in north Lubbock, the fish going upstream) to catch the 10th and latest edition of Agent 007, James Bond, at the Winchester Theatre, the British film, "The Spy Who Loved Me." Can there be anyone who is ignorant of Ian Fleming's hero, the British spy who waxes hot with women, diabolical villains and the ultra-peak in gimmickry, James Bond?

In this one, better than some of the more recent issues, Bond is working both with and against a Soviet counterpart, Anya, spying on her side and irritated because Bond has had to bump off her boyfriend to escape an ambush, both trying to solve the mystery of the untraceable disappearance of nuclear submarines of both nations. Well, Stromberg, that villain, has a fleet of supertankers that engulf them, that's what, in a program to take over the world, no less. He's got a henchman who has steel teeth and brings death to his contract victims by biting the spinal chords, named (really!) "Jaws."

Now, there is a cast of what looks like thousands (with Bernard Lee as "M" and Lois Maxwell as Miss Money Penny, repeating from former films) but it is Roger Moore as the debonair Bond, stud de luxe, Barbara Bach as Anya and Curt Jurgens as the arch Stromberg, with Richard Kiel as the indestructable Jaws that focus the film, along with the usual eye and ear-boggling gimmicks that make a Bond film what it is, something to sit back and just enjoy, don't look for logic. "The Spy Who Loved Me" will be warming the Winchester Theatre for a while now and there will be few dissenters. Once a Bond fan always a Bond fan, so the Bond fans say.

CLEAN ENERGY
FOR TODAY AND TOMORROW

A Natural Energy Home uses, natural gas for heating, cooling, water heating, cooking and clothes drying to save you money and help conserve our cleanest natural energy resource . . . natural gas.

That's because electricity in West Texas is generated by burning natural gas, and in the process of generating and transmitting electricity to your home, 2/3 of the gas energy is lost.

So, by using gas directly in the home for the jobs it can do, you're helping to conserve it and you're getting more energy for your money.

USDA Reports on Disaster Assistance to Pennsylvania Flood Victims:

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8—Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Carol Tucker Foreman reported today that more than $2.5 million dollars in emergency food stamps have been distributed to over 63,000 people in the six flood-stricken counties of western Pennsylvania. In addition, food donated by the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) has been used to feed as many as 45,000 people daily housed in emergency shelter sites.

"As soon as the flooding began," Assistant Secretary Foreman said, "USDA staff were dispatched to the disaster areas to work with state and local officials. I'm very pleased we were able to respond so quickly to the needs of the flood victims with USDA donated foods and emergency food stamps."

In the first few days following the flood, the Department authorized Bedford, Cambria, Indiana, Somerset, Westmoreland, and Jefferson counties to issue food stamps on an emergency basis through August 20. This allows flood victims to apply for emergency food stamps through a shortened application process in which they declare their need for food stamp assistance due to cash resources or income being reduced or inaccessible because of the disaster.

To date, an estimated 300,000 pounds of USDA commodities have been distributed to emergency shelters. According to food distribution officials at the scene, "we have more than an adequate supply of foods on hand to take care of the needs of the people."
